A letter was read from the Single Tax Association, enclosing a petition which the Board was asked to support, praying that the exemption clauses in the C.P.R contract be rescinded.

On the motion of Messrs. Milne and Blythe, the petition was referred to the Council to be reported upon at the next general meeting.

A letter and a petition were read from Calgary Board of Trade in favor of the salary of the Premier of the new Province of Alberta being fixed at $7,000 and that of ministers at $5,000.

On the motion of Messrs. Finlay and Hawthorne, the letters were ordered to be filed.

A letter was read from Mr Finlay stating that Mr Marshall and himself had been appointed by the Lacrosse Club to ask the Board of Trade to appoint a committee to accompany them in going before the Town Council to try and induce them to take steps to provide a park and athletic grounds for the town. Mr Finlay and Messrs. Waiffin, Marshall Cochran and others spoke in favor of the movement. The Board endorsed the application, and Messrs. Pingle, Whiffin, Hawthorne and White as a committee to support Messrs. Finlay and Marshall before the council.

After a short discussion, Messrs. Crawford, Finlay and C. R. Mitchell were appointed delegates to represent the Board at the convention of Territorial Boards of Trade to be held in Regina this summer.

Various other matters having an important bearing upon the development of the town were taken up and the Board adjourned.

UNSEEMLY KNOWLEDGE.

How It May Bar the Road to Pleasure In Conversation.

The social law against "talking shop" is an indication of the very widespread opinion that the exhibition of unmitigated knowledge is unseemly outside of business hours. When we meet for pleasure, we prefer that it should be on the humanizing ground of not knowing. Nothing is so fatal to conversation as an authoritative utterance. When a man who is capable of giving it enters,

All talk dies as in a grove all song
Beneath the shadow of a bird of prey.

Conversation about the weather would lose all its easy charm in the presence of the chief of the weather bureau.

It is possible that the fear of exhibiting unusual information in a mixed company may be a survival of primitive conditions. Just as the domesticated dog will turn around on the rug before lying down for hereditary reasons which I do not remember, so it is with civilized man. Once ignorance was universal and enforced by penalties. In the progress of the race the environment has been modified, but so strong is the influence of heredity that the man who knows no sooner enters the drawing room than he is seized by guilty fears. His ancestors for having exhibited a moiety of his intelligence were executed as wizards. But perhaps the ordinary working of natural selection may account for the facts. The law of the survival of the fittest admits of no exceptions, and the fittest to give us pleasure in conversation is the sympathetic person who appears to know very little more than we do.—S. M. Crothers in Atlantic.

In a Maori Wooing House.

Among the Maoris sometimes in the whare matoro (the wooing house), a building in which the young of both sexes assembled for play, songs, dances, etc., there would be at stated times a meeting. When the fires burned low, a girl would stand up in the dark and say: "I love So-and-so. I want him for my husband." If he coughed (sign of assent) or said "Yes," it was well; if only dead silence, she covered her head with her robe and was ashamed. This was not often, as she generally had managed to ascertain either by her own inquiry or by sending a girl friend if the proposal was acceptable. On the other hand, sometimes a mother would attend and say, "I want So-and-so for my son." If not acce

THE NEW MINISTER.

It a far step down from Clifford Sifton to Frank Oliver. It will hardly be pretended that Oliver was the first choice of the Government for Minister of the Interior, and the fact of his appointment to the Cabinet is a confession of fear that was not generally expected. Even the Opposition in the Commons has been forced to admit that strength, foresight, and resource have distinguished Mr. Sifton's conduct of a heavy Department, and that he has revealed practical capacity and constructive power in relation to many broad questions of public policy. He, Oliver, was like Sifton, a fierce opponent of the coercion of Manitoba, when he was seeking a seat in Parliament, and his party the seals of office, and, like Sifton, he has sacrificed his principles on the altar of party and crept into the tattered uniform which he helped to tear from Tupper's shoulders nine years ago. There is, at least, this to be said to Sifton: he had not the face to continue drawing the salary which now goes into Oliver's pockets. For his treason Sifton sacrificed something; Oliver makes, and no doubt has a fine contempt for the scruples of the man to whose position and emoluments he has succeeded.

Why is Mr. Oliver now selected for preferment? It is no secret that Mr. Scott expected to succeed Mr. Sifton, and that his expectation was not unwarranted. It is just as true that he has greater qualifications for the office than Mr. Oliver or any other of the Western Liberal contingent in the Commons, with the possible exception of Mr. Greenway. Nor will it be suggested that he has failed in subservience or in docility, questioned or resisted the demands of the coercionist wing of the Cabinet, or held any consideration to be secondary to the retention of office in the hands of Liberal politicians. But, notwithstanding all these merits and notwithstanding that he carried his constituency a few months ago by nearly eight hundred of a majority, he is set aside and Mr. Oliver is called to the Cabinet. There can be only one reason for this unexpected proceeding, and that is that strong as he was in his constituency, and great as was his majority at the general election, the Government dare not risk a contest in West Assiniboia. We confess that we were not prepared for such a confession of fear and distrust of Western Liberals, and the fact have a curious significance in view of the contention of Ministers and their supporters and echoes in the press and in Parliament that the Autonomy Bill is acceptable to Western Canada and that the agitation which the measure has evoked has no existence outside of Ontario.

Mr. Oliver, therefore, is selected for the office of Minister of the Interior, and he will seek re-election in a constituency which gave over two thousand of a Liberal majority last November, and where the Government, under the circumstances of the moment, has greater sources of strength, and probably more power over the people than in any other community in Canada. It is estimated that there are at least five or six hundred French voters in the division, and from fifteen hundred to two thousand five hundred Galicians, many of whom belong to the Greek Church and are naturally subject to ecclesiastical influence. Moreover, the officials of the Government have very intimate dealings with the foreign voters, they are encouraged to depend upon the Government, and in the general election under the pressure of the officials they voted solidly for Oliver. The new Minister has a certain local strength also, because he is a vigilant guardian of the local interests of his constituents, and essentially a politician of the type which is represented by the battle cry of "Aylesworth and the canal." Besides, he is an object of local gratitude on account of the generous public aid voted to the Canadian Northern Railway, which is now nearing Edmonton, and still more is he credited with great service to his district in the agreement of the Grand Trunk Pacific to make Edmonton a divisional headquarters. And more powerful even than any of these considerations will be the desire that Edmonton shall be the capital of Alberta, the feeling that Mr. Oliver as a Minister will guarantee its selection beyond doubt, and the fear that the capital will go elsewhere in case of his defeat. Under all these circumstances it is vain to think that Mr. Oliver can be defeated, or even that his majority can be greatly reduced, as it will be an insult to the country to represent a victory gained under such conditions as a fair or decisive test of Western opinion.

But with the election over, the Government, in contempt of the policy upon which it obtained office nine years ago, and in shameless violation of the traditions, principles and professions of the Liberal party for a generation, launched the Autonomy Bill, upon a startled country, and required the Liberal party to sink its convictions, sacrifice its principles, and guarantee to an aggressive Church a permanent ascendency over a great empire of Western territory. The people are not permitted to pronounce judgement upon the policy, the Liberal representatives in Parliament are commanded to obedience as the price of office, the country is deceived, betrayed and defied and the subservient, but fearful supporters of an apostate programme encouraged to hope that four years hence the electors will have forgotten and other questions will absorb attention. There is nothing more treacherous, vicious and discreditable in the history of Canadian politics, and a verdict from Edmonton will not mislead the country, mitigate its wrath, or reconcile protesting Liberals to the coercive, divisive and mediaeval policy which stands condemned by all the traditions and all the teachings of the historical Liberal party of Canada.—Toronto News.

How to Cure Consumption

Ninety per cent. of the "lungers" contract consumption by allowing power of resistence to fall so low that a favorable condition for the development of the bacilli is provided. In a healthy system consumption can't take root, but where there is weakness and debility, there you find tuberculosis. For developing strength and building up the weak, nothing equals Ferrozone. It makes the blood nutritious and the nerves enduring. The way it converts food into nutriment, the appetite it gives is surprising. Just what a man verging on consumption needs,—that's Ferrozone. If tired and weak don't put off. Fifty cents a box of fifty tablets—at all dealers.

A REAL BOY WONDER

THE PHENOMENAL EARLY CAREER OF WILLIAM PITT.

Although Sickly and Delicate, This English Lad Was Intellectually One of the Most Remarkable Youths the World Has Ever Known.

One of the most remarkable boys the world ever saw was William Pitt. He astonished folk with his learning at the age of seven. He became prime minister of England when he was twenty-four.

He was a sickly boy, but he took all the out of door exercise his delicate frame could bear and was as eager to study as most boys are to play. He would not let his weak body stop his work, and he was reading ancient history at an age when most children are reading stories written in words of one syllable.

His father was the great Earl of Chatham, and the boy was brought into contact with all the great men of the time in England. When he was thirteen years old he wrote a tragedy which he called "Laurentine, King of Clarinium."

At this age, too, he was able to read Greek and Latin almost as well as he could English. He also was well informed on the politics of the day and on a variety of subjects about which only men of learning are supposed to know anything.

At fourteen he was able to take the works of Thucydides, written in Greek, and read page after page, turning it into excellent English as he read, and this off hand translation of his is said to have been almost without a flaw.

His father spoke of him as "eager Mr. William, the counselor, the philosopher." At the age of fourteen he entered the great University of Cambridge in England and at once, in spite of his youth, took a high place among the students at that celebrated place of learning.

When he went to Cambridge, the boy was in such feeble health that he had to be accompanied by a nurse, and all through his course there he was in so poor a condition, physically, that it was doubted if he ever would be able to finish the course.

But hard study seemed to agree with him, and when he was graduated, at the age of seventeen, he was much stronger than when he entered the university.

At an age when most boys are preparing to enter college, or, if they are very clever, have just become freshmen, young Pitt won the degree of master of arts from one of the greatest universities in the world and began the study of law.

At twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, and the same year was elected a member of parliament, to become prime minister three years later.

While he was yet a law student and only eighteen years old he attracted the attention of prominent men by his clear views on the questions of government, which then were perplexing the rulers of England. The boy was invited everywhere, and men holding the most important offices listened to his advice and asked his opinions.

His friends wanted him to go into parliament when he was twenty and all predicted for him a brilliant career. It was curious to see this delicate stripling, a boy in looks and years, meeting the great and wise men of the country as an equal and conversing on even terms with the most learned scholars of the day.

Young Pitt used to like to listen to the debates in the British parliament, and Mr. Fox, the great statesman, meeting him once after a debate, was astonished at the manner in which the boy criticised the eminent men who had spoken and pointed out where they could have made their argument stronger.

One of the hardest works to understand that ever were written is a book called "Cassandra," written by a man named Lycophronis. It is written in Greek. A learned man placed the book in the hands of young Pitt when the boy was sixteen years old, and he read it at first sight, translating into English as he read and explaining it in a manner which made the learned man declare that had he not seen it he would have believed it to be beyond the power of human intellect."

When Pitt was sixteen, his father declared that he would be a great statesman and was the hope of the country. Other folks soon became of his father's way of thinking, and that is why they put him into parliament when he was so young and made him prime minister so soon after.

He fulfilled all that was expected of him and ruled England during thirteen of the most eventful years of her history.

A Slander.

"See here!" said the city editor. "You speak of the bride as being led to the altar."

"Yes, sir. What of it?" replied the reporter.

"What of it? Why, it's nonsense. There was never a bride yet who couldn't find her way there, no matter what were the obstacles."—London Tit-Bits.

Natural Sequence.

"Yes," concluded the medical raconteur, "she became insane through excessive dancing."

"One might say she was hopping mad, I suppose!" gurgled the cheerful idiot.

A Difference.

The Friend—Is your daughter happily married?

The Father—Well, happily she's married.

Good order is the foundation of all good things.—Burke.

Emperor William has felt his noble muscle and has decided that he is just about strong enough to bring a slice of Africa to the loved ones at home.

A man with a cool million always gets a warm reception.

Whenever a general staff officer at St. Petersburg feels that he needs vindication, he gets his hammer and begins to knock Kuropatkin.

Wall Street says golden rule is dead, but your gold mine works the public; it is cheaper and more profitable.

Rat Portage has changed its name to Keenora probably in honor of some new breakfast food.

THE CRY FOR SLEEP.

Number Is of Greater Importance to Life Than Is Food.

In "Witchery of Sleep" is printed this: The cry for sleep is ever greater than the cry for bread. Existence depends on both, but we eat to sleep, while we sleep to live. Sleep is of far greater importance than food for the preservation of life. Sleep is the chiefest thing in physic. It has neither substitute nor rival. Take away sleep—hope even is gone; nothing is left. Most of the mischievous stories told about the ability of great men to do without sleep are untrue, and the foolish man who reads that Napoleon slept only three or four hours at night and cuts down his own hours of sleep might better open a vein and lose a quart of blood than lose the sleep which is life itself. It is undoubtedly true that Napoleon, an inconceivably foolish, reckless man in matters affecting his physical welfare, did deprive himself of sleep in his early years, but he paid for it dearly. In his last battles his power of resistance was so slight that he actually went to sleep during the fighting. Chronic drowsiness weakened his brain, weakened his force of character. The foundation of his downfall was laid in Russia, when lack of sleep and unwise living generally had taken away his mental elasticity, deprived him of all power to form and carry out resolutions and resulted in his final ruin.

Four Ways to Health.

Hygienic living demands imperatively the absolute purity of the four following necessities: Air, water, food and thoughts. Granted these, you have the constituents out of which nature formulates such a perfect creature that the inward purity seems to lend a radiance to the personality. It is not simply a few breaths of fresh air a half dozen times a day that a woman needs, but a continuous supply, and just as the greater part of women are half starved for fresh air so they are also stinted, oftener from ignorance than necessity, in the quantity of water the body requires to keep it clean and healthy. Pleasure of a pure, elevating nature has come to be recognized as having a distinctly therapeutic office, and hence to be one of those factors which merit the same consideration and attention as other necessaries in a well ordered life.

A Dream and a Reality.

An Irishman and a Scotchman once went travelling through a western prairie. It happened that one afternoon they shot a single quail, which would do for the breakfast of one of them on the following morning. Knowing that the bird was not enough for two, they agreed to have it eaten by the one who should have the best dream during the night.

When they woke early in the morning, the Irishman said to the Scotchman, "An' phwat did you dr-ream, Sandy?"

"Well," answered the Scot, "I dreamed that I saw a beautiful basket descend from heaven, and then I got into it and was borne up to paradise.

"An' I dr-reamed," said the Irishman, "that I sew you goin' up an' thought you wouldn't come back, an' so I ate the quail."

Heaven a Home of Wealth.

Yans, they's life an' happiness a-plenty in cheerful labor in the open fields an' a mighty slim chance for the doctor. Why, they's even wealth in it ef it's lived right; not riches, maybe, but wealth. Why, the way I read Scripture, it seems to me we're given to understand thet heaven is a home of wealth. "Many mansions" sounds that a-way, I'm shore, an' golden streets shows thet they won't anything be considered too good for use. An' sometimes I've thought thet maybe it meant to give us to understand thet simple riches, like gold, was to be trod underfoot. An' all the Revelational jewels, why, they seem to be set either in the walls or doors or somewhere, not let loose in piles, to be swapped or squabbled over. No riches to possess, but thess wealth to enjoy.—Ruth McEnery Stuart in Century.

The Months of Leaves.

The botanist, the real investigator who has got down to making real explorations for himself, will talk to you about the thousands of minute stomates on the surface of a leaf. These invisible stomates are really the mouths through which the leaves take in carbonic acid. They are most abundant on the upper surface of leaves. Each is an oval opening guarded by a pair of lips which open and close according to requirements. They vary from less than 1,000 to more than 20,000 to the square inch of leaf surface.

A Graceful Compliment.

Some famous compliments have been paid to members of the sterner sex, and one of the most gracefully turned was that uttered by Bolleau, who, when the virtuous De Mesmes, president of the parliament of Paris, was elected an academician, congratulated him in these terms: "I have come to you, sir, in order that you may congratulate me on having you for one of my fellow academicians."

A Finished Orator.

Tourist—Larkins, who came out here two years ago—he blossomed into quite a public speaker, didn't he?

Bowlder Jim—Yep. I s'pose he's what you'd call a finished orator. Made a speech denouncin' the boys for lynchin' a greaser-hoss thief, and they finished him.

None Better.

"My uncle died yesterday, sir, and I want you to officiate. Can you say something nice about him?"

"But I didn't know him."

"Good! You're just the man."—Life.

There are 53 Sundays in 1905, and people who consider Sundays a dull day can always be cheered with the thoughts that it won't happen again for 110 years.

The first or second Friday in May will probably be selected by the Government as Arbor Day.

Once more a movement is on foot to provide a park and athletic grounds for the town, and with a better chance of success than in the past. The progressive spirit so apparent in our town will, we believe, back up the council in any assistance they may give the movement. The feeling in favor of the matter being brought to an issue this summer is becoming general, as no one fails to realise that now is the time to act.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

"The water cart is all right." That is the unanimous verdict of the people. I predict that before this time next year the ladies will demand of the council that all the streets from one of town to the other be sprinkled.

* * * *

Of course, when the sprinkler made its first appearance, everybody wanted to know what The Times thought of it, and congratulated The Times upon having successfully agitated for this desirable adjunct to our municipal paraphernalia.

* * * *

Overheard at the railway depot: Oh, so I see The News did not give you the credit for the sprinkler. Oh, you newspaper men, you are crooked.

* * * *

Did'nt gallant Major Kyle,
Wave his hand and broadly smile,
Riding past The Times so gay,
Whilst the sprinkler sprinkled spray.
(The above submitted with apologies to the alliterative poet.)

* * * *

THE SUBURBAN'S LAMENT.

Sprinkle, sprinkle, little cart,
How I wonder where thou art;
Round and round the busy marts,
Scattering dewdrops, gladdening hearts.
Whilst out here we choke and frizzle,
Pining for thy tiny drizzle.
(With apologies to the poet.)

Lord Roberts is in demand, says a Toronto paper, and so great is the demand that, notwithstanding his wonderful ability as a soldier, he may be frightened off and may be compelled to stay in England. Through the efforts of Dr. J. O. Orr and Lord Strathcona, Lord Roberts consented to come to Canada and open the Toronto Fair this year. Since that time, Ottawa, London, Winnipeg, Markham, Woodbridge, and other places have endeavored to secure "Bobs" as their chief attraction. He has received by mail, since promising to come to Toronto, over 100 invitations to dinner in Toronto and Montreal.

The Ferry is giving a good deal of trouble these days. The river is low and the current is weak, and when the wind blows up the river it blows the heavy scow up stream until it passes under the cable if the ferryman and whoever might be on at the time do not use poles to keep the boat straight.

So much has been said and written about the want of a bridge, and with such little result so far, that there does not seem much hope that the Government will do anything for Medicine Hat. Efforts have been made to get a larger scow and a heavier cable but the only result has been the delivery of a cable which is lying on the bank where it was first deposited some months ago. If the scow breaks away and goes down river with a load there will be damages to pay.

* * * *

Up at Edmonton the railway bridge is planked and people cross the river by it in preference to going round by train.

Oh, but 'twas rich to see the Councillor and the Editor do that sprint along fourth avenue, after the Council meeting, the other evening. The Editor got the start and away he went stepping 459 Times to the minute until he heard the Councillor gaining, Deb, Deb, upon him and the finish was a dead heat and much puffing.

An interesting letter has been received in Calgary from Captain Denny, a member of the Northwest Mounted Police expedition, which left early in March for the Yukon. The party left Fort Saskatchewan on March 17th, and consisted of 32 officers, N.C.O, and men, 10 four horse teams loaded with provisions, forage and baggage under command of Supt. Constantine with Mr. J. Richards (of Medicine Hat), as Inspector. It took four and a half days to make Athabasca Landing. There they changed from wagons to sleighs, ten in all, shod nearly all the teams and saddle horses, leaving the pack horses unshod. They loaded up with hay and oats, etc., and started on the 65 miles trip up the Athabasca river on the ice. This trip was made in three days, which is considered good time. They made camps at night and the weather was so fine that no tents were pitched. They were fortunate in getting up when they did as the ice broke up next day. The portage across to Slave Lake, about 50 miles, was a bad one. They made it in three days, but there was no snow and the loaded sleighs had to be hauled over bare ground. "However, both men and horses worked well", says the letter, we made the trip without accident, but the journey was well managed by the Superintendent, and both well and energetically carried through by Inspector Richards." Slave Lake was frozen solid and the party made the next 80 miles in three days without accident to man or beast. Wagons will be used to Peace River Landing, another 80 miles north. From there the party will proceed with pack trains up the Peace River to Port St. John, 200 miles from which point the Trail-cutting party will commence work. They hope to be at St. John by June 1st. The first 300 miles has been well done.

Deserted Woman leaves in Pursuit of Erstwhile Husband.

(From Great Falls Weekly Leader.)

With four young children in her charge and the determination to provide for them a home at all events, Mrs. D. Rhinehart, a middleaged woman of Belt, boarded the Montana & Great Northern train in this city this forenoon, headed for Medicine Hat and the abiding place of her erstwhile husband and the father of her children.

Mrs. Rhinehart arrived in the city yesterday from Belt, in the vicinity of which place she has resided for years and appeared before County Auditor Roosevelt and the county commissioners petitioning them for transportation for herself and children to the Canadian town where she expects to find her husband who, she alleged, had left her and the children last summer to provide for themselves.

The woman told her story to the authorities, a story of which they had previously known the principal facts, in which she stated that early last summer her husband, Dan Rhinehart, had left their ranch on Little Belt for Canada, and taking his two eldest boys with him, had driven overland a bunch of cattle expecting to establish a home in that country.

Since that time Mrs. Rhinehart had heard from her husband and sons, but had not received a penny for the support of herself and her four small children and, not being able to do any work with the children upon her hands, she had been compelled to apeal to the county for aid. This had been afforded and she had been practically supported from the poor fund since her desertion at the hands of her husband.

To the Editor of the Times.

Dear Sir, — Rev. Mr. Morrow expressed the sentiments of the great majority of our citizens when he referred last evening in his sermon to the decayed and generally neglectad appearance of our public cemetery. This is a matter that requires to be placed in the hands of some active body to be attended to. It is often asked who owns the land? and where does the money go that is received from the sale of lots? These questions were suggested by reason of the unsatisfactory manner in which graves were being dug and filled. A competent caretaker working under a committee seems to be what is wanted.

THE JOLLY PULLS.

The Pulls are coming! Who are the Pulls? They are the World's Favorites and Kings of Hypnotism. The people who possess the highest occult powers, who carry their suggestions out in the most forms, and who manage to extract out of every situation more fun than will last an average man a week of steady laughter. They are the only ones upon the stage who can begin with mirth and never relax the facial muscles of the audience for two solid hours. It simply ripples from one point to another during the entire evening. Their work is marvellous. Prof. Theo. Pull is assisted by Mr. Joseph N. Pull. They have a novelty this year in using very elaborate costumes for different scenes. It is an original idea of the Pulls' and thing never attempted by any other Hypnotists. They will be here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 1, 2 & 3rd.

Advantages of the British Connection.

Those who think lightly of the value of Canada's connection with the old country (and luckily they are a comparatively small number) would do well to note that the trade and commerce department has been advised that a British consul has been appointed for St. Pierre. Notwithstanding pressure from the Canadian government for years past, the French government always refused to sanction the appointment of a consul on this island. Under the Anglo-French agreement of April, 1904, Mr G. S. Hampson was accepted as the British consul for St. Pierre by the French authorities. He is expected to reach Halifax on his way to his new duties about the end of the month. The British government has instructed Mr Hampson to render all the assistance he can to the Canadian ministers. Owing to the absence of a British officer, Canada has had to spend a large sum of money for a customs preventive service on the eastern coast.

Why Not Help British Settlers.

It is hard to understand why the present administration does not help English-speaking settlers to come to Canada. It is hardly to be supposed that they do not desire them. There are at present thousands of prospective immigrants in the British Isles, and with a little assistance these ready-made citizens could be installed on farms in Alberta and Saskatchewan. It is not generally realised, as pointed out recently by the Mail and Empire, how considerable a sum of money is required to bring a family from the old country across an ocean and a continent, and to leave enough capital to purchase stock and implements for farming. Not one Englishmen in a hundred can afford this expense. A single man can, of course, manage easier, but it takes the single man proportionately longer to get a home ont here. Were the Government's heart in the work of settling the unsettled tracts of this country with loyal intelligent British subjects, some scheme could be devised whereby intending immigrants would be assisted by loans of money, stock and implements in founding new homes in the West. Special inducements are held out to Galicians and Doukhobors, worthy people enough, no doubt; but why not also offer some inducement to typical English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh or American settlers? The late Minister of the Interior had quite a hobby of importing Southern Europeans and dotting the prairies with little colonies of them, and no doubt his successor feels warmly towards these, for to them he will owe his return to Parliament. They are a useful class to certain politicians, but the benefit they confer upon the land they live in is in no sense so great as would be the benefit by people from the British Isles. We therefore contend that to offer special inducements to people of other nationalities, and deny them to Britishers is not a fair deal. At this time there are in Great Britain thousands of just such people who would gladly come to Canada if the government would assist them, as the British Government is assisting the settlers in South Africa. The help would be only temporary, for the money advanced could be returned when the new settler was able, so that the expenses of the scheme would be small indeed and insignificant compared with the enormous advantages which would accrue to Canada and the Empire.

The Bylaws.

Every one of the bylaws to be presented for the verdict of the people on the 5th May should be passed.

Bylaw No. 88 is to provide the sum of $12,000 by debenture to extend the natural gas system of the town, of which the most important part is the deep well being bored.

Bylaw No. 89 is for the purpose of raising $2,600 by the issue of one debenture to purchase the natural gas well, gas and water plant and equipment owned and operated by the New Edinburgh suburb. The coming into the town of this valuable district has added $40,000 to the town's valuation, and in consideration of their coming in, last year's council undertook, subject to the people's approval, to purchase the gas and water plant.

It was a fair and equitable arrangement, and we trust the people will endorse the action of the council.

Bylaw No. 90 is to raise $10,000 by debentures for extension of the water-works system, and this is something in which everyone should be interested to the extent of recording a vote in favor of the bylaw.

Bylaw No. 82 is to raise $30,000 by the issue of debentures for the purpose of erecting a municipal building to provide for municipal offices, fire hall, lock-up, and for such other similar purposes as may be requisite and beneficial to the municipality.

All the foregoing are well calculated to help materially in the development of Medicine Hat, and it is to be hoped the property owners will go to the poll and record their votes in favor of every one of them.

"Calgary's Meteor."

This journal cannot be accused of "knocking" or in any way disparaging other towns. We are usually too busy "boosting" Medicine Hat. We have something worth boosting, and we are boosters. We have neither time nor inclination to throw any unpleasant things at neighbouring towns, and that being so, our Calgary friends will, we feel sure, acquit us of any unkind feeling in what we are going to say. We just want to draw attention to a headline in Thursday's Calgary Herald. The headline read "Calgary's meteor," and the matter beneath it referred to that brilliant phenomenon, the flight of a meteor, which was seen from various points in the west at the end of last month. According to the heading, Calgary claims the meteor. It was Calgary's meteor. So between them Pierpont Morgan and Calgary own the earth and the heavens.

In our public school at a recent examination the teacher asked the scholars to explain what gold dust was useful for. The answers were varied, one being that gold dust was a fine washing powder used for cleaning purposes. But the real gold dust is that which is used to make money, and unhappily, the love of money is the root of all evil. Just think, a man for the sake of gaining money will sell to another that which spoils his life. Then, again, for the love of gain men will find every excuse for wrong doing—criticising missionaries of the Gospel and workers who deny themselves many things to give to the cause of temperance. But the joy of working is that our blessed Lord Jesus is in sympathy with the work of the White Ribbon Band, for does not Jesus promise help to all who turn from sin, and are able to save even to the uttermost.

DR. LANDRY, from the Laboratories of Rea Bros., Co., Minneapolis Minn., and a Graduate of Laval University Quebec, Can., specialist in chronic and nervous diseases, will visit professionally, MEDICINE HAT, SATURDAY MAY 20th., at the ASSINIBOIA HOTEL, returning every four weeks.

Globe is in Revolt on School Question.

The Toronto Globe the leading Liberal organ is now in open revolt. Discussing the school question, the paper offers the following advice:

"Members of the Liberal party in the Commons would follow the counsels of prudence if, during Easter recess, they sounded the most intelligent and most significant opinion of their leading support.

"To echo the voice of the purblind partisan is unimportant, and members of parliament ought to guard against the soothing tones of those who would heal and hurt the Liberal party lightly, with their peace talk, when there is no peace. Public men cannot afford to live in a fool's paradise.

BEEF GOES UP.

Beef prices advanced to figure highest in 25 years, 15 to 25 cents pound being asked for prime article. Demand of English market on supply of stall fed animals in Canada is the cause. High prices will continue till July.

A Successful Horseman

Never allows his horse to suffer pain. He always uses Nerviline, which is noted for curing stiffness, rheumatism, swellings and strains. Nerviline is just as good inside as outside. For cramps, colic, and internal pain it's a perfect marvel. In the good racing stables Nerviline is always used, because it makes better horses and smaller veterinary bills. Twenty-five cents buys a large bottle of Nerviline; try it.

THE CANADIAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY.

The 1905 edition of the Canadian Newspaper Directory has just been published. The book is handsomely bound in cloth, contains nearly 400 pages of valuable information about the newspapers of Canada, and is well worth its cost to any firm which aims to do business outside of its own town.

In addition to complete lists of newspapers and magazines published in Canada, with full particulars as to frequency of issue, etc., the work is also a valuable Gazateer of the important towns and cities, giving population, location, chief industries, etc., etc.

Issued as a supplement, and included in a special envelope with the Directory, is a set of specially prepared maps of the Dominion, giving all the newspaper towns.

This valuable work is published by A. McKim & Co., Montreal and Toronto, who handle the advertising of many of the leading and most successful advertisers in the Dominion, as well as many of the largest advertisers in the United States and Great Britain.

INTERESTING ANNOUNCEMENT.

An announcement containing special interest for every Western Canadian newspaper reader comes from Winnipeg that early in the month of May there will appear the first number of Martel's Weekly, a magazine-newspaper. The editorial management of the Weekly has been entrusted to Mr. E. B. Mackay a former editor of one of Winnipeg's best known dailies. The features of the Weekly which will give it distinction over every other periodical published in Canada will be its elaborate service of illustration and caricature. It is promised that the Weekly in this regard will surpass anything turned out in Canada. The aim of this, the newest of Western Canada's periodical prints, will be to produce for the west a publication that will compare favorably with the best of its class in Eastern Canada and the United States. In the west it will be alone for originality, uniqueness, brightness and artistic merit. It will present and discuss current topics in a manner both fair and sprightly. Politically, it will steer clear of strife and mind its own business. The selling price of the Weekly will be five cents per copy, or one dollar and fifty cents per year. The local newsdealers will handle and take subscriptions for Martel's Weekly, and the Times will club with it.

PRAIRIE GROUSE SHOOTING.

CANADIAN WEST NOW THE SPORTSMAN'S MECCA.

A new world was opened to sportsmen when the Canadian Pacific Railway was opened. A writer in Rod & Gun in Canada says that when the bush disappeared from Southern Ontario, and the game with it, sportsmen felt the want of new shooting grounds, and found it in the West. With the first locomotive that crossed our North-west prairies, he says, we had a sportsman's land opened to us. Along the length of that great Canadian highway the lordly moose and the lesser deer family, myriads of wild fowl and grouse make up a great list of game animals and birds.

The sharp-tailed grouse (Pedicates phasianellus) of the Canadian North-west prairies is a splendid representative of the large grouse family. He is a big thick-set heavy bird, and lighter in color than the ruffed grouse. His back is a pretty chocolate with black feather bars, his underparts are pure white, each feather with an arrow-head of black. He goes in coveys the early part of the season, but later on packs in large flocks till the spring time, when the birds seperate again for their mating and nesting. Many parts of the Manitoba and North-western prairies are rolling and studded with bluffs; this makes a prettier landscape than a monotonous level prairie, and a much better shooting country. A bluff is a patch of small light bush composed of poplar and small scrub, and may be anything in size from a few yards to several acres in extent. The birds, when flushed on the open prairie or the stubble fly straight to a bluff, then one gun with dog going inside, and the other two, if there be three guns, which is not too many, walking on either side of the outside, the birds are caught as they fly out of the cover. The inside gun, if his dog be steady, sees his work, and always making sure where his companions are, often bags his bird before it leaves the bluff. This habit of taking to cover gives a pleasant variety to the shooting, which no other grouse that I know of gives.

It is but a few years since the North-west was settled, and wheat was grown there. The grouse knew nothing of cereals, and had to depend entirely on the seeds and berries that were indigenous to the prairie. The change of surroundings soon brought about a change in the habits of these birds. They were not long in cultivating a taste for the grain, wheat for preference, which was being grown, and mornings and evenings the stubbles are the most likely place to find them. If the season for wheat has been good, and the stubble been left long enough to afford good cover, a brace of well-trained dogs often get opportunities to do work which gladdens the heart of the sportsman who knows what good work is. It is not alt gether by the size of the bag that the sportsman's pleasure is measured; there are many other things which contribute and not at all the least is the spectacle of the dogs going at a slashing pace, crossing and recrossing the stubble and prairie, and stopping as though he was struck by lightning, and assuming a cataleptic state, making a picture which is only to be seen in a dog pointing his game.

The shooting wagon is an important adjunct to the outfit of the prairie sportsman. This should be a team and a roomy democrat wagon, with plenty of loose hay in the bottom for the comfort of the dogs, and for the warmth of your feet in the early cool morning drives out and evenings home. Next to the rig is your driver. Our experience in this individual has been very extensive; there are good shooting wagon drivers; there are shooting wagon drivers that are no good. If you can light upon a boy who would rather follow a man all day who has a gun than do anything else, that is the one you want to fasten on to. He knows the whole country can drive you anywhere, and is never lost; you leave the rig, and give him instructions as to which way you intend working, and you may rest assured that when your bag gets heavy, and you want the wagon to unload your birds into it, you will find it just where you expected it. Each trip you make to it he has some news to tell you; someone has been along and told him where there are lots of birds, or he has marked birds down and directs you to within a yard of where they are. He makes friends with the dogs, and those left in the wagon for spells are as safe as though you were there yourself. When the day's shoot is over and everything packed away, and you are in the wagon, shooters and dogs, and start for home, you do not know to a few the size of your bag, but the boy can tell you. He is not quick at school maybe, but he can and does keep accurate account of the game bag. Such a boy we had on our last two trips, he was always on time in the mornings, never lost us, and never caused us to walk a yard more than was necessary by any mistake he made. He always kept track of the guns, knew where we were all the time, and when we wanted the rig we could always locate it.

The Pinnated grouse has been making his way into our Northwest, and in a day's shoot several may help to fill the bag. This bird does not take to the bluffs as does the sharp-tail, and you lose the variety which you get with the sharp-tail in the bluffs, but, like all the family, Pinnated is a fine bird.

Since the Canadian Pacific Railway was built few seasons have passed without our having a grouse shoot in our great Northwest, and we are still in hopes of many repetitions. The bracing September atmosphere is most invigorating and health-giving, and after three or four weeks one feels as lithe as an Indian, and years younger. A trip to our prairies in September is something that Eastern sportsmen should not miss. The birds in Manitoba and the North west are being very well protected. Twenty is the limit per diem for one gun and sale and exportation is prohibited.

Pitt as a Spendthrift.

How did Pitt spend his income and get into debt? During the greater part of his life, after he had come to man's estate, he was in office, and his income was about £10,000 per annum. He did not entertain, he did not gamble, he neither hunted nor shot, and yet at the end of seventeen years of this income of £10,000 per annum he was hopelessly in debt. That he was careless is very possible. Still, considering that his income was equal to £20,000 per annum now, how in the name of wonder did he spend it?

This is all the more mysterious, as he appears never to have paid his tradesmen. I have often seen it stated that England ought to be proud of one of her greatest statesmen having died poor. Neither Pitt nor England had reason to be proud of a statesman, enjoying an ample official income, dying heavily in debt and making the payment of his tradesmen's bills dependent on parliament voting a sum to meet the liability.—London Truth.

How Sheridan Paid a Debt.

No one knew better the power possessed by a really polished compliment than Sheridan, and on innumerable occasions during that rather stormy theatrical management of his did he extricate himself from a difficulty by means of one. A good instance is the following: An English nobleman who, after the manner of other of his peers, had married a beautiful actress once applied with much dignity in the greenroom to Mr. Sheridan for the arrears of her salary and vowed that he would not stir till they were paid. "My dear lord," said the impecunious manager, "this is too bad. You have taken from us the brightest jewel in the world, and you now quarrel with us for the little dust she has left behind her." The nobleman immediately burst out laughing, and over a bottle of wine the debt was canceled.—London Standard.

The Marine Engine Is Alive.

All good old chiefs love their engines and come to believe in them. To all of us assistants and 'prentices they were not the mere machines that they appear to the outsider, but quite human. Every noise they made, every motion, every trick they had we knew and had the reason for it. Kipling speaks of the marine engine as the most sensitive thing man ever invented. There's a sort of cold, lifeless, though admirable, precision in a telescope and a fine regard for details in a phonograph, but the marine engine is alive; it strains and labors desperately, it groans with rheumatism in its joints, screams with the pain of tight bearings, staggers and plunges against the oncoming seas, gets out of breath and runs away with itself, trembling like a frightened horse.—Benjamin Brooks in Scribner's.

Glaring Effrontery.

Uncle Absalom Ashby was much given to retailing old and hackneyed jokes. An acquaintance of his, thinking to cure him of his practice, one day gave him a copy of "Joe Miller's Jest Book," with the remark that he "might find something new in it."

The next time he met the old gentleman he asked him, "Well, uncle, what do you think of that book I gave you the other day?"

"I don't know who that 'ere Joe Miller is," indignantly responded Uncle Absalom, "but I do know he's a thief. He's got hold of a lot of my best stories and printed 'em, consarn him!"

First Census Ways.

The original schedules of the first census are now contained in twenty-six bound volumes, preserved in the interior department. For the most part the headings of the schedules were written in by hand. Indeed, up to and including 1820 the assistant marshals generally used such paper as they happened to have, ruling it, writing in the headings and binding the sheets together themselves. In some cases merchants' account paper was used, and now and then the schedules were bound inside of a newspaper.—W. R. Merriam in Century.

Use Your Opportunities.

Today is the time to pursue fortune. The hour at hand is the one to make use of and the chances within our grasp—those we should seize. "Tomorrow" is never here, and putting off the good we may have for a questionable future is not the best wisdom. Therefore, use today. Do the kindness before you, the duty nearest you, and tomorrow will take care of itself.

Turning Rust to Good Advantage.

A Hessian lieutenant of the name of Ludwig von Siegen noticed the effect of the dew upon his gun barrel, which had become rusted from the dampness. Some time after he experimented upon the discovery and obtained what is now known as mezzotinto. In the year 1643 he engraved a portrait of Princess Amelia of Hesse by its application.

Then the Chase Began.

"Please let me pass," said the tramp, "so that I may speak to your mistress. I'm hungry, my trousers are beginning to fray, and I'm eager to get a little help."

"And I," interrupted the bulldog, getting into action, "am hungry and eager for the fray."

Loud Professions.

Uncle Reuben says: "I want to grow old widout growin' cynical, but I nebber hear a man begin to talk 'bout his conscience an' his duty widout lookin' to see how much cotton he has mixed wid de wool."

The average man is so helpless in picking out what belongs to him that it is a constant surprise to his wife that he doesn't appear in her clothes.—Atchison Globe.

Everybody

Reads The Times!

An Odd Habit.

The poet Mathurin always stuck a wafer on his forehead just between his eyebrows before taking up his pen.

Water Drinking.

The average daily consumption of water per head of population in American cities is about 80 gallons. In Europe it varies from 3 in Brest and 11 in Venice to 202 in Marseilles and 264 in Rome.

Coal Dust.

Coal dust, which is generally to be found at the bottom of coal cellars when the chunks are getting low, may be utilized by being mixed with salt and water and then made into fair sized lumps, which will prove to be the best possible backing for keeping a good fire in.

Beaten Gold.

A single grain of gold, after having been converted into gold leaf, will cover forty-six square inches.

Fish as Loadstones.

The Indians say the catfish are good pathfinders in winter, for, if you catch ten of them through the ice and let them flop about as they like, when dead eight or nine will have their heads to the north.

Scent Secrets.

The monks of Santa Maria Novella, at Florence, have been famous for more than four centuries for the precious secret recipes of perfumes and healing balms handed down to them, which they prepare entirely from herbs and flowers grown in the convent garden.

Lawsuits in Siam.

They have sometimes a curious way of deciding lawsuits in north Siam. Both parties are put under cold water, and the one staying under the longer wins the suit.

Fatherly Criticism.

Rhoda Broughton's first work, published before she was thirty, created a great sensation on account of its vigorous unconventionality. She asked her father his opinion of the work, and he, ignorant of his daughter's authorship, replied that it was an unfit book for her to read.

Alien Landlords.

Rent from American property owned by foreigners or Americans living abroad is believed to amount annually to not less than $25,000,000.

Coffee Drunkards.

There are coffee inebriates in Paris. Usually they are laundresses, a class of women who are specially devoted to the fragrant beverage. The coffee inebriate comes at last to such a state that he or she lives almost exclusively on an effusion of the beloved berry, with the addition of a little bread soaked in it.

Chemical Union.

Chemical union is the result of the attraction of unsatisfied electric charges on different atoms for one another.

When Plows Were Invented.

During the reign in China of King Shen Nung She (2737 to 2696 B. C.) he not only discovered the curative virtues of plants, but also first fashioned timber into plows and taught the people the art of husbandry and instituted the practice of holding markets for exchange of commodities.

Our First Piano.

A year before Philadelphia rang joy bells on account of the Declaration of Independence she made the first piano ever produced in this country.

British Money.

About 4,750 tons of British money is constantly in circulation.

STOMACHS ON STILTS.

The man who puts on stilts does not increase his actual stature. He only feels taller. Stimulants are the stilts of the stomach. They make a man feel better for the time being, but he feels a great deal worse for them afterward.

The need of the man whose stomach is "weak" is not stimulation but strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery perfectly answers that need. It contains no alcohol or whisky. It cures the weak, foul stomach with its attendant bad smelling breath, coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite and kindred symptoms.

"In the year 1880 I had an attack of indigestion and got so bad that my home doctor said he could not do me any good," writes Mr. G. Trent, of Gordonville, Texas. "I wrote to you and you advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, so I bought six bottles, and when I commenced using it I was so weak could hardly walk about the house. By the time I had used one bottle my stomach and bowels commenced to heal. There were strips of the lining of my stomach or bowels (I don't know which) as large as a man's two fingers passed and I had a good deal of misery in my stomach and bowels, and also in the rectum especially. I could not eat anything without having much distress afterward, but by the time I had taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I was sound and well, and could eat anything I pleased without suffering in the least. Could also do as much work in a day as I ever could. I have not suffered from the trouble since, and it was four years ago that I was so sick."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make a little more profit. He gains; you lose. Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Mr. F. F. Fatt received a cablegram from England on Good Friday conveying the intelligence of the death of his father. A letter received the previous day had, however, prepared him for the sad news. The old gentleman was 87 years of age, and until the third of April was hale and hearty, when an attack of bronchitis laid him up and from this he never recovered. Mr. F. F. Fatt paid a lengthy visit to his old home last summer when there was a family reunion which gladdened the heart of Mr. Fatt senior and will ever remain a cherished memory in the hearts of the sons and daughters who took part in it. Our genial postmaster has the sympathy of his large circle of friends here.

St. Barnabas Church Annual Meeting.

The annual congregational Easter meeting of St Barnabas Church was held in the schoolroom last evening, the rector, Rev. W. Nicholls in the chair, and Mr J. H. Binns, acting as secretary.

The Rector read an interesting account of the work of the church during the past year, showing there had been 193 Sunday services, 82 week day services, 91 celebrations of the Holy Communion, 740 communions made, 119 communicants, 10 confirmed, 8 marriages, 23 baptisms, 10 burials.

Mr O. W. Kealy, parish warden, read the churchwarden's report and financial statement, which was very satisfactory.

The following elections took place:—Parish Warden, O. W. Keally; auditors, F. F. Fatt and G. P. Blythe; lay delegates to Synod, T. H. Rhodes, and W. C. Harris, F. F. Fatt, and O. W. Keally; vestrymen, W. M. Cross, Dr. Smyth, O. Beeton, J. H. Collier, R. D. Legh, T. H. Rhodes, F. G. Forster, C. Taylor, W. C. Harris, J. H. Binns, W. G. Niblock, J. D. Everard.

Among the business transacted we may mention that the Vicar's salary was raised by $200 a year, and the vestry was instructed to proceed with arrangements for erecting a new church.

The meeting concluded with votes of thanks to Mr. J. H. Collier, superintendent of Sunday school, last year's vestry, Mr C. Charlesworth, for surveying burial ground, Organist Bates, the choir, the S.S. teachers, and sidesmen and a specially hearty vote was passed to the Woman's Auxilliary, who are actively engaged in many good works for the benefit of the parish.

EASTER SERVICES.

METHODIST.

The Rev. T. C. Buchanan, superintendent of missions, for Alberta conducted the services in the Methodist Church on Easter Sunday (in the absence of the Rev. J. M. Harrison, who is attending transfer committee in Toronto.) The sermon in the morning was upon the journey of Our Lord to Emmaus and in the evening he preached specially to the Women's Missionary Society, the subject being "Who is my neighbour," in which the Rev. gentleman spoke of the great work accomplished through the instrumentality of the W.M.S., among the foreign population of our own country and the Indians and also in China and Japan.

The following music was rendered.

Morning Service—Andante, Spohr; Anthem, "Portals of Glory," H. P. Danks, (alto solo, Miss Morrison; soprano solo, Mrs. Horner); solo, selected, Miss Cooper; Postlude, Guilmant.

Evening Service—Prelude in B minor, Harrington; Anthem, "This is the Day," S. C. Cooke; Solo, "The Ressurrection," H. R. Shelby, Mrs. McCarter; Anthem, "Haven of Life" (Obligato, Miss White); March from Athalie, Mendelssohn.

ANGLICAN CHURCH.

The Rev. W. Nicolls conducted the Easter Services in St. Barnabas Church. There was an early celebration of the Holy Communion at 8.30. At 10 o.clock there was a Childrens' Service. At 11 o'clock the Litany was said, followed by an address and celebration. At 7 o'clock there was Evening Service and a sermon founded upon the story of Christ meeting with the two disciples on the way to Emmaus. Some handsome calla lilies and other beautiful flowers were used in vases to decorate the communion table, and flowering plants in pots were massed on each side of the table. All the services were well attended, the Church being crammed at the morning services. The choir rendered good service, having prepared an anthem and other special music.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

The services at the Baptist Church on Easter Sunday were well attended. Rev. W. T. Stackhouse, B.A., Superintendent of North West Missions was present and took part of the work of the day. The morning service was adapted to the season. The music and sermon emphasising the great fact of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ and the risen life of His followers. In the evening Superintendent Stackhouse spoke from the text: "The people have a mind to work." Nehemiah 4, 6., illustrating the truth by the progress of Mission work in Manitoba and the Northwest among the Baptists, reviewing the past achievements, the present opportunity, and the guarantee of victory through faith in God. At the close of Mr. Stackhouse's eloquent address, the annual offering for Home Missions was taken.

The choir rendered good service throughout the day, having prepared special Easter music.

QUEBEC BISHOP NOT SATISFIED.

SAYS IT MAY SMASH THE UNION.

The attitude of the Romam Catholic hierarchy of Quebec toward the school question and the Autonomy Bill now before the house of Commons is set forth in a sermon recently preached by Mgr. Clouthier, Bishop of Three Rivers, in the Cathedral of that city. Referring to the school clauses of the Autonomy Bill, Mgr. Clouthier said:

"The original bill was very far from assuring to Catholic children that Christian teaching to which they are entitled. The amended bill now before the House gives, it is true, Separate Schools, but recognising the supremacy of the State, will be almost neutral in practice. The teaching, as a matter of fact, can only be made in English, and the half-hour of catechism after school is only a decoy, and can in no way satisfy the proper formation of Catholic children. The Confederation pact certainly assures us more than that, or Catholics would never have consented to form part of it. We may ask, in fact, what will become of the Confederation should such a measure become law.

"The amendment which hands over to the new Provinces the absolute control of their schools is not acceptable to Catholics. We must have Federal legislation that will guarantee to the minority the right to have schools of their choosing, both as regards religion and language.

"The object which a certain number of people have in view in establishing so-called National Schools tends to stamp with the same imprint every citizen of this country. Now this fusion of races, as far as the French Canadians are concerned, is a dream, a Utopia, for it would mean the renouncing of their providential mission, and we have every reason to hope that they will be faithful to that mission. Our duty for the moment is to live alongside our English fellow-citizens, respecting their rights, but forcing them, as the occasion may require, to respect ours. It is therefore the imperious duty of all Catholics to work courageously to obtain confessional schools for the two new Provinces, and not to yield till we have obtained full and ample justice."

THE SCHOOL ISSUE SUCCINCTLY STATED.

The literature on the school question is so voluminous that the average man has not really time to wade through it. Let us see if it is possible to tell the story, and to give the constitutional points in brief, or in such a way that the situation can be easily understood.

ORIGIN OF THE ISSUE.

The question begins with the decision of the Fathers of Confederation to insert a Separate school restriction or provision in the Constitution they were establishing. At the time of Confederation there were Separate schools in Ontario, then known as Upper Canada and Protestant Schools in Quebec, then known as Lower Canada. The new union was designed to transfer to the provinces all local authority, including jurisdiction in the matter of education. As education was to be withdrawn from the general Parliament, and was to be given to the provinces, the minorities in both Upper and Lower Canada asked a guarantee from the majorities in these provinces setting forth that their priveleges should not be taken from them when the union was effected. The leaders agreed to this guarantee. Therefore when the Confederation resolutions were being pronounced upon by the Parliament of United Canada, the clause transferring education to the provinces was guarded with this proviso:

"Education; saving the rights and priveleges which the Protestant or Catholic minority in both Canadas may possess as to their denominational schools at the time when the union goes into operation.

A CHANGE IN THE TERMS.

Now; the resolutions were taken to England to be used in the drafting of the British North America Act. There a change was made in the language, and the 93rd section of the Act provides as follows (we give the sense only for the sake of brevity):

"In each province the Legislature shall have jurisdiction in the matter of education, but:

"1. Nothing in any law shall prejudically affect the right with respect to denominatipnal schools enjoyed by any class of persons by law at the time of the union.

"2. All the rights enjoyed by the Separate schools of Ontario at the time of Union shall belong to the Protestant schools of Quebec.

"3. Where in any province Separate schools exist at the time of the Union, or are thereafter established by a province, an appeal shall lie to the Governor-in-Council from any act of the province affecting any right or privelege granted to these schools.

"4. The Federal Government may call upon the province to redress any wrong, and if the province fails to act then Parliament may pass remedial laws."

It will be observed that this is a wide departure from the original resolution. The resolution guaranteed Separate schools in Ontario and Quebec only. The law as passed added to this guarantee the provision that if any other provinces had such schools when entering the Confederation' or if any province which did not have them when entering the Confederation should establish them after entering into the Confederation, such schools would come under the guarantee.

THE ACT OF 1871.

In the year 1871 an amendment was made to the British North America Act. Our original Constitution did not provide for the government of Territories by Canada, nor did it give Canada the right to admit as provinces portions of the Dominion acquired since 1867. The Confederation Act was therefore amended by the law of 1871. The second clause of the Act of 1871 declares—here we condense the language—that Parliament may establish new provinces in any Territories, and may, at the time of such establishment:

"Make provision for the Constitution and administration of any such province, and for the passing of laws for the peace, order and good government of such province."

It will be noted that the Separate school guarantee was given for the two original provinces, and that it was extended to the other provinces, those of the east, then entering the Union, but that the Act of 1871 gave Parliament power, when giving the provincial status to Territories, to "make provision for the Constitution and administration" of the new provinces. This enactment would convey the impression that the education limitations were restricted to the old provinces, and were not applicable without special arrangement to any new province.

THE CASE OF MANITOBA.

The opinion thus created is strengthened by the conduct of Parliament towards Manitoba. Manitoba entered the Union in 1870. Had the educational provisions of the British North America Act been applicable to Manitoba simply because that province was joining the Union, it would not have been necessary to include them in the Manitoba Constitution. All that the law would have had to say was that Manitoba was hereby admitted as a province. But the framers of the Manitoba Act, with the consent of delegates from Manitoba specially repeated the educational clauses of the Confederation Act, thus showing that they at all events, did not believe Manitoba was subject to the restrictions without its consent or without a special Act. As a result of the repetition of the clauses in question Manitoba had Separate schools under the Federal guarantee. While these clauses were thus applied to Manitoba, they were not included in the British Columbia Constitution. The Pacific province is thus free in so far as education is concerned.

WHAT OF THE TERRITORIES?

Now we come to the Territories, and what is their position? While they are under Ottawa rule they are subject to a Separate school obligation. But it was announced by Sir John Thompson, Sir Louis Davies, and Hon. David Mills that the obligation rests upon the Territories only during their period of government from Ottawa. The moment they are raised to the position of provinces they become free in the matter of education. This view was expressed in the presence of Sir Wilfred Laurier who did not dissent from it. It would thus appear that the territories are in the same position as British Columbia, or as Manitoba, before the Union. British Columbia did not want to be bound to Separate Schools, so the bond was not included in the terms. Manitoba did want to be bound and the restriction was laid on. The entire story of the constitutional limitation from the binding of Ontario and Quebec by agreement to the admission of British Columbia without any restriction, seems to say that the people in whose behalf the Constitution is being framed shall be restricted or not as they please.

Purchase of Horses in Canada for the Imperial Army.

A great deal of misunderstanding having arisen concerning the objects of the Imperial Government in sending officers to this country to purchase horses, or rather to see if horses suitable for the British Army can be purchased, the following short summary of the position should prove of value. This statement may be regarded as absolutely correct and authoritative.

First and foremost, the demands of the British Army in peace time can be easily met within the four corners of the United Kingdom. That demand is not large, and may be taken as a normal one of 25000 horses annually, rising in certain years to possibly 50,00 of all kinds and classes.

There is an idea aoroad, and certain Ministers and statesmen in this country have brought it forward and may be considered responsible for it, that if the Imperial Government will purchase annually a fixed number of horses, say from 300 to 500, in Canada, a great stimulus will be given to horse breeding generally, and to breeding of the military type of horse in particular. Falling in with this idea, the Imperial authorities are anxious to put it to the test and, for reasons of their own, they fully recognise the advantage that will accrue to the Empire from the opening up of a large and limitless market that can be drawn upon to meet the immense demand that will be created in time of war. The real question then that has now to answered by the practical experiment of purchase during the next few months, is, can suitable horses be procured, and at an average price that will, when the horses are landed in England, favourably compare with that paid for remounts throughout Great Britain and Ireland?

The average price paid in England is an open secret; it is £40, or say $200. The cost of freight and insurance will certainly not exceed another $50, leaving $150, or possibly slightly more, to be paid for animals selected on the spot. A higher price can be paid for horses of special colour and type, such as horses suitable for officer's chargers and Household Cavalry. It is therefore obvious that Canada is on its trial as to its ability to supply horses for Army purposes.

It is, further, of more importance to Canada than to anyone else that, as the horses purchased will be regarded in England, as well as in this country, as typical, it will be in every way a great misfortune if those sent home are of a class and quality that will engender a belief that the Canadian horse is of an inferior type. Such a belief will probably do more harm to Canadian horse breeding and the reputation of Canadian horses than anything else.

Two classes of horses are to be bought,

1st. Riding horses, fit for heavy and light cavalry, from say 15 to 15¾ hands.

2nd. Draught horses fit for being driven postillion, with Horse and Field Artillery. The latter must not be less than 1230 lbs, 15.3 to 15.3½ hands in height, strong, active and with good shoulders to enable them to move fast, and even to gallop when required, the age should be from 4 off to 6 years. In all cases the British Government require horses with short backs, good shoulders, plenty of bone and distinct evidences of quality.

In the case of riding horses, those with a near cross of the thoroughbred are most likely to take the eye of the Inspecting Officers.

The British Remount Officers are in possession of detailed specifications, showing the exact type and qualifications of the horses required.

The Devil Hunting Cure For a Mad Dog Bite In Tunis.

A woman, having been bitten by a mad dog, was subjected to a native cure in the market place at Tunis. She was placed in the center of a circle of her husband's male relatives, who, led by a native witch doctor, danced fround her, yelling and screaming.

When the woman began to show signs of fear, the devil hunters commenced to yelp like dogs, and the noise was so grotesque that the woman speedily lost her sense and ran at her tormentors, echoing their doglike cries and trying to bite them. They scattered in all directions, and when some time later the husband sought the aid of the gendarmes to trace the woman her body was found at the bottom of a well.

Subsequently, says the Westminster Gazette, the husband also disappeared, and his body was found in the same well. It is said that the devil hunters, having induced the woman to drown herself in the well, threw the man in when they found he had called in the aid of the gendarmes. Had they not done so they would, they believed, have become possessed of the devil they drove out of the woman!

Billington's Sea.

Two or three miles back of Plymouth, Mass., is a modest little pond called Billington's sea. Billington, an adventurous pilgrim, had climbed a tree and, looking westward, had caught sight of the shimmering water. He looked at it with a wise surmise, and then the conviction flashed upon him that he had discovered the goal of hardy mariners—the great south sea. That was a great moment for Billington.

Of course the Spaniards were more fortunate in their geographical position. It turned out that it was the Pacific that they saw from their peak of Darien, while Billington's sea does not grow on acquaintance.

But my heart goes out to Billington. He also was a discoverer, according to his lights. He belonged to a hardy breed and could stare on new scenes with the best of them. It was not his fault that the Pacific was not there. If it had been, Billington would have discovered it. We know perfectly well that the Pacific ocean does not lave the shores of Plymouth county, and so we should not go out into the woods on a fine morning to look for it. There is where Billington had the advantage of us.—S. M. Crothers in Atlantic.

Squaring the Circle.

The origin of the problem squaring the circle is almost lost in the mists of antiquity, but there is a record of an attempted quadrature in Egypt 500 years before the exodus of the Jews. There is also a claim, according to Hone, that the problem was solved by a discovery of Hippocrates, the geometrician of Chios—not the physician—500 B. C. Now, the efforts of Hippocrates were devoted toward converting a circle into a crescent, because he had found that the area of a figure produced by drawing two perpendicular radii in a circle is exactly equal to the triangle formed by the line of junction. This is the famous theorem of the "lunes of Hippocrates" and is, like glauber's salts out of the philosopher's stone, an example of the useful results which sometimes follow a search for the unattainable.

The Origin of the Mastiff.

Mastiff is a term applied to a very large and powerful species of the canine family, and there is considerable conflict of opinion regarding the origin of the word. Some claim that it is derived from the Italian mastino or the French mastin, both of which signify large limbed.

This word, they say, was gradually corrupted into masty, a Lincolnshire expression meaning very large, muscular or big, until it gradually assumed its present form. Others again say its true origin is the old German masten, to fatten, because the mastiff is a large dog and so seems better fed than any other.

A Lincoln Story.

The spirit in which Lincoln joined in his famous debate with Douglas is best illustrated by an anecdote which Leonard Swett related to Augustus C. Buell. "I believe, Abe, you can beat Douglas for the senate. You can carry the legislature if you make the best use of your opportunity," said Mr. Swett to Lincoln on the eve of the first debate. "No, Len, I can't beat him for the senate, but I'll make him beat himself for the presidency."—Leslie's Weekly.

Inconsistent.

"Here, you!" cried big Mrs. Cassidy. "Sthroike or no sthroike, Oi'll not hov ye standin' round doin' nothin'."

"Well, oh, well," meekly protested little Cassidy, "'tis the most onraysonin' woman ye are. Last wake ye told me if Oi didn't behave mesel' ye'd make me stand round, an' now that Oi'm doin' it ye're kickin'."

We purpose holding two or more auction sales each year, due notice of which will be given. TRE B.C. TRAIN HOLD UP.

Bill Miner, the desperado who is supposed to have been one of the principals in the hold-up on the westbound transcontinental train of the Canadian Pacific railway at Whonnock, B.C., on the night of Sept. 9, 1904, is the only one of the party who is likely to answer for the offence before the courts.

The Gates boys, two of the most daring, desperate criminals who ever held upon a stage, rifled an express car, or robbed any depository of wealth, and who were two of of the three men who held up and robbed the C.P.R. express at Whonnock, will never answer to the courts for their many crimes.

Several days ago, George, the elder and Edward Vernon, the younger, were shot to death near Separ, New Mexico, by a posse of angered citizens of the town of Lordsburg, in the same state.

While it has been a matter of rumour that the Gates boys were concerned in the C.P.R. express robbery, no statement about their part in the crime was ever made by the detectives who worked on the case until a few days ago.

The history of the robbery at Whonnock on the night of Sept. 9, is well known. So far no capture has ever been made. Old Bill Miner is the only culprit left for the law's vengeance, now that the Gate's boys have reached the end of their string.

The Gates boys paid the penalty of their many offences and now lie buried in unmarked graves on the outskirts of Lordsburg, N. Mexico.

Two men hold up a saloon in Lordsburg on March 15, and with their loot hurried off to the mountains. Sheriff McGrath of Lordsburg immediately organized a posse and started in pursuit. After a hot chase the posse overtook the robbers at the town of Separ, and when the two men showed resistance they were killed. The youthful appearance of the dead men caused the authorities at Lordsburg to institute an investigation with a view of discovering their identity, which, it is said, was finally effected through photographs of the Gates brothers then in possession of the Pinkerton detective agency at Chicago.

GREAT MINDS AND SMALL BODIES.

Lack of inches has been a common peculiarity among Great Britain's mentally great. Pope and Grey were of the tiny ones ; Flaxman, the father of English sculpture, was shorter and more misshapen than Pope. Dr Quincey and Douglas Jerrold, Sir Charles James Napier and Lord Chief Justice Cockburn add lustre to the list of the lack of inches. Crofton Croker, who gave the fairy legends and folklore of Ireland a literature, was described by Scott, his admirer, as "little as a dwarf." Lord John Russell was so slight of stature as to have it said of him that he had barely sufficient body to cover his brain. Napoleon, Wellington and Nelson form a triumvirate of warriors whose stature was in adverse ratio to their celebrity.

GLOBE TROTTERS HERE.

The two French Globe Trotters, who are said to be "walking round the world," arrived at Medicine Hat, on Tuesday evening and left on Thursday evening. They are French medical students and were led to undertake their unique task by a love of adventure and by the offer of the leading journal of Paris of a prize, stated to be $15,000 to any Frenchman who would make such a trip and report regularly every week to that journal.

It may be that the young men, who by the way, were particularly nice young fellows, are not prohibited from riding on trains, but we may observe that they rode out of Medicine Hat on No. 1 train on Thursday evening.

THE BYLAWS VOTE.

As stated in a recent issue of the Times the Cypress Club purchased of Mr A. C. Hawthorne, the property on the south-east corner of Main street and 4th Avenue. A contract has been let to Mr J. L. Morris for alterations, and the work has been put in hand.

THE HIGHLAND CATTLE.

The Highland pedigree cattle brought over from Scotland by Mr D. Cargill, of Seven Persons, as reported in our last issue, has occasioned much interest in stock circles, and there is a general opinion that they are well adapted for crossing with our range cattle.

We omitted to mention in our last issue that two of these fine young bulls were brought over for Mr John Day.

TUESDAY, MAY 9th 1905.

Officials Should Attend Council Meetings.

The question of placing orders for town work and materials is likely to become an acute one, and the matter has been raised in such a way that it will have to be settled in some manner which will be satisfactory to the ratepayers. The Committee appointed by the Council will doubtless deal with the subject and bring in recommendations for future conduct. That there has been ground for complaint appears evident, but the way in which the name of one of the officials, Superintendent Porter has been connected with the subject leads us to express the opinion that all official heads of departments should attend the regular meetings of the Council. There are only two or three such officials in this town, including Mr. Porter, and we think he ought certainly to be present while questions affecting his departments are under discussion. It should be his privilege and his duty to be in attendance so that when questions of the foregoing nature come up he would have an opportunity of at once offering an explanation. He might have been able to explain several points raised at the last meeting. At any rate, it would only be fair that he should have the opportunity. We are well assured of one thing, and that is not one member of the Council would willingly be unfair to him or any other employe. It would, therefore, be well if he could be present so that if there are two sides to any story brought up it would be immediately forthcoming, and this would put the public in a better position to judge the matter all round.

Ordering Town Supplies.

There are certain things which will have to be put in order so as to adopt a better system of dividing orders between the several business men of the town. It is only fair that everyone who is prepared to charge a fair price and supply the article required, should have an equal share. It is not so now. Orders, even down to a few dollar's worth of printing, go too much in one direction. We don't quite know if it is the Mayor or Town Clerk who controls printing orders, but we do know that nearly all of them find their way to the News (of which the Mayor is manager), while the Times has to be satisfied with a few crumbs from the Mayor's table. We won't pretend that we are of the meek and lowly class, and we boldly claim a more even distribution in future, not only for ourselves, but for everyone.

Cases in Point.

Enlarging on the above, we may give two cases in point. A member at the last meeting stated that if 75 bushels of oats are required, a tender is asked for, but if it is a good big order for water or gas requirements the order is given right away. It is the same in printing A seven dollar printing order was tendered for a couple of weeks ago, while several other more valuable orders (in which there was more "fat") went straight to the Mayor's office. We look to the Council to order a fairer division of printing orders in future, and we do not believe we shall look in vain.

Remember This.

A good deal of unpleasantness has been caused by the discussion at the Town Council in reference to the methods of buying supplies for the town, but two things should be borne in mind.

1st. A Councillor would not be doing his duty to the ratepayers if he declined to bring forward what appears to him to be a well-grounded complaint by any local tradesman of unfair treatment.

2nd. Officials in responsible positions should be very careful not to favor one more than another, so that they may be, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion.

The Byelaws All Passed.

The ratepayers are to be congratulated upon the fact that they voted almost unanimously in favor of the byelaws for the extension of the water and gas systems, the New Edinburgh proposition and the erection of a municipal building. It is distinctly an excellent sign when the townspeople vote for progress in such an unmistakeable manner. The poll was a small one but we may take it that those who did not vote were in accord with the object sought, and, therefore, the town may be said to be unanimous for progress.

The Embargo.

That excellent champion of Canadian interests, the Canadian Gazette (London, England) is a staunch advocate for the removal of the cattle embargo (which, we may say, the British Government has made permanent.) We hold that the embargo is a "blessing in disguise" for it is to Canada's interests to keep her young cattle, and only send out the finished article. We repeat what we have previously said that it is to the dead meat trade that we should look. The following appears in the Canadian Gazette of April 13th, and that paper's remark as to the danger of "importing diseases" is a point in favor of the continuance of the embargo, although probably the Gazette did not mean it in that way:—

Some of the best friends of the North-west cattle trade are, we are glad to see, objecting to the further importation of Mexican and Texan cattle into Manitoba and the Territories. They are small, ungainly beasts, and produce a tough and poor quality of beef unfit for export. The Toronto Globe takes the sound view—a view upon which the late Mr John Dyke was never tired of insisting in the Canadian Gazette—when it urges the shortsightedness of this importation of debased stock:—It does not pay to ship Eastern cattle into the country, as they cannot adapt themselves to the local conditions; but the ranchers and famers, if they are wise, will be patient, and import the best bulls they can secure of the beef types, and then they can raise a class of cattle suitable for the export trade. The process will be slower, and the cattle will require protection in winter; but the profit per head will be materially greater, while the reputation gained in foreign markets for Canadian cattle will create an increasing demand at satisfactory prices. The most profitable class for the West are, under favorable conditions, high-class shorthorns. The cows make good mothers, and the young animals mature quickly. They possess the desired conformation, and produce first-class beef The Galloways should also be popular, as they are less subject to climatic changes, and should be especially well adapted to ranching in the more exposed sections of the country. The ranchers and the farmers in the West are equally responsible with the stock-raisers in the East for producing the kind of cattle that will add to the country's reputation in meeting the demands of an expanding export trade." There is, moreover, the danger of importing disease from these loosely-regulated Southern States. Why not put a heavy import duty on this low-class live stock? It would be in the best interests of Canada.

What causes Snoring.

When asleep, people that snore breathe through the mouth instead of the nostrils which are choked with catarrh. Just use "Catarrhozone" before retiring and you'll quickly cure the snoring habit. By destroying the cause of catarrh and healing the membranes, Catarrhozone makes a complete cure in every case; it cleans the nostrils, stops the discharge and prevents dropping in the throat in a few minutes. Nothing so pleasant or certain to cure snoring catarrh or colds as Catarrhozone—that's worth remembering.

CROS VENTRE NOTES.

I have been off my range and visited the Plume Creek. I found it a fine place for the likes of me. Instead of giving a handout they invite one into their houses, and make you welcome to the best the ranch affords.

Mr Carle, of Plume Creek, has been up to B.C., where he purchased a large farm, and intends selling out here and removing his family to his new home.

Several others have got the B.C. fever and intend moving as soon as they can sell.

Messrs. Comer and Divine are talking of going north and trying their luck along the G.T.P.

We do not like to lose this class of settlers, but if they go we wish them all sorts of good luck.

There has been a band of American Indians rambling around here the last few weeks. Report says they are having trouble with settlers on account of amusing themselves by cutting wire fences and leaving gates open.

Miss Corbett of Little Plume School has been visiting at Mr and Mrs W. Putnam a few days.

Township 9, range D, is putting on airs. The residents held a meeting in Gros Ventre School house a few days ago, and elected John Weiss, Jr., Councillor. We cannot find out exactly what his duties are. Perhaps it is to try and get the school opened, but that can't be done I suppose until the gophers are all trapped: by that time it will be haymaking.

The new house on 4-9-4, is taken possession of by a fair lady from Nova Scotia, and now as farmer P—m plods his way home, after a day of weary toiling, he is not planning how to make that last bannock hold out for two more meals, but is thinking of the smiling face and dainty meal that awaits him. It is the sincere wish of Wandering Willie that they both may live long and happy lives, and their troubles may all be little ones.

J. Houston has been freighting trees to the Hat this spring as usual. Johnny would be lost if he had not lots of trees to monkey with.

Mr J. Brown is back from the hospital where he went suffering from la grippe. He is looking well, and is loud in his praise of the nurses.

I have a suspicion that it will be necessary for him to repeat his visit in the near future. The symptoms this time indicate heart trouble. Brace up John, you're not the first rancher that has been brought to his knees after, being a patient in the Medicine Hat hospital.

DISGUISES OF NATURE.

The Quality of Defense Is Found In Every Animal.

By a decree of nature one-half the world flourishes at the expense of the other half. The sparrow chases the butterfly, but the hawk chases the sparrow. For the problem of life is twofold. It is not enough merely to eat. It is necessary to avoid being eaten. Yet nature detests killing for killing's sake. Massacre forms no part of her great plan. So we see that every creature is provided with some more or less effective quality of defense by means of which the attacks of its natural enemies are rendered less frequent or less deadly.

Thus the antelope by means of its superior speed at times escapes from the lion. The armadillo, rolled in its wondrous coat of mail, lies secure among a score of hungry, gnawing foes, while the white hare, scarcely distinguishable from the snow on which it crouches, is often overlooked by his foe, the fox. But of all creatures none has received more ample protection than the insects. Some of them possess stings, others bite, and a few puff out clouds of poisonous vapor to stupefy or blind their pursuers. Again, there are insects clothed in impenetrable armor, insects covered with sharp spines and prickles and others whose means of defense consist in nothing but a likeness to the objects which surround them.

How Savages Walk.

Savages always walk with their toes turned in for two reasons. In the first place the foot naturally falls in that position when it has never been confined by boots or the ankles distorted by high heels. In the long stride of the savage the leg swings freely like a pendulum round the center of gravity, which is somewhere between it and the other leg. In the swing the abductor muscles of the inside of the thigh bring the sole of the foot under the center of gravity, and in doing so slightly rotate the foot toward the inner line, turning the toe in. Convenience is also on the side of the natural position of the foot in the case of the savage, for he has to do much walking through long grass and undergrowth in forests.

A moment's reflection will show how very much his progress would be impeded if he turned his toes out to catch these obstacles instead of brushing them aside and outward as he now does. Lastly, the savage uses his foot much more as a help to his hands than we do, and it is obvious that in doing this he must turn his toes in.

The Right Way to Boil Water.

"To boil water would seem to be a very simple thing," writes some one in the Boston Cooking School Magazine, "and yet the late Charles Delmonico used to say that very few people know how to do it. 'The secret is,' he said, 'in putting good fresh water into a kettle already quite warm, setting the water to boiling quickly and then taking it right off for use in tea, coffee or other drinks before it is spoiled. To let it steam and simmer and evaporate until the good water is in the atmosphere and only the lime and iron and dregs left in the kettle is what makes a great many people sick, and it is worse than no water at all.' For water boiled like this and flavored with a few drops of lemon juice Mr. Delmonico used to charge as much as for his best liquors, and he often recommended it to his customers and friends who complained of loss of appetite. It is worth trying."

Different View.

"You see," said the old locomotive engineer, "railroad officials don't look at things quite as the public does. On one of my runs a year ago I found a certain bridge swept away, and I had to back up about two miles to get orders. As I reached the station the division superintendent came out and demanded.

"What's the reason for all this?"

"Bridge over Maple river gone," says I.

"And why didn't you run your train into the river?"

"My fireman didn't want to get wet."

"Humph! Bounce him for blocking the road, and don't you make another such mistake unless you want a year's vacation."

Eyes at Different Ages.

The Stockholm museum possesses an interesting collection of eyes taken from human beings at different ages, which are cut across in such a way as to exhibit plainly the internal and the external eye. It is easy to observe that the eye of a young child is as transparent as water; that of the youth a little less so; in the man of thirty the eye begins to be slightly opaque, in the man of fifty or sixty it is decidedly opaque, and in the man of seventy or eighty it is dull and lusterless. This gradual development of opacity is due to the increase of fibrous tissue and deposit of waste matter in the eye.

Fiendish Revenge.

The burglar softly opened the door of the suburbanite's sleeping apartment, slipped inside and searched the room thoroughly, but found nothing worth stealing.

"I'll get some satisfaction out of him, anyway!" he said.

Thereupon he set the alarm clock on the bureau for the hour of 3 and softly departed.

THE NEW GIRL.

She was very red of features,
And we didn't know her name,
Yet with rapture wild we hailed her,
When the New Girl came.
She was rather shy on cooking,
And she couldn't iron a shirt,
And she spoke a foreign language
In a way extremely pert.
Not a reference she gave us,
Naught of sweeping could she do
And she sat up with admirers,
Till the clock was striking two.
Yet you'll understand our feelings
And the rapture of the same,
For we had a little daughter
When the new girl came.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

Medicine Hat is being cleared of ownerless mongrels, and no one will be sorry. The pound-keeper is one of the most active officials in the town. A stray horse, cow or dog has little chance of escaping Thomas Morrey's keen eye.

The street sprinkler is doing good service, and people living outside the area sprinkled say it is a pleasure to go shoping now. I think the Council is to be congratulated, and the men who built it deserve great praise for the cart—the first they ever made no doubt. Another like that, but with a wider spread, is wanted, and then our streets can be kept cool and free from dust over practically the whole town.

* * * *

The School Board is rapidly becoming a large spending body and perhaps their transactions are hardly receiving the attention they ought to get. It is stated they contemplate an expenditure of something like $25,000 upon the two existing schools. They propose to remodel Toronto Street school, and intend to complete the Montreal Street school. Well, provided the money be judiciously expended, no one will grumble. Any reasonable expenditure for the education of the rising generation is sure to be a popular proposition. It seems to me however, that the cost of the schools per head of the accommodation is somewhat high. It would be interesting to know how the cost (of buildings I mean, not maintenance) compares with the cost in other towns.

* * * *

Among the distinguished (?) strangers in the vicinity just now may be mentioned a small band of wandering Blackfeet Indians from the Piegan. These gentry are by no means a prepossing looking lot. The Crees and also the Sioux with a few exceptions are by no means handsome, and not quite up to the standard of "noble savage" which the story books of our young days engendered in our youthful imaginations, but they are positive "aristocracy" as compared with the Blackfeet. The Indians are pretty good scavengers, as the squaws and papooses are around all day long picking up and carrying off to their camp all the odds and ends they can find.

* * * *

One day last week a party of them were diligently searching, as usual, among storekeepers boxes and rubbish, when an Indian boy yelled with delight and held up a prize he had found. Three or four squaws and several papooses rushed to him. He had found a chocolate, and they all performed a war dance round the young hero. One squaw then gravely took it from him, held it up, examining it critically, then bit a piece off, and after tasting it, grunted something which must have meant "good," and gave it back to him, when the embryo "brave" quickly finished it off with great delight.

* * * *

Now what about that pound for cats! And how would it be to have a pound for stray chickens just now during gardening time!

* * * *

I think we had better all go to Regina for the Dominion Day celebration of the birth of the two new provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. I propose Regina because the celebration committee have been granted $8,000 by the Government towards their little "kick-up." I think if Regina wants to celebrate Regina should pay. I fail to see why the rest of the country should subscribe such an amount to a local celebration.

* * * *

If we want to celebrate at Medicine Hat, and we do, how much will the Territorial Government give us?

* * * *

"Thank the Lord it's snowing!" was an ejaculation on thousands of tongues in various parts of Manitoba on Thursday. I am only sorry Medicine Hat district did not get a similar six-inch fall. A fall of snow at this time followed by warm weather puts thousands of dollars in the pockets of farmers and business men.

* * * *

To the new-comer from England or Eastern Canada it looks a horrid thing to have six inches of snow in the first week in May, but to the men and women who are accustomed to the raising of wheat on the prairies the value of a snow blanket on freshly sown wheat is a matter of common knowledge. The years of record crops in the Canadian west have all been marked by heavy rain or snow in the early part of May.

AT A HORSE AUCTION.

The Proceedings as Viewed From the Horse's Standpoint.

Skipper was a police horse and the pride of the mounted squad until he acquired a spavin. Then he was sent to a sales stable. His experiences there as told by Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine" were as follows:

Skipper was led into a big ring before a lot of men. A man on a box shouted out a number and began to talk very fast. Skipper gathered that he was talking about him. Skipper learned that he was still only six years old and that he had been owned as a saddle horse by a lady who was about to sail for Europe and was closing out her stable. This was news to Skipper.

The man talked very nicely about Skipper. He said he was kind, gentle, sound in wind and limb and was not only trained to the saddle, but would work either single or double. The man wanted to know how much the gentlemen were willing to pay for a bay gelding of this description.

Some one on the outer edge of the crowd said, "Ten dollars."

At this the man on the box grew quite indignant. He asked if the other man wouldn't like a silver mounted harness and a lap robe thrown in.

"Fifteen," said another man.

Somebody else said "Twenty," another man said "Twenty-five," and still another "Thirty." Then there was a hitch. The man on the box began to talk very fast indeed.

"Thutty, thutty, thutty, thutty! Do I hear the five? Thutty, thutty, thutty, thutty. Will you make it five?"

"Thirty-five," said a red faced man who had pushed his way to the front and was looking Skipper over sharply.

The man on the box said "Thutty-five!" a good many times and asked if he "heard forty." Evidently he did not, for he stopped and said very slowly and distinctly, looking expectantly around: "Are you all done? Thirty-five—once; thirty-five—twice; third—and last call—sold for $35!"

When Skipper heard this, he hung his head. When you have been a $250 blue ribboner and the pride of the force, it is sad to be "knocked down" for $35.

INSTINCT IS THE TEACHER.

How the Young of the Feathered Tribe Are Educated.

There is a school of the woods, just as much as there is a church of the woods or a parliament of the woods or a Society of United Charities of the woods, and no more. There is nothing in the dealing of animals with their young that in the remotest way suggests human instruction and discipline. The young of all the wild creatures do instinctively what their parents do and did. They do not have to be taught; they are taught from the jump, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. The bird sings at the proper age and builds its nest and takes its appropriate food without any hint at all from its parents. The young ducks take to the water when hatched by a duck and dive and stalk insects and wash themselves just as their mothers did. Young chickens and young turkeys understand the various calls and signals of their mother the first time they hear or see them. At the first alarm note they squat; at a call to food they come on the first day as on the tenth. The habits of cleanliness of the nestlings are established from the first hour of their lives. When a bird comes to build its first nest and to rear its first brood, it knows how to proceed as well as it does years later or as its parents did before it. The fox is afraid of a trap before he has had any experience with it, and the hare thumps upon the ground at sight of anything strange and unusual, whether its mates be within hearing or not. No bird teaches its young to fly. They fly instinctively when their wings are strong enough.

TIRED OUT.

There's many a wife sits in the growing shadows of an evening, knowing what it is to feel tired out; as if there was not another ounce of effort left in her. But if healthy she knows how sound her slumber will be and how refreshed the morning will find her. But it's another thing for the sick woman to feel tired out. Rest only seems to increase her suffering. She feels acutely the aching back and throbbing nerves. Sick women, hundreds of thousands of them, have been made well by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I am pleased to inform you of the benefit I received from using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Elizabeth A. Carroll, of 45 Brant Street, Windsor, Essex Co., Ontario, Canada. "Was quite discouraged when I wrote asking your advice, as the physicians here told me I could get no relief except by an operation. Suffered for four years from irregular and profuse menstruation, had sick and nervous headaches most of the time, and at times could hardly walk across the floor from weakness. I thank God there is such a remedy as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for suffering women. Before I had taken the first bottle the headaches had left me and it was not long before regularity was established and still continues so. Have just finished house-cleaning which I never expected to be able to do again, and can truly say I never felt better than at present. I gladly recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to all who suffer from female weakness. It has cured me and made me stronger in every way. Neither my husband nor myself can say enough in its praise."

The selfish seller who urges some substitute is thinking of the larger profit he'll make and not of your best good.

Cook and Forster have received from London, Ont., a new and thoroughly up-to-date bread delivery wagon. The gentleman who criticised the old one last week will please note how promptly his suggestion has been acted upon.

The old stockyards have been demolished and the ground cleared of rubbish. The new yards, built on the opposite side of the track, and further east, are a great improvement from every point of view.

Mr H. C. McMullens, stock inspector of C. P. R. attended the stock growers meeting last week, having just returned from Chicago, Montreal, etc. He stated that the prospects are bright for business and better prices for cattle next fall.

Dr Rutherford, veterinary director general, is announced (by the Free Press), to meet the stock breeders association at Medicine Hat, on the 11th inst. Whether there will be such a stringent policy of cattle dipping this year as last will depend upon the result of the discussion here.

Owing to the popularity of the Harold Jarvis entertainment, the advance sale of reserved seats has been something extraordinary, so much so that the management committee have been compelled to add two more rows to the present plan. The seats for concert purposes are among the most desirable and will no doubt be rapidly taken up.

Mr Thomas W. Williams, Special Commissioner, representing the Overseas edition of the London (England) Daily Mail, was a passenger on No. 1 for the coast on Thursday night. While here Mr Williams was met by W. McFarlane Evans, stationer and newsagent, who arranged to handle the paper at this point. Mr Williams was much struck with our street and store lighting by natural gas, and may stop off here on his return trip. If so we may look for some reference to it in what is the very smartest and most Imperialistic of the London papers.

Harold Jarvis could make good on his looks, even if he hadn't a voice, but he has a voice and more than that he knows how to use it.—Free Press, April 28th, 1905.

In an interview which the Editor of the Times had on Saturday with General Superintendent Jamieson, of the C.P.R., that gentleman stated that the contract for the new station at this point had not been actually given out, but we gathered that the contractor has been selected. Mr Jamieson stated that the proposed plans exceed the appropriation and as soon as this matter is arranged the work will be put in hand.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

An adjourned meeting of the council was held last night. Present F. G. Forster (Mayor), presiding, councillors J. K. Drinnan, H. Stewart, Dr Smyth, F. O. Sissons.

W. N. Adsit, sec. treasurer, W. E. Porter, superintendent of works.

The report of the returning officer (T. C. Blatchford), giving result of the recent vote on the various bylaws submitted last Friday was read. On motion of Messrs. Drinnan and Stewart it was received and placed on file.

BYLAWS.

The several bylaws for extending the gas and water systems, New Edinburgh, (purchase of water and gas pipes, well, etc.), and the erection of the new Municipal building, the total expenditure being $54,600, were all given their third and last reading and were finally "done and passed" in council.

They all take effect on the first of August, 1905.

THE SEWERAGE SCHEME.

The Mayor moved for leave to introduce bylaw No. 93, re sewerage.

Councillor Drinnan seconded.

Moved by Dr Smyth and seconded by councillor Stewart that bylaw be read a first time. Carried.

The bylaw, which is intended to authorise the raising of $60,000 for the purpose of carrying out a sewerage scheme, was then read a first time, taken as read a second time.

INSUFFICIENT POWERS.

Councillor Smythe asked if the council had sufficient powers at present to put a frontage tax assessment in force.

The Mayor: We cannot do it at present.

Councillor Smyth: Not without further legislation?

The Mayor: Yes.

Councillor Smythe: Then why go on with the bylaw just now.

The Mayor: We can discuss it in committee of the whole.

VARIOUS.

On the motion of councillor Sissons seconded by councillor Smyth, the question of advertising the debentures for sale was left in the hands of the Finance committee.

On motion of councillor Smyth the water committee was empowered to order certain repairs as per list from Mr Porter.

Mr Porter informed the council they would be through with the water extensions in all the streets in a day or two down to the town limits, and would have 3000 feet of 6 inch pipe and 500 feet of 4 inch pipe on hand. These are wooden pipe and tarred outside and the council considered as to where they could be safely stored in a cool place. We understood it was left with the committee.

Councillor Sissons asked if the water had been carried up to the end of New Edinburgh.

Mr Porter: No, not yet.

Councillor Sissons: Is it in a position to be extended?

Mr Porter: It is only two inch pipe.

The Mayor: We took it over on condition that it shall do for two years.

Councillor Sissons: Some people further up are asking about it.

The Mayor: Any applications?

Sec., treasurer: No.

Councillor Drinnan: We are not bound by that arrangement with New Edinburgh. If we can see we can make money by extension at once, we can do it.

Councillor Smyth: If there is anything in it we may extend certainly.

SPRINKLER No.2.

Councillor Drinnan said he had written east as to the prices of attachments for another sprinkler, but had not yet received a reply. A traveller called upon him a few days ago, but his prices were away up, being about $200 for a complete outfit. The council could do much better than that.

The matter was left in the hands of the committee.

LAWN WATER SERVICES.

The council discussed the question of limiting the hours during which water may be used on lawns, as it is considered there is much waste now through people allowing it to run all day and all night.

The bylaw will very likely be amended at the next meeting, limiting the time to two hours in the morning and two in the evening.

The "Jolly Pulls" gave an entertainment in the Opera House last night. The Professor is a marvel and seems to be able to do just what he likes with people. It was side-splitting and astonishing to see a class under his control go to sleep or believe they had cholera morbus, or get on the ground picking imaginary strawberries etc. and finally one stretch out and become stiff as if dead and cold. The exhibition of mind reading by the professor was also of a very high order. Mr. Hildebrand, the strong man, did some marvellous feats, such as lifting a wine barrel full of water, weighing over 600 lbs., with his teeth. There will be an entire change of program to-night.

SCHOOL BOARD.

April 28th, 1905.

Minutes of the meeting of the School Board held to-day at 19.30k in Secretary's office.

Present; Chairman, Mr Brotherton, Messrs Nicolls. Niblock, Milne and Secretary.

Report from the janitor was read re the cement floor of the new school, saying that it was in very bad shape.

The contractor was present and asked for $400 cash, the balance to be paid when a decision re the floor was arrived at.

The Board decided to refer the matter to the solicitor before making any further payment.

The account of E. N. Moyer for seats, was taken off the table, and on motion of Mr Nicolls it was decided to pay $300 on account, the balance to be paid when the claim re checked seats was adjusted.

A communication was read from Mr Calder re the assessment of the school district. It was moved by Mr Niblock that the communication be received and turned over to the town. Carried.

The committee on building reported as follows:—

Gentlemen: Your Committee appointed to report upon the condition of the Toronto Street school have made a very careful examination of the building and find it in bad condition.

It is heated by four hot air furnaces, which are not sufficient to warm the building in cold weather, They are badly burnt out and will require extensive repairs at once. The two under the old part of the building are in cramped positions, the pipes being close up against the floor joists thus creating a dangerous fire trap.

We attribute the great amount of sickness among the teachers and pupils to the bad ventilation of the building throughout.

We consulted Mr Williams, an architect, who has had considerable experience in school construction, as to the most economical plan of putting the present building in first class condition, and have received from him a written report which is herewith attached.

You will note that Mr Williams makes a very full report, which may appear at first sight more than is required, but bear in mind that there is no provision in the present building for ventilation, and there is no basement under the old part. The heating will have to be rearranged before another winter, and better sanitary arrangements provided.

We have given this matter a great deal of consideration and could not recommend the spending of money to patch up the present unsanitary conditions. We endorse the adoption and carrying out of the recommendations made by Mr Williams in his written report.

In regard to the Montreal Street school we recommend that tenders be called for the completion of the building during the school holidays, and that the architect be consulted in regard to changes in the specifications.

D. MILNE.
W. J. BROTHERTON.
W. G. NIBLOCK.

Gentlemen.—In compliance with the request of your chairman, Mr Brotherton and Mr D. Milne, I beg leave to submit for your consideration the following advisory report in connection with the remodelling of the Toronto Street school house. Accompanying this report I am submitting drawings which will show and make plain the extent of the alterations and additions which I would advise as the most practical and economical means of establishing this building as a modern and up-to-date school house.

I have made a careful examination of the building throughout, and have come to the conclusion that it will be better to remove the older section of the building and replace it with an addition of 4 rooms resembling in a general way the southern portion of present building rather than to expend almost an equal amount of money in an attempt to modernise the present structure.

The main reasons for my so determining are as follows:—

1st. The means of exit from the class rooms in the older section are very unsatisfactory, being considerably obstructed by two steps in the doorway leading to the main corridors, and further by the fact of the doors, of necessity because of the steps, opening inwards instead of outwards, the latter being a violation to public legislation pertaining to public buildings. This to my mind is not short of a death trap in case of fire.

2nd The foundations at the present time are considerably cracked, and in event of underpinning to obtain a basement the danger arising from the fact would very probably be exaggerated. The construction throughout would have to be considerably reinforced.

3rd That the basement would be much better lighted and ventilated by raising the floors to the level of those in the southerly section. This means much from a sanitary standpoint especially when it is intended for the lavatory requirements of the school.

4th That the building would be much more symmetrical and pleasing in appearance, and at the same time add considerable length of life to the building as a whole.

5th That the total cost of the building of the addition in excess to that of remodelling of the present old section, would be so slight that it appears false economy to proceed otherwise.

The basement plan will show the general arrangement of boys and girls toilet rooms, boiler and fuel rooms and the janitor's apartments, the floor of basement to be concreted throughout, and the walls white washed. In connection with the toilet rooms I would recommend what is known as the "range closet," having automatic tined flush. I would also recommend the use of Alberene stone for the urinal stalls for the back and floor slabs, having a continual flush through 1¼ perforated brass pipe at top. Alberene stone is absolutely non-absorbent.

It would be advisable to install a steam heating plant of the low pressure one pipe, direct steam type, and also in this connection an approved ventilation system. This system in a general way is outlined on plans and consists of independent flues 16 and 20 inch in size for fresh air supply to each room. The air is brought from the outside of the building to a fresh air room, and from there is distributed to the different fresh air flues, and thence carried to the classrooms, entering at a point 8 feet from the floor. The air is warmed and a draft thus stimulated in these ducts by the application of indirect steam radiators at the base of each flue. The foul and cold air is removed from the classrooms by flues of the same dimensions, which flues extend up through the roof and are heated by small steam coils to induce draft.

This system of heating and ventilation will give you a well warmed and thoroughly ventilated building.

The present staircases to basement and to second storey I consider inadequate, being only some 3 feet 4 inches wide. I would recommend new staircase at least 5 feet 6 inches wide to basement and also to second storey. The inner vestibule partition to be reconstructed, having two doors each 3 feet 6 inches wide in place of doors 2 feet 6 inches wide in place of doors 2 feet 2 inches wide as at present. This would make entrance to the basement much easier and more convenient.

The first floor plan will show the arrangement of present stairs and entrance at west end of hall, and the proposed changes are shown at the east end of hall.

The present entrance doors are dilapidated and should be renewed.

I would also recommend that the blackboard surfaces in southerly portion of building be renewed, and that the new addition be plastered throughout with a patent hard wall plaster, such as "asbestos" or "ivory wood fibre" also the painting. Also the painting of one coat of all old interior and exterior wood and metal work, and the kalsomining of walls and ceilings of present class rooms and halls.

My estimate for the entire work as outlined would be $13,500. This it will be understood includes steam heating, ventilating and plumbing for the whole of the building. All respectfully submitted by

W. T. WILLIAMS,
Architect.

Moved by Mr Niblock and seconded by Mr Nicolls that the report be adopted. Carried.

Moved by Mr Nicolls and seconded by Mr Niblock that the doors at present opening inwards in Toronto Street school be made to open outwards, the matter to be referred to the building committee for immediate action. Carried.

Moved by Mr Niblock that this meeting adjourn to meet at the same time and place on Tuesday May 2nd. Carried.

Carried.

How to Cure Toothache.

Any aching tooth can be relieved instantly with Nerviline. Fill the cavity with batting dipped in Nerviline and rub the gums with Nerviline also. If the face is swollen and sore bathe the painful parts with Nerviline and cover with a flannel. This can't fail because Nerviline kills the pain outright and prevents it from returning. Stronger, quicker, more satisfactory than any other liniment. Polson's Nerviline has been the largest seller for nearly fifty years; try it yourself.

The Atlantic Fleet will, in course of time, be emblematical of the Empire's might. The King Edward VII. is now the flagship, and the fleet is to be joined, as they are completed for service, by the sister ships Dominion, Commonwealth, Hindustan, and New Zealand. As a contemporary points out, this grouping is probably due to the practice of gathering together ships of a type to secure homogeneity rather than to any deliberate arrangement. "But it is none the less noteworthy and commendable. All are magnificent ships, and this floating map of the Empire will be one of which we may justly feel proud."

THE BIRTH OF CANADA.

Lord Norton's death closes a chapter of Imperial history which is but little realised by the present generation. It was he who, as Under Secretary for the Colonies in Lord Derby's administration, was responsible for piloting the British North America Act through the House of Commons, and it may well be said that Canada was born at Hams Hall, Lord Norton's beautiful country seat in Warwickshire.

In a recent issue of the Daily Mail, "3," recalls a visit he paid to the aged peer. We lingered for a while on the broad terrace of the Hall. Then quietly and as it seemed to me, with special care, the old gentleman had seats arranged, and we sat down. His face lit up with a smile of proud remembrance.

"Do you know," he said, "that you are sitting on a spot which may some day become famous enough to draw many pilgrims from far distant parts of the British Empire?"

I expressed surprise and interest.

"It was just there," said Lord Norton, "that the final draft was made of the British North-America Act. It created the Dominion of Canada, and laid down the great principal that the British Colonies shall be free, self governing nations, and not mere dependencies of the Mother Country.

Lord Norton further added: I was most earnestly convinced that this was the right policy to pursue; but there was great opposition from a portion of the Canadian people, and my chief, Lord Carnarvon, doubted whether we should go on with the scheme, especially as we knew that there would be much opposition to it in the House of Commons. We spent an afternoon on this terrace earnestly considering it from every point of view, and I pressed my opinion as strongly as possible. Finally, we agreed on the main principles, and then we sat down here and put the scheme into shape. I am proud of that afternoon's work, and I love this terrace because it is so closely associated in my memory with what I think was the most important work of my public life."

LOST YOUTH FOUND AT MEDICINE HAT.

Melvin Stern, whose whereabouts has been a source of considerable worry to his parents in Chicago, has been located at Moose Jaw. The early part of last month, says the Free Press, young Stern wrote home from Calgary that he was out of work, penniless and starving. Immediately on receipt of the letter his mother wired money to the address given, but he had left. The assistance of the police was asked and they found that the lad had left on a prospecting trip with a man named Leonard, on April 14. After some trouble Leonard was located, but said young Stern had been put off a train at Medicine Hat, as he had no money. The family then communicated with G. J. Bury, general superintendent of the C.P.R. The name and description of the boy were sent out, and Wednesday afternoon Superintendent Brownlee, of the fourth district, wired that the boy had been found in Medicine Hat. Money was forwarded for his return to Chicago.

Last Friday was Arbor Day in Manitoba. Next Friday will be Arbor Day in the Territories. The day will be observed as a general holiday and we shall all be tree planters from early morn to late at night. The Schools will be closed and every encouragement given to practical aboriculture.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

Of the making of brands there is no end. Surely in this great western country the well-known saying about the making of books may be paraphrased and applied to cattle brands. If any man wants a good government job let him set up as a brand-maker, and Dr. Elliot will give him a job in which he may make a big salary, and confer a benefit upon the stockgrowers and the government department now wrestling with brand problems.

* * * *

Oh, vain man that I am! I had secretly hugged the belief that my humble writings had had a little to do with introducing the "street sprinkling system" into this town. I was vain enough to think, though I was too modest to say so, that my few words of urging, chaffing, prodding, praising had helped Councillors a little in providing a sadly needed machine for keeping down the dust. But no! It was the News!! It must have been so, for I read it in their columns last week. It was the News. It was Councillor Forster "who happened to be editor of the News."

Well, this very startling announcement came just in time to save me from "swelled head." O most mighty physician! O most noble physician! O most learned physician! Heal thyself!

* * * *

But really, don't cher-know, the remarks in the News last week in which they claimed the credit for getting the street sprinkler were "too utter." When within the past twelve months did Councillor Forster ("who happened to be editor of the News") make a proposition at the Council that the "street sprinkling system should be adopted at Medicine Hat?" Echo answers, When?

* * * *

When did the News agitate that the "street sprinkling system should be adopted in Medicine Hat?" Echo answers When?

There is such a thing as the abuse as well as the use of water in watering lawns and trees, and although the town has an excellent supply everybody should be interested in preventing waste. I hope the town will in time adopt the meter system for water as well as for gas and then when the householder uses over a given amount (which should vary according to the size of his house), he will pay for the excess at so much per 1000 gallons.

* * * *

"Little and often" is the motto of some people, both for eating and drinking, but that is not a good rule for watering trees. Water applied "little and often" induce shallow rooting and when a drought comes the tree dies. Give a good soaking occasionally and stir up the earth round the trees ofter. This will induce deep rooting and the trees will then soon be in a position to stand a good spell of dry weather.

* * * *

Some of our drivers are a bit too reckless when turning corners. They go too fast and cut the corner too closely. Ease the pace a little, boys, at the corner and drive on the off side so as to make a good long sweep. In large towns there are stringent rules to this effect and as some of you are graduating for bigger things you might just practice now, and get used to doing the right and safe thing.

* * * *

Calgary has certainly experienced hard luck in the matter of the "Capital of Alberta". They are practically out of it now, like the rest of us, and will have to "grin and bear it", Calgary won't bear it quietly however, and are protesting as loudly as they know how about the Hon. Frank Oliver's division of the Province. And Calgary gave him such a nice banquet too.

* * * *

Did you ever see a nicer fall of rain than that of last week? It set everybody smiling.

* * * *

The Chief took Mr J. P. Laird for a spin behind his renowned pacer one day last week, and now the genial landlord declares a ride behind "Tony Day" is the best cure for rheumatism.

The fame of Medicine Hat is becoming known even beyond the seas. Dale's English Singers heard more than six months ago in England that this town always gives record-breaking houses to a good show, and so included it in their list of towns for their Canadian tour. Hatites should certainly feel complimented at being placed on a level with Montreal, Quebec and other large centres. The English singers are only stopping at two or three points in their journey across the continent, and we shall have to acknowledge the compliment and keep up our reputation by giving them a good house on the 29th.

SIX SENATORS FOR ALBERTA.

THERE ARE FOUR NOW BUT MORE LATER ON.

Ottawa, May 10.—At midnight, in the house Mr S. McCarthy, of Calgary, moved that the boundary should be moved eastward to include all the country regarded as the ranching section. The amendment was lost, and the original clause carried, after five hours discussion.

W. E. Maclean moved that the northern boundary of Alberta be the 55th instead of the 60th parallel. He wanted a new Territorial government for Athabasca.

There will be four senators in each province, and will later be increased to six.

Sir Wilfred Laurier favors Alberta's admission into a conference to arrange for the assignment of all the northern territories to the different provinces.

Alberta's area is 250,653 square miles of land and 3,312 square miles of water, with an estimated population of 173,000.

Sir Wilfred Laurier pointed out that Alberta, Assiniboia, and the greater part of Saskatchewan with much of Athabasca, contain good agricultural land. MacKenzie and the northern lands are not fertile, and are seperate in interests from the region further to the south. The northern boundary for the provinces he therefore thought was a good one.

Laurier said the Yukon could go to British Columbia.

Ingram launched a speech against the entire autonomy bills, threatening to keep the house in session till the snow flies unless amended.

ENGLISH OPERA SINGERS COMING.

Medicine Hat is promised a rich musical treat on Monday 29th, when the Dale, English Opera singers will give a performance in the opera house here. The singers are touring only the principal towns in Canada en route to Australia, and we hope they will be accorded a good house in Medicine Hat. The Montreal, Quebec and St. John's press speak very highly of the entertainments given in those cities. All agree that the distinct merit of their performance lies in the variety, freshness and sterling musical qualities. Ottowa goes so far as to style their appearance at the Russell Theatre as "the best thing of the kind ever seen there. In Miss Edith Serpell the party possess a very rare article. In England Miss Serpell ranks high as a lyric vocalist and the receptions that she has already received in Canada adds in no small way to her reputation. The entire company are quite new to this country and therein lies a danger to their early appearances, but so, fast has their popularity spread, and so unanimous the praises of their good work, that their title of "strangers" can only be a matter of a "short life." Prettily costumed, well chosen programs, and thoroughly musicianly in all aspects, is assurance enough indeed, to hasten to the plan office and risk the rest. They appear in the opera house, Medicine Hat, on the 29th inst.

What a blessing freedom is from slavery, but it is a well known fact that there are many who are slaves and do not realise it; such as persons who lose control of their tempers and allow their evil passions to rule them. Then others must have a variety of clothes, some will even owe a big dressmaker's bill to satisfy this vanity or even discard a good dress to be better than others. Then there are slaves to appetites of every kind, one will say "oh, I could not eat a certain kind of bread or cake", and then eat a much more difficult article to digest. All these are the result of allowing our own selfish passions to rule us.

Then there are those who ought to be thankful for plenty variety and opportunity of using the many good blessings they have, yet do not see the good in their own, but find faults to grumble and complain. But the sadness of all this is that we all may be free if we take the word of God as a guide, for has not Jesus said take my yoke upon you, learn of me, for Jesus is meek and lowly in heart and you shall find rest and freedom to your souls.

The government contemplate the erection of a boundary fence along the international line. The cost is said to be nearly a million sterling.

The Medicine Hat Milling Company were doubtless as well pleased as anybody to see the rain last week as that practically assures a wheat crop. The mill turns out some brands of flour and breakfast foods which are equal to anything on the market and our people should patronise this home industry. We are firm believers in the doctrine of home trading. The hardware man should never send money out of town for dry goods, the dry goods man should buy his hardware at home, and both should present their goods to the public in such a manner as to show what is a fact that there is no need to send ready cash to Eatons.

The Boundary Line.

The position of the boundary line between the new Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta was discussed in Parliament on the second reading of the Autonomy Bill and Mr McCarthy, the Calgary member, made strong points against the ranching country being cut in two. It availed little with the government, however, and there are little hopes really of any change being effected. Still, it is the duty of all who believe in preserving the ranching country intact in the Western Province, to continue to urge that the boundary line should be thrown 60 or 70 miles further east. Continual dropping weareth away even a stone, and the matter is of such paramount importance to the western ranchers that it should be fought to a finish.

W.S.G.A. Condemn Proposed Boundary Line.

Last Thursday witnessed the largest and most influential gathering of stockmen ever held in the west. It took place at Medicine Hat, which is the centre of the great ranching indnstry. At that meeting were gathered representatives from McLeod in the southwest, Milk River in the south, Maple Creek and Swift Current on the east, Red Deer on the north, and Calgary on the west, a vast grazing country, more than two hundred miles square. The question of the boundary line came up, and the meeting passed a resolution in opposition to the boundary line being placed at the 4th meridian. Surely this should carry some weight at Ottawa.

The Stock Brands.

Dr Elliott's remarks at the meeting of the Stockgrowers' Association last Thursday shows the difficulty the agricultural department at Regina is experiencing in the invention of new brands for range cattle. The number is appalling. All cattlemen, naturally, know that the brands are sufficient to fill a large volume, but outsiders not familiar with the "brand book," will be surprised to learn that there are at present about 25,000 registered brands, and there is every prospect of the number being doubled in the near future. Incidently the remarks of the Minister of Agriculture demonstrate the fact that the boundary line is placed too far west. It cuts the ranching country in two, and may create two authorities with conflicting brand books. It even goes so far as to cut some ranches in two, and is said to divide one town (Lloydminster) so that one half will be in Saskatchewan and the other in Alberta. This is a sort of "rule of thumb" work.

Making a Laughing Stock.

We observed a statement in the News last week that 500 pamphlets have been mailed by the New Enterprises Committee in answer to "direct personal inquires," and we also observe that one of the statements in the said pamphlet is that "wheat seeding started on February 22nd and by allowing the usual three months in which the crops should mature, this should mean a harvest in May." The statement occurs in a slip which has recently been printed and inserted to bring the pamphlet up to date. The writer might have been better informed before publishing it so widely, as it is calculated to deceive and make Medicine Hat a laughing stock at the public expense. The pamphlet was originally issued by the Board of Trade, and it would seem that the Board should have had a voice in deciding upon any additions. If they had been consulted it is doubtful if they would have sanctioned a statement like the above. No sane person looks for a harvest in May from spring sown wheat, even in Medicine Hat district.

To Advertisers.

It takes time, patience, and skill to set up an attractive ad. No matter how carefully the advertisement writer may choose his words, or construct sentences, if the style of setting is hastily selected, the spacing and making ready equally hastily done, the desired effect anticipated by the advertisement writer is either lost or greatly decreased. The printer must have the time necessary to do good work. For this reason we have asked that copies of all ads. be handed into the office not later than Saturday afternoon, or if that cannot be done, then early on Monday morning. New advertisements can be taken on Tuesday morning.

Lest We Forget.

There was a feebleness and laboured effort in the News reply last week which would make any self-respecting paper feel "sorry it spoke." It commenced with vulgarity, and ended up in an attempt at swaggering braggadocia, which had failure writ in large letters across the face of it. It was a lamentable exhibition, and proved above all things that The Times article was unanswerable, but the News had'nt discernment enough to see that the more they said the worse they made their case. Bravado of the vulgar style is a poor substitute for argument.

"That there was any particular difference between the patronage given the News and the Times was not known to the writer until the accounts were presented at the Council" said the News. Well, it depends whether the "writer" was the Mayor-Editor or the Reporter-Editor. If the Mayor wrote it he prevaricated. If the Reporter wrote it he was dealing with a matter he knew nothing about.

"This impression we state frankly and squarely is wrong," said the News, in a burst of righteous innocence. Frankness has never yet been a distinguishing feature of theirs, and—well, let the statement about squareness go at that.

Let the town orders come in. No questions asked. "Business is business" says the News.

The News accepts town orders as children receive candies, to the tune of

We shut our eyes and open our mouth
And see what Adsit will send us.

The worst feature in the News answer (?) is the cowardly attempt to cast all the blame upon an official.

SAID IT WAS A LIE.

A newspaper down east copied some weather statistics from this paper and also the statement that wheat seeding commenced here on the 22nd, February. A person in this town wrote to the editor of the paper and stated it was a lie. Everybody in the district knows it was the truth and we would like to see this dodo ducked in the Saskatchewan until he owned up to the truth, namely that wheat seeding was commenced here on the 22nd February; on the farm of Mr Zahniser and also on the farms of Messrs. Babbington and Follis very soon after. One of our subscribers has asked us to publish the highest and lowest daily temperatures for the period mentioned and we have much pleasure in doing so. We give figures from 19th February, the day that winter left us until the end of April, and we will assert no district in Canada can show a more equable temperature for the same period. The figures are compiled from government reports and are absolutely reliable:—

DEATH OF WRS. WM. HORNER.

The death of Mrs W. Horner, nee Miss Sarah Gaddis, on Saturday last, removes one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Hope.

Deceased was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, and came to this country when quite young, and settled in Hope. She was united in marriage to Mr W. Horner over fifty years ago, who predeceased her 35 years ago.

Mrs Horner was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and was beloved by all her acquaintances, and her many acts of kindness will long be remembered.

The funeral on Tuesday to the Perrytown Cemetery was largely attended. Rev. W. Johnson, of Millbrook, conducted the services at the house and grave.

Four sons are left to mourn the loss of a devoted mother, viz:—Messrs Jas C.P. Road Master, Medicine Hat, N.W.T.; Jos. a farmer in Hope; T. H. a Roadmaster at Allandale, and John a section foreman at Milibrook, all of whom have the sympathy of their many friends.—Millbrook and Omemee Mirror

WESTERN STOCKMEN IN SESSION.

The annual meeting of the Western Stock Growers Association was held in the opera house, Medicine Hat, on Thursday, when there was a very representative gathering of about 40 stockmen from all over Western Assiniboia and Alberta. Mr A. B. McDonald, of New Oxley, president, was in the chair, and at the morning session the various reports were read and the election of officers took place. The following are the officers for the ensuing year:—

President: Walter Huckvale, Medicine Hat.
1st Vice President: Geo. Lane.
2nd Vice President: A. J. McLean.
Representatives.
Bow River: W. E. Hall, P. Burns.
Maple Creek: D. J. Wylie. J. C. Williams.
Lethbridge: H. Harris, W. Mackie.
High River: C. Emerson, J. H. Brown, A. Cross.
Pincher Creek: J. Wilson, E. Manwel.
Willow Creek: Dr. McEachearn, A. B. McDonald.
Medicine Hat: Andrew Gordon, T. Tweed.

After the election the meeting adjourned.

CATTLE DIPPING.

At the afternoon session Mr Walter Huckvale presided and an address was delivered by Dr Rutherford, Dominion Veterinary Inspector, who spoke on the subject of dipping cattle and invited an expression of opinion.

Mr Lane was in favour of compulsory dipping, but would like to see the beef got out first.

Mr A. P. Day agreed with Mr Lane's remarks.

In reply to questions Dr Rutherford said the government did not intend to allow any dip other than lime and sulphur, except it be something which would not interfere with the chemical composition of those two. He warned stockmen against using tobacco in the dip, especially for horses. Lime and sulphur dip of the right strength and right temperature would do all that was required and they knew what they were using. He had been asked over and over again to recommend certain advertised dips, but he had turned them all down. The government had refused to adopt any of the "oleums". Those dips may be all right but every other country—Australia, Africa and the United States, after trying all these preparations had come into line on the sulphur dip. They abandoned them all for the lime and sulphur dip. With reference to what Mr Lane had said he (the speaker), thought if possible the beef cattle should be got out before the dipping was commenced. He was willing and anxious last year that it should have been done then, but things did not work well and there was some dissatisfaction. The date fixed last year was, he thought, too late, and he suggested that they adopt an earlier date for this year. Mr Lane had expressed the opinion that every one should be allowed to dip whenever they pleased. That, however, would not do at all. The only way to stamp out mange and keep it out was simultaneous dipping all over the country. It should be their aim to clean it out as quickly as possible. He asked the meeting to pass a resolution.

After some further discussion

Mr Lane, moved that the dipping season be from the 15th August (two weeks earlier than last year), to 31st October.

Mr C. McMullin, Winnipeg, seconded this and urged all to try and get rid of mange. He also condemned the British embargo, and gave figures to show that American and Canadian Cattle were free of tuberculosis, more free than those of the British Isles.

Mr Cross of Calgary, Dr. Hargrave, Medicine Hat, and Mr Grecly, Maple Creek followed.

IT WILL KILL THEM ALL RIGHT.

Information was asked for as to whether tobacco was not necessary in order to kill lice in the cattle.

Mr Lane said if the lime and sulphur were prepared right and kept at a temperature of 110 degrees it would not fail to kill the lice. He had found that if they dipped cattle in a solution at 90 to 92 degrees it would not kill lice. But the extra 15 degrees killed them all out.

Dr Rutherford said Mr Lane was quite right. A solution of proper strength, a temperature of 105 to 110 degrees and the cattle held in it two minutes and the lice would be all dead. The trouble was that people were in such a hurry over it, sometimes that these points were not closely observed. He mentioned that 176,000 cattle were dipped last year on the range. Replying to a question he said he considered the three dippings necessary.

Mr Lane's motion that the regulations in force last year for mange be renewed except that the date be altered to the 15th August, and the beef cattle be shipped some as last year, and that the minimum dip temperature be increased to 105 degrees, was then put and carried

In reply to Mr C. McMullins

Dr Rutherford said the same stringent regulations as to inspection of outgoing cattle, in force last year, would be continued this year. It was in the best interests of the west that it should be so.

ACTIVITY OF DEPARTMENT.

Dr Rutherford said the department had 30 veterinary inspectors at work in the Territories and were spending thousands of dollars in taking care of the health of the stock. In all cases of infectious diseases the department destroyed the animals and paid two-thirds value.

REPORT GLANDERS.

Dr Rutherford urged the members to report every case of glanders. No matter if the animal belonged to their neighbour, or even their father or brother. Glanders had to be stamped out, and the department would pay two-thirds value for every one destroyed.

THANKS TO DR. RUTHERFORD.

The meeting next passed an unanimous vote of thanks to Dr Rutherford for his efforts on behalf of the stockmen of the west, and the doctor made a suitable reply.

ANIMALS KILLED ON RAILWAY.

A discussion took place as to the methods adopted when animals are killed on the railway, and a motion was made that section men skin all animals killed on the line and send the skins to a central point for identification.

Mr McMullens, C.P.R. stock inspector, said he had talked with Mr Dennis on the subject and while the C.P.R. wished to do the right thing and pay for all animals killed, they could not see how the proposed regulation was going to work properly.

Mr Lane thought $2 might be allowed for skinning.

Mr McMullens could not see that that would solve the difficulty.

Mr McDonald said 87 head of cattle were killed in a bunch on the Crow line some time ago and he heard they were skinned by the section men and the skins were sold.

Mr McMullens said he would like proof of that and who ordered them to do it.

Mr McDonald: The agent told them to do it.

Mr. McMullens said it was a vital question and the C.P.R. would like all particulars.

Mr R. G. Matthews (secretary) said the skins were handled at Tabor and he was in possession of all the particulars, supported by affidavits, and would supply them to the company.

Mr D. G. Wylie, Maple Creek, suggested the methods in force on the Montana lines might easily be adopted here. There the section men skinned the animals and sent the skins to a central point.

After further discussion a motion to that effect was carried.

SERVICES OF N.W.M.P.

Mr Lane moved that the association put on record their high appreciation of the splendid services of the officers and men of the R.N.W.M. Police, and the way in which they handle all stock questions, and the motion was carried.

Commissioner Perry acknowledged the vote.

THE CATTLE BRANDS.

Dr Elliot, Minister of Agriculture introduced the subject of cattle brands and asked if the association had considered what plan should be adopted when the Territories were divided into two provinces under the autonomy bill on the 1st of July. Invited to give his own opinion Dr Elliot said he thought one of three schemes might be adopted.

First. To have two absolutely different systems.

Second. For the two provinces to work in harmony and let the same brands in use in the western end of Alberta be used in the eastern end of Saskatchewan, but not within 100 miles of the boundary. In those parts non-conflicting brands be used.

Third. Put the branding system under the joint management of the two governments and let non-conflicting brands be used throughout. He might tell the meeting that the finding of new brands was becoming a very difficult matter. There were now 25,000 different brands and there was a prospect of another 25,000 being required and it was well nigh impossible.

Mr Lane thought it was easy. He could make 100 different ear-marks.

Dr Elliott said the government would pay any man well who could solve the difficulty.

Mr Lane said he could undertake to do it.

Dr Elliott invited Mr Lane to supply the department with 35,000 distinct, workable brands to begin with, either single or two character.

The President asked if the meeting felt satisfied with the boundary line under the autonomy bills.

Mr Wylie said Maple Creek town had asked for the present boundary, but he would venture to assert that if the ranchers were canvassed on the subject they would prefer to be in the western province.

Mr Horace Greely endorsed Mr Wylie.

Mr Day was asked as to Swift Current ranchers and said he believed they also wanted to be in the western province.

Finally a resolution was moved and seconded by Messrs Wylie and Greely, that in the opinion of this meeting the boundary line should be placed at the 107th degree.

This was carried.

VOTE OF SYMPATHY.

A vote of sympathy with Mr D. H. Andrews of Crane Lake, who is seriously ill at Winnipeg hospital was passed.

The meeting then adjourned.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

Rev. H. V. Lewis Hooper, Anglican, is conducting regular services in St. Alban's Church: the attendance is very good.

Rev. J. Pleming, Methodist, who has been minister here during the past year, has been moved to a mission field near Lethbridge. Rev. Howard takes up his work, and will reside at Irvine.

The Eagle Butte Post Office has been removed from Scott's ranch on the Plume Creek to Garlows, Medicine Lodge Coulee.

Weather is continuing dry, but the crops are coming on fine, still they would be the better of a little rain.

There is a rumor going the rounds that about April 1st three or four fellows of the Pole-cat Pete style, who appeared to want to play the wild and woolly cow-boy act, visited a few ranches near Elk Water Lake after night fall. At the first ranch they turned all the stable stock loose, at the second they robbed the hen roost, leaving the heads for the owner. At the third the owner had not retired and as it was a moonlight night he happened to notice his visitors sitting on a log and suspecting that they were up to mischief, he put out his light as if going to bed, but instead went to the window to watch what would be the next move. He had not put in much time flattening his nose against the pane when the one next him was shattered by a bullet. It is needless to say that Mr Rancher promptly dropped to the floor and lay there till morning. They ended up with miscellaneous tricks, such as roping stove pipes, kicking in doors, etc.

Some think this was all meant as first of April lark. It is understood that the hopefuls made a bee line for Uncle Sams domain.

Cheer up boys there has been a beef buyer round offering good prices, long may he live.

CHILLS PROVE FATAL!

If warmth and circulation are not promptly restored, chills result in fatal pneumonia. This necessitates keeping Nerviline on hand. Taken in hot water it breaks up a chill in two minutes. By rubbing freely over throat and chest it prevents colds. No liniment so strong, so penetrating, so swift to kill pain and inflammation. Nearly fifty years has proved the value of Polson's Nerviline. You should get a bottle to-day.

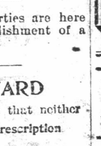
$1000 REWARD

Is offered as a guarantee that neither

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

NOR

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery



contains alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. Any one publishing false statements concerning their ingredients will be prosecuted. Doctor Pierce's Family Remedies are compounds of medicinal principles, scientifically extracted from native roots that cure the diseases for which they are recommended. They are medicines which have enjoyed the public confidence for over a third of a century. They are medicines not beverages, made to satisfy a craving for "booze."

"Golden Medical Discovery" regulates and invigorates stomach, liver and bowels, and cures dyspepsia, purifies the blood and tones up the system generally.

"Favorite Prescription" cures female weakness, irregularities, exhausting drains, painful periods and kindred ailments peculiar to women. Accept no substitute for these medicines, each of which has a record of marvelous cures. Substitution means selfishness on the part of the dealer who is looking for the greater profit on an inferior article.

"Our daughter who was attending college became very nervous and we were advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. M. C. Fox, of 57 E. Leonard St., Grand Rapids, Mich. "We did so and then you advised us to get the 'Golden Medical Discovery' also. She took four bottles of the 'Prescription' and three of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and you never saw such a change in a person. She said she did not feel like the same person. She was about seventeen years old at the time. I will gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to every one. I advise parents who have young daughters who suffer from nervous troubles to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at once. I am sure it will help them."

Worked a Living Chain.

Dr. P. L. Hurt's pointer dog was the cause of a good deal of amusement and excitement in Boonville one day. The doctor stopped at a trough to water his horse. A sewer pipe about a hundred feet long passes under a crossing at this place, and the dog, being warm from running, crawled into the pipe to get cool. When the time came to leave he could not turn around, and as the pipe was crooked he could not see the opposite end of it, so there he stuck. After various suggestions had been made for getting him out a small negro boy was sent in after him. The boy got him by the leg, but then found that he himself could not back out. Here was a pretty howdy do. Finally a second negro boy was sent in. His legs remained within reach from the outside, and when he had caught the first boy by the legs and the first boy had got a secure hold on the dog's legs some strong men took the second boy by his legs, and thus they were all pulled out.—Exchange.

Messrs H. C. Yuill and W. B. Marshall returned on Saturday morning from a trip to Calgary.

Mr. E. J. Fewings came in on No 1 on Sunday evening having been to Irvine and Maple Creek for a couple of days.

Most people are wondering why the Council do not repair the pavement outside Mr. Hawthorne's store. Pedestrians have had some bad "trips" there.

Arbor Day, last Friday, turned out wet. The day was observed as a holiday, but out door work was well-nigh impossible. The "Bee" at the English church cemetery was postponed and will take place on the 24th. instead.

We notice in the Canadian Optician magazine that B. F. Souch, Phm. B., has just graduated from the Canadian Opthalmic college with first class honors, heading the list. The examination was held in Calgary on March 24th. Congratulations Mr. Souch.

The many friends of Mr. Harvey Lane who met with a bad accident last fall, through a hay derrick falling upon him, will be glad to know that he is around again. He is a good deal crippled as yet, but cheerfully hopes for complete recovery. In this we all join.

Mr. Cross, of the Calgary Brewery Company, while here last week, was shown over the General Hospital by Mr A. E. Whiffin. Mr. Cross, who is president of the Calgary hospital, was much impressed and spoke highly of all he saw at Medicine Hat's well conducted institution.

E. J. Rainbrouth, who sub-divided a large portion of the district south of us and who is well known in town, passed through on Sunday evening for Skagway where he will be employed on the Alaska boundary commission. He was accompanied by a party of three departmental employes.

THE Labor comes so high for goods manufactured in the North-west, thus giving the ready-mades an advantage even greater than they have in the East. CLOSE UP

We have those patent Self Closing Umbrellas, also we think the best $1 umbrella in the country. It's true we don't have as much rain here as in some parts of Canada, still we get enough for every man to be the possessor of an umbrella, especially when he can get a good one for $1.00.

Talking on the above lines, might say we have Seventeen Mackintoshes, some rubber lined, all good ones, being new stock. However, we find we have a few too many, so these go at COST, and when we say cost we mean cost. It may not be raining when you read this ad. However, don't wait for that when you get a chance like this. Get the coat first.

We are outfitters to men only. We make a study of it. Don't you think it would pay every man to trade with us?

The operations at the new gas well unfortunately came to a sudden stop last week when the drill was at a depth of about 300 feet. At that depth rock was struck and an attempt was made to drive the casing, but it did not succeed and Mr. Grant, the contractor, has to abandon that well and start another. This means a heavy loss to him.

D. McNabb, Chief of the Fire Brigade and a redoubtable lacrosse player, is leaving to look for a business location in northern Alberta, and will be greatly missed. Mr. McNabb has been in the employ of Mr. Thos. Hutchinson, saddler, for the last five years and no one is more sorry than the ex-Mayor to lose him. All join in wishing him good luck.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquest was held in the Court House, yesterday afternoon, upon the body of an infant which was found in the river on Sunday afternoon by Christian Snider, a German resident. The inquiry was held before Dr Smyth, (Coroner), and the following jury:—

J. Benson, (foreman), A. J. Day. T. J. Flaeger, L. B. Cochran, W. B. Marshall, H. J. Kerr.

The body was produced in court. It was a shocking looking bit of humanity.

Christian Snider being sworn deposed as follows:—Yesterday afternoon I was fishing in the river, back of Mr Hawk's place, and saw something lying near my line. It was not in the water. I took a stick so I might turn it over and I saw it was a little boy, I went and told the police.

By the foreman: It was just on the edge of the water. It was not wrapped in anything.

By Mr Day: It looked as if it had been two or three days in the water and washed up.

By Sergt. Quinn: After telling the police I went and told the Coroner.

Dr Smith sworn said: I made a post-mortem examination of the body. I found it to be that of a male infant, in a bad state of decomposition. The length of the child is about 18 inches and the weight I judge to be about five pounds. The body is evidently that of a newly born child, a child that perished soon after birth, the cause of death most likely being hemorrhage. The umbilical cord had not been tied. The cutting was done by some non-professional person, but was cleanly cut and not torn. There was no ligature on it and it was left very long. I believe the child was born alive, but I think it lived but a short time after, as the lungs were only partially inflated, and that and other points (which he explained to the jury), showed the child had lived only 10 or 12 hours at most.

By the jury: There were no marks of violence on the body. I believe the child was dead when put in the water. I judge it had been in the water at least a week.

The Coroner informed the jury that a pillow case was lying about a foot or two from the body. He had examined it and could find no mark of any kind upon it.

The jury retired and after a short absence brought in the following verdict;

We find that the child came to its death through want of attention at its birth or immediately after.

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

Mr. Editor
Dear Sir

For a point of information would you kindly say through your paper what the definition of a Transient Trader is. For we have in town two men who sell goods that are sold in all stores and it only costs them $7.00 per month to do business on the street corners. Now at Lethbridge they did not stop as the license there is $250. I contend that if they were Transient Traders in Lethbridge they must be here, and the quicker the officials who have the issuing of licences learn what the difference is, the better for the town. Such fakers are not very desirable merchants. I call them merchants because they offer goods for sale, the only difference is that they have no store but do business on the street corner. We have a Transient Traders license. Why not enforce it?

Yours Respectfully
A. CITIZEN.

CROW TRAIN DERAILED.

ENGINEER, FIREMAN AND BAGGAGE MAN INJURED.

The Crows Nest train did not arrive in Medicine Hat until about 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, being over eight hours late. The delay was caused by an accident at Chin, a station 89 miles from Medicine Hat, and 18 miles this side of Lethbridge. At that point, through an open switch the engine left the track and turned completely over. Engineer James Fisher and fireman Smith had miraculous escapes. Mr Fisher had his back severely hurt and the fireman was slightly scalded by escaping steam, but it appears when the engine rolled over the dome came off thus liberating the steam, which would otherwise have escaped into the cab, in which case the engineer and his fireman would have had little chance of their lives. The baggage man was Ed. Gerow and also was injured by the rolling trunks, etc., but none of the cars were overturned. We hear all the passengers escaped unhurt.

It is stated that the switch had been turned and the lights were all right, but through a broken or defective bar the points had not moved, and the train ran out as stated.

The Harold Jarvis concert came off last night. Mr Jarvis came under the auspices of the Century Club and the Opera House was packed. The Pleyell Sextette (augmented by Miss Allingham, 2nd violin), contributed three excellent selections. Miss Gertrude White, a very talented local singer, sang a duet with Mr Jarvis.

BIRTHS.

Mr A. Kerr, of St Johns, New Brunswick, is a visitor in town for a few days, the guest of Mr and Mrs L. W. McBean.

Mr Butler, who arrived recently from Toronto, has accepted a position in the office of Mr C. R. Mitchell, barrister.

"Lights for the road" was the title of a special discourse to trainmen delivered by Rev S. Everton on Sunday evening.

V. Miniszwsky, our night policemen, is laid up with a sprained ankle, and his duties are being performed by a sub stitute.

Mr L. W. McBean, of the M. H. Trading Company's store, has some pretty pink rose trees, in pots, loaded with blossoms and buds.

T. Pellefuielle, of the Rat Portage hockey team, has arrived in town with the intention of staying. He is a guest at the Cosmopolitan, and is an old schoolfellow of Ernie Charbeneau.

Don't forget to let us have your Ads. for changing, every Saturday afternoon or Monday morning early. We cannot guarantee changes, if brought later.

Mr E. J. Fewings in the course of a trip east last week, visited Milestone, where he owns a tract of land. He had a pleasant surprise in finding his property worth more than he anticipated, through the advance in values which has taken place in that district.

Inquiry is made by W. Hunter, of Minitonas, concerning the whereabouts of Duncan McNicol, aged 50 years, height 5 feet 11 inches, blue eyes, fair complexion, hair mixed with grey, of a very pleasant and cheerful disposition; single. Last known address in 1898 was Medicine Hat, N.W.T.

W. R. Hull and A. E. Cross of Calgary, visited the power house on Thursday and were shown round by Mr Eddy. Both were pleased with the clean, businesslike appearance of the place and Mr Cross named a big sum he would be willing to pay if he could have natural gas to use in the Brewery Company's business of which he is the manager.

The chicken runs at Mrs J. G. Waldocks are well worth a visit. Two incubators, heated by means of natural gas jets, do the hatching and "foster mothers", heated in the same way, do the nursing. There are about 200 chicks out now and more in process of hatching, so we think Mrs Waldock and Mrs Platt have their hands full attending so many orphans.

DR. LANDRY, from the Laboratories, of Rea Bros., Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., and a Graduate of Laval University Quebec, Can., specialist in Chronic and nervous diseases, will visit professionally Medicine Hat, Saturday, May 20th at the Assiniboia Hotel, returning every four weeks. t.f.n

J. H. Berry, brother of Mrs A. B. LeBlanc, passed through on No. 2 on Sunday morning, on his way from Australia to Cypress River, Manitoba, to visit his parents. Mr Berry left Devonshire, England, 23 years ago, and has not seen his parents since that time. He went to Australia, where he married and settled and has done well. Mrs J. A. Mitchell, another sister, also went to Australia, but ten years ago came to Canada. About the same time Mr and Mrs Berry, senior, and other members of the family came to the Canadian west from Devonshire. Mrs Berry's health not having been very good lately her Australian son thought he would like to see his parents and sisters again, hence his visit. Mrs Le Blanc has not seen her brother for 23 years.

FARM AND RANCH.

A POINT FOR OUR FARMERS.

It is safe to say that thousands of work-horses are injured by kindness. The owner thinks that because his team is worked hard it ought to be heavily fed, but he forgets that it is not what a horse eats, but what it digests that counts. This is especially the case in summer, when there is much field-work to be done and little in which to do it.

The horse hurries home, hot and weary, is given all he can "hog," and goes out to the watering trough, where he fills up with water, and goes on to work again. First of all, his stomach was not in a fit condition for the reception of food. The fatigued, hot, sweaty horse cannot digest food. He needs a rest first, and then a drink of water, which passes through his stomach and stays in the large intestines. If he first eats grain and then drinks water, the food is largely washed out by the water, and passes to the small and large intestines, in which such food is not digested, but decomposes, gives up gas, and thus sets up more or less disturbance and distress.

Under these circumstances a horse is not properly fed just because he has been furnished with six quarts of oats and all the hay he can gobble in the short interim of the noon-hour. He has been fed, to be sure, but he has derived little benefit from his food. All the benefit derived comes from the portion of the food digested, and this is very small when there is not sufficient time to masticate properly and then digest normally.

In the busy season the work-horse should have small amounts of concentrated, nutritious food—just such an amount as he can masticate and digest. When corn is fed it adds fuel to the heat of the body, and does not supply the strength and vigor he most requires. That comes from oats, and time is required for their mastication. Hay is unnecessary at noon.

On general principles it will pay to cut in half the ration now being fed to work horses, provided they are given time to masticate and digest their food. This will be found remedial where the horses are evidently doing poorly, sweating too much, panting when at work, or having a tendency to diarrhea. They will do better on less food, for the reason that they digest a greater proportion of its nutrients. In summer-time hay should be fed very early in the morning, and again at night, at which time the horse may have all he wants.

M. STENSON.

EXPERIENCED COMMANDERS.

The ages of the generals who are leading the conquering forces of Japan do not help out the theory of Dr Osler. According to the Japanese Mail, the ages of the foremost generals of the land of the Mikado who are active in the present war are as follows:

Marquis Oyama, field marshal,	62
Count Nodzu,	63
Baron Kuroki, first army,	60
Baron Oku, first army,	58
Baron Yamaguchi, fifth division,	58
Baron Nogi, at the front,	55
Baron Nishi, second division,	58
Baron Kodama, chief of staff,	52
Prince Fushimi, first division,	46

The Prince Yamagata, who has been busy with the work of military organization in Japan and active in the war councils at Tokio, is 66, and the average of the ages of the distinguished generals who are assisting him is 56 to 57.

CURFEW.

1. Municipal councils in cities, towns, and incorporated villages shall have power to pass by-laws for the regulation of the time after which children shall not be in the streets at nightfall without proper guardianship, and the age or apparent age of boys and girls respectively, under which they shall be required to be in their homes at the hour appointed, and such municipal council shall in such case cause a bell or bells to be rung at or near the time appointed as a warning, to be called the "Curfew Bell," after which the children so required to be in their homes or off the streets shall not be upon the public streets except under proper control or guardianship or for some unavoidable cause.

2. Any child so found after the time appointed shall be liable to be warned by any constable or peace officer to go home, and if after such warning the child is found loitering on the streets such child may be taken by such constable to its home.

Any parent or guardian may be summoned for permitting his child to habitually break said by-law after having been warned in writing and may be fined for the first offence $1 without costs, and for the second offence $2, and for the third, or any subsequent offence $5.—56 V., c. 45, s. 31.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The adjourned meeting of the School Board was held in the secretary's office on Monday, May 8th, at 10k:

Present, Chairman, Mr Brotherton and Messrs. Kennedy, Milne, and Nicolls.

The secretary reported that the contractor had been advised according to the terms of the solicitor's advice.

A communication was read from R. A. Green objecting to Mr Cross as architect in place of Mr Kerr.

The secretary was instructed to write to Mr Green that Mr Cross is employed by Mr Kerr as his representative.

There being no evidence before the Board that R. A. Green had commenced work on the cement floor in the basement of the Montreal Street school, it was moved that an advertisement be inserted in the Times for one week calling for tenders for the putting in of a cement floor in the basement of the Montreal Street school, according to specifications, a copy of which can be seen at the office of Mr W. M. Cross, acting architect. Tenders to close May, 16th, at 10k. Lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted. Tenders to be addressed to W. J. Brotherton, chairman. Carried.

The meeting adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening, May 16th, in the secretary's office at 10k.

THE JOKE AS A POWER.

It Is Rapidly Becoming Mightier Than the Pen.

Men who fear nothing else shrink from a joke upon themselves. Soldiers who do not flinch before opposing guns dread to be made ridiculous. Woe to the national hero who makes one trifling mistake which may subject him to clever caricature! His meritorious career is henceforth shadowed by one colored illustration. A comic paper will tip the scales of justice, snatch the victor's prize from his extended palm and rob the orator of choicest laurels. A brilliant satire will mar the fortunes of the greatest statesman, a laugh will turn the tide of a political convention.

Indeed the joke is fast becoming mightier than the pen. The orator has learned its value, and even the clergyman resorts to it when he desires to stir the flagging interest of his flock. It furnishes sufficient excuse for the impertinence of children, and in its name the daily papers deride the highest national dignitaries.

What is the meaning of its steady growth in power and what results may we predict from its humorous tyranny?

Is there a chance that our keen relish for fun may finally produce a kind of humorous dyspepsia resulting from overindulgence, unless with epicurean discrimination we demand quality, not quantity, and stubbornly refuse to swallow other than that which should appease a wholesome, nay cultivated appetite in jokes?—Caroline Ticknor in Atlantic.

Trifles as Irritants.

We are so constituted that what is occurring at the moment interests us often out of all proportion to its importance. For example, we are thrown off our balance by the merest trifles perhaps which occur today, but which in a week's time may have no significance whatever. Obstacles which seem like mountains when we meet them dwindle away to molehills when we get away from them.

Even what seems tragedy at the moment in the future may be the most innocent comedy.

Most of us are so constituted that we will make almost any sacrifice for present peace. It would seem easier to have an arm or a leg amputated two years hence than to lose a finger today! It is human nature to shrink from pain, and we purchase release at almost any cost. If we could only train the mind to look at today's trouble and annoyance from the standpoint of the future, it would be much easier to bear.—Success.

Locked In With a Maniac.

The writer was once closeted with a patient whom he had no suspicion of being mad until the latter got out of bed, turned the key of the door and preferred a mild request to the writer to have his throat cut, handing him at the same time an open pocketknife, which he produced from underneath his pillow. I objected to the knife as being too small for the purpose and begged to be allowed to go for my case of amputating knives, with which, I explained, the operation could be performed with greater neatness and dispatch. He unlocked the door at once, binding me over to secrecy and urging me to lose no time in returning. I drove home, reported the case to the authorities and came back with assistance. He was secured with great difficulty and sent to the asylum.—London Tit-Bits.

Harmony In the Leaves of a Tree.

One of the remarkable characteristics of a tree is the process of leafage, and if we examine the bough upon which the leaves grow the admiration of the scientific agriculturist will become thoroughly aroused over the perfect consistency and artistic skill manifested in the arrangement of each spray and the exact number of leaves arranged with the most exquisite art and regularity. Every group of leaves forms merely long lines—some short and each one different—no two alike, no two in the same position, yet all so perfect and harmoniously blended that there can be no antagonism, no sameness and all those thousands and thousands of strange and delicate forms grouped together, neither confused nor ill arranged.

A Famous Portrait Painter's Opinion.

The famous artist Von Lenbach had one great dominant principle—that out of nature one should grasp and hold fast but one thing in portraiture, the head; that this exponent of the soul must stand out in undisturbed unity; that accessories of whatever kind, whether dress or form, must distract and weaken the impression that the head should produce; that a portrait to attain its highest aim and significance must look out from a background of nothingness and must be shorn of every detail that interferes with this unity of purpose.—Cosmopolitan.

Literary Hand Me Out.

"An' how did you fare at the house on the hill?" inquired Wandering Willie of Meandering Mike.

"Fine," replied the meanderer. "The lady gave me a little of most everything you could mention."

"Not hash?"

"No. A pocket dictionary."

Sadie's Guess.

Teacher—Can any little girl tell me who was Columbus?

Sadie (frantically snapping her fingers)—I know.

Teacher—Well, Sadie?

Sadie—Columbus, the gem of the ocean.

Both Defective.

He—Then we're both defective. I ought to make love like an expert, and you ought not to know the difference.—Life.

In one day you'll feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, lift depression and drive away weariness. THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Used to Answer the Question, Can Water Flow Up Hill?

Since the earth is an oblate spheroid instead of a perfect sphere, it comes to pass that its center is farther from the equator than from either pole. The difference is about thirteen miles. The Mississippi flows southward for so great a distance that its surface at its mouth is about four miles farther from the earth's center than at its source. Does it then flow up hill?

This is a question which the coast and geodetic survey in Washington is frequently asked to answer. The reply is that "up" means against gravitation and "down" with gravitation; hence the Mississippi does not flow uphill, although obviously it moves away from the center of the globe. Plumb lines rarely point directly toward the center of the earth. The variation from that direction has given rise to an interesting branch of the government's work.

The visible irregularities of the surface of the earth—mountains, valleys and water basins—affect the form of attraction which is known as gravitation. A cubic mile of land is two and a half times as dense as a similar volume of water. The plumb line tends to lean toward the earth masses and away from the water basins. These influences, which may be computed with scientific accuracy, do not, however, explain all of the deflections. Varying degrees of density some miles below the surface of the earth must be assumed to exist.

Trifling as these deflections are, never exceeding nine inches in a plumb line a mile long, they are of considerable scientific importance. They modify the calculations of navigators and explorers as to positions on the earth's surface derived from the stars. They thus become essential in high grade mapmaking. They also help to make the records of measurements of the earth contribute to the story of the history of the earth. In the eye of science there are no trifles.—Youth's Companion.

ANCIENT MEDICINES.

Some of the Repulsive Remedies Used by Our Ancestors.

Some of the remedies used by our ancestors ought to have been sufficient to scare away any disease without their application. Here are a few of them: "A halter wherewith any one has been hanged if tied about the head will cure headache. Moss growing upon a human skull if dried and powdered and taken as snuff is of less efficacious." Dr. Samuel Turner, who wrote on diseases of the skin, notices a prevalent charm among old women for the shingles, the blood of a black cat taken from its tail and smeared on the part affected. The chips of a gallows tied on a string and worn around the neck are said to have cured ague.

Spiders, as may readily be supposed, were in great repute as remedies. Burton, the writer of the "Anatomy of Melancholy," was at first dubious as to the efficacy of the spider as a remedy, though he states that he had seen it used by his mother, "whom he knew to have excellent skill in chirurgery, sore eyes and aches, till at length," says he, "rambling amongst authors, as I often do, I found this very medicine in Dioscorides, approved by Matthiolas and repeated by Aldrovandus. I began then to have a better opinion of it."

For stopping hemorrhages all sorts of things were used. John Bell says that for this purpose "they tied live toads behind the ears or under the armpits or to the soles of the feet or held them in the hand till they grew warm. Michael Mercatus says that this effect of toads is a truth, which any person willing to take the trouble may satisfy himself of by a very simple experiment, for if you hang the toad around a cock's neck for a day or so you may then cut off his head and the neck will not bleed a single drop." The malade imaginaire of those days pursued his hobby under difficulties.

Not a Judge.

A good instance of repartee occurred in a law court when the following conversation took place between a witness, a rustic looking individual, and the presiding judge.

Judge—You say you had occasion to taste this whisky?

Witness—Yes, my lord.

Judge—Now, are you sure you could tell the difference between good and bad whisky?

Witness (drawling)—Well, I don't quite know as I could exactly, me lord (with a knowing smile), for, ye see, I'm not a judge!—London Times.

The Judge's Candid Opinion.

"I wish to state," said a fresh young lawyer, rising in court, "that the rumor to the effect that John Doe, now under indictment for murder, has attempted to commit suicide has no foundation in fact. I saw him this morning, and he has retained me to defend his life."

"That seems to confirm the rumor," said the judge. "Let the case proceed."

Solemn Moments.

"It is a solemn thing," said the young man, "when a woman trusts a man with her affections."

"It ain't as solemn," said the man with the pink necktie, "as when she won't trust him with his own wages."—London Tit-Bits.

Sudden Activity.

Nell—Maude has suddenly discovered that she needs exercise, so she goes out for a walk every day.

Belle—Yes, I heard that she had a lot of new clothes.

A mother's mind is ever on her children. If she is noble, she is praying for them; if she is ambitious, she is scheming for them.—Schoolmaster.

COUGHERS, HAWKERS, SPITTERS!

Public expectoration is against the common law, against the laws of health also. When the throat tickles, that's the time you need "Catarrhozone"; it soothes away the irritation, cuts out the phlegm and loosens the tight feeling. You'll quickly cure that catarrh and throat trouble with Catarrhozone. It positively prevents new attacks and cures catarrh forever and for all time to come. Don't take our word for it, try Catarrhozone yourself. Once used you'll be delighted with its pleasant and helpful influence.

PURE BRED CATTLE SALE.

The sale, open to all, of pure breed cattle to be held at the stock yards, Calgary, on the 19th and 20th May, after the Territorial sale, promises well.

There is an excellent catalogue with a large list of entries, many of them from the United States herds.

In the list comprising bulls, cows, heifers and calves, we see among others that Mr McMullen of Lineham, Alta is offering eight of his fine Galloways, and in the Polled Aberdeen Angus, Mr Williford, of Harmony, Minn., and Peter Aberbamson of Lanesboro, Minn., have entered about 15 head of their excellent stock.

Herefords show up well and entries from the well known herds of I. E. Marples, Delan, and others appear.

In short-horns a goodly number are contributed from the well known farms of D. Hyslop & Son, Killarney, Man., R. McLennan, Holmfield, Man., and a fine animal from Mr Bricker, of Okotoks.

All together there is a good and large list to select from, and it is reported that the sale will be practically without reserve.

DATES OF THE FAIRS.

Delegates from the various agricultural societies in Alberta met on Wednesday at Calgary, with Geo. Harcourt, superintendent of fairs and institutes, to arrange the dates of fairs so that the Territorial department of agriculture could supply official judges with the least waste of time and money. The system of supplying official judges has worked well, doing away with the bickerings so common when local judges were employed and all the delegates were anxious that their respective societies be again supplied this year. The following delegates were present:

M. E. Herrick, Strathcona; M. Marker, Wetaskiwin; H. F. Flewelling, Lacombe; John J. Gaetz, Red Deer; E. J. Fream, Innisfail; W. H. Hammer, Olds; Geo. Smith, Okotoks; Arch. Mitchell, Macleod; H. H. Jenkins, Pincher Creek; W. H. Fairfield, Lethbridge; Geo. W. Green, Raymond; Robert Needham, Maple Creek. After discussion of the general work of the society, the following dates were arranged:

Edmonton	June 29-30; July 1
Lacombe	June 30; July1
Wetaskiwin	July 4
Calgary	July 5-8 7
Innisfail	July 7
Okotoks	July 11
Lethbridge	Aug. 15-16
Raymond	Aug. 17-18
Red Deer	Aug. 30-31
Olds	Sept. 19-20
Strathcona	Sept. 21 22
Maple Creek	Sept. 26-27
Medicine Hat	Sept. 28-29
Macleod	Oct. 3-4
Pincher Creek	Oct. 5

Dates from Fort Saskatchewan, Didsbury and Magrath were not set.

After arranging dates for fairs the delegates expressed the opinion that it was desirable to form a fairs' association which could meet annually and hold a convention at which addresses could be given on the work of the agricultural society. The suggestion was at once accepted and acted upon. The delegates resolved themselves into the Alberta Agricultural Fairs association. The following officers were chosen:

Pres., H. J. Jenkins, Pincher Creek.
Vice Pres. Geo. Smith, Okotoks.
Secretary, E. J. Fream, Innisfail.
Directors: M. E. Herrick, Strathcona.
A. A. M. Kay, Olds.
J. J. Gaetz, Red Deer.
Arch. Mitchell, Meleod.
Geo. W. Green, Raymond.
W. H. Fairfield, Lethbridge.

Messrs Gaetz, Kay and Fream were appointed a committee to draft a constitution to be submitted at the next annual meeting.

AMONG THE FARMERS.

Farm crops are looking splendid throughout the district. A drive into the country reveals the fact that all of our wheat fields now present a most promising appearance. The grain is about four inches in height and of splendid colour. This is well up with Manitoba from the reports in the Manitoba papers, and, granted favourable weather, the yield should be a good one. The rain last week and again on Sunday has set it growing very fast and a good crop is practically assured.

Mr Zahniser purchased another whole section of land last fall and this spring he had 100 acres of it broken (by Mr Babington's steam plow), and seeded it to barley. When the barley is off he intends seeding it to winter wheat. This is an experiment which will be watched with much interest, as there is every reason to believe that winter wheat should do as well here as in other parts of southern Alberta.

Mr A. McGillivray, of West Hope, N.D., is here at present looking over the country. He was a former neighbour of W. R. Babington, in North Dakota. He likes this town and district so well that yesterday he bought seven quarter sections of farm land and two town lots. He will go home this week and return later on with a complete steam plow outfit, and will be accompanied by several friends and relatives. In conversation with the Times, Mr McGillivray said this was the best country he had ever seen.

NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

An adjourned meeting of the council was held on Friday evening to further consider and finally select one of the competitive plans, (five of which were sent in), of the new $30,000 municipal building, which the council intend to erect. Competing plans were received from

W. T. Williams, Medicine Hat; John Trimble, Medicine Hat; W. M. Dodd, Calgary; G. M. Lang, Calgary; Wilson, Hodgson, and Bates, Calgary.

The council went carefully into the plans, and after about two hours deliberation unanimously agreed to accept Mr William's plan.

A motion to that effect was formally made by councillor Stewart, seconded by councillor Smythe, and carried.

The making arrangements with Mr Williams for supervision, etc., was left in the hands of the building and works committee.

An adjourned meeting of the council was held yesterday afternoon. Present; Mayor Forster, councillors Stewart, Smyth, DesBrisay, Sissons, and Drinnan; W. N. Adsit, town clerk; W. T. Williams, architect.

The plans for the new municipal building were produced and discussed with the architect.

A suggestion had been made to turn the building round so as to face it upon Main Street, instead of upon Fourth Avenue. This it was suggested would be better, as unless it were done there would be only five feet between the fire hall and the boundary line. By turning the building the other way it could be set back and still have more room all round.

The change was ordered to be made.

Several other details were discussed at length and the council gave the public works committee full powers in the matter.

Through lack of space we are obliged to hold over the details.

POLICE COMMITTEE REPORT.

The license and police committee reported having interviewed the chief of police and others, in regard to certain allegations made against the chief.

Chief Markwick came before the council and gave a denial to the imputations, and stated he intended to take proceedings against certain parties with a view to clear his name.

This was all the business and the council rose.

BASEBALL

A bunch of ball-tossers from the "Hottest coon in Dixie" show wandered down to the grounds yesterday afternoon and played a game with the home team. This was the first appearance of the Medicine Hat team this season, and they all evidently felt the lack of practice. The game, taken all round was a fairly good exhibition. The following composed the home team:—Douglas c, Sullivan p., Barker 1st b, and p., Bradshaw 2b., O'Hara ss., McNabb 3b., McKenzie, Porter and Lawrence outfield. The show men were, Marshall, Jones, Grundy, Watkins, Weatherby, White, Buchanan, Everett, Arnold. Umpire, D. T. Flavin. The following is the score by innings.

Alberta's New Constituencies

The division of the Provinces of Alberta into electoral districts has drawn strong protests from the Calgary papers, both of which contend an injustice has been inflicted upon the country of Southern Alberta in general, and the city of Calgary in particular. The Herald published a map of the province, showing the divisions, which practically bears out the contention. It looks like a cinch for Edmonton now. The Albertan speaks strongly, and says the south has received "no consideration, we have not been fairly treated." The basis of population on which central and southern Alberta is making a fight for a revision of the schedules contemplates a population of 173,000. Of this 2,500 is credited to the Athabasca population. These figures have been very carefully compiled, and are regarded by well-informed men as fairly accurate.

Our Future.

The future of our great western country is largely in our own hands. If we, who know the richness of this splendid land, the opportunities of this country of "magnificent distances," if we who know the wealth that is here in soil and timber, mountain and valley, backed by a fine healthy climate, if we will but do our duty to ourselves and the country this generation will live to see millions where there are now but hundreds of thousands. It should be our chief aim to publish to the world the fact that there is room for millions here, and a chance for all who will cheerfully fall into the ways of the country, and work with might and main. Much is being done in the old lands on this subject, and we hope to help the good work along. There is now a most gratifying increase in the interest taken by the people of the United Kingdom in the Colonies, and in Canada in particular. Mr. W. L. Griffith, secretary to the office of the High Commissioner for Canada, lecturing a short time ago on the development of Canada, bore testimony to this, and made a remark which we heartily endorse. "I am glad to believe," said Mr. Griffith, "that in the near future the English mother will bid 'adieu' to her boys proceeding to Winnipeg, Regina, Medicine Hat, Calgary, (and he might have added Vancouver) with as few qualms at heart as if they were bound to a spot in the British Isles; and you will pardon me if I suggest that while Canada will be a gainer thereby, the chief gainer will be the English emigrant." Let us add that there is no room for

The leaner.
The coward.
The wobbler.
The ignorant.
The weakling.
The smatterer.
The indifferent.
The unprepared.
The educated fool.
The impractical theorist.
Those who watch the clock.
The slipshod and the careless.
The young man who lacks backbone.
The person who is afraid of obstacles.
The man who has no iron in his blood.
The person who tries to save on foundations.
The boy who slips rotten hours into his schooling.
The man who is always running to catch up with his business.
The man who can do a little of everything and not much of anything.
The man who wants to succeed, but is not willing to pay the price.
The man who tries to pick out only the flowers out of his occupation, avoiding the thorns.

Afterthoughts.

Many of the most important things in life are dealt with as if they were mere afterthoughts. A man or woman brimming over with some item of news, calls upon a neighbour, but for some reason or other talks of all kinds of things until he or she is just leaving, when "Oh, by the way" says the visitor—and then out comes the story. If it is anything unpleasant the said visitor immediately departs. It has been said the poet's head of hair is a sort of afterthought. He meant to have had it cut short, like the hair of other people of a more sensible turn of mind, but, just as an afterthought he lets it grow. It is the same in all sorts of things. Churchworkers, for instance, with commendable zeal, give freely to build our churches, erect vicarages and manses, and provide grand organs, and when in the middle of it, and people have given all they can spare, they remember the minister's salary for the past year has not been paid. The matter of the salary is just an afterthought. It should be the first. Let those things which should be done first have their proper place, so that all our efforts may be well directed.

There are many of us who remember the first telphones, and how their utility was discussed and doubted. To those especially it will be astonishing to learn that there are now in use in North America 3,315,000 telephones. One of the most far-reaching and revolutionary phases of the telephone industry is the rural precincts. There are 65,000 wage earners and 15,000 salaried officials and clerks, whose livlihood is directly traceable to the electrical transmission of speech. Combined the officials and employees receive in the neighborhood of $36,000,000 annually. Nor is this the sum of expenditure accruing as the effect of the telephone's prestige. The factories devoted to the manufacture of wire, of machinery, of the 'phones themselves, the lumber industries which are supported by the constant growing demand for poles, and the foundries which furnish the wire conduits, are a considerable part of the equation. The amount expended in this one field annually exceeds that of the packing and slaughtering industries which, it is admitted is one of the most important in the country.

THE "HE SAID" GIRLS.

Did you ever notice a group of girls between the ages of 14 and 18 chattering away in a corner? The next time you come near such a group listen and hear if every tenth word is not about what "he said." If it is, you have found some more of the "he said" girls, and they are not the nicest girls in the world. The "he said" girls are likely to loiter down town after school too late to help their mothers with the afternoon work. They are likely to wear better clothes than their fathers can afford, and the neighbors wonder what their mothers can be thinking about. The "he said" girls also think more of the boys than they do of their books, and frequently fail to get through school. They are in for a good time, and have nothing in their heads but hatpins and twosteps.

Sometimes nature takes a girl out of the "he said" family, and makes a fine woman of her, but generally she gets to going to parties, and is developed before her time, and either marries and fades at 20 or hangs on after all the other girls are married off, and becomes known as "grandma" in the crowd.

There is nothing so sweet as a simple, frank, open-hearted girl; but the boy-struck girl is an abomination. The whole matter rests with the girl's mother. She can either bring up one of the "he said" girls or she can have a daughter to be proud of.—Emparia Gazette.

ENGLISH OPERA SINGERS.

The Dale English Opera Singers were accorded a splendid reception at their initial concert in Massey Hall. It was "Jap Night," and the singers were accordingly clad in Japanese costume, and the stage was decorated with Japanese screens and palms. The quartette is composed of Mr Frederic Dale, baritone; Mr Orlando Anderson, tenor; Miss Edith Serpell, soprano, and Miss Gwendoline Phillips, contralto. Miss Serpell and Miss Phillips were the recipients of several beautiful bouquets.

The singing of the quartette was very much admired, as the voices, well-trained and harmonius, blended admirably. Repeated encores were accorded the principles.

Miss Serpell's voice was especially noticeable for its fine quality, and the degree of culture to which it has attained. It is clear, sweet, melifluous and trained to a high degree of efficiency. Her every appearance demanded a recall.

Mr Dale's humorous musical sketch at the conclusion of the first part was much appreciated.

Instead of "The Girl You Love," which was on the programme in the second part, the quartette sang "Flirtation," an alluring piece, and one that demanded a vociferous encore.—Toronto Mail.

The above talented company will appear in the Opera House here on the 29th.

TUESDAY, MAY 23rd 1905.

PRESENTATION TO D. McNABB.

D. McNabb, who has been chief of the fire brigade and captain of Medicine Hat Lacrosse club, for the past four or five years, who is leaving the town shortly, was on Thursday night the recipient of an address and purse of money from the members of the fire brigade and other admirers and friends and an address and $50 from the town council in recognition of his services with the fire brigade.

The presentation took place in the fire hall and a goodly crowd attended to do honour to the guest of the evening.

Mr Thomas Hutchinson ex mayor and president of the fire brigade, presided over the meeting and in opening the proceedings said they were met together to do honour to one who had done a great deal for the fire brigade and for lacrosse in Medicine Hat. As chief of the brigade he had done great service in fighting and subduing fires which had occurred in the town and as captain of the Lacrosse club he had lead the members to many a victory, and two years ago the club came out champions of the north-west territories. (Applause.) He (Mr Hutchinson), had known "Mac" ever since he came to town, held a high opinion of his personal worth and believed he had in him the points which make for success in life. (Loud applause.) If he had a fault it was that he was too modest. They would all wish him success wherever he might go. (Loud cheers.)

Song, Tommy Atkins, Mr Cressfield.
Piano selection Mr T. A. Beattie.
Song, Put me off at Buffalo Mr G. E. Tutt.

The above musical selections having been rendered, Councillor Stewart made a brief speech, in which he spoke highly of Mr McNabb. This was followed by a piano performance by Mr J. Leonard, a song, (The King's Own) by Mr Beattie, and then came the reading of the address from the fire brigade, and presentation of the purse by the chairman.

Medicine Hat,
May 18th, 1905.

TO CHIEF McNABB, MEDICINE HAT FIRE BRIGADE.

There is always something akin to pain in the breaking of ties which have been pleasant and of long standing, and with the knowledge of your intention to sever your connection with the fire brigade and the good old town of Medicine Hat, there came a feeling of regret that we were about to lose one whose uniform good nature had greatly endeared him to all the members of the brigade.

Our best wishes go with you for a happy and prosperous career, and wheresoever in after life your path may run you can rest assured the members of the Medicine Hat fire brigade will always be pleased to hear of you making substantial progress in life.

We trust you will accept the accompanying gifts as a slight acknowledgement of the high appreciation and esteem in which we hold you, on account of your many good qualities.

Signed on behlaf of the officers and members of the Medicine Hat fire brigade.

T. HUTCHINSON.
G. A. COCHRAN.

Mr McNabb made a very suitable reply, thanking everyone for their kindness to him at all times. He was loudly cheered.

Mayor Forster was the next speaker and he spoke highly of Mr McNabb's services to the town.

The chairman then called upon Mr W. N. Adsit, town clerk, to read the address from the council and to present the cheque from the council. On getting up to receive these "Mac" was given "three times three and a tiger" and the company sang, "For he's a jolly good fellow," and somebody rung in on the fire gong.

The Lyric Quartette (Messrs Alexander, Crompton, Fleming and Stutfield), rendered "Annie Laurie" as a part song, and being encored sang "The Three Chafers."

Councillor Drinnan next made a very neat speech, in which he eulogised the guest of the evening and reasoned that athletic sports was the field in which the best citizens and the best all round men were made, a sentiment which was highly applauded.

Two favourites, Messrs F. W. Gilroy and W. E. Crompton, next favoured with well rendered solos and received well merited encores.

Mr W. C. Harris, Editor of the Times, was the next speaker, and in the course of his remarks paid a high tribute to the efficiency of the fire brigade.

The Lyric Quartette contributed another selection and scored another success.

Mr Sullivan gave the solo "Paddy O'Brien" and was loudly encored.

The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" concluded the proceedings.

A BAD BRUISE.

Often causes a good deal of trouble. The best cure is a prompt application of Nerviline which instantly stops the pain, prevents swelling, removes all blackness and discoloration. Nerviline is antiseptic—prevents blood poisoning. No liniment so strong, so penetrating, so swift to destroy pain. You miss a lot of comfort by not using Polson's Nerviline. For nearly fifty years it has been the standard family liniment of Canada.

There is to be a trotting match on Wednesday between Geo. Marwick's "Tony Day" and Ernie Charboneau's 'Maud" which promises to draw a large, crowd of sportsmen. Both these runners have high marks and being high steppers and evenly matched an exciting race is expected. It is stated that the whole of the town day and night police force, strengthened by the R.N.W.M.P. and some specials will be on the ground to keep the course clear. It is understood that Chief Markwick will handle the ribbons himself and the owner of "Maud" will occupy the box seat and flourish the whiphand over that noble beast. The prize is announced to be $50 and the championship of the Territories. Tickets are being sold at 10 cents each in aid of the hospital.

The severe wind storm took liberties with the glass frame sashes at Mr Geo. Levels garden one day last week. It lifted a lot of them up and conveyed them some distance away. If that had been all it would have mattered little, but alas, the glass was smashed into a thousand fragrants. This has kept Mr Levell's plants back a little, but he is going to be ready for the bedding out time, which is now close upon us.

Of the 16 yachts only two are British, two German and the rest Americans.

The following story is not told for the purpose of inducing any medicine Hat man to copy it, but just to show what fools men can be. A well-known Winnipeg drinking man appeared at his home the other morning at daylight, and his wife said: "I'd just like to know where you've been all night?" "Well, I'll tell you," the drunkard said. "I was drinking last night with Ed. ——— and we started home about eleven o'clock. He concluded I was too full to be trusted alone, so he brought me home. After we arrived here, I concluded he was too full to be trusted alone, so I took him home. Then when we arrived at his house he concluded to take me home, so we took each other home all night."

Fancy any resident of this town writing to an eastern paper stating that there was no wheat seeding here in February and that Medicine Hat was then buried in frost and snow. If we knew this gentleman's name we would like to publish it, so that all might know him.

THE SCOTCH SUPPER AND CONCERT.

The Scotch supper and concert at the Presbyterian Church last Thursday was a great success. It was got up under the auspices of the ladies' aid, who are to be congratulated upon the general result of their labours, and we must add that the scotch element of the aid performed their part to perfection, the various scotch dishes, etc., being the real thing.

The tables were in charge of the following ladies:—

Mrs Wm. Rutherford, and Mrs Mc. Dermaid; Mrs Wallace, and Mrs Wm. Wilson; Mrs Lowe, and Mrs Mackie; Mrs Ewart, and Mrs D. Williamson. The above were assisted by a corps of young ladies and gentlemen, and all exerted themselves to make the affair a success. About $126 were realised. In the evening a concert was given, in which the following items were rendered:—

Do Not Miss This Opportunity.

Government Endorsement of the Marconi System.

Do you know that the Dominion Government has given its unquestioning support to his Canadian Company? and that by generous endowments the future of the company is assured?

The future of the Canadian Marconi Company is brilliant beyond the fondest hopes of those who established it. The success which it has already attained is nothing compared with that which it will enjoy in the immediate future. The success is credited to the company, but it is really the stockholders of the company that enjoy the actual benefit of its accomplishments. The company can have the honor and glory if the stockholders have the dollars which will come in the form of dividends; and no stockholder will have a complaint to offer. Are you a stockholder in this great enterprise?

If you are not you should immediately purchase some of the stock and be ready to reap the advantage of this opportunity, which will surpass anything in the history of modern enterprises. The stock is now selling at $5 per share, and any number of shares from one to two hundred may be purchased. Important results are following each other in such rapid succession that it will be but a brief time before the stock will advance in price, and it will no longer be possible to purchase it.

We cannot too strongly urge that you become a stockholder immediately, so that you may benefit by this coming advance in the price of the stock. You ought to make up your mind to-day as to the amount that you can purchase, and forward your cheque for the same without delay. Any questions that you may desire to ask will be answered if you present them to us by mail or in person.

Only a limited number of Shares to be sold in Medicine Hat. For furthur information see Mr Robertson, Opera House, 9 am to 10 pm.

A. STEWART.

A. STEWART.

Editor and Proprietor of the Prince Albert Advocate.

Many men engaged in newspaper work in the Canadian West have a larger circle of acquaintances, but few have warmer friends than Mr. Andrew Stewart, the editor and proprietor of the Prince Albert Advocate. On a casual knowledge, this may seem somewhat strange. At first glance Mr. Stewart does not impress one as a particularly attractive personality. He is a better listener than talker. He never obtrudes his views. There is nothing histrionic or spectacular about him—nothing that would appeal to the ordinary observer as remarkably keen or brilliant. He is not reserved or taciturn but he certainly displays to a less degree than the average western newspaper man that hail-fellow-well-met camaraderie, that exuberant good fellowship which in its heartiness is apt to be undistinguishing in its friendliness, that characterizes the generality of western newspaper men. Mr. Stewart lacks that Bohemian buoyancy which is the hall-mark of many of his fellow workers. He abjures the "wild and woolly westerners." He is sound and sane, thoughtful and earnest. In the northernmost frontier town of the prairie section of the Dominion he has stood for professional ideals that are conservatively progressive. To pick up a copy of the Advocate—not merely now, when Prince Albert is one of the most important cities of the West, but for years past, when it was popularly regarded as hanging on to the outside edge of civilization—none would ever think, either by its makeup, by its editorial opinions, or by its news columns that it was published in a town that was the farthest Canadian limit of agricultural effort. Indeed, if the imprint was not noticed, the general impression would be that the Advocate was a typical representative of that class of capable journals published in an old established, populous and prosperous community.

In this respect the Advocate is merely the reflection of its owner. The finest qualities of older civilizations have in the person of Mr. Stewart been transplanted to the new conditions of pioneer journalism. Without losing one whit of the endowment he brought with him, he has adapted those qualities to the environment of the West, and with such conspicuous success that it has passed into a proverb among his fellowworkers. Mr. Stewart is the embodiment of quiet strength and modest ability. He has a judicial temperament which prevents him from taking any step without mature consideration, and saves him from the errors into which more impetuous natures inevitably fall. For the same reason he seldom has occasion to modify any position once taken. It is thus no wonder that the personal and editorial opinions are treated with the greatest respect by all who know either him or his paper.

And it is undeniable that both the Advocate and its editor have opinions, and strong ones. Neither the paper nor its editor are spineless wobblers. But neither is offensive or dictatorial in the advocacy of the views professed. Both recognize that there is something to be said on the other side, and treat those who differ with them with the respect due to intelligent opponents. In their moderation is the secret of the influence of both. Blind, unreasoning partyism has no supporter in Mr. Stewart. He always appeals, not to party allegiance or great party personages, but to sound and intelligible principles. He uses no rhetorical exaggerations, no catch phrases that obscure while pretending to enlighten.

All political and other issues are tested by the touchstone of ordinary, everyday, common sense. One may differ with Mr. Stewart's conclusions, but none can deny him the respect due a thoughtful, moderate and logical thinker.

Mr. Stewart, like many another Western editor, is a graduate of the case. Few printers in Canada have had a more thorough or more varied training. He is an Irishman by birth, having been born in County Down some thirty-five years ago. He came to Canada with his parents in the year of the great western boom, in 1882. The family located at Emerson, which at that time was a typical boom town, two daily papers being published there. In one of these offices young Stewart went as errand boy and devil. After a short time he removed to Brandon, still in the same useful and lowly capacity. A year or two later he came to Winnipeg, working here a summer, and then, desiring to see somewhat more of the world, and to secure a wider knowledge of the business, moved to St. Paul, where another year was spent in various offices. Another year was spent in New York, principally in the employ of Bradstreet's. But the call of the West came to the young printer again, and he came back to Manitoba with a determination to farm. The life of a pioneer on a homestead, however, proved uncongenial. The smell of printers' ink called him to the newspaper office as irresistibly as that of the sea does the sailor to his ship. Mr. Stewart struck out for the Western States working in the principal offices in Helena, Anaconda, Spokane, Tacoma, Seattle, and the State printing office at Olympia. In these he gained invaluable experience in every branch of th printing and publishing business.

It will thus be seen that few printers in the Canadian West have had a more complete mechanical training and experience than Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart went to Prince Albert in 1894 to take charge of he newly organized paper and after a few months was so satisfied with its prospects that he decided to purchase he business, which he has conducted ever since. From a very modest beginning it has grown till it is now an eight page, all home print paper, taking natural rank as one of the four or five best papers in the Territories. The mechanical equipment of the office is one of the best in the West, including a fine two-revolution press, gordon jobbers, monoline, cutters, stitchers, &c, ample to keep pace with the rapid growth of one of the most progressive cities of Western Canada. Typographically, editorially and reportorially, the Advocate is a paper of which any place might well be proud. In this respect the city on the Saskatchewan has much for which to thank Mr. Stewart, who, with unflagging energy, enterprise and wisdom, has helped it grow from an outpost trading village to its present status, and whose efforts in the future will not be the least of the factors to its continued progress. Happy indeed is that Western town,—the supreme need of each of which is the most widespread publicity concerning its natural wealth and advantages—which has an editor as persistent, so effective, and so able as Mr. Stewart, and a paper as enterprising and as progressive as the Prince Albert Advocate.

A SPRING NEED.

THE INDOOR LIFE OF WINTER IS ON THE HEALTH.

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That's the spring feeling. The reason—close confinement indoors during the winter months, breathing the impure air of badly ventilated houses, offices and workshops. The trouble may manifest itself in a variable appetite, little pimples or eruptions of the skin, a feeling of weariness, and perhaps an occasional headache, or a twinge of neuralgia or rheumatism. Perhaps you think the trouble will pass away—but it won't unless you drive it out of the system by putting the blood right with a health-giving tonic. And there is only one absolutely certain, blood-renewing, nerve-restoring tonic—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Thousands of grateful people have testified that these pills are the best of all spring medicines. They actually make new blood; they brace the nerves and strengthen every organ of the body. They make tired, depressed, ailing men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. N. Ferguson, Ashfield, N.S., says: "For the benefit it may be to others I take much pleasure in saying that I have found wonderful benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I began taking them I was so badly run down that I could scarcely go about the house. I was also troubled with palpitation of the heart and weak spells, but the pills have fully restored me and I am now enjoying better health than I ever expected to have again."

If you want to be healthy in spring don't dose yourself with purgatives—they only weaken—they can't cure. Don't experiment with other so-called tonics. Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once and see how quickly they will banish all spring ailments, and make you active and strong. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

C.P.R. FLORAL DEPARTMENT.

The floral department of the C.P.R. is issuing attractive folders, containing with the general information given, the following sentence: "We have conducted the flower scheme for seven years. This spring there will be at least a million tulips, crocuses and narcissus at the stations across Canada, to brighten, beautify and make home-like your environments."

Perhaps there is no other department of the C.P.R. which has enlarged so rapidly as the floral, which is under the direction of Mr. N. Stewart Dunlop, tax and insurance commissioner of the company. Last autumn it sent bulbs to station agents, sectionmen and other employees, from one end of the system to the other. Some were for outdoor planting, and are expected to bloom this spring; others were for pots and boxes indoors, that they might bloom during the past winter. As a result of this generous distribution, there will be one million tulips, etc., flowering along the system this spring. Before the department was established, the only plants and flowers along the company's various lines were those planted and cultivated at the expense of those agents who wished them for their own enjoyment. Now the company bears all expense in connection with the purchase of thousands of the best bulbs procurable, and not only sends them to every employee who wishes them, but also issues folders giving information, in addition to this, seeds are sent every spring to employees along the system, who have exhibited an interest in flower culture. For this year the money appropriation made by the company to its floral department is almost double that of last year, so that the coming summer should see the stations on the C.P.R. more attractive than ever.

The seeds—numbering over 25,000 packages—are being sent out now, and include as fine a collection as any gardener of the most refined taste could wish. Mr. Dunlop, to whose energies and fondness for flowers the success of the department is due, tells those to whom his circulars are sent to surround their station, section house or office building with pretty flowers, so that not only the employees may enjoy the fragrance and brilliancy of the blooms, but that passengers on entering stations from Vancouver to St. John may be welcomed by the beauty of flowers.

One of the features of railways in England is the attractiveness of the grounds and stations along railway system. Money is lavishly spent on even short mileage, so that the public will enjoy travelling. The C.P.R. is similarly disposed to make its system one of the most enjoyable for travel in America.

GOLDEN TIPS.

Interesting Volume Descriptive of Ceylon and its Industries.

P. C. Larkin, of the Salada Tea Co. has sent the Toronto World a copy of interesting volume, descriptive of Ceylon and its greater industries. "Golden Tips," so the book is entitled, is the work of Henry W. Cave, M.A., F.R.G.S., a member of the Royal Asiatic society and himself a succesful Ceylon merchant, and is profusely and beautifully illustrated from photographs by the author. It is one of quite a number of volumes on Ceylon, and its natural features and resources, issued by Mr. Cave, who has done excellent service in bringing this gem of the southern seas before the notice of the English-speaking public.

Ceylon for a considerable time was only associated in the public mind with the melodious but somewhat misleading lines in Heber's well-known missionary hymn:

What tho the spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle,
Where every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile.

But we learn from Mr. Cave that the truth of the first three lines is not continued in the fourth. The native Singhalese are certainly not vile in their ordinary occupation of that brief but significant adjective. Indeed, Mr. Cave gives us a very different idea of the perfection of Ceylon life.

"They need no poor laws, nor have they any. Poverty is relieved by the natural benevolence of the people. The wealthy Singhalese are especially kind to the poor; and many of them have fixed days of the week upon which they distribute rice to all the aged and infirm of their district. The solidarity of the family is I believe, even stronger among them than Europeans; the weakest are the most cared for; the rich help their poorer relations, and never disown them; the poor assist the poorer amongst their own relatives and friends, so that there is no dread of old-age poverty. In these particulars of freedom from care and squalid misery I believe that the Singhalese are now the happiest of His Majesty's subjects in any part of the world."

A people of whom these things can be said may not be Christian or even civilized in the western meaning of civilization, but they are certainly not vile.

Space will not permit us to linger over the wonderful beauty of Ceylon scenery, and the equally marvelous fertility of its soil. It is a miniature continent, in which the traveler can pass through every variety of climate, over mountain, forest and plain and the loveliest and most exquisite landscapes. The tea estates, we learn, are upwards of a thousand in number, varying in size from 100 to 1000 acres each, and comprising a total of 370,000 acres, and are divided into about sixty districts. They are situated for the most part in the mountainous central province of the island, and vary in elevation above the sea level from 100 to 7000 feet. There are, however, some extensive estates in the lowlands.

As the native Singhalese were too well satisfied with their lot, it became necessary to import laborers from Southern India. The gangs are each in charge of a company or taskmaster, and above them is the conductor, who is the superintendent's right-hand man in the fields Mr. Cave gives a full and detailed account of the various operations carried on in connection with tea raising; the pruning, weeding, drain-clearing, and, above all, the import matter of plucking. The green leaves pass through a number of processes, being first withered, then rolled, then broken, then allowed to ferment and finally transferred to the dislicator, where it is fired. They are then cooled and sifted, emerging as the various grades known commercially as Broken Orange Pekoe, Orange Pekoe, Pekoe, Suchong and Dust all of which terms are of Chinese origin and refer to some characteristic of the sort of tea they represent. The creme de la creme of Ceylon is the Broken Orange Pekoe, which gives the name of "Golden Tips" to Mr. Cave's volume.

Mr. Cave, speaking of the quality of Ceylon tea, says:

Everything, it will be observed, is done to avoid handling the tea. Indeed, from the bush to the tea table such methods of pure cleanliness are observed as scarcely any other food manufacture can claim, and especially do these methods of Ceylon tea manufacture stand in contrast to those of China, where the primitive operations employed are such that the stomach would rebel against a detailed description. I am convinced that if the public generally did but realize this difference between Ceylon tea and that of some other countries the demand for the Ceylon article would increase quite beyond the capacity of the country to supply it.

These admirable methods, coupled with the natural fitness of the soil and climate, no doubt account for the unrivaled popularity of Ceylon tea, and it is a matter of pride that the fragrant leaf from which comes "the cup that cheers and not inebriate" should now be so largely produced in one of the most beautiful of the dependencies of the British Crown.

They are Carefully Prepared.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome costiveness the medicine administered must influence the action of these canals. There was a matinee benefit at the Manhattan Theatre for a cat and dog hospital a few days ago. Before the doorkeeper was ready to take tickets a dozen women had gathered in the theatre. He went among them getting their tickets. One woman had no ticket, and she told him so. I keep my dogs and cats at this hospital and I ought to be allowed to see this show for nothing," said she. "Madame, if you don't either leave or go to the box office and purchase a ticket I'll be in the hospital," said the doorkeeper. "They wouldn't have you here," retorted the woman, making for the door. "It's a cat and dog hospital. They won't take monkeys."

The Backache Stage may be just that incipient form of kidney disease which, if neglected, will develope into stubborn and distressing disorder that will take long tedious treatment to cure. Don't neglect the "backache stage" of the most insidious of diseases. South American Kidney Cure stops the ache in six hours and cures.—30.

In these days there seem to be as many writers as there are readers. The spread of authorship and its egregious pride is hit off in this dialogue from the Fliegende Blaetter: A guest at the hotel table reading the bill of fare says: "Your bill of fare is great!" "I am glad to hear it," replies the head waiter. "I am its author."

A Small Pill, But Powerful.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by its size, would consider Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is a little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The remedies which it carries are put up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

Henry Harland, the novelist, reproached a friend for the violence of his criticism of a book he was reading. He said that a critical attack succeeded best if it was delivered gently. Then, to illustrate his point, he told about an old Scottish buttler, whose master had married an Italian girl of great fortune and little charm. Some one, after the wedding, asked the Scot what he thought of the bride. "She's very rich?" the questioner began. "Ah, I've so heard," said the old man. "And agreeable" "They say so." "Well, what's your private opinion of her, Thomas?" A NEW ERA IN TRANS-PACIFIC TRANSPORTATION.

The Great Northern Steamship Company in placing in service between Seattle, Wash., and Yokohama, Nagasaki, Kobe, Shanghai and Hong Kong, the magnificent American built steamships the "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," marks a new era in transportation facilities between the United States and the Orient. The magnificent steamships with their superior facilities in handling immense freight cargoes and the luxurious appointments for passenger travel has given an impetus to our Oriental trade. The North Pacific route to the Orient is rapidly becoming the popular one and now that the two palatial steamships, the "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," have been put in commission there is no question but that a further greater increase in our trade with the Orient as well as increased passenger travel to Asiatic ports will be inaugurated. The first sailingof the "Minnesota," in addition to carrying the largest cargo to the Orient ever carried by any ship in the world, as well as an extensivt passenger list, augurs well for the future. The "Minnesota" will sail on its next voyage to the Orient on Saturday April 29th. and it will not be amiss to say here that the excellence of her passenger accommodations will be heralded to the travelling public of the United States by all who enjoyed the pleasant voyage across the Pacific on her first trip, as furnishing the acme travel comfort. The fact that the superior accommodations of the Great Northern Steamship Company in connection with the comfortable journey afforded by the Great Northern Railway to Seattle, the sailing point of the "Minnesota," will make this ronte the popular one from Occident to Orient.

POLLY'S CAREER

By Izola Forrester

Copyright, 1904, by Izola Forrester

"If you would only speak to her, Murray, it might do some good. Her father and I have tried our level best to discover a glimmer of ambition or talent in her, and she hasn't an atom of either. She's nothing but a girl."

Mrs. Allan's hands fell on the wide arms of her rocker with despairing expressiveness. The colonel nodded his head soberly and sympathetically, as befitted the solemnity of the moment.

"She's still very young, isn't she?"

"She's the youngest of all. Bess is thirty, Louise nearly twenty-five and Florence is twenty-one. But look at them! Each one is established in her chosen profession and winning success."

The colonel was silent. Remembering some of Bess' poems, Louise's patients and Florence's copies of old masters, he did not feel that either affirmation or denial was called for.

"And at eighteen they had all decided definitely what they wanted to make of themselves, while Polly—Murray Hartwell, when I asked Polly this morning if she had even the vaguest sort of an inclination toward any occupation in the world, what do you suppose she said? She told me that she hoped some day to be the mother of as many charming daughters as I had, and if they were half as much worry as mine were she thought she would have occupation enough. Murray, are you laughing at me?"

The colonel leaned his head back and laughed heartily in spite of the accusing, reproachful stare of Mrs. Allan's eyeglasses.

"It's just like Polly to say that," he explained. "And, by Jove, I believe she means it too. If I were a little younger—say thirty years—I'd have a try myself and encourage her in her chosen career. By Jove, I would indeed, Cousin Sarah! Polly's a mighty pretty, level headed little girl, and I'll be bound she's a good cook."

"If it were Jack's career that was at stake you wouldn't turn a serious problem of this kind into a joke. What if his only ambition in life were to be married?"

The colonel's face sobered suddenly at the thought. Jack—debonair, twenty-two-year-old Jack—married!

"But it's absurd, Sarah. Jack's a man. It's different. One expects such ideas in a girl's head, the same as a taste for ice cream or rose color or matinees. But Jack is ambitious and talented and well started in his profession now. By Jove, I'm proud of the boy—I am indeed. He's a fine fellow. Takes after his dad. But married?" The colonel leaned back his head and took another laugh.

"Why, if the young rascal even suggested such a thing I'd fire him back to college or send him down to the mines to work off an attack of romance on the brain."

"And yet you censure me for desiring something better for Polly than mere marriage." Mrs. Allan's tone was aggrieved. "I thought surely that you would understand and sympathize with me, Murray, and your influence might possibly direct Polly into making some sort of a choice."

"Wait a minute." The colonel rose from his deep chair near the fire. There was the slam of the front door and the sound of quick, light steps in the hall.

"Come and get warm before you go home, Jack," called a voice. "There's a fire here in the study."

The long, dark green portieres parted, and Polly stood in the doorway, tall, blithely youthful and pink as a rosebud where the wind had teased the color to her face. There were snowflakes clinging to her big brown hat and to her furs, but she was merry eyed and happy, suspiciously happy, the two in the study thought.

"Hello, dad." Jack's face looked over her shoulder. "Awful glad you're here. We've been for a trot along the drive, Polly and I."

"I thought that you were upstairs studying with Bess, Polly," said Mrs. Allan, "but as long as you are here you may come in. The colonel and I have been talking of your career."

Polly drew off her long brown fur stole and trailed it meditatively along the edge of the rug at her feet. The colonel coughed and realized that he was expected to speak on the subject. He beamed down upon Polly paternally. He had always liked Polly somewhat better, privately, than Cousin Sarah's more talented daughters.

"Of course you are too young to—to understand your own capabilities and—er—and any lurking talents which you may possess, Polly, but you must not give up or be discouraged. Some of the great geniuses of the world only discovered their gifts at middle age."

"Well, it's a pity some of them didn't die young," said Jack cheerfully.

The colonel ignored the interruption and looked at Polly. He felt the approving attention of Mrs. Allan's eyeglasses.

"But if you can consider the question of a career or should feel any special predilection"—

"That's it." Polly nodded her head until the snowflakes scattered in raindrops from her hat. "That's just what I do feel, Colonel Hartwell—a special predilection."

"For what, in the name of sense, Polly Allan?" Mrs. Allan leaned forward in amazement.

"For Jack." Polly smiled assuredly, and slipped her hand into the one that sought it. "He's going to be the object of my career."

There was a tense silence. The colonel stared frowningly at Mrs. Allan, and Mrs. Allan looked back at him with conflicting sensations. The paramount one was a small but solid sense of amused satisfaction in the colonel's utter discomfiture.

"Shall it be college or the mines, Murray?" she asked.

The colonel squared his shoulders. He had met honorable defeat before and could face it like a soldier and a gentleman.

"Neither, madam, neither. Seeing, as it is, Polly and her career are at stake, I give my consent and wish her all success."

Jack stretched out his disengaged hand.

"You blessed old dad!" he said, and the colonel had the honors of war.

Wanted a Big "Bar'l."

A newspaper tells the story of a storekeeper in a country town who, after twice telling a young man that he had no "onions," reverted to the matter after the customer had gone. "I declare," he said, "I do know but what it was ingans that feller wanted!"

A similar tale is told by a young woman who, being in search of a barrel to catch rain water, applied to the village innkeeper.

"Have you a hogshead that I could buy?" she said, with the careful enunciation that she had learned in childhood.

The innkeeper shook his head.

"Not any sort of hogshead?" she asked, with gentle persistence. "I thought you must have a good many."

"I wonder what set you thinking that?" said the landlord, looking as if he considered her demented. "I haven't kep' a single hog for ten years back, and when I did keep 'em I never had any call for their heads."

It was the young woman's turn to look horrified.

"Oh, I don't know anything about hogs' heads!" she said excitedly. "I want a hogshead, an old molasses hogshead or something."

The landlord looked at her, and light dawned at last.

"I believe you mean you want a hugshud," he said, smiling broadly. "You step this way and take your choice of what I've got."

A Very Funny Joke.

"The head of our firm had a trying experience one Fourth of July," said a commercial man. "He thought he would play a funny joke on his family, so a day or so before the holiday he bought one of those candy boxes made in imitation of a cannon firecracker. He secreted this in the pantry, where he thought it would be safe.

"But his little son, about eight years old, discovered the firecracker and also discovered that it was filled with candy. He helped himself to the contents and finally, finding the box empty, he made way with it and substituted a real cannon cracker.

"Fourth of July came and the head of the family, smiling broadly, came downstairs and placed his big firecracker in the middle of the breakfast table. Then, regardless of his wife's expostulations, he touched a match to the fuse, never thinking but what it was the candy box on the table.

"His son and heir astutely vanished from the scene about this time. In about thirty seconds there was an explosion that wrecked a once happy breakfast table, and one hour later the worst spanked boy in Detroit had sobbingly confessed to an irate father why the joke had failed."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Old Time Dentistry.

In the early days of dentistry a hickory plug was put into the cavity to fill the space where a tooth ought to be. This plug had to be gently pounded into its desired position. Old Judge Peckham was somewhat addicted to strong language, and when the dentist began his work the judge indulged in some classic comment. As the tapping of the plug continued he threw all dignity to the four winds of heaven, and his language became decidedly "more forcible than elegant." When, however, he arose from the chair, after what seemed to him an interminable period of agony, he pulled out all the stops in his vocabulary for a grand climax. The impression on his listener seems to have been deep and lasting. As the judge passed out the dentist grimly remarked to a waiting patient:

"Wasn't it beautiful? It wasn't really necessary to pound half so long, but I did so enjoy his inflection that I almost pounded the hickory plug into splinters. Wonderful command of language the judge has!"—National Magazine.

A Costly Strike.

The actual damage accruing from the coal strike in Prussia has been computed at $25,000,000, or just one-tenth of the sum the Government proposes to pay for the mines.

Schools In France.

The French system of education is intensely national. Its plan is exactly the opposite from our own school system. With us the local community controls primary schools. In France the local community has no voice in the matter. The French system is the most centralized, the most strictly regulated, the most autocratic and the farthest removed from democratic ideas of any school system in existence. The exact uniformity of the schools is almost unbelievable. The minister of instruction, sitting in his office in Paris, can tell at any moment just what fable of La Fontaine each child of a certain age throughout the whole of France is reciting. Teachers are not allowed any latitude at all. The result is to leave both teachers and scholars almost completely lacking in mental originality.—F. A. Vanderlip in Scribner's.

New Use of the Subjunctive

By CATHERINE BURGESS

Copyright, 1904, by Catherine Burgess

Margaret White was tired of commuting, tired of the daily ride on the elevated road from Christopher street to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, very tired of the crowded class room at the end of it, so it is not strange that her mind, idle through design and strenuous through habit, picked out the broad shouldered young man who strode into the car at Forty-second and off again at One Hundred and Sixteenth street regularly as the morning came as a pleasant enough plaything.

Not that he was particularly good looking. He was distinguished only by a general purposefulness, eyes that looked neither to the right nor to the left, but buried themselves in the morning paper; a general air of being alone and liking it, which appealed to her state of being alone and not liking it.

Lately, instead of the newspaper, he had each morning drawn a book from his pocket and immediately become absorbed in it. It was not altogether a pleasant book, to judge from his face, which betrayed at times great irritation of spirit. Its covers were protected by a paper slip, calculated to balk the curiosity of whomsoever it might not concern. Margaret undoubtedly fell within this category, but that did not occur to her. An intentional device to arouse her curiosity could not have succeeded better.

One morning it chanced that the side of the car he always took was occupied by Italian laborers, dirty and malodorous. With hardly a glance at them and none at her, the man dropped into the seat at Margaret's side and produced his book. Alas! A side glance at it revealed only a Spanish grammar! Margaret could not have told what she had expected, but the unromantic fact suddenly let the whole affair down to the level of every day. The world again seemed cut out of one dingy piece, and all its uses flat, stale and unprofitable.

HE GUIDED HER TOWARD A COMPARATIVELY QUIET STREET.

Then habit asserted itself; the instinct of the teacher triumphed; in the student she forgot the man. His brow was knit as he searched the pages for something he apparently could not find. At last, oblivious to his surroundings, he muttered with emphasis, "Oh, hang!" The sound of his own voice recalled him. He glanced around guiltily. The Italians were stolidly unconscious of his existence, but he flushed as he met Margaret White's friendly gaze.

"Let me help you," she said softly.

Then hastily flushing in her turn at the wonder in his eyes, "I—I am a teacher, you see—and you seemed in difficulty."

His face cleared. Of course that explained everything. He answered frankly:

"I am. It's the subjunctive mood. I thought I was doing a fine thing when I got a native Spanish teacher, but he doesn't know much more English than I do Spanish, and between us heaven knows what tongue I am acquiring."

"I know; I've been through it," she assured him, smiling. "But tell me what puzzles you."

"As I said, the subjunctive. It's really the—the"—

"Exactly," she assented quickly. "It really is."

At One Hundred and Sixteenth street he shut the book with a triumphant snap.

"I'm getting hold of it," he announced. "I say, do you come up on this train often?"

"Every morning."

"Then"— But the train was already starting again. He had just time to dash to the platform and bow to Margaret at her window before it was gone. His smile, as he stood bareheaded in her last glimpse of him, completed the broken sentence.

Commuting lost its terrors after that. Many things may be said in twenty minutes, and, though Margaret conscientiously held her pupil to questions of syntax, she learned a good deal about him in spite of herself—that his name, for instance, was Harold Bond; that he was in the employ of a firm of piano manufacturers; that they were extending their business into Cuba and South America, and that he had the entrance to represent them there if he could acquire a working knowledge of the language within two months.

She did not inquire when the two months would be up. She was not sure that she cared to know. Early in their friendship he had asked permission to visit her in her home, but she had replied that it would be embarrassing to introduce so irregular an acquaintance to the relatives with whom she lived, and he had not insisted. Perhaps she was a little disappointed that he had not.

One morning in June he squared his shoulders defiantly toward One Hundred and Sixteenth street and met her surprised glance with a look of decision.

"I am going on with you," he declared, "and I am going to walk over to school with you, and tonight I shall wait for you at the visitors' entrance and go home with you."

"Have I nothing to say about it?" she inquired.

"Certainly. You will say, 'I shall be very glad, indeed, my dear friend, to see you this afternoon and have an opportunity of presenting you to my family.'"

"And if I don't choose to say that?"

"Then I will introduce myself."

She was silent. For the first time her heart misgave her. What had been a pleasant adventure, something to brighten day dreams and think of vaguely between sleeping and waking, was turning into urgent reality.

At the foot of the elevated stairs he guided her toward a comparatively quiet street.

"I shall be late," she murmured, but obeyed.

"It doesn't matter," he replied. "Margaret, I have a confession to make. The first time we spoke to each other I asked you if you came up often by this route. I knew it without asking. I knew it before you ever noticed me—long before the days of the subjunctive mood. I followed you up here. I followed you to school. I held up a boy outside and found out who you were and what you taught, and then I bought a Spanish grammar. Margaret, sweetheart, forgive me"—for she had grown very pale. "I love you; I loved you then. I hated to do it, but we had no common friends, as people have in books. No accident ever happened in which I could rescue you. I couldn't speak to you first. I just had to depend upon your professional spirit and the subjunctive mood. Say you forgive me."

"And Cuba and your position and the rest of it?" she gasped.

"True as gospel," he answered. "Cuba is simply holding its breath till it can get our pianos. My 'position' is that of junior partner in the firm, and I am really going there—on my wedding trip, unless you would rather go somewhere else." Then pleadingly, "You wouldn't, would you?"

And Margaret surprised herself by whispering, "No." Afterward she reflected it was what she had meant to say all along.

Beef Tea.

This story was told by an old physician who had practiced for nearly fifty years in a small country town. One day he was summoned to a farmhouse, where he found a woman in a high fever and evidently exceedingly ill. He said to her husband, who was the only other person in the house:

"Your wife is very sick and must have nothing to eat except milk and beef tea, but I want you to give her a cup of one or the other every two hours." When he came the next morning and asked about his patient her husband said:

"That beef tea don't agree with her, doctor; it certainly don't. She began to feel bad as soon as she took it."

"That's odd," said the doctor. "You didn't give her any little bits of the meat in it, did you?"

"No, sir; I strained it first on account of the grounds."

"Grounds!" roared the doctor. "What did you make that beef tea out of?"

"Corn beef and the best green tea. I boiled 'em together all yesterday afternoon to get the strength out. But it don't agree with her, doctor; it certainly don't."

Your Watch Is a Compass.

"Most men who own a good watch," said a jeweler, "think they know all about it. They have the number fixed in their memory in case it is stolen. They could probably pick it out from fifty other watches with their eyes shut. But how many men know that their watch is a compass and will tell north from south as accurately as it will tell the time of day? Stanley, the explorer, did not know it until he had groped his way through the dark continent and met a Belgian sailor on the coast. Every watch is a compass. If you point the hour hand to the sun, the south is exactly halfway between the hour and the figure XII on the dial. Suppose, for instance, it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun and 12 on the watch is exactly south. If it is 8 o'clock, point the hand indicating 8 to the sun and the figure X on the dial is due south. No man need get lost if he carries a watch."

Only Art.

The studio "tea" had been a great success. The one small and very youthful member of the company had walked softly about, looking at the pictures. Just before the party broke up the artist discovered him surveying a picture of a lion with awe and interest.

"Don't be afraid, little chap," said the artist genially, patting his small guest on the head. "He won't hurt you."

"Oh, I'm not afraid at all," came the response in a clear treble that caused every one to listen. "He doesn't look a bit as if he were alive, you know."

Where Eggs Are Currency.

Eggs are current coin in Mayo, Kerry, Donegal and Leitrim. They are everywhere received over the counter in payment for tea, sugar, meal, oil, bread, tobacco, patent medicines and general haberdashery. Accounts are kept open and goods supplied on credit in eggs. Predatory agents traveling through the wilds with worthless teas, itinerant tinkers and musicians, hawkers of tinsel jewelry and holy pictures, all accept this current coin, generally unloading it at the nearest railway town.—Dublin Lady of the House.

Consoling.

Elderly Woeer—I hope you are not impressed by the silly sentimentalists who hold that because you've married once you ought not to marry again? Pretty Widow—Don't let that worry you, dear. I've no such prejudice. My own dear mother was married three times, and I only hope that in all things I may follow her example.

There is a strength of quiet endurance as significant of courage as the most daring feats of prowess.—Tuckerman.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS JESSIE ACKERMAN.

A Woman Whose Fame Is as Wide as the World.

Miss Jessie Ackerman, whose fame as an apostle of the Women's Christian Temperance union, as an active worker in the missionary field of Christianity and as an envoy in the interest of the International Peace society is worldwide, has had a most remarkable career. As representative of the various societies with which she is identified Miss Ackerman has in the past fifteen years traveled around the globe half a dozen times. She has been down coal, silver, diamond and gold mines in Europe, Mexico, Africa and Australia. She has walked on the bottom of the southern sea in a man's diving suit and climbed the snowy peak of Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan, with 50,000 Japanese pilgrims. She has been among the rulers of the civilized world and among the degraded cannibals of the south sea islands. She has slept in nearly 3,000 strange beds and addressed peoples of nearly 300 different tribes and nationalities.

Miss Ackerman was born and educated in Boston, but spent many years of her young womanhood in California. Her first public work was in the interest of the Good Templars. In 1888, at the national convention held in New York, she was appointed an "all round the world" missionary. Since then she has been constantly actively engaged in the great movements for the uplifting of humanity.

The "Backward Glance."

Miss Heywood tapped at Hazel's bedroom door. "I presumed on being your godmother and came right up," she called.

A minute later a tear stained, girlish face peeped out, and Miss Heywood was drawn inside a room that looked as if a whirlwind had just passed through it.

"Horrible, isn't it?" Hazel agreed, as Miss Heywood glanced about. "You see, I was late to breakfast without doing a thing to this room, and then I rushed off to school, and mother left it all just for a lesson to me. And, oh, Ned has had that nice Mr. Wilson up in his room, and Mr. Wilson knows this is my bedroom, and when I asked Ned why he couldn't have had the brotherliness to close my door he said—oh, he said—he was so used—to seeing it like this—he, never thought!" And a wet hollow in a pillow which had evidently been doing duty before received Hazel's unhappy face.

"Hazel," said Miss Heywood presently, "if you'll take orders from me for sixty seconds I'll teach you something that will prevent your ever having this trouble again. I call it the 'backward glance.'"

Hazel was sitting up in surprise.

"Go stand by the door," began Miss Heywood, taking out her watch. "We'll suppose you are starting down to breakfast, but as you reach the door you give one backward glance to make sure that your room looks as you'd like to have it if the person whose opinion you value most were to pass the door.

"You see several things to do, don't you? But you have just one minute to do them in.

"Now, ready, begin! Pick up that nightdress from the floor and hang it on its hook. Take the slippers from the bed and those shoes from the middle of the room and put them in the closet. Good! Snatch that towel from the back of the chair and hang it on the rack. Lay those gloves and dangling ribbons and that collar inside the drawer and close all the drawers. Quick, please! Take that tangled mass of bedclothing and turn it smoothly over the foot of the bed. Lay the pillows on that chair by the window and throw up the window. Good! Hazel Marston, you did all that in one minute!"

"You stretched it," laughed Hazel, breathless with the race.

"Not one second," denied Miss Heywood, "and if my room looks tidier than yours today it is simply because I never, from the hour it was taught me, have forgotten to give the backward glance as I reached my door. Tell me now," and she took the girl's face in both her hands, "wouldn't it pay to get up just one minute earlier?"—Youth's Companion.

A Hint For the Seamstress.

There is a seamstress in New York who knows how to make butterflies out of ribbon. She can also fashion ribbon violets and other ribbon trimmings. She goes out by the day making them and when she has finished she trims them with lace.

Speaking of her art, she says: "There are dozens of seamstresses that are starving to death. I make my living and am busy every day in the year. Yet I do nothing but make trimmings of ribbon and lace. I take your old lace bits and make them up in charming ways, and I transform your ribbons into ornaments which are priceless when it comes to matters of decoration.

"I would," said she, "if I were a seamstress, learn to make ribbon bows. I would learn the Josephine rosettes, the sash ribbon bows, the Louis Quinze knots and the butterflies. I would also learn how to trim these ribbon ornaments with lace.

"Of course I would learn how to color laces. Recently I took some stained old lace and dipped it until it was a golden yellow. Then I bought a yard of real gold lace and mixed it in with the other. This I made up into ribbon ornaments for the waist, which looked as though they were all made of gold lace.

"I know of no better occupation for the moment than the making of the numerous ribbon ornaments with which the woman of fashion is trimming her gowns."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Woman Who Nags.

There is the woman who nags, and many do without being conscious of it. She is often perfectly well bred in all other respects, but she loves her husband so that she can't help but ply him with questions. The whys and wheres and whens and "I told you so" become a daily routine which exhausts the patience of the best of men. A wise wife should remember that when a thing has once been talked over and thrashed out it is good form at least to let it alone. If it is a fault that must be cured or a habit endured she should remember that men folk are often like Bopeep's lost sheep—"if you let 'em alone they will come home," etc. Constant reference to a fault or a mannerism is the cause of more marital infelicity than the average wife dreams of.

Good manners are happy ways of doing things, and good sense, cheerfulness and tact should guide every woman who bears the honor and dignity of wifehood toward the channel of these happy ways.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Thin Girls and Low Cut Gowns.

A clever little device for concealing the collar bones of the thin girl, at the same time giving her the satisfaction of a decollete neck, is to cut the gown with a point instead of with the regulation round neck. The "V" should start about three inches above the collar bones, quite concealing those ugly "saltcellars" which make life—and full dress—a misery to the bony. The "V" may often be bordered with black velvet ribbon with excellent effect. A deep point of the kind indicated comes quite low enough to be considered decollete, while it mercifully hides defects and looks pretty at the same time.

Carrots Are Nutritious.

Do not forget to serve carrots every little while. To get the best of their flavor, scrub them thoroughly to remove dirt and boil without removing the thin skin. This will slip off like that of a beet if dropped into cold water as soon as cooked. The carrots may then be diced or sliced and served buttered with a cream or butter sauce, or they may be scalloped. Another tasty way is to mash them, season well, form into small cones and, when cold, roll in flour or in egg and breadcrumbs and brown quickly in fat.

Frijoles.

A genuine recipe for frijoles, pronounced friyolles, comes from Mexico to What to Eat. The ingredients are one cupful of Mexican beans, one long red pepper, half a clove of garlic and one long thin slice of bacon. Soak the beans overnight and boil them slowly from eight to ten hours. Add the other ingredients, chopped, one supposes, and bake.

Pots and Pans.

Use a stiff whisk broom for cleaning pots and pans. Pans that are very much discolored and dirty should be filled with cold water, a lump of soda put in and boiled until the adherent matters come off. Then wash each pan with hot water and soap, wipe and put on the stove to dry before putting away.

Boiled Starch.

When making boiled starch stir it round several times with a wax candle. This will prevent the starch sticking to the iron and save much trouble. For light fabrics add a teaspoonful of borax, for it keeps the garments cleaner and gives a good gloss.

Pincushion Foundation.

Felt about an inch thick, such as is sold by saddlers for padding saddles, makes an excellent foundation for a mattress pincushion. As the material is tough it is generally more satisfactory to have the piece cut to measurement by the saddler.

A use for the tops of old golf stockings is to cut them over into roomy mittens, which are very convenient to slip on when making fires, cleaning walks, etc.

When washing boarded floors put a handful of salt into every bucketful of water and you will not be troubled with moths.

Whether scrubbing tables or floors, you should always scrub according to the grain of the wood.

Trim chops carefully before cooking. Never fry them unless breaded.

Clover on Corn Stubble.

Many people think clover will not make a good set on corn stubble land, but this is a mistaken idea, remarks an Illinois farmer. I have thus seeded my corn stubble for years and never had a failure. When the time comes to make the hay the stubbles are so rotten and brittle that they will not in the least interfere, and if the weeds and wheat stubbles were clipped after harvest the hay will be as fine and clean as the finest from a seed bed that was like a garden.

Right Conditions.

Enthusiastic beginners in gardening should beware of the common mistake of starting outdoor operations too soon. Do not try to work the soil when it is too wet nor, on the other hand, delay the operation till it is too dry. Taken just right, the soil will genially second your efforts to put it into a nice mellow condition.

Agriculture in Britain.

A Cabinet Minister is now at the head of the British Board of Agriculture, and since its reorganization in 1903 the Board is stirring up things. Special attention will be given to dairying and sheep raising in the future.

LAMPMAN'S BOYHOOD.

Judge Barron Testifies That He Gave Early Promise of Greatness.

Judge Barron writes in The Globe: The ever-increasing interest in all that relates to the late Archibald Lampman is my excuse for this short letter. Prof. Edgar, quoting from Mr. D. C. Scott, the friend and biographer of poor Lampman (as his older friends and admirers now so often speak of him), gives the impression that in early life Lampman in no way gave promise of his subsequent greatness.

I knew "Little Archy," as his boy companions were wont to call him, when he was but a child, and in my frequent visits to his father's home at Gore's Landing met with him, talked and walked with him very often. He was a delicate, feeble little fellow, and therefore was completely "out of" the rough-and-tumble of schoolboy outdoor life. He would look on when other boy played, but would seldom play himself. His companions always took charge of him, and every boy was taught to help and shield "Little Archy," and they did as they were told, for, I think, they loved him dearly. Each boy, young and old, rejoiced in owning a board plank, on which they nailed a box for a seat, and with a paddle in calm weather would venture far out upon the lake. Of course this led to racing, and on one occasion when a dozen or more were starting out "Little Archy" was seen to try it too. "Go back, Archy! Go back," came, it seemed, from every boy, and every boy forgot his excitement and returned, until the sudden impulse had left their little charge, and he was safe and remained on shore.

Though mentally quick, when his mind became riveted on a subject, yet he was so often away off in "dreamland" that the boys thought him backward, but my father, who observed and thought of him, I think, a great deal, many times remarked that he would become a brilliant boy if his physical strength could be improved. Herein was the trouble, and his early demise was not unexpected by all who knew him during his boy life. He became brilliant, however, in spite of his physical defects, and as a child he gave promise of that beautiful expression, which Canada has been all too slow to recognize. In his walks, which were seldom far, and always slow, for he used a crutch, he would suddenly, after a dreamy silence, break out into some beautiful reference to his surroundings so marvellous that the child seemed to be the master mind of the two. I fancy many and many a time his elders who watched and listened to him, have felt, if not said, "How wonderful and yet how sad."

Here it was at this lovely quiet spot on the shores of Rice Lake, a spot made historical by the late Mrs. Moody, that "Little Archy" discovered to others his beauty of mind, and they who knew him then can easily recall evidences of the early child's promptings in his lines:

"What wouldst thou have for easement after grief,
When the rude world hath used thee with despite,
And care sits at thine elbow day and night,
Filching thy pleasure like a subtle thief?
To me, when life besets me in such wise,
'Tis sweetest to break forth, to drop the chain,
And grasp the freedom of the pleasant earth,
To roam in idleness and sober mirth,
Through summer air and summer lands and drain
The comfort of wide fields unto tired eyes."

Canada's Trade and Commerce.

The report of the Department of Trade and Commerce notes an aggregate increase in the trade of the country of $5,668,000. There has been an increase, it notes, of nearly $18,000,000 in the imports, and a falling off in exports of over $12,000,000. The increase in imports during the year has been general in all important articles, notably among them coal, coke, etc., to the extent of about $4,640,000; sugar and molasses nearly $2,300,000; $1,222,000; wood and manufactures of, $2,400,000; wool and manufactures of, over $1,700,000; electrical apparatus, nearly $800,000.

On the other hand the decrease in exports amounted to over $1,600,000 on animals living; over $800,000 on breadstuffs (wheat); over $1,000,000 on fish; over $4,000,000 on provisions and over $3,000,000 on wood manufactured. There has, however, been an increase in the exports of minor articles, aggregating nearly $8,500,000, leaving a net decrease of $12,328,489. In point of fact, nearly the whole net decrease is attributable to the one item of wheat. The production for export in Manitoba and the Northwest was considerably less than in the previous year. The quantity inspected at Winnipeg was but 40,400,000 bushels as against nearly 52,000,000 the previous year.

"It may perhaps be said that the quantity inspected does not indicate the quantity produced, but it does indicate the quantity produced for export. The great influx of immigration into the Northwest, and the increased acreage prepared for the coming year's crop, would naturally account for the holding back of a larger quantity for consumption and seed than was the case in the previous year, reducing to that extent the quantity available for export.

The total increase in the aggregate trade of the country for the two years from 1873 to 1893 was a little less than $30,000,000, while in the eleven years since 1893 the increase has exceeded $225,000,000, yet there is plenty of room for further expansion.

An increase of $4,500,000 in the imports from British Guiana and the British West Indies is noted. This is due to the shifting in the course of the sugar trade, which "has unquestionably given the Canadian housewife a more satisfactory article than before."

A rather extended report is given of the commercial agencies. It includes a number of very sharp complaints as to Canadian business methods.

LAMPMAN'S BOYHOOD.

Judge Barron Testifies That He Gave Early Promise of Greatness.

Judge Barron writes in The Globe: The ever-increasing interest in all that relates to the late Archibald Lampman is my excuse for this short letter. Prof. Edgar, quoting from Mr. D. C. Scott, the friend and biographer of poor Lampman (as his older friends and admirers now so often speak of him), gives the impression that in early life Lampman in no way gave promise of his subsequent greatness.

I knew "Little Archy," as his boy companions were wont to call him, when he was but a child, and in my frequent visits to his father's home at Gore's Landing met with him, talked and walked with him very often. He was a delicate, feeble little fellow, and therefore was completely "out of" the rough-and-tumble of schoolboy outdoor life. He would look on when other boy played, but would seldom play himself. His companions always took charge of him, and every boy was taught to help and shield "Little Archy," and they did as they were told, for, I think, they loved him dearly. Each boy, young and old, rejoiced in owning a board plank, on which they nailed a box for a seat, and with a paddle in calm weather would venture far out upon the lake. Of course this led to racing, and on one occasion when a dozen or more were starting out "Little Archy" was seen to try it too. "Go back, Archy! Go back," came, it seemed, from every boy, and every boy forgot his excitement and returned, until the sudden impulse had left their little charge, and he was safe and remained on shore.

Though mentally quick, when his mind became riveted on a subject, yet he was so often away off in "dreamland" that the boys thought him backward, but my father, who observed and thought of him, I think, a great deal, many times remarked that he would become a brilliant boy if his physical strength could be improved. Herein was the trouble, and his early demise was not unexpected by all who knew him during his boy life. He became brilliant, however, in spite of his physical defects, and as a child he gave promise of that beautiful expression, which Canada has been all too slow to recognize. In his walks, which were seldom far, and always slow, for he used a crutch, he would suddenly, after a dreamy silence, break out into some beautiful reference to his surroundings so marvellous that the child seemed to be the master mind of the two. I fancy many and many a time his elders who watched and listened to him, have felt, if not said, "How wonderful and yet how sad."

Here it was at this lovely quiet spot on the shores of Rice Lake, a spot made historical by the late Mrs. Moody, that "Little Archy" discovered to others his beauty of mind, and they who knew him then can easily recall evidences of the early child's promptings in his lines:

"What wouldst thou have for easement after grief,
When the rude world hath used thee with despite,
And care sits at thine elbow day and night,
Filching thy pleasure like a subtle thief?
To me, when life bears me in such vise,
'Tis sweetest to break forth, to drop the chain,
And grasp the freedom of the pleasant earth,
To roam in idleness and sober mirth,
Through summer air and summer lands and drain
The comfort of wide fields unto tired eyes."

Canada's Trade and Commerce.

The report of the Department of Trade and Commerce notes an aggregate increase in the trade of the country of $5,668,000. There has been an increase, it notes, of nearly $18,000,000 in the imports, and a falling off in exports of over $12,000,000. The increase in imports during the year has been general on all important articles, notably among them coal, coke, etc., to the extent of about $4,640,000; sugar and molasses nearly $2,300,000; tea, $1,222,000; wood and manufactures of, $2,400,000; wool and manufactures of, over $1,700,000; electrical apparatus, nearly $800,000.

On the other hand the decrease in exports amounted to over $1,600,000 on animals living; over $10,800,000 on breadstuffs (wheat); over $1,000,000 on fish; over $4,000,000 on provisions and over $8,000,000 on wood manufactured. There has, however, been an increase in the exports of minor articles, aggregating nearly $8,500,000, leaving a net total decrease of $12,328,489. In point of fact, nearly the whole net decrease is attributable to the one item, wheat. The production for export in Manitoba and the Northwest was considerably less than in the previous year. The quantity inspected at Winnipeg was but 40,400,000 bushels as against nearly 52,000,000 the previous year.

"It may perhaps be said that the quantity inspected does not indicate the quantity produced, but it does indicate the quantity produced for export. The great influx of immigration into the Northwest, and the increased acreage prepared for the coming year's crop, would naturally account for the holding back of a larger quantity for consumption and seed than was the case in the previous year, reducing to that extent the quantity available for export."

The total increase in the aggregate trade of the country for the twenty years from 1873 to 1893 was a little less than $30,000,000, while for the eleven years since 1893 the increase has exceeded $225,000,000, yet there is plenty of room for further expansion.

An increase of $4,500,000 in the imports from British Guiana and the British West Indies is noted. This is due to the shifting in the course of the sugar trade, which "has unquestionably given the Canadian housewife a more satisfactory article than before."

A rather extended report is given of the commercial agencies. It includes a number of very sharp complaints as to Canadian business methods.

IN THE DAIRY

In a bulletin recently issued by the Michigan experiment station John Michels, instructor in dairying, department of agriculture, says of the care of dairy utensils:

A room for the purpose of washing the dairy utensils is a very important part of the equipment. It should be provided with shelves, some good washing substance, as sal soda, hot and cold water and if possible steam. The shelves should be placed near a large window where the tinware is exposed to the disinfecting action of the sunlight. The cleaning of dairy utensils is best conducted as follows:

First, rinse with warm or perhaps preferably cold water. Never use boiling or hot water at first or the milk will become cemented to the utensil. Second, scrub with moderately hot water containing some sal soda. The washing should be done with brushes rather than cloth because the bristles enter into any crevices present which the cloth cannot possibly reach. Furthermore, it is very difficult to keep the cloth clean. Third, scald thoroughly with steam or hot water after rinsing out the water in which the sal soda was used. After scalding the utensils should be inverted on the shelves without wiping and allowed to remain in this place until ready to use. This will leave the vessels in a practically sterile condition. Fourth, if it is possible to turn the inside of the vessels to the sun in a place where there is no dust, then it is desirable to expose the utensils during the day to the strong germicidal action of the direct sun's rays.

In washing strainers or cloths used for straining care should be exercised in placing these in boiling water a few minutes after thorough cleaning. From the boiling water they are spread out to dry in a clean and dustless place.

The Sanitary Milk Pail.

The sanitary milk pail here reproduced from bulletin No. 22 of the Michigan experiment station is provided with a spout which permits ready emptying, and it will also be noticed that it is covered with a cap during the process of milking. The cap is shown at the right. The ring at the left fastens the strainer, which should consist of a double layer of cheesecloth inclosing a layer of absorbent cotton. The purpose of the cotton is to retain fine hairs and any particles of dirt that are not dissolved by the milk. It should be renewed at each milking. The value of a partially closed pail is evidenced by the reduced surface, which has a tendency to keep out many of the micro organisms which would otherwise drop into the pail during milking. To illustrate, a half closed top would have the effect of reducing the contamination from this source about 50 per cent.

It is well to say in this connection that there are many objections to the so called sanitary milk pail, it without doubt reduces the contamination when the contamination occurs, but when cleanliness is rigorously practiced no doubt the disadvantages exceed the benefits. However, many of our best dairymen use it continually.

The Dairy Cow's Food.

With a view to getting the most out of the dairy cow a good, sensible system must be followed in feeding. Proper feeding must begin with the calf and continue right through her life. If the calf is not a promising one it is better to dispose of her and devote the attention to others. If she is worth rearing for the dairy she is worth all the attention that can be bestowed upon her. That is the theory we must go on.

The calf should be growing steadily so that at two years she is ready to begin her life work. If allowed to go beyond this period she will use the food given to her to lay on fat. This is not desirable. The dairyman must fight against this continually.

The Clean Barnyard.

A clean, well drained barnyard is an essential factor in the production of sanitary milk, for where cows are obliged to wade in mire and filth it is easy to foretell what the quality of the milk will be. In order to secure a good barnyard the slope should be away from the stable or at least not toward the stable, and it should be covered with gravel or cinders. If the manure is not taken directly from the stables to the fields, it should be placed where the cows cannot have access to it.—Professor John Michels.

Aberdeen-Angus In the Dairy.

In Australia the Aberdeen-Angus cows are highly esteemed for dairy purposes. A correspondent, writing to a Scotch exchange, says that pure bred heifers are not to be had in sufficient numbers and that breeders are mating the Angus bull with Ayrshire cows to obtain good milkers. At the royal show at Sydney in 1902 a cow of this cross was champion in the dairy test and gave in three days 134.14 pounds of milk, yielding 6.95 pounds of butter fat.

PREVENTED INDIAN WAR.

Thrilling Incident Related by Missionary Raley—Peace Brought About in Methodist Mission Church.

A thrilling incident, showing the influence of the Gospel among the Indians of Northern British Columbia, was related in Centennial Methodist Church, Toronto, recently by Rev. G. H. Raley, who has been a missionary for many years at Kitamaat, B. C., which has received some prominence of late in connection with the selection of the Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

For a great many years previous to the occurrence which Rev. Mr. Raley referred to, about twenty square miles of hunting ground had been in dispute between two crests or clans of Indians, known as the Eagles and Beavers, all of whom lived in Kitamaat. Councils of chiefs and other means resorted to in the interests of peace failed, and finally it was decided to settle the matter by a trial at arms in the old-fashioned savage method. Accordingly, knives were sharpened, and other instruments of Indian warfare were prepared for the butchery which appeared inevitable. The fight was to take place on Saturday night.

In the evening a young chief hurried to the mission and informed Mr. Raley that the two clans would surely fight that night, and to add emphasis to his statement, drew his own big knife from its sheath, and laid it, newly sharpened and glittering, on the table beside the missionary.

"Listen," he said, "and you can hear them chanting their war songs. They have also put on their war paint."

"This must never be," said the missionary, who finally asked the young chief to go up and down the streets with blue paper in his hands. Blue paper was, to the Indians, the emblem of the authority given to some missionaries by the Provincial Government to deal summarily with offenders. He returned with the information that no person took any notice of that, and that the chants were continuing.

The missionary then sent the young chief with a piece of blue paper to the leaders of each clan. They interpreted this rightly as a summons to appear before the missionary. They did so. Mr. Raley explained to them that an open conflict between the two clans meant that a warship would be sent from Esquimalt and their villages would be exterminated by the shells, and leaders taken to the capitol of the Province, and, perhaps, hanged. This failed to turn them. He used moral suasion and that also failed. "We must fight to-night" they said, "but the mission will not be touched."

The conference continued until midnight and then the missionary told them they could not fight on the Sabbath, and that they must wait until Monday. To them the Sabbath was sacred, and each chief in turn promised that there should be peace throughout the day, and that their respective crests would come to church morning, afternoon and evening.

Sunday forenoon the two clans filed in, occupying as never before different parts of the church or mission. By intermarriage it frequently happened that both clans were represented in one family, consequently in that church, clans were not only separated, but family ties were broken, for crest was more sacred to them than family. The morning service left them absolutely unturned in their determination. They returned in the afternoon and occupied the same places. As members of either clan perchanced to look across to the other clan, the fire of hatred fairly flashed from their eyes. The afternoon meeting closed with no result beyond apparently a more determined purpose than ever to draw the knife. The evening service came. As the missionary unfolded the Gospel story, the people grew intent and then interested; eyes began to moisten and before the service closed, the warring chiefs broke down and wept. The members of the clans followed their leaders, and peace was restored. That night in the homes of the Indians war chants gave place to hymns. Next morning the canoes started off to their various hunting grounds, and the two crests thereafter dwelt in peace.

The Geology of Toronto.

In Toronto recently, Prof. A. P. Coleman delivered a most interesting address on the "Geology of Toronto." He began by stating that, so far as geologists were able to search, Toronto was rich in evidences of the prehistoric times. There could be little doubt that where Toronto now stands was, millions of years ago, washed by the great sea, which stretched down to Brazil, and that there was a continent where now is Hudson's Bay. In those days there existed none of the higher types of life. He then traced what the geology of the district, especially the Don and Humber Valley, revealed, of periods of time during which immense changes were in progress on the earth's surface.

Thousands of years ago there had been a river from the Georgian Bay to some point near Scarboro Heights, for every geological find and configuration proved this, and it was after some upheaval and change that the water was forced round by Lake Erie and the St. Clair River. During the ice age all of Canada, except the Klondike, was covered with ice, which, in the Toronto district, probably rose to several thousand feet in height. This first ice period was succeeded by a period of vegetation, which, in turn, was again succeeded by an ice period, and in this there was matter for thought—would a third or another ice period follow? After the first ice period Lake Ontario was very much larger than it is now, and had two islands, one at East Toronto, and one at the Junction. Scientists had called the larger body of water Lake Iroquois. In those days, which were probably 17,000 years ago, the caribou and other huge animals roamed the forest and provided food for the Indians. One of the interesting features of the address was the description Prof. Coleman gave of some of the fishes and other animals which lived in those prehistoric days.

SCHOOLMAM EXPERIENCE WITH LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

How Her Simple Request for a Towel-Roller Set the Wheels of the Cumbrous Municipal Machine in Motion—Before It Was Secured an Official Visit and Vigorous Correspondence Were Required—An Astonished Official.

During the summer of 1904 the London County Council forwarded some new round towels for the use of the infants' department of a National School in a remote suburb of London. The schoolmistress rejoiced in the acquisition, but, unfortunately, the school possessed no roller on which to hang them—the towels hitherto in use being of a shape that enabled them to be suspended from a nail in the wall. She therefore requested her school managers to provide her with a towel-roller.

This simple request set the wheels of the cumbrous municipal machine in motion. The managers discussed the question, and were of opinion that a towel-roller was not a part of the fabric, but came under the head of furniture, for which the Council were responsible. So the secretary was asked to inform the Council of the need of the towel-roller, at the same time offering to obtain the article and have it fixed for the Council if they were permitted to do so.

It was ascertained that a new towel-roller could be obtained for 2½d.

After a few weeks had passed an inspector from the Embankment journeyed out to this remote infant school—return fare, first-class, 2s 9d—apparently to satisfy the Council that the towel-roller was really wanted. More weeks elapsed, and nothing was heard of the matter. So the secretary wrote again to the Council to ascertain how the question was progressing. In reply he was informed that "the Council's decision with regard to the supply of a towel-roller was that 'the stores department had been requested to expedite the delivery of the article.'"

This was encouraging, and the patient teacher awaited its arrival in pleasant anticipation. A few weeks later she received the gratifying news that the roller had actually been forwarded. But by accident the long-expected roller was delivered at another school, much to the surprise of the teacher in charge, who laid it upon a shelf, thinking that the Council in its wisdom, had some special purpose in view in sending her a towel-roller that she had not asked for.

Meantime a vigorous correspondence was proceeding between the infants' mistress and the Council, and eventually the roller that had strayed was found and the mystery of its disappearance cleared up. But when it ultimately reached its destination it turned out to be only an old one—a towel-roller that had been used before and discarded by someone.

Nevertheless, the old roller was better than no roller, and the happy teacher, rejoicing in the pleasures of possession, promptly called in a man with a hammer and four stout nails. The thing was fixed firmly to the wall, and the young unwashed revelled in the joys of a round-towel.

In course of time another official appeared upon the scene. He was an executive officer who had come down to "see about putting up a towel-roller that had been supplied by the Education Committee of the London County Council."

His astonishment was great when he found the article already in position. His duty forestalled, the work done.

But the question arose, who was to pay for the fixing? This was a knotty point, and evidently occasioned considerable anxiety, for yet another official visit was made some days later to instruct the mistress to pay the bill for fixing, amounting to sixpence, send up the receipt, and the amount would be refunded. This has been done, and doubtless the Council will return the sixpence some day.

Burns Got the Silver.

Bobby Burns' associations with Carlisle were of an active personal character, as there are interesting anecdotes to prove. It was at Carlisle that he fell into the company of three farmers, and in the course of their conviviality the farmers agreed with Burns to try their hand at versemaking, and all four deposited half a crown on the table for the one who wrote the best. Burns, by the way, on entering the room, was welcomed by the others as "Johnny Peep." What the farmers wrote is not known; but the following was Burns' production, and of course he lifted the "siller":

I, Johnny Peep,
Saw three fat sheep,
And these three sheep saw me;
Half a crown apiece
Will pay for their fleece,
And so Johnny Peep goes free.

Sir C. C. Knollys, K. C. M. G.

Sir Clement Courtenay Knollys, K. C. M. G., at present Colonial Secretary of Trinidad and Tobago, who has been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Leeward Islands, in succession to Sir Gerald Strickland, appointed to be Governor of Tasmania, was born in 1849, the fourth son of the late Rev. W. H. Erskine Knollys, honorary Canon of Canterbury, says The London Star. From Magdalen College, Oxford, he went into the Colonial Civil Service in 1874, and has at various times administered the Governments of Barbados, St. Lucia and Grenada, in addition to his present appointment at Trinidad and Tobago. In his university days he was a notable oarsman, and rowed in the Oxford and Cambridge races of 1872 and 1873. He won the Diamond Sculls at Henley in 1872, and the Goblets in 1873, and was champion amateur sculler in 1872.

Antiquity of the Cotswold.

The Cotswold must be one of the oldest breeds of sheep, for tradition has it that King Richard I. (1189-1199) sent animals of the breed to Spain, and that it was from these, always famous for the excellence of their wool, the Merino breed was raised, which breed was introduced in England at the latter end of the eighteenth century.

Cream Cheese.

To make delicious cream cheese after an English dairy recipe take a quart of sweet milk, adding a cupful of cream if a rich cheese is desired, and add a few drops of liquid rennet. This rennet may be had in little tabloids also. Place the milk in a warm corner for twenty-four hours. Throw in a little salt and stir well. Wring out in ice water a napkin or linen cloth and put the cheese in it, tying up tightly. Hang this up to drain. Change the napkins at night and leave hanging. The cheese is ready to eat in twenty-four hours.

Advanced Fur Novelties and Handsome Gown Fabrics.

There is one piece of news that has leaked out before its time, as it were, and that is that velvet and velveteen will enjoy a great vogue this winter. This is always good news, for the becomingness of velvet, especially in conjunction with furs, is indisputable, and every woman is aware that she will look her best in a combination of the two.

It is decided, too, that ermine is to take premier rank among the coming furs, yielding pre-eminence only to sable. As a lining for those who can afford it, it will hold its own against every fur in the market.

Velvet and velveteen gowns will be smartest made in directoire and Louis XV. hunting styles, while the princess gown created from costly velours is regal in the extreme.

A good many fashionable tailors are making the real Newmarket coat, which always requires perfect fitting and a tall, well proportioned woman to show it to advantage.

A daring but effective mixture in fall colors is that composed of orange and blue, and some of the blue serge Eton coats have double breasted waistcoats of orange cloth, the otherwise plain serge coat and skirt being braided in black in a narrow twisted scroll design.

The illustration shows an exquisite wrap of plum velours lined with ermine. The long shouldered effect widens out into pagoda sleeves trimmed with oriental embroideries.

LINGERIE NOVELTIES.

The Craze of the Moment Is For Thin Underwear.

The craze of the moment for lingerie de luxe is shown in beautiful and dainty clear white French lawn worked with patterns of the simplest description. The finest hand stitchery is used in making up the garments. Every woman likes dainty lingerie. A little patience in stitchery and the following of French designs solve the problem of cost at once.

A charming simple nightgown is made of lawn with a square or round lawn or lace collar cut in points. Collars admit of a good deal of variety, for they may be of the same fabric as the nightgown itself, or they may be composed of lace, embroidery or lace and ribbon insertion with cuffs to match. Here many of the safe remnants will prove useful.

For practical everyday wear lingerie of fine French linen, hand embroidered and buttonhole stitched, is excellent.

The manufacturers of shoes have added one article to the list that could be bought and included in a costume of "one color." Only a few seasons ago it was considered ultra fashionable to have slippers for evening wear match the gowns with which they were worn, and colored shoes for street wear were almost unheard of. Now in any high class shoe store one can buy white, champagne color, tan, brown, blue, green, red and violet colored shoes in several shades, the most fashionable tones being in evidence. To be sure, there are some women who have their shoes dyed to order, but as a rule they can be secured in almost any color. Huge silver or gilt eyelets are made in laced shoes, and fancy buttons are quite a feature in the buttoned models.

Herewith illustrated is an attractive shirt waist made with a V shaped yoke outlined with braid.

Sunday Card Playing Laws.

There was a time when people in England were forbidden by law to play at cards, even in their own houses, on Sunday. In the royal proclamation against vice, profaneness and immorality, read every session and assize, is the following passage: "And we do hereby strictly enjoin and prohibit all our loving subjects, of what degree or quality soever, from playing on the Lord's day at dice, cards or any other game whatsoever, either in public or private houses or other places whatsoever."

UP TO DATE MODES.

The New Autumn Petticoat—Some Smart Walking Suits.

The underskirt worn with a toilet has much to do with its general good effect. To be a success it must be faultlessly fitted, quite flat at the top and closely adjusted about the hips. A flare at the bottom is absolutely necessary to give the desired sweep to the outside skirt, so the deep ruffle at the edge is elaborately trimmed with plaitings, quilling and tiny flounces. Plaitings are edged with lace on the dressy skirts, and on very elegant examples motifs of lace are applied with silk cut away to give an airy appearance.

Green and blue changeable taffeta silk underskirts will be very popular, elaborately trimmed with either blue or green velvet ribbon put on in several rows of different widths.

Very smart are the walking suits made of covert cloth, with skirt cut perfectly plain and the close fitting three-quarter coat strapped.

Boots in all styles, but particularly with very pointed toes and Cuban heels, are made of the new and popular shiny leather.

A novelty in gloves is of the gauntlet variety, worn with the gauntlet thrown down and lined with a contrasting colored kid—for instance, white if the body of the glove is black, and vice versa.

Shown in the cut is a stunning gown of black taffeta. Over the silk bloused corsage is a bertha effect carried out by means of alternate rows of cream cluny lace and puffings of taffeta. The lace forms the collar, and a strip goes down the front of the plaited yoke and also trims the puffed elbow sleeves. Above the full gathered skirt is a girdle of the silk fastened with looped bows of taffeta.

Dainty Blouses For the Home—The Winter Evening Gown.

Pretty blouses are constructed of Russian lace insertion and bands of ribbon about two inches wide. The former is handmade and very strong and, while possessing certain distinctive features of its own, resembles both cluny and guipure.

These lace waists are mounted over a colored silk lining made full like the blouse itself. A dainty waist of this kind is worn over a slip of burnt orange, the girdle of soft taffeta combining several shades of yellow toning into the orange.

Among the newest examples of evening gowns is one carried out in a delicate shade of mauve taffeta with a little detached floral pattern in pale pink and green. It has a short train and a triangle panel front, adorned at intervals with knots of almond green velvet ribbon. The bodice is long and pointed, with two wide flounces of oriental lace at the decolletage, and the sleeves are composed of three full puffs to the elbow, while the whole is completed by watteau streamers of almond green velvet falling from the center of the back.

The blouse shown in the cut is created from a very soft cream cloth. The empiecement and high cuffs are made of embroidered tulle over white silk. The band of stitched cloth about the yoke and over the shoulders terminates in pendants of passementerie, which are ornamented with gold buttons. A trimming of white and green cord on the collar makes a pretty finish.

WILL THEY MISS YOU?

Question to Which Everyone Should Endeavor to Give Affirmative Answer.

I used to see him as he passed the fare box in the crowded car. His voice was cheery and his face was lit by a smile, and that man dispelled the discontent of the swaying strap, the crowded seat, and the cold, by the gladness of his voice and smile.

Time after time I've seen him, and his work was hard, for the hour was a trying one, but he rose above it with a smile.

One day I did not see him at that hour.

He had gone and I missed that man.

Would you be missed?

Would they miss you if you were to leave your office, that desk that knows you so well? Would they be lonesome or would they be glad? Would that one who works next to you miss you for the kindnesses you used to show him, for the help you rendered him when he didn't know just what to do? Will they miss you?

Would they miss you in the shop? Did you do the job a little better than the other fellow, and were you willing—willing to learn, to take advice—willing to work hard and wait a little after the whistle blew if the work was pressing? I say, would the boss miss you in the shop, and would the fellows be sorry to see you take your hat and coat and go?

Would they miss you in the church? Would there be an empty pew and the pause and a silence in the prayer meeting, a pause and a silence that once was filled by you?

Would they miss you in the legal circle, for your ability and for your skill—for your genius at unravelling and following a clue that will clear your client and win his case?

Would they miss you in the school where you teach—would some heart, some scholar's heart, wonder where you were, and, wondering, wish for the sound of your voice again?

And would they miss you in the pulpit if those lips should cease their preaching, and would they long for the counsels which lift and live?

Would they miss you in your town, at your corner, and on your street, and in your lodging? Would they look for you with regret, a regret akin to mourning?

Would the town be poorer and the street less lively, and your boarding-house more lonesome, just because you had gone? Would they miss you there?

And would they miss you in the home, young man? Would there be more work for mother to do, more lifting tubs, more bringing up the coal, more sifting, more shoveling? If you went away would they miss you there?

Young woman, would they miss you at home? And father and mother, in their declining years, would they miss you much, or are you seldom in; would there be more washing—more ironing—more mending, if you went away? Do you lift the burden, you women; would they miss you in the home?

And, father, would they miss you, knowing that you were courageous in the midst of adversity, gentle in the midst of trial, and strong to the weak?

Ah, mother, and would they miss you? Have you that touch that no one else may give—that good-night kiss—that arm around the neck—the hand that helps—would they miss you, mother, for this?

And you, my friend, will they miss you anywhere—will they miss you when you go?—Charles F. Raymond, in The Star.

The Governor Made a Hit.

Earl Grey made a great hit at the opening of Parliament, writes an Ottawa correspondent. Part of the speech he had evidently composed himself. There is every reason to believe that, down to the words "It is gratifying to note that the trade, etc.," His Excellency actually did it off his own bat, after which the Cabinet, according to constitutional usage, took a hand in and provided the usual quantity of dry bones that a speech from the Throne contains. His Excellency, however, made no difference between his own part and the other. He read one part just as well as the other, and he read it in a fine, vibrant voice that could be heard in every part of the chamber—a great improvement on Lord Minto, who slurred it over as a kind of solemn foolishness. Earl Grey took more time and was more impressive He gave the effect of believing that there was really something between the lines. He raised it almost to the level of oratory by his careful elocution. He paid attention to the expression marks and allowed his voice to rise and fall at the proper places. It was a distinct innovation, and people whispered to each other, "Here is a Governor-General that may be caught thinking some day." His Excellency did it all over in French, and the favorable impression was redoubled. His declamation was just as effective in one language as in the other. The French members said that his accent was irreproachable.

Colonel Hanbury-Williams aroused a weird interest of his own. He is the successor of Major Maude, but as all soldiers look very much alike to us, it is impossible to arrive at any definite conclusions on first sight. His stride is a little longer than the major's, but that may be set down to the fact that he has got his step as colonel. His bows, too, are a little shorter. They say that the colonel has ideas of his own, but what they are and how they work out is another story.

The Baby's Bath.

The domestic ingenuity of the man in this story from a London magazine may suggest something to economical Canadian householders. He entered a hardware store and asked the price of the small bathtubs in the window.

"Two seventy-five."

"Whew!" exclaimed the customer. "I guess until prices come down we'll have to go on washing baby in the coal scuttle!"

Making Fire.

When it is considered how old the world's civilization is it seems surprising that man should have only so very recently learned how to make fire easily. The primitive flint and steel method is practically but of the last generation, and that does not appear so very far ahead of friction with wood. It is not astonishing, on the whole, that savages should commonly suppose that fire really exists in wood and stone since it is from these everyday materials that they secure a portion of Prometheus' precious theft from heaven.

SOUP SCIENCE.

The Dishes That Are Prepared With and Without Stock.

"Many people wonder," said an old fashioned housekeeper, "why we begin a heavy dinner with soup. It is because the stomach is tired and needs a mild stimulant before being taxed. We find in soup, especially in clear soup, a tonic rather than a nutrient. This is the reason clear soups are served for heavy dinners and purees and cream soups for luncheon. The cream soups and purees, with bread and butter, make a fairly nutritious meal. There are two kinds of soups—those with stock and those without. Stock is the extract from meats. Beef extract acts as a stimulant, bringing the digestive juice into play. In it we get only the flavor and the coloring of the beef, but no nutrient.

"A dog fed only on beef extract died of starvation. It is used in sickness as a conserver of energy, to keep up the vital forces until nature can repair the weaknesses. Bouillon is the clear soup made from beef extract, delicately seasoned. Brown soup is made from stock, which is two-thirds lean beef and one-third fat and bone. In the bone we find the gelatin and mineral matter.

"The best cut for stock is the midway cut of the shank, in which is found the round bone with the marrow. Brown soups are made of this stock clarified and seasoned with vegetables and herbs. White soups are made from stock of fish or chicken. Consomme is made from two or three meats and is clear. Mutton soup or broth is invaluable for invalids in convalescence, especially in fever cases, through its sustaining qualities.

"The soups without stocks are the creams, bisque and puree. The last named is seasoned with vegetables or fish and pressed through the puree sieve, with tissues of the vegetables left in the soup. Bisque is made with shellfish or vegetables, with bits of the fish or dice of the vegetable left in."—Indianapolis News.

DESK SETS.

How a Girl May Make a Pretty One For Her Bedroom.

Pretty desk sets for bedroom use can be made at home. Every girl likes a pretty room, and with a very little effort on her part she can have one by taking pains to arrange it and choosing tastefully the things she puts in it.

This useful letter box, to hold stationery and old letters, is made out of cardboard covered with flowered cretonne. You first cut the pasteboard, which must be of a good thickness, in pieces the size you require for your box, then lay them on your material and cut pieces of that just a little larger than the board. A plain lining is used for the inside, and pieces of it must be cut the same as the flowered material.

The cardboard is held between a piece of the plain and a piece of the flowered material, and it is whipped closely all over the edge. When all the pieces have been done they are joined together, and the partitions, which are cut out of the colored cardboard exactly the size to fit inside of the box, are slipped in place.

The cover of the box is then made in the same way, a very pretty plan being to leave an oval opening in the material where you can slip in a photograph or picture.

To make a really pretty finish to the edges a narrow strip of fancy gold braid is sometimes used as trimming.

Laundering Fine Doilies.

Laundering fine linen doilies is attended with some difficulty, especially when the doilies are fringed. Combing out the fringe after ironing results disastrously in a very short time if the linen is really fine. A clever woman discovered this method, which, after all, may not be new. Great discoveries seldom are. After rinsing the doilies they are floated one by one in a dish of clean, cool water. When the fringes are perfectly smooth and flexible, slip a piece of manila paper or blotting paper under the doily and lift the whole thing out of the water. Let the doily dry on the paper, and the fringe will need very little combing.

Perfuming Clothing.

Queen Alexandra's laces, linens and silks are perfumed by a method which almost any woman can copy. The drawers in which they are kept are lined with white paper strewn with rose petals. On this is placed a layer of the fabrics to be scented, over that a layer of rose leaves, and so on in alternation until the drawer is filled. Over all a sheet of tissue paper is spread. At the end of twenty-four hours everything in the drawer will have a delicate perfume.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

It was in no enviable mood that he returned to Reine. She was sitting by the window, her beautiful golden head bent dejectedly on her hand. She was just beginning to realize that life was not the golden dream that she had pictured it.

She rose mechanically as he entered and advanced toward him, an open letter in her white hand.

"It is from papa, Waldemar," she said, timidly. "He says he has boxed up all my belongings and sent them to me. Here is a list of the articles. He says that in future a rigid silence shall be maintained between us, and that he will never forgive me."

Reine's diamonds—her father's and also Bernard Chesleigh's magnificent gift to her—headed the list.

Her superb wardrobe, her books, bric-a-brac and pictures, even her pony and phaeton, were to be sent her—all she had ever possessed at Fairlawn—together with a check her poor dead mother had placed to her credit when Reine was a small child.

It had accumulated with gathering interest to the snug little sum of eight thousand dollars now.

Waldemar Waldron's eyes brightened as he read—eight thousand dollars. Ah, it was certainly a godsend to him.

"How much are your diamonds worth, love?" he said, passing one arm caressingly around the slender waist, and assuming the old lover-like fondness.

"They are worth at least ten thousand," said Reine. "There is a pair of beautiful solitaire earrings, diamond studded bracelets, and a superb necklace of small, white stones."

There was the stylish turnout and the pictures. That meant a thousand more in cash. No wonder Waldemar Waldron, whose god was glittering gold, was highly elated at the gold mine that was to be laid at his feet.

Ah! what a glorious life they would have of it while the money lasted. That afternoon, just as the sun was setting, Reine received the heavy-loaded boxes her father had sent her from Fairlawn. A trusted servant was sent on before with the cases of diamonds and the check her mother had left her. Who had dreamed, in that distant past, that the day would come when poor Reine would need it so sadly.

Waldemar Waldron set himself to work at once to regain the love and esteem in Reine's heart that he had shaken so fatally. She was so young and so trusting, and loved him so, and was so pleased to look on the bright side of life, that the task he set for himself was not difficult to accomplish.

He took her in his arms, praying her to forgive the hasty words he had uttered that morning, telling her that she ought to have known he never meant them.

The upshot of the whole matter was, that they made up their differences with love's forgiving kisses, and again poor Reine was in Paradise; Waldemar was so kind and affectionate to her.

It was like beginning their honeymoon over again; and after all, she had heard that the course of true love did not run smooth at all times, and that the making up between lovers was all the sweeter for the little rift in the lute of domestic felicity.

That evening Waldemar took Reine to the opera. They were the cynosure of all eyes. Many of Waldemar's companions of the club were there; and as they looked at the exquisitely lovely face of the little blonde bride, more than one of them thought of the remark her handsome, dissipated young husband had made—of putting her on the stage, while she, poor little soul, sat beside him, never dreaming why he turned so shamefacedly away from them and riveted his eyes so fixedly on the beauties behind the footlights.

Reine's meteoric happiness lasted just the few hours she sat beside Waldemar Waldron in the crowded theatre.

On the morrow a strange and unlooked-for event was to happen.

CHAPTER XVII.

When Bernard Chesleigh returned to Fairlawn he refrained from mentioning to the general the episode that had taken place at the club that afternoon.

For long hours he sat by the glowing embers of the library grate buried in his own thoughts.

Now that his meeting with Waldemar Waldron was over and past, he wondered how he had so far controlled his bitter anger against the man who had won Reine from him in so cowardly and dastardly a manner, as to refrain from challenging him to a duel on sight.

He had realized that a blow struck at Waldemar Waldron would pierce Reine's heart first.

What a pitiful trial it must have been to Reine to have greeted him in the plight in which he had returned home to her. With all her love, how her pure soul must have shrunk from him.

He had no respect for his young bride, that he dared return to his old vices before he had been wedded a fortnight? How Bernard's blood boiled with indignation as he thought of poor Reine's humiliation!

"I could not endure remaining here and witnessing all that I should be compelled to see," he ruminated. "I must leave Fairlawn and this vicinity—at once."

It was a sorrowful parting between General Hastings and Bernard Chesleigh, yet the general did not press him to remain. He well knew the true reason that actuated his immediate departure for New York city.

He was young, wealthy and energetic; he would be sure to hold his own in the great metropolis, if any one could.

Without even mentioning the name so dear to him, Bernard Chesleigh turned away, little caring whether he ever saw the hills and vales of old Virginia again or not. He was equally indifferent as to what became of him.

Some men would have sought to drown sorrow in dissipation. He was of the class that turned to hard work as a panacea for all human ills.

He had scarcely been in New York a week, when, glancing over the personals in a moment of leisure one morning he read, in extreme astonishment and dismay, that Mr. Waldemar Waldron and wife—nee Miss Hastings, daughter of General Hastings, of Virginia—had taken up their residence at No. —— Madison Avenue and that they intended to make New York city their future home.

Bernard Chesleigh laid down the paper with a disturbed face. He had exiled himself from home and friends in order that he might be spared meeting them; but now here they were in New York city. Of course, if they went into society, he could not help meeting them sooner or later. How unkind of fate to have brought them here.

He was not a block of marble nor an icicle in human form, such as we often read of in the pages of very prosy books. He was simply a man, who had loved with all the fulness and passionate strength of his noble nature, and it was no light matter to look forward to meeting the woman he loved as the wife of his rival.

When Waldemar Waldron received Reine's belongings from Fairlawn he turned every available article into cash, and proposed to Reine that they should leave Waldron Towers at once for New York city.

"We shall see plenty of life there," he said, enthusiastically. "The metropolis is always gay in winter."

He well knew that the name of General Hastings would be received into the best and most exclusive society.

They took up their residence on one of the most fashionable avenues; and there Waldemar Waldron commenced in earnest the life suited to his taste—a gay life and a merry one as long as the cash lasted.

Reine had not the faintest notion of where the money came from to furnish all the luxury they were enjoying. She quite imagined that her young husband must have some sort of an income. It never occurred to her that it was the money realized from her check and the sale of her diamonds, that furnished all this.

Waldemar Waldron was quite right in his surmise. The elite society of New York opened its arms to General Hastings' daughter and her handsome young husband.

But with this new life came quite a change for the pretty young bride. At first Waldemar began simply to neglect her. At last he spent whole nights, and sometimes days at a time, away from her.

He considered it quite a fine lark to insinuate, wherever it was not known otherwise, that he was single free to woo and win any fair maid who might please his fancy.

"It could do no harm to Reine, carrying out this little joke," he told himself, complacently.

He liked to see young girls' eyes brighten at his approach—to know that their hearts beat quicker at the sound of his voice; and that their blushes were for him. Of course, all this would be at an end if they were to find out he was married; so, why inform them of the fact when the information was not called for?

When they had no visitors at home, or had no invitations out, Waldemar Waldron spent his time as he liked. Perhaps it was quite as well that Reine did not know how he spent the hours that she found so sad and lonely.

Three months had passed; and those months had made a sad change in Reine. She was thinner and paler. The lovely blue eyes looked as though showers of hot tears had dimmed their lustre. The fair, rounded cheek had lost its delicate contour; and if one came upon her suddenly, they might have seen tears on the lovely, drooping lashes.

But she was so loyal to her handsome, debonair husband; she would not even own to herself that she was disappointed in her marriage. She was so young and loving. She longed for kind words and caresses. She longed for such expressions of fondness as Waldemar had shown her before she had married him.

It almost seemed to her that the whole world knew that her husband did not care for her, and that she was a neglected, desolate bride.

"It was a sad thing for one so young to be so lonely, and to be so utterly neglected. Once or twice she had timidly gone to Waldemar, with tears in her lovely eyes, to plead with him to show a little more consideration toward her.

He caught up his hat and gloves, looking at the tear-stained, grieved face with an impatient frown.

"If there is anything I do detest, it is a crying woman," he observed, angrily. "Do not repeat this scene again, Reine. I really cannot endure it. I shall not return home until I feel quite certain you are over this weeping scene."

He strode out of the room, and again the wretched girl-wife fell face downward on the velvet carpet. There, long afterward, the servant found her, unconscious still.

In vain they chafed the little white hands and blue-veined temples. The fluttering breath grew fainter and fainter. Kindly hands unfastened the amber satin dress she wore, and took from the twining golden curls the pale roses that clustered among them, laying her on the lace-draped couch, and a physician was quickly summoned.

When he heard the moans and bitter sighs that quivered on the pale lips of the miserable young bride, he knew perfectly well it was not a case for drugs.

"Who could minister to a mind diseased?" He left her a quieting compound, and recommended that her husband should be sent for.

In vain messengers were sent here and there for him. Waldemar Waldron was not to be found. That evening, while strangers gathered around Reine's pillow—who had summoned the physician again, for she was growing rapidly worse—at the self-same moment the physician was gravely counting the strokes of Reine's pulse, solemnly shaking his head, while those around her were weeping silently—at that moment Waldemar Waldron was seated at the head of a banquet table, odorous with the breath of roses, making a speech of welcome to the gay, piquant opera singer whose dashing beauty had taken New York by storm, and in whose honor he had given this elegant supper.

It was three days ere the notion occurred to him that it was about time to return home to Reine.

He quite expected a storm of reproaches and tears as he entered his wife's pretty blue-and-gold morning-room. The slender, girlish form he expected to see was not there. He ran lightly up the stairs to her boudoir. She was seated, in a white cashmere wrapper, before the fire, gazing thoughtfully at the pictures the glowing coals made.

She was looking wofully thin and pale and dull. She greeted him gravely, answering his questions when he spoke to her, in clear, steady tones.

He would not believe that she had been ill.

"It was quite an ingenious little story to greet him with," he declared, "but she could not make him believe it."

He never did credit it—not until the doctor sent in his little bill, days after.

"I had intending taking you to a grand concert to-night," he said. "I secured the tickets already."

"We cannot go, Waldemar, because I am so ill," she said plaintively.

"If you choose to stay at home, that will not alter my intention," he said, brusquely. "I shall go all the same."

And, without a word of compassion or pity for her illness, he left the house again—left her alone in her pitiful despair. Only the angels knew what she suffered in the hours that followed, while her husband was thoroughly enjoying the lights and music at the grand concert, amusing himself by scanning the prettiest faces in the audience.

There was one lady whom Waldron had introduced to Reine to whom she had taken a decided dislike, much to her husband's annoyance.

"Mrs. Smith wants to be fast friends with you," he declared, with a frown one day,—"what's the reason you don't like her?"

"I do not know, Waldemar," she returned, slowly, "there is something about her—not quite—congenial."

The frown deepened on his face.

"She is not an educated lady," she went on; "her manners are quite vulgar, and—she paints her face."

Her husband laughed long and loud at that.

"I do not like her lady friends whom she brings here with her, any more than I like herself—they actually seem to have lived in a different world from me—I do not understand them."

Again Waldron laughed loud and long, although Reine could not see anything particularly amusing in what she had said.

"I have invited Mrs. Smith to accompany us to the opera," he said; "see that you treat her well—she don't like your cold way—mind, she's not to be slighted."

"It would not be agreeable to me to have her accompany us, Waldemar," said Reine; "you ought certainly to have consulted me before asking her."

"Nonsense," he declared. "She's the rage of New York—there's not a man but—" he stopped short, and looked a little embarrassed, Reine thought—"but," he added, after stopping to cough slightly, "but would be delighted to have her in their box—with his wife."

Reine sighed, telling herself silently that the presence of Mr. Smith would spoil her pleasure of hearing "Norma."

"I invited her here to dine with us," he explained, "thinking that would please you."

Mrs. Smith arrived late, and when she had thrown off her wraps, Reine looked at her in amazement,—her style of costume was a little peculiar. Mrs. Smith evidently observed it. She said, nonchalantly,

"I came prepared to go to the opera,—we must go early, my dear Mrs. Waldron. It is to be a gala night; there will be quite a crush of all the upper crust of New York—all the elite I mean."

Reine did not reply.

Very soon Waldemar joined them, and it almost seemed to Reine her husband actually forgot her presence, he was so engrossed in bandying jokes—yes, jokes—with the golden haired Mrs. Smith.

For a few moments after dinner, Reine found herself alone with her husband,—she hurried to his side with a pale, perturbed face.

"Oh, Waldemar," she cried in distress, "I cannot go to the opera with Mrs. Smith in that—that dress. I—I—should died of mortification."

"What is the matter with it?" he demanded. "I thought it was something stunning."

Reine's face flushed in dismay—"I should think you would see for yourself, Waldemar," she murmured,—"there—there is not much—to—to the waist."

"Humph" sneered Waldron, "that's only your prudish taste. That's called decollette by women of fashion; I should think you would know that."

"I call it by another name, Waldemar," she replied; "it is—immodest. I—I—think I should die of shame if I had to sit beside Mrs. Smith in that dress."

"Don't make a fool of yourself, Reine," he cried, seizing her arm roughly. "Don't dare tell Mrs. Smith that; you would make an enemy of her for life."

"Well, what if I do?" she answered, spiritedly.

"You would rue it to the last day of your life," he hissed. "You shall go to the opera with her and make yourself as agreeable as you know how."

Reine went, but it was with one of the heaviest of hearts. As she had expected, all the lorgnettes in the house were repeatedly turned to their box. Reine shrank behind the silken curtains. Mrs. Smith seemed to enjoy this close scrutiny hugely.

It was a great relief to Reine when the long evening was over, and they were en route home.

"I never enjoyed myself so well in all my life," declared Mrs. Smith, enthusiastically, as she parted from Reine. "It was a grand social triumph for me."

Those words puzzled Reine for long hours afterward. She was to know the meaning of them all too soon. On the day following this event a lady called, whose friendship Reine prized highly.

She greeted Reine with a grave face, and during the course of the conversation, the lady brought around the subject of the opera of the previous evening.

"I saw you in your box, Mrs. Waldron," she said, "but—for the moment, I could hardly persuade myself that it really was your box."

"Why?" asked Reine, smiling.

"I do not know as I should speak about it; still, I feel it is my duty to enlighten you, my dear," returned the lady. "Please remember it is only the friendly interest I feel in you that forces me as it were, to speak; to put it plainly, the person who was with you, is a creature no lady who values her reputation can be seen speaking to. Of course you did not know; she is a near neighbor and appears to be a woman of wealth, but ah, my dear, such as she are the world's sharks. I pray you, close your doors against her. Do you comprehend me?"

Reine was too shocked for utterance.

"I told my husband from the very first I did not like Mrs. Smith," she said.

"Smith!" cut in Reine's friend; "why, my dear, that is not her name, she is called the notorious Madame Eglantine. She has wealth and beauty that a princess might envy, but good women shun her as they would a scorpion."

"It is so strange that my husband did not know," said innocent Reine; "but then we have not been long in New York city."

"Very strange," repeated the lady; and she soon after took her leave, congratulating herself as she rolled away in her carriage, that she had opened Mrs. Waldron's eyes to what was going on; it was her duty to do so.

Quite shocked, Reine sat down before the fire, thinking the matter over.

Wife-like, the moment Waldemar came in she told him of what she had heard.

"It isn't true," he declared, a dull, red flush suffusing his face. "If you believe all these tattling old busybodies have to say, you would have enough to do. Why, when a pack of them get together, they'd blast the reputation of the Virgin Mary if they could. Mrs. Smith is a gay young widow; these homely old women are simply jealous of her, that's all."

"Is her name Mrs. Smith, or Madame Eglantine, Waldemar?" she asked, firmly, "and how did you come to know her?"

"I do not recollect now," he replied, adding, "She is to go with us to the concert to-night, again."

"If she goes, I stay at home," said Reine. "I am amazed that you should expect me to associate with one against whose fair fame there is even the slightest stain."

With a muttered imprecation, Waldron strode from the room, vowing that he should take Mrs. Smith to the concert that night in spite of all the prudes in Christendom, and if she would not go with him, that he should go alone.

CHAPTER XVIII.

When Reine had come to New York from Waldron Towers, she had insisted upon bringing Honora Allen, her maid, with her.

"I have never been among strangers, Waldemar," she said. "I must see a few familiar faces about me."

Her husband had demurred at first. He could not endure the girl who was so devoted to his wife, and who seemed to have such a cordial dislike of himself; but in the end Reine's maid went with her.

And the time came when she was more like a counsellor and trusted friend to the desolate little bride than a paid companion. She had seen from the first how this ill-starred marriage would turn out. She was not surprised that Mr. Waldron had gone to the grand concert leaving his sick wife at home.

She found Reine still seated in her arm-chair by the glowing fire, sobbing as though her heart would break.

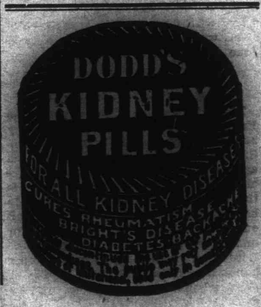
"Oh, my lady," cried the girl distressedly, "you must not take on so, and you so weak and sick; indeed, you must not."

Reine struck her little white, fluttering hands together with passionate fervor.

"I cannot help it," she cried. "I am so wretched, Honora; my heart is dead—my life is empty. He can go to the concert to-night knowing I am ill."

She crept up nearer to faithful Honora, clutching her hands with a gasping sob.

"He would not care if I were to die," she said, despairingly. "He would not miss me. No stranger could be more cold and more careless to me," she went on. "I am growing frightened at myself, Honora. I cannot tell—I dare not think—how it will end. I loved him better than all the world, when I married him, but now—I am beginning to dislike him. It has come to that at last."



"Oh, my dear lady, that is very wrong—very wrong indeed! A wife should never dislike her husband."

"Should a husband ever dislike his wife?" cried Reine, hoarsely. "Because my husband does dislike me, I am frightened at myself, Honora; for, if matters go on this way much longer, I shall hate him!"

That night no sleep came to her. She was thinking, hour after hour, what was she to do. She saw no light in the dark clouds which obscured the future—no hope for her. The years stretched out dark and gloomy. And this was the man for whom she had thrown away another love, which was as noble as it was tender and devoted. Then, for the first time, she commenced to compare Waldemar Waldron with Bernard Chesleigh.

She knew, Heaven help her, that she had chosen glittering tinsel instead of solid gold.

THE SUNDIAL.

The Latest Accessory in the Revived Old-Fashioned Garden.

Serene he stands among the flowers
And only marks life's sunny hours;
For him dark days do not exist—
The brazen-faced old optimist!

In the far distant past a shepherd on the hills of Chaldea upon placing his staff in the ground observed that it cast a shadow, and, being by nature a keen observer and something of a philosopher as well, he fell to pondering over that hitherto unnoticed phenomenon. As he gazed upon the shadow during the idle moments which fall to the lot of an eastern shepherd, he perceived a movement in the shadow, and the idea eventually occurred to him to place stones to mark its position at various intervals of time. In this manner, it is believed, the first rude sundial was constructed.

In the olden time light and darkness formed the only measurement of the day. Punctuality was an unknown word. Hunger sounded the dinner bell and drowsiness rang the curfew. When the sundial was introduced into occidental lands it was regarded purely from a utilitarian point of view. The shepherd carved it out quaintly in the sun, and, turning philosopher by the very occupation, provided it with motoes, "Horas non numero nisi serenas" (I only count the hours of sunshine).

As time went on the decorative possibilities of the dial were appreciated, and pedestals of excellent design were constructed, and in no place do these dials look so well as amid some old-world garden surrounded by flowers. They add to the decorative effect, and are always pleasant to look upon, notwithstanding the words of Richard Jefries: "Let the shadow advance upon the dial. I can watch it with equanimity while it is there to be watched. It is only when the shadow is not there, when the clouds of winter hide it, that the dial is terrible."

Many of the old English sundials have fallen into decay.

Sheep Husbandry.

We do not believe a farmer should have only one kind of stock in his farm, but have a few of nearly every kind, so if the market is off on one kind it will be better on some other. The sheep industry was profitable last year and will be again this year.

Although the sheep are now wearing their winter robes and are free from ordinary cold, yet they will appreciate a good shelter from the winds and bad weather as much as any other kind of stock, and perhaps no animal will appreciate kind treatment more than a sheep. The person who cannot control a large degree of patience will not make a good sheep master. It is natural for a flock of sheep to follow their shepherd, and this they will do if not kicked about and are otherwise improperly treated. If kicked away so they are scared when they come near you, they cannot be controlled. Be kind.—Cor. Inland Farmer.

To Get a Stand of Clover.

Dr. I. A. Thayer, of Lawrence county, Pa., has given the subject of growing clover more than ordinary consideration and has so far solved it that he is reasonably sure of a good stand every year. He lays down just four rules as follows:

First.—Fill the soil with humus.

Second.—Remove the stagnant water.

Third.—Apply lime to the soil where needed.

Fourth.—Sow the seed on a good, well prepared seed bed and give it the same chance you do any other good crop.

From some years' practical experience I feel sure that this will bring us success. It is unreasonable to expect a good set of clover when we sow it into a hard, unprepared seed bed already occupied with one, two or three crops.—National Stockman.

The Strawberry Bed.

Strawberry plants should be set as early in the spring as possible so they will get a good start, says J. L. Herbst in American Agriculturist. Place the rows of the new bed three and a half feet apart and set plants one and a half to two feet apart in the row. Plants can be set with a spade or dibble, care being taken to have the crown of the plant on a level with the surface of the earth. If the soil is inclined to be dry it is a good plan to wet the roots while setting and firm the soil well about them with the foot. In the fall the bed should be covered with straw, cornstalks or any coarse litter that is not filled with weed seeds.

Silage for Sheep.

As to the relative effects of silage and roots on the milk flow, the experiments at the Wisconsin station were without very decided results. At New York Cornell station this feature was studied more fully. As between mangel wurzels and corn silage, the lambs sucking the ewes fed roots made slightly better gains than those sucking ewes fed silage, although the silage appeared to be a cheaper ration. As between beets and corn silage, the lambs of the ewes fed silage made slightly the larger gain in weight. These results show but a meagre difference in the feeding value of these foods.

The Colt's Feet.

When the colt is growing, the hoofs should be looked to occasionally to see if they do not require trimming.

A Remarkable Resemblance.

A correspondent, writing to The Westminster Gazette, says there is an extraordinary resemblance in facial features, shape of head and forehead form between Edward Blake and Edmund Burke. Foley's statue of Burke outside Trinity College, Dublin, might well pass for the statue of Blake. The correspondent says he directed the attention of John Morley, Burke's biographer, and of Sir George Trevelyan to the likeness he saw, or thought he saw, between Burke and Blake, and Morley and Trevelyan both said they had long before observed it.

Best Rule of Health

And How You Are Aided in Carrying It Out By DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

"A movement of the bowels every day."

This is the fundamental rule of health. The one point on which doctors are unanimous.

But what causes the bowels to become constipated?

The inactivity of the liver.

Bile is nature's own carthartic and so long as the liver is active in its work of filtering bile from the blood and passing it into the intestines, there is no trouble from constipated bowels.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure constipation by setting the liver right.

This is the only means by which the bowels can be regulated.

Salts and castor oil will effect a motion of the bowels, but, once the effects of the dose passes off, you will be more constipated than ever.

They fail to set the liver right.

By regulating the liver by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you ensure a healthful action of the bowels and so prevent and cure scores of ills, such as indigestion, biliousness, constipation, kidney disorders, colds and contagious diseases.

Mr. C. F. Immel, shoemaker, Western Hill, St Catharines, Ont., states:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regularly for some time and consider they are unsurpassed for torpid liver, defective circulation, indigestion, headache and constipation, as these were my troubles. I used many remedies but got no relief until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and a few boxes of this preparation have entirely cured me. I am not in the habit of endorsing any medicine but in this case I cannot speak too highly in praise of Dr. Chase's Pills for what they have done for me."

Mr. D. C. Holmes, Justice of the Peace for Lincoln Co., states: "I am acquainted with Mr. C. F. Immel, and consider him a reliable citizen in every sense of the word, in fact, I have known him from boyhood up and can say I believe him to be truthful and honest."

DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR BETWEEN TWO RECTORS.

Richmond, Va.—The Rev. Frank A. Rideout was attacked on Sunday night in Ritchie Memorial Episcopal church, at Claremont, Va., and roughly handled by the Rev. Dr. David Hunter Ward, who threw him against a wall of the church. Both rectors were in their robes at the time, and Mr. Rideout the retiring rector was about to preach his farewell sermon. Mr. Ward was to have assisted him, but when Mr. Rideout asked what portion he would take, Mr. Ward became enraged and dashed Mr. Rideout against a wall. Then he entered the pulpit and conducted services for the amazed congregation.

Lancaster, P. A.—Ralph W. Kline, aged 26 years, an artist, was fatally stabbed by Jennie Good, aged 18. Kline and Miss Good were members of a party who were fishing in the Little Conestoga, near Long Park. Kline and the girl had a quarrel, during which Miss Good threatened to cut his heart out. Thinking that she would not execute her threat Kline threw out his chest and told her to stab. She did, plunging a knife into his breast near the heart. He was taken to a hospital unconscious. The girl fled and has not yet been arrested.

Plant Distribution.

It has been the practice of the Western Horticultural Society each spring to offer to members a free choice of plant premiums. The plants for these distributions have been very carefully chosen with a view to their desirability, as well as to their hardiness and suitability to our conditions. The Directors believe that through the receiving of these many persons have been encouraged to horticultural efforts along new lines, and that this feature of the work of the society has been a most valuable one.

It is with pleasure the announcement of the plant distribution of this spring is presented, as it not only affords a greater variety of choice than has been offered in any of our former announcements, but it also includes a number of very desirable plants that have been thoroughly tested, but not generally distributed throughout the country.

The following parcels are offered for 1905. Each member is entitled to one parcel and those who are not now members but who wish to participate in the distribution may do so by sending the regular membership fee of $1.00 along with application for plants. The payment of this sum will also entitle the sender to the other privileges of membership.

(a) Twelve plants Ginnala Maple (Acer tartaricum Ginnala.)

These plants are one year old and about 8 to 10 inches high. The Ginnala Maple is splendidly adapted for hedging purposes or to provide shrubbery about lawns. It has been extensively grown both at Brandon and Indian Head Experimental Farms for the past 14 years and found to be perfectly hardy. It ordinarily attains a height of about 5 or 6 feet and may easily be kept down to small hedge size. The leaves are small and prettily cut or lobed. The wings of the seeds are early margined with bright red, and in the autumn the leaves assume brilliant hues of red and scarlet. This is undoubtedly one of the hardiest and most beautiful of shrubs, and is well adapted for general cultivation throughout Manitoba and the Territories.

(b) One plant Rudbeckia (Golden Glow.)

These are strong field grown roots. This is a hardy new perennial flower that forms a good sized bush 6 feet high and bears a great profusion of large yellow aster-like flowers. Flowering continues from July until the frost comes.

(c) One plant Upright Honeysuckle.

Very hardy varieties producing pink and white blossoms. The honeysuckle bears a profusion of beautiful flowers in the early spring succeeded by berries, generally red.

(d) Twelve plants Strawberries.

Most reliable varieties for Northwestern Canada, procured from a Manitoba nursery where they have given heavy crops for several years past. All staminate varieties.

(e) One plant Virginia Creeper.

Hardy variety of this beautiful climber, which is so much esteemed because of the brilliant colors of its autumn foliage

(f) One plant Red Dutch Currant.

This is one of the hardiest of the red currants. The fruit is not large, but is produced in abundance. Bush is of upright habit.

(g) Three Seedling Apple Trees.

These are one year seedlings from seed of the Hibernal, Wealthy and Duchess grown in the Northwest. The quality of the fruit cannot be foretold, but there is reasonable grounds for hope that the trees themselves may prove fairly hardy. Experimenting with these seeding appes is a work that is full of promise, and likely to produce varieties suited to our climate.

It is particularly requested that applications for plants to be made AT ONCE. The supply of some of the lines offered is limited. While they last each applicant will be given his choice, but should any class of stock be exhausted a second or third choice will be sent.

All parcels will be delivered charges prepaid.

IMPROVED TRAIN SERVICE

For the summer season the Canadian Pacific Railway intend experimenting by increasing the passenger service on some of the branch lines in the west. It is intended to put a double daily service on the Deloraine line, leaving Winnipeg and Deloraine morning and afternoon. At the same time on the Edmonton line there will be, in addition to the daily passenger train, a tri-weekly train, leaving Calgary and Edmonton in the afternoon three times a week.

Should the experiment prove a success financially, no doubt the C.P.R. will shortly give additional service on other branch lines.

PROF. GRAY'S LECTURE BEFORE THE NATIONAL HISTORY SOCIETY OF MONTREAL.

Immense Value of the Electric Purification of Flour.

Prof. M. A. Gray, chemist, lectured on 'Foods and Food Products,' in the National History Society rooms, Montreal.

The lecture was most exhaustive and instructive, dealing with the growth of wheat, its constituents and the electrical treatment of flour. Mr. Gray remarked that but little could be said concerning the percentage of nourishment contained in the different grades of Northwestern hard wheat, as it varies from year to year.

Speaking of chemical experiments, Mr. Gray pointed out what had been done in this line in regard to wheat during the last ten or twelve years in the different experimental stations of the United States. "It was but very recently, however, that laboratories had been esablished in connection with flour mills, but they have already demonstrated their utility.

As to the purification of flour by electricity, the speaker remarked that it is about two years since this method was adoped, and the development has been wonderful. A beautiful silvery whiteness is produced by subjecting flour to air which has been passed through a flaming electrical discharge. The flour has also, as a consequence, better keeping qualities and commands a better price. The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, he said, was the only firm in Canada, and one of the first in America, to make use of this purifying and sterilizing process.

TRANSIENT TRADERS.

Councillor Penhale asked what was the definition of a transient trader.

No one seemed anxious to answer.

Councillor Penhale went on to say that he had in mind the individual who had set up a stand in the corner of Toronto Street. The town had a transient trader's bylaw. Why not enforce it? Those men were not peddlers. They did not go from door to door.

The Clerk said the men referred to did not come under the transient traders bylaw.

TROUBLE FOR SOMEBODY.

A letter was read from the solicitors of the Vulcan Ironworks Company, Winnipeg, warning the council not to use the hydrants supplied by the Canada Pipe Company, Vancouver, as the Vulcan Company, possess all the Canadian rights.

A letter was read from the Canada Pipe Company stating they would see that the town of Medicine Hat should not be prejudiced in any way.

Councillor Smyth: Was the order cancelled or what is the position of affairs now?

The Mayor; I presume they will supply them.

Councillor Smyth: It might be unwise.

Councillor Stewart: What does the solicitor say about it?

The Mayor: He framed the telegram to them.

Councillor Smyth: We had better not do anything until we have a satisfactory arrangement with the Vulcan Ironworks.

Councillor Drinnan thought it would not be wise for the council to take any chances in the matter.

Councillor Smyth thought so too and would say, let the coast people fight it out with the Vulcan Ironworks.

On the motion of councillors DesBrisay and Penhale the letters were ordered to lie on the table.

THE HOSPITAL GRANT.

A communication was read from Dr Smyth stating that Mr Finlay, president of the hospital board, would wait upon the council in reference to the proposed isolation hospital, but Mr Finlay was away and would not be able to attend until next meeting.

The communication was filed.

A letter was read from Mr Finlay asking the council to make an increased grant to the hospital.

Councillor Drinnan said he believed last council practically agreed to increase the grant.

Councillor Stewart said that was so. It was pretty well agreed to last year.

Councillor Smyth said if came up then in connection with the application of the board of directors for free gas. The then council thought it would be better to charge for the gas and increase the grant.

Councillor Drinnan: The idea was to increase it to $1000.

Councillor Stewart moved that the letter be referred to the health and relief committee for report.

Councillor Drinnan seconded and it was agreed to.

OTHER LETTERS.

An application was read from Mr G. P. Blythe, on behalf of the Medicine Hat Brick and Gas Company, applying for gas. On motion of Messrs Penhale and Stewart it was referred to the gas committee.

A letter was read from T. H. Rhodes, secretary of the school board handing on one from the Deputy Commissioner of Education re assessment matters. As the subject had been disposed of the letters were filed.

Mr Fatt, postmaster, forwarded to the council proofs of delivery of a registered letter to the secretary of the Woollen Mill Company last August. The receipt of the letter, which contained notice of assessment of the Woollen Mill, had been denied. Mr Fatt showed the letter was duly delivered on the 16th August.

A letter was read from F. S. Pingle, asking to be appointed poll tax collector this year. It was referred to the license and police committee.

A letter from Messrs. Nelson, re heating of new municipal building was referred to the public works committee.

A letter was read from Mr J. H. G. Bray, asking the council for some trees to plant at the court house grounds. He had written Mr Mitchell, the forestry inspector, but had been referred to the council.

Councillor Drinnan: What is your opinion about giving out these trees Mr Mayor?

The Mayor: He would have to come under the regulations, so many trees for so many feet frontage.

Councillor Doinnan: Well, I hardly think so. As it is a government building and we got all our trees from the government we shall have to waive the regulations in the case I think.

On motion of Messrs. Stewart and Drinnan the appliation was referred to the public works committee with power to act.

PETITIONS.

Several petitions were read from property owners for gas and water extensions, including several on the Johnson estate. They were all referred to the gas and water committees.

ATHLETIC GROUNDS.

A letter was read from Mr W. R. Johnson giving the council an option on 20 acres at $300 per acre for an athletic ground for one month from the 9th of May. It was decided to take the matter up at the next meeting.

CLEANING UP.

Chief Markwick reported that the spring cleaning of yards was nearly completed, and he drew attention to the fact that the nuisance grounds required attention as a good deal of the refuse had been dumped indiscriminately.

The Mayor said some of the refuse should be burned.

On motion of Messrs Smyth and Penhale it was referred to the license and police committee.

SCAVENGING.

Councillor Drinnan asked what had been done about scavenging.

Councillor Smyth said he had given notice of a motion to amend the bylaw on the subject, but being unavoidably absent from the next meeting the matter fell through, but he would now give notice again so as to bring it forward as soon as possible.

Councillor Drinnan said that when all yards and lanes were cleared up, the public works committee would take up the matter of cleaning up vacant lots belonging to people who were not residents, so as to have the town thoroughly cleaned up. He asked what condition the lanes were in now. Were they all clean.

The Chief: No sir, not all. Mr Bentley has been sick and as a good many people engaged him to clean up for them some of the work has not been done. I gave notice to a good many to get it done right away.

REPORTS.

Various reports were read from the different committees showing they had obtained tenders for various supplies and work and had accepted the most suitable offers and put the work in hand. The action of the committees was endorsed in every instance.

WATER EXTENSIONS.

Two reports were read from Mr Porter, in which he gave estimates of the amount of piping required to carry water to the Johnson estate. It transpired that Mr Collins had asked for the water to be laid to his new house on Montreal Street. Mr Porter said it would require 1000 feet of 6 inch pipe. A similar application from Mr Hollingshead would require 200 feet.

In reply to a question Mr Porter said the 6 inch piping would cost 50 cents per foot laid.

Councillor Drinnan said that would make it expensive in Mr Collins case as he was the only one at present to be served by the extension.

Councillor Penhale thought they had to take the bad with the good, and they would have to make the extension next year.

In reply to a question the clerk said the income from the one service would be about $18 per year.

Councillor Penhale observed that a member of the land and improvement company had informed him that they would soon be fencing across the Macleod trail.

Councillor Drinnan said the public works committee had under their consideration the opening up of a new and better approach to the town from that direction.

Councillor Penhale: He told me they wanted to do it as soon as the town could make another road.

Councillor Drinnan said it required doing soon and the public works committee would take it up very shortly.

Taking up the water extension question again.

Councillor Drinnan moved that the water commissioners be empowered to extend the water services on Montreal Street across the Macleod trail to Messrs Collier, Brown and others who wish to take it in. It was expensive for so few services and the council ought to conduct these matters upon business principles. Still water was a necessity and the ratepayers were entitled to have it.

Councillor Penhale: It will have to go in another year anyway.

Councillor Drinnan said that was so, but of course it looked a large expenditure to lay out $1000 for one or two services.

The Mayor: Mr Collins is on the extreme end of his block.

Councillor Penhale: Yes.

Councillor DesBrisay said it was considerable expenditure in the case of Mr Collins for one service.

Councillor Drinnan: Yes, and someone will apply and want a similar service and this will be a precedent. In fact it will tend to create applications of the sort, I would like him to have the water.

Councillor DesBrisay said if it would not create more applications of the same nature he would like to see it carried to Mr Collins property.

Councillor Smyth thought more applications like this were not likely to arise.

Councillor Drinnan: Well, I don't know. The town is very large, from New Edinburgh to the Johnson Estate. It might easily occur again in those parts. The previous council worked upon the rule that there should be enough consumers in sight to bring a revenue sufficient to pay interest on the amount expended.

The Mayor said the cost would be $500 and the interest on that would be $25 per annum. If he (Mr Collins) would pay that it would do away with the fear of creating a precedent.

Councillor Smyth: I move that that proposition be made Mr Collins. If he will pay that until another house is built it can be adjusted then.

Councillor DesBrisay seconded and the motion was carried.

It was stated that 200 feet of 4 inch pipe would be required to convey the water to Mr Hollingshead's property.

On motion of Messrs Stewart and Smyth the reports from Superintendent Porter were referred to the water committee with power to act.

The finance committee's report recommended payment of accounts presented at last meeting.

On motion of Messrs Stewart and Penhale the report was adopted and the accounts ordered to be paid.

A communication was read from the town solicitor, stating that the Johnson Estate was now a part of the town.

Mr Penhale stated that the Milling Company purchased some coal from the town some time ago. It was coal the town did not require and would have spoiled. They were willing to pay $3.25 per ton for it.

Moved by Messrs Drinnan and Penhale that $3.25 per ton be accepted. Carried.

Councillor Smyth, on behalf of the committee appointed to look into the method of ordering town supplies, reported progress.

Councillor Drinnan for the public works committee reported progress, and said they had five teams employed at $4.50 per day on the grading of the new streets and were getting on well with the work. Continuing he said he would like authority to purchase a grader. One could be bought for $85.

On motion of Messrs Penhale and Drinnan the necessary authority was given to buy a grader.

Councillor Drinnan said the committee were investigating the cost of burning lime by gas.

NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

Five competitive plans were received for the new Municipal building, and some time was devoted to their consideration. The matter being important.

The council resolved to hold a special meeting on Friday to further consider them and decide on which they would adopt.

It was resolved on the suggestion of the Mayor to head the subscription list being got up for D. McNabb, with the sum of $50, as a recognition of his services as chief of the fire brigade.

SCHOOL BOARD.

An adjourned meeting of the School Board was held in the secretary's office last Tuesday. Present: Messrs. Brotherton (chairman), Milne, Kennedy and Nicolls.

Tenders were opened for a cement floor in basement of the Montreal street school.

It was moved by Mr. Nicolls that tenders be laid on the table.—Carried.

Mr Kennedy reported having examined the seats at Montreal street school, and finding no real damage to lasting properties of the seats, recommended payment in full.

Moved by Mr Milne that Mr Kennedy's report be adopted.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE REAL QUESTION.

The real question of disease is "Can I be cured?" If you or anyone dear to you is losing strength, flesh, energy and vitality, if you are wise you will not spend time trying to figure out just what name to call the disease by.

It is almost impossible to draw the line where debility and weakness merge into consumption. Your trouble may not be consumption to-day, but you don't know what it may become to-morrow. Hundreds of people have been restored to robust health by Dr. Pierce's marvelous "Golden Medical Discovery" after reputable physicians had pronounced them consumptive beyond hope.

Were they in consumption? Nobody can ever know. The important point is that they were hopelessly ill but this matchless "Discovery" restored and saved them.

"I was not able to do hardly any work at all," says Mrs. Jennie Dingman, of Vanburen, Kalkaska Co., Mich., in a most interesting letter to Dr. Pierce. "I had pain in my left side and back, and had headache all the time. I tried your medicine and it helped me. Last spring I had a bad cough; I got so bad I had to be in bed all the time.

"My husband thought I had consumption. He wanted me to get a doctor, but I told him if it was consumption they could not help me. We thought we would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had taken one bottle the cough was stopped and I have had no more of it returning. Your medicine is the best I have taken."

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce. He will send you good, fatherly, professional advice, in a plain sealed envelope, absolutely free. His nearly 40 years experience as chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., has made him an expert in chronic diseases.

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

The Minnedosa Tribune says: There was quite a stir in town on Tuesday, caused by farmers coming in from all sides with herds of cattle. The dealers paid out to farmers almost $60,000, one man, Woodcock, getting the handsome sum of $995 for his herd. The Messrs. Seelye, accompanied by his son Willie, was descending a narrow coolie on his ranch, leading his horse, last Wednesday, when the animal slipped and struck him knocking him down a gorge about fifty feet deep. We hear he is doing all right.

United States courts have recognized Marconi's rights as patentee and will protect him from infringements. The shares of this company are being offered to the public and a limited number will be sold at Medicine Hat by Mr Robinson, who will be found at the Opera House on the days of the exhibition.

Mrs S. Lucas, Main street, desires us to state that she was in no way responsible for the poem "A Debutante: Written for the News," and signed "S. Montgomery," which appeared in the Medicine Hat News, of May 11th. The poem was composed by Miss Kathleen Kilburn, of Deloraine, Man., who died at the early age of 16, and was printed, along with other poems written by this talented young lady, and circulated among a few friends after her death. This heinous and callous plagiarism by "S. Montgomery" was too glaring to let pass unnoticed, but the News refused to disclose the identity of the person, or comment in any way upon the subject, hence Mrs. Lucas' appeal to the Times for publicity. The fact that Mrs Lucas' own name was S. Montgomery, and that she received a copy of the poems, is sufficient explanation why she has taken any interest in the matter.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the council was held last night. Present: Mayor Forster, Councillors Stewart, Drinnan, DesBrisay, Sissons, W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk: W. E. Porter, Supt. of Works and Chief Markwick.

A deputation from the Athletic Associations re 1st July celebration, consisting of W. B. Marshall, M. Peard, J. P. Laird, W. Finlay and A. W. Green, attended.

Mr Marshall addressed the council and said the deputation represented the Lacrosse Club, and the object was to ask the council to make a grant towards a celebration on the 1st July. It was the intention to put on full athletic sports on that day. They thought to form a committee from the Lacrosse and townspeople to look after the matter and see the money properly spent. They figured on offering about $500 in prizes.

Mr Peard said the public meeting decided to ask the Lacrosse Club to take the matter in hand, but they could not do much without money and he hoped the council would make them a good grant.

Mr Marshall said that Calgary and Regina had before now granted $1500.

Mr Green urged that they should get up a good celebration.

The Mayor said the council would take it up and let the deputation know the result in the moring.

The delegation then retired.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and comfirmed.

The correspondence included 17 letters from parties asking for information re debentures the town has to sell. The letters had all been replied to and were now taken as read.

The Winnipeg Rubber Co. wrote saying they would like to figure on the new hose wagon for the town if not too late.

Several other letters were read from firms anxious to do business with the council.

All were received and filed.

A letter was read from T. M. Knappen, Secretary Western Canadian Immigration Association, stating a party of Washington journalists would visit Medicine Hat on June 26th, and asking that the council arrange to show them round.

Coun. Sissons proposed and Coun. Stewart seconded that the committee on new enterprises take the matter up with full power to act.

Constable Miniszewsky who was injured in a run-away accident had $20 taken off his May salary and wrote asking the council to allow the amount to him.

On motion of Coun. Stewart seconded by Coun. DesBrisay, it was decided to allow the full amount.

A petition was read from residents of Braemar St. signed by E. J. Hunt and John Benson and also from J. E. Cuyler, and Chas. Johnston, River St., asking for gas extensions.

On motion of Councillors Drinnan and DesBrisay they were referred to the committee with power to act.

A letter from Mr F. G. Forster in reference to steps to his premises was referred to the public works committee.

REPORTS.

A report was read from the Chief of Police giving list of persons fined during the past month and stating 15 dogs had been destroyed and 9 hoboes ordered out of town.

The report was filed.

A report was read from the license and police committee recommending that F. S. Pingle be employed as poll-tax collector and be allowed 15 per cent commission.

The report was adopted.

TENDERS.

One tender was received for the removal of the Fire Hall to the lot near the South Park. It was from Mr. J. L. Morris, per S. E. Lucas, and the amount named was $130.00. The matter was left to the Public Works Committee.

Coun. Drinnan suggested that the Council do the excavating for the new City Hall with their own gang of men as it would save considerable time and moved that the Public Works committee be authorised to do so.

Coun. Stewart seconded and it was agreed to.

Tenders for piping were received as follows:

W. M. Williamson $1,835.00; M. H. Heating & Plumbing Co. $1,849.00; W. B. Marshall & Co. $1,900.00; James Rae $1,627.20. Mr Rae's tender was accepted.

Tenders had been received for 400 fire bricks: James Rae $34.96 W. B. Marshall Co. $48.00 and Mr Rae's tender was accepted by the committee. This was now endorsed.

The gas committee reported having called for tenders for gas pipe and the tender of Marshall & Co. had been accepted. This was endorsed by the council.

JULY 1st CELEBRATION.

The council next took up the application for a grant for the 1st July celebration.

Coun. Sissons thought it was time to do something in this way and was in favor of granting the request of the delegation.

He moved that a grant of $250 be made provided the Lacrosse Club guaranteed to raise another $250 and a committee be appointed from the council.

Coun. DesBrisay seconded and it was agreed to. Messrs. Stewart, DesBrisay and Sissons being named as committee.

The new enterprises committee reported having purchased 8 views of the town from Mr Miers and forwarded them to the Immigration Commissioner.

PUBLIC PARK.

The committee reported re ground for public park that they had offers from Mr. W. J. Johnson, W. Cousins and F. S. Pingle, agent.

It was decided to ask Mr Charlesworth C.E., to report as to levels etc. to the committee and the latter to futher consider the matter.

Coun. Drinnan thought they should apply to the Government for a grant towards an embankment on the river front. Calgary and Macleod had obtained large grants.

A Hint to the Farmers.

There has been a tendency during recent years to become careless regarding the precautions to be observed before starting a fire for the purpose of clearing stubble, brush or grass from the land, and the result is extensive fires through which heavy losses have been sustained by farmers and ranchers. Such fires are greatly to be deplored, as they have a serious effect on the vegetation, climate and prosperity of the country. Less fires more trees, more trees less drought and a more equable climate. Millions of dollars and years of time have been spent in the endeavor to reforest areas from which timbers have been wastefully or carelessly removed. There is an inclination amongst some of the farmers in the northern districts to view with disfavor the rapid growth of the willow and poplar during the recent period of wet seasons, and a wish to destroy this scrub by letting fires go through it. The attention of such persons is called to section 4 of the Prairie Fires Ordinance, which read as follows:—

"No person shall directly or indirectly, personally or by any servant, agent or employee kindle on any land a fire for the purpose of guarding property, burning stubble or brush or clearing land unless the land on which the fire is started is at the time it is started, completely surrounded by a fireguard not less than 20 feet in width consisting of land covered with snow or water, or so worn, graded, ploughed, burned over, or covered with water as to be free from inflamable matter and any person kindling a fire for such purpose shall during the whole period of its continuance cause it to be guarded by three adult persons provided with proper appliances for extinguishing prairie fire. Any person contravening this section shall be guilty of an offence and be liable on summary conviction thereof to a penalty not exceeding $100."

Highly to be commended is the work of the R.N.W.M.P. in their recent investigation of fires sonth of Calgary, where, within two months thirteen persons have been fined a total of $450.00 and costs. In addition a civil suit is in progress against one of the parties for $400.00 damages. It should be noted that even when the prescribed precautions have been taken when starting a fire, a person is not free from action for damages should others suffer loss from its spreading.

The Great Work of Admiral Togo.

The naval battle between the fleets of Togo and Rojestvensky strikes the imagination of the British public with far greater force than any of the military operations. Hence Togo's victory arouses far more interest than any incident of the war, and is greeted by the newspapers and the people with jubilation. Everywhere it is being compared with Trafalgar. "Togo," says the Daily Graphic editorially "has won the Trafalgar of the Far East, and won it as his allies rejoice to note, in Nelson's year." The same editorial recalls the fact that the battles of Manilla Bay and Santiago did not cost the Americans a single ship, and indeed, hardly a single life, and it would therefore not be surprising to find that Togo has gained a relatively bloodless victory." All the morning papers pay tribute to Admiral Togo's extraordinary success. They say that the sun has set on Russia's naval glory, and comment upon the possibilities of peace.

Father Lacombe takes Charge of the R.C. Church Here.

Father Lacombe, whose name is a household word in Canada, has arrived in Medicine Hat, and will remain here for some months in charge of the Roman Catholic Church in this town. The Reverend Father's name stands for much in the West. His noble, self-sacrificing work among the Indians and half-breeds of Western Canada is known throughout the country from coast to coast, and everyone, "all sorts and conditions of men" will concede that Father Lacombe has spent his life for the good of those poor human beings who appear to our advanced ideas so helpless when they come in contact with the white man's methods. In conversation with the Rev. Father we learned that he has established an Institute at a point some 100 miles east of Edmonton and North of the Saskatchewan river, where he has obtained a large grant of land from the Government for settlement There he hopes to gather the half-breeds into a large colony. The lands will provide grants for 2,000 families, and his object is to get them there away from much that is hurtful to them. If he can succeed in this it will be a fitting climax to a life spent in the service of a people whose interest he has made his own throughout his long career in the West. Father Schulte, who has been in charge of the R.C. church here for several months past, will go to Spring Lake in the Edmonton district, where he will take charge of a large German settlement. Father Lacombe's advent to Medicine Hat marks an important event in the life of the Roman Catholic Church here. Mention of services to be held by the reverend gentlemen will be found among the local items.

What is a Transient Trader?

In our last issue we discussed this question very briefly, and suggested that the Town Council should appoint a new standing committee, to be called the Markets Committee who could take up this question, and put the meaning of Transient Trader in a somewhat clearer light than it is at present.

In the meantime we will offer a few more words on what threatens to become a "burning question," because many people hold that transient traders come in, take out a $7.00 hawker's licence, set up a stand on the corner of a street, sell all sorts of small wares for a week, and go out carrying away a good deal of money, thereby hurting many a man who is paying towards the upbuilding of our town, and doing no good to anybody, not even to the people who buy their wares. The Council did not intend it to apply merely to hawkers and pedlars. They intended something more than that. If only hawkers and such like had been meant it would only have been necessary to raise the price of the license for that class of traders, and the case would have been met. But inasmuch as it was intended to have a more far-reaching effect, something is necessary to be done in order to make it clear what class of persons it is to reach. The Ordinance distinctly separates hawkers from other callings. Sub.-sec. 32 of Sec. 90 reads thus:

Every Council may pass bylaws for licensing, regulating and governing hawkers, pedlars or petty chapmen, and other persons carrying on petty trades or who go from place to place, or to other men's houses on foot or with any animal bearing or drawing any goods, wares or merchandise for sale or for fixing the sum to be paid for a license for exercising such calling within the municipality, and the length of time it shall be in force.

The Council evidently did not mean that class of people or the bylaw would have been unnecessary Sub-section 33 of sec. 90 reads as follow:

Every Council may pass bylaws controlling, regulating and licensing livery, feed and sale stables, telegraph and telephone companies telegraph and telephone offices, insurance companies, offices and agents, real estate dealers and agents, intelligence offices or employment offices or agents, butcher shops or stalls, skating, roller or curling rinks, and all other business industries or callings carried on or to be carried on within the municipality; or commercial travellers or other persons selling goods, wares, or merchandise or other effects of any kind whatsoever, or offering the same for sale by sample cards, specimens or otherwise, for or on account of any merchant, manufacturer or other person selling directly to the consumer, not having his principal place of business in the municipality, and collecting licence for the same.

Some storekeepers hold that these street corner traders should come under the "Transient Traders" license. What do the Council say?

The Autonomy Bills have been shelved at Ottawa until after the elections in London and North Oxford, while throughout the west the people have been somewhat silent upon the question. It must not be supposed however, that the silence means complete acceptance of the measures. The people of the west feel just as keenly as ever that they do not want separate schools, and they still ask for a better division of the Provinces. The prominent men and leading newspapers of the west have placed on record their views on all the points in the bills, and having strongly urged them severally and jointly, nothing can be gained by mere repetition or prolonged arguments. We hope, however, the Ottawa Government will take these things into consideration when finally passing the bills.

Premier Haultain says he cannot conceive the Government receding from their position on the autonomy bills, no matter which way the Ontario by-elections go. Amendments will be proposed, and the result will be a valuable record for future reference, but he says: "I don't think that anything is to be gained by a prolonged obstruction."

It is now very doubtful if the autonomy bills can be passed by the 1st July, the day set down for the coming into existence of the new provinces.

The educational clauses of the autonomy bills have yet to be discussed in committee. Then the schedules to the bills, containing the boundaries of the new constituencies have not yet been considered at all.

JAMES McARA

JAMES McARA
Proprietor and Editor of the Head Vidette.

"Wherever there's money to be made," says an ill-natured Englishman." Certain it is that the passion and strength of the British empire are both largely due to the well bred colonizing instinct of the race. Old Caledonia. And, usually, to make money at the same time as to lengthen the cords and strengthen the stakes of the little Island Kingdom. They succeed where a less hardy and determined race would inevitably fail, which perhaps accounts for the various comments passed upon the latter people who lack their distinguishing qualities. The Canadaian West owes very much to its Scotch ploneers. The first white men to perceive the possibilities in either trade or agriculture were the Scottish employees of the Hudson's Bay Company. Even when the days of the fur trade were passed, and the days of permanent settlement were come, it was largely the descendants of Scotch Orkney pioneers, from the counties of Perth and Bruce, that undertook the task. From before the days of Lord Selkirk to the present, the work of the axe and of the broom and heather for the development of Western Canada has been large and deep over the country's history.

In the realm of journalism, a large proportion of the publishers of Western Canada are either Scotch by birth or extraction, and, it is almost necessary to add, are among the most successful in the profession. Perhaps the most striking examples of these is Mr. James McAra, proprietor and editor of the Indian Head Vidette, as yet not thirty years of age, and has been engaged in newspaper work only seven years, but in that time has built up one of the most prosperous and one of the biggest newspaper businesses in the Territories, and has made himself and his newspaper a power throughout a vast extent of country. This is a success that many Western publishers have duplicated though but few to so remarkable a degree.

Mr. McAra is closely identified with many of the historic events of Western Canadian history. He comes of a notable stock, his father (who was librarian of the Regina court for having served throughout the Indian mutiny, and marching under Havelock to the relief of Lucknow in 1857. The family came right out from Scotland to the Territories in 1882. Mr. McAra was then a boy of but nine years old, having been born in Peterboro, October 17, 1876. Brandon then the "Farthest West," at least as far as railway transportation was concerned, and, starting afresh from the Ultima Thule, Editor McAra, accompanied his veteran father on a long tramp over the prairies to Regina by ox-team. The elder McAra was a good judge of what constituted a good farm land, for he decided to locate in the now famous Last Mountain district, where he took up a homestead.

After the patent had been issued—in 1886—the family removed to Regina, the new capital of the Territories, and at once the future editor started to secure a position in the life. When a boy of nine he was appointed as page to the old North West Council, and, in the hours when not engaged in these official duties, he carried papers round the streets

They succeed where a less hardy and determined race would inevitably fail, which perhaps accounts for the envious comments passed upon them by people who lack their distinguishing qualities. The Canadaian West owes very much to its Scotch pioneers. The first white men to perceive its possibilities in either trade or agriculture were the Scottish employees of the Hudson's Bay Company. And, when the days of the fur trade had passed, and the days of permanent settlement were come, it was largely the descendants of Scotch Ontario pioneers, from the counties of Huron and Bruce, that undertook the work. From before the days of Lord Selkirk to the present, the wake of the sons of the broom and heather for the development of Western Canada is writ large and deep over the country's history.

In the realm of journalism, a large proportion of the publishers of Western Canada are either Scotch by birth or extraction, and, it is almost unnecessary to add, are among the most successful in the profession. One of the most striking examples of this is Mr. James McAra, proprietor and editor of the Indian Head Vidette. He is as yet not thirty years of age, and has been engaged in newspaper work for only seven years, but in that time he has built up one of the most profitable and one of the biggest newspaper businesses in the Territories, and made himself and his newspaper a power throughout a vast extent of country. This is a success that other Western publishers have duplicated, though but few to so remarkable a degree.

Mr. McAra is closely identified with many of the historic events of Western Canadian history. He comes of notable stock, his father (who was the librarian of the Regina court house) having served throughout the Indian mutiny, and marching under Havelock to the relief of Lucknow in 1858. The family came right out from Scotland to the Territories in 1882. Editor McAra was then a boy of but six years old, having been born in Edinboro, October 17, 1876. Brandon was then the "Farthest West," at least as far as railway transportation was concerned, and, starting afresh from this Ultima Thule, Editor McAra, accompanied his veteran father on the long tramp over the prairies to Regina by ox-team. The elder McAra was a good judge of what constituted good farm land, for he decided to locate in the now famous Last Mountain district, where he took up a homestead.

After the patent had been acquired —in 1886—the family removed to Regina, the new capital of the Territories, and at once the future editor started to secure a position in public life. When a boy of nine he was appointed as page to the old Northwest Council, and, in the hours when not engaged in these official duties, he carried papers round the streets of Regina. It is his boast that he was the pioneer newsboy of the Territories, and the first to sell the Regina Leader on the streets.

From page to clerk was a natural step, and before Lieutenant-Governor Dewdney left he secured for him a junior clerkship in the Lieutenant-Governor's office. He acted in this capacity during the whole of Hon. Joseph Royal's term as Lieutenant-Governor, and also through Hon. C. H. Mackintosh's term of office, the last three years of which he was His Honor's private secretary. During the absence of Mr. Mackintosh in Europe Mr. McAra was private secretary to his deputy, Hon. Justice Richards, and, on the appointment of Hon. M. C. Cameron to the office, he acted for a few months in a similar capacity, resigning to take up newspaper work in August, 1897.

The Vidette was bought by Mr. James McAra and his two brothers for the sum of $1,000 $200 being paid bought by Mr. McAra and his two brothers for $1,000, $200 being paid for the subscription list. It was printed on an old-fashioned job press, and the heavy pedalling of this antiquated machine is one of the editor's most painful memories. The plant occupied a room in the building built by Lord Brassey in the days of bonanza farming at Indian Head—the site now occupied by the present postoffice. Soon the partners bought a five-column Washington quarto, and for the new installation none was so thankful as Editor Jim, whose leg muscles had by this time become abnormally developed by the clumsy job press.

At the time of its purchase by the McAra boys the circulation of the Vidette was 260. Today it is 1,650. It is an eight-page seven-column quarto, all home-printed, and one of the best edited, best printed, and most ably conducted weeklies in Western Canada. It employs five men and three girls, and hopes soon to instal a battery of monolines. The advertising patronage of the Vidette is large. It is the paper's boast that it carries more general mercantile advertising than any country weekly in the Territories, the average for 1904 being 12 columns an issue. Mr. McAra, furthermore, is the pioneer of the flat rate in the Territories, the scale being $1 an inch per month. In connection with the paper is one of the best job plants in the Northwest, and this department shows indications of continued and rapid growth.

The Vidette is well housed in its own handsome home, a fine frame building 25x50 feet, of two stories and a stone basement, which is utilized as the pressroom. A gas engine supplies power for all the machinery, including the job presses and paper cutter, while in the news and job rooms above are to be found the most modern faces of job and advertising type.

Mr. McAra started as one-third proprietor of the Vidette with but $300 in cash. After a few months he bought out the interests of his two brothers, and the present position of the paper is altogether the result of his energy and ability.

Politically, the Vidette is a strong supporter of the Conservative policy, and its editorials are among those most largely watched for by the exchange editors of the big city dailies, as showing the trend of Conservative thought in the West. But even more important, from many points of view, is the line the Vidette has taken municipally. For the present preeminence of Indian Head among nearby towns its citizens have much to thank the aggressive campaign for local improvement that is one of the distinguishing features of the Vidette under Mr. McAra's management.

Earthquake in England.

A London cable says:—An earthquake lasting several seconds and occasioning much alarm, was felt about 2 o'clock last Sunday morning throughout Derbyshire and Yorkshire and in adjacent districts. There was trifling damage to walls and roofs in some places, and movable articles were severely shaken.

SUICIDE AT END OF SPREE.

SanFrancisco.—At the end of a protracted spree, Albert James Mason, a confidential clerk in the employ of the Northern Commercial company, cut his throat with a razor in his apartments at the Manhattan hotel. His body was found by Harry Ruckstuhl, the hotel engineer. A blood-stained razor lay beside the dead man on his bed. Mason was thirty-seven years of age and had been in the employ of the Northern Commercial company for several years. He first entered their service at St. Michaels, but later he was transferred to their local offices in Crossley building. He was a native of Montreal, and unmarried, but he had a number of relatives living in Canada. Deputy-coroner Brown removed the body of the dead man to the morgue, where an inquest will be held.

Weak, Tired People

NEED NEW BLOOD IN SPRING TO BRING HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

Spring blood is bad blood. It is clogged with impurities that make themselves felt in many ways, such as pimples and eruptions, poor digestion, occasional headaches, twinges of rheumatism, a lazy feeling in the morning, and a strong desire to avoid exertion. Sometimes the nerves are unstrung, you feel dull and depressed, and your strength is slipping away. You can only be put right by enriching the blood and driving out the impurities. Purgatives won't do this —they only make you weaker. What you need is a tonic, and the best tonic that medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, brace the nerves and bring health and energy to weak, despondent and easily tired men and women. Mrs. Chas. Blackburn, Aylesford Station, N.S., says: "For the past ten years Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine I have taken when I found I needed medicine. Last spring I was feeling poorly, was weak, easily tired and depressed. I got three boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they made me feel like a new person. They are the best medicine I know of when the blood is out of condition."

If you need a medicine this spring—and there are few people who do not—take a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and you will find an improved appetite and new health and strength such as no other medicine can give you. There is no disease of the blood these pills will not cure, simply because they make the new, rich blood that drives disease from the system. The genuine Pink Pills have the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Senator W. A. Elsberg was talking in the Capitol at Albany about a certain legislative defeat. "They took their defeat with resignation," he said. "It was, you see, softened and made palatable for them. I believe in that. I believe in tempering victory with mercy always." Senator Elsberg smiled. "I admire heartily," he said, "the kindness of the Troy girl who refused the civil engineer's offer of marriage. "The engineer, on being refused, groaned aloud. "Martha, he said, make it easier for me to bear." He opened and shut his mouth convulsively. Great beads stood on his brow. His features were distorted with anguish. He gnawed his moustache. "Can't you Martha," he groaned; "can't you make it easier for me?" "Yes, George," said the young woman. "I snore dreadfully."

A Successful Medicine.—Everyone wishes to be successful in any undertaking in which he may engage. It is therefore, extremely gratifying to the proprietors of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to know that their efforts to compound a medicine which would prove a blessing to mankind have been successful beyond their expectations. The endorsation of these Pills by the public is a guarantee that the pill has been prodticed which will fulfil everything claimed for it.

A gentleman whose nose had been lost was invited to tea. "My dear," said the good lady of the house to her little daughter, "I want you to be very particular and to make no remarks about Mr. J——'s nose." Gathered around the table, everything was going well; the child peeped about, looked rather puzzled and at last startled the table: "Ma, why did you tell me to say nothing about Mr. J——'s nose? He hasn't got any."

BLEW UP BOARDING HOUSE.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Because he had been ejected from a boarding house at Lazerne, a suburb of this city, Andrew Bygash, a Hungarian, blew up the building with dynamite. He placed a stick of the explosive under one corner of the house, and the entire rear portion of the structure, the kitchen and two bedrooms over it, were completely wrecked by the explosion. Fortunately, the fifteen inmates escaped injury. Bygash is in jail.

THIS MESSAGE IS FOR WOMEN

DAME BRADETTE CURED OF ALL HER PAINS BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Suffered for Years before she found Quick Relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

St. Rose du Degele, Temiscouta Co., Que., April 24.—(Special)—Suffering women all over Canada will read with feelings of interest and relief the experience of Dame Amadee Bradette of this place.

"It gives me pleasure to be able to tell," says Dame Bradette, "that I am cured of all the ills I suffered for a number of years. I found in Dodd's Kidney Pills quick relief from all pains. I only had to take one box to bring back my health, and in five months I have had no return of my trouble."

Those troubles known only to women always spring from disordered Kidneys. The female organs are entirely dependent on the Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure the kidneys. That is why they always bring health, strength and cheerfulness to weak, run-down, suffering women.

A TEST OF READING.

With How Many of These Authors Are You Acquainted?

Let him who pretends to be a master of English letters say whether he has read the prose works of Milton and of Dryden. Has he first hand knowledge of the Elizabethan dramatists other than Shakespeare? Has he really perused all of Edmund Spenser's poetry? What does he know from his own reading of the "Advancement of Learning?" Has he read all of Sir Thomas Browne's prose and John Donne's poetry? And the great English pulpit orators—Jeremy Taylor, Fuller, South and Barrow—has he mastered their sermons?

Can he truthfully testify that he knows all of Swift, Johnson and Burke, all of Bishop Berkeley, Daniel Defoe, the novels of Richardson, Fielding, Smollett and Sterne, the histories of Hume, Robertson and Gibbon and also Hume's philosophical essays, the prose of Coleridge, Wordsworth's "Excursion," all of Shelley, Jane Austen's, Maria Edgeworth's and Disraeli's novels? These are English classics, books which no gentleman's library should be without and with the contents of which a well read man ought to be acquainted.

One would wager much against little that the ordinary man who calls himself well read has not read 50 per cent of the classics here enumerated.

JACK TAR'S SPREE.

The Second Section of It Cost Less Than the First.

In the Sailors home in Brooklyn the navy boys deposit for safe keeping in the course of a year many thousands of dollars. Some time ago one of them after being paid off at the end of his enlistment had $700, which he deposited with the superintendent of the home —all but $50, with which he intended to have a good time. Along toward midnight he returned in a hilarious condition and asked for $50 more. The superintendent handed him two one dollar bills, and the sailor went off apparently satisfied. The following morning he dropped in and requested the superintendent to give him the balance of his money, as he was going home. The superintendent offered him $648.

"No," said the sailor; "I'm not that kind of a chap. I don't want to cheat you out of $48. I drew $100 from you last night, and you've paid me $48 too much."

"You're mistaken," said the superintendent. "When you came the second time I gave you only $2, and this is the balance due you."

"All right, governor," replied the Jack tar. "But, would you believe it, I had just as much fun on that $2 as if it had been $50?"

NO MONOPOLY OF BRAINS.

This Is the Age of Opportunity For the Able Man.

One of the many hopeful signs of the times is the apparent decay of the breed of so called great men, those mighty personalities that in former times stood out like a solitary tree in a vast prairie. The reason for it is, of course, is the distinction of all these old time monopolies of brains which stunted all human beings except a few who by chance rather than by superiority of fiber grew and developed. There are thousands, literally thousands, of men now living who if they had lived a century or so ago and had done a work similar to that which they are doing without any very sonorous fanfare upon the trumpets of fame would have been the talk of the world and the main topic of history. And how many of the so called great achievements of so called great statesmen, soldiers and thinkers of former times would be impossible today because those achievements depended chiefly upon the ignorance and incapacity of the overwhelming mass of the men of their day!

Truly this is the age of opportunity.

Swimming Elephants.

The elephants of Burma, in India, are used for a variety of purposes. Throughout the day they work steadily as laborers in carrying the great timbers from place to place, a single elephant doing the work, it is estimated, of a score of men. Their great diversion in hours of rest is bathing, and they take their baths in a curious way. The keeper takes his place on the back of an elephant and thus placed makes a tour of a great lake or river, the huge animal swimming under him at a surprising rate, while he is kept high and dry above water.

An Autograph Hint.

"Will you oblige me with your autograph?" asked a bore of a busy public man.

"Certainly," replied the public man. "Just make out a check for 10 guineas payable to my order. I will indorse it cheerfully, and in due time, you may be sure, it will come back to you safely through your bank."

Candles as Bullets.

A difference of opinion seems to have arisen over the effect of firing a candle at a board. For a long time the ancient tradition has held its own that the soft tallow hurled at the mark by a musket would put a hole through an ordinary plank. Yet here comes a gun bearer who declares that he has tried the experiment and finds the material of the candle wildly scattered upon the target. Of course with present day rifles and breechloaders it may not be possible to discharge a candle effectively from a military arm or from the latest style of sporting guns. But it would certainly be a pity to leave the question unsolved.

Cuba's President.

When Tomas Estrada Palma was first elected president of Cuba, in February, 1902, he belonged to no political party save the party of Cuban patriots. Since then the Cubans have been separated into parties on lines of support or opposition to various policies. As the time for an election approaches the president has announced his adherence to the Moderate party, to which it is commonly supposed he will look for support in the campaign for re-election that is about to begin. His term will expire next year; consequently an election must be held in a few months.

1905 INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

With purses totaling $13,060, the card of races for the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition, running from July 20 to 27, offers sufficient openings to suit all classes of entries. In many of the running events special favor is shown horses bred in Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in the way of weight, an extra 5 lbs. allowance being made in several of the races.

In the trotting events too there are many chances for good money. The classes range from the free-for-all, up to the 2.35 trot or 2.40 pace, with purses ranging from $1200 down to $400. There are twelve of these events, any one of which should prove a strong drawing card for Manitoba horses have proved their nettle too often to take a second place anywhere. Then again provision has been made for three extra races at $200 each the conditions of which have been left till the entries start to come in, so that the events may be made to fit in to the best advantage with the character of the entries.

The Dominion Industrial mile handicap, with a purse of $90 in sight should prove a strong factor, and the second free-for-all, which in reality is what the special race of July 27 amounts to, gives a splendid opening to owners of fast ones, who do not care to send their horses against the cracks. It is a full bill, and an interesting one. The cards are now in the hands of the printers and copies may be had on application to the secretary of the Exhibition board.

A country editor was appointed through some misapprehension or other to fill the city editorship of a leading daily. The first day of his appointment a fierce fire swept the town—a fire, let us say, like that which devastated Baltimore last winter. The managing editor sent for the new city editor and asked him what arrangements he had made for reporting the fire fully and accurately. "Why," said the new man, "I've made none." "None," said the managing editor. "Good gracious, man, why none?" "What's the use printing anything about a fire like this?" said the city editor. "It's such a big fire that everybody in town will go to see it for himself."

IS YOUR LIVER TO BLAME?

Here are the Symptoms which Tell of a Congested Liver and Indicate the Need of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

The tongue is coated, the appetite is impaired, digestion is deranged, the bowels are constipated, and there are feelings of fullness and soreness about the liver.

You may have headache and dizziness, pains in the limbs, feverishness, yellowness of the eye and skin, depression of spirits, and irritability of temper.

So great is the influence of the liver on the other organs of the body, that once it is deranged, the whole system seems to be upset.

There are no means by which you can so quickly and certainly obtain relief from torpid, sluggish liver action as by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

One pill at bedtime, and the result is a thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems, and new vigor and regularity for liver, kidneys and bowels.

No family medicine has been more extensively used in Canada than Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and none has such a reputation for reliability and certainty of action.

Enliven the action of the liver by this well-known treatment, and you ensure good digestion and regular action of the bowels—the foundation of good health.

Mr. Roger Clancy, farmer, Chepstowe, Bruce County, Ont., states:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and would say that there is no medicine that equals them as a cure for stomach troubles, biliousness, torpid liver and headache. I was troubled a great deal with these ailments before using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they have proven wonderfully successful in my case.

"I would not think of being without a box of these pills in the house and whenever I feel any symptoms of these disorders I take one of these pills, and they set me all right again. I can strongly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the troubles mentioned above."

The greater the irritation in the throat the more distressing the cough becomes. Coughing is the effort of Nature to expel this irritating substance from the air passages. Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will heal the inflamed parts, which exude mucous, and restore them to a healthy state, the cough disappearing under the curative effects of the medicine. It is pleasant to the taste, and the price, 25 cents, is within the reach of all.

To Know is to Prevent.—If the miners who work in cold water most of the day would rub their feet and legs with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil they would escape muscular rheumatism and render their nether limbs proof against the ill effects of exposure to the cold. Dr. W. H. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, was asked the other day by a reporter why he did not investigate rouge. "Rouge," the reporter said, "may be very harmful, very poisonous, sir. Don't you think that it requires investigation?" Dr. Wiley smiled. "No," he answered, "I can't say I do. If rouge were poisonous unnumbered women would have died of it long ago. "By the way, I'll tell you a queer thing about rouge. It is something I came upon one day in a pharmacy, and I think it illustrates an odd phase of human nature. "A young girl was buying a pot of rouge and I heard her murmur to the clerk: "You guarantee that this will not rub off?" "I do indeed," the clerk answered. "This, like all our rouges, is warranted to stand the hardest kiss of investigation that any of your women friends will try on it."

The following dialogue was overheard in a drug store: Druggist (to little girl customer)—Did you say pills, miss? Little Girl—Yes sir, please. Druggist—Antibilious? Little Girl—No, sir, but uncle is.

Parents buy Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator because they know it is a safe medicine for their children and an effectual expeller of worms.

Whiting—Since my son has been at college the things he has learned are perfectly marvellous. Biting—I've no doubt of it, but I wouldn't worry. He'll forget them all after a few years.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

What Happened.

She pressed her ruby lips to his
In one ecstatic kiss;
They seemed at peace with all the world,
Enrapt in holy bliss;
But, with the osculation o'er,
It was not hard to find
That, though she took her lips away,
The ruby stayed behind!

Positively Brutal.

She—Just see how much your little wife loves you. She made this cake for you all by herself.

He—Yes, darling, and now if you will eat it all by yourself I shall possess indisputable proof of your devotion.

Moral—Keep Quiet.

An old crow sat on a hickory limb,
Moaning be-caws his eyes were dimb;
A hunter heard
The noisy beard
And straightway made a corpse of himb.

The Same Girl.

Young Husband—When I used to kiss you, you slapped me.

Young Wife—Well, you won't get slapped now unless you forget to kiss me.

The Insecure Season.

The time draws near when no one knows
Just when to shake his winter clothes,
For if you wear 'em you feel bad,
And if you don't you wish you had.

Their Privilege.

"There's Mrs. Brown wearing the same gown she wore last year."

"Yes, but the Browns are so rich that they can afford to be eccentric."

Nervy Indeed.

"The folks who tantalize me most," exclaimed the charming miss,
"Are men who call and have the nerve to ask me for a kiss."

Sure Thing.

Miles—Last night I dreamed that I was wealthy. What's that a sign of?

Giles—It's a sign that you awoke and found your pipe had gone out.

And Several "Extras."

"May I print a kiss on your lips?" I said,
And she nodded her sweet permission;
So we went to press, and I rather guess
We printed a full edition.

Harder Than Flint.

Dashaway—You don't mean to say she jilted you?

Cleverton—She did, old man. That girl has the heart of a motorman.

Don't.

But, girlies, you should never let Yourselves do thus. Take care!
Your little lips were never made
To hold your street car fare.

Devoted.

She—You say you are devoted to art. What is the particular art that you love best?

He—Thou art.

Sometimes Can't.

The songster with a song to sing
Can't always get to sing it;
The poet with an ode to spring
Can't always get to spring it.

Alimony.

De Style—Did he marry her for her money?

Gunbusta—Yes, and then she divorced him for his.

Clothes and the Man.

No matter how a man may dress,
'Tis not his clothes that make him;
Indeed, the swells themselves confess
More often 'tis they break him.
—Syracuse Herald.

Faint Hearted.

"I think you ought to have that tooth out."

"M—m—well; guess I'll take it out in thinking."

A Complaint.

"Alas," the housewife cried, "it seems
I can't make picalilly.
No matter how I mix the things,
They always pickle filly."

Troubles of the Rich.

Jaggles—What persons are most subject to appendicitis?

Waggles—Those who are able to pay for an operation.

Mutability.

When first I heard her dulcet voice,
It set my heart to leaping.
We married. Now from it I find Relief alone when sleeping.

An Excellent Reason.

"Why do you call it a feminine compliment?"

"Because there is a sting in it."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Correct.

"The plural, then, of 'wife' is what?"
The teacher asked. Said Bess,
A most precocious little tot,
"It's bigamy, I guess."

The Natural Result.

"He doesn't seem to enjoy life."

"Of course not. He's got the health food mania and eats nothing else."—Chicago Post.

No Danger.

"Now, Reginald!" cried Mr. Smith,
"Don't point that empty gun."
"It isn't empty, father, dear;
It's loaded!" said the son.

Cut Up About It.

Sharpe—Did the barber's conversation make an impression on you?

Whalton—No, but his razor did.—Chicago News.

The Worst.

Men have a lengthy list of woes
To spoil their hopes and twist 'em,
But his are worst who betting goes
Upon a sure thing system.
—Washington Star.

Mr. L. B. Cochran, Dominion Land Agent, had a busy time last month, and has just sent in his reports. The work of the land office at this point is growing apace, through the arrival of new settlers etc.

On another page our readers will find the advertisement issued by the North-West Government re fireguards. Tenders are required to be sent to Regina by the 14th June. Good fireguards are an important consideration in western affairs, and we hope no one will tender for this work unless intending to do it thoroughly. For farther information read the advertisement or consult Mr. W. T. Finlay, M.L.A.

MAKING FORTUNES.

The Money of the Market Not For the Man With a Theory.

Fortunes have been made in the Chicago board of trade not by men who entered the market with a preconceived theory as to its course, which they attempted to make good through thick and thin, but rather by those who took things as they came, watching the drift, shaping their way from day to day, like prudent merchants, according to the current.

This is confusing to the novice, for the novice almost always comes in with a preconceived theory. Some time ago a young man with a large hope, a moderate fortune and considerable social prestige was shown the enormous possibilities in December pork. It looked absolutely convincing, but he called upon a great packer with whom he had a personal acquaintance. Yes; the packer thought very well of pork—was buying it, in fact. Thus doubly assured the young man bought. The market went his way, and he bought more. Then the market turned. The young man reviewed his convincing statistics, remembered the words of the packer and stood stubbornly upon his line. When he was getting near to the end of his margins, he was horrified to learn that his friend the packer had shifted to the other side of the market two weeks before. He visited him, recalled their conversation and explained the situation. The packer stared. "Do you mean you've been holding 2,500 barrels of pork all this time?" he demanded. "Yes," said the young man, "and I have it yet. Now, what can I do with it?" "I don't know," said the packer, "unless you can eat it."

Vampire Superstitions.

The prevailing belief in European countries was that vampires were the ghosts of suicides or others who had died violent deaths and were forced by the devil to leave their graves at night and feed on the blood of men and women, and any who died at the hands of these dreadful creatures also became vampires. In this way beautiful women became vampires and enticed young men and fed on their blood and flesh. It was believed that they had power to assume any shape or form desired between sunset and sunrise and that they committed most of their awful deeds at midnight. They were powerless in the daytime and were generally in a torpid state. Garlic and wild rosebushes were guards against them, and crucifixes were feared by them. To prevent suicides from becoming vampires they were buried with a stake driven through their hearts, and the straw they had slept on was burned. All the dogs and cats in the village were locked up, for if a dog or cat jumped over a corpse it was sure to become the home of a vampire.—Chicago Tribune.

A Narrow Escape For One Man.

The importance of examining closely the hair found on weapons was shown in a case in which a hatchet having clotted blood and hair adherent to it was produced as evidence against a prisoner suspected of murder in a little country town. It was found under his bed. This, with other circumstantial evidence, had turned public opinion strongly against the prisoner, but when the hair was examined by a microscopist who chanced to be in the court-room it was found not to be human, but that of some animal. This circumstance led to a more complete sifting of the evidence, and the accused was acquitted. It turned out that he had killed a dog with the hatchet and had carelessly thrown the weapon under the bed. So his life literally hung on a hair.

Where Life Is Strenuous.

Here in the northwest one encounters the living representation of the strenuous life. Here men work together in a way unknown anywhere else. The east is insular, every man for himself. The northwest, indeed the whole west, has learned the value of co-operation and community interest. Migrating to a new country, with difficulties and dangers on every hand, the people have been forced to combine and stand with solid front to the world. As a result innumerable organizations have sprung up having for their purpose the advancement of some community interest.—Ray Stannard Baker in Century.

No Cause For Alarm.

"Ah," sighed Mr. Henpeck, "it's a pity the way most great men's sons turn out. It's only in rare cases that they amount to anything."

"I hope," the lady returned, "that you are not worrying about our child in this connection."—Herald.

Out of Place.

A sentry, an Irishman, was on post duty for the first time at night, when the officer of the day approached.

He called, "Who comes there?"

"Officer of the day," was the reply.

"Then what are yez doin' out at night?" asked the sentry.

Crucial Test.

A great struggle arises in a woman's mind when she is asked what her new gown cost. She is always in doubt whether to cut the price in half and make you envy her the bargain or double it and make you envy her affluence.

The Lucky Man.

A.—That's Jones' daughter with him. She's just about to be married.

B.—Who's the lucky man?

A.—Jones.

After crosses and losses men grow humbler and wiser.—Franklin.

Originality is simply a pair of fresh eyes.—Higginson.

Chief Justice Sifton came in from the south on Friday morning and, after remaining here all day, proceeded to Calgary in the evening.

Mr. J. E. Miers visited the Sarnia Ranch, at Walsh, on Wednesday where he secured some very fine photos of Mr. Grant's residence and the ranch buildings. The views include the old building first erected, the second one put up which was a little more pretentious, and the splendid modern residence completed last year. In addition Mr. Miers took photographs of sheep shearing, and the cattle corrals prettily situated in a valley by an ever running creek.

The Claresholm Review was a "yellow journal" last week, but only in the color of the paper and that was an accident.

THE WAR.

Additional news of the great battle of Korean Straits emphasizes the decisive nature of the Japanese success.

The details of the battle indicate a most marvellous victory for the Japanese whose success was due as much to superior tactics when the eventful moment arrived as to the superior position which they secured. The intelligence department of the Japanese seems to have been quite as successful as it had been on land, and from the dispatches it would seem as though the Japanese never were without accurate information regarding the whereabouts of the Russian navy.

The Russian losses are placed at 22 ships of all kinds, including several of their best battleships, while the Japs only lost three small boats.

Admiral Rojestvensky's flag-ship was sunk and the Admiral wounded. He was picked up and is now, with two other admirals, a prisoner in Tokio.

GOPHERS TO BURN.

They have had gophers to burn at the Raymond mill since the bounty went into effect. At the meeting of the Agricultural Society Manager Green reported that they have had so many gophers brought in that they couldn't burn them. The boys brought them in such a stream that the fires in the big boilers were put out, and still the gophers came. The engine room filled up, all the boxes round the works were turned into extemporary coffins and the mill room was beginning to receive the over flow, when fortunately the supply of money gave out and the string of gopher hunters were called off. In all eight thousand dead gophers were presented for certification at the mill during the run, which was checked over and autopsimized by Mr Green, the worst job, so he reports that he ever had in his life.

All the gophers are not dead yet, and a further bounty of a cent a head will be paid by J. W. Knight and by Superintendent Williams for squirrels killed on their land.—Raymond Chronicle.

Dead Sick Of Asthma?

You couldn't be otherwise with such a distressing malady. Well, for one dollar spent on "Catarrhozone" you can be thoroughly cured. Foolish to delay, because asthma steadily grows worse. Get Catarrhozone to-day and cure yourself; it's pleasant to use, very simple and guaranteed. Prescribed by thousands of doctors and used by the people of nine nations—Certainly Catarrhozone must be good; it hasn't failed yet, no matter how chronic the case.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

Fine showers last week and warm weather are making crops look splendid and the farmers are wearing a smile that won't rub off, which says plainly to the old time rancher "I told you so". On rainy days the bachelor farmers bike to some one of their mansions, all the pencil stubs are brought to light, sharpened to a fine point and then the figuring begins. Land, say $10 per acre (voice from a lounger on the bed) If this rain continues another week I won't take ten. Wheat 25 bushels per acre at one dollar. Oats ninety per acre at sixty-five.

Say Bob if I was sure this thing would pan out as we are figuring, I'd go east for that girl of mine.

"It's safe enough Charlie, I have a blamed good notion to go myself. To see the way Will has improved since he went East makes me feel lonesome.

Alright Bob say we both go. Will can look after our places till we get back, (Shake.)

There is a story told that a coal mine owner asked a party of young people to visit his mines when the men were at work. His very kind offer was gladly accepted they appointed a time and place for meeting. When the party gathered at the appointed place one young lady was dressed in white. When the guide met the party he remarked to the lady that she had better cover her white dress to save it from dirt. "Oh," answered the lady, "I think that I can keep white where ever I go." When they took the cage at the top of the mine the lady in the white was very careful to watch her dress, but in going through the mines she became so interested that she forgot her dress and when it was time to return she noticed her original white dress was a great mass of oil and coal dust.

So it is like our Lord's warning to us Christains. We are told we must stay in clean places if we would keep clean. For his warning is that if a Christian fall into intemperance, or selfish yielding ot wordliness his last ending will be very bad. Then let us each strive to be temperate in all things.

Valuable Advice to Mothers.

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidences of Grippe, Sore Throat, or sickness of any kind, get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent a serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline, which has been the great family remedy in Canada for the past fifty years. Try a 25c. bottle of Nerviline.

FASHION IN SPEECH.

Some Words Go Out of Favor and Win Their Way Back.

The history of the race is written in the words it uses. As we grow and change, so our language grows and changes. Mr. Leon Mead in his book "Word Coinage" points out that some words go out of fashion and come back, like tan shoes and wide rimmed hats, although the change in words is much slower than the change in dress.

In Spenser's day "forestall," "fain," "scathes," "askance," "embellish" and "dapper" were not considered good, but they have since gained respectability and won their place in the language. The seventeenth century regarded as obsolete a number of Chaucer's words —"transcend," "bland," "sphere," "blithe," "franchise," "carve," "anthem." One by one these words came to life again and walk the pages of our literature in full vitality. Other words now indispensable which the seventeenth century rejected are "plumage," "tapestry," "tissue," "ledge," "trenchant," "resource," "villainy," "thrill," "yelp," "dovetail."

Bacon did not have the good word "encyclopedia," but used the heavy equivalent, "circle learning."

Fulke, the sixteenth century author who wrote "A Defense of the Sincere and True Translations of the Holie Scriptures Into the English Tong," did not admit "neophyte," "homicide," "scandal," "destruction," "tunic," "despicable," "rational." Another book published in 1658 puts the stamp of censure on "oblique," "radiant," "adoption," "caress," "amphibious," "horizontal," "concede," "articulate," "destination," "compensate," "complicated" and "adventitious."

It is hard to trace the history of a fashion in words. Seldom do we have the precise record that Chesterfield furnishes us in a letter in which he says that he was present at the birth of the word "flirtation" on the lips of a beautiful woman. Even with that record we cannot tell why "flirtation" remained in the language and was not dropped like hundreds of other new coinages.

It isn't what a man has, but what he does with it, that counts.—Comfort.

An Odd Advertisement.

The sudden popularity some years ago of Mr. Shorthouse's book, "John Inglesant," is attributed to an odd incident. "Mr. Gladstone," says the London Express, "was sitting to a photographer and holding in his hand a copy of 'John Inglesant.' The gold lettering on the cover caught the light, and the title showed clearly in the photograph. The likeness of the great statesman proved a very popular one, and its circulation broadcast over the country led to a widespread demand for the book."

Church Nods.

"Didn't the minister feel it when so many in the congregation fell asleep during the sermon?"

"Oh, no. It encouraged him to keep on."

"How so?"

"Why, he was egotistical enough to think they were nodding approval at what he said."

Tame Trout.

An English gentleman had some trout in a piece of water close to his front door. On one occasion he held a worm near the surface of the water. A large trout jumped at the worm and, seizing hold of his fingers, cut them to the bone with its teeth by its own weight.

His Strenuous Way.

Appreciation.

"You have great admiration for your wife's judgment," said the friend.

"I have," answered Mr. Meekton. "She's the only woman who ever said 'Yes' when I proposed to her."

Rather Dense.

Wigg—He's rather dense, isn't he?

Wagg—Yes. He wouldn't recognize the point of a joke if he sat down on it.

Keep doing, always doing. Wishing, dreaming, intending, murmuring, talking, sighing and repining are all idle and profitless employments.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over forty years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment cures in the privacy of your home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands of bad cases. It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take his advice and be well.

Mrs. R. D. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., O., writes: "I have received the 'Medical Adviser.' A crisp, new five dollar bill could not tempt me to part with it."

On receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of mailing only, we will send to any address a paper-bound copy of Dr. Pierce's great 1008-page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser." Or, for 50 stamps the same in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

FACTS.

IT IS NO DISGRACE TO BE POOR, BUT MIGHTY INCONVENIENT.

One of the reasons so many people are so poor is because they failed to grasp opportunities. NAPOLEON has said "Ability is of little account without opportunity."

"He who has to look twice to see an opportunity generally finds someone else in possession of it."

One of the world's most successful financiers, when asked how he made his fortune replied. "I used my brain and took advantage of opportunities as they occurred to me."

HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY. As you will be able to see by the progress of the Natural Gas Town, Medicine Hat, which is going ahead in leaps and bounds. Its population is increasing wonderfully, its bank clearings, building permits, etc., are surpassed in the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta only by Regina, Calgary and Edmonton.

Some of the greatest fortunes in America have been made by their owners investing a few dollars in suburban acreage and lots. "There have been many fortunes made, and made honestly too, out of the increase of values in real estate in the growing Western Towns in the last ten years than from all other sources combined."

"The original Jacob Astor was born at Waldorf in Germany, in 1760. His father was a butcher, and the boy received an immense dislike for that business. His first employer was a quaker in New York City, who gave him $2 a week for beating the fur skins. He was soon able to start a small junk shop in Pearl Street. As rapidly as John Jacob Astor accumulated money he invested it in real estate. Less far seeing men laughed at these investments. The city proper did not extend at that time beyond Canal street. Time, however, proved the soundness of Mr. Astor's judgment, and before he died he was worth $20,000,000."

FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE OF THE ASTOR[illegible]

There is no better investment in Western Canada to-day than Medicine Hat Suburban Properties and RIVERSIDE LOTS beats them all.

If you put $5 a week in a good bank you would have at the end of the year $250. On this you would receive about $3.90 interest. Now if you put $5 a month into a Riverside Lot it will double in price in six months. Secure a lot before you are too late.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

"Will you let me advise you as to what your duty is, Reine," he said, very gently, "and follow it?"

In uttering this last sentence, Chesleigh unconsciously took up his hat, which he had laid on a chair beside him; Reine, sensitive as to his slightest movement, took it as an intimation that he was wishing the interview over, and was anxious to leave her.

She looked wistfully into his face, with a deep sigh. "I will listen to what you tell me, but I cannot promise to follow it," she said.

"With all his faults you love him still, Reine," said Chesleigh, very gravely, and because of that love you must——"

She interrupted him with a dreary laugh.

"I have never loved him, Bernard," she sobbed. "I see now that it was only a girlish, mad infatuation that I had for a pair of fine eyes and a curling blonde moustache. I do not wish to speak evil of him, Bernard," she said, slowly; "the very fact that he has injured me should make me generous to him; the very fact that I dislike him should make me speak well of him. Do not blame me for abhorring him," she pleaded. "How could anyone help despising and disliking a man who has not since marriage shown me the ordinary civility that a gentleman never fails to show to a lady? I have been cruelly victimized. There is but one course open to me—to go away."

"There are two ways before you, Reine," said Chesleigh, pityingly. "That of flying from your fate—or making the best of it; running away from your trouble would be a commonplace ending. I see how you may make yourself a heroine, Reine, and unless I am greatly mistaken in the estimate of your character, you will do it."

He took her little, trembling hands in his own brave, strong ones, pleading with her gently and tenderly to go back again to the home from which she had just fled, to try just a little while longer to live in peace and unison with the husband she had wedded.

He pictured to her in glowing words how heroic such a line of action would be. She had a great mission to perform, reclaiming Waldemar Waldron from the slough of dissipation into which he had drifted, instead of fleeing from him and leaving him to his fate.

Reine looked at Bernard in sheer wonder.

He met the glance calmly.

"Let my entreaties win you from the path you have marked out for you, Reine," he said. "It is a delicate matter at any time to interfere between man and wife. It is only because I take so true an interest in you that I dare speak at all."

"Ah, Reine, you have your fate in your own hands. Go back to your husband and plead with him to commence life anew with you. Tell him that you, on your part, will do all you can; that you are willing to make any effort to bring about a pleasanter state of things."

"It would be quite useless, Bernard," she said, hopelessly. "Snow and sun, water and fire, will agree together better than he and I ever can."

"Promise me that you will try it, Reine," he urged. "It is worth the effort; it is, indeed. And if it fails, you will at least have done your best."

"He will only say something very unkind, perhaps insulting to me, Bernard," she exclaimed, bitterly.

"Then you must summon all your patience to your aid, Reine," he said, gently. "You may have many sore humiliations, many hours of pitiful annoyance, many a contest with your own pride, but you will win in the end."

She clasped her hands, and looked at him with piteous entreaty.

"You forget, Bernard, that my husband does not love me," she said. "He would only sneer and laugh at me. Kindness would be thrown away upon him."

"You can but try," urged her companion, gently.

He saw that she was listening to him with a thoughtful face, and his natural eloquence rose to the occasion. He pleaded with her, used his strongest arguments, and in the end he succeeded in winning the promise from her that she would try again—the life she had been so eager to cast off.

"We shall meet often in society, Reine," he said, "and I shall watch eagerly for the signs and tokens that shall tell me you and your husband are once more happy."

A faint smile parted her lips. She caught his hand and kissed it.

The caressing touch of those innocent, velvet lips made the blood leap like wine through his veins. But not a muscle of his face betrayed his agitation.

For the second time that night he called a cab, and placing Reine in it, saw her safely to her home; leaving her with an earnest, cheery "good night."

Bernard Chesleigh was a strong man, strong in his noble principles of honor, strong in his own integrity; but as he rode homeward to his hotel alone that night, hot tears forced themselves to his eyes.

His life was ruined, wrecked, and a sigh broke from his bearded lips as a thought of "what might have been in the dim future" occurred to him—if he had allowed Reine to follow her own course.

He had been a noble foe to Waldemar Waldron. Not one man in ten thousand could have so heroically resisted the temptation to encourage her to follow the bent of her own will, which would have torn down the barrier between them.

She would not know it now. But in the long years to come there might come a day when she would realize how true and steadfast the love had proven which she had once flung so lightly away.

He could never forget her; for that love which was buried deep in his soul was a part of his life.

If she should ever need the help of a strong arm, his should be at her disposal. He would have given every drop of blood in his heart to have served her. He would watch over her from afar. He would give his very life for her, if need be. His was a noble, exalted love, which would always prove true.

How many men in his place, loving her as he did, could have beat back from his lips the reckless, passionate whisper: "Come with me, dear; fly from him you hate, to the arms of love; the world would be well lost for both of us—for love's sake."

CHAPTER XXI.

Softly as a shadow Reine crept back to the lonely boudoir she had so lately quitted. No one had missed her, although she had been gone an hour or more.

It was drawing close on to midnight now. Waldemar might come in at any moment. He must not find her with her wraps on.

She laid them wearily aside, praying to Heaven that she would have strength to follow closely the program Bernard had laid out for her.

Poor Bernard! What a true and noble friend he had proven himself! How his handsome face had glowed with enthusiasm as he had pleaded with her to turn back! How strange it was that she had not noticed this grandeur of soul, this nobility of spirit, before! This man had stooped from his high pedestal to love her, and she had tossed that love from her as carelessly as a child tosses away a broken toy!

Now, when it was too late, she realized what she had lost. Ah, yes! the past was all over between them. There was no time for regrets or tears now over "what might have been."

Reine had not thrown off her wrappings a moment too soon, for a heavy step sounded on the stairs, and the next moment Waldemar Waldron entered the room.

It was a great trial to keep back the bitter words that sprang to her lips, or vail the scorn that flashed into her eyes, but by a great effort Reine did it.

She looked up at him, and was surprised to find that the effects of the wine which he had indulged in at the ball had well nigh worn away. How could she speak kindly to him when they had parted in such a bitter quarrel a few short hours before?

He was the first to break the awkward silence.

"How does it happen that you are up waiting for me?" he asked, brusquely, looking at her with keen curiosity.

The girl's face flushed. Hot, bitter rebellion rose in her heart. She stilled the anger and contempt. Her victory over herself was so great that she was surprised at it.

She rose from her chair, her hands trembling nervously, her lovely, childlike face flushing and paling by turns.

"I have waited for you, Waldemar, because I have something to say to you," she said, very gently.

He looked at her steadily.

"You want to renew that scene that occurred in the ball-room," he said, harshly; "but if you are wise you will let matters drop. You provoked me into doing what I did."

"Are you sorry for it now?" she asked, wistfully.

"Yes," he confessed, a dull red flaming into his face. "But I repeat, you provoked me to it, Reine, and you know it."

She went up to him, laying her little white hand on his arm.

"We have not been very happy—have we, Waldemar? We have quarrelled and disputed until I am ashamed to think of it," she said.

He looked at her in amazement. She would not see the surprise on his face or make the least difference because of it.

"Most decidedly, Reine, we have done our best in that line," he admitted. "We have not kept the peace."

"I should like so much to change all that, Waldemar," she said, in a low voice; "to try if we cannot begin again and really do better. I will try, if you will, Waldemar."

He looked at her with a contemptuous laugh.

"Have you been to a revival meeting?" he asked.

Reine's face flushed, and hot words of anger came to her lips; but she controlled herself. She would not utter them.

"No, I have not," she replied; "but I have been thinking, Waldemar, and would give anything on earth if we could do a little better—agree a little better. Now, for instance, if you will promise not to speak angrily or contemptuously to me, I will make the same promise to you."

"I shall do nothing of the kind," he answered, haughtily, a sudden fire leaping into his indolent, handsome face. "I tell you what, my lady Reine," he replied, roughly—"I do not like this sudden fit of humility. 'Still waters run deep.' It betokens no good. You have some deep design in your head, and I know it."

"You are wrong," she replied. "I want simply to be on better terms with you, so that we may have some chance of happiness. I want no more. We are husband and wife now; we must spend our lives together. Let us make the best of each other, Waldemar."

She spoke quickly, with an appealing face, her little trembling hands clutched nervously together. He answered her almost ferociously.

"What do you mean by making the best of each other?" he cried. "Do you mean that I am not good enough for you?"

"I do not know," she replied, hopelessly, a dull feeling of despair coming over her.

"Then you ought to know," he retorted. "If you wanted to marry a saint you should not have thrown Chesleigh over."

She raised her clear blue eyes to his face, and he read something in them that puzzled him.

"Remember that I gave up everything in the world for your sake, Waldemar," she said, in a low voice; "and in memory of that I would like you to be more kind to me. My heart is breaking for want of sympathy and—and—love."

"Such utter nonsense!—such rubbish! Who has been putting such romantic notions into your head?" he asked, sharply. "I am tired and sick of hearing over and over again what you have given up for my sake; let me hear no more of it. Never talk to me in this strain again. I shall never be any woman's slave; but I will compel my wife to listen to me, and not attempt to dictate to me. If you are not happy it is your own fault—your own temper and your own pride."

"Perhaps so," she said, listlessly. "You may rest quite assured of one thing—that while I live I shall never broach this subject again to you. If, in time to come, I want a friend, I shall not come to you. If I want advice, consolation, sympathy, kindness, I shall never ask it from you."

"So much the better," he answered, leaning indolently back in his favorite arm-chair. "If there is anything I abhor, it is a crying, fault-finding woman. At such times I can realize what 'Ik. Marvel' meant when he said: 'I long to break away, and find what liveliness can be found elsewhere.'"

Reine turned away from him proudly. It had been a terrible mistake, trying to make friendly overtures to him. She saw plainly they could never live as other husbands and wives did. It was but the common fate of the many who resort to runaway marriages. They never turn out happily. Ah! would that young girls would take warning!

Reine's was the most unhappy of all unhappy marriages.

It was Waldemar Waldron's own fault that his lovely girl-wife's idolatrous love for himself died away, giving place to hopeless despair, which grew from bad to worse—into positive dislike.

A week passed. Although Reine did her best, her heroic effort to live on better terms with Waldemar Waldron had met with rebuffs and ignominious failure.

One afternoon she had asked him to take her the following day to drive through Central Park, and for a wonder he consented; but when the hour rolled around—the sleigh stood at the door—her husband had quite forgotten his appointment with her, and the consequence was that she rode alone.

At the park entrance she saw Bernard Chesleigh, who was just alighting from a cab. She beckoned him eagerly to her side, making room for him on the cushioned seat; but, though it would have been a keen delight to him to have sat by her side, looked into her eyes, heard her voice for a brief half hour, he gravely declined, urging, as a reason, a pressing business engagement.

"You will be at the art gallery this afternoon, Bernard?" she questioned, earnestly.

He said "yes," regretting it, however, the next moment. He must not throw himself so constantly in her society; he must rather avoid it, for it was like the moth hovering about the flame that first blinded and then burned it. He turned to leave her, but she laid a detaining hand on his arm.

"Would you like to hear how my first lesson in obedience went on, Bernard?" she asked.

"If you would like to tell me," he replied.

"I waited up for him until he came in that night. I crushed my bitter anger and my hot rebellion, and greeted him as kindly as I could. I went up to him with that crimson mark still on my face, and asked him to bury all past unpleasantness and begin life anew—to try and make each other happier if we could. He answered me, Bernard, with a low, contemptuous laugh that made me—ah! well, never mind how it made me feel. He laughed at me, and insulted me, until I could have struck him down; only Heaven knows how I kept back the tears from my eyes and the sobs from my lips. It was an utter failure, Bernard. I told you how it would be before I humbled my pride before him—to be scoffed at for my pains."

"Well?" said Bernard Chesleigh, pityingly.

"Well, I would rather die, than humble myself to him again—that is all, Bernard. It is a terrible mistake to think that the embers of love can be awakened in a heart where they have once died out.

"It is of no use, Bernard," she repeated hopelessly. "Waldemar and I can never get along well together. He thinks that—and I know it. I am tired of hoping for a better state of things. No woman should coax her husband for the love that should be hers. I am too proud to do it. I cannot make the first advances even though I craved it, though in truth I do not."

He knew Reine's nature—the necessity of living in the atmosphere of affection, and his heart went out to her in a great throb of pity.

CHAPTER XXII.

Bernard Chesleigh gazed pityingly at the beautiful face.

"Promise me that you will not be discouraged with this first attempt to win your husband back to his old allegiance, Reine," he said earnestly, "even though you have met with slight encouragement so far. Great victories must be valiantly fought for, you know."

"I will do my best, but it will be a very poor 'best,' I fear," said the girl, holding out her hand to him.

He bent over it a moment—that little white hand that should have been his—then released it.

The next instant he was standing by the Park gate alone; the natty, red-cushioned sleigh, with its occupant, had vanished from sight, hidden by an abrupt curve of the road.

Poor Reine! so fatally fair, her beauty had been a curse to her. He asked himself how it would all end.

There was one thing that was quite positive—he could not, he must not see Reine again. He must leave New York at once. Better fly from danger than court it.

Reine rode listlessly enough through the Park. Hundreds of gaily caparisoned equipages dashed past her, and more than one cast a backward glance at Reine; but she did not see them, so intent was she upon her own thoughts.

Gay, chattering voices, together with the merry sound of sleigh-bells, rang out on the crisp air; but, just as Reine turned her horse about, she was startled by the sound of a familiar voice, pealing out in hilarious laughter.

She raised her eyes with a sudden start, and the sight that she saw made the hot blood course like lava through her veins, her heart beat, and a sudden mist gather before her eyes.

In a sleigh that flashed past her with the rapidity of lightning, she had beheld Waldemar Waldron. He was not alone. A young and exquisitely lovely girl sat beside him—a young girl with a laughing, dimpled face, a crimson mouth, flushed cheeks, and eyes flashing like stars.

Even in that meteoric glimpse, Reine could not help but notice how lovely the dark, glowing face was; and the rapt expression that rested on Waldemar's as he inclined his handsome head toward her.

Reine drew back, pale and breathless. Evidently neither of them had observed her. Reine was the last person that Waldron was thinking of at that particular moment.

Reine never remembered how she drove home through the crowded thoroughfares, her heart was in such a whirl of bitter emotions. She had been home an hour or more when Waldemar came to luncheon.

He was in capital good humor, singing a snatch of the latest opera as he entered. Reine went up to him, timidly placing two letters in his hand that had arrived for him in the morning mail.

"I had a long and weary wait for you this forenoon, Waldemar," she said. "Had you forgotten that you promised to take me out sleighing?"

She quite believed he would tell her frankly just what had detained him, and who his companion was with whom she had seen him in Central Park.

She had yet to learn the depth of falsity in Waldemar Waldron's nature. He gave a sudden start of surprise. His fair, indolent face flushed hotly.

He had forgotten it most certainly; but it would never do to admit it. He must resort to a subterfuge of some kind.

"You had a long wait, did you? Well, by George, that was careless of me to forget mentioning to you that I had a very important matter to attend to which would prevent me from accompanying you. I had to meet a man—"

The violent fit of coughing which attacked him then seemed a just retribution for the prevarication on his lips.

Reine drew back, scorn and wounded pride flashing in her eyes, her white lips trembling.

"An important matter to attend to!"

Her face flushed with bitter anger as she listened. Was driving a lovely girl through the Park such an important matter that he should forget her?

A quick retort rose to her lips, but ere she could give it utterance, Waldemar Waldron sprang from his chair, clutching nervously at the open letter he held in his hand, his face dark with passion, then turning fairly livid.

"Affairs are reaching a crisis," he muttered, crushing the letter deep down into his pocket with something like a groan.

At sight of his distress Reine forgot her pride and her terrible anger. In a moment she was kneeling beside him.

"What is the matter, Waldemar?" she urged. "Have you bad news?"

"Bad news! It is the worse possible news, Reine," he cried, desperately. "Every one is pushing me for money, and unless I can make an immediate raise from some source or other, we are completely ruined."

His lovely young wife looked at him. She had not the least idea what complete ruin meant.

He went on excitedly. "I can't see my way clear. We shall come to grief, I'm afraid, and that speedily, to, unless—unless—"

He moved uneasily in his chair, his eyes drooping nervously under her calm, searching gaze.

"Unless what, Waldemar?" she asked, earnestly.

"Unless you can manage it for me, Reine," he answered.

She looked up into his face.

"I," she answered in dismay. "Oh, Waldemar, tell me how."

He had the grace to flush hotly. He pondered for a choice of words in which to frame his reply. For one moment shame mastered him; but necessity spurred him on to desperate measures. "You could help me if you would go on the stage, Reine," he declared. "That face and form of yours would set New York wild. You'd get a handsome salary."

He did not raise his eyes to look at her; had he done so he would have been startled; he went on nervously—"And there's an opening for you—which I heard of by chance, that would turn any woman's head."

DEVIL TREES.

Deadly Plants Discovered In Nicaragua, Portugal and Korea.

The government of the republic of Nicaragua has sent experts from the capital to examine a remarkable and deadly tree that was recently discovered on the hacienda of Senora Maria Gasteazoro, near the town of Petacalpeque, department of Chinandega. To the tree has been given the name of arbol del diablo, or tree of the devil. Its discovery was made through the disappearance of a son of Senora Gasteazoro. Several days later the body of the boy and the carcass of the pony he was riding were found under the tree in a remote part of the hacienda. It was noticed that a sickly sweet odor emanated from the tree, and those who removed the body of the boy became suddenly dizzy while under its branches. Closer examination of the boy's body disclosed the fact that several blood vessels had burst, and later the same condition was disclosed by an examination of the remains of the pony. Under the tree were the bones of goats, hogs, burros and hundreds of birds. It is supposed that the boy, coming upon the heap of bones, stopped to investigate and that both boy and pony were overpowered by the deadly fumes from the tree.

Since that time the tree has been examined to a limited extent by persons on the hacienda, and its deadly operation has been noted. Along the branches of the tree are small valvelike projections, open at the ends. It is believed that the poisonous fumes issue from these valves. A bird lighting on a branch of the tree is caught and held fast, and within a few minutes the blood vessels of its body burst. News of the discovery of the tree has spread throughout Nicaragua and has caused consternation among the Indians. It is said that similar trees have been discovered in Portugal and Korea.

OSTRICH PLUMES.

A Good Method of Renovating Them When Bedraggled.

A suggestion as to how to rejuvenate bedraggled ostrich plumes:

First of all, water will not injure a good plume. Wash it in a tepid bath of slightly soapy water. A small basin is the best utensil to use, as you can swish it around the edge without spreading the feathers too much. The soap should be in such quantity as to just make light suds. Run the feather through your hands gently three or four times to remove the dirt. When it appears clean rinse it in two baths of clear tepid water and drain.

Great care must be exercised in drying a feather, and it is not to be laid down from the moment it leaves the basin until all the moisture has been driven out. To hasten matters it may be partially dried over a stove, but the sun is better. Fan it, but not too much, while the drying is going on.

When the plume is still a tride moist hold it for about half a minute over a spout of a steaming kettle. This curls the feather, after which it is to be dried rapidly over a stove plate in order not to lose the curl.

Never brush a feather to get it to fall into place; shake it instead. If the ends of the feather prove refractory they may be given an extra curl with a curling iron, though you must be careful that the instrument is neither dirty with soot nor too hot. The hottest temperature the finger can stand is a good test.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE NERVOUS WOMAN.

What She Should Do to Get Herself In Good Condition.

The nervous woman, heaven pity her! She makes herself and everybody around her perfectly miserable. Sometimes there's a cause for the nervousness, and then she's to be pitied, and sometimes it's just a habit one gets into of being unreasonable and fussy and generally looking on the blue side of everything. When the nervous system gets out of order the whole system lags in sympathy. The digestive system, the liver and the heart all refuse to do their work. Every nervous woman should eat five or six times a day. She should eat three meals, have a lunch between meals and never, never, omit the warm drink taken just before she goes to bed. However, all the food must be very easy of digestion. Malted milk, beef tea, milk and bouillon are all good for the nervous woman's lunch. Gentle exercise and work are as necessary to the woman with nerves as food and fresh air. An active interest in life will be her salvation, but generally the woman in such a condition thinks she isn't interested in a thing in life, so she must keep at work until she develops an interest. A celebrated physician has said: "If you wish never to be nervous live with reason, have a purpose in life and work for it. Play joyously, strive not for the unattainable, be not annoyed by trifles, aim to attain neither great knowledge or great riches, be not self centered, but love the good and thy neighbor as thyself."

KITCHEN HELPS.

The dirtiest frying pan will become clean if soaked five minutes in ammonia and water.

Half a lemon placed in the water in which dish towels and kitchen cloths are soaked is said to sweeten them wonderfully.

In putting away tinware see that it is perfectly dry. It is the little drop of water that causes the spot of rust, and the rust soon eats a hole.

After peeling onions wash the knife and also your hands with cold water, for this will rinse off the onion juice, whereas hot water would set it and cause it to stick.

The flat end of a cork is the handiest thing one can use for scouring knives and forks. The cork should be dampened slightly and dipped in the powdered bath brick or fine ashes and the scouring will be quickly accomplished.

The Kitchen Sink.

Whether a kitchen sink be iron, enamel or stone, it should stand on four legs, with all its drainpipes exposed to full view. A very clever physician once said, "If I am called in to a case of diphtheria the first thing I look at is the kitchen sink." The danger arising from a badly kept sink cannot be exaggerated, nor can any degree of care in avoiding it be considered extreme. The waste pipe from a kitchen sink should have boiling water and ammonia or washing soda poured down it each day. At least once a week it should be treated to a dose of some good disinfectant, such as chloride of lime. This old standby is very inexpensive and quite as good as many of the modern high priced articles. Put a large teacupful of chloride of lime into two quarts of hot water.—Harper's Bazar.

The Art of Resting.

To understand how to rest is of more importance than to know how to work. The latter can be learned if one will give one's mind to it, but the former is an act some people never acquire. Rest necessitates change of scene and activities. Lounging is very often tiring, sleeping is not always restful, and sitting down with nothing to do is simply to invoke weariness. A change is needed to bring into play a different set of faculties and to direct the thoughts into a new channel. The woman who is weary and heavy laden with care finds relief in active employment with freedom from responsibility. The brain worker generally finds her rest in playing hard. Rest may be found in many different ways, but it is quite a mistake to expect to find it in idleness—Baltimore Herald.

Length of the Law.

The phrase "the length of the law" owes its origin to the enormous length of some of the parchment rolls upon which the ancient statutes of Great Britain were inscribed. The present day official title of the "master of the rolls" is a reminder of this ancient custom. Some faint idea of the bulk of the English records may be obtained from the fact that a single statute, the land tax commissioners act, passed in the first year of the reign of George IV., measures when unrolled upward of 900 feet!

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

In spite of the Don't Worry clubs all the people worry some of the time, and some of the people worry all of the time.

A man isn't funny when he works hard at it.

Children are imitative and sometimes tell lies, and their parents wonder how they ever learned it.

Some men's heads are so swelled that it is a shame to have to crowd them into a two dollar hat.

Some people are jolly because they can't help it.

Job would hardly have succeeded in making a record if he had lived in a flat.

The man who never argues, simply lays down the law.

A bachelor is a misanthrope who prefers a state of lone cupidity to a state of cupid's own-ity.

A gentleman is one who gives up his seat as cheerfully to a woman as to a lady.

In the Country.

When the rattle of the reaper
Wakes the echo of the hill,
Rousing me, an idle sleeper,
Down behind the old sawmill,
Lazily I turn me over
On my bed of fragrant clover.

Seems to me, our country cousins
Don't appreciate the tunes
That the birds, by tens and dozens,
Warble through the leafy Junes.
Very simple is the reason,
They are grubbing all the season.

Not for me the rasp and rattle
Of the reaper in the wheat.
I had rather watch the cattle
Of the fragrant clover eat.
Rather lie here, cool and lazy,
Than to labor till I'm crazy.

Draughts of perfume, sweet as honey,
Loose are lying round up here,
But the hired man—it's funny—
Says he'd rather have some beer;
Says the stuff that nature mixes
Isn't what the barkeep fixes.

Did You Ever!

Did you ever wake up in the morning with a start under the impression that you had overslept yourself, jump up and on looking at your watch discover that it was a half hour earlier than usual and then crawl back for a little nap?

It is just like finding money. You had expected that you would have to jump into your clothes, hurry through your breakfast and run to catch the train, and you find instead that you have time for one more dream and then sufficient time to tie your necktie and leisurely discuss the coffee and rolls.

Few joys are equal to this. Meeting an old friend or discovering a stray dime in the pocket of an old vest cannot match it.

You stretch yourself thoroughly, lay out plans for the day and when the half hour has about expired you slowly arise and look at your watch again and find that it has stopped and that according to its count you still have that half hour.

Drink What You Can.

"Drink deep at knowledge's fount or not at all."
Such sayings always make one cry "Enough."
For one should take a drink, however small,
So it's enough on which to hang a bluff.

Words Would Fail.

"How does it feel to be disappointed in love?"

"Ever run over by a railroad train and then have some one come and rub salt on the sore places?"

"No."

"No use trying to tell you."

Not Strange to Him.

"Radium is not such a wonder. I have known of a substance that would give off heat for years."

"Well, you missed your chance for fame. What is it?"

"Jamaica ginger."

Turning the Tables.

"John, are you going to church with me this morning?"

Sunday Card Playing Laws.

There was a time when people in England were forbidden by law to play at cards, even in their own houses, on Sunday. In the royal proclamation against vice, profaneness and immorality, read every session and assize, is the following passage: "And we do hereby strictly enjoin and prohibit all our loving subjects, of what degree or quality soever, from playing on the Lord's day at dice, cards or any other game whatsoever, either in public or private houses or other places whatsoever."

A TIN CUP TRICK.

Do It Cleverly and You Can Pose as a Magician.

This little trick, performed in a parlor, will make you appear quite a magician.

Get beforehand two perfectly plain tin cups without handles and with the bottom sunk about a quarter of an inch and straight sides. On the sunk bottom of each put some glue and over it drop some bird's seed, so that it looks as if the cup were full, whereas it is really standing upside down and the layer of seed is glued to the outside bottom.

When you are ready to perform the trick have a bag of the same kind of seed and, standing off from your audience, hold the cups so that they can see they are empty, but don't allow any one to approach you.

Now take one cup and dip it into the bag of seed, but instead of filling it turn it upside down, so that when you take it out the seed glued to the bottom will show, and every one will think it is full.

Place the apparently full cup of seed under a hat, but in doing so dextrously turn it so that the empty cup is upright and the glued side at the bottom. Don't let your audience see this turn.

Now take the other cup, which is empty and let them see you put it under another hat, but also turn this one so that they do not see you do it. This brings the seed to the top and looks as if the cup were full, and when you remove the hat after pronouncing some magic words it will look as if the cups had changed places.

Remove the cups before any one has a chance to examine them.—New York Mail.

SOME AFRICAN GIANTS.

They Are Strong and Cunning and Nine Feet High.

There are many giants in Africa nine feet high. Some of them weigh 300 pounds and are strong enough to kill a panther at one blow. Perhaps you think such big fellows must be clumsy, but they are not. They can run faster than any horse, springing twelve to fourteen feet at a leap. This all sounds like a fairy story, but not so when you hear that these African giants are—ostriches.

Perhaps you have been told some foolish stories about these birds. That when pursued they stick their heads in the sand and because they cannot see they imagine that no one can see them.

This is base slander. Instead of being stupid, ostriches are very cunning. Their long legs will take them away from men—unless they have their families to protect. Then all is different. The papa ostrich sends mamma ostrich and the baby ostriches off at full speed, while he runs the other way. What do you think he does next? He rolls on the ground, pretending to be hurt. The hunter rushes toward the fallen bird, thinking he can easily catch him, mentally counting how much money he can make out of the splendid feathers which adorn the bird's tail. After the papa ostrich thinks his family has got a good start, up he jumps and skims over the ground, leaving the disappointed hunter to think that the ostrich is not as silly as he has been led to believe.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between stabbing a man and killing a hog? One is assaulting with intent to kill, and the other is killing with intent to salt.—Boston Globe.

Where did William the Conqueror stand when he landed in England? On his feet.

What is the difference between an angler and a dunce? One baits his hook; the other hates the book.

Why is it easy to break into an old man's house? Because his gait is broken and his locks are few.

A use for the tops of old golf stockings is to cut them over into roomy mittens, which are very convenient to slip on when making fires, cleaning walks, etc.

When washing boarded floors put a handful of salt into every bucketful of water and you will not be troubled with moths.

Whether scrubbing tables or floors, you should always scrub according to the grain of the wood.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

What is this I hear from the Josephburg district ? A farmer started out to harrow a field and when he got there he had forgotton to bring the team ? That's it, but fancy going to harrow without a team !

* * * *

A reporter of the Calgary Herald fell in with an old editor the other day and thus spoke the editor unto him.—"Readers of a newspaper should not imagine that everything in a paper is satisfactory to its editor. When I was actively in the harness. I used to look over the paper at night, and almost scream. But we were compelled to print something. It is very hard to fill up a paper. News is scarce, and manufactured stuff is liable to be uninteresting."

* * * *

The old editor had evidently been through the mill. Considering everything I will venture to wage—(no, I don't bet), I will assert, that the least satisfied man when the paper is out is the editor, unless he be very inexperienced.

* * * *

Have you ever noticed, dear reader, the meek, tired, dejected look on the face of the editor all next day ? The only parallel that I know is the minister's face on Mondays. Both know that their week's work is under fire and neither can possibly hope to escape scathless. That's their weak time. Attack then if you want to. But see them 24 hours later, when they take up the work for the next issue of sermon or paper ? Especially if someone has offered a word of congratulation. Then stand clear. Give 'em room !

* * * *

An exchange tells of a farmer who is abusing himself because he gave his daughter a pair of chickens two years ago and promised to feed the increase for four years if she would take care of them. He says that she has $84 in the bank and also two hundred chickens that he had to feed all winter. He also says that at the end of four years she will own the farm and will be charging him rent for living on it.

* * * *

And another paper sings the song :—

Said the groceryman to the butcherman : "It is really a sin that you buy your salt on the wholesale plan and don't let me handle the tin." Then he hied him back to the grocery store and quickly an order sent, for a few choice hams for family use and a box of fish for lent. Said the clothing man to the hardware man : "You certainly don't do right when you order a suit from an eastern house with my big stock in sight." But the clothier wanted a new steel range, and it came, as his neighbors know, in a box he tried to hide in a barn, marked "Timothy Eaton & Co." The business men then called a meeting to see where the trouble lay, and they all agreed 'twas the editor man and not the devil to pay. Why don't he roast the department store and peddling fakirs, say ; and stand by those who patronize him and give him his daily bread ? So they drew up a compact long and strong for the editor to peruse, and waited on him with aspect grim as he solemnly dug for news ; but the editor laughed a big horse laugh till the gang all took to the woods, for 'twas written on axle grease letterheads that came free with a bill of goods.

* * * *

The C.P.R., gardens are looking lovely now with their spring clothing on. The spruce, maple, cottonwood and other trees are a delight to the eye and passengers on the trains remark that they can remember Medicine Hat by the pretty gardens. It is stated that the C.P.R. will not loan the gardens for any gatherings this year. This will be a disappointment to many and especially church workers who have in the past used the place regularly for ice cream socials, etc. I suppose the new order of things is a part of the C.P.R. programme for building the new station and other improvements.

* * * *

It does seem a great pity that there should be the necessity for cutting down the fine row of trees on the south side of the gardens to make room for the new platform. Everybody wishes the Company could see their way to move rails instead. We can join in the pleading: Railway spare those trees.

* * * *

The great want in the gardens is a few seats where visitors and townspeople could spend a pleasant afternoon or evening under the shades of the trees.

He sat outside the store with a newspaper in his hand, newfound knowledge in his brain, and a mischievous twinkle in his eye. Thus he sat laying "traps for the unwary." He exhibited the newspaper, and pointed to the word "adumbrate" which occurred in a leading article. The article referred to the "adumbrate" reports, to hand from the seat of war. He asked all his friends the meaning of the word. One by one they fell before him. An editor came along and the same question was put to him and the editor too was floored.

"Shake," said the Speaker, "you are the 21st victim. Only one man said he knew and he didn't know."

"Well, do you know ?" asked the knight of the pen.

"Not until I went to the dictionary," admitted the Speaker, "It was a word I had never come across before. It is a good word used in that connection and means to give a faint shadow of, to exhibit imperfectly.

The "man of letters" passed humbly on his way and the Speaker spread his nets anew.

The victims are said to number 249 up to date.

Saturday's papers reported that "Commander Togo was wounded on the Adzuma." Now I wonder what part of an Admiral's anatomy the Adzuma is.

The hero of the B. J., wreath story got chaffed a good bit after the tale got into this column last week, but he got even with one of his tormentors. "Nobody would put up two dollars on you anyway," said he and J. B. acknowledged that he got it right in the neck and said no more.

The Council went to great trouble and expense last year to grade the streets and form boulevards and it should be said that the work was well done, but it will be necessary to do something to protect the ratepayers from loss. People drive freely over the boulevards on the north side of the track and unless the Council, take some steps to stop it at once, it will cost a good deal of money to put things to rights again. Drivers of delivery rigs are the chief offenders and they should be taught to protect citizens property.

Lord Roseberry has for the third time won the Derby. He won it in 1894 with Ladas, in 1895 with Sir Visto, and he landed it again last Wednesday with Cicero, beating the French crack runner. The race is worth about $32,500.

Purgatives Are Dangerous.

They gripe, cause burning pains, and make the constipated condition even worse. Physicians say the ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. They are exceedingly mild ; composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr Hamilton's Pills restore regular movement of the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, billiousness, and disordered digestion no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c. box yourself.

AMONG THE FARMERS.

WHEAT NOW TWO FEET HIGH.

In our last issue we stated that the wheat on W. R. Babington's farm measured 20 inches high on the 27th of May. Some people were inclined to doubt this and we are glad to be able to prove the matter to everybod's satisfaction. Mr Babington was in town on Thursday the 1st June and had with him samples taken from his 500 acre field, this we carefully measured and found to be exactly 24 inches. From inquiries made and reports in newspapers we believe the growth in Medicine Hat district is over a month ahead of Manitoba. The C.P.R. last week published reports from all over Alberta. The reports showed spring wheat at the end of May stood on an average 4 or 5 inches high and fall wheat 10 or 15 inches high. It will thus be shown that spring sown wheat in Medicine Hat district is considerably ahead of even the fall wheat in other parts of Alberta.

David and James Nichols, farmers from North Dakota, were in town on Thursday. They were shown over the country by Mr. Babington and during a call at "The Times" office stated that they were very favourably impressed with Medicine Hat as a farming district. They left for Calgary district the same evening having booked through to that point, but will call here on the return trip. We hope to see them settle in this district.

YOU ARE AILING.

Not quite sick—but robbed of ambition to work—find it hard to think clearly. Not ill enough to think of dying, but bad enough for life to be pretty dull. There is a remedy—Ferrozone—that quickly lifts that half-dead feeling. Gracious ! but Ferrozone makes you feel good. It sharpens the dullest appetite, makes it keen as a razor.

BLOOD ? Ferrozone makes lots of it, the rich, nourishing kind that vitalizes the whole body. You'll be wonderfully quickened, immensely strengthened, feel hearty and vigorous after using Ferrozone. Buoyant health, surplus vigor, and reserve energy all come from this great restorative. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty tablets at all dealers.

NEWEST THING IN ALBERTA IS MEDICINE HAT.

The toast of "Sister Boards of Trade" was one of the many toasts at the annual banquet of the Calgary Board of Trade on Thursday evening, and among those who responded was Mr William Cousins, President of the Medicine Hat Board. We take the following from the Herald :

William Cousins, of Medicine Hat, desired to say a word for the "gas" town. He had been warned to say nothing about the capital, but since so many others had violated the agreement the speaker thought he should say a word on the subject. Medicine Hat was the newest thing in Alberta, but while it was at the tail end it was the part of the cow that kept the flies off ; therefore he wanted all to remember that Medicine Hat was ready to assist Calgary to get the capital if Calgary would help Macleod get the capital.

Radiant Womanhood.

The glory and satisfaction of beautiful womanhood can be known only to those possessing the unlimited advantages of health. No weak woman can be happy or enjoy half the pleasures of life. Pallid cheeks, sunken eyes, exhausted nerves, all tell of a terrible struggle to keep up. What the weak woman needs is Ferrozone ; it renews, restores and vitalizes instantly—it's a "woman's remedy," that's why.

Ferrozone makes women strong plump and healthful because it contains lots of nutriment, the kind that forms muscle, sinew, bone and nerve. Vitalizing blood courses through the body, making delightful color, happy spirits, true womanly strength. Fifty cents buys a box of Ferrozone in any drug store.

LET 'EM ALL COME.

The editor has received a letter from Colorado, U.S., which certainly deserves to be put in print as showing the intense interest in the Canadian West which is felt by the people across the border. For obvious reasons the name is suppressed, but we may add that a reply accompanied by a pamphlet has been sent giving the information asked for. The letter is as follows :

——— City, Colo.

Dear Sir,

I would like to go to a good grazing country and agriculture, the same where there is full and plenty, and where a person would not have to worry about their children when we are dead and gone, how they would make a living. We have good property here, but the works are all shut down, and four walls of a house will not keep you. I have four children grown, the youngest 13 a girl, one son 24 years old, a boiler maker, and one 22, a quartz hanler, the other a lumber hauler, worked four years for a lumber company here. My children are very industrious, Highland Scotch - Manx - Irish - Dutch blood. Think a new country where they could go into the stock business, where they would not have to work so hard as they do here.

My husband is a wheel wright by trade, and a very good shoer. Can do anything round a shop. They say he is one of the most careful men about, using up all the old iron and bolts in the country, and has run a shop for 30 years here. He would make a good man to look out for someone who needed a man to be careful about their things, and run their shop carefully. He has rheumatism very bad in one knee, and is not able to work. Had to sell out on account of it. Is 57 ; I am 54. We have four good mares, and two work horses. Have a stylish brick house that cost $5,000 dollars. We cannot sell for no price, times are so bad. The country is full of the Pope's monkeys, and this is no white man's country. You have got to go to the butcher and grocer with a dollar every morning. They have an ironclad mortgage on you. There is no work here, only three mines in the country, and the Dagoes have bought all the jobs from the bosses. I want to make a break on account of my boys, where Nature is spontaneous, and where we would not be bossed with Corporations. There are lots of my neighbours in the same fix, and they all have a little money, and they are disgusted with Colorado. Everything is at a stand still.

My husband is a thorough horseman ; he knows everything about a horse, and is well liked. When people want to buy teams they come to him to look over them before buying them. He is considered the very best horseman in the country. Ran a livery stable here for nine years. I wanted him to take the boys and go to raising horses, as he is so good a judge of horse flesh, but he is afraid to venture. I am the other way, would as soon be whole broke as half broke. Where there's a will there's a way. A rolling stone gathers no moss neither does a sitting hen get fat.

Cheap labor, and the roads are so bad on account of the late spring weather. There is a little Irish woman here from Winnipeg, and she talks Canada from morning until night to us. This is what set us thinking about that country. How about Medicine Hat and Scotstown ? The Mayor of that town used to work for my husband. His name was Abe McKay, but he is dead now. Let me know what kind of a place it is if you please. Now I have told you all about myself and neighbours. We all have a little money.

Please send me circulars describing the resources of Western Canada and British Columbia, and I will carefully give them to my good neighbors who are going to leave this place. Are there any Colonists up there—whole-souled people who would make us feel that we were God's creatures — friendly people ? There is such a change in the people on account of the hard times, and the foreign class who have come here. I would just as soon live under Queen Victoria's old red flannel petticoat as the American flag. Any old woman coul run things as good as they they are here. Send me all the information you can. I want to get out of here, and lots of others.

I expect you will think I am a regular old gossip, but I am not. I have lots of friends. Direct Mrs. ———, Colorado.

There was an accident at the C.P.R. roundhouse on Friday. A portion of the ceiling collapsed, but luckily no one was hurt. The ceiling was plastered on wire netting supported on iron rods instead of laths, so as to make it fireproof, but the steam from the engines must have rusted the wire, with the result that about half the ceiling of the eastern portion of the building came down. Some men who had been working directly underneath had luckily just moved away to another part of the building, otherwise there would probably have been a casualty list.

Medicine Hat is such an orderly town, that street rows are rarely seen, but last Saturday morning Constable Miniszwsky get into a mix-up with some Galicians. The man had been drinking, and when Mini arrested one the others went for him. Mini laid one out with his staff, and held the others at bay with a gun. The gun was unloaded, but the Galicians didn't know it. Choosing a chance, however, they rushed in. Mini laid out one with a blow from the revolver, but was borne down, and would have fared badly if a number of townsmen had not rushed to his assistance. Six Galicians were lodged behind the bars, and later in the day were fined $10 to $20 each by the local justices.

WHO WROTE MR. SCOTT, M.P.?

A copy of Hansard containing the debate on the school question gives Mr. Scott's speech, in the course of which the following occurs:—

Mr Scott—I think my hon. friend referred to a meeting held at Medicine Hat, where some resolutions were adopted. A gentleman writing from Medicine Hat says:

You will get a copy of them, but don't think they express the true opinion of the people of Medicine Hat, or even of the meeting.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

"It was all by chance I heard about it," he went on, emphatically; I'll tell you how it came about. As I stepped out of the Stock Exchange to-day, I met Manager ——. He was in a deuce of a hurry, and all in a flutter. He is just about bringing out a grand revival of the "White Fawn," and at the last moment, without so much as 'by your leave,' his star levanted—skipped with a rival concern.

"'What in heaven's name I am to do, I don't know,' he declared. 'If I could find a woman with a face and figure like Mdlle. Bertantis,—she might name her own price to take her place.' It's a chance that comes but once in a lifetime. What do you think of the idea, Reine."

She had sprung to her feet, shocked and literally astounded. He never forgot the way in which she drew up her slight form to its utmost height, crying out passionately—"Your jest is in very bad taste, Waldemar."

"It is no jest," he declared, frowning darkly. "I am in earnest. When people are pushed as hard as we are for money, they must put their pride in their pocket. Don't let a little nonsense stand between me and ruin. You must help me out of this, Reine. Come, what do you say to the idea?"

There was a look in her flashing eyes that made him wince.

"I say that I will not do it," cried the girl, in clear, steady tone. "I—I—would die first."

Her answer exasperated him. He grasped her tender white arms in his strong hold so fiercely that there were purple bruises upon them for long days afterward. Yet she did not even wince with the cruel pain of it.

"You shall promise that you will do it," he cried. "I will wring it from your lips. Your absurd pride shall not ruin me."

"No," cried the girl, heroically, forcing the tears back from her eyes—"I will not. You are stronger than I—you may kill me—but you shall never make me do that against which my whole nature abhors."

"Another woman in your place would be delighted at the opportunity," he retorted sullenly. "It is your duty to help me in any way you can."

"Not in that way."

"In any way," he responded emphatically—"As long as I approve of it."

She wondered what the old general would say if he had but heard. How shocked too, Bernard Chesleigh would have been.

"It's poor policy playing the high and mighty when one hasn't a cent in their pocket," he sneered.

"I would rather earn my bread as a seamstress—a nurse—anything"—cried Reine.

"Don't be a fool and stand in your own light," cried Waldron in anger. "You could afford to be neither a seamstress or a nurse; leave that for older and homelier women. You could not earn at one or the other much over a five-dollar note a week. Manager —— would give you two hundred, he says."

"Have you dared talk with him about it," demanded Reine.

"I have not only talked with him, but arranged with him," Waldron cried. "You shall take Bertantis' place. In fact, to bind the contract, he has already advanced me a comfortable sum, and—I have run through with it."

"You must return every dollar of it then," she cried shrilly. "I repeat, you might kill me in endeavoring to compel me to do this thing, but you shall never make me subservient to your will. You have gone too far."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Waldemar Waldron gazed steadily down into the beautiful death-like face raised so defiantly to his own.

He knew what she said was perfectly true. He might kill her—she was weak and fragile, tender and helpless—but he could never wring the promise he desired from her lips.

He flung the white arms and clinging, trembling hands from him, telling her that she should take the consequences then. He left her with a cruel laugh and a sneering look on his fair, handsome face that stamped out all its beauty.

Reine sank down into the nearest chair, and, covering her face with her hands, burst into passionate tears.

Could Waldemar be so near upon the verge of ruin as he had declared? Ah, surely not! He had said it to tease her—to frighten her.

She made up her mind to write one more letter to her father. She would lay her pride aside, and beg him to help Waldemar for her sake. Her heart felt lighter after it was written and mailed. She would tell Waldemar what she had done when he returned home to luncheon; then surely he would be more kind to her.

The noon hour came and went. The long hours of the afternoon dragged themselves slowly by. The sun sank at length in the western sky, and the dusk of night fell silently over the bustling city, still Waldemar Waldron did not return.

As the night deepened, Reine took up her station by the lace-draped window, eagerly watching for him.

Ah, reader! do you know the blank, almost terrible calm that comes just before a storm, when the wind sleeps that it may gather force, when the waves lie silent that they may dash and foam, when the color and weight of lead falls over the sky, and the earth grows frightened? That strange calm, very like awe—swept over Reine's heart as she stood hour after hour at the window, listening for the step which did not come.

This was not the first time that Waldemar had absented himself in like manner, yet she had never felt like this before. There was a foreboding sense of pain in her heart which she could not shake off. Eleven o'clock struck from a clock in an adjoining church steeple; and as the last stroke died away some one ran lightly up the broad marble steps, and touched the bell.

As she opened the door of her boudoir she heard her own name mentioned. A messenger boy stood in the vestibule with a sealed letter in his hand.

With a strange fluttering at her heart, Reine took it, and hurried back to her own room. It was in Waldemar's handwriting, she saw at a glance, and she noticed, too, that the writing was hurried—agitated—as though it had been done under the stress of great emotion.

Why had he written to her instead of coming home? Had anything happened to him? she wondered, and in a moment all the old love flooded her heart for him, forgot all his coldness and remembering him only [illegible] fair-haired, [illegible] for whom she [illegible] father, friends [illegible] and young husband's love's young dream.

Had ill befallen him?

With trembling hands she broke the seal and tore open the envelope. There were but a few dozen brief lines—surely the cruelest and most pitiful that ever broke a human heart.

A wild cry broke from her lips as her eyes ran over the first few words on the page. Then the stillness of death settled around her, broke now and then by the fluttering of the sheet in her trembling hands.

These were the words she read:

"Reine,—By the time this letter reaches you I shall be far away. It is better to speak plainly to you, telling you all. I am leaving you forever, Reine, for I cannot face you after what will happen to-morrow. Perhaps, after all, it is better for you to be free from such a wretch as I own myself frankly to be.

"You married me for love. Your attractiveness to me was—you were the prospective heiress of Fairlawn. There are men whose hearts are incapable of love, for love's sake alone. Mine, I admit, is one of them. If I had thought your father would have cast you off as he has done, I should never have snatched you from luxury and happiness to share such a roving life as is mine. We were never suited for each other. A sinner like myself has nothing in common with angelic purity. We have lived luxuriously, and now we are come to the end of the road—ruin and utter bankruptcy. Your firm denial to make one more effort to save me rendered me desperate, as I told you. I am a profligate by nature. I have won and lost much money at cards. Last night I staked our all—the furniture, plate and pictures of our home, and—lost. They have passed into other hands, and to-morrow they will be taken from you. I inclose twenty dollars, take it, and return to the home you left for my sake. I am going out of your life, severing the bonds that bound us to each other, wilfully, deliberately. You are not the first wife so left; it is common enough for hearts to break over it. Try and forget that I have ever crossed your path, for I am not worthy of reclaiming or being reclaimed.

"WALDEMAR."

Reine sat quite still with her letter in her hand. She read to the very end, and then sat still, staring, dumb, like one turned to stone. She did not cry out, after that first gasp of horror. The white lips were parted and open, but no sound came from them. The lovely blue eyes had a mild, bewildered expression. She was trying to realize that most cruel blow that could ever strike a living heart—that she was a deserted bride. Her husband had fled from her—yes fled from her, wilfully, deliberately. Heaven help her! Was there any remedy either on earth or in heaven for such woe as hers?

What shame, what grief, what outraged love and pride swept over her like a tempest, as she sat there looking into the glowing coals, who shall say? A wild laugh echoed through the room. It quite startled Reine. She did not realize that it was her own voice. The sound of that strange laugh pierced the thick walls to the inner apartment, where Honora, her maid, was busy sorting a package of new lace fichus. She dropped them in dismay, and hurried to Reine's boudoir. One look at the white, ghastly face bent over the open letter was enough.

"Oh, my dear! my dear! you have had bad news!" she cried in affright.

Reine looked up at the faithful servitor with wide, sombre eyes. How could she tell her what had happened to her?

"Honora," she sobbed, with quivering lips, tears—hot, bitter tears—falling like rain down her face. "I may tell you—all the world will know it soon. My—my husband has deserted me. He has left me forever. Oh! I wish to Heaven that I might fall down dead!"

Deserted her! It could not be! What man in his senses could have fled from a young wife like this—a young wife as lovely as a dream. She looked bewildered.

"Left you!" she cried in horror. "You cannot mean it, my lady!"

It is quite true," sobbed Reine. Oh, Honora! you are older and wiser than I," she cried out in agony; "tell me what other wives do when their husbands leave them. I have heard that such things have happened; I have read of them; but it never occurred to me to ask what the poor wives did—whether their hearts broke or whether they went mad, or if they committed suicide."

"They have to bear it calmly and patiently, I think," replied the honest maid, who had always feared that something of this kind would be likely to happen to her beautiful, young mistress sooner or later.

"I can never live to bear the shame and disgrace of it, Honora," the girl moaned. "If I walked out upon the street, saw anyone I knew, I would be looked at with curiosity, and they would whisper as they passed me by, 'Her husband left her. I wonder why?' Oh, Honora! I could not bear that. I—I cannot live to endure it!"

"You must turn a deaf ear if anyone says anything so very unkind as that," replied Honora. "Other women have had the same thing to endure—but perhaps it is not so bad as you think."

"It could not be worse," moaned Reine; "oh, what am I to do?"

The maid was nonplussed. "Lay down and try to compose yourself to sleep a little, and I will try to think," said Honora; but Reine shook her head.

"It seems as though I should never sleep again," she sobbed; "my brain is on fire."

"It may not be true that he has gone away forever," declared Honora.

For some moments Reine sat silent; then, cowering down in her chair, she buried her face in her hands, saying desperately—"I am beginning to think there is no such thing as real love. I read once words I marvelled at then, but which seem pitifully true now: 'that some say the devil carried the seed from hell and planted it on the earth to plague men and make them sin; and some say that when all the plants in the garden of Eden were pulled up by the roots, one bush that the angels had planted was left growing, and it spread its seed over the whole world, and its name is—love. There are different species under that name; one love that blots out wisdom, that is sweet with the sweetness of life and with the bitterness of death, lasting for an hour, but it is worth having lived a whole life for that hour. There is always the scent of a god about it.

"'When love's sunshine falls on the dead crust of the soul, a throbbing yearning awakes—a new life stirs to the very depths of the heart—that alone is satisfying.'

"I thought them wonderful words," repeated Reine; "now I have lost all faith in love."

Honora had listened, but she could nos comprehend such a strange vein of musing.

Suddenly Reine turned toward her again, clasping her hands nervously together, murmuring in a low, broken voice, that was husky with suppressed sobs: "Oh, Honor! I am glad I never brought a little child into the world."

The girl started. She had not the key to her mistress' thoughts; she had no comment to offer on this unexpected remark.

Reine went on thoughtfully: "Night after night I have thanked Heaven on my bare knees that I have not caused another to suffer. Do you think that was hard for me? A man who could leave his wife, could abandon his little child if he had one. Anything is possible to a man whose end is like his. Sinful—he moves straight for it, and it alone.

"Some women can bend men and things completely to their purpose, but not a man like Waldemar Waldron; they are the ones that escape the stings that strike deep—these women who control—they never throw the burden of their sins on them."

"To-morrow, dear mistress, you can think more clearly," said Honora. "Do let me implore you to go to bed;" and with that she loosened the coils of beautiful golden hair that fell down over her shoulder to her waist in a mass of shining splendor.

Honor brought the daintv robe to her mistress, and Reine patiently suffered her to fasten it about her.

Throwing herself upon her couch, her bare arms from without the flowing sleeves clasping her pillow, Reine soon slept.

"Poor child—How hard she is taking her trouble," thought the maid, watching the outlines of her heaving breasts and listening to the quivering sighs that trembled on her lips.

When Honora went to her mistress' room the next morning, she found her already up and dressed.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Reine pointed to the letter that had fallen from her clenched hand to the floor, and the wild laugh that broke from her lips was more pitiful to hear than the stormiest outburst of sobs.

"It is quite true, Honora. He has left me wilfully and deliberately. Read what he says, and be convinced. Take it to your own room. I cannot bear it in my sight."

"What shall you do?" said Honora, pitymgly. "If I were you, I would send for my father."

"No, no, no," gasped Reine, shudderingly. "I would not have him know what has befallen me for worlds. You do not know the kind of man he is. He has never forgivon me for marrying Waldemar against his wishes."

And at the mention of her father's name poor Reine broke down utterly, and dropping into the nearest chair, gave way to such a storm of grief that Honora was fairly frightened.

What words could she find to comfort her? She realized at length that the greatest kindness she could show her would be to leave her quite alone, and, letter in hand, she stole softly from the room.

It was quite a relief to get beyond the sound of that violent weeping. Should she ever be able to forget the lovely, wistful, tear-stained face as she saw it then?

She read the letter over and over again, just as Reine had done, her honest anger increasing each moment.

"The miscreant!" she muttered. "If I had the making of the law, no penalty would be severe enough for a man who had deserted his wife.

"Poor, pretty young bride!" she thought, compassionately. "Her father ought to know what has happened to her. If he has any heart in him at all, he would come to her, and protect and comfort her in a crisis of this kind."

A sudden idea came to her.

"If she's too proud to send for him, why couldn't I do it for her? Yes, I will do it," she cried.

It was but the work of a very few minutes to put her project into execution. A half hour later the message flashed along the wires that stretched through the lovely scenery, through the snow-capped hills and vales, until it reached the pretty little town, a mile's distance from Fairlawn Villa.

Bernard Chesleigh had arrived at Fairlawn Villa that morning, and although no mention of Reine had passed between them, the old soldier knew quite well why Chesleigh had left the metropolis so suddenly. He knew Reine was there, and he could not meet her.

The servants had long since retired, and the general answered the summons himself.

"A telegram!" he cried, holding out his hand nervously.

In a moment he had torn open the envelope and mastered its contents.

"General Hastings, Fairlawn: Your daughter is in great trouble. I strongly urge you to come to her at once."

A name that the general never remembered having heard before was signed to it.

His features worked convulsively. He leaned back heavily against a massive marble column, his face rapidly changing from red to white.

Reine in trouble! What could it mean?

He touched the bell with such a resounding peal that in less than a moment the frightened and dismayed servants were flocking about him.

Like the general, Bernard Chesleigh had not retired, and the unusual disturbance brought him to the scene at once.

General Hastings put the telegram in his hands, with an anxious face.

"Read that and tell me what you think of it," he said, hoarsely. "My Reine—in—trouble—I am quite unnerved by this telegram, Chesleigh," cried the old gentleman, plaintively. "Do you think that cursed villain is misusing my child, now that he has her so far away from home and friends?" asked the old soldier, suddenly. "If I thought that, I would follow him to the world's end, and lash him like a hound!"

Bernard Chesleigh turned white to the lips. Had the general read his innermost thoughts? Had he read the grave fear that he dared not put into words?

The scene at the ball rose up vividly before him. Had Waldemar Waldron dared raise his hand against Reine again? If he had he should answer for it to him; there would be war to the knife between them. He would revenge her; he would wipe out all wrong done her if it cost him his life.

Waldemar Waldron had won Reine from him, but, for all that, he should not abuse her.

He read the telegram through and handed it back to the general.

"Well," said the old soldier, huskily.

"I should advise you to go at once to New York and investigate this matter," said Bernard, gravely.

"You will accompany me, of course," returned the general.

Bernard shook his head.

"If you need me, send for me," he said, "and I will come on. Remember, your daughter was once my promised bride, general; I have no right to intrude into the household of my rival; but remember, too, though fate parted us, I would lay down my life for Reine. God bless her!"

General Hastings was fortunate enough to catch the early express on the following morning. And all the way to the metropolis he was occupied in trying to think what could possibly be wrong with Reine.

He found the street and number indicated, and, with the strangest of sensations in his heart, walked hurriedly up the massive brown-stone steps, and touched the bell. What if Waldemar Waldron should answer the summons himself? How awkward the meeting between them would be!

His meditations were suddenly cut short by the opening of the door and the appearance of a housemaid on the threshold.

He saw at a glance that her eyes were red and swollen with weeping.

"I am General Hastings," he said; "I wish to see my daughter, Mrs. Waldron, at once. Tell me, my good girl," he added in the same breath, "is she well or—or—"

"Please to come in, sir. I have been expecting you. I sent you the telegram," said Honora (for it was she), as she ushered him into the drawing-room.

"I will go to my daughter at once," said the general, nervously. "Kindly announce me without delay, my good girl. Your—your—telegram has worried me. Tell me first, however, before I see my daughter, what the trouble is which you referred to, that I may prepare myself for it."

Honora wrung her hands. Never was there a task so hard to perform. She drew from her pocket the letter Reine had handed her the night before, and placed it in his hands.

In an instant his quick eye had glanced over the few terse lines, and had mastered its contents, comprehending its import; comprehending all too clearly that the scoundrel who had stolen his daughter from him had deserted her, deliberately, wilfully, and that, too, ere the honey-moon had scarcely waned.

It would be impossible to describe the scene that followed; how the old general raged and stormed, tearing the letter into a thousand fragments and grinding them beneath his heel deep down into the hearts of the crimson roses of the velvet carpet.

He quite forgot the girl's presence. She was secretly wondering how she could break the next and worst blow to him.

Carnival Dancing.

Among the most picturesque of the carnival festivities of Europe must be classed that of the Gilles, or dancing men, of Binche, in Hainault. These men, 200 strong, in their remarkable headdress of tall ostrich feathers and their lace decked costume fringed with bells, dance from an appointed place to the town hall, bombarding the spectators with oranges as they go. Arrived at the town hall, the public joins in the fun, and soon some 5,000 persons—men, women and children—may be seen gayly waltzing around the Grande place.

A Real Miser.

They were seated at the supper table.

"Say, ma," queried little Dolly, "what is a miser?"

"A miser, my dear," answered the diplomatic mother as she glanced across the table at her husband, "is a man who thinks his wife's hat should not cost any more than his own."

Costly Pointers.

Miss Fancier—A pure blooded terrier like Buttons is about as costly a dog as there is, Jack. Her Escort—No. There is one that is much more expensive, the Wall street pointer that a friend gives you.

Cause For Alarm.

Pennibus—Poor Scribbles is worried. Inkerton—What's the trouble? Pennibus—He's afraid he has lost his cunning as a humorist. The English magazines are beginning to copy his jokes.

Family Objections Respected.

Old Friend—Why didn't you marry Nicefello? Sweet Girl—His father objected. Old Friend—I shouldn't have cared for that. Sweet Girl—Y-e-s, but he said he would cut him off with a shilling.

OLD 'UNS NOT USELESS

DR. OSLER'S CURIOUS THEORY IS ALSO ABSURD.

Must Revise Cicero—Some of the Sage's Statements That Would Have to Be Modernized—Canada Itself Furnishes Good Examples That Men Over Forty Achieve Much in All Branches.

By this time all the world has heard of Dr. William Osler's (Regius Professor at Oxford), recent startling deliverances on old age. Some are disposed not to take him seriously, but as the full report of his actual words has come from Baltimore, writes J. E. Wetherell of Strathroy in Toronto News, there is no doubt that he was in downright earnest when he declared that men above forty are comparatively useless, and men above sixty absolutely so. As Dr. Osler is himself fifty-five years of age, one is amazed at his statements, since he did not begin work at Johns Hopkins University till he was forty, and now he goes to Oxford, on the eve of that period in a man's career which he characterized as thoroughly useless! When Osler makes statements so sweeping and so opposed to universal sentiment and opinion, it is time to review our ideas regarding old age, and, if necessary to revise them somewhat.

In dealing with Dr. Osler's dictum one has to remember two important facts. His remarkable statements were made in a valedictory oration, and he probably indulged in a little of that hyperbole which the epigrammatic orator, especially in the land to the south of us, is permitted to employ. And, secondly, he was addressing an audience in a country whose most popular adjective to-day is "strenuous"—a country where young men control almost all the activities of life, political, social, educational, literary, commercial.

Dr. Osler says the world's history bears out his statement. Certainly the history of former ages does not. It was Cicero (at sixty-three) who summed up the world's experiences in the matter of old age in his "De Senectute." Cicero himself delivered nearly all his famous speeches after he was forty, and his vigorous and effective speeches against Antony when he was sixty-two. It would be very interesting to have from Dr. Osler a modern "De Senectute," and if the calm of English life allows him the necessary leisure, perhaps when he reaches the fatal year (for him) of 1910 he will devote the subsequent "year of contemplation" (from sixty to sixty-one), to a revision of Cicero's standards. Here follow a few of Cicero's statements, which would, in the new order of things, have to be modernized:

"He (the old man) does not do things that the young men do, but in truth he does much greater and better things."

"Great actions are achieved by talent, authority, judgment, of which faculties old age is not only not deprived, but it has even a greater measure of them."

"Rashness belongs to life when in its bloom; wisdow to old age."

"The high spirit of young men, the steadiness of manhood, the maturity of old age, all are natural, and ought to be enjoyed in their time."

Dr. Osler says if we subtract from the sum of human achievement in action, in science, in art, in literature, the work of men above forty, we should be practically where we are to-day. Let us take a few striking examples from each of these fields of work.

Cromwell was forty-four when he organized the "Ironsides," and fifty when he began to rule England. Wellington was forty-six at Waterloo. Roberts was forty-eight when he marched to Kandahar, and sixty-eight when he routed Kruger. Kitchener was fifty when he won his title from Khartoum; at forty he was unknown. So much for men of action.

In science, Dr. Osler's own province, young men have their best chance. Invention, alertness, originality, imagination, belong pre-eminently to the young, and here Dr. Osler's statements come very close to exactness. Still Edward Jenner, William Harvey, Benjamin Franklin, and hosts of others made their greatest "hit" when they were well on in the forties. To-day the scientist of original genius who does not accomplish something before the age of forty is rare indeed; but Dr. Osler should not, because of this, indulge in "glittering generalities" about all other classes of men.

In literature what do we find? Milton began "Paradise Lost" at fifty. Tennyson wrote the "Idylis of the King" between fifty and seventy-five. Browning wrote "The Ring and the Book" at fifty-six. In prose, Ruskin made his most important contributions to English classics after he was forty-five. George Meredith after fifty wrote what are considered his masterpieces, "Diana of the Crossways" and "The Egoist." Hardy was fifty-two when "Tess" appeared. Dickens when he died at fifty-eight, was at the full tide of his wonderful powers.

Our own country furnishes the best refutation of Dr. Osler's doctrine. Perhaps the most important events in the history of Canada are the Confederation of the Provinces and the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. All the "Fathers of Confederation" had passed fifty when the union was brought about, Sir John A. Macdonald being fifty-two and Sir George E. Cartier fifty-three. As everyone knows, the gigantic project of building the C.P.R. is due to the foresight and enterprise of three men—J. J. Hill, Lord Mount Stephen and Lord Strathcona. These men, when the project was started, had all passed the line of forty. Hill was forty-two, Lord Mount Stephen was fifty-one, and Lord Strathcona was actually sixty! One would surmise that the youngest of the three men was the life and soul of the movement, but J. J. Hill, in a recent speech, declared that the one person to whose efforts their success in railway development was due was Lord Strathcona. It was the pluck and determination and enthusiasm of this sexagenarian that opened up our marvellous Northwest and started us on the path of genuine nationality. And yet all Strathcona's great work was performed after he had passed the chloroform limit. At the age of eighty this same veteran, with all the restless energy of a youth, hurled his Strathcona's Horse at the Boer hordes of South Africa.

If Dr. Osler is a firm believer in his own new theory, he should have been considerate enough to tell Canada sooner. A few months ago the free and independent electors of Canada sent back to Ottawa to rule them for five years longer Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the age of sixty-three, and Dr. Osler's own native Ontario has just overwhelmingly decided to accept apparently for a long term of years the Premiership of James Pliny Whitney, who has passed the chloroform limit, and who, it would appear, like Strathcona at sixty, is just beginning the most important epoch of his political career.

The Finder.

"The queerest experience I ever had," said a young Toronto business man recently, "was with a fellow from New Ontario last fall. This chap had been our guide for three or four years in hunting trips up north, and was a remarkably competent man. He could scent a deer anywhere within five miles, and the members of our party obeyed him as if he were our step-father. When we went up in 1903 he was talking all the time about Toronto Fair. He had never seen it, but a relation of his had been down, and had told him all about it. To see the Fair for himself was the dream of his life. Well, I invited him to come down last year, and he came. On the way down he found a silver watch on the floor of the car, and although he walked through the train seeking an owner, nobody claimed it, so he put it in his pocket. I met him at the Union Station, and as we walked up Yonge Street he found a quarter on the sidewalk. Next day I took him to lunch, and as we were going into a restaurant on King Street he stopped and asked, 'What's that?' It was a dollar bill, and he picked it up. That night we went to the Exhibition grounds, and, being late, could not get a seat on the grand stand, so we stood in the paddock and leaned against the fence. We weren't standing there three minutes until this fellow from New Ontario says: 'Say, what's that there?' and I looked and saw something over the picket fence. He jumped over and got it, and it was a roll of bills. There was twenty-seven dollars in the roll.

"What did I say? I had nothing to say. He did the saying. He said he thought Toronto people were bat-eyed. He said that the streets of the city were simply greasy with money, and he'd ask nothing better than to walk around and pick up money. Next day I coaxed him to come here and live and go halfers with me on all he found, but he said he couldn't afford to take in a partner. I reminded him that it was me that invited him to come to town, but he was as hard as nails, and wouldn't let me in at all.

"What's he doing about it? Well, the last I heard of him he was having an auction sale of his household goods and was going to move to Toronto. It looks to me as if he's got a dead sure thing."

Should Boys Be Whipped?

A Public School teacher gives the following experience: "This theory of governing children by appealing to their reason isn't all it's made out to be. I teach in a primary class, and it's my conviction that a youngster actually needs a good spanking once in a while for his health. It does cheer up a child as nothing else will. Here is an instance:

"One of my boys had skipped his classes, deceived his mother, been found out, and caused much unhappiness all around. I took him aside and we had a heart-to-heart talk. Johnny sat still, looking at me intently and seeming to be deeply impressed. I thought I was making great headway and that my little sermon was surely penetrating Johnny's brain. I never saw a child who seemed so absorbed, even fascinated, by my line of argument.

"But you never can tell. Just as I had reached the climax in my appeal to his better self, a light of discovery broke over Johnny.

"'Say, teacher,' he said, eagerly, 'it's your lower jaw that moves, isn't it?'"

Race of Centenarians.

Pierre Forget, aged 100 years, and his wife, aged 96, on March 1 celebrated in Montreal the 76th anniversary of their marriage, at which children down to the fifth generation attended. Speaking to a newspaper man, he said: "It has often happened to me to say: 'My daughter, go tell your daughter that her daughter's child is crying.' My wife is 96 years of age, but if she takes after her mother she is good for several years yet, for her mother died at the age of 104. I have never worn glasses, and if God grants us life until we celebrate the 80th anniversary of our marriage, you will hear of the celebration, I can assure you. I belong to a race of centenarians, and I am strong and fit to live for quite a number of years to come. My father died at the age of fifty when the union was brought about, Sir John A. Macdonald being fifty-two and Sir George E. Cartier fifty-three. As everyone knows, the gigantic project of building the C.P.R. is due to the foresight and enterprise of three men—J. J. Hill, Lord Mount Stephen and Lord Strathcona. These men, when the project was started, had all passed the line of forty. Hill was forty-two, Lord Mount Stephen was fifty-one, and Lord Strathcona was actually sixty! One would surmise that the youngest of the three men was the life and soul of the movement, but J. J. Hill, in a recent speech, declared that the one person to whose efforts their success in railway development was due was Lord Strathcona. It was the pluck and determination and enthusiasm of this sexagenarian that opened up our marvellous Northwest and started us on the path of genuine nationality. The end of time, according to the Kurds, will be ushered in by the appearance of four rainbows, which will cross at the zenith, furnishing eight passageways for God and his hosts.

Red Haired Comfort.

Why not be proud of red hair?

Socrates, the father of philosophy, was red haired.

St. Paul was red haired, freckled and ugly.

Julius Caesar was red haired, and that he was of the redheaded sort there is none to deny. He was ever ready for a fight and wasn't afraid to meet all comers, and he would have won against all hadn't Brutus and a few other jealous officeholders done him to death after a most contemptible fashion.

Queen Bess had red hair and lots of it, and it made the royal ladies angry that they couldn't imitate her style, which was so much admired by courtiers and gentlemen of every land.—New York World.

MULLIGAN'S ANTICS.

They Excited Casey's Curiosity and He Got an Explanation.

Casey and Mulligan lived in adjoining tenements. Casey was looking out of his front window one afternoon when he saw Mulligan go through the street door on the run. In a few moments he returned, still running. On the next night Casey saw Mulligan repeat the performance. Casey told his wife there must be sickness in the Mulligan household, but Mrs. Casey said no. On the third day Casey again saw Mulligan dash out of the door and return on the run. On the fourth night Casey saw Mulligan leave the house with a skipping rope and go down the street skipping the rope. When he returned he was still skipping the rope. This was the last straw to Casey's already overburdened curiosity. He watched and when Mulligan was out went to his home.

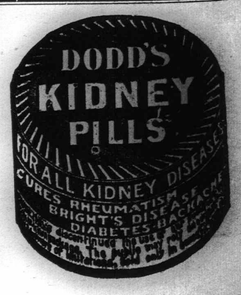
"Is there anythin' I can do for you, Mrs. Mulligan?" he asked her. "What for?" asked Mrs. Mulligan. "Shure, and your husband has gone daft," said Casey. "I seen him run out of the house and run back ag'in three nights and the fourth go out skippin' a rope." "Oh, that's nothin'," said Mrs. Mulligan. "The doctor was here last week, Mike bein' by way of ailin', and gave him four pills. 'Take three runnin' and skip the fourth,' sez he, 'and that's what Mike has been doin'.'"

SPEED OF A RATTLER.

Why It Is Easy to Shoot Off the Head of One of These Snakes.

In this wide world there are several things that are swifter than a rattlesnake, writes A. W. Rollser in Pearson's, but they can probably be counted on the fingers of one hand. One of these things is a bullet, whereby hangs the explanation why it is easy to shoot the head off a rattle, although a marksman finds it difficult to place a bullet along the fat seven foot line between the neck of the reptile and the tip of its tail.

It has long been regarded as a curious coincidence that even the man not famed for accuracy has had no trouble in blowing the head off a diamond back. In the diamond back country only one explanation is offered for this—it is the snake and not the man that does the aiming.



At close quarters the instant the muzzle of a six shooter is thrust toward a rattlesnake the infallible eye catches the range, and in the fraction of a twinkle the deadly head has aligned itself. As the gun roars and darts its tongue of flame the head of the creature is torn clean as if severed with a knife, and the viper lies writhing, emitting a defiant rattle even as its grim, relentless heart ceases its beat.

CONSTANT BIRDS.

Baldheaded Eagles and Golden Woodpeckers Mate but Once.

The married life of most birds could be taken for a model even by members of the human family. There is, for instance, the staid, dignified and homely baldheaded eagle, the glorious emblem of the American republic. He mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower—even a young widower—the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest on the rock crag or in the branches of a tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his disconsolate life. With him, once a widower, always a widower.

The golden woodpeckers live in a happy married state, mating but once. If the male dies his mate's grief is lasting, and she lives a widowed bird the rest of her life. So, too, the male woodpecker never seeks another mate after the death of his own. He taps on a tree beside their nest day and night trying to recall her; then at length, discouraged and hopeless, he becomes silent and never recovers his gayety.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

An adjourned meeting of the council was held last night in the Mayor's office. Present: The Mayor, Councillors, Stewart, DesBrisay, Sissons and Smyth.

A report was received from Mr Charlesworth re the sites offered by Mr Johnston and Mr Cousins for a recreation ground.

On motion of Messrs. Stewart and Sissons a bylaw (94), to raise money for the purchase of sites for recreation ground and for a market site, was introduced and given a first and second reading.

On motion of Messrs. Stewart and Sissons it was agreed to purchase the Johnston site (28.2 acres), at $200 per acre, conditionally upon the bylaw being passed by the ratepayers.

It was decided to offer a reward of $50 for the recovery of A. W. Green's body.

Telegrams were read re the Washington Pressmen's excursion, from which it appeared no provision was made for a stop at Medicine Hat on the westbound trip, but possible they may stop here on the return journey.

It was stated that the specifications for the new City Hall are not complete, and Coun. Drinnan was indisposed and unable for that reason to be present.

A letter from Mr W. R. Gilbert, re his bill for school assessment was referred to committee.

A letter was read from Harlow, Blythe & Co., offering site for market square and was referred to special committee.

Messrs. W. T. Finlay M.L.A., T. Hutchinson, Jno. Benson and W. Cousin attended as a deputation from the Liberal Executive and Board of Trade, to suggest to the Council the desirability of sending a delegation to Ottawa re the Strathcona Horse, New Post Office, Traffic Bridge and other town matters.

Each of the gentlemen named ably addressed the council and later in the evening the council, on motion of Messrs. Symthe and DesBrisay, agreed to send a deputation of two and to pay their railway fare and all reasonable expenses.

The selection of the delegates was left to the New Enterprise Committee and the deputation who had just appeared before the council.

The council then adjourned until Thursday evening when the sewerage bylaw and other matters will be taken up.

Bridge Must be Built.

What stronger argument is required to induce the authorities to build a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan than the lamentable accident of Saturday last when one of our townsmen met a watery grave. A. W. Green's life might have been spared to those to whom he is dear if there had been a bridge last Saturday. Efforts have been made from time to time to get a bridge but nothing has been done. Efforts have been made even to get a larger and safer ferry boat and a stronger cable, but all to no purpose. Instead of action there has been delays and quibbling and now the ferry has exacted a heavy toll. Once more we urge the town to make a supreme effort to get the authorities to have a bridge built.

Mr. Haultain on the Future.

A message from Toronto conveys a short but important statement made by Mr. Haultain on his arrival there last week when on his way to take part in the Ontario elections. "People of the east must not think the fight will be over when the autonomy bills have passed. It will only be just beginning and will probably be fought in such a way that the struggle will not be confined to the North-west Territories." This statement was made by Premier Haultain. He would not elaborate on the meaning of the latter part of the statement, further than to remark that the people of the west would use every constitutional means to get rid of separate school restrictions. He had just arrived from Calgary on his way to North Oxford and London. He said the feeling in the west was very pronounced against the school clauses and expressed the opinion that there was absolutely no difference in effect between the original and the amended clauses. They both contained separate school features—they both mean coercion.

Sidewalks.

Sidewalks are required almost if not quite as much as sewerage. Nothing detracts from the appearance of a good building so much as a broken ragged looking sidewalk, and the sooner the Council take the matter up the better the people will be pleased. It certainly appears late in the season now to commence sewerage works, but there is no reason why the Council should not go on with curbing and laying granolithic side-walks at once, and get a portion of the town done this year.

What is The Agricultural Society Doing?

It is time, and more than time, that the Agricultural Society got to work to prepare for their next show. Last year no move was made to get out the prize list until late in the season, and by the time the list appeared the advertisements were practically worthless. The list should be published early, both in the interests of intending exhibitors and of the advertisers. What is the President doing? Why are things allowed to drift like this?

What is a Transient Trader?

In the last two issues of this paper we have discussed the question of what is a transient trader. We have done so, not with the intention of making a somewhat difficult question more difficult, but with a view to ventilate a matter which is engaging the attention of local traders, and, if possible, to get "more light" on the subject. We have said the by-law is not quite clear on the subject. It is clear so far as it goes, but where to draw the line between what the bylaw defines as the transient trader liable to a $200 license and the mere pedlar or hawker liable only to a $7 license is the difficulty. This is the point which we think requires settling, and it is with that object in view, and that only, that we applied ourselves to the task. The bylaw if interpreted literally would appear to render every trader, whether hawker or not, liable to the $200 license,

The definition of peddling may be taken to be as follows: To "Peddle" goods is "to travel about with a basket or bundle of goods. To retail in very small quantities." A "hawker" is "one who carries about goods on his back for sale." It should be observed that the basket, and the carrying and the small quantities are essential parts.

According to our understanding of the words, every hawker, pedlar or chapman is a transient trader, but every transient trader is not a hawker or pedlar. The point is where to draw the line. We would say that for a person to be classed as a pedlar or hawker his stock in trade should be no more than a man could carry over the country on his back or in a basket, or at most, drive in a rig. The value would be also small. If he has a stock of some bulk and value, and takes a stand, even if it be only the canopy of heaven for a covering, he would be entitled to be called a trader. He is a man of some means and therefore removed from the mere pedlar class. If he moves from place to place he is a "transient trader." It should be noticed that the Ordinance deals with the two classes separately and distinctly. It describes the hawker as a man going from place to place "on foot or with any animal bearing or drawing the goods, wares or merchandise." An essential point in the Ordinance is the going on foot or with an animal from place to place or to other men's houses. It does not contemplate those who travel or trade in any other way. Unless they comply with the above they cannot be pedlars or hawkers, and therefore must be something else. If something else, we presume they would come under the transient trader's class. In our opinion however, the term "transient trader" is ambiguous and it would be better if more definite terms could be used in the bylaw.

Another aspect of the case may be mentioned. A person comes into town, applies for a hawker's license, saying he is a pedlar, and obtains the license. The person is then under the surveillance of the License Inspector, but the duties of the Inspector are at once rendered difficult. If he considers the "hawker" is a transient trader he is faced with the fact that the trader has already been recognised by the town authorities as a "hawker." "Possession is nine points of the law," and it is easy to understand that the Chief of Police (who is the License Inspector) may well hesitate before interfering not only with the man suspected of being a transient trader, but also with the authority issued by his masters, the Town Council.

Now we think we have said enough to show that something should be done to put this matter on a better and clearer footing, and for the present we leave it for others to digest.

Physically Exhausted.

Lacking in courage—out of joint with everything—scarcely on speaking terms with even fair health. Such low spirits are pitiable. Your brain is fagged, vitality so exhausted your constitution is well nigh ruined. What you need is Ferrozone, that great vitalizer and nutritive tonic. It's by making flesh and blood, by infusing iron and oxygen into the system that Ferrozone helps; it repairs weak spots, instills new life into worn-out organs—makes you feel like new. Ferrozone lifts age from the old and imparts resilience and buoyancy to the depressed. Be manly, ruddy colored,—cast aside weakness and enter the happy life that comes from using Ferrozone. Fifty cents a box in any drug store.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

And her name was Maude.

* * * *

When the fire hooter was set going on the north side on Thursday it took three men to hold Maude.

* * * *

The idea of applying to the Government for a grant for an embankment along the river front is a good one which both the Council and the Board of Trade ought to take up heartily. So far the efforts of the Council and Board of Trade have had very little effect with the Ottawa Government, but that is not the fault of the bodies mentioned.

* * * *

Ernie Charboneau was the first to set the new fire hooter going on the north side. Ernie gave a long pull and a strong pull.

* * * *

So Mr Nelson Spencer was "caned" the other night. Well, it was not for bad but good conduct, so the "caning" was all right, and fell upon good square shoulders. Mr Spencer had obtained more new members for the Century Club than anyone else, and so won the cane which Mr Strathy offered in that connection. Brother Spencer, may the "cane" never prove a "club," but a di(spenser) of Abel support throughout the "Century."

* * * *

Councillor Drinnan's motion to do the excavating for the new City Hall with the Corporation men has met with general approval. It will not only give employment to men at present working on the town, but it will enable the council to get on with the work at once.

* * * *

Is Calgary going to get the Strathcona Horse? Not if Medicine Hat can have a fair show in the matter. There is no sort of comparison between the two places, so far as suitability is concerned Medicine Hat is far and away the best point for headquarters.

* * * *

Something should be done to stop the ravages of the gophers at the public cemetery. I am told the place is simply overrun with them. Those who have relatives or friends buried there should bestir themselves, and see that these little pests are cleared out at once.

* * * *

A strong effort is to be made to get up a really good celebration on Dominion Day, July 1st. Well, that's a step in the right direction.

* * * *

"We have never had a real good celebration in Medicine Hat," said a leading lacrosse player the other night. There's a record for you. Well, never mind, we are progressing all right.

* * * *

The Mayor recently received a letter from India in which the writer asked for the "sole agency" for India for the sale of Medicine Hat natural gas. A prominent business man says this is the result of the "Sunday school advertising." Well, that may be so. If it be so, then the remark by another leading business man is true. He said: "This is the crudest advertised town in Canada."

Says Mr. Zaiser of Irvine: "We have had rain, and warm rain, and the crops are looking splendid. We shall have a good crop." So don't worry.

"Why, oh, why," remarked the observer of events and things, "will a woman smile with delight when she sees a hat in a milliner's window, and frown when she sees the same hat on her neighbour's head."

* * * *

Two men went into a restaurant where they were well known and told the proprietor they had made a bet of a first-rate lunch, and would have the lunch at once, and when the bet was decided the loser would drop in and pay, if that would be satisfactory. He answered that it would, and after the meal had been enjoyed he asked: "By the way, what was the bet?" "My friend here," said one of the men, "bets that when the railway bridge falls it will fall towards the south, and I bet it won't."

* * * *

The grading of the streets is a big expensive job, but it has to be done, and, as building is proceeding so rapidly, it is not being done any too soon. But a whole lot of people built either before street levels were available or failed to obtain them correctly. Some houses are up and some are down, and it is hard to say whether it is best to be up or down. If your house is up you now climb up and down; if it is down you now climb down and up.

* * * *

It reminds one of the old, old story of the King of France and his men:

When they were up, they were up,
When they were down, they were down,
When they were half way up the hill
They were neither up nor down.

* * * *

Mr Waldock has had to build steps to get down to his house. Mr Foster just opposite has had to build steps to get up to his house. Mr Fewings has had to "under-pin" his boundary wall, and expresses his opinion about it. Mr Walton has to do the same thing and says nothing. Well, it will be all the same to all of us in a hundred years or so from now, so look pleasant, my friends.

* * * *

My readers will begin to think I am in a pleasant mood just now. Well, I am a man of moods, perhaps, but I am seldom moody.

* * * *

Our Calgary Fair friends no doubt have some very good reasons for naming themselves the "Inter-Western Pacific Exhibition Company," but it's a big mouthful.

It is all very well to rescue cattle from Thomas Morrey, the pound-keeper, and at the same time assault him, but both acts constitute a breach of the law. A farmer paid $5.00 for one, $2.00 for the other offence last week.

COMING TO START WOOLLEN MILLS.

Mr Geo. Whelan, Secretary of the Medicine Hat Woollen Mill wired on Wednesday to Mr Thomas Tweed, Director, that he would be leaving Brantford on Saturday for Medicine Hat, and on his arrival would be in the market to purchase all the wool available for the mill.

CALGARY'S BIG FAIR.

Calgary's Agricultural and Industrial Fair opens its gate to the public on Wednesday the 5th of July next. Since the last exhibition very extensive improvements have been made in the grounds, particularly in the accommodation of live stock. A copy of the prize list for 1905 has just come to hand. The management of the Calgary Fair is apparently sparing no expense in bringing out the best exhibit of live stock possible. Breeders would do well to send for this volume and study its contents carefully.

The attractions this year promise to outshine all previous efforts to amuse the public during Fair week. A splendid race programme has been arranged for, musical rides, exciting high jumping contests and a magnificent fireworks display will close each days programme. Calgary expects to entertain half the population of Alberta during the fair and the hotel proprietors are making arrangements accordingly.

NORMAN DRAKE DIED WEDNESDAY MORNING.

It is with great regret that we chronicle the death of Norman Drake, C.P.R. brakeman, who fell under the cars near Seward last week as briefly recorded in our last issue. The accident occurred late on the night of Monday, June 6th, it is supposed that he leaned too far over in adjusting the couplings and fell on to the track. Conductor George Evans was in charge of the train. No one saw the accident, but Drake was found in a few moments and brought in on a special car, and conveyed to the hospital where Dr. Smith did all that was possible for him, but he died at 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning without having regained consciousness.

Norman Darke was a most exemplary young man and his terribly sudden death cast a gloom over the whole town. He had lodged with Mr J. E. Miers and was a regular attendant at the Century Methodist Church.

The funeral arrangements were taken charge of by the B. of R. T. No. 304, and a funeral service was held in the Methodist Church on Thursday evening.

The church was filled and the service a most impressive one. The Rev. J. M. Harrison, assisted by Rev. S. Everton, feelingly conducted the service and the choir led the singing of three suitable hymns. At the close nearly all the large congregation present present filed past the coffin and viewed the remains.

This over the casket was sealed and conveyed to the station, the B. of R. T. marching in procession behind the car containing the coffin. The pall-bearers were:

Geo. D. Evans
J. H. Wyatt
E. H. Turner
G. Wellband
W. R. Coursey
M. Muir

all friends and comrades of the deceased. On the coffin was a beautiful wreath of white flowers and cards attached bearing the names "Lena Lean, Nellie Coward."

During the service the solo "Some Sweet Day By and By" was impressively sung by Mrs McCarter.

The deceased's brother, who is on a ranch near Lacombe was wired to on Tuesday, but did not arrive in time for the service, and the body instead of being shipped on Friday morning was held until the evening and was then forwarded.

The incidents in connection with Norman Drake's death and burial shows that the Brotherhood Railway Trainmen is not a mere organisation dealing only with wages and conditions of labor. It is a fraternal order as demonstrated in the present instance. Young Drake came here a few years ago, got into the C.P.R. service and when eligible, joined the B. of R. T. and when this lamentable accident happened his brethern in the order did all they could for him under the circumstances and, although they could not ward off the grim destroyer they stepped in and paid every honor to the dead. A member of the order, Geo. B. Evans has accompanied the body east and attended the last sad rites. At Brantford where deceased's parent's reside he will place on the coffin a beautiful wreath on behalf of the B. of R. T.

NORWAY DISSOLVES THE UNION.

Norway, by a resolution passed in the Storthing, has declared the union between Norway and Sweden under one King to be disolved and that the King has ceased to act as King of Norway.

King Oscar has protested against the action of the Norway Storthing and how the matter will be finally settled is still in doubt. The Norwegians want a young Prince of the house of Bernadotte to occupy the throne of Norway.

A meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade was held on Friday afternoon and it was decided to support the suggestion of the Liberal Association that the Town Council be urged to send a deputation to Ottawa to endeavor to secure the Western headquartors of the Strathcona Horse for Medicine Hat.

NO JULY CELEBRATION AT REGINA.

The organizing directors of the Territorial celebration association met last week and came to the conclusion that the autonomy bills cannot become law by July 1. The directors consider therefore a postponement of the celebration a positive necessity and whilst continuing to perfect elaborate arrangements are doing so on the basis of an unascertained date.

TURPIN BROS.

Is The Place To Get It

DROWNED IN THE SASKATCHEWAN.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT AT THE FERRY.

A most shocking accident occurred at the ferry about 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, in which A. W. Green, of Green Bros. Steam Laundry, was drowned in the Saskatchewan River within a few feet of shore. The accident was witnessed by a number of people none of whom could render assistance. Mr Green, known to all his old chums as "Billy," started about three o'clock in a buggy accompanied by his little three year old son and Mr Bradshaw, with the intention of attending the baseball match to be played between the town team and the C.M.R. team at the latter's camping ground at police point. They drove onto the ferry-boat but there were three other rigs already on and there was but little room for the fourth. Mr Bradshaw went to the horses head while Mr Green and his little child sat in the rig. One was Mr Lairds, of the Assiniboia, and another Mr. D. G. White's. Mr Laird's horse backed against Mr Green's and the latter backed off the boat into the water, carrying Mr Green and the child with him. Green threw the child toward Bradshaw, but in trying to save the horse and buggy he was carried away with the current, and in a short time he sank in deep water not many yards from shore and never rose again. The horse reached the bank where he was led up. Mr Powley, who was with Mr Laird, jumped into the small boat and endeavored to reach the drowning man but could not get to him in time. Whether he was struck by the horse or seized with cramp will probably never be known. The accounts of eye-witnesses differ a little, as to details but agree as to main facts.

STATEMENTS BY EYEWITNESS.

Mr McQueen, the ferryman, who was seen by a Times representative said Mr Green's horse backed back. Bradshaw was at his head, but could not keep him up and he backed the buggy back into the water. I was on shore at the time. In pawing with his fore feet on the buggy he started the scow, Mr Green jumped out of the buggy and handed the child to me. He was only up to his waist in water. Then he got back into the buggy and we called to him to get out. He got out again but on the outer side in deeper water and he and the horse and buggy were carried away by current. Then he sank and never came up again.

Mr D. G. White, asked as to how the accident occured said: I could not see all that happened at the end of the scow. I saw Green in the water and he went down about 50 feet away from the scow. Green's horse seemed to have started the boat and we were quickly the length of the scow from the shore. C. S. Pingle who was with me jumped to the ropes and altered the head of the scow and so put us back again. Green was not seen after he went down. It all happened so quickly that I can hardly give you all the details."

A stranger who had been in town but two days was standing on the bank just below the ferry-boat witnessed the whole thing. In conversation with the Times this man detailed the particulars given above and then said: The man (meaning Mr Green) seemed to be holding fast of the reins, but he never got back to the rig. His head was just above the water but I thought he would make the shore down there, (pointing down to the old ferry place). He was shouting for help and some one threw a rope but it didnot reach him. When opposite that point the current carried him out and he went down and never came up again. So far as I could see nothing could be done to save him. I cannot swim and if I had jumped in I too would have been drowned. If the boat had been got out quicker he might have been picked up, but that is hard to say."

The spot indicated by the stranger where Green sank would be quite 50 yards from where he fell from the scow.

Bradshaw jumped into the water and saved the child.

Efforts were at once made to recover the body. Mr Drinnan was quickly out in a canoe and others in boats but no trace could be found. Mr Drinnan and Ernie Charboneau dived again and again and later Mr Laird, and the Assiniboia Hotel staff, dragged the river above the bridge with a long net and only disisted when darkness fell at 10 o'clock at night. The river had risen several feet during the preceding ten days and as usual at this season was muddy so that nothing could be seen six inches under the surface. The current too was very strong and no one can do more than conjecture as to where the body will be found.

Grapnels were used to drag the river bed on Sunday and every day since but with no result.

The deceased was a prominent man in lacrosse circles and last year was president of Medicine Hat's Champion Club. He was a favorite among the boys and his sudden and untimely end cast a pall over the whole town. Sad to relate he leaves a young widow and two small children one an infant a few weeks old. Mrs Green is a daughter of Mr Byers, of Fort William Ont., and has a sister in Mr Brothertons store. When the sad news was broken to Mrs Green she, for a time refused to believe it. She could not at first realise the terrible calamity which had befallen her. The sympathy felt in town for her, for deceased's aged parents in Toronto, and his four brothers Archie, Jack, Pete, Harry, (all of whom reside here, knows no bounds. The untoward event is one of the saddest that ever happened in this community.

It appears that he had originally intended taking Mr Mat Peard with him and the latter not being ready urged him to wait an hour for him, but he would not and went off to his death as recorded above.

Naturally the ball game was put off and the news of the drowning created a great sensation at the camp.

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS A BRIDGE.

A determined effort should be made to have a bridge built at once.

Medicine Hat south side of the river, has more than three thousand population: there are private residences, the rifle range, the military camp and numerous ranches on the north side of the river, and the only means of communication is the old scow ferry which is not only totally inadequate but, as has been shown, positively dangerous. Only a few weeks ago we drew attention to the danger, and now this melancholy accident has occurred. The present state of things is a crying shame and disgrace to the West, for no one knows how soon there may be a repitition of this terrible occurrence. Let this matter be brought at once to the notice of the Government at Ottawa and Regina. The public safety demands that a bridge be built at once. It will be little short of criminal for any man to oppose it.

The ice cream social announced by the Epworth League of the Methodist Church is postponed until Thursday night.

CONVERTING BUBBLY CREEK INTO LARD.

How a Stagnant Stream Near Chicago is Transformed into a "Fancy Brand."

There is a stagnant little stream in the stockyards district of Chicago which finds its ultimate outlet in the South Branch of the Chicago River. The packing houses have found this stream convenient as a sort of cesspool; into which they dump that part of the refuse of their slaughter houses which cannot by any known process be utilized in making up their marketable products. This refuse consists mainly of animal matter, and, as this putrefying material in the water gives off gases continually, which find their way to the surface scum in the way of bubbles, the stream has come to be known by the name of "Bubbly Creek." Some time ago an enterprising German perfected a process for converting the scum into lard. This process is in use to-day. Bubbly Creek is regularly skimmed, and the resulting product is a "fancy grade" of lard. While speaking of lard, let us take another case. A farmer of any experience knows that, within a few days or a week after the appearance of cholera symptoms among the hogs, he is likely to lose his whole herd. Not unnaturally, as mundane things go, his first thought, on discovering cholera, is to rush the hogs to the stock yards and sell them before tney die on his hands. If any reader of this article should be in Chicago, and if he should visit the stock yards, he could see where these diseased hogs are brought in by the carload. Those that have died in transit are thrown out on the receiving platform, and the living are hurried off to the shambles. It would be worth his while to stand by the heap of dead hogs for a little while. If he should do this, he would observe that the stock cars are soon hauled away, and that one or more box cars are backed in by a switch engine. The hogs—dead from cholera—are thrown into the cars, and the switch engine pulls out with them. Where, the reader may ask, are those cars going to? Now, there is an obscure little town over the Indiana line which bears the imposing name of Globe. If the packers were asked what they know about Globe they would probably say they have established rendering tanks for reducing diseased meat to grease and fertilizers. They would hardly add that lard is manufactured at Globe in considerable quantities.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest spring tonic in the whole world. Every dose makes new, rich blood—new vigorous life. They do this every time—they cannot fail. After a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills every man and woman can withstand the summer's heat free from backache and headaches, weakness and despondency. Mrs. A. White, Seal Cove, Que., says: "I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. They have not only made a new person of myself, but have been of inestimable value in my family. I always keep the pills in my home and the result is I have no doctor's bills; nor have I any delicate boys or girls, as the pills keep them strong and healthy. I constantly recommend the pills to my friends, and I always hear good words from those who use them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do not act upon the bowels; they do not bother with the mere symptoms of disease; they simply make new rich, red blood, and thus cure all the common ailments of life. THE ROMAN CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Roman Catholic population of the United States and its dependencies is far larger than that of any other religious denomination. This fact is brought out by a comparison between the statistics in the Roman Catholic directory for 1905, and those relating to other church bodies, which have been compiled by the Rev. H. K. Carroll. The whole number of Roman Catholics under the protection of the United States flag is 23,127,354. Of these 7,058,699 are in the Philippines; 1,578,862 in Cuba, 1,000,000 in Porto Rico and 32,000 in the Sandwich Islands. It would obviously be misleading to include the Roman Catholics of the dependencies in a consideration of the comparative strength of the religious denominations in the United States. Eliminating them altogether, the Roman Catholics of the country have 6,256,798 members. The Baptists follow with 5,150,815, then come the Lutherans, with 1,789,766; the Presbyterians, with 1,697,697; the Episcopalians, with 807,922; the Congregationalists, with 667,951; the Unitarians, with 71,000; the Christian Scientists, with 66,022.

WILY CHINAMEN CONFUSED THE COURT.

A New York dispatch says:—There is only one man 'higher up' in the New York police department. That man is located at three hundred Mulberry street, and is myself." This quotation is taken from a formal statement issued by Police Commissioner McAdoo in connection with the gambling raids in Chinatown, when more than two hundred were arrested by the police. The statement was given out as an official denial of allegations that Chinese gamblers had long enjoyed immunity from prosecution by paying tribute to certain officers of the police department through a "man higher up." In his statement the commissioner says that the more money people pay for protection the less protection they will get. "Chinatown must obey the law and keep its money in its pocket, and understand that there is one rule for black men or white men or yellow in New York." Of the 213 Chinamen arresttd in Chinatown only twenty-one were held in court. In the confusion caused by the similarity of their faces three of the twenty-one escaped mysteriously. The roundsmen who had charge of the case declared that half of the eight-five Chinamen who secured bail had not appeared, but in their places were substitutes. It could not be told whether they were the real prisoners, so there was nothing to do but discharge the dummies. Chow Young, the chief witness in the case, was at a loss as to who were the men he had arrested. He was frightened during the examination when counsel for the accused Chinamen said he had just received word from Chinatown that a reward of $6,000 had been offered for the head of Chow Young, as informer on his countrymen. Chow Young turned pale and gave the rest of his testimony with a faltering voice and frightened demeanor. After examination in which the impossibility of identifying the majority of the prisoners was demonstrated, nineteen of the Chinamen were held in $500 bail for further examination.

A dinner was given recently in Philadelphia to Lawrence Townsend, the American minister to Belgium. Mr. Townsend talked at this dinner about his experience abroad. Among other things, he said: "In Belgium, as a rule, when English is spoken to you it is excellent English. Now and then, though, you come upon some very curious mistakes. "I attended a music-ale one day at an English woman's apartment. An admirable amateur on the violin was the guest of honor. The man played and played, for the encores were persistent, till finally he got a little tired. He wished to say politely to his hostess that he was too weary to play any longer, and the words he used were these: "Madam, der ghost iss ready, but der meat iss feeble."

THE MODERN MOTHER

Children shudder at castor oil, and with good reason. Castor oil is a relic of old-time barbarism. Not only is it repulsive to the taste, but it gripes and tortures delicate children. Modern mothers use Baby's Own Tablets, a gentle laxative which does not gripe; a comforting medicine which may be given to a new-born babe without fear of harm. These Tablets cure all the minor ills of little ones, and promote natural sleep and repose. Mrs. R. H. James, Fenaghvale, Ont., says:—"I find great satisfaction in the use of Baby's Own Tablets, and do not know how I could get along without them. They make children well and keep them well." And you have a guarantee that there is not one particle of opiate or harmful drug in this medicine. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRING YOUR WHOLE SELF TO YOUR WORK.

It makes all the difference in the world, in results, whether you come to your work every day with all your powers intact, with all your faculties up to the standard; whether you come with the entire man, so that you can fling your whole life into your task, or with only a part of yourself; whether you do your work as the giant or as a pigmy. Most people bring only a small part of themselves to their tasks. They cripple much of their ability by irregular living, bad habits in eating, and injurious food, lack of sleep, dissipation, or some other folly. They do not come to their tasks every morning whole men; a part of themselves, and often a large part, is somewhere else. They left their energy where they were trying to have a good time, so that thy bring weakness instead of power, indifference and dullness instead of enthusiasm and alertness, to the performance of the most important duties of their lives. The man who comes to his work in the morning unrefreshed, languid and listless can not do a good, honest day's work, and, if he drags rotten days into the year how can he expect a sound career or a successful achievement? Good work is not entirely a question of will power; often this is impaired by a low physical standard. The quality of the work can not be up to the high-water mark when every faculty, every function, and every bit of your ability is affected by your physical and mental condition. You may be sure that your weakness, whatever its cause, will appear in your day's work, whether it is making books or selling them, teaching school or studying, singing or painting, chiseling statues or digging trenches.

The Kidneys of the young may be wrong, but the Kidneys of the old must be wrong. Dodd's Kidney Pills make all wrong Kidneys right. That is why they are the old folks' greatest friend.

CLIMAX IN NAN'S CASE.

New York.—The climax in the prosecution of Nan Patterson was reached when Hyman Stern, the pawnbroker, failed to identify J. Morgan Smith as the man to whom he sold the pistol with which "Caeser" Young was killed. This test has been looked forward to with much anticipation and was expected to make something of a sensation. On the contrary, however, it caused but a ripple of comment and surprise in the courtroom. Stern also failed to identify Nan Patterson or Mrs. Smith as the women with the man that purchased the revolver. The tension of the courtroom was intense as Stern gave his evidence, the room being so quiet that his heavy breathing as he leaned forward to look at Smith could be heard. Riotous scenes attended the opening of the courtroom for the afternoon session. Men and women fought to get past the police. Several women fainted and many had their dresses torn. Besides Stern, the witnesses called gave technical testimony. Only two important witnesses for the prosecution — "Caesar" Young's widow and his racing partner, John Millen—remained to be examined when the trial adjourned. Prosecutor Rand announced that by noon Thursday the state would close its case. Abraham Levy, senior counsel for the defence, will ask for an adjournment of a day, and if it is granted the opening speech for the defence will be made by Henry W. Unger.

New Train For Sauht.

On May 1 the Great Northern railway, in connection with the Canadian Northern, inaugurated a brand new train known as the Winnipeg express between Winnipeg and the Twin Cities. The equipment throughout is modern in every respect, and is said to be superior in many respects to the service between St. Paul and Chicago, which service is generally considered to be the best on the continent. The sleepers are similar to those operated on the Golden State Limited, which runs between Chicago and Los Angeles, having library, observation and roomy sleeping compartments, in addition to which the train will carry palace sleeping cars of the very latest pattern, and a dining car which has made this service a feature. There will be no change in the schedule time of the train at present. The train will continue to carry the fast mail to the south.

YOUR HABITUAL EXPRESSION

What kind of an expression do you wear habitually? Is it sour, morose, repellent? Is it a mean, stingy, contemptible, uncharitable, intolerant expression? Do you wear the expression of a bulldog, a grasping, greedy, hungry expression, which indicates an avaricious nature? Do you go about among your employees with a thundercloud expression, with a melancholy, despondent, hopeless look on your face, or do you wear the sunshine expression which radiates good cheer and hope, which indicates a feeling of good will and of helpfulness? Do people smile and look happier when you approach them, or do they shrink from you and feel a chilly goose-flesh sensation come over them as they see you approach? It makes all the difference in the world to you and to those whom you influence, what kind of an expression you wear.

Speaker Cannon's all but indecipherable handwriting got Congressman Cushman into a mess a few days ago. The Washington Representative got a note from the Speaker, but was unable to make out more than two or three words. Then he showed it to several friends, and between them they read it all but the last three words. In despair he called on Mr. Cannon and told him of the difficulty. Said the Speaker: "You showed this letter to several people, you say?" "Oh, yes, Mr. Speaker; I tried every way to read it before troubling you about the matter. None of us could make out the last three words, though." "Why," said Mr. Cannon, "the last three words were 'personal and confidential,' you chump."

SAVAGERY IN LOUISIANA.

Shreveport, La. — After working three hours with sledge hammers and picks, twenty-five men broke into the parish jail at Homer, La., and shot Dick Craighead, inflicting wounds which will probably prove fatal. Craighead was charged with the murder of Mrs. Isaac McKee, wife of Craighead's half-brother, and her little son. The authorities were unaware of the designs on the prisoner until too late to prevent it. Every telephone and telegraph wire out of Homer was cut, and the rifles of the Claibourne guards were seized before the attack was made on the jail. So quietly did the men work that scarcely anyone in the village was aware of what was taking place at the jail. Having dug a hole through the brick wall, the lynchers crawled through the opening but on reaching the steel cell in which the prisoner was confined, found it impossible to break the lock. They then began shooting at the cowering prisoner through the bars of the cell, shots being fired, nearly every one taking effect. The man's legs, arms and portions of his body were torn to shreds with bullets. Believing that Craighead was dead, the lynchers left the prisoner and dispersed. When Sheriff Kirkpatrick reached the jail he found Craighead still alive. It is said that he told the sheriff the names of three of the lynchers.

MARTYRS AT THE STEAK.

The gnashing teeth bit hard
On a stern and rib-bound roast,
While boarders 'gainst a dented wall
The leaden biscuit tossed.

And their anxious brows grew dark
As they glanced the table o'er
And recognized, in a chowdered form,
Some things they'd seen before.

What sought they thus afar?
Fresh loaves and tender meat?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of farms?
They sought a bit to eat!

Not as the conqueror comes—
They hurried in pellmell,
All hungry-eyed, emaciate,
At sound of dinner bell.

Aye, call it what you will,
The proudest spirit bows
Before that nameless, shameless thing—
A city boarding house.

In one of our eastern cities a certain family suddenly found themselves at the top notch of wealth and prosperity. They then began to seek for the secondary requirement of culture. A most excellent master was engaged to instruct their only daughter on the piano. His patience being taxed to the uttermost, the master complained to the young woman's mother: "Madam, I cannot teach your daughter longer." "And why not? Doesn't my daughter study? I will make her study." "It ees not zat," persisted the old man. "I cannot teach her. She has no talent." "Is that all?" his patroness replied. "I am rich. Here is my pocketbook. Go over to New York and buy her some."

Stratford, 4th Aug., 1893.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Gentlemen,—My neighbor's boy 4 years old, fell into a tub of boiling water and got scalded fearfully. A few days later his legs swelled to three times their natural size and broke out in running sores. His parents could get nothing to help him till I recommended MINARD'S LINIMENT, which, after using two bottles, completely cured him, and I know of several other cases around here almost as remarkable, cured by the same Liniment and I can truly say I never handled a medicine which has had as good a sale or given such universal satisfaction.

M. HIBERT, General Merchant.

A strapping lad of twelve was registered in one of the public schools of Philadelphia. He readily gave the several facts called for, but he did not know whether his birthday fell on the 10th of November or of December. The Principal was surprised at this display of ignorance on the part of so old a child, and he asked how it came to pass that he hadn't learned the date of his birth. "I wasn't born," said the boy; "I had a step-mother."

TWITCHY MUSCLES AND SLEEPLESSNESS.—The hopeless heart sickness that settles on a man or woman whose nerves are shattered by disease can best be pictured in contrast with a patient who has been in the "depths" and has been dragged from them by South American Nervine. Geo. Webster, of Forest, Ont., says: "I owe my life to it. Everything else failed to cure."—44

A funny incident occurred in one of the primary grades of the Lewisburg public schools. The first class in arithmetic was reciting; the teacher was doing her best to make a little fellow understand the difference between the measurements of a quart and a pint. At last the teacher said, hopefully: "Now, Johnny, which would you rather have, a quart or a pint of ice cream?" The pupil, not knowing, made a guess, and answered: "Why, a pint, of course." "Why," objected the teacher, hopelessly, "a pint is less than a quart." "I know it," he quickly responded, "I don't like ice cream."

A Cure For Costiveness.—Costiveness comes from the refusal of the excretory organs to perform their duties regularly from contributing causes usually disordered digestion. Parmalee's Vegetable Pills, prepared on scientific principles, are so compounded that certain ingredients in them pass through the stomach and act upon the bowels so as to remove their torpor and arouse them to proper action. Many thousands are prepared to bear testimony to their power in this respect.

The city man persisted in banging away with both barrels long after each covey flushed was out of gunshot. "What kind of a shot do you think I'll make?" he asked his rural companion. "I should say you would make a fine long shot." "Why?" "Because you have missed every bird you have fired at, but your shots are sure to hit something before they strike the earth. It might be a bird."

Where can I get some of Holloway's Corn Cure? I was entirely cured of my corns by this remedy and I wish some more of it for my friends. So writes Mr. J. W. Brown, Chicago.

NEW WHITE KID SHOES EVERY DAY.

In his article on "The Shameful Misuse of Wealth," now running in "Success Magazine," Cleveland Moffett has this to say of an extravagant mother whose little boy wore white kid shoes: "This case of a child without shoes or stockngs reminds me of a story from Chicago, an absolutely true story, as I happen to know, of a woman there, the daughter of one of the richest men in the world. She always has her little boy wear white kid shoes, and owing to the smoke of the city and the bad condition of the streets she has had trouble in keeping them clean. One day she met another mother who was also perplexed by the shoe-cleaning problem, and she said with a naive enthusiasm, as if she had made a great discovery:—'You know, I have solved that whole difficulty. I don't send little Johnie's shoes to the cleaners at all nny more. I just buy so many dozen pains at a time and let him wear a new pair every day. It's a great idea.'"

CURED

The Link Co., 179 King St. W., Toronto.

In Nature's Storehouse There Are Cures.—Medical experiments have shown conclusively that there are medicinal virtues in even ordinary plants growing up around us which give them a value that cannot be estimated. It is said by some that Nature provides a cure for every disease which neglect and ignorance have visited upon man. However, this may be, it is well known that Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, distilled from roots and herbs, are a sovereign remedy in curing all disorders of the digestion.

Prof. John Dewey tells the following story to illustrate the futility of certain present-day educational methods when applied to the affairs of practical relief on your cooking by inviting a said he, "where they teach boys to swim without any water. All the motions necessary for swimming are taught scientifically and correctly. I asked one of the graduates what he did when he got into the water. "He replied laconically, 'Sunk.'"

Use Lever's Dry Soap (a powder) to wash woolens and flannels,—you'll like it. 32

"You enjoy a classical composition more after you have heard it a few times." "I don't know," answered Mr. Cumrox, "whether I enjoy it or whether I get used to it and don't notice it so much."

OLD TIME SAFE-BREAKER DIES OF BROKEN HEART.

James Hope, otherwise known as Jimmy Hope, and "Old Man" Hope, leader of the band which robbed the Manhattan Bank in New York of nearly $3,000,000 in money and securities, nearly thirty years ago, is dead at his home there. His wife said that he died of grief and broken heart because of the publicity which constantly kept his record alive.

Hope was known as the last of the old-time safe-breakers.

Mr H. Curtis, of Calgary, manager of the big new hotel the Grand Union, to be opened there on the 20th of June, spent a few days in town last week, a guest at the Cosmopolitan Hotel. He is an old friend of Conductor A. A. Smith.

Fred Hardwidge, representing a party of intending emigrants at Indiana dropped into the Times office on Wednesday, while on his way to the coast, and was supplied with some particulars of Medicine Hat. He was much surprised to see a sample of oats from Fleming & Corbetts farm measuring 29 inches high and said it was much ahead of anything he had seen on his trip.

A fire on a rubbish pile near the stable on Mr McCaslin's property gave the brigade a run on Thursday. The boys had the apparatus out and were off full gallop in 70 seconds from the time the alarm was sounded. This is smart work when we consider that the members of the volunteer brigade are scattered around town at their work in stores and offices. The way they "get there" at the first note of alarm is a sight to see.

Dropped All Others.

"I dropped all liniments but Nerviline because I found Nerviline quickest to relieve pain," writes E. S. Benton of St. John's. "If my children are croupy or sick, Nerviline cures them. If a case of cramps or stomach ache turns up, Nerviline is ready. We use Nerviline for neuralgia, rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains; it's as good as any doctor." The great Canadian remedy for the past fifty years has been Polson's Nerviline—nothing better made.

WALKS WITH A BROKEN NECK.

PAINTER FALLS FIFTEEN FEET AND FRACTURES CERCIVAL VEETEBRAE.

Doctors at the Cook County hospital Chicago are amazed at the case of a patient who arrived in the institution a few days back and calmly announced that his "neck was twisted." He was holding his neck in an upright position, with one hand on either side of it.

The superintendent had him taken to the emergency ward, where an examination was made. It was found that the visitor's neck was broken. He told the doctors his head "felt heavy," but otherwise he was feeling "tip top." The doctors say he probably will live.

The patient had walked half a mile to a street car, and made his way to the hospital alone, all the time bracing his head with his hands. His name is Benjamin Quinette, and he is a painter living at Canal and Randolph streets.

Quinette and several other men were at work painting a building, when suddenly he tripped over a paint pail and fell to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet. He struck on his head, and lay unconscious for ten minutes.

Notice is given by the postmaster that on and after Sunday June 18th the lobby of the Post Office will be open on Sundays for the convenience of box holders from 10 to 13 o'clock.

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midsummer of life, and he left his family $1,000,000. The doctor's certificate showed that death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend: "That man was a suicide. He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been sound. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and by neglect of symptoms which have been warning him a year past, that his stomach was failing in its duties."

The symptoms of a disordered stomach are, among others, variable appetite, sour risings, heartburn, undue fullness after eating, dull headache, dingy complexion, discolored eye, fluctuations in physical strength, nervousness, sleeplessness, despondency. No person will have all these symptoms at once.

The restoration of the stomach to sound health, begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses until the functions of the stomach are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet and strong, the appetite healthful, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear.

"Please accept my thanks for the benefit which my child received from your medicine," writes Mrs. W. A. Morgan, of Silica, Mo. "He had been troubled for nearly a year with liver complaint, indigestion and constipation. I gave him your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and they did him great good. I gave him the 'Discovery' about eight months, and several vials of the 'Pellets.' He seems to be perfectly well now."

If you want a cure accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Pierce's Pleasant Pellets

These ORIGINAL Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago, have been much imitated but never equaled. They're made of purely vegetable, concentrated and refined medicinal principles, extracted from native American roots and plants. They speedily relieve and cure foul, torpid and deranged Stomachs, Livers and Bowels and their attendant distressful ailments. One or two is laxative, three or four a cathartic.

FACTS.

IT IS NO DISGRACE TO BE POOR, BUT MIGHTY INCONVENIENT.

One of the reasons so many people are so poor is because they failed to grasp opportunities. NAPOLEON has said "Ability is of little account without opportunity."

"He who has to look twice to see an opportunity generally finds someone else in possession of it."

One of the world's most successful financiers, when asked how he made his fortune replied. "I used my brain and took advantage of opportunities as they occurred to me."

HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY. As you will be able to see by the progress of the Natural Gas Town, Medicine Hat, which is going ahead in leaps and bounds. Its population is increasing wonderfully, its bank clearings, building permits, etc., are surpassed in the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta only by Regina, Calgary and Edmonton.

Some of the greatest fortunes in America have been made by their owners investing a few dollars in suburban acreage and lots. "There have been many fortunes made, and made honestly too, out of the increase of values in real estate in the growing Western Towns in the last ten years than from all other sources combined."

"The original Jacob Astor was born at Waldorf in Germany, in 1760. His father was a butcher, and the boy received an immense dislike for that business. His first employer was a quaker in New York City, who gave him $2 a week for beating the fur skins. He was soon able to start a small junk shop in Pearl Street. As rapidly as John Jacob Astor accumulated money he invested it in real estate. Loss for seeing men laughed at these investments. The city proper did not extend at that time beyond Canal street. Time, however, proved the soundness of Mr. Astor's judgment, and before he died he was worth $20,000,000."

FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE OF THE ASTORS

There is no better investment in Western Canada to-day than Medicine Hat Suburban Properties and RIVERSIDE LOTS beat them all.

If you put $5 a week in a good bank you would have at the end of the year $250. On this you would receive about $3.90 interest. Now if you put $5 a month into a Riverside Lot it will double in price in six months. Secure a lot before you are too late.

A total of 57 rank and file.

On Sunday, June 11th, the squadron paraded some 40 strong to the Baptist Church for divine service. The party was not so strong as it might have been, owing to the fact that a detachment under Lieut. H. Jenkins was detailed to patrol the river banks and assist the friends of the late Will Green in the search for his body. The service was conducted by the Rev. S. Everton, and was much appreciated by all. The hymns were very appropriate, and the efforts of the choir were heartily seconded by the soldiers. The sermon was attentively listened to.

On Monday, June 12, a severe wind storm visited the camp, and for a few seconds created havoc before the squadron could return from drill and seize their belongings. Several tents were lifted high and hurled over the old R.N.W.M.P. buildings. On Sergt. Pingle's (Orderly Room Clerk) return from town he found a state of chaos reigning supreme among the records on file in his tent. The ink bottle had made several movements, and tossed about on the table, leaving fatal marks wherever it traversed.

On Thursday, June 15th, the Squadron was inspected by Col. Evans, C.B., A.D.C. The men went through squadron drill in the morning, mounted and dismounted and in the afternoon were put through squadron drill, muster parade, target practice, etc. At the conclusion, Col. Evans expressed himself well pleased with the appearance and drill of the squadron. The camp, he said, was a better one than last year, and he hoped by next year they would be a full squadron (only seven short now.)

The review was witnessed by many townspeople, including:—Mr and Mrs Wm. Cousins, Mr and Mrs Walter Huckvale, Mr and Mrs F. L. Crawford, Mr K. S. Meek, Mrs. F. O. Sissons, Messrs Webster, Jenkins, and Ricketts, of Kansan City, U.S.A.

On Tuesday afternoon last a picked team from the Medicine Hat Rifle Association visited Grand View Camp to try conclusions with the soldiers. A high wind prevailed, and the weather was a trifle wet, but this did not quench the ardour of the enthusiasts. The match was a 200, 500 and 600 yard one, at Association targets, with service sights, and to make things interesting it was unanimously agreed that the losing team should pay the sum of $10 to the General Hospital Fund. The scores were as follows:—

After the ballgame a smoker was held in the Officers's Mess. Lieut. Reid presided, and songs, speeches and dances were given, and there were lots in the way of liquid refreshments and cigars. After a full evenings fun the boys made a good wind up about 11 o'clock.

On Thursday after the inspection an interesting matched race took place between McClellan's heavy draft, and Sergt. Pingle's light o' foot. The race was a mile heat and a side bet of $500. Corpl. J. Mitchell jockeyed for Sergt. McClellan and Pte. Calkins for Pingle's "Charlie." The race was captured easily by the latter horse.

On Friday, the squadron received their pay, and struck tents, and then marched out of camp, and dismissed in town, thus ending a very profitalbe annual training.

Sergeant-Instructor Jackson left on Sunday night for Winnipeg.

Thirty years ago Stanley the explorer met the heathen King Mtesa when Stanley spoke to him of Christ and told him the glad message of salvation. There in that whole heathen land not one knew what a great inheritance free to all who accept this gift of eternal life, for it is without money and without price and all the return our dear Saviour asks is love and thanks. But in this free and plentiful land of Canada men are supplied with all bountiful gifts of a good Lord and Father, so that turn which way we will it is our own free choice if we do not use this privilege rightly.

Then what a pity that we should be so selfish as to use the good grain for what will spoil any life and cause the downfall of men. For through the work of man, grain may be put through a process of fermentation that will produce a strong liquor that our Indian friend seeing the evil it caused, called firewater or whiskey, which if drunk freely, causes a man to fall down. But through our Lord Jesus' example and command it is the work of Christ and his followers to save and uplift.

The Calgary Daily Herald now reaches Medicine Hat on the evening of publication, instead of the next morning. This is accomplished by issuing the paper two hours earlier and catching train No. 2 from the west.

TOWN COUNCIL.

An adjourned meeting of the Council was called for Thursday evening, when Messrs J. K. Drinnan, (acting mayor), F. O. Sissons and A. Desbrisay with Mr. Adsit, Town Clerk, attended, but as it requires four members to form a quorum, no business was transacted.

How Much of the Sewerage Scheme.

What portion of the sewerage scheme to carry out in the immediate future, is the great question of the hour, and we have been asked to state concisely the opinion held by many leading residents.

They would sewer South Railway Street from the Cosmopolitan Hotel to the river; River and Main Streets from Sixth Avenue and Toronto Street from the public school, each one connected with the main sewer on South Railway Street. On the north side of the track, Main Street should be sewered so as to take in the hospitals and a cross drain made to connect the Montreal Street School. That work should be done on the assessment tax system and the sewering of the remainder of the town could be left for the present, in fact till the people concerned asked for it.

In reflecting this opinion we might say we are in thorough accord therewith, as we consider it would fully meet all requirements for a considerable time. It is all that is required to ensure the health of the town and having done this we would extend to other streets only as the people petitioned for it. The only exception we would make to this rule would be in the case of any street becoming unhealthy and a menace to the health of the town in which case the particular residents should be compelled to accept the sewerage connections.

As the portion of the sewerage we have outlined is completed we would immediately follow with granolithic sidewalks, also on the frontage assessment tax. The sidewalks we would extend to other streets even before the sewerage because sewerage can be put under the sidewalks without much additional trouble or expense. With sidewalks constructed the Council could proceed with boulevarding streets that are suitable and this again need not necessarily wait for sewerage.

In conjunction with the above, however, we would institute the scavenging cart. The citizens should be required to deposit all refuse in casks or boxes in the lanes and the scavenger's cart should empty them at frequent intervals. This with a strict law as to cleaning of earth, closets, stables etc., would give us a clean, healthy, well drained town, and the cost would not be more than the people might fairly assume.

A New Bridge.

No one denies the absolute necessity for a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan at this point. The only question to be decided is who is to bear the cost of its construction and if we can prevail upon the "powers that be" to take the matter in hand. The deputation now at Ottawa will endeavor to find out if the river at Medicine Hat is registered as a navigable stream and if so it is to the Dominion Government that we must look for the bridge. There seems every reason to suppose the river is so registered as the C.P.R. had to construct their bridge with one portion on a turn-table so as to allow of the passage of river craft. Ideas as to the cost of a traffic bridge vary a good deal.

Some estimate the cost at $75,000 to $100,000. We do not see why it should cost so much, as a bridge over the Red River at Winnipeg, giving a 26 feet roadway and two six feet footways was built for $75,000. The Red at Winnipeg is, we would say, as wide as the Saskatchewan here, and a somewhat smaller bridge would do here and serve all purposes.

It has been suggested that the town should bear a portion of the cost. It was suggested in the columns of this paper a few weeks ago that the town would do better to contribute a third of the cost and secure the bridge than hold back and not obtain the bridge. Mr. W. T. Finlay, M.L.A., is of this opinion and suggests the town should bear half the cost. Now it would be well to try and estimate approximately what the bridge really would cost. If it be the Government's place to do it all, let us urge upon them the necessity for the bridge and appeal to them to build it out of the Dominion funds. If it could be built for say $60,000 it would be well for the town to subscribe $20,000 towards it if nothing else would induce the Government to undertake it.

What Should we do Without Them.

The Ladies Aid of the General Hospital deserve all the good things one can say about them. Mrs. Nicholson and her able supporters have worked long and well for the hospital and we think the Governors might well exclaim "We don't know what we should do without them." The Nurses Home and the various additions and improvements at the General and Maternity Hospitals stand as a lasting memorial to this splendid staff of workers. Those interested in knowing who these ladies are may find their names in the General Report recently issued from the Times office.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

The settlers of the Feldman Lake district have bunched their cattle together and moved them to Goose Lake for the summer.

Messrs E. Earl and W. Hawk are in charge of the camp. If reports are true Goose Lake is likely to become more than a cattleman's resort

Mr. Reid Markel's father, of Denver, Colorado, is spending a few weeks with him and looking over the country with an eye to investing. He considers there are great things in store for this part of the west.

Mr. C. Putnam is engineering the construction of a much needed road west of the Creek, running from E. Smith's ranch direct north to the Josephburg trail, which is a surveyed road to the Hat. This will be permanent and without gates. For the last few months the settlers at the upper end of the creek have had to make a fresh trail every time they went to town on account of new fences being constructed.

"Miss King left this week to take a position as nurse in the Medicine Hat Hospital. She has held the position of governess in the family of Mr. Thos. Johnston for over two years. She will be greatly missed but all her friends wish her every success in her new position.—Maple Creek Signal.

SCHOOL BOARD.

At a meeting of the School Board held on the 13th. inst., the following tenders were received for completing Montreal Street school:

Oakes & Everard	$4,940
Brown & Preston	4,775
J. B. Bates	4,030
Heating & Plumbing Co.	10.50
James Rae	8.50

Mr. Bates' tender was accepted, and Mr. Kealy instructed to prepare contract.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board a letter was received from Mr. Bates declining to enter into a contract and withdrawing his tender.

The Board thereupon awarded the contract to Brown & Preston.

Minutes of a special meeting of the Medicine Hat School Board held on June 15th., at 20 o'clock, in the Secretary's office.

Present: Chairman, Mr. Nicolls, Messrs Milne and Kennedy.

A communication was read from Messrs Brown & Preston regarding their tender for completing the Montreal Street school.

Moved by Mr. Milne that the communication be received and filed. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Milne that after duly considering Messrs Brown & Preston's communication regarding specifications for completing Montreal St. School, the Board is not in a position to make any variations from the plans and specifications submitted to the contractors for tenders.

Therefore the contractors must abide by their tender.

The meeting then adjourned.

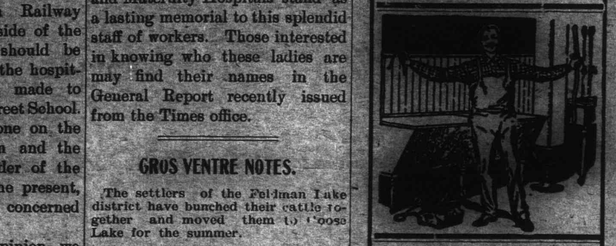
Smith, Liberal was elected in North Oxford by 392.

Mr. Headly, market gardener, has installed a gasoline engine for pumping water from the creek on to his land. He reports a very successful season with his crops, and business good.



Inspector Parker (who succeds Inspector Richards) R.N.W.M.P., arrived last week with his family, from Battleford, and has taken up his residence next Dr. Smith, on Main Street.

J. J. Jenkins, El Pasco, Illinois, W. D. Corbin, and L. C. Ricketts, Kansas City, U. S., spent three days in town last week and were much interested in the town and surrounding country. On Wednesday morning the mayor showed them over the town and in the afternoon the editor of The Times took a drive with them and showed them the crops on M. A. Zahnisers, W. R. Babington's and F. W. Follis' farms. The visitors were surprised to see how forward the spring sown wheat is and remarked upon the quality of the cattle they saw on the range. The crops they said were away ahead of Manitoba or Dakota crops and the cattle surpassed those of Illinois and Kansas in regard to fatness and quality.

Reduced A Hard Swelling.

Mr. Gus E. Gerow, writing from Pembroke, tells how he was injured in a lumber camp. "A heavy log rolled against my leg and I was laid up with stiffness and a hard swelling. When I applied Polson's Nerviline I got relief. A few rubbings with this good liniment cured me." In the bush, Nerviline is indispensable; it cures neuralgia, colds, rheumatism and internal disorders too. No persons can afford to be without Nerviline. Useful for all internal and external pain. Large bottles 25c. at all dealers.

PRESENTATION TO MR. R. W. HYDE.

Quite a large number of friends of "Bob" Hyde, who left this morning for Battleford, Sask., assembled on Saturday evening for the purpose of presenting him with a small souvenir of his stay in our midst. Mr. C. S. Pingle occupied the chair, and the address was read by A. J. N. Terrill. Speeches followed from Messrs. J. Leonard, F. Gilroy, Chief Markwick, C. Stutfield, H. W. Ireland and others. Songs were contributed by F. Gilroy, C. Stutfield and Lyric Quartette. Meeting closed with the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne. The following is a copy of the address.

Medicine Hat, June 17th, 1905.

To Robert W. Hyde Esq. Town.

Dear Bob,

Now that the time has arrived to strike the last chord, some of your many friends in Medicine Hat have joined together for the purpose of presenting you with a small souvenir of your stay here. Although you have only been in our midst for a short time, it has been quite long enough to show us your many good qualities.

Your magnificent talent as a pianist has been shown to us on many occasions and we feel sure that should you ever devote your time to composing music you will eventually rank as one of Canada's leading musicians.

Many calls have been made on your talent, your time, and your generosity and you have never failed to respond, to the great pleasure of your many admirers.

That your future happiness, prosperity and good health may be right up in the "high C" is the wish of your many friends here, and should you ever decide to return to Medicine Hat, you may be sure of a right hearty welcome from all.

Signed: J. Leonard, W. F. Alexander, F. W. Gilroy, J. H. Binns, G. P. Sanderson, N. Charlton, Mack Higdon, The Cemetery Club, C. S. Pingle, W. E. Crompton, C. Stutfield, H. W. Ireland, H. L. Tweed, R. S. Clayton, F. E. Gigot, The Lacrosse Club, C. F. Smith, G. E. Fleming, W. E. Honiball, F. Magnuson, J. W. Farr, W. C. Harris, Assiniboia Music Co., A. J. N. Terrill.

GREEN'S BODY NOT YET FOUND.

Up to the time of going to press the body of William A. Green, who was drowned on the 10th, inst., had not yet been found. A constant watch is being kept along the river and we learn that the reward for the recovery of the body has been increased by the town and the lacrosse club, to $200. Messrs Mat Peard and Vic Ready went down river on Sunday as far as Drowning Ford, a distance of 60 miles, but found no trace of their late friend's body. A line of hooks is stretched across the river near the Island and it is the fervent hope of all our townspeople that the poor fellow's remains may soon be found so that all may join in the last sad rites.

THE WOOLLEN MILL.

Mr. Geo Whelan, Secretary of the Woollen Mill Company, has arrived from the east and informs us that he is now in the market to buy wool in quantity.

Asked as to whether the company contemplated doing anything with the building soon, Mr. Whelan said that the company hoped to begin in about six weeks to two months.

Inspector Parker, R.N.W.M.P., paid a visit to Maple Creek on Sunday.

Mr. Hugh Brock, of Cranbrook, spent Sunday in town the guest of his old friend, Mr. W. Venables.

The Roscian Opera Company of New York produced El Capitan at the Opera House here last night and played to a full and enthusiastic house. The party (about 30 performers) were under the management of Mr. Cranston, who has visited us before and always brought something good. The present company is certainly thebest he has favored us with and is without doubt the strongest that has ever appeared in the otwn. They play the Mikado to-night.

WOOL BUYERS HERE.

Mr. Caruthers, of Winnipeg, was in town last week. He had been buying wool in the South country. Messrs Milne and Cook, buyers for a Montreal House were in town on Saturday.

J. Kendry, representing an eastern house was in town on Wednesday on his way east.

The statement of our esteemed contemporary, The News, that Mr. Kendry bought 350,000 pounds of wool at Lethbridge, is ridiculed by Messrs Milne and Cook. They say that up to last Thursday night practically no wool had been sold at Lethbridge.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A special meeting of the council was held at 7.30 o'clock last night. Present, Councillors, J. K. Drinnan (acting-Mayor), in the chair, H. Stewart, A. DesBrisay. C. E. Smyth and F. C. Sissons; Mr. W. T. Williams, architect; W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk.

Coun. Drinnan said the meeting was called to consider the plans and specifications of the new Municipal Building.

The plans and specifications were then presented by Mr. Williams and after the latter had been read clause by clause, were accepted.

There were five tenders for the Town Debentures and the council decided to accept the tender of Messrs. Emilus Jarvis & Co., of Toronto, at $373 premium viz., $54,973 for $54,600.

The request of the Carpenter's Union, that none but union labor be employed on the Municipal Building was received and laid on the table until Wednesday evening.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

To the editor os The Times.

Sir,

Would you ask the News what right they had to publish what they did about me, stating that I was a deserter, for if they knew anything at all about Military affairs they would know that it is impossible for a man to desert in a volunteer corps; and for them in the future to be more careful and if they want to fill up their paper to put things in right, and to put that in right before I take action against them for damage of character, and for to be careful what they publish.

Yours truly

H. GLENCROSS.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

At length the terrible storm of anger wore itself away, and something like calm came to him. Then he asked to be taken at once to Reine, that he might comfort and console his child. Then calmly Honora broke the trying news to him—how, in the morning, she had gone to her mistress's room, and found it quite empty. Her pretty snow-white bed had not been slept in, and upon one of the white pillows she had found a note in Reine's handwriting, saying that she was going away, and bidding each one of her servants who had served her so well and faithfully, good-bye.

"I cannot stay and face what will happen to-morrow, Honora," she wrote. "I am going away."

General Hastings listened in silence. Words can illy portray his anguish.

Tears filled his eyes as he looked out upon the scene without, the bare branches of the trees beating madly against the window pane, and the snow coming heavily down in great blinding drifts.

Where was Reine—his idol—his darling?

God help and protect her! Thrown out upon the cold mercy of the pitiless world—breasting alone and penniless, the merciless storm! His lovely, golden-haired Reine, so daintily and tenderly reared!

There would have been little mercy shown to Waldemar Waldron if the old general had run across him just then.

Late that afternoon Bernard Chesleigh received the following despatch:

"Come on at once. Bring Donald Gray, the detective, with you.

(Signed), General Hastings."

Bernard Chesleigh's heart beat with dread apprehension as he read it. He responded to the summons at once. He was in quite as much of a fever of anxiety as the general himself by the time he reached New York city.

Together Donald Gray and himself boarded the up-town elevated car. They had barely seated themselves ere a young and slender girl entered, heavily veiled, and all alone. They were too much pre-occupied to notice the start of surprise she gave, or hear the cry of surprise she stifled on her lips, as her eyes fell upon the face of Bernard Chesleigh.

It was useless to conjecture why he had been sent for, but Chesleigh could not shake off from his mind the impression that matters were worse than the telegram had set forth.

He looked from the open window, but he never saw the waving trees, and the houses, as the train dashed past them, he was so pre-occupied.

"Poor Reine," he murmured below his breath, "I pray Heaven no harm has befallen her; and he thought of the red mark on her lovely face—the imprint of the hand that had dealt her a blow.

"Poor Reine!—what had happened her?" was the agonizing question he asked himself over and over again.

CHAPTER XXV.

The young girl who entered the car so heavily veiled was Reine. There was but one vacant seat—the one on the left of Bernard Chesleigh—and she took it, drawing her veil more securely down over her face that he might not recognize her.

At a station further on Bernard and his companion left the car.

Reine looked after the tall retreating form wistfully.

Ah! what a good, noble friend this lover whom she had rejected had been to her! She was in sore need of counsel and advice; but not for worlds would she have gone to Bernard Chesleigh. She prayed Heaven that he might never know that the man for whom she had deserted him had, in his turn, now forsaken her.

She never realized until now what Bernard, who had loved her so dearly, must have suffered.

After Honora, her maid, had left her the night before, for long hours she had paced the floor of her boudoir, trying to look the future in the face, and think what she should do. All the long, weary night through she never rested her head upon the white pillow. Sleep was out of the question for her. It seemed to her that she should never sleep again.

When daylight broke she had packed a few necessary articles in a little hand stachel, and without one glance at the room—without a glance about the pretty, ornamented boudoir, whose adornings she had grown to loved so well—she hurried down the stairs softly, and out of the house into the brisk cold of the December morning.

The streets of New York are never deserted. Early as the hour was, busy pedestrians surged to and fro.

Reine was swept along with the surging throng, finding herself at length in the very heart of Broadway.

It was not until the sun reached the horizon that she realized how faint and hungry she was, and that she was penniless, all save the half dollar which she was fortunate enough to find in the pocket of her dress. But what would she do when that was gone? The thought appalled her. All the old gay, girlish life seemed to have been left far behind her, like a bright, faded dream. Could there ever have been a time she was happy and without care?

Had she ever been petted, loved and worshipped as the heiress of Fairlawn, or was it all a strange dream?

Oh! if she had but learned how to do something to support herself in case of emergency then, she would not have been so utterly helpless now. She uttered a blind prayer to Heaven to guide her as she walked wearily along.

And the event which happened the next moment seemed an answer to that piteous appeal.

She had scarcely proceeded a dozen steps when suddenly she stumbled over something lying directly beneath her feet.

It was a small purse—a lady's purse. Upon opening it Reine found that it contained a few dollars in money, a tiny, dark curl tied with a bit of blue ribbon, and an old envelope, the back of which served as a memorandum; several items were jotted down upon it. The face of the envelope, however, revealed the name and address of the owner of the lost purse. It read: "Mrs. William Arnold, No —— East 11th Street, City."

There was but one course to pursue—and that was to return the purse at once to its owner.

The street indicated was some distance down-town. Thus it happened that Reine took the elevated car, and the first person whom she beheld was Bernard Chesleigh.

She was thankful that he left the car without observing her.

Reine had little difficulty in finding the street and number she sought. It was a neat three-story brick dwelling, with the sign of "Boarding" upon the door.

Reine inquired for Mrs. Arnold. She was ushered into a plain but neatly furnished parlor, and in a few moments that lady made her appearance, flushed, nervous, and somewhat excited.

Before Reine had time to state her errand she saw the pocketbook in her hand, and a cry of delight broke from her lips.

"I was fortunate to find this on the street an hour since, and finding your address within, I hastened to return it to you," said Reine, simply.

Mrs. Arnold thanked her, with tears in her eyes.

"It was not the loss of the money I was grieving about just as you came in, but it was because the purse contained a lock of hair of my daughter's. She died a year ago. Money could not have bought that little, dark curl from me, I value it so highly. I was just about to put an advertisement for it in the "Lost" column, offering to pay a handsome reward for its return. If you will accept the reward I was about to offer I shall be very much pleased."

Reine drew back, flushing painfully. Accept a reward for doing one's duty? She felt quite hurt, and refused at once, on the impulse of the moment; but the very next instant, when it was quite too late, she remembered how sadly she was in need of money.

Reine burst into tears, and then the true state of affairs came out,—that she was penniless—that she was thrown upon her own resources that day, for the first time in her young life; that she had not even a shelter when the darkness of night closed in around her.

Mrs. Arnold was shocked. She was almost rendered speechless. What young girl in tens of thousands similarly situated, would have brought her back her purse?

She pressed Reine's little soft hands sympathetically, noting the while how beautiful and white they were, like the tender, velvet leaves of a lily.

Searching for employment—Heaven pity and help her! She remembered a time, far back in her own life, when she had had an almost similar experience; and she remembered, with a shudder, she had told herself, if she did not find something to do before nightfall, she would kill herself. Better a quick death than the maddening tortures of starvation and exposure to the bitter cold in the dreary streets. Now she was differently situated—widowed—yet doing quite well as the mistress of this thrifty boarding-place, with a neat little sum put by for a rainy day, as all wise people should have. Her one great sorrow had been the loss of her daughter, but she thanked Heaven that her only son—the idol of her heart—had been spared to her.

"Do not weep any more, my dear," said the motherly lady, wiping the tears from Reine's eyes, "You shall stay here with me until you can find something to do. I know just how to feel for you in your present trouble—indeed I do."

Reine was only too glad to accept. She had not the least idea what she would have done if Heaven, in its mercy, had not found her this kind friend.

"I shall not be a burden to you long, my dear madam," said Reine gratefully. "If I could get a place to teach school, or find pupils for music, drawing or French, I would soon be able to repay you."

"You seem to be quite accomplished. If you could teach all these things," said Mrs. Arnold, "I take it you must have been rich once."

"My father was worth considerable," said Reine blushing painfully. "I never thought one short year ago, that I should ever come to want."

"Ah, well," replied the good woman, cheerfully, "many a man is rich to-day and poor to-morrow. The world never knows how shaky many a rich man is until he comes to die. In most cases, there's a mighty falling off in their wealth, I can tell you, and the heirs find themselves in tight places."

Reine did not correct the impression the good woman was evidently laboring under—that she was an orphan.

"You have not told me your name, my dear," said Mrs. Arnold, at length. "I wish to present you to my son when he comes in."

"My name is Reine Waldron," she answered, with another flush, debating within herself whether she ought to tell this good woman that she was married or not.

She concluded, however, that if she were to tell her she would be obliged to repeat to her all of her sad story, and she would rather have died than have said—"my husband left me yesterday, for no offence whatsoever—left me willfully, deliberately."

The world is so uncharitable to women, especially if a sorrow of this kind befalls them. No, no, it were better far to say nothing upon the subject. Let them think her Miss Waldron, if they would.

Mrs. Arnold conducted Reine to a very neat little bedroom opening off from her own.

"You are to occupy this for the present, my dear," she said.

Reine was only too grateful, and she thanked her with tears in her eyes.

When the six o'clock dinner bell rang, Mrs. Arnold came hurriedly into the room.

"My son has come home," she said. "I have told him of the little episode that happened me this afternoon, and its sequel, which he declares is quite romantic; and Horace is anxious to see you, for I have told him, my dear, that you are as beautiful as you are honest. There is one thing more he tells me which will be the best of news for you to hear. He thinks he can get you employment to copy briefs for a law firm; that is, if you are quick with the pen, and write a good, plain hand. The pay isn't much—about three dollars and a half a week; but you had better take that while you are looking about to better yourself. Do you think you could do that kind of work acceptably? It wouldn't do to make mistakes, you know."

"I am sure I could do it," replied Reine, faintly, remembering the hundreds of breifs she had seen in her father's study, and remembering her idle curiosity as her eye fell upon the close-written pages, quire after quire, how the person who wrote it had the patience to do it.

And now, she, the petted heiress, the disinherited daughter, the forsaken young wife, was glad to get it to do.

She followed Mrs. Arnold down to the parlor thoughtfully. A tall, pleasant-faced young man rose to greet them as they entered.

"Miss Waldron, I have the pleasure to present to you my son Horace—Horace Arnold," said the fond mother proudly; adding in almost the same breath: "My son is a lawyer, connected with the law firm of Chesleigh & Sanford. I presume you have heard of the firm."

Reine gave a violent start, but neither Mrs. Arnold or her son observed it. The lovely face grew a shade paler and her crimson lips trembled.

"Both Mr. Chesleigh and Mr. Sanford are estimable gentlemen," Mrs. Arnold went on, enthusiastically, "especially the former. Horace is very much attached to him."

Reine's heart gave a strange throb, half pleasure, half pain.

How well every one loved Bernard Chesleigh who knew him! Ah, how blind she had been in that dark past!

"I suppose Horace may as well bring some briefs home to-morrow for you to commence on," suggested Mrs. Arnold.

"I will be very grateful if he will be so kind," replied Reine.

It was no light task toiling through the many meshes of legal puzzles, yet Reine never complained as the days came and went. The pretty white fingers were always ink-stained now, but it did not matter to her; those little stained fingers earned for her her daily bread.

Horace Arnold taught her typewriting, too; then Reine accomplished her work with great rapidity.

How strange it was that while General Hastings and Bernard Chesleigh, together with the indefatigable Mr. Gray, were searching the city through for her, Reine was quietly earning her living almost under their very eyes!

CHAPTER XXVI.

Copying, however, proved very tedious, and not very remunerative work for Reine; she was not very quick with the pen, and then, to make the matter all the worse, it was just that season of the year when there were but few briefs to copy other than were given to the more experienced clerks.

More than once Reine found she was short of money for her board, and her heart sank within her.

"If I could only find something else to do in conjunction with copying," she thought despairingly.

One day an idea occurred to her to try to write poems for the magazines. In those old days, verses she had written had been highly praised. If God had given her any talent in this line, why not try to turn it into profit now?

She consulted with Mrs. Arnold on the subject.

"I should think you could make a great deal in that way," declared Mrs. Arnold. "The publishers have to print somebody's poems, why not yours? I'd try it by all means, my dear."

Reine did try, and the consequence was, she produced two very creditable little poems, which Mrs. Arnold declared to be the most pathetic she had ever heard. One was entitled, "A Misspent Life,"—the other, "A Pathway Strewn with Thorns."

Mrs. Arnold further insisted any publisher would purchase at once, after hearing the first lines.

Thus imbued with hope, although Reine could not share her friend's enthusiasm over them, she started out to dispose of her productions.

She took a list of the publishers' names and addresses, and made a tedious tour to the different offices.

Some smiled, when they heard the object of her call; others brusquely declared their waste basket was full of poems, and their pigeon-holes overrun with them.

At last, one editor, pitying the wistful young face, agreed to look them over if she would leave them.

He had seen a great deal of authors in his day. It was nothing new or strange to him to see a white, wistful face looking into his office to see if there was any good news.

At first he used to purchase himself, rather than see the pain bad news inflicted as he handed back the manuscripts. Many a genius struggling in the depths, owed their first start in life to him. But half the manuscripts he bought, he could find no possible use for; he soon found he might invest the whole of his capital in such dubious ways. He was compelled to give it up, and contented himself by giving encouragement by kindly words.

He bought Reine's two poems, but as he placed the small pittance they brought into her hand, he told her he should not be able to buy any more from her until after these had been published, which would be some months yet, they were so overstocked just then, but wishing her great success meanwhile, elsewhere.

Reine wrote other poems, but she found no one who wanted to buy them.

"My forte does not lie in that direction," she told Mrs. Arnold one day with a faint smile,—"I shall go back to my copying. Some day I shall try to paint a picture. I think I would make a better artist than poetess. So one day the picture was commenced. It progressed slowly enough, her time was so occupied from day to day in copying the briefs young Mr. Arnold brought home to her.

It never occurred to generous-hearted Bernard Chesleigh to inquire who the young girl was, whom his clerk had modestly suggested to add to their corps of copyists, as she was greatly in need of employment.

"By all means give her copying to do if we have work for her," he had responded, heartily. Then he quite forgot the matter altogether.

It was with a feeling of strange pleasure Reine listened evenings to Horace Arnold's conversation, which always touched upon Bernard Chesleigh more or less.

"He is a bachelor," he said, one evening; "but if reports speaks truly, he won't be a bachelor long."

"Why—is—is—he engaged to—to—marry any one?" asked Reine, raising a strangely white face up from the page over which she was bending, and clutching her pen more tightly in her hand.

"No; but it's only a question of time before he will be, I imagine," laughed Horace. "To tell you the plain truth, if you will pardon the language, Miss Flora Sanford, his partner's neice, has made a 'dead set, for Mr. Chesleigh."

Reine looked greatly interested, and it was a pleasure to Horace Arnold to have such an attentive listener, and he went on readily enough.

"She is a beautiful, dashing girl, this Miss Flora, but not quite the style Mr. Chesleigh admires most, if I am any judge. She is tall and dark, like a Spanish princess. She always reminds me of a picture in the magazine.

"Every day she comes to the office and calls for her uncle; but we clerks know that's only a blind. It's Mr. Chesleigh she wants to see.

"She always manages, on one pretext or another, to sit and chat until Mr. Chesleigh is about to leave the office for the day, and she very kindly offers to drive him in her phaeton—which is at the door—to his destination. He cannot well refuse, and is quite used by this time to being made a captive of. She will get the noblest and best-hearted young man in New York when she does get him," young Arnold went on, meditatively. "He is certainly a capital fellow, and will make her a husband that any young lady might be proud of—"

"Why, what is the matter, Miss Waldron? Are you ill?" he cried, in affright. "Your face is the color of that paper in your hands. How stupid of me to tire you by recounting gossip concerning people whom you have never seen!"

"I am very tired; that is all," said Reine, laying down her pen wearily. "I think I will stop writing for to-day, and go up to my own room."

"It is tiresome work," admitted Horace, pityingly. "Let me finish those pages you have in your hand, while you go and rest."

Reine shook her head.

"You are tired enough doing your own day's work," she said. "I must not tax you by thinking of mine."

"It would be a great pleasure to me to do anything for you, Miss Reine," he said, modestly, his fair, handsome, boyish face flushing hotly.

But Reine shook her head again, and, taking the paper with her, slowly quitted the room.

Horace Arnold looked after her with a tender light in his eyes.

"I have known her but four weeks," he soliloquized, "and—I love her."

All the beauty and warmth of the room seemed to fade as the door closed upon her slender, retreating form.

He quite believed that a romantic fate had brought Reine to his mother's home; that he should see her, love her, and in time win for his own.

Poor boy! how little he dreamed that fate had an altogether different purpose in bringing Reine thither!

Meanwhile the object of his thoughts went wearily up to her own room. All night long Reine tossed restlessly upon a pillow that was wet with burning tears.

"Why do I weep?" she asked herself, bitterly, over and over again. "Is it because they tell me my dear old friend is to marry and to be happy at last? Am I so selfish that, because I have found no happiness I weep when I hear of the happiness of others?"

Of course he would marry some day. Few men remained single because they failed to win their first love.

Yet the thought brought with it the keenest pain to her heart; not that he was, or ever could be, anything to her now—for a barrier that could never be beaten down was raised between them. That barrier was Waldemar Waldron.

True, he had deserted her—willfully, deliberately—yet she was still his wedded wife until death should come to her to break the heavy bonds.

She must not complain, for she had fastened those heavy chains that shackled her, with her own white hands.

True, she could have found freedom through recourse to the divorce courts, but Reine shrank from dissolving the ties that bound her in that way. To her, those whom God had joined together in holy marriage could never be put asunder by the hand of man.

From that hour Reine commenced to droop and fade; still she kept at her copying with feverish energy, devoting her spare time, to keep her mind busied, by painting a Southern landscape.

Quite unconsciously many of the old scenes and picturesque spots in the vicinity of Fairlawn were worked out upon the canvas under her deft brush, even to a small cascade that flowed between two cleft perpendicular rocks at the rear of her father's estate.

Horace Arnold was delightd with it, and insisted upon showing it to an old friend of his—an artist who had a studio on Broadway.

"I am sure Reine possesses more than ordinary talent, mother," he declared. "Do persuade her to permit me to show it to my friend."

In vain Reine protested; mother and son carried their point, and Horace duly carried it to his friend's studio.

The young artist went in raptures over it.

"Why, it is a perfect gem, my dear boy," he cried, laying his hand on his friend's shoulder. "Whoever painted that is a genius. It is so true to nature. I went there sketching last summer, and upon my honor I did not do one-half so well as this. It is in the heart of the Virginia hills, near a grand old country-place, called Fairlawn. If you like, I will put it in my window with the artist's name attached, and who knows but what it will bring her in many an order," he said, kindly.

KIDNEY CELLS DESTROYED,

By Repeated Attacks of Disease—Surprising Results Obtained by the Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Because it is sometimes a slow and lingering malady, people are prone to overlook the destructive tendencies of kidney disease.

They forget that the wasting process brings about a change in the cellular tissue which practically renders the kidneys useless as filtering organs.

Continued paleness and loss of flesh, pains in the back and loins, dry, harsh skin, severe headaches and backaches; scanty, highly colored urine; painful, scalding urination; stomach troubles and irregular bowels are among the symptoms of kidney disease.

As a cause of downright suffering few diseases are to be compared with kidney disease, and the results are frequently fatal, the end coming suddenly and unexpectedly.

By their direct and wonderfully prompt action on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills call a quick halt to the advance of kidney disease.

By their combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels, they prove effective in complicated cases in which ordinary kidney medicines bring little or no relief.

Mr. W. Smith, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes: "For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often a stoppage of water accompanied by the most dreadful agony. As the disease wore on me I became reduced in flesh and I passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me and I used many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than six months. I have gained in weight, sleep well and feel better than I have for twenty years. These pills have fully restored me to good and perfect health."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have thoroughly proven their genuine indisputable merit, and you can use them knowing of a certainty that you will receive all the benefit that would be derived from the attention of the most skillful physician. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co. Toronto.

THE PREFIX "HONORABLE."

Do Provincial ex-Ministers Retain the Title for Life—Mr. Joseph Pope Says "No."

Mr. Joseph Pope, of Ottawa, in reply to The Mail and Empire gives some authorities in the course of an interesting letter respecting a current subject of interest as follows:

I have read with no little surprise your criticism of the timely protest by The Halifax Chronicle against the practice of continuing to style members of the provincial Executive Councils "Honorable" after they have retired from office.

You say that this province "is not going to penalize anybody for continuing to use the title 'Honorable' when addressing an ex-minister." That is no doubt true. It is equally true that this province is not going to penalize anybody for styling ex-members of Executive Councils "Your Lordship," which would be a very silly thing to do, no doubt, though less improper than the course you apparently defend.

There are two ways to regard titles of honor. One is to proclaim that this is a new and democratic country, where all such distinctions are entirely out of place, and then proceed arbitrarily to confer the title of "Honorable" upon every man in the community who holds, or who has ever held, any political office. This is the United States custom, and I am sorry to see that it is beginning to infect Canadians. The British plan, and, indeed, that of all monarchial countries, is to regard titles as emanating from the Sovereign—the fount of honor—and to be governed accordingly. As a part of the British Empire we necessarily adhere to the latter system. The King has not left us in any doubt as to the application of titles of honor in Canada. On the contrary, he has embodied his direction in words so plain that they cannot possibly be misunderstood. (I quote from the authorized table of titles):—

"6. Executive Councillors of provinces to be styled 'Honorable,' but only while in office, and the title not to be continued afterwards."

The King here does not explicitly command that retired Executive Councillors of Canada may be styled by some other title, and, therefore, I maintain that it involves a less flagrant disrespect of authority to style a retired Executive Councillor "Your Lordship" than to style him "Honorable," because the latter is the one title His Majesty has categorically declared he is not to enjoy.

The ostentatious disregard of the authorized regulations which you excuse or defend, scarcely seems to me justified by the argument that this is a free country, and a man can call himself what he pleases in it.

I am equally unable to share your view, that because members of the King's Privy Council for Canada retain the title "Honorable" for life, therefore retired Executive Councillors of provinces should be accorded the same privilege. A cursory examination of the authorized table of titles would show that it is based on the principle of gradation—that the more honorable position should enjoy the more honorable distinction. Few persons will be found to dispute that the advisers of His Excellency the Governor-General in respect of the Government of Canada, are charged with higher duties and responsibilities than the advisers of the Governor-General's deputy in respect of the local affairs of one province of the Dominion. So impressed was Sir John Macdonald by the dignity of the office of Privy Councillor, that he desired that the title "Right Honorable" should appertain thereto, and he thus gives his reasons in 1867:—"Canada will soon have as large a population as Ireland, and the duties and responsibilities of Privy Councillors of Canada are much greater than those attaching to similar offices in Ireland."

Lord Monck, the first Governor-General of Canada, agreed with his chief adviser in this matter, for he writes to Sir John:

"My own wish would be to treat the Privy Councillors of Canada, both as to title and tenure of office, exactly as the Privy Councillors of England and Ireland are dealt with. I have stated this view very strongly in conversation as well as in a formal despatch to the Duke of Buckingham, but up to this time I have had no intimation of his views on the subject."

In conclusion, and with regard to the practice of the indiscriminate application of the title of "Honorable," I would recall the wise and true remark made by Mr. Edward Blake on the floor of the Ontario Legislature when the attributes of the Lieutenant-Governor were up for discussion many years ago, "That it adds to no man's dignity to assume unjust and unfounded pretensions."

While I am on the subject, may I be permitted to call your attention to another misapplication of terms, which is just now rife. I refer to the constant use in the press and elsewhere of the word "Parliament," meaning thereby the Provincial Legislature. This is altogether a misnomer, as the most casual reference to the Act of Union will show. That Act declares that there shall be "one Parliament for Canada," and a Legislature for Ontario, and throughout it carefully differentiates between the two expressions.

This incorrect use of the word "Parliament" has frequently been called attention to, notably by Sir John Macdonald, as Minister of Justice, in his report on the Statutes of Ontario, dated 1st July, 1868, and by Hon. Edward Blake in his review of the legislation of Manitoba and Quebec for the year 1876. In the latter report Mr. Blake explicitly states that the expression "Parliament" is "objectionable," as applied to the Local Legislature.

Cheap Literature Curse.

There are men and women in Canada to-day who are drunken and besotted with trashy novels. There are public and Sunday school libraries in this country that do not circulate a hundred good books a year. There are book stores in Canada that do more to destroy the human intellect than half a dozen cigarette stores in the same town or city.—Canadian Magazine.

TAXING BACHELORS.

Penalties Have Often Been Imposed In Various Countries.

Bachelors as candidates or probationers for marriage have formed the subject for legislation from the earliest times. Penalties have often been imposed on male celibates in various countries. In proportion as the interests of the state were regarded as above those of the individual the enforcement of marriage was the more severe. In ancient Sparta it was considered a punishable crime not to marry or to marry too late in life. In Athens, though not severely punished, celibacy was discouraged in early times.

At Rome marriage was fostered by positive penalties imposed on unmarried men and sometimes even on women as well as by discrimination in favor of heads of families. In the allotment of the Campanian lands by Julius Caesar portions were given only to the fathers of three or more children. Under Augustus a law was enacted prohibiting unmarried persons below the age of sixty in men and fifty in women from taking possession of a legacy, and this was applied even to widows, who, in order to secure their part of their deceased husband's estates, were forced to marry again within a period of two years.

BLIND INSECTS.

They Act Just as Though They Had Eyes and Could See.

So far as insects of the caves are concerned the loss of sight which they gradually undergo is sufficiently well understood. The first step is a decrease in the number of the facets which make up the compound eyes, with a corresponding diminishment of the lenses and retinae. After four or five generations the eyes become useless. It would be most interesting to breed these or other blind creatures of the caves in the light, so as to find out if they would get their sight back. In all animals, including man, it is found that nature tries to compensate for loss of vision by increasing the power of the sense of touch. Thus the attennae of cave insects grow remarkably long.

It is very curious to find that nothing in their behavior suggests the fact that they are blind. They walk, run, stop, explore the ground and try to escape from the grasp of the bug hunter just as if they really saw. The light of a candle startles them as much as if they perceived it visually. It is a remarkable fact, proving that the ancestors of these creatures could see, that in the embryo stage of their existence they have eyes well developed.

FIRST MAP OF THE SKY.

It Was Made 1,420 Years Before the Christian Era.

At a very early period in the history of astronomy it was felt that the stars should be divided into distinct groups or constellations. This important task has engaged the attention of astronomers from remote times and has only been brought to its present perfection by a long series of intellectual efforts.

According to Clement of Alexandria, it was Chiron, believed to be the maker of the first celestial globe, who, 1,420 years before the Christian era, divided the starry heavens into constellations and so mapped out the sky. Newton upheld this opinion, which is further corroborated in the book of Job, where allusion is made to Orion, the Pleiades, and the Hyades, a proof that at a very early period there had been a grouping of the stars.

Hesiod in his "Works and Days," written 2,700 years ago, also refers to several of the constellations as though their names were familiar to his readers.

Comparative Depth of Wells.

The deepest wells in Europe are at Passy, France, depth 2,000 feet; at La Chapelle, Paris, depth 2,950 feet; at Grenelle, Paris, depth 1,798 feet; at Neusalwerk, near Minden, depth 2,288 feet; at Kissengen, Bavaria, depth 1,787 feet; at Sperenberg, near Berlin, depth 4,190 feet, which is said to be the deepest in the world, and at Pesth, Hungary, depth 3,182 feet. In the United States there are wells located at St. Louis, depth 3,843 feet; at Louisville, depth 2,086 feet; at Columbus, O., depth 2,775½ feet, and at Charleston, S. C., depth 1,250 feet.

Most Unfortunate.

Mother (who wants to be very nice to bacheler uncle, understood to have made his pile in Australia)—Now, Charlie, you've never seen uncle before. Go and shake hands. Charlie—Oh, yes, mother, I have seen him before, I'm sure—at last year's pantomime!

That charity is bad which takes from independence its proper pride and from modesty its proper shame.—Southey.

THE BUSHIDO.

Moral Doctrines of the Samurai That Rule In Japan.

"The bushido" means "the moral doctrines of the samurai," and they are obeyed by all the statesmen, soldiers and scholars of Japan of the present time with as much holy respect as the Christian's reverence for the Bible and its teachings. In Japan Buddhism is the popular religion, but Buddhist teachings are not respected by educated men or soldiers. In fact, most of them are atheists or agnostics, who do not believe in any religion but the doctrines of "the bushido."

"The bushido," for instance, teaches a man or woman to have the courage to perform the hara kiri if he or she commits a serious offense. The spirit of this doctrine is that the offender should kill himself instead of waiting to be executed by the law, which latter is considered in Japan as one of the most cowardly thing. "The bushido" also teaches that the life of a Japanese is a gift of the holy mikado, and if the country needs the lives of her people they should be given gladly, for that is only to return to the mikado what they have received from him.

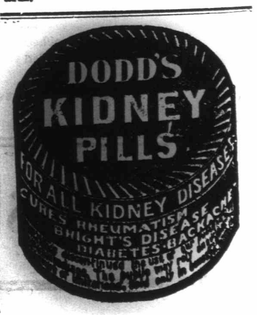
To die on the battlefield is the only key for a Japanese to find his way to his Shinto heaven, and the soldiers who were not killed on the battlefield are considered unfortunate. It is maintained in Japan that if a man gives you a favor or money or pleasure you should return it with more than what was given to you.—Hydesaburo Ohashi in Leslie's Weekly.

LONDON IN 1700.

When Traitors' Heads Adorned London Bridge and Temple Bar.

London in 1700 was a comparatively small city of about 600,000 inhabitants, the rough and ill kept main roads to which had been but slightly improved since Tudor times. The ghastly spectacle of many of the trees on the Southwark road bending under their burden of hanged men had indeed been slightly modified, but none the less the decomposing heads of "traitors" still filled the atmosphere about London bridge and Temple bar with myriads of baneful microbes.

Our immediate forbears were evidently not overparticular about sights and smells. They were accustomed to see men sitting in the pillory pelted with rotten eggs and possibly included among their immediate circle not a few who had been deprived of their noses and ears for expressing too freely their opinions, political and religious.



The drains were in an appalling condition. The innumerable churchyards were so full of coffins that they often projected through the turf. Bear and bull baiting, dog fights and boxing matches were attended even by royalty as late as 1820, and five years later all the "dandies" in London were paying high prices to stand in the ring round Tyburn to behold twenty-two of their fellow creatures hanged for misdemeanors which in our time would be punished with a few days' imprisonment.

Lions Like Lavender Water.

The old theory of animal likings for scents denied them any share in such pleasures unless they suggested the presence of their food or prey. But such a reason can hardly be alleged for a lion's liking for lavender water. The writer, wishing to test for himself the reported fondness of many animals for perfumes, paid a series of visits to the zoological garden provided with bottles of scent and a packet of cotton wool and there tried some harmless experiments which apparently gave great satisfaction to many of the inhabitants. Lavender water was the favorite scent, and most of the lions and leopards showed unqualified pleasure when the scent was poured on the wool and put into their cages.—Spectator ordinary kidney medicines bring little or no relief.

Mr. W. Smith, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes: "For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often a stoppage of water accompanied by the most dreadful agony. As the disease wore on me I became reduced in flesh and I passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me and I used many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than six months. I have gained in weight, sleep well and feel better than I have for twenty years. These pills have fully restored me to good and perfect health."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have thoroughly proven their genuine indisputable merit, and you can use them knowing of a certainty that you will receive all the benefit that would be derived from the attention of the most skillful physician. MR. NEIL FOX.

Manager of The Morden Empire.

Among the western newspaper men whose lives are being reviewed in this series of articles is one who, for long experience and close connection with the printing and publishing business in the west can be classed among the oldest. We refer to Mr. Neil Fox, manager of the Morden Empire.

Mr. Fox was born in the town of Clinton, Huron Co., Ontario, about 45 years ago, and after attending the public school till he was 13 years of age, was taken as "devil" on the New-Era. Mr. Holmes, the proprietor, took the new acquisition to the staff in hand to show him the duties he was to perform, and the apprentice, upon seeing the comps. sticking type, thought he was up against something that for him was unaccomplishable. However, as time passed, that which appeared to be impossible became easy and the New-Era devil became the fastest and most efficient compositor in the office, in fact his reputation for speed was widely known.

In the spring of 1880 Mr. Fox could not resist the temptations of the west. Being offered a position he came to Nelson, which at that time was the prominent judicial centre of Southern Manitoba, and took the foremanship of the Mountaineer, published by Mr. J. F. Galbraith. In those days it required a man who was able to do more than stick type to be a printer. He was required to have unlimited ingenuity, as there were no type founderies at hand to supply all the wants of the trade. All kinds of devices had to be resorted to. Cases were made by boring auger holes in squares of thick plank, and when any display line out of the ordinary was desired a piece of board and a jack-knife had to fill the bill. Many of the oddities that helped to equip the office at that time are still kept as relics. Before resorting to the home manufacture of such at the present time, most so-called up-to-date printers would be apt to throw up the job.

When the Pembina branch of the C.P.R. was built Morden sprang up and came into prominence with great rapidity. Nelson, without any hope of railway facilities, was at its end, and all places of business were transferred to the new town. One of the first to make the move was the public educator, the name of which was then changed to the Manitoba News. Some years later a company was formed which took control and gave the publication another name, The "Monitor," the former proprietor, Mr. Galbraith, going to the coast. Mr. Fox still continued in the capacity of foreman through all the changes of management. When the town developed to a sufficient degree to merit the inauguration of a second paper, the subject of this sketch severed his connection with the Monitor, and in partnership with Rev. H. J. Northwick, began the publication of the Morden Herald. This publication was continued with fair success for about four years, and showed to advantage the long experience of its mechanical management. After nine years' absence at the coast Mr. Galbraith returned and amalgamated the Herald and Monitor into the Morden Chronicle, Mr. Fox once more taking his position as foreman with his old employer, in which capacity he served with satisfactory results till about two years ago, when he bought a controling interest in the Morden Empire, and took upon himself the management. Under his control the Empire has prospered in every department. It is now acknowledged to be one of the best made up and printed weeklies in the province, and the product of the job department is second to none. Mr. Fox never made any attempt at editorial work, but confined his efforts to local reporting and the mechanical department, in which capacities he is most proficient. The Empire always contains everything of local interest and is much appreciated by its numerous readers.

Apart from business Mr. Fox has always been a leader in all that aided in developing the town, and bringing it into its present place of prominence. In social and musical circles his value is and always has been inestimable. He is prominent in church work, and highly respected by all.

RACING DOES NOT IMPROVE HORSEFLESH.

The race horse is a tool of the game just as ivory chips are tools of the game of faro. Would ivory-chip carving, and the consequent faro game, improve the bred of elephants? Is racing, with its felon corollaries of murder and larceny, women disgraced and men destroyed, the one lone hope of the horse? With its horses like greyhounds, good only for a mile, does it produce those draught animals that Rosa Bonheur painted? Did it give us the cob, or the carriage, or the slow horse? Cattle and hogs have been carried in their culture to extremest heights. And yet when and where were Durhams or Berkshires raced? To improve the breed of horses! after this solemn assurance —writ in the law it is—one is prepared to hear that the famous goose and turkey race, run on the Brighton road a century and a third ago, was proposed by Mr. Berkley and arranged by Colonel with a purpose of improving the breed of those contending fowls, and not, as history supposes, to rob the Prince of Wales of fifteen thousand guineas. Some thief, caught stealing the communion service, or the candlesticks from the altar, will yet explain that he does it to improve his soul!

"Why did you accept Jack's invitation to go for a ride in his new auto?" "I didn't have my walking skirt on."

When Doctors Pailed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Brought New Health and Strength.

From The Post, Thorold, Ont.

Mr. Reuben Lindsay, a fruit grower at Ridgeville, Ont., is one of the best known men in that section, having lived in the village or its vicinity all his life. All Mr. Lindsay's neighbors know that about a year ago his condition of health was very serious. To use his own words he "began to go to pieces—was all wasting away." When a reporter of the Thorold Post called on Mr. Lindsay recently he found him again enjoying the best of health, and when asked what had wrought his cure, he replied very emphatically "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; they did for me what medical treatment and other medicines failed to do. In the spring of 1903," continued Mr. Lindsay "I grew so weak that I could hardly move about. My appetite completely failed me, and I seemed to be wasting away to a mere shadow. I grew so weak that I could not work, and could scarcely look after my horses without resting. I doctored with two or three good physicians, but got no permanent benefit. In fact they seemed doubtful as to what my trouble was. One said liver trouble, another kidney disease; but whatever the trouble was it was rapidly using me up. A neighbor who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with benefit, advised me to try them, but I felt somewhat skeptical. However, I was finally induced to try them, and before I had finished the second box, I could note an improvement. I continued using the pills until I had taken some twelve boxes, when I was again enjoying robust health—in fact I have no hesitation in saying that I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. Remembering my former unbelief in these pills. I gladly give this testimonial, in the hope that it may induce some other sufferer to try this great, health-giving medicine." Other ailing people will speedily find new health and strength through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose sends new, rich, red blood coursing through the veins, and that is the reason these pills cure anaemia, neuralgia, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, rheumatsm, and all other diseases having their origin in poor or watery blood—including the special ailments that make the lives of so many growing girls and women of all ages miserable. See that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt, you can get the pills by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LEW WALLACE'S UNWRITTEN NOVEL.

The great American novel, according to the late Lew Wallace, was "Murvale Eastman," by Tourgee—a book of fifteen years ago. It has a sub-title, "Christian Socialist," and is a story that few people have read, as it was issued by a small publishing house. General Wallace thought this title detracted from its interest, as people might imagine it a life of a socialist leader or a treatise on socialism. General Wallace himself had in mind an American novel. He once said that it was his intention to write this story after he had completed his memoirs. His theme was the striving of Americans to accomplish wonderful things in an incredibly short time. His hero was to be a restless American who lived for a few years in Europe, then in Australia, in Africa, and in South America, and who, finally, after years of wandering, returns to his own country only to start again upon his journey, never satisfied, never happy, the spirit of an Indian within him, and the childlike desire to see new scenes. In each of these countries his hero finds h cannot do so. The story would have been suggestive of "The Wandering Jew," with the element of religious controvray eliminated.

HE THOUGHT HE STOPPED THE PAPER.

An acquaintance met Horace Greeley one day, and said: "Mr. Greeley. I've stopped your paper." "Have you?" said the editor. "Well, that's too bad." And he went his way. The next morning Mr. Greeley met his subscriber again, and said: "I thought you had stopped the Tribune." "So I did." "Then there must be some mistake," said Mr. Greeley, "for I just came from the office and the presses were running, the clerks were as busy as ever, the compositors were hard at work, and the business was going on the same as yesterday and the day before." "Oh," ejaculated the subscriber, "I didn't mean that I had stopped the paper; I stopped only my copy of it, because I didn't like your editorials." "Pshaw!" retorted Mr. Greeley. "it wasn't worth taking up my time to tell me such a trifle as that. My dear sir, if you expect to control the utterance of the 'Tribune' by the purchase of one copy a day, or if you think to find any newspaper or magazine worth reading that will never express convictions at right angles with your own, you are doomed to disappointment."

LITTLE LIVES LOST.

The annual report of the Registrar-General for Ontario shows that in that province alone, out of every one thousand children born one hundred and eleven die before they reach the age of one year, and in every province of the Dominion there is the same appalling loss of precious little lives annually. Most of these deaths are due to disorders of the stomach or bowels, and most of these little lives could be saved if mothers kept always at hand a simple remedy to give the little one at the first sign of trouble. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets, which cures constipation, diarrhoea, indigestion, simple fevers, teething troubles, worms and other minor ailments, which, if not treated promptly become most serious. And the mother has a positive guarantee that these Tablets contain no poisonous opiate or harmful drug. They are equally good for the new born baby or the well grown child. Thousands of mothers say Baby's Own Tablets have saved the lives of their little ones. You can get the Tablets from any druggist or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The following telephone conversation is reported to have been heard between a certain well known young financier and a society woman whose functions are considered somewhat boring: "Is this Mr. ——?" "Yes." "This is Mrs. ——. Won't you give us the pleasure of your company at dinner on Monday?" "I'm sorry Mrs. ——, but I have an engagement for Monday." "Can you come Tuesday, then?" "Why, it is most unfortunate, but I have a partial engagement for Tuesday also." "Well, how about Wednesday?" "Oh, hang it! I'll come Monday."

A Magic Pill.—Dyspepsia is a foe with which men are constantly grappling but cannot exterminate. Subdued, and to all appearances vanquished in one, it makes its appearance in another direction. In many the digestive apparatus is as delicate as the mechanism of a watch or scientific instrument in which even a breath of air will make a variation. With such persons disorders of the stomach ensue from the most trivial causes and cause suffering. To these Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are recommended as mild and sure.

A bachelor farmer a little past his prime, finding himself hard up, thought the best thing he could do would be to marry a neighbor of his, who was reported to have some bawbees. Meeting with no oustacles to his wooing he soon got married. One of the first purchases he made with part of her money was a horse. When he brought it home he called out his wife to see it. After admiring it she said: "Well, Sam, if it hadna been for my siller it wadna been here." "Jenny," Sam replied, "if it hadna been for yer siller ye wadna been here yerse'l."

"That's just it. I thought seriously of it and decided to remain single. Those that marry do so without thinking."

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DOING GOOD WORK AROUND PORT ARTHUR.

Mr. Dick Souvey and Wife Both Had Kidney Troubles, and the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy Cured Them.

Port Arthur, Ont., May 8.—(Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidney ills of men and women alike has been proved time and again in this neighborhood, but it is only occasionally they get a chance to do double work in the same house. This has happened in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Souvey, a farmer and his wife, living about seven miles from here. In an interview Mr. Souvey said: "My wife and myself have used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and have found them a big benefit to our health. We had La Grippe two winters and were exposed to much frost and cold. Our sleep was broken on account of urinary trubles and pain in the kiuneys. We each took six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and now enjoy good health."

FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR A FUR OUTFIT.

From "The Shameful Misuse of Wealth," by Cleveland Moffett, in "Success Magazine." "I find that six thousand dollars for a sable coat is only a fair price, in fact it is a very low price for a coat of fine sable. As witness this talk that I had the other day with New York's leading furrier: "Can you show me a good sable coat?" I inquired. "Russian sable?" he asked. "Yes," said I, "something especially fine,—say about six thousand dollars." He smiled, "We haven't anything made up that I would call especially fine. We have a rather short coat of rather light skins, moderate quality, that will cost ten thousand dollars." "Ten thousand dollars," I exclaimed. "Then what would a good coat cost?" He continued to smile and produced a number of fine skins,—the real Imperial sable, very dark with silver lights playing through the soft fur. And he showed me the price marks, five hundred and fifty dollars a skin, about ten dollars a square inch. "This is the best Siberian sable," he went on. "A coat of moderate length, say thirty inches, requires sixty skins and—" "Sixty times five hundred and fifty," I murmured. "Thirty-three thousand dollars, which includes the cost of making." "And a longer coat?" I gasped. "One reaching to a lady's ankles would require, say eighty skins, that is forty-four thousand dollars," he replied rather matter-of-fact. "And you sell coats at such prices?" I continued in amazement. "We sell this kind of sable as fast as we can get it. The best skins are very scarce." "And a muff?" I asked, meekly, "just a muff." "Five skins," said he, "twenty-seven hundred and fifty dollars. There's one in the show case." And a boa? A little boa?" "Four skins at least, that is twenty-two hundred dollars." Here then evidently I erred not on the side of exaggeration but of understatement; I put down thirty thousand dollars as the maximum yearly sum that a few New York women spend on dress, including everything, whereas nearly fifty thousand dollars may be spent simply for a fur coat with boa and muff!"

Murder May Be The Charge.

Charles Parriseau, an aged resident of Labroquerie, was taken into Winnipeg by Constable Beauchamp and lodged in the provincial jail to await trial on a serious charge. Parriseau, who is 82 years of age, it is alleged committed a murderous assault upon Jacques Chartier, a man his junior by 18 years. Chartier was badly battered about the head and was still unconscious when the train left Labroquerie. The mix-up occurred in the general store of E. Goulet, Labroquerie, on Saturday night last. Parriseau will be detained in custody until the extent of Chartier's injuries are ascertained. Friends of the latter fear that the result may be fatal.

It was in a Chestnut street ice creamery. The waitress ran over the list of flavors glibly, and after due deliberation the young lady decided upon cherry ice. "Thought you were so fond of pistachio," murmured her male companion as soon as they were left alone. "Love it," she replied. "Why cherry ice, then?" he inquired. "They have pistachio—I'll call the girl and change it." She reached across and seized his wrist as he started to rap on the table. "Don't you know I can't eat pistachio in this old rose gown?" she whispered. "The very idea of the pale green and the old rose is horrible. It grates on my nerves. But cherry is just the thing—they have a beautiful shade of cherry here." "Oh!" said the young man.

"REGULAR PRACTITIONER—NO RESULT"—Mrs. Annie C. Chestnut, of Whitby, was for months a rheumatic victim, but South American Rheumatic Cure changed the song from "despair" to "joy." She says: "I suffered untold misery from rheumatism—doctors' medicine did me no good—two bottles of South American Rheumatic Cure cured me—relief two hours after the first dose."—50

Miss Fleyme—Oh. Mr. Nocoyne, how lovely of you to bring me these beautiful roses. How sweet they are—and how fresh! I do believe there is a little dew on them yet! Mr. Nocoyne—W-well, yes—there is; but I'll pay it to-morrow.

Always a Good Friend.—In health and happiness we need no friends but when pain and prostration come we look for friendly aid from sympathetic hands. These hands can serve us no better than in rubbing in Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, for when the Oil is in the pain is out. It has brought relief to thousands who without it would be indeed friendless.

Ask for Minard's and Take no Other.

Manager—You do not inject enough contempt, spite and venom into that word. Actress—I can do no better Manager—Nonsense! Speak it just as you say "plush" when you meet a rival in an imitation sealskin.

"MY HEART WAS THUMPING MY LIFE OUT," is the way Mrs. E. H. Wright, of Brockville, Ont., describes her sufferings from smothering, fluttering and palpitation. After trying many remedies without benefit, six bottles of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart restored her to perfect health. The first dose gave almost instant relief, and in a day suffering ceased altogether.—51

WHERE TRUE HEROISM IS FOUND

Professor William James, of Harvard University, relates that, upon a certain journey, he was questioning with himself whether or not the higher heroism of life was passing out of human society; and that, at the very moment, he looked from the car window and suddenly got sight of a number of workmen performing some task on the dizzy ledge of an iron construction at a geat height. This at once brought to his mind a sense of the everyday bravery of men in everyday occupations. It flashed upon him, on the instant, that the true heroism of life is found not only on the day of battle and in desperate adventures, but also in building every bridge, or in the ordinary day-by-day service of the world, whether of the sailor upon his deck, the brakeman upon his train, the lumberman upon his raft, or whatever else men are at work. "As I awoke to this unidealized heroic life around me," he says, "the scales seemed to fall from my eyes, and a wave of sympathy greater than I had ever before felt with the common life of common men began to fill my soul."

"Jimpson is an awful liar."

"What makes you think so?"

"He described a duel he once saw."

"Well, that's possible."

"I know, but look here. He said that one of the principals was nearsighted and demanded a handicap. So they fixed it by having the other fellow stand six paces nearer to him than he did to the other fellow!"

The Demon Dyspepsia.—In olden times it was a popular belief that demons moved invisibly through the ambient air, seeking to enter into men and trouble them. At the present day the demon, dyspepsia, is at large in the same way, seeking habitation in those who by careless or unwise living invite him. And once he enters a man it is difficult to dislodge him. He that finds himself so possessed should know that a valiant friend to do battle for him with the unseen foe is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are ever ready for the trial.

"Hallo, Pat, I hear your dog is dead?" "He is." "Was it a lap dog?" "Yes; it would lap anything." "What did it die of?" "It died of a Tuesday." "I mean how did it die?" "It died on its back." "I mean, how did the dog meet its death?" "It didn't meet its death. Its death overtook it." "I want to know what was the complaint?" "No complaint. Everyone for miles round appeared to be satisfied." "I wish to know how did it occur?" "The dog was not a cur; he was a thoroughbred animal." "Tell me what disease did the dog die of?" "He went to fight a circular saw." "What was the result?" "The dog only lasted one round."

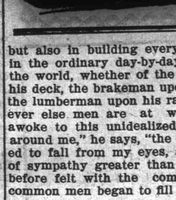
"Now, then," said the teacher of arithmetic, "what is 'above par?'" "I think I know," ventured a small boy, after a long silence in the class. "Well?" asked the teacher. "It's ma."

If a man's wife is a good baker, nothing

but the best flour is good enough for her. There can be no greater extravagance than the use of inferior flour.



Winchester Springs, Feb. 27th, 05.

"I read about Royal Household Flour which is purified by electricity. I also read about the woman paying freight 25 miles before she would be without it. Royal Household was not sold in our town, I was asking about it and my grocer told me to wait a day or two and he would get some, and I am glad I did so. My wife is a good baker and made good bread out of other flours, but what she has now made out of Royal Household is so far ahead that I would be willing to pay freight fifty miles instead of twenty-five, rather than go without it. There is no flour 'just as good' as Royal Household."

(Signed) JOHN HENDERSON.

Now, is there a single woman in the whole country who, after reading what Mr. Henderson says, will not at once send for the Royal Household recipes and give Royal Household Flour a trial. Mention this paper and address

How was it that the Japs whipped the Russians. Read the Japanese field hospital report and get wise. It is well known that in war more deaths are caused by disease than by bayonet and bullet. This is the rule. The Japanese army is the exception. One of the chief reasons for the energy, endurance and ability of the Jap to resist disease is his custom of drinking what to us would be large quantities of water. One of the army regulations (see McDermid) is that each man shall have one gallon per day purified as best it can be for drinking only. That's one of their secrets of warding off disease. Drink plenty of pure sparkling water as it comes from Nature's Own Perfect Filter, Germproof, for sale at the Assiniboia Music Co's. Store. AVOID IMPURE WATER.

[By OBSERVER.]

"Why Clara, you look radiant. What has happened?"

"I've just received an invitation to a wedding."

"Well, there's nothing particular in that is there?"

"It happens to be my own."

Sir William Van Horne began his career as a telegraph operator in Chicago. He attained such a reputation that Lord Strathcona, the financier of the project to construct the Canadian Pacific Railway, selected the young American as general manager and chief of the building operations. He rendered such important service to the Dominion of Canada that, in 1896, Queen Victoria knighted him. Shortly after receiving his title he exclaimed to a group of friends, "This 'Sir William' business is very fine, but I'd like to hear what the boys in Chicago will have to say about it. They used to call me just plain Bill.

The Father of the British House of Lords is Lord Templemore and to him belongs the curious distinction of having sat in that chamber for 28 years before he delivered his maiden speech! It consisted of 21 words.

Mr. Astor, the millionare, says that everyone who goes to Niagara hears some absurd remark. The day he first saw Niagara, a man touched his arm as he looked up at those white waters. The man had the silly look of a confirmed joker. "It seems a shame," he said "to see all this water going to waste." "What are you," asked Mr. Astor, "an electrical engineer?" "No," he answered, "a milkman."

Scene: Railway car.

Passenger: We are living in a wondrous age, sir. Invention is rampant everywhere.

Resident: That's about what I observed to a friend yesterday; there are more liars to the square yard now than there used to be to the acre, especially when it's about Provincial Autonomy.

A little mite was out walking with her proud father near the railway bridge last Sunday, when an old friend of the father came along.

"And how old are you little one," asked the gentleman.

But the little one was very indignant. "I'm hardly old at all," she said, with a toss of the head, "I'm almost new."

Dale's English Opera Singers are booked for a return engagement June 23rd and 24th. It is quite safe to say that no visiting company has ever achieved a greater and more thoroughly deserved success in this town than the Dale Singers did on the occasion of their recent visit, and it is equally safe to say that all those who heard them then will want to hear them again, while those who failed to hear them on that occasion will want to make up for the treat they then missed. The above sentiment finds expression in the Regina Leader and I feel quite sure they fit in nicely in Medicine Hat, and elsewhere for the sentiment is universal wherever the company appeared.

The drowning of William A. Green on the 10th inst., was one of the most melancholy accidents that has ever happened in Medicine Hat, and has created hard feelings against the ferry. People did not seem to realise before that happened how real the danger is and what an amount of traffic there is across the river. People now see that the ferry is running continually and unless very stringent regulations are enforced the same kind of an accident may happen any time. Let the ferry be swept away, even if the town has to spend a little money in doing it. What are a few thousand dollars as compared with valuable lives of our townspeople and the ranchers and farmers who are bound to cross the river? Let us be up and doing. If need be let us do less in the way of sewerage and spend some of the money on getting a bridge.

The men who dived so presistently for the body of Mr. Green have a somewhat gruesome tale to tell. Time and again they brought up bodies of dead dogs. Evidently, the river has been made the graveyard for a whole lot of dogs lately and that should be stopped at once. If any one has a dead animal to be disposed of let it be buried in the earth, with lime to hasten decomposition.

That's a beautiful smile the farmers are wearing these days. There is every chance that the smile will not come off.

The Calgary ladies invaded the council chamber in that city the other evening and discussed with the City Fathers several matters in which they are interested. This should give Medicine Hat ladies a similar idea. Ladeis when you want the council to do anything go right to the council and talk matters over with them. That will be better than sending a written communication.

Winnipeg will this year be a city of unequalled facilities in caring for the crowds who will visit the Fair and people who remain for longer than a day can be assured of accommodation easily secured and at a reasonable cost. The Fair grounds are accessible by the street railway from all parts of the city and little time need be lost in reaching the grounds or departing from them. Every arrangement for the comfort and convenience of the people will be generally provided so that their visit to the Industrial of 1905 may be appreciated and enjoyed in the highest degree

Communications.

A COMICAL ERROR.

Through a printer's error in the Music Company's ad. last week, the Times announced that the company were offering "gum-proof" filters. We must have thought it had something to do with chewing gum so popular in Western towns, but it was no such thing, and here is the "slating" we have received from the company.

To the Editor Medicine Hat Times.

Dear Sir,

We do not claim to offer a gum-proof filter as your paper has it in our ad.

We are really sorry that we cannot guarantee our filters to prevent gum-chewing, cigarette smoking, etc., although it is our private opinion that generous doses of pure sparkling water as it comes out of our filters would eventually put the gold cure people out of business, and make the W.C.T.U. happy.

The error in our ad. makes it evident that you do not use our filter. A Sutton GERMproof Tripoli Stone, Nature's Own Perfect Water Filter. Your health demands its use. Everybody's health demands its use.

THE ASSINIBOIA MUSIC Co.
S. McClellan, Manager.

[Now, you have got a better ad. than if we had never got mixed between germs and gums.—Editor.]

The sheep ranchers are all smiling these days, why should they not be with the good increase in lambs and wool bringing from 16 to 17c. per pound.

Why not have a decoration Day at the Public cemetery and get a good crowd out to get the place in order and decorate the graves of relations and friends.

Field Marshall Lord Roberts in an open letter pleads for the establishment of a rifle association in England, claiming the British soldiers are poor marksmen.

The Mayor and Mr. Thos. Hutchinson are at Ottawa having been delegated by the town of Medicine Hat to interview the government upon many matters of interest and importance to our town.

The Epworth League ice cream social was held last Thursday evening, after having been postponed from Tuesday. The weather, so good for the crops was bad for ice cream business, but the League came out even.

Lethbridge Lacrosse team will be here to play our boys on the 1st. July. Although there is a strong rivalry between the teams there is no "bad blood" and we expect a good and clean match.

An eastern man stepped off at a neighbouring town a few weeks ago when the wind was blowing a gale of 50 miles an hour. "Mister" said he to a man who was sitting on the baggage truck, on the sheltered side of the station house, "does the wind blow this way all the the time?" "No p," said the resident as he calmly spat with the wind "about half the time, I should say, it blows the other way."

A total wheat crop of 125,000,000 bushels is the estimate made by the Canadian Pacific Railway of the yield in Canada this year, according to a dispatch received at the Grain Exchange from New York this morning. If these figures are correct, it will mean a new epoch in the wheat trade of Canada, and for the first time the yield will have exceeded the 100,000,000 mark. Local grain men while not prepared to make a definite estimate, that, with a continuance of present conditions, the yield will be the greatest in the history of the Dominion, and the railway company's figures will in all likelihood be found just about correct.

WHAT RUSSIA MUST PAY JAPAN.

PROBABLE PEACE TERMS.

1 The recognition of the Japanese protectorate over Korea.

2 The return of Manchuria to China.

3 International control of the Chinese Railroad.

4 Regarding Port Arthur. The strategical value of this fortress has been overestimated, and it is said that the ultimate disposal will not give rise to any controversy.

5 It is not thought that Japan will demand the demolition of the fortifications at Vladivostok.

6 The surrender of the island of Sakhalin will not be demanded by Japan principally because Japan has not yet carried the war into Russian Territory.

7 An understanding regarding an indemnity is not impossible, because it is declared Japan will content herself with demanding the cost of the war.

TURPIN—WEDD.

(Mail and Empire, June 8th.)

The marriage took place yesterday at the Church of the Epiphany, Parkdale, at 3 o'clock, in the presence of the immediate relations of the bride and bridegroom, of Miss Amy Charlton Wedd, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wedd, jr., to Mr. John Weston Turpin, Medicine Hat, second son of Mr. James Turpin, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Bernard Bryan, rector of the church. Mr. M. Le Clerec Atkinson, cousin of the bride, presided at the organ. The Church was beautifully decorated by the girl friends of the bride, who was given away by her father. She wore a gown of embroidered net over silk and a very handsome veil of old Limerick Laco. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies. The bridesmaid, Miss Eleanor Wedd, a sister of the bride was dressed in apple green silk, a large Tuscun Hat with pink roses and carried white lilacs. The best man was Mr. James Turpin, abrother of the bridegroom After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Jameson Avenue. Mrs. Wedd wore brown foulard ,with toque to match, in shades of brown The bridegrooms mother, Mrs. Turpin, a gown of black Crepe de Chine, and a black and white hat. Miss Turpin, pink organdie and pink rose hat.

TURPIN—WEDD.—At the Church of the Epiphany, Toronto, by Rev. BernardBryan, on Wednesday, June 7th. 1905, John Weston Turpin, of Medicine Hat, to Amy Charlton, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wedd, jr., of Toronto.

How Pneumonia Starts.

You catch a little cold today, by to-morrow it has reached the throat next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrh-ozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first placeCatarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food and vitality. In any cough, bronchitis or lung affection it's guaranteed to positively cure. Decline any substitute for "Catarrhozone."

HAVE SHOT 100 HEAD.

DEADLY DISEASE AFFLICTS 200 HORSES IN LETHBRIDGE DISTRICT.

At the quarantine station seven miles west of Lethbridge, a bunch of about 200 head of horses are being held, many of which are suffering from mal du colt. Quite a staff of horse docters, some of the leading veterinary surgeons of the Dominion have been busily engaged in examining the animals, and about 100 head have already been condemned and shot. The unpleasant task is not yet completed as the anthorities are determined to continue the killing until the disease is completely stamped out. The disease although sometimes lingering in the horses system for several years, is invariably fatal. It is said to have been brought into this country by a stallion owned by a Pincher Creek rancher. The loss sustained by the snootingof the horses is borne two-thirds by the government and one-third by the owners.

BOARD OF TRADE CONVENTION.

The secretary of the Territorial Boards of Trade convention to be held at Regina June 28, 29 and 30, reports that he is receiving from various quarters resolutions for discussion and consideration at the coming convention.

Among the subjects are: Insolvency, salaries of the cabinet ministers in the two new provinces of Saskatckewan and Alberta, sale of Indian reserves, interest on real estate mortgages, fire insurance rates, administration of intestate estates, the exemption ordinance, establishment of the associated boards on a permanent basis and some others of minor importan e.

Great interest is being shown in the convention, not only in the North-Wset Territories but in the Provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia.

The delegates from Medicine Hat Hat are Messrs W. T. Finlay, M.L.A. F. L. Crawford, C. R. Mitchell, and Thomas Tweed. Mr. Tweed we may add is chairman of the convention until his successor is appointed.

Among our latest arrivals from the Old Country are Tom and Robert Brown, of Armagh, Ireland, and Mr. Ernest Green, of Leeds, England.

A gang of men started on Tuesday to move the firehall off the present site so as to make room for the new Municipal building. Progress was slow.

The postal authorities have issued some new regulations worth having in mind in regard to persons taking mail out of boxes otherwise than their own. As all post-masters are liable to make mistakes in getting mail matter in wrong boxes this new regulation requires people to examine their mails before leaving the office and should they find a piece not addressed to them they must return it at once or be liable to a fine of $200. SETTLED THE BILL.

"Third notice." Every editor has received them. The post-office sends them to the editor. The editor is not to blame. For instance there is a man by the name of—well, say Tim Short—who sent us three notices to stop his paper. He did not want it any longer. We wondered what was the matter. Upon investigating our subscribtion book we found that Tim was short $5.70. He had never paid a cent and yet he stopped his paper as a matter of economy to us. A few evenings ago we stepped into church, and Tim's melodious voice rang out loud and clear in the old soul-stirring song, "Jesus paid it all." We might have been mistaken, but his earnestness impressed us. The next day we sent him a receipt in full begging his pardon for not knowing that he had made an assignment of his liabilities to the Lord.—Ex.

HE THOUGHT HE STOPPED THE PAPER.

An acquaintance met Horace Greeley one day and said: "Mr. Greeley I've stopped your paper." "Have you said the Editor, well that's too bad," and he went his way.

The next morning Mr. Greeley met his subscriber again, and said: "I thought you stopped the Tribune.

"So I did."

"Then there must be some mistake, said Mr. Greeley, for I am just from the office and the presses were running, the clerks were as busy as ever, the composirors were hard at work and the business was going on the same as yesterday and the day before."

"Oh I ejaculated the subscriber, I didn't mean that I had stopped the paper, I stopped only my copy of it because I didn't like your editorials

"Pshaw!" retorted Mr. Greeley, "It wasn't worth taking up my time to tell me such a trifle as that. My dear sir if you expect to control the utterance of the Tribune by the purchase of one copy a day, or if you think to find any newspaper or magazine worth reading that will never express convictions at right angles with your own, you are doomed to disappointment.

"C. B." AND THE SPOOK.

SIR CARNE RASCH'S ASTRAL BODY CAUSES PERPLEXITY.

The astral body of Sir Carne Rasch is becoming a subject of overpowering parliamentary interest in the British House of Commons.

Two such trained sceptics as to Ministerial phenomena as Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and his colleague, Colonel Sir Arthur Hayter, have now come forward and confessed with Sir Gilbert Parker to having seen Sir Carne Rasch in the House when he was away ill.

In an interview which he gave to the "Express" Lobby representative yesterday Sir Arthur said "I am positive that I and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman saw Sir Carne Rasch. We were struck by two peculiarities—his extreme pallor and visible 'un-himself-ish-ness,' and by the fact that he occupied a seat remote from his usual place, which is above the gangway."

It will be remembered that these two points were particularly noticed by Sir Gilbert Parker.

Sir Arthur Hayter is quite unable to account for the attention bestowed by himself and his leader upon Sir Carne Rasch. But he was much impressed by the remarkable, striking, and altogether unusual presentment of the Conservative member for the Chelmsford Division.

STARED AT IT.

He looked hard and curiously at the vision. Of the resemblance he had no kind of doubt whatever. The picture presented by the usually alert and watchful baronet was striking. Sir Arthur would not say it was eerie, but it attracted involuntary and irresistible attention. Nor would he ascribe any specific emotion to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman at this remarkable moment. Sir Henry may have taken refuge in a joke. He certainly fired one off. But the very jest may have screened an involuntary sense of mysterious unreality.

Sir Gilbert Parker did not take the matter so lightly. "When Rasch accepted my bet, with what looked very like a glare, he said, 'and met my kindly inquiry with silence I was just a little surprised. And when Rasch who had been, but was not, for he had as silently vanished, I put my hand to my head thus, and sniffily asked myself if it were possible that poor Rasch, whose illness was in the papers, had—had—well, died."

Mr Kelleger, of Wisconsin, U.S.A., is visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs J. J. Quin.

No joy or pleasure on this earth quite equals that which comes into the home when baby arrives. Who can describe the happiness of man and woman, joined in wedlock, as they look upon the fragile, delicate mite that is blood of their blood and flesh of their flesh? And who can depict the hopelessness and dejection that hover about the home where the wife is incapable of becoming a mother? Barrenness proceeds from some derangement of the distinctly feminine organs. Many of the common ailments known as "female troubles" cause it. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription overcomes barrenness by stamping out diseases of women, and by healing and curing ulceration. It tones up the system, stops drains, and restores strength. During gestation it modifies morning sickness, gives elasticity to the overstrained parts concerned, makes the hour of baby's coming short and almost painless, and gives wonderful recuperative power to the patient. By making the mother strong and cheerful, it makes the little one healthy, vigorous and good natured. Insist upon the medicine dealer giving you Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription when you ask for it. Substitutes are often dangerous.

Mrs. James W. Blacker, of 629 Catherine St., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Your medicines have done wonders for me. For years my health was very poor; I had four miscarriages, but since taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription' I have much better health, and now I have a fine healthy baby."

For 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, you can get a free copy of that celebrated doctor book, the Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, illustrated. Cloth-bound, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

J. A. Stinson & Co., re debentures.

In reply to Councillor Stewart The Clerk said he had replied to the inquiries re debentures.

Coun. Stewart said he thought it would be a good plan to let them Know that the debentures had been sold above par. It might help the sale of other debentures in the future.

On motion of Councillors Sissons and Stewart all the letters were ordered to be filed.

COMPLAINT OF THE NEWS COMPANY.

Coun. Drinnan asked Mr. Porter if he could account for theNews office basement being flooded.

Mr. Porter replied that he thought the culvert outside get choked with waste paper and rubbish.

On motion of Coun. Stewart the letter was referred to the Public Works Committee for report.

UNION LABOR.

The letter from the Carpenters Union was next considered.

Coun. Drinnan said Mr. Hodson and Mr. Fulton asked him to present the letter, and he had therefore brought it to the special meeting last Monday evening as it was a matter which should be dealt with at once. They told him that the Chief of their organisation was here the other day and they were willing to guarantee that sufficient union labor could be supplied for building the City Hall.

Coun. Sissons—What shape is this Union in in this town.

Coun. Drinnan—It has just been organised this summer.

Coun. Sissons —How many members have they.

Coun Drinnan —I have no statement of the numbers.

Coun. Sissons—I do not see how we can accede to that request unless we are satisfied that all the carpenters in town are members. There are a lot of carpenters in town, and all have a right to be considered. If all the carpenters in the town are members of the Union it will put a different aspect upon it.

Coun. DesBrisay—It will in one sense but we do not want to tie the hands of the contractors.

Coun. Stewart—I should like to know if it will prejudice the contractors in competing for the job or not, I think the matter should be inquired into to see if we can get more information.

Coun. DesBrisay said he thought it was not a matter for the Council but a matter between the contractors and the men. He asked the acting Mayor if he had ever heard of Councillors interfering between the contractors and the Unions.

Coun. Drinnan said He had not heard of any.

Coun. DesBrisay—I do not think that the information before us from these people justifies us in taking steps as it may prejudice the contractors.

Coun. Drinnan—Will someone make a motion.

Con. Stewart—I would like to have more light. I move it lie on the table until next meeting.

Coun. Drinnan—It may prejudice our tenders if we do not deal with the matter, as the tenders for the building are to come in for our next meeting.

Coun. DesBrisay—I do not see how the Union can expect us to do anything to prejudice the contractors do you.

Coun. Drinnan—I do not think so It appears to me it is a matter between the contractors and the Union I do not think it will be wise for the Council to take action to force contractors to employ only Union Carpenters.

Coun. DesBrisay—Especially as we do not know if all here are Union men.

Coun. Drinnan—I think Mr. Hodson did say they were all in except a few and they were expecting to get all the carpenters in town in the Union. I think it is to prevent contractors bringing in outside labor. By inserting the clause they ask for in the specifications it might run up the price of the building.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, if they want to bring men in we cannot help it.

Coun. Sissons—You may take it they will want to bring in their best men, such as their foreman.

Coun. DesBrisay—If we are going to call for tenders I don't think it is within our province to say they must employ certain men belonging to a certain Union.

Coun. Drinnan—We want to see our own men employed if possible. How can you get over the difficulty. It should be dealt with tonight. We might appoint a special committee to deal with it and give the special committee power to act. The contractors want to know what the conditions are before putting in tenders and the tenders have to be in by our regular meeting next Monday week. That is why I brought it forward the other night.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, it will be best I think, to appoint a special committee. It is a request from ratepayers and must have proper attention.

Coun. Stewart—I move that a special committee, to be named by the acting Mayor, inquire into the matter and report to a special meeting.

Coun. DesBrisay seconded and it was agreed to, and Messrs. Stewart Sissons and DesBrisay were appointed as the special committee.

It was agreed that a special meeting be held on Friday at 5o'clock, to receive the report of the committee.

VARIOUS MATTERS.

Mr. Cousins' letter was referred to the assessment committee with power to act.

The two letters re gas meters were referred to the gas committee.

The letter of the Office Specialty Company was referred to the Public Works Committee.

The letter from the School Board was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Brotherton's letter was referred to the Public Works Committee.

The Town Clerk was instructed to reply to the letter re telephone system and give information asked for.

REPORTS

The water committee reported having received tenders for piping and Mr. Williamson's tender being the lowest had been accepted.

On motion of Messrs Stewart and Sissons the report was adopted.

The Gas Committee reported having ordered extensions to several persons whose applications were read at the last meeting.

On motion of Messrs Stewart and Sissons the report was adopted.

The Water Committee reported, recommending that the rate for water supplied to the Montreal Street School be fixed at $56 per annum.

On motion of Messrs Stewart and Sissons the report was adopted.

The Public Works Committee reported as to Mr. Bray's application for trees to plant in the Court House grounds that as the season had advanced so far Mr. Bray had decided to wait until next year.

The committee also reported having accepted Marshall & Co's. tender, being the lowest, for oats.

The same committee reported that in accordance with instructions they had obtained tenders for a wagon for the new sprinkler and Marshall & Co's, being the lowest had been accepted, and Mr. Morris had done the work in connection therewith. The tender of Mr. Lightbody for running the cart had been accepted.

Coun. DesBrisay said he had a request from one of the tenderers that the amounts of the tenders be published.

Coun. Drinnan observed, that the tenders were all attached to the reports and he thought the person referred to by Mr. DesBrisay was now satisfied about the tenders, as he, too, had had a talk with him, and had explained the matter.

The Public Works Committee also reported having accepted Messrs Marshall & Co's. tender for potatoes for the new parks which were being cropped this year as a preparation for laying out and planting next year.

The Public Works Committee also reported having given permission to F. G. Forster to place steps out beyond his property line. This had been rendered necessary through the levelling operations on Montreal Street, and the steps did not in any way interfere with the use of the road by the public.

Coun. Sissons proposed the adop-

All Eyes on the West.

Though the harvest is as yet several weeks away the eyes of Eastern Canada and a large part of the United States and Europe are fixed upon Western Canada, and reports of the wheat crop are studied with deepest interest. The Western crop is the scource of much buying power and a bad year in the West has consequences which closely affects the East. It affects Europe and the United States to some extent, but it has far reaching effects in the East. A large amount of the labor employed in the manufacturing works of Ontario, says the Mail and Empire is engaged in making articles to be sold in the Western country. The people of this section of Canada do not spend all their money in Ontario, and in the other Eastern provinces, for the reason that their trade is rather open to competition. The tariff is not high enough to keep out goods from the United States. But Ontario gets many of the millions that the Territories and Manitoba receive for their grain. She receives it in payment for agricultural machinery, farm implements, tools, utensils, builders' hardware, steel rails, rolling stock, locomotives, wearing apparel, boots and shoes, and innumerable other articles made in the East and sold in the North-West. She receives it in payments on mortgage indebtedness to loan companies in the East whose funds have assisted greatly the development of the West. The excellent prospect now unfolding on the Western wheatfields is influencing business men east of the lakes—moving wholesalers to put their stock in readiness for a large demand, encouraging manufacturers not to slacken operations, and causing bankers to take precautionary measures ensuring an adequate supply of currency when the crop is matured. All eyes are intent on the Western crop, which at this early date bids fair to surpass all previous aggregate yields in the hard wheat country.

Is Britian Behind France?

The Emperor of Germany is assuming a very aggressive attitude towards France. He is meddling in the affairs of Morocco and possibly his object is to prevent France from becoming too strong. He probably realises that France has not yet forgotten her humiliation of 1870, when Germany wrested from her the two fair provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, and that she may try to regain them. German influence was used to prevent the alliance between France and Russia, but to no purpose but now that Russia's power is shattered, and her financial resources weakened if not exhausted she is useless as an ally and France stands practically alone once more. Emperor William, therefore, may think that this a good opportunity to force a quarrel on France. His selection of grounds for a quarrel are not well conceived, however, for England and France are in agreement upon the Morocco settlement, and the Emperor may find that Britain is behind France in the matter. If so, he is not likely to frighten the French nation.

The Traffic Bridge.

According to information from Ottawa the building of a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan river is a matter for the Province to deal with, the Dominion Government having provided for such contingencies in the Autonomy Bills. It is said the money granted to the new provinces is to cover matters of this kind, so this town will have to look to the new Parliament of Alberta to provide a bridge. This information is probably correct and the new situation will have to be faced. Medicine Hat must, therefore, at once prepare to bring the matter to the notice of the new legislature and must not relax the efforts to secure a bridge at the earliest possible moment. The town should be unanimous in this matter and there must be no back-wire-pulling behind the scenes. The bridge is required as a matter of public safety and we must put this aspect of the case fairly and squarely before the new Parliament of Alberta.

Another Race and Religion Menace.

Two Conservative members from Quebec are going a long way beyond the compromise on racial and religious questions which is now incorporated in the Autonomy Bills. One member proposes to restore the official use of the French language in the West, and the other proposes to restore the original pre-Haultain variety of seperate schools. The Montreal Star in discussing the point asks very pertinently whether we as Canadians can afford to play with fire. These two Quebec members know perfectly well that their resolutions cannot carry. They know perfectly well that no Government could attempt to override the will of the Western people on this delicate problem, and live. It is not a case—as is that of the educational clauses now in the bills—of doubt about Western opinion. We know what the West has already done on both of these points; and the proposals in question ask Parliament to take the West by the throat and coerce it into reversing its already accepted policy. Parliament could not do it. Parliament—with the experience of '96 before its mind—will not try to do it.

All that the two Quebec members can hope to accomplish is to convince some few people that they are more French than Sir Wilfred and more Catholic than Mr. Fitzpatrick—though they will convince a larger number of people that they are criminally careless as to the means they are ready to use to gain an advantage for Quebec.

The news that Mr. John Hay, the American Secretary of State, has returned from Europe to Washington in good health, is good news. When he left for the old world in March last, many of his friends feared that his devotion to business had been carried too far, and that his health was permanently shattered. But his trip abroad has restored his vigor and physical capacity. His appearance at Washington just now will have a beneficial effect in connection with the Russo-Japanese peace negotiations. Mr. Hay's policy is one of peace; he is credited with efforts to render less conspicuous President Roosevelt's "big stick"; and he is a strong believer in the Anglo-American entente. Apart from his political activities, Mr. Hay is a poet and litterateur. He is an American citizen who has reflected much credit on his nation at home and abroad. Not only does he understand domestic and international diplomacy, but he also finds time to devote himself to fine arts. The decline of the "Jingo" American politician under Hay's administration of affairs should secure his period of dominance a special page in the history of the United States.

KING AND QUEEN RECEIVE CANADIANS.

London, June 19.—The whole party of Canadian manufacturers journeyed to Windsor to-day, and were received by the King. Everybody expressed themselves delightfully surprised at the reception. They went by special train, furnished at Paddington, and the royal carriages, under the charge of Lord Esher, met the whole party at Windsor and drove to Frogmore Mausoleum, which was specially opened, through the park to the Castle, where Lord Knollys, the King's private secretary, and the Colonial Secretary were waiting on the approach of the party.

The King and Queen, accompanied by the Prince of Wales' two eldest children and attended by their suite, came on to the terrace. Lord Strathcona and Sir W. Mulock, who accompanied the party, engaged the King in conversation for a few moments, afterwards the officers of the association were introduced to the King and Queen, who personally greeted them. The King, in conversation, expressed interest in the party's movements and pleasure at its safe arrival After the delay the party then divided into three groups, paid their respects to their Majesties. The King addressed the whole party as follows: "I am greatly pleased at your presence here to-day. I welcome you to England and to Windsor especially. I hope you will have a safe return after enjoying a pleasant hour here."

After partaking of refreshments in the orangery, the whole party were conducted through the state apartments, after which they took the royal carriages to the station.

KILL THE CUT WORM.

The following information is from the head of the experimental farm at Indian Head, Angus McKay, respecting a means of destroying the cut worm which has been giving some trouble in this district, and, we believe, all over the West. The advice given is to moisten bran and mix Paris green with it, and when thoroughly mixed with a stick, to strew a little of it along the row on each side of the plants. The insect will, during the night, eat the bran and die.

If this means of destruction should be tried, we advise that all domestic animals be kept away. Poultry of all kinds must not be permitted to approach it, and dogs, with other animals, had better be kept from touching it. The Paris green is not hurtful to the hands, but is poison if ured internally

A. W. Green's Body Found

FUNERAL RITES SUNDAY.

Ernie Charboneau, Robert Nichol and H. Mainland found the body of A. W. Green late on Friday evening. The body was stranded on a small island about 130 miles down the river, about 45 miles further down than the spot were young Ridpath was found some three years ago. It is a matter of comfort to the relatives and relief to the general public that the remains have been recovered and laid to rest in the cemetery..

THE SEARCH.

The search for the body of A. W. Green, drowned on the 10th June through his horse and buggy backing off the ferry boat on the Saskatchewan river, was continued every day. Last Tuesday Ernie Charboneau, Robt. Nichol and Hugh Mainland, accompanied by the N. W. M. Police wagon again went down river, and the three men mentioned embarked in a boat and went down with the current, while the wagon followed the bank. Near Drowning Ford they heard that the men on Tinney's ranch had seen a body of a man floating down at about 10 o'clock on Friday morning the 16th. inst. Further on at J. English's ranch this was corroborated, the body having been seen and followed some distance but as the men had no boat they gave up.

Drowning Ford is nearly sixty miles down the river by water, on account of the twists and turns in the river, but only 15 miles by land. The party found their provisions running short so they left their boat and returned over land to the Hat, getting in on Thursday night. They laid in a larger stock of provisions and on Friday morning they again started on the search. The body seen by the ranchers was evidently that of Green, and it had a full week's start of the searchers and was apparently being carried at a swift rate towards the north, On hearing this many people began to fear he would never be recovered.

A telegram was sent to Prince Albert asking that a lookout be kept there for the body.

Charboneau and Nicholls were determined to spare no toil or trouble in the search and when they again embarked in the boat they worked hard to overtake the body. Aided by the strong current they passed rapidly down and about 6 o'clock on Friday evening arrived at a desolate spot known as Narrow Rapids where they caught by a little Island in midstream.

The men wrapped and sewed the remains in blankets, placed it in the boat, and took it to shore but the rapids are situated between banks about 500 feet high and the three men could not get the body up. Securing the boat they, about 11 o'clock p. m., started to walk the 13 miles across the country to the ranch where the police wagon had been left and arriving there the whole party at once returned to the river, which they reached at daylight on Saturday morning. They then observed that the Island where the body had been found was covered with water so that had they not got there when they did on Friday night it Rould doubtless have been gone. The work of getting the body up the steep bank was a big task, and took about five hours hard work. Finally it was got up and placed in the wagon, when the party started on the return journey, arriving at Medicine Hat at 8.30 on Saturday evening.

Dr. Smyth, coroner, examined the body and ordered an inquest. A jury was summoned at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning, and having viewed the remains, adjourned the inquiry until Monday evening.

On examining the clothing, every thing was found intact. Deceased's watch was found to have stopped at ten minutes past three.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, from Moore & Moore's undertaking rooms interment being at the Public Cemetery. A large concourse of people assembled and over 60 rigs formed in procession behind the hearse. The mourners were:

Mrs. A. W. Green (the widow).
Mrs. Philip Green, Limehouse, Toronto (mother).
Mrs. Byers, Fort William (mother of the widow).
John, Archie, Walter and Howland Green (brothers).
Mrs. John Green and Misses Byers.

Acting-Mayor Drinnan, W. B. Marshall, C. S. Pingle, M. Peard, E. Charboneau and A. P. Burns were the pall-bearers, and the Lacrosse Club, wearing badges followed on foot to the outskirts of the town where they had rigs waiting.

Some beautiful wreaths were laid on the coffin by Mrs. J. Shields, Mrs W. G. Niblock, Mrs. C. Luno and Nichol and Charboneau.

The officiating clergy were the Rev. W. Nicolls (Anglican), and Rev. W. Morrow (Presbyterian), and the mortal remains of our late townsman were committed to the ground "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," amid every sign of respect and sorrow.

Mr. John Green informs us that the rumour that his late brother had several hundred dollars in his pocket when drowned is not correct.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. A. W. Green, and the brothers of her late husband, wish through the Times, to thank the people of Medicine Hat most sincerely for the great kindness shown them during their sad bereavement.

THE INQUEST.

The abjourned inquiry was held in the Court House on Monday evening before Dr. Smyth (coroner) and the following jury: John Benson (foreman), L. B. Cochrane, H. C. Yuill, E. Lightbody, A. DesBrisay and G. B. Borradaile.

Joseph McQueen, the ferryman, C. S. Pingle, J. P. Laird and J. Bradshaw gave evidence as to the accident, and the story they told agreed in the main with the account which has already been published. Mr. Laird's horse backed a little and this caused Mr. Green's horse to back and as it went over it pushed the ferry off. In a fewseconds horse buggy and Mr. Green were in the water and very soon Green threw up his hands and disappeared.

Robert Nichol, E. Charboneau and E. W. Moore gave evidence of the finding and identification of the body. Identification was only possible by means of the clothing and contents of the pockets.

Thejury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased came to his death by accidental drowning in the Saskatchewan river.

The coroner asked if the jury had no recommendation to make with regardto an improved ferry or a bridge.

The foreman—We did not think it was within the province of this jury to make any recommendations with regard to the ferry we think other bodies should deal with that.

CATTLE ARE SLOW.

Will be No Big Shipments From the Ranges Until After July 20.

The range cattle will be a little slow in moving out of Montreal this year. Freight Agent McMullin said it would be July 20 before any great number would be sent. The two cars already sent represented rather the fed stock than that off the ranges. Mr. McMullin says that the grass is still "washy."

Mr. Wilkinson, of Wilkinson & McCord, returned last week from a visit to Mexico. He says cattle prospects are good there this year, but the last winter was a hard one, the temperature having gone as low as 39 below zero.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

Horace Arnold was delighted.

"Put it into your window by all means," he said, "but as for putting on a card with the artist's name, I wouldn't advise it. She would not like it, I am sure."

"Any young lady ought to be proud to put her name to a gem like that," insisted the enthusiastic young artist; "however, let it be as you say. I should like very much to meet this young artist. Bring her down to the studio, Arnold."

Then Horace Arnold saw what mischief he had done. His artist friend was interested in Reine; if he were to see her, he would fall in love with her on sight. Ah, no; he must not see Reine; he must prevent that.

How quick love is to catch the flame of jealousy!

Frederick Ballou, the young artist, had the picture Reine had painted put into a superb and unique frame, and placed it in the window without delay.

It attracted great attention. New York pedestrians have an eye for such a gorgeous bit of coloring as war this; so true to nature, one could almost fancy himself transplanted on this cold, stormy day, to the cheery scenes among the green sunlit hills upon which they gazed.

Quite a little knot of beauty worshippers gathered about the artist's window ere Reine's picture had been there an hour; and this was what had attracted Bernard Chesleigh to the spot, as he was hurrying down Broadway.

For one moment he gazed carelessly enough; then a sudden whiteness overspread his face, as his quick eyes took in every detail of that beloved and familiar scene.

He stepped inside the studio, inquiring if the picture was for sale.

The young artist answered in the affirmative; adding, that he would be pleased to send for the young lady who painted it, if the gentleman had any thought of purchasing it; or, if he was passing that way, he might call upon her himself in reference to it. No doubt she would be pleased to dispose of it, and at a very low figure.

The artist jotted down the street and number, apologizing for being unable to furnish him the name of the young lady.

Bernard Chesleigh put the slip of paper in his pocket-book. And, an hour later, finding himself in that vicinity, ran lightly up the steps and touched the bell, surprised to find the young lady living at the home of his clerk.

Mrs. Arnold was delighted to see him, and still more delighted to learn the errand upon which he had come.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Mrs. Arnold came up to Reine's room all in a flutter of excitement, and told her the wonderful news. Mr. Bernard Chesleigh, the great lawyer, had seen the picture in a window in passing—and, being told her number, had come to purchase it if it was for sale.

How Reine's heart beat as she listened!

"He wants to buy it because the scene recalls the home of an old friend who has but very recently passed away."

The lovely face into which Mrs. Arnold gazed was as white as death; a great trembling had seized Reine.

"Tell him he can have the picture at any price—he—he thinks it is worth," she said chokingly. "I—I cannot see him—and—and—Mrs. Arnold—I beseech you—do not mention my name to him."

This was a strange freak of Reine's; still, Mrs. Arnold consented to it. Chesleigh bought the picture, but not for many a long day after, did he learn the name of the artist.

Reine was greatly astounded at the magnificent sum Mr. Chesleigh left for the picture.

He was too noble to take advantage of a struggling artist. With the eyes of a connoisseur he saw that the picture was a little gem—and he showed his great nobility of character by paying for it accordingly.

But despite the sale of her picture, Reine felt heavy hearted; who could the old friend be, who had passed away so suddenly? A nameless dread seized her—terrified her—she dared not put the thought into words that flitted through her brain.

A great longing came to her to visit Fairlawn once again, and look upon her father's face. Yes, go she must.

Mrs. Arnold's parting with Reine, whom she had grown to love, was quite affecting.

The blow fell heaviest, perhaps, upon her son Horace. His face was deadly pale, but he preserved an outwardly calm demeanor. The inward cry that welled up from the very depths of his heart was:

"It has been my own fault. It has been my own hand that plunged the dagger into my breast. But for that picture which I begged her to place on exhibition, they would not have discovered my beautiful Reine, and taken her from me."

He bowed his handsome, boyish face over the little white hand that was stretched out to him at parting, and the fair moustache hid the grievous quivering of his lips.

"Good-bye, Horace, my dear friend," said Reine, earnestly. "I shall never forget how kind you have been to me. I shall always be most grateful."

"I shall always be your true friend until I die," he answered, huskily. "Try to remember those words. Say to yourself 'If I am ever in great trouble—if the whole world turn from me—I shall be sure of one true friend in Horace Arnold.' "

"I shall remember," said Reine, gently.

That was their parting; and when Mrs. Arnold entered the parlor an hour later, wondering why her son remained there so long, she found him with his head buried deep in the velvet cushions of the sofa; deep sighs, that were almost moans, breaking from his lips; then she knew the full extent of the mischief that had been done. Beautiful, golden-haired Reine had taken with her her boy's heart.

It was a love as mad as it was hopeless, she well knew, for her keen eyes had discovered the secret he had thought guarded so well.

From this she had drawn her own conclusions. She left the parlor quickly and noiselessly, and her boy never knew there had been a silent witness to the agony which the parting with Reine had cost him.

It was with a heart thrilling with strange conflicting emotions Reine took her seat in the outward bound Southern express. No matter how cruelly the world dealt with her, she had always whispered to her hungry heart she could always creep into the shelter of her father's arms, and find peace there. No matter what she had done, the old general would find forgiveness for her, when she came back to him crushed, penitent, humbled—a poor bruised butterfly, whose bright wings were broken and trailing in the dust.

It was a sweet hope to cling to.

How slowly the train on which Reine was a passenger seemed to creep along!

The darkness of night had gathered ere she reached the cross-roads, but a young moon hanging like a jewel in the star-studded sky, threw a faint white light over the sleeping trees and flowers.

It was quite three miles to Fairlawn, but knowing the road so well, Reine decided to walk the distance.

She remembered the last time she had passed over that road—fleeing from home with the man she loved—in defiance of her father's command.

Ah, me, every word of the old general's prophecy had proven true. How happy her young life might have been with the rose-bloom of an honorable man's love, brightening her existence! She was only a wilful girl then—only sixteen—it almost seemed to her long centuries had elapsed since that fatal day she had gone with handsome, spendthrift Waldemar Waldron, to follow his fortunes.

She paused a moment as she reached the gate, tears that quite blinded her, falling from her eyes down her pale, wan cheeks.

She heard a low lowing among the bushes; she knew before she turned her head, that it was the old Alderney cow Beatrix. She held out her hand and patted its sleek sides; the faithful creature rubbed her cold nose against her shoulder.

Reine opened the gate noiselessly and paused again. How still and dark the old gray stone house, with its turrets and gables, looked to her as she crept up the well remembered walk to the broad veranda!

A tidy maid she never remembered having seen before, was sweeping the dead leaves from before the door.

"Is General Hastings within?" inquired Reine falteringly, leaning weakly against one of the pillars of the porch.

For an instant the girl stared blankly into the white face turned so wistfully toward her, and Reine repeated the words.

"Do you not know? Why, you must be a stranger hereabouts to ask that question," she said. "General Hastings—poor old gentleman—is dead; he was buried almost a fortnight ago. That is his grave, on that high hill yonder; you can see the tall white shaft shining through the trees."

For a long, awful moment, the darkness of death seemed to enfold Reine; the world seemed to stand still, and her heart to slowly break then and there. She put out her hands blindly, and sunk down on the cold stone steps.

"Come round to the kitchen and let me get you a cup of hot tea," said the girl kindly, as she gazed pitifully at the white, pitiful face raised to her own. "You look faint and worn."

"No," muttered Reine, with white, stiffening lips.

"You'll be welcome to it, dear knows," insisted the maid; "the old general used to say, 'no stranger should ever be turned from his door.' Come."

And she half led, half carried Reine into the cheery kitchen, and seated her by the genial, glowing fire.

The rest of the servants did not seem to be about.

How natural the room seemed to Reine. Everything seemed the same except the strange face of this new, kind-hearted little serving-maid.

Reine almost expected to see the door leading into the hallway open, and her father come quickly over the threshold, his ruddy face beaming with love, and hear his hearty bluff voice, crying cheerily—

"You have come back to your old father at last, dear; I always knew you would come sooner or later—I have been watching for you, all these long, weary months. Your old father has been lonely without his wilful little madcap."

Reine roused herself from the stupor that was stealing over her. Was it true that he was dead—dead? Ah, pitying God! how could she realize it.

"Haven't you heard the story of the old general's death?" asked the girl, adding in the next breath, "no of course you haven't, or you wouldn't have called here from him to-night."

"No—no—I haven't heard," faltered Reine, "won't you tell me?"

"It's a sad tale," responded the girl, brushing off a tear-drop with the corner of her apron. "The doctors and the neighbors say he died of apoplexy. I say he died of a broken heart, and it is the will-o'-the wisp daughter of his who ran away with a handsome spendthrift who will have to answer for it.

"The old general had a lovely young daughter, with a face like the white waxen leaves of a lily, and hair more glorious golden than its golden calyx, as pretty a young creature, they say, as the sun ever shone on.

"Lovely, wilful Reine was the idol of the old general's heart.

"His one anxiety was to see her well married and settled in life; he always had a foreboding, they say, that she might not turn out well, she was so wilful.

"He picked out a husband for her, a noble gentleman, but do you think she would have him? Oh, dear, no, though like the general, he fairly idolized the ground her pretty feet walked over.

"She fell in love with a handsome profligate, a trifler, and despite all opposition, eloped with him.

"Perhaps I am tiring you with hearing about the general's madcap daughter," said the maid, looking anxiously at the white face of the stranger, which was each moment growing more ghastly.

"No—no," faltered Reine. "I am greatly interested—go on."

The gossiping maid looked pleased; she was fond of relating the story, which sounded like a romance, ending in a tragedy, as she called the general's death, to any one who had not heard it.

"As I was saying," she continued, "the heiress ran away with the handsome spendthrift and married him, but as every one predicted, she soon found him out. He had married for money, not for love, and a pretty life he led her, to be sure. The general's wrath was terrible; he cut her off without a shilling, and when the young husband found that out, he left her.

"Some one wrote to the general about it, and he went on to bring his broken hearted daughter home; but when he got there, she had vanished. He hunted her the whole world over; but he never found her. He came home, took to his bed, and never left it alive.

"The old general's widowed sister was sent for from away down in Tennessee, and she got here just as he was breathing his last.

"He beckoned her to him, and when she bent over him, he whispered brokenly:

"'Always keep the latch string out, Rachel; some day Reine will come back—but I shall not be here to welcome my darling.' He had her picture brought from the library and hung where he could see it, and he never took his eyes from it. It would have made you cry if you had heard his mind wander, the moment before he passed away. He seemed to imagine he was at the gate of heaven and had met his dead wife there, for he cried softly—'Open the gate—open the gate,'' adding plaintively: 'You ask me what I have done with the little child you placed in my arms, dear, when the angels took you, and I answer I guarded her well, Evelyn; but—I lost her; some day she will come to you and me at this gate; we will wait for her here, Evelyn; no matter where she has been, what she has gone through, she is still the little darling that once slept in our arms—our pretty little Reine.'

"After that he never spoke again, and, we know he had gone to join his angel wife, to wait at the gate for Reine; poor, pretty, wilful Reine, whose name was the last word he ever spoke on earth.

"Are you crying, lady?" asked the maid. "Ah, well, I told you it was a pitiful story—it would bring tears to eyes of stone."

By a great effort Reine kept from swooning. She rose unsteadily from her chair, and put down the cup of tea untasted.

"I must go, thank you; and good-bye," she said. And, like one suddenly stricken blind, she staggered out of the house, and down the path, and was lost in the darkness beyond.

She crept up to a little, white gate, by the side of which great weeping willow trees grew—opened it, and stole softly up the narrow path to the grand, old soldier's grave she knelt down upon it, parted the grass, laying her face upon it, and with her arms thrown about the cold polished marble shaft, wept tears that it grieved the angels to witness.

"The world has all gone wrong with me, father," she sobbed, "Heaven has punished me sorely for disobeying you; oh, how bitterly I have repented! I have been unhappy in my love—in everything. I have come back to die upon your grave, papa."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Suddenly it occurred to Reine that it would be far better to steal away from that spot, that it would be better to hide herself forever from the gaze of those who had known her, in the dark, rippling waves of the silent water that skirted Fairlawn.

What matter what became of her whom nobody loved?

With pale, cold lips, poor Reine kissed the marble shaft, praying her father to forgive her for the past, and plead at the great White Throne for what she was going to do—for she was soon to join him.

Gathering her dark cloak about her and looking back with one long, lingering gaze, that had her very soul in it, at the dark, solemn stone house on the sloping hillside, and at the steady flame that shone like a beacon light from the kitchen window, the poor child turned away, and crept on down the path toward the dark, sullen stream.

The wind blew coldly on her face, but she did not hesitate. Never again after to-night, would she see the great throbbing world with its mysteries, its miseries, its hopes and its loves. When spring came again her feet would not tread the grass; never again would she see the sweet violets, the yellow daffodils, such as grew around the dear old home, nodding their heads in the breeze. Never again would men worship her beauty; never more would she see love glowing in passionate eyes for her sake. It was all over.

She paused on the margin of the dark, sullen stream for a moment, then climbed down on to the moss covered rocks.

"Good-bye, cruel world," she moaned; "no one will ever miss me; no one cares for poor, hapless Reine." Only the echo of her own voice answered her. Silence settled down again. A land-bird, roused from its sleep, opened its bright eyes and gazed at her from its nest among the rocks—that was all. No human being cared or rose from their quiet sleep to save her.

Reine took off her cloak slowly. The cold winds chilled her, but she did not mind it. Her beautiful, curling, golden hair had loosened from the coil at the back of her head, and fell in a shining mass of glittering splendor to her waist, but she did not heed it.

"I am going to die, and you will never know how I loved you. In the last moments of my life, I dare own it even to myself, Bernard," she moaned. You will never know that I learned your worth too late—yes—I love you, and you alone. I have seen no one else that I love in the crowd of faces that fill the world! I have seen only yours, only yours, Bernard, by night and by day; not his, Bernard. I have since learned that I never loved Waldemar Waldron. It was only a mad infatuation. Your face has smiled upon me in my dreams; it has shone down on me from the stars; it looks up to me from the water; in the light of the sun, in the beams of the moon. All the world is blank except the spot where you are—and that is—heaven. Suddenly some one touched her on the arm.

"What are you doing here lady?" asked a voice which she recognized instantly as black Tom's—he had been one of the attaches of Fairlawn Villa ever since Reine could remember.

She shrank back from him. "I meant no harm in strolling into the grounds," she murmured, endeavoring to disguise her tone, but it was no use; he sprang forward peering in dismay into the white, averted face.

"It's Missy—Missy Reine, by all de saints, above!" he exclaimed excitedly.

"Yes, it's me, Tom," she sobbed. "Don't tell anybody I have been here. I have been to poor papa's grave, and now I am going away again. Oh, Tom! take great care of it, keep the grass trimmed down close, and—and—plant some white flowers around it—my white rose-bush, that I loved so well, and the white hyacinths—you will attend to it Tom?"—This tearfully.

"Oh, yes, Missy Reine."

"I—I—am going now, Tom," she faltered, turning away, but he caught at her gown with trembling hands.

"What fo' should you go away fo' again, Missy Reine," he entreated; "do stay, it am yer own home, ain't it? Missy Woodstock—de ole general's sister, am a very nice pusson; but oh, Missy, we ole folk' 'bout de place like de ole rulin' best.

"I can't stay Tom," Reine declared shuddering, but:—

"Man proposes and God disposes."

It was destined she was not to leave Fairlawn Villa so soon. She took one step forward, then exhausted nature and whirling brain asserted herself. Reine slipped down unconscious in the long lush grass, at faithful Tom's feet.

"Poor Missy Reine," he muttered, as he raised her in his strong arms. It was but the work of a moment to carry her to the house; and almost as soon as he had laid her down, he had told his story of how and where he had met Reine and all that had transpired, to the astounded servants who had assembled, attracted by the confusion.

"Thank heaven Reine is found, at last!" sobbed Mrs. Woodstock, Reine's aunt, bending over the prostrate form, and death white face.

All the usual old-time restoratives proved of little avail, and a doctor was quickly summoned, also a telegram to Bernard Chesleigh, telling him what had occurred, was sent flashing over the wires, which brought him on to Virginia, and to Fairlawn Villa without delay.

It was many a long day ere a knowledge of her surroundings came to Reine.

One day, as soon as Reine was able to be about, her aunt sent for her to come to the drawing-room, adding that "some one was there who wished to see her very much."

Girl-like, she took a glance in the mirror before going down, smooth as her collar, and pushing back the rings of golden, curling hair from her forehead; and in that moment's glance she could not help but notice how pale and thin she had grown. She could scarcely recognize the face reflected there.

She walked slowly down to the parlor, and opened the door. Some one was seated in the shadow of the bay window—some one who uttered a cry of intense surprise as he beheld her; and the next moment Bernard Chesleigh was clasping her hand, looking joyfully down into her face.

"Why did you hide yourself like this from those who love you best?" he asked, sadly.

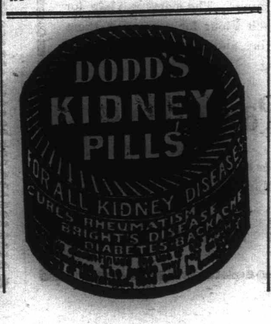
Reine hid her face in her hands.

"Did you know, Bernard, that he—he left me forever?" she sobbed. "Left me wilfully, deliberately—left me to the world's cold mercy, dependent upon myself?"

"I know all, Reine. But why, in the hour of need, did you not go to your father, who loved you so well, or come to me?"

"Papa would never have received me," she faltered. "He shut his heart against me. I have deserved it as the price of my folly."

Bernard Chesleigh was a good man, but he could scarcely refrain from cursing the villian who had wrecked Reine's young life. For God had punished her sufficiently for forgetting the words of her dear old Bible: "Honor thy father and thy mother."



Poor Reine! She was but another pitiful example of the folly of eloping. Will young girls never take heed, and learn to shun false-hearted lovers whom loving friends and parents strive to warn them against?

She continued to improve in health and strength rapidly; and once more, as she stood among the roses, and her clear laugh rang out, she seemed like the merry, joyous Reine of yore.

Bernard Chesleigh watched her with yearning, sorrowful eyes, no longing seeking to hide the truth from himself. He loved her with all his heart. She was his first and only love, the other half of his soul. Yet she was separated from him as completely as though she lay in her grave.

The days that passed were all too bitter-sweet to Bernard Chesleigh. He was only human, not a saint, and it was beyond human nature to deny himself the joy of being near the woman he loved.

He fel[illegible] without knowing it, from [illegible]nship into the [illegible]s digs for me[illegible]st, when a f[illegible]er him, an[illegible]e would giv[illegible] her in his [illegible]oment, and [illegible]n die. It [illegible]e over him[illegible]tely, how[illegible]her.

and more now, if that could be, than ever. He had never trembled at a woman's soft touch before; now, if his hand touched hers, if her dress touched him in passing, if, as he bent over her to read or to sing, the perfume from her hair reached him, he trembled like a strong tree swaying in the storm.

He knew his love was hopeless, he told himself over and over again that she could be nothing to him, and the next thing was to fly from her, to go where the witchery of her face would never set his heart on fire again; to go where her voice would not reach him. And yet, realizing all that, he still lingered.

He drained his cup of poison slowly, surely, knowing it was poison, knowing that it would destroy him, yet unable to put down the fatal cup, which once tasted, clings to the lips. He found himself wondering over and over again, is she were but free, if her heart would turn to him, for he read in her eyes now a look which was new in them, if they by chance met his; then the white lids would droop over them and Reine would turn confusedly away.

There was one incident that happened one evening which was certainly a trying one for both Reine and Chesleigh.

Carrots Are Nutritious.

Do not forget to serve carrots every little while. To get the best of their flavor, scrub them thoroughly to remove dirt and boil without removing the thin skin. This will slip off like that of a beet if dropped into cold water as soon as cooked. The carrots may then be diced or sliced and served buttered with a cream or butter sauce, or they may be scalloped. Another tasty way is to mash them, season well, form into small cones and, when cold, roll in flour or in egg and bread-crumbs and brown quickly in fat.

She was weakly, did not have any flesh on her bones, and a bluish color. The doctor who attended her told me she would not live. THE THIRST OF CHRIST

LAST WORDS OF THE SON OF MAN BEFORE HIS DEATH.

Very Need of His Suffering Flesh Rings Out As a Message For the Centuries—No One So Weak, So Feeble, So Utterly a Waif in the Gutter That He Cannot Join in This Cry.

Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.—St. John, xix., 28.

These are the last words of the Son of Man before His death to mankind. They are uttered for a purpose by one dying in full possession of His faculties. All uttered from the cross before seems to discourage human aspirations; this unites Him with the feeblest cry of human flesh.

No one so weak, so feeble, so utterly a waif in the gutter that he cannot join in this cry; a dog can whine it! The lonely One of Calvary never for a moment forgets His mission. Every little one may understand His last word. The very need of His suffering flesh rings out as His message for the centuries. The same hand that created a tongue to cleave to the jaws by thirst has turned it into the sweetest message ever read by true hearts and sincere lives.

If one look for a sign of the divine nature of this Man let him go back and mark how carefully He has prepared for this His last will and testament before the cross has forced it from His lips. He has set forth the final judgment when He in His glory is to return to earth, not desolate and alone, but with all the holy angels and the crowd of earth around Him. The whole scene is now reversed and the desolate One has the companionship of heaven and the fakirs of religion tremble in the solitude of fears.

His last words on earth were heard by a poor mercenary of the Roman Emperor, hired to stand at the cross until the end. This poor soldier had taken a sponge and dipped it in his vessel of wine and touched it to the lips of the crucified One. Poor fellow, he little knew how in coming centuries men would envy him this simple act of a completely human heart.

This mere impulse of a sweet human nature had marked the brink of a gulf between God and man, and on the other side, separated by centuries, stands the One who had thirsted. Across the gulf comes the long deferred answer of the Son of God, "I was thirsty and ye gave me drink." Between the Roman soldier and the Son of Man is the crowd in the gulf (we are in it), crying, "When were you thirsty and when did we give you drink?" And then the tender and fearful answer comes, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

As you would love me had I taken your little child, lost and desolate, thirsting and hungry, and given it drink and food and care, so now the Son of God declares that as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto Him. How supremely simple—you would do the same to me as God would do unto you.

But pause a bit. What does Christ mean by the "least"? Least is a relative word. You may despise a man for his poverty and I may admire him for his genius; he may be your least, while to me he is great.

We fill the picture of the judgment before Christ with some poor tramp to whom we have shown some cheap bit of kindness while we have overlooked the real import of the words. Perhaps our "least" rode by us in a carriage, wearing royal robes, being least to us because of our animosity, envy or hatred; because he had done us injury, had taken from us the world's praise we thought to be our right, while we at great expense had assuaged his thirst, for all men have their hours of deep solitude and anguish of spirit and any one of us may act the part of the Roman soldier.—W. Everett Johnson, Rector Church of the Redeemer, New York.

DR. WARD AFFECTED.

Former Assailant Wept At Sight of Beecher Portrait.

The New York Herald of April 12, says: Dr. William Hayes Ward, editor of The Independent, who thirty years ago was attacking Henry Ward Beecher in his paper, wept convulsively before a portrait of the great preacher in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, in the presence of one hundred ministers.

It was the first meeting of the Manhattan-Brooklyn Association of Congregational Ministers held in Plymouth Church, since the death of Mr. Beecher, who withdrew from that body while charges were pending against him. Dr. Henry A. Stimson, pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church, made a touching allusion to Mr. Beecher and to the troubles that led to his withdrawal from the association.

Dr. Stimson's eyes fell on a picture of Mr. Beecher. He pointed to it, and referred feelingly to the attacks on so noble a man. Dr. Ward's frame trembled and, covering his face with his hands, he wept bitterly. Then he left his seat by Dr. Stimson's side and departed.

Press Censorship Run Mad.

The press censor in St. Petersburg refuses to permit the mention of astronomical research "because it tends to subvert traditional belief." He has also had all reference to Hamlet's weakness and indecision excised from the play on the ground that it is "improper language about a Prince of Denmark," and Russia is on friendly terms with the court of Denmark.

How This Smith Got a Name.

A negro who was sent to prison charged by his bride with nonsupport gave his name as Extra Smith.

He explained that there were so many Smiths in Virginia that when he appeared no name was left for him, so he was christened "Extra."

The Woman Who Nags.

There is the woman who nags, and many do without being conscious of it. She is often perfectly well bred in all other respects, but she loves her husband so that she can't help but pry him with questions. The whys and wheres and whens and "I told you so" become a daily routine which exhausts the patience of the best of men. A wise wife should remember that when a thing has once been talked over and thrashed out it is good form at least to let it alone. If it is a fault that must be cured or a habit endured she should remember that men folk are often like Bopeep's lost sheep—"if you let 'em alone they will come home," etc. Constant reference to a fault or a mannerism is the cause of more marital infelicity than the average wife dreams of.

Good manners are happy ways of doing things, and good sense, cheerfulness and tact should guide every woman who bears the honor and dignity of wifehood toward the channel of these happy ways.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOOD HEALTH AND SUCCESS

Go Hand in Hand When the Blood is Kept Pure and Rich By

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Red blood means health, strength, courage, cheerfulness, power of endurance and a well-nourished brain that likes to accomplish things.

The secret of health is, after all, in the blood, for with an abundance of rich, red blood the nervous system is nourished and sustained, the lungs, heart, stomach, liver and kidneys are filled with the vigor and energy necessary to accomplish their work, and there is no room for weakness and disease.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up, strengthens and invigorates the whole human body because it actually forms rich, red blood.

Indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous headache, irritability, nervousness, would droop over them and Reine would turn confusedly away.

lack of energy and strength and failure of the bodily organs to perform their functions are almost invariably the result of poor, weak, watery blood.

The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food completely overcomes these symptoms and by filling the whole system with new vigor gives new hope and confidence and replaces weakness and disease with health and strength.

Mrs. George Fuller, Lakeland, Man., writes: "I am very glad to be able to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It has cured me of nervous headache from which I used to be a great sufferer, and I am no longer troubled with twitching of the nerves in the arms and legs that I used to have as soon as I went to bed. I am grateful for this cure and shall always recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

A Serious Charge.

Victoria, B.C.—The merchant service guild of Canada, embracing a majority of the leading shipmasters of British Columbia, has addressed a communication to the minister of marine with respect to the action of one Bonser, late master of the Ss. Haselton, operating upon the Skeena river, B.C., whom Captain Johnson, of the Ss. Mount Royal, charges with having deliberately and with malice ran his vessel into the Mount Royal for the purpose of inflicting injury. Captain Johnson claims that he will be able to establish by reputable witnesses as follows: 1—That Bonser threatened hostilities before the act; 2—That he boasted of his achievement after the act; 3—That he purposely ran out of his course to ram the Mount Royal; 4—That Bonser rammed the Ss. Ramona on the Fraser in the same wanton manner; 5—That he suggested to a member of the crew the tampering with an aid to navigation so as to bring to grief a rival boat. The guild has asked that a commission be appointed to examine into the matter and if these charges be sustained, or any of them, that Bonser's certificate be cancelled.

Cured his Backache of Twenty-five Years Standing and Satisfied Everyone he Recommended them to.

Economy Point, N. S., May 15—(Special)—Geo. S. McLaughlin, of this place, gives two splendid reasons for his belief that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one remedy for Kidney ailments. Here are the two reasons in his own words:

"I was troubled with lame back for 25 years or more, sometimes so severe that I could not turn myself in bed. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, and I have had no return of the trouble since.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to a number of persons who had Kidney Trouble. All who have used them have been benefited or cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills not only relieve all Kidney Diseases, from Backache to Bright's Disease, but they absolutely cure them. But sometimes where one or two boxes relieves it takes more to make a complete cure.

A Prescription.

Doctor—I don't think it is anything very serious, but you will have to stay in bed at least two weeks. Patient—Say, doctor, do you know that this is a four dollar a day hotel? Doctor—Yes I'm a friend of the proprietor.

In His Turn.

Willie—Engaged to Jack? Then you won't marry Harry, after all? Eunice—Not after all, but maybe after Jack.

Women and Water.

"If nervous women would only drink more water they would not be so nervous," remarked a trained nurse the other day. "Nearly every physician will recommend a woman who is suffering from nervous prostration or nervous exhaustion to drink lots of water between meals, but many women who do not come under a doctor's care would feel better and look better if they would drink, say, a quart of water in the course of the day. Water seems to be a nerve food, like good butter. It has a distinctly soothing effect when sipped gradually, as one can test for herself. I am not enough of a scientist to be able to tell you the reasons why it does this, but water sipped slowly and gradually has somewhat the same quieting effect as deep breathing."

WESTERN CANADIAN EDITORS

A Series of Articles Describing their Lives, their Aims and Their Influence.

No. 33.

W. J. HUNTER

W. J. HUNTER

Editor and Proprietor of the Reporter, Fort Saskatchewan, N.W.T.

In this series of sketches of western editors reference has often been made to the fact that among the most influential and prominent of the journalists of Western Canada are those who have served in every department of the mechanical side of a newspaper's production. Nearly all the editors in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories are "graduates of the case." For this there are good and sufficient reasons. Closely conclated to the country newspaper is the job department. In fact, only in Winnipeg, Brandon and perhaps one or two other towns in the entire northwest, can job printing offices, pure and simple be found. Elsewhere all job printing is done by the local papers, and the work devides the week with that of printing and publishing the paper. The day next following "press day" is usually given up to distributing, the next two—often three—are devoted to job work, and two or three days, as the case may be, are devoted to setting the news for the ensuing paper. This is the regular routine of the week's work in the great majority of Western Canadian weekly papers, though, in concerns published in large enough places, the job department, though part of the newspaper, employs a staff for that exclusive purpose, and is operated all the week.

It will thus be seen that Western Canadian journalism puts a premium on the mechanical side of the business of getting out a newspaper. There is not enough writing to do to occupy the whole of any man's time. Indeed, many local papers do not set more than four or five galleys of matter a week, including country correspondence, local news and editorial. Very seldom is this set in any smaller face than 8 point, and often the matter is set in 10 point. The securing and writing of this copy could be done by a good reporter in a day, and for the balance of the week the recorder of local news and views, should he occupy himself solely with the writing of the matter his paper prints from week to week, would be a gentleman of leisure. This accounts for the fact that so small a proportion of Western editors are newspaper men, in the sense that the term is understood in cities. It accounts also for the big preponderance of mechanically trained men in the business as it is conducted in the west. The printer with sufficient knowledge to write, if not with grace, with intelligibility, is a much greater asset to the country office than the mere stringer together of phrases, or the man who can discuss with lucidity and learning the most abstruse problems of government. The intelligent printer-editor is of value every minute of the week, while the mere writer is of use for only twenty per cent. of his time around a country newspaper office. The printer-editor can look after his own makeup, lay out his advertisements in the most attractive form, save material, save time, reduce expense, and in dozens of ways increase the efficiency and enhance the appearance of his paper, and in addition give the job department all the advantages of personal and practical supervision. Hence it is no wonder that many a careful and ambitious journeyman sets before his mind, as the goal of his desire, the aim of one day being the editor and proprietor of a paper of his own; nor is it any wonder that in the Canadian West, the land of opportunity for printers as well as farmers, such aims are frequently realized. The number of newspaper proprietors who are practical printers is the completest proof of the fact.

Of such a class Mr. W. J. Hunter, the editor and proprietor of the Saskatchewan Reporter, is a typical instance. He has been in the west for nearly twenty years, having come to Manitoba as a boy in 1878. His parents settled at Emerson, and there, when school days were over, and the boy had to select his life work, he decided to learn the printing business. He served as devil on the Emerson International, subsequently moving to Portage la Prairie, sticking type on the newspapers of that place. In 1893 he went west to Edmonton, and for ten years remained on the staff of the Bulletin, the paper owned by Hon. Frank Oliver. In the course of the rapid growth of the Bulletin in recent years, Mr. Hunter acquired a very valuable journalistic experience, which promises to stand him in good stead now that he is in business for himself. Last year he saw an opportunity of establishing a new paper. The country to the east of Edmonton was rapidly filling up, and the influx of immigration was building up the old trapper fort, Fort Saskatchewan, until it had prospects of being a good commercial and agricultural centre. So Mr. Hunter bought a plant and set to work to publish the Fort Saskatchewan Reporter. Its success has more than justified his enterprise. Already it has become a newspaper of more than ordinary influence. Its circulation is each week increasing, its advertising patronage is becoming correspondingly important, and its comments on local and general events are each week looked forward to with interest by its ever widening circle of readers.

Mr. Hunter's success is well deserved. It is but the replica of many another such story of energy and faith that the people of the West feel in their country. As the days go by, and the West becomes more populous and more productive, it is but reasonable to believe that the Reporter will occupy a more important place in the minds of the people among whom it circulates, and that its editor will hold a more important place than he at present occupies in the estimation of the residents of Northern Alberta.

Poor, Watery Blood.

THE CAUSE OF PIMPLES AND ALL DISFIGURING ERUPTIONS—DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS THE ONLY CURE.

Poor, watery blood—pale blood—is the cause of every pale complexion. Bad blood—blood filled with poisonous impurities—is the cause of every bad complexion. Bad blood is responsible for eruptions, and pimples, and torturing, burning, itching eczema. These troubles can only be cured through the blood, and the only medicine that actually makes new blood—rich, pure health giving blood—is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The new blood which these pills make reaches every organ and part of the body. It clears the complexion, banishes pimples and eruptions, and brings health, strength and happiness. Miss Lizzie Lobsinger, Carlsruhe, Ont., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the best medicine I know of for cleaning the blood of impurities. My blood was in a bad condition, and as a result I was not only weak and run down, but was troubled with pimples and eruptions. I tried several medicines, but they did not help me. Then I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and these soon relieved me of all my troubles. I can recommend the pills to anyone suffering from bad blood."

Bad blood is the cause of nearly every disease that afflicts humanity. It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich red blood that they cure such troubles as anaemia, heart palpitation, headaches and backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles and all ments of girlhood and womanhood. But you must get the genuine pills with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale Peiple," on the wrapper around each box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Patroness—"I've decided to patronize your store," she said, condescendingly; "everybody says you keep such pure drugs and all that." "Yes, madame," replied the new druggist, "we are particularly careful to supply only the best. What can I do for you, madame?" "Give me a two-cent stamp please."

A well known suburbanite who had been greatly troubled by the depredations of a neighbor's goat was driven to desperation one day when he learned that the animal had consumed a favorite red flannel golf coat of his. Determined on the goat's destruction, he employed an unscrupulous small boy who lived in the neighborhood to secure him to the railroad track just before the daily express was due. Some days afterward a friend inquired with interest if the goat had been effectually disposed of. "Not on your life," was the disgusting answer; "that goat has a charmed life. He coughed up that red golf coat of mine and flagged the train."

BRIGHT'S DISEASE—INSIDIOUS! DECEPTIVE! RELENTLESS! has foiled hundreds of trials by medical science to stem the tide of its ravages—and not until South American Kidney Cure proved beyond a doubt its power to turn back the tide, was there a gleam of anything but despair for the victim of this dread form of kidney disease.—54

John Barber of the Pittsburg Stock Exchange tells of a hustling young solicitor for a New York publishing house. The youth was vainly trying to sell a set of books to a Philadelphia bank cashier, and at last got so excited he accused the cashier of being slower than molasses in January. "You people here can't even eat snails!" he said. "Why not?" asked the cashier. "You can't catch them."

Mrs. Talker—It must be awfully hard work thinking up bright things to write all the time. Scribbler—Well, it is; but the hardest part is getting editors to think that they are bright after they are written.

President William J. Tucker of Dartmouth College tells the following story on himself: Some years ago he passed several weeks in a Maine country town. The next season he received a letter from his boarding mistress asking him to return. In reply he stated he should be glad to pass another summer vacation with her, but should require some changes. "First," said the college president, "your maid is persona non grata. Secondly, I think the sanitary conditions would be improved about your house if the pigsty could be moved a little farther from the house." President Tucker was reassured when he received the following in reply: "Mary has went. We hain't had no hogs since you were here last summer. Be sure and come."

They Never Knew Failure.—Careful observation of the effects of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills has shown that they act immediately on the diseased organs of the system and stimulate them to healthy action. There may be cases in which the disease has been long seated and does not easily yield to medicine, but even in such cases these Pills have been known to bring relief when all other so-called remedies have failed. These assertions can be substantiated by many who have used the Pills, and medical men speak highly of their qualities.

"You are beautiful enough to be wooed by an Emperor." "Am I beautiful enough to be wooed by a Duke?" "Yes, indeed; but not rich enough."

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house.

A short time ago some men were engaged in putting up telegraph poles on some land belonging to an old farmer who disliked seeing his wheat trampled down, according to the veracious "Register," of Great Bend, Kan. The men produced a paper by which they said they had leave to put the poles where they pleased. The old farmer went back and turned a large bull in the field. The savage beast made after the men, and the old farmer, seeing them running from the field, shouted at the top of his voice: "Show him the paper! Show him the paper."

A Purely Vegetable Pill.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are compounded from roots, herbs and solid extracts of known virtue in the treatment of liver and kidney complaints and in giving tone to the system whether enfeebled by overwork or deranged through excesses in living. They require no testimonial. Their excellent qualities are well known to all those who have used them and they commend themselves to dyspeptics and those subject to biliousness who are in quest of a beneficial medicine.

'Tis Well to Know a Good Thing, said Mrs. Surface to Mrs. Knowwell, when they met in the street. "Why, where have you been for a week back?" "Oh, just down to the store for a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil," and Mrs. Surface, who hates puns, walked on. But she remembered, and when she contracted a weak back there was another customer for Eclectric Oil.

"Look here, butcher, this meat is half bone." "You are mistaken, sir. That is good meat." "Botheration! Do you suppose I don't know bone when I see it? I say this is bone!" "Yes, certainly, that's bone. The bone is bone, but the meat isn't. You said the meat was half bone."

Time tries all things, and as Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup has stood the test of years it now ranks as a leading specific in the treatment of all ailments of the throat and lungs. It will soften and subdue the most stubborn cough by relieving the irritation, and restore the effected organs to healthy conditions. Use will show its value. Try it and be convinced of its efficacy.

If a man's wife is a good baker, nothing

but the best flour is good enough for her. There can be no greater extravagance than the use of inferior flour.

Winchester Springs, Feb. 27th, 05.

"I read about Royal Household Flour which is purified by electricity. I also read about the woman paying freight 25 miles before she would be without it. Royal Household was not sold in our town, I was asking about it and my grocer told me to wait a day or two and he would get some, and I am glad I did so. My wife is a good baker and made good bread out of other flours, but what she has now made out of Royal Household is so far ahead that I would be willing to pay freight fifty miles instead of twenty-five, rather than go without it. There is no flour 'just as good' as Royal Household."

(Signed) JOHN HENDERSON.

Now, is there a single woman in the whole country who, after reading what Mr. Henderson says, will not at once send for the Royal Household recipes and give Royal Household Flour a trial. Mention this paper and address

THE STOMACH'S "WEAL OR WOE!"—The stomach is the centre from which the standpoint of health, flows "weal or woe." Little Tommy, aged six, one day found four little kittens in the cellar. His aunt came to pay him a visit, and being told of them, expressed a desire to see them. "No, mamma," said Tommy, "I'm carrying them very carefully by their stems."

MAY & JUNE

are the Best Months to Make Money Raising Chickens

Chicks hatched then grow more rapidly and require less care than at any time of year, and the knack of running the business successfully is acquired under the most favorable circumstances.

One good May or June hatching will bring out a brood of chicks that sell about October 1st for enough to pay for an Incubator and another batch can then be started that will get the chicks out in time for the Christmas market. The next batch will be ready for the March and April market, "broilers" commanding the very highest market prices.

A good Incubator is the foundation of real success in poultry raising, bringing the whole matter from guesswork to certainty. We furnish you with a on easy terms. No cash to pay until November, 1905. By that time it should have paid for itself.

Nothing else raised on a farm pays like this, and the beauty of it all is that the women folks or children can easily attend to the very small amount of work there is to be done. Half an hour or so a day is all the time required.

Getting the right Incubator is pretty nearly the whole thing. The Chatham is the safest and surest Incubator made. It does the trick; 100 per cent. hatches every time if the eggs are fertile. Rather than go into details of construction here, we will print a few out of many hundreds of testimonials:

Brighton, Ont., April 15th, 1905.

The Manson Campbell Co.,
Chatham, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I told you when I received my Incubator and Brooder that I would let you know what success I had with my first batch. When the Incubator arrived I went and got eggs to put in it, and as I was anxious to get it started I took all the eggs I could from the party, and he had only enough so I could not pick them over. There were some small ones and some long and narrow, and as I afterwards found out he was keeping twenty-seven hens with one cockrel, so they did not look very good on the start. I put fifty-six eggs into the Incubator and followed the instructions closely, and I got fifty chicks, two having died in the shell, which I think is first-class. They are all strong and lively. I am sorry I did not order the 100 size instead of the 50. I have it now filled with sixty white Wyandots eggs I wish you could tell me where I could get a good poultry paper, something that would suit a beginner.

Yours truly,
R. H. BARAGER,
Brighton, Ont.
Box 234.

P.S.—I would rather attend to an Incubator than one hen now. There is some satisfaction in knowing that if you look after them you will get chicks.

Valens, Ont., April 15th, 1905.

The Manson Campbell Co.,
Chatham, Ont.

Dear Sir,—The incubator that we purchased from you on the 18th Jan. last is certainly a dandy. Out of a No. 2 incubator with 85 fertile eggs I got 76 chickens, and they are all strong and healthy. I used 1½ gallons of oil. I think there is no better incubator in the world.

Yours truly,
MRS. JOHN ROBSON,
Valens P.O., Ont.

MANSON CAMPBELL

We have similar letters from every State in the United States, and every Province in the Dominion.

Every Incubator we put out is the best kind of advertising we do, for it sells many others for us by its never-failing results.

The Chatham is built on honor, and its construction and workmanship are as perfect as an experience of fifty years and ample capital can make them.

The Chatham was the first Incubator made that was good enough to admit of its makers taking chances that it would make its cost for the poultryman before it was paid for.

Don't imagine for a moment that it is any longer possible to make big poultry profits by setting hens. As hatchers hens are as out of date as stone hatchets.

If these erratic, uncertain birds are kept busy egg-laying instead of wasting their time setting, the poultryman will pocket a good many extra dollars in profit.

If you want to get full particulars on the subject and learn all the details of successful Incubator hatching and profitable poultry raising send to-day for our superbly printed book, "How to Make Money Out of Chicks." It's FREE.

THE CROPS.

Mr. Faas, of Elkwater tells us that rye on Snell & Wilson's ranch is five feet high and all other crops are good in proportion.

Mr. L. B. Cochran yesterday showed us some well grown Alfalfa and Macaroni wheat from Irvine district. The latter was three feet one inch in length.

A NOTE OF WARNING.

That notoriously evil weed, French weed, or more commonly known as "stink weed" has probably got a foot hold in some places in this locality.

It is a rank grower, crowding out the grain, and it's worst propensity is in continuing to blossom on the same branch from which it is scattering ripened seed. It matures its seed very early and is decidedly a dangerous plant. It has a broad flat pod usually mixed in with fresh blossoms. If you see it crush it as you would a viper. The foul smell when handling it will be your best guide in detecting it. No operator of a threshing rig who has any respect for himself will allow grain infected with it to pass through his machine. Go after it farmers if you value the sanctity of your farms.

A sample of it can be seen at the Times office, at Harlow & Co's., at the Land office and other prominent places.

Remember if you have the weed and will not destroy it you need not be surprised if somebody is sent to do it at your expense. Be warned in time.

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

To the Editor, Sir,

If the "goings-on" of Mayor Forster in Ottawa are correctly reported, the atmosphere of the House of Commons must have affected him. The late Minister of the Cabinet from the west was never more inconsistent. From the interview alluded to our worthy Mayor first declines to say anything as to the antonomy bills because of a certain telegram sent to London at a particular period in that City's history. Now whether the interview was long or short before the end of it Mr. Forster had forgotten the telegram and its dire effects and like other people with big heads spoke for the N-West Territories. Verily has our gas travelled far and the interviewed one had a magnificient supply To come down to actual facts the telegram stated the deputation would discuss Autonomy and Forster discussed the question, making the usual mis-statements and glossing over the effect of the School Question.

CITIZEN.

Dear Sir,

Mayor Forster, in an interview at Ottawa was asked what about the educational clause in the Autonomy Bill and said "We did not come to discuss the Autonomy Bill in any phase, we are the deputation so loudly proclaimed in the London camp. I would prefer not to speak about it for that reason. I may say that the people are quite satisfied".

Does this mean that but for the telegram sent to London he would have had something to say about the Autonomy Bill, or does he mean he is sorry he had to wire Mr. W. Scott, M.P., "Telegram wholly wrong". It's up to the Mayor to explain and ask someone's patdon.

A MEMORIAL.

To perpetuate the memory and work of the late Archbishop Machray it is proposed to build a College near the University of Manitoba. A new Church College is badly needed as the old College is required for the boys school. The Diocese and the whole Western Church are asked to help provide the necessary funds. $100,000 is required and all friends are asked to contribute. The Rev. Clement Williams, Moosomin, will preach in St. Barnabas Church next Sunday in support of the above.

TERRITORIAL CROPS.

Is This Acreage Correct for Medicine Hat?

We have received from the Department of Agriculture an estimate of the Territorial crop acreage for 1905, which we print below. The figures for spring sown wheat in Medicine Hat district are, however, so much below the Local estimate that we are induced to ask if some error clerical or otherwise has been made?

The report gives only 700 acres for "Crane Lake, Maple Creek and Medicine Hat." We have it upon the authority of one of our leading farmers that there are 2,000 acres of crop, including 1,500 acres of wheat within six miles of Medicine Hat town, (wheat growing is in its infancy here yet), and then what about the German settlement at Josephsburg?

Again barley is estimated in the report at 50 acres. Why one farm 2½ miles from town contains a field of 100 acres of barley!

We incline to the opinion that there are at least 10,000 acres of crop in the district referred to and more than half of it would be wheat.

FALL WHEAT.

We are glad to learn that arrangements have been completed whereby the farmers of this district will be able to obtain thoroughly reliable winter wheat seed for sowing in the coming July and August.

The variety is the Turkey Red and was introduced three years ago by Mr. Thompson, of Spring Valley, in the Macleod district and has proved a complete success. It is a hard variety ranking as a first class milling wheat, and reaching its best perfection in Alberta.

The following letter has been handed to us and speaks for itself.

Calgary, June 23rd, 1905.

W. R. Babington Esq., Medicine Hat.

Dear Sir,

Referring to recent correspondence re winter wheat seed, we will have one car of 1,000 bushels of the Turkey Red variety stopped off at Medicine Hat. Will you kindly make this known to the farmers desiring seed and have them send in their application at once.

Each application must be accompanied by payment for the wheat ordered. The price is $1.31 per bushel and 10c. extra sacks, each sack contains 2 bushels. We will not have more than 1,000 bushels for Medicine Hat, and applications will be noted in order received. The wheat will be ready for delivery in the Medicine Hat district early in July. Applicants will receive due notice.

Yours truly,
W. TOOLE,
District Land Agent.

Reliable parties who may not be prepared to pay cash can probably make arrangements with Mr. Babington. Applications for wheat may be made to Mr. Babington, Mr. J. McLean C.P.R. agent, Harlow & Co., J. H. Binns.

The suitability of this district for fall wheat may be shown when we mention that many acres of spring wheat in this district was headed out on the 18th June. The chances are that fall wheat grown here would be even further advanced at the same time, and in all probability would be cut threshed and marketed in time to be sown the same season, something to which the foothills country cannot attain.

WHEAT HEADED OUT ON 18TH JUNE.

At least one field of wheat near Medicine Hat was headed out on the 18th inst. Now Manitoba, "where are you at."

The Alberta Star says that the Medicine Hat Times was "blowing off about wheat being 24 inches high" and at Cardston it was 32 inches." Well, Bro. Elton, spring wheat (spring wheat, mind), was headed here on the 18th June. How does SPRING wheat at Cardston compare. Please be careful as to dates, Brother Elton.

CATTLE SITUATION IN ONTARIO.

Toronto June 21.—The unprofitable condition of the British market for cattle has caused a demoralized tone in the Canadian markets, says The World. Canadian exports have found the business disastrous during the last few weeks, and exporters and drovers have lost considerable money. Especially low have been the prices paid for the commoner grades of export cattle. Last week some sold at Liverpool as low as 9c and few reached higher than 11¼c. and the best steers at 16c. This was the record year for two decades, and since this time the trend of prices has been downward. An improvement in the British markets would be immediately felt here, but as the industrial situation there still continues dull it is not expected that there will be an immediate change. Cattle were difficult of sale at the local markets this week, and it is to be expected that buyers will hold off until the outlook shows improvement. The heavy losses sustained by drovers the last few weeks will make them exceedingly cautious for the present.

SEARCHING FOR A BROTHER.

AN OLD EMIGRANT'S LONELY DEATH IN BURY.

(From the Daily Mail Overseas edition June 2nd.)

Mr. F. S. Butcher, County Coroner, held an inquest at Bury on the body of John Culley, aged about 70 years who was found dead under somewhat peculiar circumstances at 19 Kay-Street, Freetown, Bury last Friday.

Mr. D. Makin, house agent, said that he let 19 Kay-street to Cully in July, 1902. Culley told him that he left Ireland about 40 years ago for America, and was now searching for his brother Thomas, whom he had not seen since he left. He often paid his rent in advance, and went up and down the country looking for his brother. He had visited workhouses asylums, and police courts, but apparently to no purpose. The witness had reason to believe that Culley had between £400 and £500.

Police Constable Finn, who searched the house, said he found the body lying on the bedroom floor, and near were 15s. in silver. On the bed there was a fully loaded five-chambered revolver and a peculiar-looking pistol, and in the man's pocket a clasp-knife. All the doors in the house were fitted with chains and bars and old-fashioned padlocks. Under a flag down stairs the witness found a box containing £129, mostly in gold.

Dr. Mitchell, who had made a post-mortem examination on the body, said that death was due to heart disease. There were no signs of poisoning. He thought the man had been dead a week.

The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

There was a young man asked to a Church meeting, whose clothes were were very soiled and shabby. His excuse for not going was that he had no fit clothes. But, answered the Evangelist, I know that a short time ago you had a first-class suit suitable for any company. Where is that?

When pressed for an explanation the young man answered: I am ashamed to tell you, but to tell you the truth, Hopkins the saloon keeper has my best clothes in pawn for a treat I gave the boys of the club.

Yet the sadness comes in when we think that a young man brought up in a good home and from good parents could think so little of his own reputation as to sell his best clothes for the sake of being a good fellow with men who would drink up even his good clothes.

Then let us also remember God's word that warns us to know that for all those things God will bring thee into judgement. For are we not warned all through the good book of everlasting life. "Be not deceived God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

A PRETTY JUNE WEDDING.

A pleasing event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hewitt on Friday of last week, when their daughter Ida was united in marriage to Mr. George Wheelan of Medicine Hat, N. W. T. The ceremony was performed at 1.30 p.m. by Rev. Mr. Teeple of the Methodist Church in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. After a sumptuous wedding dinner the happy couple left on the five o'clock train for their new home in the west. Miss Hewitt was popular among a wide circle of young people in and about Plattsville and her many friends wish her a happy and prosperous life. The Echo extends congratulations.—Plattsville Echo.

DOMINION FAIR.

INDIANS FROM ALL OVER.

Thousands of Redskins Will Journey to the Dominion Fair.

Through various Indian agents and missionaries representative of nearly all the British Columbia tribes, the fact that the Dominion fair is to be held in New Westminster this year, has become widely advertised among the Indians of the province and the presence of thousands of them on the banks of the Fraser during the great national exhibition is already assured.

The fair management has set aside $2500 for prizes for Indian exhibits and sports and there promises to be something doing in lively fashion among the redskins every day of the big fair. The sports will include all sorts of canoe races on the river, foot and horse races and tug of war on land in which the females as well as the males will participate.

Ten Indian bands have already entered the musical competition.

The braves and their wives and families from the most remote parts of the province will also come to New Westminster by their own primitive modes of conveyance and to some of them this means perilous trips by water that cannot be made in less than about two months.

While here the Indians will be guests of the government and the management of the fair.

MONEY FOR THE ROADS IN THE NORTHWEST.

Twenty five thousand dollars for the colonization of roads in the northwest was granted in supply. The debate on the bill goes on Tuesday. John Heron, of Strathcona, said that if the Northwest government owned the lands, the Federal government would not have to make any expenditure to build roads.

WINNIPEG INDUSTRIAL.

The following are the days which have been arranged for the Winnipeg Industrial this year:

Thursday July 20.—Preparation Day.
Friday July 21.—Opening and Children's Day.
Saturday July 22.—Ladies' Day.
Monday July 24.—Farmers' Day.
Tuesday July 25.—Americans' Day.
Wednesday July 26.—Citizens' Day.
Thursday, July 27.—Industrial Day.

Intending exhibitors in the industrial section at the forthcoming Winnipeg Fair are requested to make their applications, for space not later than June 24th, after which date allotments will be made by the committee.

The poster in connection with the Winnipeg Industrial exhibition has now been issued. It is very handsome in design, representing Mercury the messenger of the gods, inviting the people from far and near to visit the city of Winnipeg which is seen in the background. A copy will be sent to anyone who might be desireus of exhibiting same.

Applications for space are still being received at the offices of the Winnipeg exhibition in large numbers and it is confidently anticipated that the industrial section of the exhibition will be as large as was the case last year when the Dominion Exhibition was held in the city.

Winnipeg is a centre readily accessible, being as it is the gateway of the Great West and people from all parts can visit the Fair at great convenience and little cost. The railways will again provide low passenger rates and cheap excursions from all points in the Province, and no doubt greater numbers than usual will avail themselves of the opportunities afforded.

The people of Western Canada have now come to recognize the Winnipeg Industrial as an occasion for their annual outing, knowing that in the great growth of the Fair there is always much that is entirely new and a great deal that is vastly improved, and the present year will demonstrate these facts to a greater degree than in years past, because of the new features and new attractions that has never been before presented.

HAVE COME TO CANADA.

The census to be issued by the State of Iowa, next month, will show a decrease of 75000 in that States population. There is a decrease in every county except one. Nearly all have come to Canada.

The transcontinental train for the West on Sunday night was in two sections.

Mr. McDermott, of the Calgary Herald, and the Trades Gazette, was in town several days last week, hustling business.

A CLEAN MAN.

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues and fibers in every organ of the body. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh. It doesn't make the flabby fat of corpulency, but the firm flesh of health.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol to inebriate or create craving for injurious stimulants.

Mr. John L. Coughenour, of Glen Savage, Somerset Co., Pa., writes: "My appetite was unusually poor, and I was as weak and nervous as though I had been slowed for months. My heart kept throbbing continually and I was short of breath. Finally I wrote to you for advice and you informed me that I had indigestion and a torpid liver. I did not think your diagnosis was right, but I ordered six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' from you and began its use. After using three bottles I began to improve slowly and soon went to work, and I have been working ever since."

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe.

FIRE SIGNAL.

Coun. DesBrisay stated that the Fire, Water and Light Committee wished to report that the two siren fire whistles were now in good working order. One long whistle signified "fire"

The Council adopted the report and approved of a minute being made as to the fire alarm.

ATHLETIC GROUNDS.

A letter was read from Fred S. Pingle offering five acres of the Cousins property for an athletic ground at $300 per acre. This was a portion of the large block of land previously offered.

The letter was referred to the Special Parks Committee for report.

Coun. Stewart—What kind of a report do you want. Do you think of buying more land?

Coun. Sissons—When the Council were in committee of the whole, it was intended on the third reading of the by-law to insert sufficient to purchase five acres and also an amount to purchase land for a market square.

Coun. Stewart said he did not understand it that way, as he thought it was only a park and market that were mentioned, but the Council had better tell the committee if they wish to purchase any more for athletic grounds.

Coun. DesBrisay said it was talked over that we might buy more.

Coun. Stewart—It was talked over and that was all.

Coun. Drinnan thought it would be a very good thing to buy more, and the piece now offered could be put into shape soon. He did not think it would be wise to hurry things on the other piece. It would be wise to take a couple of years to get it into shape. In the meantime this other piece would be available for athletic purposes.

Coun. Sissons—The idea I had in referring it back was that we could go into the whole matter and consider the price. The whole piece was at $250 per acre. At that price we might be induced to buy.

Coun. Stewart—We are getting rid of money very fast this year, perhaps a little too fast. I believe the land will be always worth the money though.

Coun. Drinnan—That is so, we are spending a lot of money, but the town is growing and we want to have breathing places, and I am in favor of having more than one. Nearly all cities are going in for small parks scattered over the city rather than one big one. I would be in favor of buying another five acres and also a piece for a park on the hill. This five acres will be a small thing, only $1500 if we give $300 per acre. The other piece is 28 acres and means of course more money. The whole thing would make about $7,000.

The matter then dropped.

SEWERAGE.

The Council considered briefly the situation re the proposed sewerage by-law, and decided to let the matter stand until next meeting.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Coun. Sissons gave notice of a motion re scavinging and another re granolithic side walks.

MARKET SQUARE.

It was decided to take up the matter of a market square at the next meeting.

PRICE OF GAS.

Coun. Stewart asked if it was the intention of the Council to reduce the price of gas to the winter rate all the year round. Some people understood the Council had decided to do so.

Coun. DesBrisay remarked that they almost decided it but some thought the gas at 32½ cents per thousand with the reduction of five cents per thousand for payment within ten days was low enough and there was more money in it for the Council at the higher price. (Lghtr)

Coun. Stewart—no doubt.

Coun. DesBrisay—There was another leak at my store the other day, but I paid up without a murmur.

Coun. Stewart—You were wise.

Coun. DesBrisay (to the press)—You are not putting all this down are you?

The Press Gallery (in chorus)—Sure thing.

PAY UP OR BE CUT OFF.

Coun. Sissons asked if any water or gas consumers were in arrears.

The Clerk—There are a few.

Coun. Sissons—Are they very much in arrears?

The Clerk—One or two are, but Mr. Porter knows more about them than I do.

Mr. Porter mentioned some cases.

Coun. Drinnan—There is only one way to deal with it. Treat all alike and cut off those who fall into arrears. It is not fair to those who pay to allow those others to fall into arrears.

Itwas decided that the by-law be adhered to and all in arrears who do not pay soon will be cut off the water and gas system.

PLANS OF TOWN.

Coun. Drinnan, as chairman of Public Works, brought up plans of the town including profiles showing levels of streets on South side of track, with the exception of New Edinburgh, prepared by Mr. L. C. Charlesworth. Mr. Drinnan said Mr. Charlesworth had done the work exceedingly well. New Edinburgh had not been included because it was agreed when that suburb was taken over that the people there were not to ask for any public improvements for two years. He was of the opinion that the Council should exercise judgement in the matter and if it should be deemed expedient to do anything before the expiration of that time they should do it. He, therefore, thought they had better have plans and profiles made. A great deal of trouble had been occasioned through not having these profiles before. Many people did not get the levels right. The only man who went right was Mr. McClennan who went to a great deal of trouble and got it.

Coun. DesBrisay—People say they did not get the right levels.

Coun. Drinnan—The levels are given for the centre of the streets and that is how some went wrong.

It was then agreed that profiles of the settled portion of New Edinburgh be prepared.

MUST TAKE THEIR OWN LEVELS.

The Town Clerk—Sometimes a man comes in here to see the profiles, but does not understand it, and wants someone to strike the levels for him. Who is to do it for him?

Coun. Drinnan—Himself.

That is what I have told them all, but most of them think the officials should do it. One got hot about it.

Coun. DesBrisay—Turn the hose on him.

It was then formallyresolved that the profiles of the streets and avenues on the south side as prepared by Mr. Charlesworth be accepted.

The meeting then adjourned.

SPECIAL MEETING.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Friday afternoon to receive the report re Carpenters Union application. Present: Acting-Mayor Drinnan, in the chair and Councillors Sissons, DesBrisay, Stewart and Smyth; and W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk.

Coun. Stewart stated that the special committee had interviewed the representatives of the Union on the previous day and they said they considered that as they were living here and paid taxes to the town they were entitled to certain privileges as to work over casual carpenters who came in with a kit of tools, worked a couple of weeks, took their pay and got out. That was their principal reason for asking the Council to insert the clause in the specifications for the new City Hall. They said they were a strong union and would guarantee that there would be sufficient hands to do the work.

Coun. DesBrisay—They also said it was customary in the east to insert a clause such as they were asking for.

Coun. Smyth—They also waited upon me and said every carpenter in the town except one was in the Union. They number 41 of whom 23 are ratepayers.

After some further conversation the Council decided not to accede to the request.

ISOLATION BUILDING.

Coun. Smyth stated that Chief Markwick had informed him that he had sold the lot upon which the small building used as an isolation hospital stood,but subject to the right of the Council to remove the building. If the Council were agreeable the buildingcould be moved on to the General Hospital grounds.

It was decided to leave the matter in Dr. Smyth's hands.

The Council adjourned.

MAINTAIN THE BALANCE.

Our statesmen should not labour to build up manufacturers alone to the detriment of those who produce raw material. A manufacturing country becomes a one sided nation lacking in vitality. The producers of raw material, the sturdy farmer and tiller of the soil has ever been and must be the backbone of every strong nation, and the protective tariff can do a great deal toward keeping a proper balance in this country between the farm and the factory. Only as that balance is intelligently maintained will that country be and remain great.—Minneapolis Journal.

TO DETERMNE WATER RIGHTS.

The meeting of members of the Milk River United Irrigation association held at Glasgow a few days ago, resulted in a decision that suits be brought against all parties claiming water rights in the Milk River valley, the suits to be instituted by the Harlem Ditch Company. The matter, after being discussed at some length, was decided by a vote of 28 to 12. As indicated by this vote, there was some opposition to the plan proposed by the federal authorities, and objections to other features of the enterprise were raised by a few of those present, but the action of the majority will govern the course of the association. A committee of five was appointed to confer with the interior department in Washington with reference to the features of water right claims that should be adjudicated.

During the meeting the membership of the association was increased by the enrollment of 65 applicants. It was decided by a majority vote to hold the next meeting of the association at Malta, upon call of President L. Newman.

Owing to sickness in the town of Pincher Creek, it has been decided to postpone the Race Meeting advertised for July 3rd. and 4th. 1905, to a date to be hereafter published.

THE WINNIPEG THEATRE.

Visitors to the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition will be pleased to know that Manager C. P. Walker, of the Winnipeg Theatre, has secured Pollard's Australian Lilliputian Opera Company for fair week. This is one of the most interesting and amusing attractions ever offered the public at any time, and should prove especially attractive during such a holiday season. These talented children give a performance that would put to blush many grown-up actors and singers. The company numbers about fifty bright children, who have been specially selected for their talents. The principals are Daphne Pollard,one of the cleverest comediennes on the stage, Teddie McNamara, Fred. Pollard, Leach Lechner, Eva Moore, May Martyn, Irene Findlay, Jack Pollard, Merle Pollard, Willie Thomas and the Pollard twins two tiny boys whose work is most laughable and remarkable considering their tender years. The repertoire of this company includes such high class royalty comic operas and musical comedies as "The Geisha," "The Belle of New York," "The Lady Slavey," "A runaway Girl," and "The Millionaire." All the pieces are perfectly staged in the matter of scenery and costumes, and the youngsters make up like veterans for their various roles.

Paris, June 24. For the first time since the the Fashoda incident the French people are in the throes of the war fever. Whether it will result in anything serious depends on Germany's response to the French note on Morocco, but without considering the exact status of the diplomatic negotiations, a large element of the public and press seriously discuss the possibility of a resort to arms.

While peace is being negotiated at Washington the contending armies will go on fighting in Manchuria. There is little hope of an armistice. The internal turmoil in Russia threatens to overshadow the war. The troops are shooting down people on the streets in Lodz, and the report says the "streets are running with blood".

THE ROSCIAN COMIC OPERA COMPANY.

The Telephone Girl which will be produced by the Roscians on their return engagement, Monday July 10 is described as a musical comedy. It is a skit on the aggravating telephone bureau, known to a long suffering public as Central. On the night of its production here the only aggravating circumstance will be the fact that the receiving end of each wire is not attached to the orchestra chairs. The "Central"switchboard will be run by a bevy of good-looking and jolly girls, two of whom are recent graduates from the New York Central telephone system. The first act shows the interior of a telephone exchange, the second is in the luxurious drawing room of a music hall divinity, where high jinks generally are indulged in. Comedy elements pervade the musical satire in a breezy sort of way from beginning to end. Mr. Cranston will mount the production lavishly and it safe to say that Claude Amsden, Alice Maud Pool, Hazel Davenport, Hillian Campbell, Frank Walters and the other favorites of this strong organisation will make the Telephone Girl a red letter performance. Subscribers can secure choice of seats Thursday July 6th. Regular sale opens July 7th. at Pingle's Drug Store.

ALBERTA'S EXCELLENT CROP PROSPECTS.

The Wheat, oats and barley yield of Alberta promises to exceed by at least thirty per cent. last year's crop. The increase in winter wheat acreage and the excellent progress that grain has made warrants the impression that this product will double last year's. Next year the chances are that winter wheat will be Alberta's chief staple.

Forster's weather forecast declares that July will be unprecedently hot all over the continent. He has been very accurate in his predictions this season. If he is correct in this estimate it will mean very satisfactory conditions for the farmers of Alberta.

MURDER CAUSED MUTINY.

The mutiny arose from the shooting of a sailor who was presenting in behalf of the crew a complaint against bad food. According to one version this sailor whose name was Omil Tchuk, objected to the quality of the soup and was immediately shot down by the mess officers. The crew then rose and seized the ship and officers, eight of whom were spared on condition that they would join the mutineers. The others were killed.

Odessa, June 28.—The crew of the battleship Kniatz Potemkine, in the roads has mutinied and murdered and murdered the officers. It is reported that the mutineers are threatening to bombard the town. All work at the port has been stopped.

WETASKIWIN IN A FLUTTER.

Coun. West, of Wetaskiin, brought in the celebrated chicken by-law on Thursday evening last and it received first, second and third reading and became law as By-law No. 63. By this law it is now an infraction of the Town Statutes to allow poultry of any kind to run at large between May 1st. and September 1st. There are now a number of penalties connected with the offence which will be sufficient to make the simple "hen" a subject of contention for years if the by-law is carried out properly. The main item however is that a fine of $1 is fixed for the first offence and $5 for the second offence.

PEACE ENVOY WILL CROSS CANADA.

The Japanese Peace Plenipotentiaries will embark on June 30th. on the Canadian Pacific S.S. "Empress of India" for Vancouver. They will be accommodated with special cars and will be conveyed through Canada with state honors. They will pass through Medicine Hat.

The Russian delegates will sail from Croonstadt, and are expected to reach Washington almost simultaneously with the Japanese representatives.

WINNIPEG FAIR.

As an example of the good which is being done by the Winnipeg fair, a member of an eastern firm called in at the offices of the association the other day and stated that the firm with which he was connected could trace $10,000worth of business to their exhidit at the Dominion Fair of 1904, and they would this year require double the space they had occupied at the last exhibition. Several firms have located in Winnipeg since then and admit that they received their first knowledge of the conditions of the Western trade and the opportunities which there exist through having exhibited at the Dominion Fair.

A BELLY RIVER MYSTERY.

Last Sunday afternoon, while strolling along the river bottom a half a mile above the slaughter house, Geo. Wildman and several friends made a discovery which may lead to the discovery of something more serious later on. They found a horse lodged in the bushes. The animal had a good saddle and bridle on and looked as if it had been in the water for several days and possibly a week. It was a fine dark bay horse branded C L B on the right shoulder and also had a oarlock brand on left hip. A slicker was tied to the back of the saddle, also a pair of boots, socks and spurs. The police were notified and Sergeant Dectective Goodwin took possession of the articles and cut the brand from the shoulder. The police have no word of anyone missing and developements are awaited.—Lethbridge News.

Clark, the Coleman negro who was charged with manslaughter, was sentenced to two years in Stoney Mountain penitentiary by judge Sifton at Macleod last week. Clark at Coleman, on April 18th. got into a row with a hotel man named Steele. During the fight, Clark got Steele's finger in his mouth, lacerating it badly. On April 26th Steele's arm became painful and blood-poisoning set in, and by May 2nd. his arm was amputated. About the middle of May Steele died.

ELEVATORS TO BE BUILT.

Messrs Davidson and Bisicker, two private bankers of Dakota have been making a tour of Alberta recently with a view to the establishment of a system of elevators. They purpose putting up twenty-five elevators and there are rumors to the effect that they have already selected locations in Northern Alberta for 14 of them and are now looking up suitable locations for the other 11 in the South.

We regret to chronicle the departure of Mr. C. C. Wright, the jeweler, who will leave here on Monday for Fernie. Mr. Wright has been a loyal patron of our advertising columns and has made a host of warm friends here. We understand that he will be engaged with the lacrosse team there, and this attraction is the main source of his leaving town.—Cardston Star. Mr. Wright intends opening a jewelry store in Fernie in the interests of his brother, Mr. A. R. Wright, of Lethbridge. They are both sons of Mr. A. M. Wright, of this town.

The Tonic of Health.

Must be more than a stimulant—be a food as well. There is one medicine that is both a food and a tonic—it aids digestion, promotes assimilation, converts food into nutriment that builds up nerves, blood brain and bone. That tonic is Ferrozone which contains exactly what a run-down system needs. Ferrozone supplies oxygen to purify the blood, phosphorous to develop the brain, iron to harden the muscles. No wonder it makes such vigorous men and women. You'll eat, sleep, think and feel better by using Ferrozone; try it—now. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty chocolated tablets, at all dealers.

Calgary will shortly have three very fine pipe organs, the total cost of which will be $15,000. Knox church organ was opened on Sunday. The new organ for the Central Methodist church has been shipped, and will require three weeks to erect after arriving. The order has also been given for the new instrument which is to be placed in the Church of England. It will be a large two manual.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

In my rambles round the country I often hear remarks about the Public Cemetery of Medicine Hat. From what I have been able to gather, the last resting place of our dear ones is not kept in what one would call good repair, True there are a few graves kept in respectable shape by friends but the general aspect of the ground is anything but a credit to the district. With headstones tumbled down, badger and gopher dens in the graves it is not a thing of beauty. And when we are driving our visiting friends around showthem the sights, if they should ask to see the cemetery, I think we would feel in a corner.

Now while we are busy spending money, time and breath impressing upon the world at large, that Medicine Hat is the best placeon earth, would it not be well to enlarge, beautify and care for the last resting place of those who have stuck to Medicine Hat until called hence? This place is young and cannot be expected to do everything at once it is certainly doing a great deal now, but I think there is still energy enough to tackle the improvement of our graveyard. There are very few isolated graves in the country around here, as the dead are generallybrought to Medicine Hat for interment, amd the friends of these would surely be pleased to have the chance to pay towards keeping the grounds in repair.

I think it would be better to have one large well kept cemetery at Medicine Hat than to have several small ill cared for country graveyards.

You know at least one of them had consumption. At first it was only catarrh—but it was neglected. When "Catarrhozone" cures so quickly it's foolish to suffer—it's a shame to keep on sniffeling and hawking. Catarrhozone goes direct to the cause of the disease,—that's why it's so dead certain to cure. It stops the cough, prevents that disgusting discharge, clears phlegm out of the throat in five minutes. Very pleasant, and safe too; get Catarrhozone from your druggist to-day.

NOXIOUS WEEDS.

We are requested by the Agricultural Department at Regina, to publish the following:

It may, perhaps, be money in the pockets of the people if their attention is called to Section 4 of the Noxious Weeds Ordinances, which is as follows:

"Every owner or occupant of land shall destroy all noxious weeds thereon, and if he makes default in so doing he shall be guilty of an offence, and on prosecution therefore by an overseer of the local improvement district, or by an inspector or other officer under this ordinance, shall on summary conviction thereof be liable to a fine not exceeding $100 and costs.

"For the purpose of this ordinance, the owner or occupant of any land adjoining a public road shall be deemed to be the owner or occupant of that portion of such road which lies between the centre line thereof and the adjoining land of which he is the owner or occupant."

It is considered that this law applies to the residents of towns and cities in the event of such municipalities failing to pass bylaws dealing with the weeds. The growth of weeds throughout the streets and in the gardens cannot fail to create a bad impression on visitors, and bear testimony to slipshod and careless methods in the business and homelite of the residents. Aside from this however the matter has a direct bearing on the welfare of the country, as no one can be ignorant of the fact that seeds of weeds readily spread from the towns to the farms and vice versa.

The weeds listed as noxious are:—Tumbling mustard, hare's ear mustard, common wild mustard, ball mustard, tansy mustard, wormseed mustard, false flax, shepherd's purse, stink week, red root, Canada thistle, Russian thistle, wild oats, ragweed, Russian pigweed and blue bur.

Specimens of weeds may be forwarded to the Department of Agriculture, Regina, for identification.

THE SOUL CATCHERS.

A SINGULAR CUSTOM OF THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS.

The Way the Natives In the Days Before Civilization Had Fully Marked Them For Its Own Used to Get Even With Their Enemies.

A little while ago while turning over some mementos of many years spent in the Pacific islands I came across a small circle of fine cane about two inches in diameter. From the side toward the center a delicate network of the fibers of some plant was constructed, leaving a small hole in the center large enough for, say, a bee to crawl through. The article weighed less than a quarter of an ounce; yet, small and harmless as it appeared, it is not so very many years ago that it and others like it were objects of deadly terror to the natives of many of the Pacific islands, particularly those of Manahiki (Humphrey Island), for the simple looking thing was a "soul catcher"—that is, a destroyer of human life.

Manahiki is one of a group of low lying atoll islands to the north-northwest of Samoa, and its people today are about the best educated of all the Malayo-Polynesian people. They elect a king and parliament, have one of the most beautifully adorned churches in the Pacific islands, and nearly all the younger members of the community can now not only speak but read and write English. The island is—for an atoll—unusually fertile and the people a fine, stalwart, handsome copper colored race. The main industries are the making of "copra" (dried cocoanut) and diving for pearl shell.

"Soul catching" in the heathen days, prior to 1863, could be and was practiced by any one who desired revenge or the life of an enemy. Indeed, although the people were nominally Christians in 1873, it was still in vogue. The modus operandi is very simple. Say that two men, Rika and Tetoro, quarrel. Rika accuses Tetoro of going out into the lagoon at nighttime, lifting his (Rika's) fish traps and abstracting the contents. He therefore demands compensation. Tetoro denies the theft. The relatives of both men take sides, and the quarrel assumes all the elements of a feud with bloodshed. It may be that Tetoro is a man of means or chiefly rank and influence and treats his accuser with scorn.

"Very well," the injured Rika cries. "If I cannot get justice from you I shall snare your soul, and you will die of a wasting sickness."

Tetoro, even if he is innocent, begins to feel uneasy at this threat and, while vigorously denying the theft, offers Rika a present of a pig to end the matter. Rika's relatives at once clamor not only for their original demands, but for the pig as well. Possibly a free fight ensues, and Rika's people get badly used, and threats of "soul snaring" are heard on all sides.

Then Rika's wife makes the snare for Tetoro's soul. Taking her mat out into the village square or upon a well frequented road or path, she suspends the snare from the branches of trees or sticks placed in the ground in such a position that she can closely watch the orifice in the center of the square. Rika's friends, male and female, come with her. They bring food and eat it and throw fragments under the snare to attract the flies, with which the island is infested. If but one fly crawls through the hole Tetoro is a dead man, unless he suddenly gives in and allows himself to be bled, for not only do Rika's people watch the snare, but his own as well. No one of them would dare to attempt to destroy the snare. The death of the interferer by occult power would certainly follow.

And so for hours and hours—sometimes for days—many pairs of eyes watch the little circle of cane, and Tetoro and his friends are now ready to yield, but feel that still more extortionate demands may be made. Then at last a fly is seen to crawl through, and a shout goes through the village.

"Ua hopo te lago! Ua hopo te lago!" ("A fly has passed through.") Tetoro hears the cries and immediately imagines he feels ill. His wife and relatives crowd about him and try to cheer him up, but his face assumes a melancholy look, and as the time passes on he refuses his food. Perhaps he may confess that he did steal Rika's fish and tremblingly offer to make full restitution if Rika will catch a fly and make it go through the circle from the reverse side through which the first one entered voluntarily. Usually this is done, and what might have become a lasting family feud had Tetoro died of "funk," through being bewitched, ends up by the payment of so much property to Rika, and a feast for which both parties provide the viands.—Pall Mall Gazette.

No Good to the Landlord.

The minister and the landlord were talking matters over about a person who wished to become one of the latter's tenants.

"Morally he is sound, but financially he is weak," said the minister.

"Ah, weel," replied the factor, "in that case he's a guid enough sitter for you, but no for me." And the negotiations were declared "off."—London Telegraph.

That Hurried Him.

Markley—Yes, I did lend him $10.

Newitt—Well, I suppose he'll pay you back some day, but you can't make him hurry.

Markley—I don't know about that. The mere sight of me walking along the street has had that effect upon him several times lately.

Are you satisfied to do nothing today except tell of the wonderful things you intend to do tomorrow?—Atchison Globe.

Denmark is about to sell the Danish West Indies islands to the United States for $7,000,000, and the next congress will probably authorize the purchase. The people of the islands are anxious for the deal. The islands cost Denmark $70,000 per year more than is realized from them, and under Danish rule commerce is in a bad way.

ANGEL CHILDREN.

Is there any happier woman in this world than that mother whose each successive little one seems to her but one more darling angel to continually lift her thoughts toward the sunshine of perfect happiness? But sorry is the lot of that poor mother to whom motherhood has ceased to be a cause of rejoicing, but has become instead a burden to be dreaded and looked forward to with melancholy and apprehension.

"About three months before our last baby was born (which is our fourth), writes Mrs. Nellie Carl, of Myrtlepoint, Coos Co., Oregon, "my health was very poor. I had been troubled for about eight years with female disease. I doctored with good physicians but obtained no relief, so I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, and was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so, and am happy to say my health began to improve and I did my work up to the last, and felt splendid.

"I got along finely during confinement and have the healthiest baby I ever saw. When he was three months old he weighed eighteen pounds; he is now seven months old and weighs twenty-four pounds. I can say I have had no return of my old troubles. I thank you very much for the good you have done me."

Any woman may write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a statement of her case, which will be considered in absolute confidence by this physician who stands among the foremost specialists of the century in the treatment of women's diseases. He will send her (in a plain, sealed envelope) sound, sensible, valuable advice free of all charge.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page, illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, to pay the cost of mailing only, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps.

EXPLOSION ON C. P. R. ENGINE.

FOUR MEN INJURED.

ENGINEER BARRET AND BRAKEMAN SMYTHE IN SERIOUS CONDITION.

A frightful accident occured early on Friday morning on the Canadian Pacific Railway about 59 miles east of Medicine Hat and one mile west of Kincorth station, when engine No 1143 exploded and four train hands were injured two very seriously. The engine was drawing a frieght trainin charge of conductor Dan Robertson; the other men on the train being

Engineer Barret,,
Fireman Pritchard,
Brakemen Bert Tharle and Jim Smythe, all residents of Medicine Hat.

The train pulled out of the yard here about 10 o'clock on Thursday night. Water was taken on at Irvine and all went well until Cummings (40 miles out) was reached and here a hot box caused a little trouble. Tharle, who was at the rear end of the train put this right and then boarded the engine where Smythe was also riding with the engineer and fireman. Barret and Tharle were close together and Smythe and Pritchard wereone on each side of the cab by the windows when about 3 o'clock a.m., without the slightest warning the explosion occurred with a fearful crash. The explosionappears to have occurred in the fire box. The boiler was hurled high into the air and shooting 100 feet ahead struck the ground near the track, ploughing up a piece of sod thirty feet in length; it rose again and on its second fall scalped the sod from the prairie and then turned right over and lay pointing to the west. Nothing was left of the engine but the truck. Three cars left the rails and then the train stopped after running perhaps its own length. The whole thing was witnessed by Brakeman Muirhead who was on another train near Kincorth.

Barretand Smythe received the full force of the escaping steam while Tharle and Pritchard were simply shot out through the windows. All the men were thrown a considerable distance by the force of the explosion. In addition to being badly scalded Smythe had one leg broken and Tharle one leg, the left, broken. Tharle had his hand on Barretts shoulder when the explosion occurred one was blown one way and the other in the opposite direction. It It seems a miracle that the men were not all blown to pieces

Conductor Robertson was going forward at the time and he hurried up to the scene of the disaster. He got to Tharle first and found him trying to straighten his broken leg. "Go on to the other fellows", said Tharle. "I can do all right".

The conductor, however, was in a fix. He wanted to flag another train he believed to be following and to help the injured men, and at the same time get to Kincorth and send word back for help. Just then he espied a hobo crawl out of a car, feeling himself all over to make sure he had a whole skin. Sending this man back with a flag Dan Robertson without doubt made the record run of his life to Kincorth covering the mile in about three minutes. There at the gravel pits there was plenty of help. The conductor wired to the Hat and in a short time a left here with Dr. Smith, C.P.R. doctor on board and this was followed by a "wreck train". The doctor on arriving at the scene of the accident attended to the injured men and soon had them placed in a tourist car and conveyed to Medicine Hat. On arrival here the men were immediately conveyed to the hospital where their injuries received the best attention.

It is thought the explosion was caused by muddy water taken into the boiler, as the engine was consideredone of the best on the division.

MEN WHO ESCAPED.

Engineer Glover was first called to take engine No 1143 out refused to go and his place was taken by Engineer Barrett.

Fireman Jones received a call to go on this run, but his wife begged him not to go so he staidat home and escaped being in the accident. His place was filled by Pritchard.

Brakeman Cassidy, who is a conductor waiting for a car and filling in the time as brakeman, was called for this train, but somehow could not make up his mind to go and his place was taken by Smythe, who is perhaps the worse injured man of the crew.

Smythe, we may here say has a wife and family of five or six children and a brother at Swift Current. Mrs. Smythe arrived here on Saturday morning. Smythe rooms with Brakeman Jones and when he was called for the run went cheerfully off remarking as he left the house that he would get his family here as soon as he could arrange for their transportation. He has lately taken great interest in Salvation Army work and was often heard latterly addressing the crowd near the depot, and he was a very good talker.

Engineer P. F. Barrett sustained a very severe scalp wound, and was scalded and cut in various parts of the body. The cuts took about 50 stitches.

Brakeman Smythe is very severely scalded in various parts of the body and had one leg broken.

Brakeman Tharle sustained a compound fracture of the left leg.

Fireman Pritchard was scalded in one leg. One of his boots was blown clean off. He was standing on the gangway and was hit from behind and shot right out.

MAN KILLED IN FRANK SLIDE.

A message from Frank dated June 26th. says:—Another serious slide took place here this morning about 7 o'clock. The west bound express which was two hours late and running at a high rate of speed crashed intothe pile of rock and earth on the track, and the engine express and mail cars were thrown into the ditch.

No one was hurt but Fireman Grant, who was pinned under his engine and severely scalded from the effects of which he died in about six hours. The passengers were badly shaken up, but escaped further injury.

The young man Grant belonged to Wolseley, Mrs. Grant, his mother, arrived in Medicine Hat, accompanied by Mr. J. A. Hill, on Tuesday night, and met the body of her son here, and accompanied it east for burial. Mrs. Grant and her son are friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor, and Mr. and Mrs. John Benson, who before coming to the Hat were residents of Wolseley. Sad to relate young Grant had obtained leave some days before but delayed going home and wrote saying that by staying a little longer he would get two months home with his mother. The delay proved fatal Mrs. Grant is a native of Maitland, N. S., and an old friend of Mr. L. B. Cochran.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

The latter was sitting at the piano drumming thoughtfully on the white keys, when a lady who was just then visiting at the villa, crossed over to where Chesleigh sat—requesting him to try a piece of music for her which she had just received. "I think I have heard you sing it before," she said, laying it before him.

One glance at the title, and his face paled; he turned hastily around; Reine was in the room, seated near them. He bowed, took the music, placing it on the rack; the next moment his deep impassioned voice rang through the room. From a mirror hung over the instrument, he could see Reine's face distinctly; their eyes had met; then he lowered his scorching gaze, never raising his eyes again until he had finished his song.

These were the words he sung:

"And have you quite forgot me, dear?
Or say, do you sometimes dream
What life might have been if we wandered still Together by wood or stream!
Do you think of days when my love was all
The world could give or take,
Do you say with a sigh they were 'happy days,'
Just for the old love's sake?

"Do you ever sit in the twilight, dear,
And think of that other day,
When we met, and parted, and journeyed forth,
Each on our separate way?
I turned and stood for a moment, dear,
And looked in your face to take
Its memory far on my way through life,
Just for the old love's sake!

"Do you ever think they were bitter words?
Their memory haunts me yet;
Do you wonder how you could say farewell,
And wonder if I forget?
Dear, my heart has forgiven—forgiven long ago,
Though at first I thought 'twould break;
And whenever I think—it is kindly still—
Just for the old love's sake!"

Reine rose hastily and silently quitted the room.

Chesleigh excused himself shortly after and went out into the grounds. He paced rapidly up and down under the trees to cool the mad fire in his veins; future possibilities, with their alluring fancies, took possession of him, clouding his better nature; that painful issues were to accure, he could not foresee.

To Chesleigh's nature, the moment was cruel, with its yearning and doubts.

"I should save myself from such agitation as this," he muttered, hoarsely; "I will not go through it again." Those hazy visions to which he could give no outline, rendered his thoughts of her as beautiful as the freshly-opened violets after rain.

CHAPTER XXIX.

As soon as Reine's health would permit of the journey, it was decided that her aunt should take her to Florida. It was arranged, through Aunt Rachel's earnest request, that Bernard should join them a little later.

It was dangerous to his peace of mind to be so near Reine, but he could not deny his starving heart so small a crumb of comfort, as her near presence brought to him.

He felt himself drawn like the fabled moth, irresistibly toward the flame.

"There's nothing like travel and change of scene to make one forget sorrow," Mrs. Woodstock had declared; "and amid new scenes Reine would, in a measure, forget the past."

But, alas! how human calculations fail. A week after Bernard arrived, Reine's aunt was attacked with her old enemy, the rheumatism, and upon Bernard devolved the task of cheering Reine. It was a pleasure so great it was almost pain.

She clung to him with all the old-time childish thoughtfulness. With him it was hard to refrain from uttering the loving words that often rose from his heart to his lips—so hard to keep down the love that thrilled every nerve—yet he crushed it with a mighty power that surprised even himself.

On the evening Mrs. Woodstock had been stricken down, the three had planned a sail on the water as far as the light-house, which was situated on an island a few miles from the beach.

"Never mind me," Aunt Rachel had said, irritably; "don't stay on my account; take Reine and go, by all means, Bernard; I'd rather be alone."

She watched the tiny boat as it shot into the sunny waves. Reine looked up at the window, kissing her little white hand to her until the light bark faded from her sight in the blue haze of the distance.

Aunt Rachel turned away from the window with a weary sigh:

"Ah! but for her folly—her mad folly—Reine might have been Bernard's wife! How would it all end?" she wondered. Ah, if she had but known!

The sun was low in the western sky when the little boat touched the island.

"I'm afraid we will not have time to explore the light-house," said Bernard, anxiously. "If I am any judge we shall have a storm, and a severe one, too. I think I had better turn the boat about, and head for our hotel again."

Reine laughed and sprang out on the yellow sand.

"The storm-clouds will blow over, as they did yesterday," she said. "See, they are shifting now. We must explore the old quaint light-house, now that we are here."

Against his better judgment he allowed himself to be persuaded. Whether there was a "fate" in it or not, only Heaven could have foretold.

He fastened the boat and followed her up the steep path without further objection, seeing that she had set her heart upon it.

The evening had a weird beauty all its own. The rose of the sunset, mixed with gold, had dark purple linings. The sea was calm, but the color of it had changed from blue to a dull, lead n hue; the waves were languid, but there seemed to be a deep undercurrent; the boats rocked, the white-sailed ships passed more slowly by; every now and then there was a slow, sullen murmur in the wind, as though it were collecting force for some special purpose. There was a heavy, brooding silence over the trees and flowers of the little island; the birds seemed frightened, and sought shelter in their nests. The whole scene had a weird effect—grand, beautiful, terrible.

While they stood there the keeper of the light, a bronzed, weather-beaten old sailor, joined them, bowing to the tall, broad-shouldered young man, and doffing his cap to the slender, golden-haired girl by his side.

"We have come to view your castle," smiled Bernard; "that is, if you do not object."

The old keeper declared that he would be only too pleased to show them about, adding that they were just in time to see the great lamp lighted. Even as he spoke the leaden hue of the water deepened, and the weird colors died out of the sky.

The grave light deepened in Bernard Chesleigh's eyes.

"That usually presages a storm," he said. "Do you think it is far off?"

"It will be upon us directly," declared the keeper. "You must bring the lady in, sir, and wait a bit until its fury is spent. See, the great drops are commencing to fall now."

"Are the storms here very dangerous?" asked Bernard, following his guide, and assisting Reine up the steep, rugged path.

"The storms do a sight of damage at times. Just by the white rock there lies a dangerous reef, and many a good ship has been battered to pieces there."

While they were speaking, the darkness of night seemed to fall like a pall over the earth, without warning. And they had barely reached shelter ere the storm broke in all its fury. The hissing of the wind rose into a scream, the sullen waters into a roar, the rain fell in torrents, and the lightning flashed in white, blinding sheets.

It was one of those terrible storms that sweep at times over the Florida coast, carrying destruction with it. At first it was wonderful; then it became awful; at last alarming. And in the midst of it all, something terrible happened. The awful hurricane demolished one of the windows of the tower, and the deluge of water put out the great lamp.

The keeper's bronzed face paled.

"Great God!" he cried, "the light is out! Heaven help any vessel on the sea that must pass this way tonight!"

A lurid flash of lightning lit up the room, showing the ghastly effect of the weird, awful scene outside.

A low cry broke from Reine's lips. The old lighthouse seemed to rock on its foundation. The angry waves, rolling mountain-high, seemed to threaten to dash it at any instant into the hungry sea.

Reine clung to Bernard's strong arm with trembling hands, and the flashes of light showed him the pale face, quivering lips, and eyes distended with fear.

Oh, how he longed to take her in his arms and comfort her. But his shield of honor restrained him.

Suddenly, as they stood there, a terrible sound smote their ears—a sound that strikes terror to every heart; the firing of the minute guns, which denotes a ship in distress at sea.

Louder and louder sounds the booming of the signal guns.

Bernard Chesleigh listens, his grave face whitening.

In an instant the keeper of the light had sprung for his tar jacket and lantern.

"A ship in distress. I must get my lifeboat and go to the rescue," he said, simply.

And snatching up his lantern, he was gone in a trice.

Hark! There it is again. The terrible booming.

Bernard Chesleigh unclasps the little, white, clinging hands from his arm.

"The old keeper of the light has shown me my duty, Reine. He has gone to the rescue. I cannot stand here while my fellow-creatures are crying for aid, facing death. I must go and help. I must save a life if I can."

Reine clung to him in wild alarm.

"You must not go, Bernard," she sobbed, piteously. "You would die in those horrible waves, and it would kill me. Oh, Bernard, do not leave me."

"I must, Reine," he said, hoarsely, bending his handsome head and kissing reverently the little white hands that clung to him so frantically.

He loosened the white hands, and, in a flash, she was standing alone in the deserted lighthouse.

Reine sprang through the doorway after him with a wild cry. She forgot the drenching rain and terrible storm as she tore madly down the beach after him, crying out wildly:

"Oh, Bernard! Bernard! You are going out to death! Take me with you, and let me die, too, for I cannot live without you!"

And those piercing cries smote Bernard Chesleigh's ears far out among the mad waves, as he valiantly headed his lifeboat toward the fearful wreck on the reefs.

How the words clung to him! They revealed that which made his heart bound with a great throbbing pain—Reine cared—yes she cared for him.

How cruel the knowledge was to him now when it was too late. She was nothing more to him now save a dearly loved sister.

Yes he had found Reine—but too late. But he must put all thoughts of her from him at this moment and think only of those in such dread peril out there at the mercy of the deep.

Was it a reckless madness that seized him, to wish for half a moment that, he might not live to return?

CHAPTER XXX.

The rain beat upon Reine's golden head; the terrible storm drenched her through and through, yet she did not appear to notice it. Her white hands beat the air; bitter cries fell from her lips as she flung herself down on her knees, sobbing out that if he never came back to her, she would throw herself into the sea.

If he found death in those cruel waves, dashing mountain high, she would find a grave there, too, and the sad sea waves should sing a requiem over both.

Breathlessly, in the vivid flashes of blinding light, she watched the little lifeboat battling with the angry sea.

The scene on the wrecked steamer was a terrible one. The lifeboats had been lowered; but many of the frightened passengers, in their mad terror, had thrown themselves into the lashing sea.

She had struck the treacherous reef, and it was but a question of a few terrible moments ere she would go down, for she was fast settling. The steamer was doomed.

Not a soul seemed to be on board the fatal steamer when Bernard reached it, and a voluntary cry, "Thank God! all have been saved!" burst from his lips.

He turned to leap into his boat again, but at that instant a low moan fell upon his ear from down the hatchway.

Seizing a lantern that one of the sailors had left, Chesleigh sprang in the direction from which the sound proceeded.

A man was attempting to make his way toward the deck. By the feeble, flickering light from the lantern he carried, Bernard Chesleigh saw that his face was covered with blood from a wound on his temple.

He cried out, faintly, rejoicing to see succor at hand.

"One of the spars fell upon me, and I must have lost consciousness. They left me here to die," he said, putting out his hands gropingly to reach the spot where his rescuer stood.

He took one step forward, then staggered blindly, and fell at Bernard's feet exhausted, crying, faintly:

"I am too weak to walk—I—"

The sentence never was finished. Bernard Chesleigh had stooped beside him, holding the lantern close to his face.

There was a hoarse cry from the lips of both.

"Bernard Chesleigh!"

"Waldemar Waldron!"

In that awful moment they had recognized each other; each was gazing into the face of the other with bated breath—these two who had been such bitter rivals for the love of beautiful Reine.

"Ah, it is you!" gasped Waldron, white to the lips. "Then all hope of rescue is at an end. You will leave me to die."

Bernard Chesleigh had drawn back with a face ghastly white. There are moments when the bravest and most honorable of us have been sorely tempted—tempted almost beyond the power of human endurance—and such a moment of terrible temptation assailed Bernard Chesleigh.

His rival lay at his feet, maimed, helpless, at his mercy. He need but turn and fly; speak no word; lift not so much as a finger, and ere he reached the shore, the steamer would go down, carrying with it the barrier that parted him from the woman he loved.

If Reine were but free, he might woo and win her. This man's life parted them. His death would set her free. The world would never know—even Reine need not be told—no one would suspect that his hands were crimsoned with the blood of a human life.

Waldemar Waldron gazed fearfully up into the white face bending over him, and read all the struggle there. The poor wretch groaned aloud.

The tempter cried: "He has wrecked and spoiled your life and Reine's. Let him die. Make for yourself a golden future." Honor and conscience cried out: "You must save a human life, no matter how painfully your lives have crossed."

"I will save you!" cried Chesleigh, hoarsely, "for Reine's sake. Make amends to her for the past, and I shall be repaid."

Waldemar Waldron was much too spent to utter the grateful words that sprung to his lips.

By main force Bernard Chesleigh succeeded in lowering him into the skiff, grasped the oars, and again the little boat, with its double burden, was breasting the mad waves.

They were scarcely out of danger's way a moment too soon, for the boat went down, dragging all within her reach into the whirlpool—down, down to the rocks full many a fathom below.

They reached the shore in safety. The excitement and the pain of the wound on the temple had been too much for Waldemar Waldron, and again he had succumbed to unconsciousness.

Chesleigh lifted the inanimate form in his strong arms and laid him on the beach, then hastened to secure his boat, which the high tide threatened to take out to sea with each high wave.

The rain had ceased, and the moon looked out clear and bright from the network of jagged clouds.

It seemed but an instant that Chesleigh had spent in securing his boat, but when he turned around, lo! no motionless form lay where he had placed it. The white-capped, eddying waves curled around the spot. Waldemar Waldron was not there!

Then the horrible truth burst upon him. The tide had carried its unconscious victim out to sea again. He had done his best to save Waldemar Waldron, but it seemed to be the will of Heaven that he should not be spared.

With hurried steps he regained the lighthouse, and found poor Reine suffering from hysterics, in charge of the lighthouse keeper's daughter. It would have brought tears of pity to any one's eyes to have heard the cry of joy as Bernard flung open the door and entered.

He did not tell her just then the startling revelation he had to make. She was too weak to bear such a shock.

Mrs. Woodstock was waiting for them at the hotel in the greatest alarm. "Safe!" she cried, clasping Reine in her arms. "I feared you were both at the bottom of the sea. I was sorry—so sorry that I consented to your going."

That night, when Reine lay sleeping the sleep of exhaustion upon her pillow, Bernard Chesleigh was relating to Mrs. Woodstock all that had transpired.

When he had finished the two sat looking earnestly into each other's eyes.

"You have proven yourself a noble foe," said Aunt Rachel, huskily grasping the other's hand. "You did what you could to save his life. Perhaps Heaven knew what was for the best when it interfered."

The terrible story that had so strange an ending was not told to Reine for many a long day after.

She was back in the old garden at Fairlawn when her aunt gently broke the news to her months later.

She did not cry out. She did not weep. She listened like one turned to stone.

"Waldemar was not kind to me, Aunt Rachel," she said, slowly. "Still I loved him once. I grieve that he met such an untimely fate. I can never look again on the hungry, sobbing sea, for I should see his face in the waves."

Yet even as she spoke she realized that his death had set her free. Yes, Heaven help her, she was free—at last!

Aunt Rachel left her alone in the garden, and Reine sat down on one of the benches among the great crimson roses, pale and trembling, her thoughts in the wildest chaos.

She would not be disloyal to Waldemar Waldron even in thought. She tried to think of him kindly and of his best, for his untimely death wiped out all the keen misery he had ever caused her.

How long she sat there among the blossoms she never knew. A step startled her at length—a step that brought the warm blood to her cheek and a thrill to her heart—for she knew it was Bernard's step. Before she could rise to meet him he had come forward and seated himself by her side, imprisoning the little white hand that lay on the rustic bench.

Her long, curling lashes were wet with tears, and he knew what brought them there.

"Let me teach you to forget, Reine," he said, gently. "The one gift I ask from Heaven is the right and power to comfort you, dear. Renew the promise you once made, Reine, and my happiness will be complete. Be my wife. No barrier stands between us. Give me the heart that should have been mine long ago."

She shrank from him in passionate tears.

"No, no," she cried, incoherently, "it can never be—never! I must be true to his memory—nothing else would be right."

"Is this my reward for waiting for you all these weary years?" he exclaimed, bitterly.

"Be content—as matters are now, Bernard," she said faintly' "everything is going on well."

He moved nearer her—so that his hot breath scorched her cheek—as he answered steadily:

"Would it satisfy you to live forever, like this?—no nearer to me than you are now?"

It seemed to Reine his fiery eyes burned down into the very depths of her soul as he asked this huskily, murmuring—"Oh, my love—so cold and cruel!"

Reine shivered a little, her face paling.

"Oh, Bernard," she faltered, "why are you not content?"

"Why am I not content?" he interrogated passionately, and so bitterly that he quite frightened her. "Because I am not made of marble—or ice; because I have a living, human heart pulsing in my bosom that longs for love returned—a soul that cries out against this cruelty of being so near you, yet held off at arms' length. I love you so well that I must win you, or I must go from you. I have borne more than a man should bear. Do you think I never long to clasp your hands in mine?—to hear you whisper tender words to me?"

"I do not know," she murmured.

"But I do know, Reine, and I can bear the torture no longer of being near you if there is no possibility of winning you."

A thrill shot through Reine's heart—"We cannot go on dreaming like the lotus-eaters forever," he continued.

Reine drew a long breath. How could she withstand his ardent pleading when her heart yearned for him so strongly! "Have you an answer for me, Reine?" he whispered.

"I am not worthy, Bernard," she faltered. "I once threw away your love. Would you—could you—trust me after that?"

For answer he raised the sweet face to his and kissed away the pearly tears, murmuring loving words over her.

She attempted to struggle out of his arms, for she saw her aunt coming down the path, but her laughing, happy lover held her fast.

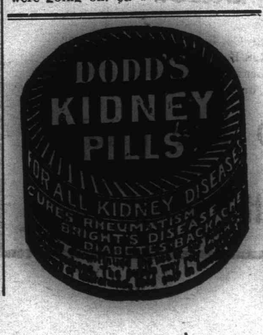
When Mrs. Woodstock saw them, she knew that the ardent hope of her life was to be realized, yet she could not refrain from crying out, with many a ha! ha! ha!—

"Why, what in the world does such a scene as this mean? Bernard! Reine! explain this situation at once."

"It means, dear madam," said the happy lover, proudly, "that my long devotion and deep love are to be rewarded at last. Reine has promised to become my wife."

"Thank Heaven!" exclaimed Mrs. Woodstock, fervently. "I have always said God brings together soon or late, the hearts he intended for each other." With these words she left them.

The hour they spent sitting side by side on the rustic seat by the murmuring fountain, building bright air-castles of a rosy future, was the happiest they were ever to know.



How great is the wisdom of God that the dark beyond is all unknown to us!

CHAPTER XXXI.

It was decided at length that the marriage should take place at once. Aunt Rachel demurred greatly at losing her neice so soon, but the impulsive lover declared he had waited altogether too long for his bride already, that delays were dangerous, and he must claim Reine at once.

He could hardly restrain his impatience at the time it took to prepare the elegant trousseau.

The grand wedding was to take place at Mrs. Woodstock's new villa in Richmond, and the preparations were going on on a magnificent scale.

THE MAKING OF CANADA

DEATH OF LORD NORTON RECALLS HISTORIC EVENT.

He It Was Who Piloted the British North America Act Through the Imperial House of Commons — Where Canada Was Born—Final Draft of Act Creating Dominion of Canada Was Made at Hams Hall.

To-day, writes S, in The London Daily Mail of April 1, the mortal remains of the nonagenarian, Lord Norton, will be laid in their last resting-place at Lea Marston Church, which stands close by Hams Hall, in Warwickshire. The aged Peer had so much outlived the generation which knew him best that few will quite realize how vividly interesting a chapter of Imperial history is thus brought to a close. Charles Adderley was not gifted to any remarkable extent with those platform arts which lay the foundations of a great political reputation. Straight and simple in style of speech, careless, rather, as to whether he won or missed distinction, but deeply in earnest about many things which tend nowise to the gaining of popular applause, though they make largely for the sweetening of human life, he missed greatness, yet won universal esteem.

Some years ago I was his guest at Hams Hall. He was over eighty, yet full of energy, and seemed to take a delight in spending some hours of a summer afternoon showing me over the gardens which surrounded his beautiful home. His memory of the past was fresh and vivid, and, less than half his age, I felt myself carried back at times which seemed almost historical as he spoke of his earlier political experiences and the men with whom he had been brought into close contact during an active political career.

Where Canada Was Born.

We lingered for a while on the broad terrace of the hall, admiring the soft beauty of the Warwickshire scenery. Then quietly, and, as it seemed to me, with special care, the old gentleman had seats arranged, and we sat down. He looked at me for a few moments, and his strong, kindly face lit up with a smile of proud remembrance.

"Do you know," he said, "that you are sitting on a spot which may some day become famous enough to draw many pilgrims from far distant parts of the British Empire?"

I expressed surprise and interest.

"It was just there," said Lord Norton, "that the final draft was made of the British North America Act. It created the Dominion of Canada, and laid down the great principle that the British Colonies shall be free, self-governing nations, and not mere dependencies of the mother country. I was most earnestly convinced that this was the right policy to pursue; but there was great opposition from a portion of the Canadian people, and my chief, Lord Carnarvon, doubted whether we should go on with the scheme, especially as we knew that there would be much opposition to it in the House of Commons.

"We spent an afternoon on this terrace earnestly considering it from every point of view, and I pressed my opinion as strongly as possible. Lord Carnarvon acknowledged that I should have the hardest task in piloting the bill through the House of Commons, but I did not shrink from that, though it might have meant the ruin of my Parliamentary career. Finally, we agreed on the main principles, and then we sat down here and put the scheme into shape. I am proud of that afternoon's work, and I love this terrace because it is so closely associated in my memory with what I think was the most important work of my public life."

Beginnings of Imperialism.

Lord Norton did not mention dates, but I think the scene he was recalling must have taken place in the autumn of 1866. He joined Lord Derby's Government in June of that year as Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the British North America Act was passed in 1867. I recalled to his mind the vigorous opposition to the measure by Mr. Bright and other prominent Liberals.

"Yes," said Lord Norton, "it was a very anxious time for me. Bright was a giant in debate, and on the face of it he had a strong case, for the Canadian local elections had gone against the view we were taking. But I was sure that the choice lay between confederation and loss of some of our North American colonies. They would have joined the United States.

"I never quite grasped Bright's view. My own anxiety was to make the Colonies strong, self-contained nations, linked to us by the Crown, but not under any kind of irksome control from London. The fact is that after studying Colonial questions closely I came to the conclusion that the Colonies had got to learn how to govern themselves, for we could not understand them enough to do it properly from London, and any kind of friction was likely to break the slender ties. They were farther away in those days," the old statesman added with a smile.

A Sound Compromise.

"Bright and many other Liberals," he continued, "believed, I think, that it would be better for us to relax all efforts to influence the Colonies, and that if they slipped away entirely it would be rather a good thing—save us the cost of defending them, and the risks of being drawn into quarrels through anything they might do. I thought, on the contrary, that we should hold them as free partners in the Empire, and that was the aim of my policy. I did not believe that we could bring them into union as we have brought Scotland and Ireland. Distance put that out of the question, and with the astonishing example of the United States before us we had to lay a foundation on which great nations might be raised.

"I think my views were a practical and, I hope, a very sound compromise between the idea of positive union, or mere paternal control, and the school represented by Bright, which regarded the Colonies as something of an encumberance. On the whole, I am well satisfied; indeed, I may say not a little proud of the action I was able to take."

The Top of the Ladder.

There is plenty of opportunity for superior talents. The top of the ladder of success offers plenty of standing room and invites guests. The lower part only is fearfully crowded. There is no excuse for the universal wail of lack of opportunity, for there is no lack. The trouble lies with the demands laid upon those who aspire to first place. One thing is certain, there is no quarter for the whiner and precious little encouragement for those who do not care to work with might and main.

THE LIME-OIL MIXTURE.

One of the Newer Preparations For Spraying the San Jose Scale.

A mixture which I have not used, but which is highly recommended by Professor C. P. Close, horticulturist to the Delaware station, is a combination of kerosene and "limoid." Limoid is a finely ground, "carefully hydrated, pure magnesium lime," very light, without grit and smooth to the touch. It seems to absorb and combine with kerosene into an even, thin paste. The directions are: Pour the kerosene into a barrel, and for each gallon stir in four pounds of limoid, keeping the mixture in motion until it forms a thin, sloppy mass. In case a little kerosene separates out sprinkle a little more limoid to absorb it. To this add water in quantity equal to the kerosene, stir it vigorously to get it well mixed, then add as much water as is needed to obtain the desired percentage and pump the mixture back into itself to form a thorough emulsion. "It is then a smooth mixture which flows as freely as water through a vermorel or other nozzle provided it is well agitated and no foreign matter gets in."

This kerosene-limoid, reduced so that it contained 20 and 25 per cent. kerosene, has been used effectively against dormant scales in March and early April without injury to trees of any kind. It has been used, reduced to 10 per cent. kerosene, as a summer wash, which killed "all crawling young ones, a few old ones and a very large proportion of intermediate sizes." Crude oil cannot be used, as it forms sticky clots when water is added to the limoid combination.

To the summer wash containing 10 per cent. kerosene one quart of rosin soap in twenty-five gallons of mixture added greatly to its effectiveness. Rosin soap is made by dissolving five ounces of rosin in one quart of kerosene and one ounce of hard soap in one quart of water. Combine the two mixtures and churn with a pump about five minutes until a smooth white emulsion is formed. The kerosene and rosin and soap and water solutions can be made up as stock and combined as needed.

This mixture is worth a careful trial. It is much cheaper than the soluble oils, and in my opinion the oils are the most reliable of all the scale killers. They get through or under even the most resistant forms and pentrate into crevices and through pubescence that bars all other substances. Nothing other than oil will reach the insects which develop at the tips of the twigs and get upon the young apple and pear fruit, and it is claimed for the 10 per cent. kerosene limoid and rosin mixture that it will cure just that condition which so directly affects the value of the crop.—Dr. John B. Smith, New Jersey.

LAYERING THE VINE.

One of the Easiest Ways of Multiplying Some of the Woody Plants.

There is hardly any one whose home domain is so small that he may not at least sit under his own vine, not to mention the fig tree, which is by no means an impossibility even at the north. The simplest way to install a vine or a few vines of the grape is to get them from a good local nurseryman. But say that you have an accommodating neighbor with good fruit or that you already have a nice vine yourself and want to propagate it, there are few things easier. Layering is one of the simplest of horticultural operations. The story is told so plainly by the accompanying little sketch that explanation is almost unnecessary.

Layering should be done in early spring. A cane or shoot of the previous year's growth of wood is stretched along the ground and buried throughout its entire length in a shallow trench or it may be covered in certain places, leaving the remaining portion exposed. Roots will be put forth at intervals and branches thrown up. Later the vine may be cut between these branches, leaving a number of independent plants.

Milk for Young Turkeys.

Give no food for 24 hours, then feed often, but avoid overfeeding, says the Orange Judd Farmer. Give feed at least every two hours until they feather. The feed at first should be coarse corn meal which is added to a mixture of milk and eggs. This should be cooked and an onion chopped up and added. After the poults are three days old, feed mashed potatoes, chopped onions, ground oats and eggs well mixed with milk and cooked.

Milk is always excellent. After they are a week old the egg may be omitted, but a portion of cooked meat and a little ground bone should be allowed. They may then be given grain of all kinds, cooked vegetables and milk. The water should be fresh and clean.

The Sitting Hen.

Eggs intended for early sitting should be gathered at least twice a day and kept where there will be no danger of chilling. Hens that want to sit early in the spring are apt to be rather unreliable and should be allowed to become thoroughly started over a nest of china eggs before being intrusted with a valuable sitting When a hen really means business, her skin feels hot and feverish, and she usually sheds a few feathers from the breast. Early sittings should not be more than the hen can very easily cover, eleven or twelve being better than a larger number for hens of average size. Build up the nest with plenty of straw, filling with chaff to make a smoother surface, and see that the curve toward the bottom is smooth, so that the eggs roll easily and cannot work into corners.

Oats For Chicks.

Oats are one of the best feeds for poultry, but for chicks should be hulled. They are the best summer feed for the production of eggs.

Hair Growth.

It is a curious fact that a boy's hair grows one-half slower than a girl's. In boys the average rate of growth is three feet three inches in six years, being an average of .018 inch a day. During the twenty-first and twenty-fourth years a man's hair grows quicker than at any other period. It takes an eyelash twenty weeks to reach a length of .429 inch, and then its life is from 100 to 150 days. By means of a camera the wink of an eyelid has been measured, and it was found that twenty winks can be made in four seconds.

Canada's Consumption Increases by Some 22 Per Cent.

Some important facts concerning the increased consumption of malt and spirituous liquors are brought out by the tables of trade and navigation returns for 1904 in Canada. The Pioneer points out that they show that for the last year the increased consumption of spirits in 1904 over the average consumption of the preceding four years was 22 per cent. In connection therewith, it calls attention to the great increase in convictions for drunkenness throughout the Dominion.

The figures on which the conclusions are based are these:

Year.	Gallons.
1899-1900	2,523,576
1900-1901	2,707,919
1901-1902	2,933,183
1902-1903	3,207,748
Total	11,372,246
Yearly average	2,843,106
1903-1904	3,481,287
Increase above average	638,181

"The total quantity of spirits manufactured in Canada during the year named was 5,678,153 proof gallons. The quantity manufactured during the preceding year was 4,063,603 gallons. This gives us an increase of 1,614,550 gallons in the quantity manufactured.

"The total quantity of malt liquor manufactured in Canada during the year was 27,335,985 gallons. The quantity manufactured during the preceding year was 25,755,154 gallons. This gives us an increase of 1,580,831 gallons in the quantity manufactured.

"The total quantity of intoxicating beverages of all kinds imported during the year was 3,320,727.

Liquor Consumed.

"More interest attaches to the quantity of liquor actually consumed in Canada for the year. This is ascertained by taking the quantities reported as "entered for home consumption," both imported and manufactured. These quantities were as follows.—

	Gallons.
Canadian spirits	8,481,287
Imported spirits	1,854,050
Canadian malt liquor	27,333,528
Imported malt liquor	567,715
Imported wines	543,637
Total	33,780,717

It is important to note, however, that, notwithstanding the increase of last year, the quantity of spirits consumed to-day is less than that consumed some thirty years ago, when it ran up to nearly two gallons per capita. Last year it was less than one gallon per capita. There has, however, been a steady increase since the year 1897.

The increase in the consumption of malt liquor has been steady, with the exception of a slight reduction that occurred in the year 1903. Thirty years ago it was about three gallons per capita; now it is about five. Taking the consumption of the different kinds of intoxicating liquor in gallons, we find the quantities for each 1,000 of our population during the past seven years to have been as follows:

It will be noted, the article continues, that the quantity of imported wines and malt liquors is comparatively small. There is a great increase in the quantity of Canadian manufactured liquor, both beer and spirits. The quantities of these liquors entered for consumption in the years 1893 and 1894, respectively, were as follows. The figures are for gallons:—

Year.	Spirits.	Beer.	Total.
1903	3,207,748	25,753,402	28,961,150
1904	3,481,287	27,333,528	30,814,815
Increase	273,539	1,580,126	1,853,665

The increase in both beer and spirits is large. In dealing with the increase in spirits it is important to notice that not only does 1904 show an increase over 1903, but the consumption in 1903 was in excess of the consumption for the preceding year. In fact, there has been a steady increase in the consumption of spirits for a number of years. Here are the figures for the past five years. It will be remembered that the fiscal year in each case ends on June 30th. Gallons consumed for each one thousand of population:—

Year.	Spirits.	Beer.	Total.
1898	536	3,808	82 4,426
1899	661	3,995	86 4,742
1900	701	4,364	85 5,170
1901	765	4,737	100 5,602
1902	796	5,102	90 5,988
1903	870	4,712	96 5,678
1904	952	4,918	96 5,966

Comparison With Other Countries.

A statement recently issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Labor and Commerce contained a table, giving the quantity of alcohol of fifty per cent. strength consumed by different nations, taking the actual quantities of spirits used, and assuming beer to contain 5 per cent. of alcohol and wine 20 per cent. This statement would show the average per capita consumption of intoxicating spirits of 50 per cent. alcoholic strength to be, in gallons, as follows:—

France	10.21 gallons.
Belgium	7.33 gallons.
Italy	6.61 gallons.
Germany	5.53 gallons.
United Kingdom	4.99 gallons.
United States	3.23 gallons.
Sweden	3.05 gallons.
Canada	1.21 gallons.

If these quantities are divided by two, the actual average annual per capita consumption of absolute alcohol will be obtained.

Dreamed a Dream.

A peculiar incident occurred in Blenheim one day last week, and was related to the News by Mr. John Elkington of Paris, who was in town on Thursday last, and who is a relation of Mr. Marshall, one of the parties interested. Roy Marshall lives with his father, Steven Marshall, Lot 1, Concession 13, Blenheim. A few days ago he lost a valuable watch. The hired man, Thomas Laidlaw, lives in a house on the farm. He did not know of the loss of the watch, but dreamt he saw it lying in one of the cattle stalls. Next morning he told his wife about the dream, and, as it was not part of his duties to go to the cattle barn, he also told Roy. The latter searched in the place described, and was rewarded by the finding of the watch. He had no doubt dropped it there the previous evening. Who says there is nothing in a dream?—Ayr (Ont.) S. T. TYNDALE.

Editor and Proprietor of the Roland News.

The Roland News is almost an old timer, judged by the standard of a country in which full grown enterprises of all kinds, mercantile, manufacturing, financial and journalistic, spring up mature overnight. It will celebrate its seventh birthday this year. That a newspaper is published at all in a place like Roland never ceases to be a cause of wonderment to a newspaper man familiar with the conditions governing publication in older communities. It has but two or three hundred residents, and is fairly typical of scores of other settlements in the west. The railway station was its nucleus. When it was known that trains would stop there, instantly the town began to grow. A general store was erected—the pioneer of the town's trade. Then came, in due and proper Western order, a blacksmith shop, a harness store, two or three implement sheds, more general stores, a couple "stopping houses," bakery and a boot and shoe store. Some of these were duplicated, but the places of business in such a town rarely run over the dozen, and very seldom exceed a score. For any sane person, other than a millionaire who ran a paper for pleasure, as other millionaires run race horses or maintain yachts, to think of conducting a newspaper in such a place as a straight business enterprise, would be to stand self-convicted of business lunacy. That is, elsewhere than in the Canadian West. The West has always been a law unto itself, and in no department of activity is this more true than in the newspaper field, of that kind of commercial courage that in some respects is akin to that of the gambler, whose creed is "never venture, never win," the men of the West offer countless examples, and it speaks volumes for the country that in the overwhelming majority of cases in which energy and prudence are combined with daring that the man of courage wins out.

It was so in the case of the Roland News. Other papers, published in a community of similar size, but of different disposition, would inevitably have died. With all the apparent chances dead against it, the News not only survived, but flourished. The controlling factors in the situation were,—the energy of its proprietors but, more than all, the loyal support of the people of the district. The Roland News, in the printed matter it issues regarding itself, describes itself as "a live paper, published in a live town." The brief sentence epitomizes the facts. Roland is one of the most energetic, prosperous and progressive little places anywhere in the West. It has some decided natural advantages, in the character of the country by which it is surrounded. The Roland, Myrtle and Rosebank districts have no superiors in Manitoba as agricultural settlements. Every quarter section is occupied; the soil is of the most fertile, the farmers among the most industrious and up-to-date to be found anywhere. Naturally, therefore, they were "well-fixed," and, also naturally the business of the Roland merchants reflected their prosperity. Altogether, the district acquired a reputation far outside its own boundaries, as among the very best of the many thriving farming communities to be found in Manitoba.

The Roland merchants, however, had more than good businesses. They had the public spirit and what, in a bigger place would be called civic pride. They recognized the value of and were willing to pay for publicity —publicity for their village, for the securing of desirable improvements, publicity for their businesses, and publicity for their district. So, when it was proposed to establish a newspaper in Roland, the plan met with general and enthusiastic approval and support. And so, seven years since the News appeared. "Wise guys" shook their heads, and predicted that the plant would be for sale at a sacrifice in a few months. How could it live? Who was there to support it? These and similar questions were asked, but the News, thanks to its friends, fooled the prophets, and continued in a career of ever increasing prosperity. The West is a country, as has often been said, in which all signs fail, and the News has but served to give another illustration of that old truth.

At present the News is owned by the firm of Duncan & Tyndale. The counterfeit presentment of the junior member of the firm appears at the head of this article. Like most Western editors, he is but a young man, lacking a year of being thirty years old. He is a Barrie boy, having been born there in 1876. The year he was of age he came west, locating at Roland. He is not a newspaper man by training, and his success in journalistic work is another indication that the ordinary rules governing pre-eminence in any line of activity apply automatically to newspaper work. Success in newspaperdom is governed largely by industry and business sense. These qualities Mr. Tyndale possesses a sufficient share of to compel recognition in any line of life he undertakes. Until he undertook newspaper work, he had been identified with many enterprises in Roland, and the manner in which he conducted these was the surest guarantee of the continuance of the News successful career, since his indetification therewith.

The Secret of Health.

IS RICH, RED BLOOD—DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS MAKE NEW BLOOD.

Good blood—rich, red blood—is the only cure for such complaints as anemia, decline, heart palpitation, skin eruptions, rheumatism, kidney troubles and a host of other every-day ailments. Good blood makes you less liable to disease of every kind, because it strengthens and stimulates every organ in th body to throw off any ailment that may attack it. Good blood is the secret of life, and the secret of good, rich, red blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These little blood-building pills have saved lives that doctors and nurses have dispaired of. They have cured thousands of others—they will cure you too. Mrs. Wm. Boothe, Montrose, Ont., says: "For a couple of years my daughter Meta was in failing health. She complained of headaches and distressing weakness, and seemed to be rapidly going into decline. We consulted several doctors, but they did not help her. She was apparently bloodless, and we were afraid she would not recover. She had no appetite and was greatly reduced in flesh. At this stage a friend advised me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in a few weeks we noticed some improvement in her condition, and that her appetite was improving. We continued the treatment for a couple of months longer, and by that time she was again in he best of health. She had gained thirty-two pounds in weight, had a good color, and was in the best of spirits. I do not think I am putting it too strongly when I say I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do only one thing, but they do that well. They do not act upon the bowels; they do not bother with mere symptoms. They actually make the new, rich red blood that goes right to the root of the disease and drives it from the system. But you must get the genuine with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," printed on the wrapper around every box. All medicine dealers keep these pills or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Col. John T. Mosley, a famous Confederate scout in the civil war, now an efficient special agent of the Department of Justice, said one day in Washington, apropos of success: "The other morning I met Blank, hurrying along in his brisk, energetic way, the hopeful light still shining from his eyes, and the confident smile still playing about his firm mouth. "My heart went out in pity to Blank. He was a hard worker, very hard worker, yet in everything he undertook he failed. Three times in the last ten years Blank had faild in business. "So I stopped the poor fellow, and shook him by the hand. "Blank, said I, it is too bad. With all your push you don't seem to succeed." "I don't, eh? Blank replied. Haven't I made a success of my several failures?" "And he hurried off to make, as he informed me, another fat deposit in his wife's name."

A Pleasant Medicine.—There are some pills which have no other purpose evidently than to beget painful internal disturbances in the patient, adding to his troubles and perplexities rather than diminishing them. One might as well swallow some corrosive material. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have not this disagreeable and injurious property. They are easy to take, are not unpleasant to the taste, and their action is mild and soothing. A trial of them will prove this. They offer peace to the dyspeptic.

Commissioner Woodbury of the department of street cleaning tells this anecdote of a friend who was walking through Central Park the other day. Being in somewhat of a hurry, he started to cut across the grass at one place but was stopped by a park policeman, who remonstrated with him. "What difference does it make?" asked the New Yorker. "The grass is half dead anyway." "Sure, an' if it is?" responded the indignant guardian of the peace. "Sure an' if yez had a sick friend would yez be takin' a walk on his stomach?"

While the session of farmers was under way at New Hope, Ark., a maid with musical talents in the bud opened up a piano across the way and began that process known as cultivating the voice. "For goodness sake," exclaimed General Crowley, "what noise is that?" "Gently, General," explained Will Burton of Caddo township, who had just been elected one of the delegates. "That noise is from a young lady who is having her voice cultivated." "Cultivated, huh," said the General; "then it is evident the process of cultivation has reached the harrowing stage."

BED-RIDDEN 15 YEARS.—"If anybody wants a written guarantee from me personally as to my wonderful cure from rheumatism by South American Rheumatic Cure I will be the gladdest woman in the world to give it," says Mrs. John Beaumont, of Elora. "I had despaired of recovery up to the time of taking this wonderful remedy. It cured completely."—36.

A young girl just promoted to the grown-upness of paying calls by herself, when on entering the drawing-room of her neighbour, found it occupied by a strange man whom her hostess introduced as "My brother from India," and adding to the new arrival, "I'm so glad to see you, dear, but I must not kiss you, because I've such a bad cold." Then came the response: "I'm sorry, but I hope your brother has not got a cold too."

"Oh! my beautiful vase!" exclaimed Mrs. Hiram Offen. "That's the very worst thing you could have broken, Bridget!" "Faith, ma'am," replied Bridget, "I'm glad to hear it wasn't the best."

Great Things From Little Causes Grow.—It takes very little to derange the stomach. The cause may be slight, a cold, something eaten or drunk, anxiety, worry, or some other simple cause. But if precautions be not taken this simple cause may have most serious consequences. Many a chronically debilitated constitution to-day owes its destruction to simple causes not dealt with in time. Keep the digestive apparatus in healthy condition and all will be well. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are better than any other for the purpose.

Superintendent Foster of the New Orleans Street Railway company, formerly with the Boston & Northern at Salem, tells the following story of the days when "spotters" were much in evidence on the cars: A young fellow who had charge of one of the Salem Willows cars during the rush season was suspected of more than the ordinary "knocking down." He turned in his trips at the Salem office and the cashier, who was aware of what was going on, said: "Thank you." The next trip he turned in still less, and the polite cashier thanked him again. The next trip he brought in still less money but the cashier was there with his smiling "thank you." "What the deuce are you thanking me for?" asked the conductor. "For bringing in the car," replied the cashier.

The Crick in the Back.—"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," sings the poet. But what about the touch of rheumatism and lumbago, which is so common now? There is no poetry in that touch, for it renders life miserable. Yet how delighted is the sense of relief when an application of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil drives pain away. There is nothing equals it.

A certain Bishop, happily still with us, though retired from the cares of his colonial diocese, was famous throughout Australia no less for his quaint conceits than for his spiritual vigor and eloquence. When one of the clrgy described a wealthy parishoner as a careless, indifferent sort of a man who cared only for his garden during the day and his billiard room at night, he said: "Garden! Billiards! Don't call him careless; he evidently minds his peas and cues."

BABY'S BATTLES.

"Baby's Battles" is the title of a valuable little book on the care of infants and young children, published by the Dr. Williams' Memicine Co., Brockville, Ont., which will be sent post free to any mother who asks for it. It tells you also something about Baby's Own Tablets, a medicine that cures all the minor ailments of infants and young children—a medicine praised by every mother who has used it. Mrs. Richard Smiley, Leonard, Ont., says:—"We had a very sick baby in our house until we got Baby's Own Tablets. They were the first thing that did her any good, and I think were the means of saving our little one's life. I praise them to all mothers." All medicine dealers sell these Tablets or you can get them at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As my wife and I at the window one day
Stood watching a man with a monkey
A cart came by with a "broth of a boy"
Who was driving a stout little donkey.
To my wife I spoke by way of a joke,
"There's a relation of yours in that carriage,"
To which she replied, as the donkey she spied,
"Ah, yes, a relation by marriage."

There can be a difference of opinion on most subjects, but there is only one opinion as to the reliability of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It is safe, sure and effectual.

Castro and his army were preparing to descend on New Orleans. Great Scott!" exclaimed the Chicago man. "Have you made no preparations to repel the invaders? Where are your guns?" "We don't need any guns," chuckled the citizen of the Crescent City. "We have just filled the principal streets with New Orleans molasses and when Castro and his army land they will get their feet stuck and can't get out." And in the moonlight the city resembled a gigantic stick of flypaper.—Chicago News.

"You must mark down your age in this blank space," said the insurance agent to the beautiful woman. And she did. She marked it down from 28 to 22.

Punning repartee scintillated throughout a case at the County Court. Counsel—I wish my client was here instead of, as I expect, lying in bed. His honor—Perhaps he is better lying in bed than lying here.

Flannery—It seems his full name is "Dinnis K. K. K. Casey." What's all thim K's fur? Finnegan—Nothin'. It was the fault of his godfather stutterin' whin he tried to say "Dinnis Casey."—Philadelphia Ledger.

CURE THE MOST EXTREME CASES.

STONE IN THE KIDNEYS CANNOT STAND BEFORE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, of Ottawa, Permanently Cured After Years of Suffering by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Ottawa, Ont., May 22.—(Special—while all Canada knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the standard remedy for all Kidney Complaints, it may surprise some people to know they cure such extreme cases as Stone in the Kidneys. Yet that is what they have done right here in Ottawa.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, the man cured, is the well known proprietor of the Bijou Hotel on Metcalf street, and in an interview he says: "My friends all know that I have been a martyr to Stone in the Kidneys for years. They know that besides consulting the best of doctors in the city and trying every meaucine I could think of, I was unable to get better.

"Some time ago a friend told me Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them, and they have cured me.

"I could not imagine more severe suffering than one endures who has Stone in the Kidneys, and I feel the gratest gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the disease is of the Kidneys or from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

Andrew Carnegie plays golf well, and likes to talk about the game. Of one of his friends—a golf tyro—he said at a dinner in New York: "Blank went to play one day, and, disliking the rather forward manner of his caddie, discharged the lad and took another in his place. The discharged caddie, instead of retiring in a seemly manner to the club-house, hovered about Blank. He regarded closely the man's rather clumsy methods of play. On his freckled young face a sneer came and went. Blank chose a stck and swung for a long drive. But he missed the ball. The discharged caddie gave a loud laugh. Blank frowned at the boy and swung again—a mighty swing—but again he missed. There came from the caddie another harsh laugh. A third time Blank swung, and a third time only turf and dust rose into the air. "Hi, mister," yelled the caddie, derisively, "if you'll take me back I'll carry your clubs for the fun of the thing."

ONE SHORT PUFF CLEARS THE HEAD.—Does your head ache? Have you pains over your eyes? Is the breath offensive? These are certain symptoms of Catarrh. Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder will cure most stubborn cases in a marvellously short time. If you've had Catarrh a week it's a sure cure. If it's of fifty years' standing it's just as effective. 30 cents.—37.

"Well, Augustus," said a grocer to his clerk, "you have been working now three months, and have seen several departments of our trade. I wish to give you a choice of occupation." "Thank you, sir." "Well, now, what part of the business do you like best, Augustus?" "Shuttin' up, sir."

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

"I want to complain of the flour you sent me the other day," said Mrs. Newlived, severely. "What was the matter with it ma'am?" asked the grocer. "It was tough. My husband simply wouldn't eat the biscuits I made with it."

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO. Yarmouth, N. S.

Gentlemen,—In January last Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised, and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

Lunatic (looking over the wall of an asylum at a laborer working): This is a fine day sir, Laborer—It is indeed. Lunatic—Are you married? Laborer—Yes. Lunatic—Have you any family? Laborer—I have eight. Lunatic—How much a week have you? Laborer—Only 12s., and I have to support my wife and family on that. Lunatic—Well, all I can say is that you are on the wrong side of the wall.

WHERE DOCTORS DO AGREE!—Physicians no longer consider it catering to "quackery" in recommending in practice so meritorious a remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Nervousness as South American Nervine. They realize that it is a step in advance in medical science and a sure and permanent cure for diseases of the stomach. It will cure you.—40

Women are queer.—Call a girl a chick and she smiles; call a woman a hen and she howls. Call a young woman a witch and she is pleased; call an old woman a witch and she is indignant. Call a girl a kitten and she rather likes it; call a woman a cat and she hates you. If you call aman a gay dog it will flatter him; call him a pup, a hound, or a cur and he will try to alter the map of your face. He doesn't mind being called a bull or a bear, yet he will object to being mentioned as a calf or a cub. Men are queer, too.

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

Before he was raised to the Peerage Lord Kelvin was one day discovered by a friend experimenting with a long coil of wire. He was making deep sea soundings. His friend soon became interested in watching the great scientist at work, says a biographer, and asked: "What is that for?" "Oh," answered Lord Kelvin, "this is for making soundings." "Ah," said the other, with the evident intention of cracking a joke at the scientist's expense, "what sort of a note does it give off?" "The deep C of course," answered Lord Kelvin promptly.

LIKE TEARING THE HEART STRINGS.—It is not within the conception of man to measure my great sufferings from heart disease. For years I endured almost constant cutting and tearing pains about my heart, and many a time would have welcomed death. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart worked a veritable miracle."—Thos. Hicks, Perth, Ont.—39

Hester—You'll pardon me for speaking of it, but your fiancee is the greatest girl to borrow things I ever knew. She almost always has some of her sister's clothes on. Dolittle—By George I'm glad to know that; suppose she'll keep on wearing her sister's clothes after we are married? Be a big saving for me, won't it?

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house.

"There goes the most self-contained man I know—he's really eccentric." "How does he show it?" "Why, he gets up early every morning and takes a cold bath and he never brags about it!"

AWAKEN THE LIVER

And You Remove the Cause of Indigestion. Biliousness and Constipation.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

The liver, when in health, filters bile from the blood, where it is poison, and pours it into the intestines where it is necessary to digestion and a proper working of the bowels.

Once the liver becomes torpid and sluggish in action the "bile poison" is left in the blood, where it causes biliousness, jaundice, indigestion and headache.

The tongue is coated.
The breath bad.
The stomach sour.
The complexion muddy.
The bowels irregular.
The kidneys clogged.

Besides the pains and aches consequent on the poisoned condition of the system, there is the greatest danger from such diseases as Bright's disease and appendicitus.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse the kidneys, liver and bowels, and by their direct action on the liver cause a healthful flow of new bile to aid digestion and ensure the natural and healthful action of the bowels.

There is no means known by which indigestion, biliousness and constipation can be so promptly and thoroughly cured as by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Miss Julie Langlois, Manor, Assa., writes:—"For a long time I suffered from liver complaint and biliousness and could find nothing to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have recommended these pills to many of my friends and they have all been well satisfied with the results You can use this letter for the benefit of women who are suffering as I did."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

DOMINION DAY AT IRVINE.

The Dominion Day celebrations at Irvine commenced on Friday night with a dance held at the School at which all the elite of that go-a-head little town and surrounding districts were present. Several gentlemen arrived on No. 2 from the "Hat," including Messrs. Pingle, Campbell, Crompton, Stuttfield, Terrill, Irvin and R. Nicoll. Mr. Allen Irwin's Ochestra provided the music for the dancers and a right merry time was spent by all.

On Saturday afternoon a large crowd assembled at the Irvine athletic ground to witness the horse and foot races and a good afternoons sport was witnessed. A football match had been arranged with the Walsh team but unfortunately they wired at the last minute that they would be unable to send a team. The races resulted as follows:

¼ Mile Pony Race.
1 Mr. R. S. Clayton's Dell, riden by owner.

Among The Farmers.

Mr McNeely, of the Milling Company, has just returned from a trip through Southern Alberta, where he has been sizing up the fall wheat proposition, and reports that the fall wheat is in the most encouraging condition. Many fields will be harvested within the next three or four weeks, and promise a yield of 35 to 40 bushels to the acre. There is quite a lot of Odessa white fall wheat planted, but this is not so good for milling as turkey red, as the latter has proven to compare quite favourably with the best spring wheat for milling, and makes as strong a flour as spring wheat. On making inquiries as to the date of planting, and under what conditions, Mr McNeely finds that from the 30th to the last of August and on spring breaking has proved most satisfactory. Mr McNeely says if nothing happens to the crop now there will be over one million bushels of turkey red fall wheat harvested between Pincher Creek to Tabor and south to Magrath, and sees no difference in soil and climate between many parts in Southern Alberta, where thousands of acres of fall wheat is looking grand, and Medicine Hat district, where we have just as good wheat land, and is sure, if they have a crop of fall wheat in Alberta, we can grow it here just as successfully.

The Medicine Hat Rifle Club and the C. M. R, both intend sending a team to the Territorial Rifle association meeting at Calgary next week. The range will be open on Wednesday, Thursday Friday and Saturday afternoons this week for practice. The last league shoot, and also a spoon shoot will take place next Saturday.

LACROSSE.

The Lethbridge Lacrosse team came down to the Hat on the first with the avowed intention of playing the schedule game with Medicine Hat. Everything looked well for a good game until the teams were on the field. Then the trouble began. Captain Fred Gow of the Lethbridge team started making objections to Medicine Hat men. The first one he objected to was Halworth, but after a good deal of discussion he was satisfied that Halworth was alright, but he immediately protested Anderson and Reynolds and in spite of all the Hat captain could do short of putting the men objected to off, Lethbridge refused to play and walked off the field. The referee then lined the Hat boys up, they scored a goal and were awarded the game. There was a good crowd of spectators present who had paid to see the game, and this actionby Lethbridge placed the boys under the necessity of refunding the money. The home team had gone to considerable expense in connection with the game and consequently lost money on the deal.

NOTES.

We are asked to state that those who paid for entrance to the ground canhave their money back on presenting the tickets to the Secretary, Mr. C. E. Brougham, at the Club Cigar Store.

Lethbridge Lacrosse Club played a childish part.

There was no play in the Lethbridge outfit, at least not in the management. If they had any grounds for objecting they could have entered a protest and then played the game like sports and the public would not have been disappointed.

It is stated they did not intend to play a league game and were working for Medicine Hat to give them a sum of money to play an exhibition game. They made an exhibition all right.

We can only think of one reason for the action of Lethbridge—fear. The Hat beat them last time on their own ground and would have knocked spots off them on Saturday and the Lethbridge children knew it.

WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MEN PASS THROUGH.

On Sunday morning the members of the Washington Press party arrived at Medicine Hat on their way to the coast. They were met here by Acting-Mayor J. K. Drinnan, Councillors Smythe and Sissons, Messrs. W. T. Finlay M.L.A., Thomas Tweed, H. Tweed, G. P. Blythe, A. E. Whiffen, W. C. Harris, Col. Porter (Calgary) and Mr. Rowley (Calgary). The Pressmen expressed themselves as much pleased and a good deal astonished to see the development which is taking place on our vast prairies. Councillor Drinnan accompanied the party to Calgary and reports having had a very pleasant trip. He gave the party a cordial invitation to stop off here on their return (on the 12th), and supplied them with particulars as to the resources of Medicine Hat.

The coolest place in town these hot days is Cook's ice cream parlor.

On Wednesday evening Miss Lea, sister of Mrs. A. P. Day, was treated to a "kitchen shower." Miss Lea will shortly be united in marriage to Mr. W. G. TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the Council was held last night. Present: Councillors J. K. Drinnin (acting-mayor), H. Stewart, T. Penhale, A. DesBrisay, F. O. Sissons, C. F. Smyth; W. N. Adsit, town clerk; Geo. H. Markwick, chief of police; W. T. Williams, architect; W. E. Porter, superintendent of works.

The minutes of the last regular and a special meeting were read and confirmed.

A number of accounts were received, and a good deal of routine business was gone through with, but there was nothing of much public interest except

Mr. W. J. Boyd, Little Plume, registered at the Royal Hotel on Thursday.

Mr. John Nixon, of Maple Creek, was registered at the Assiniboia Hotel on Thursday.

Mr. Albert Hughes is talking of returning to the Old Country. Mr. Hughes thinks he has earned a rest "at home" having spent the last thirty years in Belguim, India, Austrailia, China and Western Canada. Although he has engaged in ranching during the last few years he is a druggist by profession and was one of the pioneer druggists in this town We shall be sorry to see him go from the neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Botcher entertained a large party of friends on Friday evening.

There will be a meeting of the Directors of the Agricultural Society on Saturday next July 8th.

Mr. Alex Shaw, of Woolchester, was in town on Thursday, and in conversation with the Times mentioned the fact that one day last week the Little Plume Creek was dry at 10 o'clock in the morning and two hours later was a raging torrent. The water was first observed by Mrs. Shaw to be coming like a solid wall three feet high filling the creek from side to side. The sudden flow must have been caused by heavy rain up the creek.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

Would it not be a good plan for the government to lay the gas throughout the Court House? Gas is connected now for heating purposes, but when any meeting is extended into the evening, somebody has to rustle up some oil lamps. This looks bad in a town where gas is so cheap and it is inconvenient to say the least, but the government know nothing about it, so I suggest that the matter be brought to their notice. Perhaps Mr. Bray will take the matter up.

I would like to take the Council for a walk some wet day and show them some miry spots in the gravel sidewalks. During the past year a lot of new gas and water connections have been made in various parts of the town but when the trenches were filled up no sort of effort was made in any solitary instance that I know of to put the sidewalk as good as it was before. On the contrary, the stuff has been pitched in anyhow, gravel underneath, earth on top, with the result that there are puddles all along now where there should be none. At other points a little gravel is badly wanted at the crossings.

I know well what the answer to this will be. "We are going to lay granolithic sidewalks and don't want to go to any expense for repairs". That's all right but "while the grass is growing the horse may starve". In other words while preparations are being made to lay permanent sidewalks the people have to plough and plunge through slushy places, caused by carelessness. Verily the wet weather pedestrian might well exclaim: "My feet are set in slippery places. Verily gravel? crossings are a delusion and a snare.

Civic advance brings increased responsibility. If a town forms streets builds sidewalks, drains, culverts and so on, it means that men are required to look after things and keep them up. That is rapidly becoming the case here at the "Hat". The choking of some culverts resulting in flooded cellars during heavy rain last week shows that something more must be done in future to keep our streets clean and clear. A suit of oilskins will have to be provided and a man to fill the oilskins, said man to get out and keep the outlets clear during the downpour.

Overheard at Maple Creek:—Why sir, gas is so cheap up at the Hat that it is cheaper to let the street lamps burn all night than to send a man round to "turn them out". That's about right.

I am not a "prophet or the son of a prophet", but I believe I can spot next year's Mayor of Medicine Hat all right.

I wonder if the readers of this column care to read curious epitaphs. I have not seen anything very curious in epitaphs in Western Canada, but on the tombstones in older lands some very funny examples are to be found. Here is one, a quaint regret, places over some singers:

Beneath this tree lie singers three.
Now they're gone we ne'er shall find
Three such to fill their places.

There is one in a churchyard in Cornwall which is perhaps lacking a little in reverence.

Here lies the body of Mary Carthew,
Of children she had five.
Born in St. Columb, died in St. Kew
Two are dead and three alive,
Those who are dead preferring rather
To die with their mother, than live with their father.

A church in Chester can show an epitaph one would like to deserve. It reads as follows:

"A just and compassionate man who would neither cringe to an Emperor Nor tread on a worm".

A Parish Clerk who had succeeded his father in the office has the following written over him in Bakewell Parish churchyard:

ERECTED

In remembrance of Philip Rae
who died 12th Sept. 1815
aged 52 years.

The vocal powers here let us mark
Of Philip our late Parish Clerk
In church none ever heard a Layman
With a clearer voice say "Amen!"
Who now with Hallelujahs Sound
Like him can make the Roofs resound?

The Choir lament his Choral Tones
The Town so soon—Here lie his bones
"Sleep undisturbed within thy peaceful shrine
Till angels wake thee with such notes as thine".

The briefest example recorded was found in a Swiss Churchyard by an English tourist, and recorded in Home Words. The discoverer says, "Simply and grandly it stood, even as the mountains stand:

Found Climbing.

The following was written over a lady who must have been a bit of a talker.

Here lies returned to clay
Miss Arabella Young,
Who, on the first of May,
Began to hold her tongue.

A man who was not thought much of had the following placed over his remains:

Here lies a man
Who did no good,
If he'd lived
He never would;
Where he's gone
Or how he fares
Nobody knows, and
Nobody cares.

Perhaps the best a man can have on his grave is a "bunch of flowers placed there by loving hands.

"What have they wound up on that cart?" asked the old lady who was visiting the fire-hall.

"Firemen's hose," was the reply.

"What!" she rejoined, indignantly "You can't make me think that any fireman or anybody else ever had legs to fit those."

Are you still troubled with your neighbour's chickens?

Not at all. They are kept shut up now.

How did you manage?

"Every night I hid a lot of eggs in the grass, and every morning, when my neighbour was looking, I went out and brought them in.

The terrors of the deep were perhaps never more thrillingly set forth than in the description by a young lady who last year made her first trip abroad. She kept a diary, very much like that of Mark Twain, when for seven days he recorded the fact that he got up, washed and went to breakfast.

There was one important exception When she crossed the channel the experience was so trying that she felt impelled to describe it.

"I firmly resolved to stay on deck she wrote, "although the tempest increased to such a frightful hurricane that it was only with the greatest difficulty that I could hold up my parasol."

A commendable characteristic of W. L. Douglas, Governor of Massachusetts, is his enjoyment of a joke on himself as much as on the other fellow. Not long ago he dropped into a strange barber's shop to have his scant hair trimmed. After the job had been completed, the barber handed Mr. Douglas a cheque for sixpence.

"How's this?" said Mr. Douglas. "Doesn't that sign over ther say "First-class hair cut for fourpence?"

"Yes—yes," replied the barber, "but you haven't first class hair."

General Lord Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the British forces in India seems to regard as inevitable a great struggle with Russia for possession of India and to believe that the existing arrangements for the defence of the Indian Empire are obsolete and ineffective. These views form the striking and central points of interest in a bulky blue book issued recently, dealing with the conflict of opinion between Viceroy Curzon, the Indian Council, and Lord Kitchener, which the government has just settled by a compromise, giving the latter extended powers in the direction he desired.

An American Disease.

Some doctors go so far as to say that indigestion is the national disease of America. There is but one national remedy for indigestion and that is Dr. Hamilton's Pills which accelerate the action of the gastric glands and give tone to the digestive organs. They strengthen the kidneys and liver, cleanse and purify the blood and thus add general tone to every organ of the body. Flesh and strength are fast restored and the patient can eat and digest any food he pleases. Test Dr. Hamilton's Pills yourself.—25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00 at all dealers.

What does it matter, it is only a difference of opinion, was said at a recent temperance meeting. But the consequence of wrong thought, and then doing as she thought, soon proved how wrong to those who said it is only a matter of opinion. For when the word of God tells us that a thing is wrong better pray and strive to do as the guide book tells us. There is a story told of two young ladies at a boarding school who asked permission to go out walking. When they were allowed permission they went to call on some friends and other students. In the social hour which followed cake and wine were served. One of the young ladies present said: Oh please excuse me as I am pledged to temperance. Nonsense, answered the lady of the house, it is only a little wine, and as for temperance it is only a matter of opinion. That young lady yielded and drank the glass of wine, but the sad consequences are a ruined life and her money spent in the trial of a gold cure. Now she is in an insane asylum. This should prove to those who say it is only a matter of opinion how wrong they are. But the hope and prayer of the White Ribbon Band is that Jesus will save us from wrong or leading into temptation any soul, for God is not willing that even one should perish, but that all may come to eternal life of peace and joy.

PIANO RECITAL.

The Tripp piano recital in the Opera House on Saturday, 8th July, will be something new. Mr Tripp is doubtless the first pianist in his class to visit Medicine Hat. We have had many piano players, but none brilliant enough to take the leading part in a concert. There is a difference between a virtuoso and an accompanist, and a great difference between a "finished" virtuoso on a concert grand piano and an accompanist on an ordinary upright piano Of Mr Tripp the New York Musical Courier says: "The most brilliant pianist before the American public." Programme:—

(a) Beethoven.....Andante Favori in F.
(b) Chopin.....Polonaise Militaire.
Mr. Tripp.

Dudley Buck..When the heart is young.
Gertrude White.

(a) Schumann....Nachtsueck (Op. 23 4)
(b) Chopin.....Etude in F. minor.
(c) Paganini-Schumann. Caprice Celebre in E.
Mr. Tripp.

Wieniawski.....Chanson Polonaise.
Mr. Robertson.

(a) Rubinstein...Barcarolle in F. minor.
(b) Moszkowski..Valse in E. (Op. 34 1.)
Mr. Tripp.

Jules Hone.....Danse de May-pole.
Mr. Robertson.

Mascagni.....Ave Maris.
Gertrude White.

Paganini-Liszt.....La Campanella.

Saskatoon is a go-ahead-town and has an active and enterprising Board of Trade. On Saturday the delegates attending the Board of Trade convention at Regina were conveyed by special train to Saskatoon as the guests of the Board of Trade, and were right royally entertained, returning to Regina on Sunday.

Mrs. R. J. Rice left for Spokane on Sunday evening.

Mr. L. C. Charlesworth paid a visit to Suffield on Saturday.

Miss B. Harrison arrived on Thursday morning from the east.

Mr. J. G. Waidock arrived from the West on Saturday morning.

Mr. Horace Greely, of Maple Creek, was a visitor in town on Saturday.

Mrs and Miss McNiece were passengers for the West on Saturday morning's train.

Mr. John Stocks, Deputy Commissioner of Public Works, Regina, went west on Saturday morning.

Mr. Arthur Holmes arrived from Oak Lake, Manitoba, on Thursday and went out to his ranch, south of town. He will take a bunch of horses to Manitoba this week.

Heavy rains last Tuesday gave a thorough soaking to the land for several miles around Medicine Hat. In town many cellars were flooded, drains were choked and for an hour the streets were like rivers so great was the rush of water.

Mr. T. Murray, of Seven Persons, was in town on Saturday meeting his eldest daughter who has been at Mitchell Ontario, in school, during the past eight years. To the surprise of townspeople he said they wanted more rain at his ranch which is 30 miles south west of town. It appears the deluge of rain that visited the Hat last Tuesday did not reach so far into the country.

A Mistaken Idea.

We think we can safely say that the public were considerably surprised at the action, or want of action, on the part of the Coroner's jury which inquired into the circumstances surrounding the death of our late townsman, A. W. Green. The public, we believe, had every reason to expect that the jury would have added a rider to their verdict, calling for an improved ferry or a traffic bridge, preferably the latter. The jury took what we consider to be a very extraordinary view of their duty to the public when they announced that they did not consider it within their province to make any recommendations upon the subject. They would certainly have been well within their province in bringing in some very strong resolution, sufficiently strong indeed to condemn the ferry as being totally unfit for present requirements, and urging the construction of a bridge as a matter of public safety. The jury took a very weak position indeed when they put it that other bodies should take up the question. They had the opportunity of leading the other bodies, were expected to do so, but they failed.

Acting in Bad Faith.

Mayor Forster was sent down to Ottawa at the public expense for a certain specific object, namely to bring certain municipal matters to the attention of the Government. What he has done in that line remains to be seen. We hope that both Mr. Forster and Mr. Hutchinson have been able to convince the Government upon the several points. We hope to hear of their complete success but it is much to be regretted that during his first days in Ottawa, Mayor Forster allowed himself to be interviewed and gave expressions of opinion upon the Autonomy Bills. In using the occasion to express opinions upon the school question he not only forgot his dignity as the Mayor of this town but acted in bad faith to those who sent him. His expenses are being paid by Conservatives as well as by Liberals, and he quite forgot himself, and the conditions of his being in Ottawa at all, when he presumed to speak for the West upon political questions.

The Universal Language.

Not many weeks ago the need for a universal language was referred to in these columns and we argued in favor of the adoption of one language by the nations of the world for commercial and all practical purposes. The idea is not a new one but it has progressed slowly. Each year, however, witnesses some advance and now comes the announcement from New York that Admiral Togo and Admiral Rojestvenski, in their memorable meeting conversed in English. The proposals for the ending of the war have been effectively made in English. The negotiations for peace, are, it seems likely, to be held where English is the mother tongue. Of a truth, the problem of a universal language appears to be making progress towards solution by easy and natural processes.

The Hour Has Struck.

However much we may differ as to the school question or upon any other matter of Dominion or Provincial politics let us never forget that the present is Canada's great opportunity and let us endeavor so to conduct ourselves and our arguments that the best settlers may not be driven away by the bother. Canada has never made progress except when the race and religion extremists have been silent; and she never needed the ability to devote every ounce of her energies to the giant task of keeping pace with her fabulous opportunities as fully as she needs it to-day. The hour has struck for the West. The eyes of all Europe are on it; and there is hardly a hamlet in the United States where some family is not anxiously weighing the chances of emigrating to the new El Dorado. Western Canada is to the present what California was to the "forty-niner"; and the greatest movement of the age is toward it. If the people of Canada are to reap any adequate advantage from this inflowing tidal wave of prosperity, says the Montreal Star, they will have to keep their wits about them. The Americans who are coming are not the dullest of Uncle Sam's children. The British settlers who are pouring in lack neither enterprise, pluck nor ability. We are as yet the owners of the mansion, and we can remain the owners of very much of the furniture and services by which it must be supplied—that is, we can, if we devote ourselves as an organized people unitedly to the task of holding our own.

Great Britian and the United States.

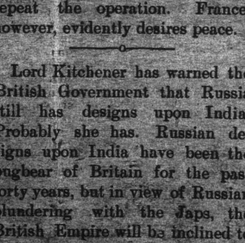
The banquet of the Piligrim's Club in London, last week, held to welcome Ambassador Reid, of the United States, proved an occasion of great international significance. In fact it became one of historic importance on accout of Premier Balfours solemn declaration that the time had arrived for the United States to abandon her position of isolation and accept her rightful responsibilities in the family of nations. The Premier of England was addressing one of the most distinguished Anglo - American companies that ever gathered in London, and his words constituted almost an invitation for the United States to enter into a compact or alliance for safe-guarding the world's peace. Mr. Balfour said in part:

"Immemorial traditions have indicated the desire of the United States to keep themselves as little entangled as may be with the complex political relations of the older world on this side of the Atlantic. I doubt whether in its absolute and extreme purity that doctrine is likely to be permanently maintained. So great a nation as you (Mr. Reid) represent, owing so much and giving so much to the civilization of old Europe, sharing its learning and advancing its science, can hardly expect to be able to share all things and yet take no part whatever in the polictical life which is an inseparable element of them. It is almost as inconceivable that the United States should remain in that ideal isolation, as that some vast planet suddenly introduced into the system should not have its perturbing influence on other planets. I do not think that either America or Europe will regard this inevitable contingency with any other feeling than gratification, and so far as we in great Britian are concerned, with pride." Mr. Balfour then referred to the efforts made by President Roosevelt to bring about peace between Japan and Russia, and said that every man in the civilized world desired that the negotiations should end the war.

Ambassador Reid's reply was to the effect that no one could think of any subject the wide world round on which Great Britian and the United States have real causes for serious difference or disputes, and that his chief duty was not to make peace between the two countries, for that is stable and secure, not to promote good-will for that is over-flowing, but to send that good-will down to the deeper foundations and give it wide growth and absolute permanence. That would be a guarantee of perpetual peace. May these noble sentiments on both sides weld the two nations together.

France and Germany are still very angry with one another over the Morocco question. While the Governments are keeping cool the people are rapidly losing their heads.

Germany certainly knocked spots off France in 1870, but we think she would find it difficult to repeat the operation. France, however, evidently desires peace.



Lord Kitchener has warned the British Government that Russia still has designs upon India. Probably she has. Russian designs upon India have been the bugbear of Britain for the past forty years, but in view of Russian blundering with the Japs, the British Empire will be inclined to treat Lord Kitchener's words somewhat coolly.

During a riot in Russian Poland last week, the Cossack soldiers shot down hundreds of people. Five hundred were killed and hundreds wounded. The Cossacks at home are far more deadly than the Cossacks in Manchuria.

MILLIONS LOST IN WASTED FRUIT.

Cold storage is a subject which has recently been discussed in the House of Commons, thanks to Mr. J. E. Armstrong, M. P. for East Lambton.

LOSS ON APPLES $20,000,000.

It is estimated that in apples alone $20,000,000 is lost to the farmers of Canada every year as a result of the lack of proper storage facilities. Most of this loss falls upon the farmers of Ontario, because that province grows more apples than all the rest of the Dominion combined. It is the old story of a feast and a famine. When the apples are ripe they are so plentiful that they can be had for a trifle. In a few months, despite the most abundant crops, they are usually so scarce as to be numbered with the luxuries. Hundreds of thousands of bushels rot on the ground. This was the case last fall. The few farmers who have storage plants were able to abolish losses of this kind. They had all their crops for sale. Moreover, they held their apples until the glut of the market had been relieved, and then placed their stock at good prices.

WHERE NEW ZEALAND GAINS.

As a direct result of Canada's failure to appreciate cold storage our fruit trade decreased by $14,000,000 last year. New Zealand's export trade is growing enormously, especially in dairy products, and all through a system of transportation, which is thus described by Mr. J. A. Ruddick, chief of the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture.

"We are beginning to learn though it seems to be a slow process, that it is important that butter should be kept at as low a temperature as possible from the time it is made. Canadians have been losing a good deal of ground in the markets of Great Britain through negligence on this point. In that respect we are a long way behind New Zealand. All the refrigerator steamers sailing from New Zealand carry frozen meat. It is a matter of necessity that the temperature in the chamber be kept very low. As a matter of fact, they are carrying frozen meat at a temperature from zero to ten degrees. Butter when it is shipped from New Zealand to England, is placed in the chamber along with the frozen meat. The steamer is one large refrigerator. The refrigeration on them was provided in the first place for the frozen meat trade. As the butter trade has grown, the same boats have been used for the purpose, and so they have the best possible service for sending butter to England. Butter to be exported from New Zealand is put in store and frozen, and kept at a temperature of ten degrees at least four full days before going aboard the steamer. So the butter is kept at a low temperature from the third or fourth day after it is made until it reaches England. This is one reason why New Zealand has been making such great progress in securing the trade of Great Britain for her butter. They are getting a good price almost equal to Danish.

ROOM FOR STATESMANSHIP.

As Mr. Armstrong pointed out, it is almost useless for a farmer to have a cold storage plant unless the storage chain is complete from orchard to table. Of what benefit is it to the fruit exporter to preserve his apples in fine condition for months if they must be shipped on a boat whose facilities are of the crudest kind? If there is not proper storage at the other end of the line the precautions of both grower and steamship company amounts to little. The need is for a statesman who thoroughly understands the situation to force the government to take action in the interests of the fruit- growers, butter and cheese makers, and also the beef-growers all of whom would benefit. We hold that cold storage is the thing to which western beef-growers have to look in the future, but the storage as pointed out above must be complete from the killing house to the consumer in the old country.

The Noon Hour.

Many a hard working young woman spends her noon hour in an endeavor to get a little rest to carry her through the remaining hours of the day. She is weak and weary, but she cannot give up the occupation which supports her. She must go back to the office and the typewriter, to the store and the counter, to the tiresome customers to wait on or the unsympathetic employers to please.

For people who are weak and run down there is no medicine so valuable as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Many diseases in organs remote from the stomach have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and its allied organs. When the stomach is "weak" there is a failure to properly digest and assimilate the food which is eaten. Hence the whole body, and each organ of it, suffers from lack of nutrition, so that as a consequence of "weak" stomach, there may be "weak" lungs, "weak" heart, "weak" or torpid liver, "weak" nerves, etc. By curing diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, "Golden Medical Discovery" enables the assimilation of the nutriment necessary for the requirements of a healthy body. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of blood which is the vital fluid of the body.

There is no alcohol in the "Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Sick and ailing people especially those suffering from disease in its chronic form are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

There is no similar offer of free medical advice which has behind it an institute of national note such as the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., presided over by Dr. Pierce, its chief consulting physician, with the assistance of nearly a score of skilled specialists.

"The Wonderful Medicine."

"I must again send a few lines to you to let you know how I am getting along since taking the wonderful medicine which cured me two years ago," writes Miss Bertha Ebeler, of 1426 Benton Street, St. Louis, Mo. "I still continue in very good health and think there is not a better medicine on earth than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. We would not be without it in the house, and also the little 'Pellets.'

"I have recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to many friends, and they all think it will do just what is claimed for it. It is the best thing for nervousness and for a weak, run down condition that any body could want. I was very nervous and weak last summer. I took five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it just made me feel like a new person. It gives a person new life and new blood. I can now work all day long without feeling the least bit tired. In fact I feel like a new person.

"My mother was also cured by it of a very bad state of stomach trouble about three years ago. I thank you a thousand times for what you have done for me and for your kind advice."

Wasted to a Skeleton.

"About six years ago my health failed," writes Miss Alethea R. Green, of Coopstown, Harford Co., Maryland. "I kept getting down lower and lower, until I could scarcely walk across the floor without struggling and gasping for breath. My home physician pronounced it general debility and catarrh of the throat, but although he did all he could, he failed to even relieve me. I tried various remedies, but all of no avail. I soon wasted away to a mere skeleton. Finally I was persuaded to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., which I did immediately. And on receiving his very kind advice I commenced the use of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription.' I took fourteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and nine of the 'Favorite Prescription' and to-day I am a well woman. I do heartily thank God and Dr. Pierce for my good health."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 50 one-cent stamps for the book in cloth binding, or 21 stamps for the paper covered volumes. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"The Young Man and His Problems" is a series of helpful and heart-to-heart talks with young men, to appear in The Western Home Monthly of Winnipeg. The future success or failure of many young men hinges upon the successful solution of the important life problems that will be discussed with wide knowledge of the conditions and a deep sympathy with the ambitions of the men of affairs of to-morrow—the young men of to-day.

WESTERN CANADA'S GREAT INDUSTRIAL FAIR.

JULY 20th TO 28th, 1905.

The improvements at the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition grounds are beginning to take shape and the grounds are assuming a very business-like aspect, preparatory to the opening of the fair. The new macadam roadway which runs from the main entrance to the west end of the grand stand has been made and is a great improvement to the appearance of that portion of the grounds. Several exhibitors have arrived with their goods and the industrial sections are becoming more and more animated each day.

The accommodation bureau in connection with the Winnipeg Industrial exhibition has been opened in the city hall and is in charge of Captain Harper Wilson. Those from outside who desire rooms should apply to him either personally or by letter. In consequence of the extra accommodation at Winnipeg this year it has not been necessary to have an active canvass.

Another feature has been added to the attraction programme of the Winnipeg exhibition, which was already heavily laden with a choice assortment of the newest and most entertaining of the season's attractions in New York. A wire has been received from F. W. Heubach, who is in New York, stating that he has secured the contract with the Alvin troupe, who have what is claimed to be one of the most novel and comical acts that has ever appeared in Gotham, entitled "Boarding the ostrich in his den." In this act a bummy ostrich is hunted by four enterprising huntsmen with blunderbusses and nets, and their endeavors to trap this wary bird are said to be excruciatingly funny. A New York paper describes it as one of the funniest acts seen there this season.

More information to hand concerning the performers who had been engaged makes it certain that the attractions will be the best ever. The act presented by the Colonial Sextette is one of their newest hits in vaudeville, having been before the public but a few weeks. As its title indicates there are seven members in the act, three women and four men, each of whom is an artist. The act includes singing, dancing and instrumental music. For the latter they play on various kinds of instruments including the cornet, violin, bass horn and long horn, resembling that used on tallyho coaches except that the horns used by the septette are very long. The act created a sensation upon its first appearance and duplicated its success then made at each of the subsequent bookings. It is rarely that a new act jumps so quickly into popularity as this one, and it is also rarely that this fair management has been able to secure a novelty so new.

INDIA'S PROSPECTS.

In presenting to the House of Commons his annual statement on the finances of India Mr. Broderick furnished some interesting details regarding Lord Kitchener's reorganization schemes. To carry out the plans the Indian Secretary asks for $12,500,000. The main provisions of Lord Kitchener's schemes, Mr. Broderick pointed out included the creation by India of nine divisions in peace or war, the increase of the field army from 80,000 to 140,000 men, and the re-grouping of troops so as to bring them nearer the north-western frontier. The expenditure, said Mr. Broderick, was large but the need was pressing.

Alluding to what he called "some friction" between the military department and Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of State for India admitted that the government had not been able to conceal from themselves the fact that Lord Kitchener's position had become an anamalous one since his proposals were reviewed by the Army member of the council who was his subordinate in military rank

Both Lord Curzon and Lord Kitchener are necessary in India. Both are great men, even though they disagree on this one matter.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL.

An ice cream social was held on Wednesday evening in the skating rink, under the auspicies of the Ladies Auxilliary of St. Barnabas Church. The rink had been cleaned and fitted up by Messrs. Oakes, Holloway, Bates, Cross and Parker and the refreshments were dispensed by Mrs. Cochran, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Ireland, Mrs. Steel, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs Richards, Mrs. Everard, Miss Cochran, Misses Cunliffe (2), Misses Harris (2), Miss Parker, Misses Heyen (3), Miss Mildred Hayward, Miss Walton, Miss Gilbert, Miss Bray, Miss Annie Mitchell. The sum of $65 was realised and this will be devoted to reducing the debt on the church.

WASHINGTON PRESS MEN HERE.

Through the train from the West on Wednesday being delayed in the mountains it was four hours late in arriving here and the Washington Journalists having come in to see the Crow line were detained over for a time. The Mayor and other citizens got a hustle on and obtaining a number of conveyances gave the visitors a drive round town and showed them the natural gas wells. At 9 o'clock the Mayor, Councillors Drinnan, Smythe, Messrs. W. T. Finlay M.L.A., L. B. Cochran, Thos. Tweed, Wm. Cousins, F. L. Crawford, Dr. Smith, Jno. Benson, W. C. Harris, and other citizens met the party at the depot and drove them to see the waterworks plant gas wells, etc. The gas wells showed a pressure of 450 pounds at the time of the visit. After a drive round town the whole party alighted at the Cypress Club where light refreshments were served. During the drive Dr. Smyth presented some of the party with some large H. P. roses grown in the open in his garden. The Pressmen were agreeably surprised at what they saw at Medicine Hat and we consider the town was very fortunate in having them here for a while. The party is under direction of Theodore Knappen, Secretary of the Western Canada Immigration Association, Winnipeg and Minneapolis.

STIMULATING LACROSSE IN THE WEST.

Lacrosse is one of the finest of athletic sports. An effort is shortly to be made to secure a picked team to play Medicine Hat. Those who enjoy the sport are very anxious to see the game arranged. Calgary has some of the best lacrosse players in the Dominion if they can only be brought out. Here is an opportunity to interest the lovers of this sport and no pains should be lost to take advantage of it.—Calgary Herald.

Has Canada the Right to Deport American Silver.

(Toronto Telegram).

The Fielding plan for the deportation of American silver is inspired by the theory that Canada is a nation.

It is a beautiful plan by which the Canadian banks are to get less than one per cent. for collecting United States silver and ship it out of the country.

Or it would be a beautiful plan if Sir Wilfred Laurier had not first made Canada a nation, then sat with folded hands while Hon. Judge Anglin made us a "dependency."

"One of the highest judges in the land" has decided that a dependency cannot ship United States citizens out of the country.

It follows, as the night the day, that a "dependency" cannot ship United States currency out of the country.

The Fielding plan will work until the banks accumulate the United States silver and collect their modest per centage for the work.

Then the whole plan will go up in the air on the tossing horns of Ontario Jurisprudence.

A "dependency" can order the collection of United States silver.

A "dependency" can pay the banks a modest percentage for the work of collecting United States silver.

A "dependency" cannot deport United States silver, unless it shoots the white stuff into the United States with a gun.

TUESDAY, JULY 18th, 1905.

No Peace.

"There is no peace for the wicked," and even the righteous have their troubles. The Town Council can answer for the latter. The latest little trouble which is facing the Council is the fact that many residents on the north side of the railway track are beginning to find fault with the Council for spending so much money on public works on the south side, while comparatively little is being spent on the north side. Our Councillors will have to try and even matters up a little or there will be trouble for them soon.

Homesteads for Women. Why Not?

It may be late in the day, perhaps too late, to suggest that more facilities should be granted to women to take up free homsteads in Western Canada. In some parts of the United States women, whether widows or spinsters may take up free land, but in Canada, according to the present regulations only those women who are "heads of families" can take up land. The country will give 160 acres of land to any young fellow of 18 years of age, who may prove as fickle about it as a butterfly, while the "noble army of spinsters" are denied the privilege. Among that same army of spinsters (many perhaps hopelessly "on the shelf") are doubtless many women, without much money who, if they could get free land, could go out and make a success of chicken raising and dairying, and so solve the problem of cheap poultry, eggs and butter. Is it too late, Mr. Oliver, to do anything for the spinsters?

75,000 Sheep.

We read in an exchange the other day that—"About fifteen miles east of Sterling, there is gathered together practically all the sheep in the country, some 75,000 being herded there for the shearing These sheep include the flocks of Gray & Harvey, Harker Bros., P. North, the Perrott flock and some smaller bunches. A crew of forty men, under charge of Contractor J. Hardman, are piling up the fleeces and it is expected that at least a month more will be required to finish the shearing: Last week the flock of the Alberta Sheep Co. were sheared at their camp twelve miles east of Lethbridge." An advertisement will be found in another column of a lot of stock sheep for sale by Harker Bros. mentioned above, and it may be interesting to note that Harker Bros. sold $16,000 worth of wool this season. The firm own 21,500 sheep.

New Weed Bulletin.

We have received a copy of the new Weed Bulletin which has just been issued by the Territorial Department of Agriculture. The Bulletin which is entitled "Hints for the Grain Grower" has been prepared by Mr. T. N. Willing the Chief Weed Inspector and Naturalist of the Department. Besides clear illustrations of all the weeds listed as "Noxious" within the meaning of the Noxious Weed Ordinance the bulletin contains cuts of a number of other plants which are some times troublesome. A feature of work is a fine colored plate of that enemy of the farmer the Stinkweed. The plate was prepared from an excellent water colour drawing executed for the Department by Mr. Norman Criddle of Aweme, Man., and is a lifelike representation. We understand it is the intention of the Department to supply a copy of this plate to each country school in the Territories so that the children may learn to recognise this weed at sight. The bulletin contains besides the description of weeds, practical articles on such subjects as: "Preparation of the soil for a grain crop," "Seeds and Seeding," "Noxious Insects," "Gophers," "Smut," "Potato Scab." This bulletin is distributed free of cost and copies may be obtained on application to the Deputy Commissioner, Department of Agricultural, Regina.

Argumentum ad Ignorantiam.

The News came out last week, as might have been expected, in defence of the Mayor's remarks at Ottawa when interviewed by a reporter in that city and tried to take us to task, for our remarks upon the subject. The article calls for very few words in reply. In the interview in question the Mayor announced: "We are the deputation whose coming was so loudly proclaimed in the London campaign." If he possessed the "decency" and "etiquette" which the News appears to value so highly he would have considered it beneath his dignity to make any reference at all to that subject.

We presume the Mayor means to tell us he didn't talk politics. Well, he made this remark in the interview:

"We accept the clause (the school clause in the Autonomy Bill), as perpetuating the system which has worked so satisfactorily."

Can it be possible that Mayor Forster is not aware that a vast number of people in the West do NOT accept the position which prepetnates the school system originally forced on the Territories? If he is not, he spoke, of course through sheer ignorance and we suppose must be excused upon those grounds. Indeed we are willing and charitable enough to let it go at that,

But what we contended, and still contend is that Mayor Forster being at Ottawa at public expense forgot himself and the occasion of his being at Ottawa at all when he gave expression to the above, and presumed to speak for the West. We repeat and emphasise the statement that being at Ottawa at the public expense he had no business to express any opinion upon political questions. He should have had common sense enough to refrain. He made a statement at Ottawa which apparently he has not sufficient ossification of the cerebral column to make in the columns of the News. We object to any such statement on such a trip and when half his expenses are paid by people who do not agree with him.

"Decency in Journalistic Etiquette."

While the News held up their hands in holy horror last week because the Times dared to criticise Mayor Forster's utterance at Ottawa, they professed that "they are unable to fathom the pettiness of the spirit which would suggest the criticism referred to." In the same breath they sink to the low level of the Billingsgate orator in suggesting that the Times would "trim up to" a certain unnamed gentleman. We challenge the News to name any person that the Times has "trimmed up to." Let them name the person and give the occasion——if they can.

"Let's ginger up" said the News. That's pretty high class for a paper troubled about "decency in journalistic etiquette."

"Decency in journalistic etiquette" is something the News have yet to learn.

"Did anyone ever hear any complaint about the Northwest educational system in Medicine Hat or other Northwest towns? whined "injured innocence," down the avenue. The News missed the point of our article but never mind, they mean to "ginger up."

It is a significant fact that Russia's peace envoys—Count Muravieff and Baron de Rosen—are representatives of the St. Petersburg war party. The task which lies before them must be a most galling one.

Bail has been refused Gaynor and Greene, and this is about the first thing that has been refused them since they came to Canada at the time of the Fenian Raid.

The defeat of American representatives at Henley and Bisley will reconcile John Bull to Uncle Sam's victory in the trans-Atlantic yacht race.

While the Fielding system gives millions of money to some industries as bonuses, it refuses even to give a little more tariff to the woollen operatives.

THE NEW TERRITORIES.

The constituting of the biggest part of the settled districts in the North-West Territories into two organized provinces has left Parliament with the duty of re-organizing the old North-West Territories. This is done in a bill which has been introduced by the Minister of Justice entitled the North-West Territories Amendment Act 1905. In the future the term North-West Territories shall comprise the whole of the territories that are not organized into the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the district of Keewatin and the Yukon and, to use the language of the act, "together with all British Territories and possessions except Newfoundland and its dependencies." Instead of by a Lieutenant Governor at Regina the North-West Territories hereafter are to be governed by a commissioner and a Council not exceeding four in number, to be appointed from Ottawa. The Ordinances of the Commissioner and his Council are to have all the force and effect of the Ordinances of the old North-West Assembly. The Supreme Court of the Territories is disestablished and provision is made for the appointment of stipendiary magistrates whose powers are very large, but in the case of a capital offence, sentence of death shall not be carried out until the pleasure of the Governor-in-Council at Ottawa is communicated to the Commissioner. There is a very severe clause respecting the conveyance of intoxicating liquor. Provision is made whereby the Governor General may appoint a provisional liquidator to take over the property and assets of the old Government of the Territories and to wind up the affairs of the Territories.—Events.

More Deadly Than Famine

Neglected Catarrh sooner or later causes consumption which destroys more human beings than famine and war combined. The way Catarrhozone cures catarrh is very simple; it first kills the germs that cause the irritation; then by soothing away the congestion and inflammation it cures the discharge, hawking and dropping in the throat. "I suffered so continually from nasal catarrh" writes Ernest R. Dakin of Rosemont, "that I scarcely knew what it was to be free from headache and pain over the eyes. Catarrhozone relieved me at once and made a thorough cure." No other remedy cures like "Catarrhozone"—try it for your next cold.

"Senator," he asked, "have you really any fixed convictions?"

"Not just now," he replied, "but I expect to have one or two shortly after the beginning of the next session."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Woollen Mills.

The first car of Wool for the Medicine Hat Woollen Company has been received. It was delivered on Saturday and unloaded by Mr. H. C. Cooper, and stored in the top storey of the mill. The company have purchased their supply for the season and expect delivery of the balance shortly. Mr. Whelan, the secretary has received notice from the east that the machinery is being purchased and Mr. Gould and Mr. Whelan, senior, are now in the United States, completing the purchases. As soon as the purchasing is complete the latter will come out to look after the installing and the citizens of Medicine Hat may rest assured that the mill will be fully equipped and running as soon as possible. The citizens of the town having so largely supported the company's petition to the Council for a loan of $15,000 the company are encouraged to proceed with spirit with the undertaking and we are assured they intend to spare no effort to have the mill a going concern by the earliest possible date.

Stock Shipments.

On Sunday morning Stock Inspector Bray inspected eight cars of beef cattle at Suffield. These were shipped by Mr. T. J. Bell, of this town and were splendid exportbeef.

On Sunday afternoon the Stock Inspector went to Dunmore Junction where he inspected 11 carsof beef cattle being shipped by Mr. G. B. Murphy, of Carberry.

The Bisley Meeting.

CANADIANS SHOOTING WELL.

Staff-Sergt. Kerr, a Canadian, has made the splendid score of 19 consecutive bulls eyes and one inner with 20 shots.

The Canadians won the Kolapore Cup.

The Mackinnon cup was won by Scotland, Canada being second.

The Canadian team has so far done splendidly at Bisley. After being a good second for the Mackinnon cup they have won the coveted Kolapore Cup against picked teams from the Mother Country and other Colonies.

It is eleven years since a Canadian team won the Kolapore Cup in 1894 the trophy being the most prized in all the inter-Empire series, and the score has only once been beaten, on the occasion when the Australians put together the phenominal aggregate of 770 in 1902. A success of this kind has more than a local interest, for it rivets the attention of the Mother Country on her worthy sons across the Atlantic, and proves that some of them at least are ready when the call comes.

JULY 12th.

Medicine Hat Orangemen celebrated the "Glorious 12th." at Maple Creek this year. About 40 members including W. J. Reid as Marshall and C. H. Evans as assistant, W. McF. Evans, Grand Secretary, and other prominent members went down on a special train and report having had a most successful day. St. Barnabas drum and fife band under the leadership of Mr. H. D. R. Stewart, accompanied the party.

Maple Creek celebrated the day in good style. The Signal says:—

The 12th. of July here was one of sport. The train carrying the Medicine Hat excursionists did not arrive till one o'clock but soon after the Maple Creek boys got them busy at baseball. The teams lined up on the Agricultural grounds with W. J. Harmer as umpire and Bobbie Irwin in the box, who was at all times equal to the occasion and after a six innings game our boys did the Hat up to the tune of only 32—1 in a good fast game of base. Hadit not been for an error on the part of one of the players it would have been a whitewash game, but he allowed F. S. Pingle to secure the only run for the Hat. The teamswere as follows:— Medicine Hat, B. White, L. Black, G. Sullivan, R. Armstrong, Archibald J. Brown, F. S. Pingle, Wallace, W. Douglas. Maple Creek, W. Regan, G. Fleming, J. Lurry, A. Burnett, R. Irwin, R. Atkins, M. Fleming, A. Lindsay, J. Bowdish.

After the baseball game the Lacrosse match took place between the Juniors from the Hat and Maple Creek team. Jack Irvine looked after our boys and although the lads were up against big heavy fellows, they won out by 8 to 2. The game was well contested and our boys exhibited a combination which promises great things for them in the future. The goals were scored by Finlay and Bell. The Hat team was composed as follows:—

Goal, Teal; point, Hewitt; cover point, Douglas; 1st. defense, Collier; 2nd. defense, Walton; centre, Lyman; 3rd. home, Bell; 2nd. home, White; 1st. home Porter; outside home, Robinson; inside home, Terence Finlay; field captain, J. Irvine; referee, Mr. Hartley.

Among The Farmers.

Mr. T. W. Follis' crop is looking splendid.

Rye sown last fall on Snell & Wilson's farm at Elkwater has attained a height of 66 inches.

The government report mentioned that in the Medicine Hat district there were nearly 700 acres of wheat. The Times points out that there is something more than 10,000 acres of wheat there. Apparently a discrepancy of 9,300 acres is a small matter to the government's crop expert.—Calgary Herald.

Mr. Andrew Nicholl, of Josephburg, was in town yesterday and, in conversation with The Times, stated that the crops in the Josephburg district are doing very well and a good crop is almost assured. He has a large field of oats standing over three feet high and of a good strong color. A neighbour of his, a German farmer, has a field of wheat which will yield about 40 bushels to the acre. German farmers are just pouring into the country south of the Cypress Hills.

Agricultural Society.

A meeting of the Directors of the Agricultural Society was held in the Secretary's office on Saturday. Present F. G. Forster, President; R. McCutcheon Vice President; and Messrs W. Cousins W. H. Hunt, W. C. Harris and Secretary Bray.

The reports of the committees appointed to revise the prize list were received and after a short discussion it was decided to make a canvass of the town for subscriptions and advertisements this week and meet again next Saturday to complete the prize list etc.

Town Council Meeting.

NO QUOROM LAST NIGHT.

A regular meeting of the Council was called for last evening. There were in attendance the Mayor, Councillors Sissons and Stewart, Town Clerk Adsit, W. E. Porter, and Messrs Oakes & Everard, contractors. There being no quorum no business could be done.

It was stated that Councillors Drinnan and DesBrisay were out of town and Dr. Smyth was professionally engaged. A meeting is announced for tonight.

Father Lacombe at Maple Creek.

(Ranching News, Maple Creek.)

On Sunday morning next Mass will be held in the Roman Catholic church of Maple Creek, Pere Lacombe, the venerable and veteran missionary of the Northwest will officiate at the altar.

The Northwest Territories have filled up rapidly during the past few years and like the Egyptians of old, "a race may have risen who knew not Joseph."

But Father Lacombe is now one of the most historical figures of the Northwest. In the early days when the Indians of the plains and of the Rocky mountains were wild and masters of the vast prairies with their innumerable buffalo, when but few white men ventured into the Canadian wilds, when no man would dream of putting himself into the red man's power without arms or ties of marriage or blood, and when the Hudson's Bay Co. ruled the land for their own gain only and jealously guarded the Northwest from the eyes of the people elsewhere, Father Lacombe appeared in the camps of the wandering tribes to teach them the true religion of the gospel of Christ. His work was not smooth sailing. For years he worked alone, for years he fought the superstition of the Indian and the interested machinations of the red man, who left no stone unturned to bring the young and intrepid missionary to an untimely end. Ever in danger, not only of losing his life but of the being the victim of fiendish and hideous torture, Father Lacombe persevered in his work, without care for himself, with no thought but that of reclaiming the lost, and with a Christ like devotion to others which brought its own magnificent reward.

Today Pere Lacombe is an old man, but he is still in the youth of mental activity, is still as preserving in his work, and is still, whenever the occasion offers, the Good Samaritan of Western Canada who obtained the love, regard and strong affection of the Canadian plain Indians. Long may he live to enjoy the fruit of the seeds he planted under such adverse conditions.

"Go forth into the world and preach the Gospel without money and without price—take neither scrip nor money."

This is what Pere Lacombe has done and has reared for himself a monument no hands can destroy—a cherished memory in the hearts of the people of the Northwest Territories.

Father Lacombe is a resident at Medicine Hat being in charge of St. Patricks church here.

What an old saying is, money makes the world go round. But the bible tells us that it is the love of money that is the root of all evil. And as surely as we look in the young lives about us and see the strive for place and price it seems to be all too true. History and observation prove that the one who earns his daily bread by steady work is about as happy as one can well be in this world.

We know of young men whose fathers have gained and kept a large fortune. These young men have a good leisure time and plenty of admirers and they will play a game of cards just for a little fun. But when there is plenty of money, lots of chums and leisure time, one is likely to get tired of cards just for fun. Among the chums of a young man, heir to about 50 thousand dollars, was one admirer who was only waiting the chance to win from him some money. One afternoon when the cards were dealt out this chum remarked let this game be for keeps, and let us bet something worth a game, say one thousand. The young heir did so and when the game was over had lost his money. He drew a revolver from his pocket and shot dead the man who had won his one thousand. His father tried hard to save him from the gallows but neither money nor friends could change the law. The love of money is the root of all evil. Jesus died to prove that all may be saved that he did not come to condem the world but that the world through him might be saved.

We have been asked, if there is a noxious weed inspector for our town. We don't know, but we do know that there is work for one on several streets and waste lots.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

"Do you think I'm fool enough to believe that?" he cried, fiercely.

"It is the truth, Waldemar," she said.

"And there's another affair that came to my ears as I was coming up the mountain pass; the report of my death, which you have circulated, and last but not least, that you were about to marry Bernard Chesleigh—curse him—is it true? Answer me!"

"We were to have been married tomorrow," she replied, falteringly, "but when I found you were alive, and supposed to be here, I came here too."

"To put me out of the way," he interrupted; and again he broke into such a volley of horrible oaths Reine was fairly electrified. He seemed to not stop to catch breath until he had exhausted his whole vocabulary.

"Don't," she cried faintly; "you are killing me, Waldemar;" but her remonstrance only made him all the worse. He stopped at length through sheer exhaustion, for a moment, and in that moment the door was suddenly opened again and Bernard Chesleigh, with a face white as death, stepped into the room.

It was Reine to whom he turned, ignoring Waldron's presence altogether.

"I had your note," he said, simply, "and I could scarcely credit what you said was true; I believed there was some terrible mistake, Reine, and followed you here in all haste to see if what you wrote were possible."

The saddest cry that ever fell from human lips broke from Reine's. With an almost superhuman effort she wrenched herself from the detaining hold of Waldron's steel-like hand and flew like a wounded bird that has the arrow of death in its heart, to Bernard Chesleigh's arms, clasping him with her white arms as though nothing but death should loosen her clinging hold and part her from him.

"Bernard, my love, save me from him," she gasped. "Oh, save me from him, or kill me with your own dear hands."

Before Bernard could answer, Waldemar Waldron had torn her white arms from his neck, thrust her back and stepped between them. Waldron had pushed her so roughly that she had fallen backward, at Bernard's feet.

Bernard sprung forward to raise her—a low cry breaking from his lips.

"Do not touch her, do not dare to touch her, Bernard Chesleigh," he cried, in a voice of thunder; "she is my wife!"

"Just this, once," implored Bernard, "let me raise her in my arms and whisper one poor word of comfort to her, we have loved each other so well, and on the morrow," he said huskily, "she was to have been —my wife,—I know she is yours; I am not going to dispute your right. Let me raise her just this once and look into the face that has been heaven on earth to me, then I will go quietly away."

"Stand back! lay your hands upon even one hair of her head and I will kill you," cried Waldron, his face fairly purple with rage. "You have stolen Reine's heart from me, and I curse you for it—curse your low, smooth, winning ways and proud, aristocratic face. But for you she would be willing enough to go back home to New York with me. No doubt you would like me to give her up to you," he sneered, but without waiting for Chesleigh to utter the words that were on his lips, he added:

"Know this, that I do not love her, I never loved her. I hate her with the bitterest hate—for her white face, tearful eyes, and moping ways —yes, I hate her, but she will go with me all the same. It will be a glorious revenge to me anyhow, to know that I have wrested her from you, Bernard Chesleigh. No matter how she may shrink from me, she must go with me. I am her lord and master," he cried, boisterously.

She had struggled to her feet, poor, beautiful, hapless Reine. Her white face was turned to Bernard, oh, so pathetically lovely in its terrible woe! and a voice, tragic in its despair, cried faintly—

"Must I leave you, Bernard—oh, must I leave you, love, and go out with him into the bitterness of death?"

"Certainly," retorted Waldron, frowning darkly; "what need to answer such a question. You are to go with me—your husband, certainly."

Still she looked at Bernard in her piteous despair.

"Are you quite sure I should go with him, Bernard?" she repeated. "Ah, it would kill me, my love."

"Dare to speak to him like that again at your peril," foamed Waldron furiously. "I am sure that you are to go with me whether he is or not. He will do well to not interfere between us."

Poor Reine! her heart died within her when Bernard's head drooped and a heavy sigh of anguish broke from his lips. Then, poor child, she knew there was no hope for her. Without another word she fell prone on her face among the lilies of the carpet in a deep swoon.

If he must leave her, better that he should leave her now, Bernard told himself. "Good by, my lost love," he murmured, letting his eyes linger for an instant on the white face lying there so cold and still, and with a sudden movement, knelt down and kissed the spot her feet had so lately pressed, then tore himself away.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The carriage which had brought Bernard Chesleigh to the Towers stood at the entrance gate. He sprung into the vehicle, saying hoarsely to the driver.

"Take me back to the station at the cross-roads. When does the next train pass that goes to New York?"

"At midnight, sir," replied the man; "but it doesn't stop, sir."

"I suppose it can be flagged and made to stop," said Bernard, curtly.

"Oh, yes sir," answered the man, "it has been done, but it's rather uncommon."

How he passed the time after he had reached the station until the train came in, Chesleigh never knew; for some time he was like a man bereft of reason.

Once, the thought had come to him, as he stood looking gloomily through the narrow window, how easy it would be for him to end his sorrow there and then, by flinging himself headlong down the deep mountain gorge into the ravine below; but the next moment his better judgment had reasserted itself; such an act as he had contemplated would be cowardly, and only cowards had recourse to such a way out of difficulty as that. No, he would live; he knew he should never know what happiness was again; it would be a dead letter for him forever after.

He knew that time might blunt the keen edge of his grief; but forget her, ah, he could never do that, go where he might; her face would be always before him. He had won Reine's love, too late.

"I ask from heaven what I have done that I should be so cruelly punished," he ruminated bitterly, as he paced up and down the narrow waiting-room. But from the darkling heavens to which he appealed, there came no reply.

"Some men meet with a cruel fate," he mused, "but they deserve it. In my life I may not have done much good, but I have done no great harm. I have committed no crime—yet, never since the world began, has a man's life been so wretchedly wrecked as mine, and happiness so near me twice."

From afar off he heard the shriek of the midnight express—in a few moments more it had flashed around the curve of the mountain and stood panting and quivering like a thing of life before the station.

Chesleigh boarded it and sank into a seat, but instead of rushing on after a moment or so, it still stood upon the track whistling shrilly.

One or two of the impatient passengers started out to learn the cause and reported that the down express was some twenty minutes late and that the train would have to wait there at the cross-roads probably some twenty minutes or more.

"I have known a train that was late to cause no end of disaster from one end of the line to the other," grumbled a commercial traveler sitting back of Chesleigh. But Bernard paid little heed to these remarks, and the fellow traveler rather piqued at his neighbor's silence, sauntered off into the smoking-car, leaving that portion of the train in which Chesleigh sat, quite without occupant other than himself.

"Reine," he murmured, "it is hard to give you up, but alas—"

The sentence never was finished—the door of the car was flung suddenly open and Reine—yes, it was surely Reine, sprang into it.

At the first glance she beheld Chesleigh and in an instant she was kneeling before him.

There was no mistake, he was neither mad nor dreaming, it was Reine, kneeling at his feet, her long dark cloak dripping with rain and bespattered with mud thrown about her—her head uncovered, her long golden hair, wet and dishevelled, hanging all about her white, terrified face, and her hands clenched tightly over her heart that beat with great strangling, spasmodic throbs.

"Bernard," she cried, shrinking down at his feet, clasping his knees and looking up into his face with great, terrified, dilated eyes: "save me—oh, Bernard, take me with you, dear, anywhere—anywhere; save me, Bernard!"

"Reine, my poor child!" he exclaimed; "tell me, dear, what does this mean?"

A laugh that was more horrible to hear than the cruelest sob could have been, broke from her lips.

"It means," she cried wildly, "that he tried to murder me, Bernard, after you had left me with him. When I woke to consciousness from my swoon, I saw him standing by the mantel; he had not even summoned help for me, and he did not know whether I was dying or not.

"I saw him standing there drinking brandy from a flask he carried about him. He was bad enough when you saw him; he is a fiend incarnate now.

"As I struggled to my feet he approached me, hurling me back on my knees. 'Stay there!' he cried, with a demoniac laugh; 'stay where you are, and say your prayers if you know any, for your time has come to die! I will show you how I deal with those who are faithless to me,' and with that, and before I could cry out for help, he struck me and whipped out a revolver, and holding it close to my heart—fired. It was so near the fire burned my arm, Bernard, but his hand was unsteady, and the murderous ball crashed wide of its mark.

"Terror lent me strength. With a scream I sprang to my feet, and dashed precipitately through the open French window out in the storm and the night. He pursued me, with cries of rage, firing right and left. The brandy had driven him into a frenzy; he was like nothing human.

"I thought you had come to the station to take the train, and I ran here every step of the way. Oh, save me, Bernard, for the love of Heaven! Let me stay with you, dear; if he finds me, he will kill me!" and the words died away with a bitter wailing cry of mortal fear.

Bernard Chesleigh was so filled with horror and dismay that the very power of speech seemed to have deserted him.

"See, Bernard," she sobbed, holding up her white arm to him, "there is where the powder burned me, and here"—flinging back her rain drenched cloak—"there is where the fire burned my dress—right over my heart; see, Bernard!"

It was more than mortal man could bear. Surely Heaven could find pardon for him, that in that moment he lost all self-restraint. His calm reason, his better judgment, his nobler self, all had vanished. He only heard her words—"Take me away with you, Bernard, if he finds me he will kill me!"

"I will take you away, Reine," he cried, breaking the clinging clasp of the white hands that clung round his knees, and drawing her to a seat by his side, and holding the poor, shivering girl close. "He has brought the last tear to your eyes—you shall not stay here—you shall not be the victim of a madman. Your very heart is crushed. I will save you. We will go so far that no one who has ever known us will look upon our faces again. You shall know nothing but love and happiness all the rest of your life. We will fly to the other end of the world together, and live only for love and each other."

Ten minutes before, he would as soon have thought of shooting himself as to ask Reine to fly with him to escape her husband; for, no matter what the man was, he was still —her husband.

Now that Bernard's passionate nature was in the ascendancy, it seemed to him that to rescue her from this tyrant was a right thing to do. He had a most chivalrous feeling for women; a woman's tears were to him irresistible, and while she clung to him with trembling hands and he was protesting to her that she should never regret coming with him, slowly the train moved out; another instant and it was whirling along at a terrific rate of speed on through the storm and darkness of the night. But all in a moment as the train had moved out, Bernard Chesleigh began to realize what he had done. Great Heaven! he, who had always been the very soul of honor, had done so dastardly a thing as to fly with another man's wife; what had he been thinking of!

But of what use were regrets now? Why startle Reine—who was still clinging to him with hands trembling with fear? There was no returning—they had burned their bridges behind them.

"Are you content, Reine?" he asked, slowly—huskily.

"Yes, Bernard," she sighed. He clasped her closer, and soon, despite all the cold and the chill of her garments she sank to sleep like a child in his arms.

"Poor Reine," he murmured compassionately. "Heaven have mercy on us both."

He sat quite still, trying to think out what their future should be. The angels in Heaven who had watched it all, and wept over poor Reine, had marked out that future.

How long they sat thus, Bernard Chesleigh could never afterward quite fully recall—the train whirled on past hills and dales and leaping rivulets—on and on rushed the lightning express—on with a terrible roar until it reached a high bridge that spanned a dark, deep ravine—and then—

There was a horrible crash, a quiver, a sudden blinding light flashed through the car for an instant—and in that instant the engine plunged down through the bridge—down the steep height to the dark-vine-wreathed valley below. Then came oblivion to Bernard Chesleigh.

It was many a long day after when Bernard Chesleigh awoke to a realization of what was transpiring around him.

He found himself in a small, unfamiliar room, with strange faces bending over him.

"Where am I?" he asked, faintly. But before the good woman could answer, a cry of anguish broke from his lips.

"I remember, Great Heaven! I remember. The accident. Where is—is—"

"You are not to talk," said the nurse, gently. "It was a terrible accident! Many were wounded, many were killed outright; you were found terribly wounded, and brought here, where you have been for many a long week. Look through the window; see those snow flakes scurrying past, it is winter now; you have had a long siege of it." She went on: "There was a lady near you, a young and beautiful lady, lying there dead—quite dead—when they found her, which was at daylight. Her hands were crossed over her breast like a tired child's. There was a smile on her lips. Everyone said the angels must have been hovering very near her when that accident happened, watching for her soul. She was so young to die—poor, pretty young thing. There was only a little purple mark on the temple to show how death had met her, that was all.

"Some one came up from Waldron Towers, away down in Virginia, and took her home with them—the body I mean, and I heard since that they buried her an the slope of hill—just back of the Towers."

Bernard Chesleigh turned away with a groan, turning his face to the wall. It seemed to him that her death lay on his soul.

One stormy winter night, a fortnight later, a man made his way through the snow-drifts close to a small enclosure, which was fenced off in the most isolated portion of the Tower grounds.

He need not have taken so much pains to steal along in the shadow of the trees, for there were none to see him. The old Towers was closed again, its occupants gone, none knew whither, and surely his tread could not awaken her who slept beneath the marble shaft toward which he bent his steps.

He lit a match and read the inscription on it; it bore simply this:

Sacred to the Memory of REINE.
Aged 18 Years.

The flaring match which shed its light upon the tomb fell upon the man's face,—the pale face of Bernard Chesleigh.

From that night Bernard Chesleigh was never seen again. For a time those who knew him missed him, then forgot him.

Many a winter's snow fell deep upon Reine's grave, and many a summer's storm showered down blood-red rose leaves from a wild vine that had clambered round the shaft and over the grave, ere the inmates of Waldron Towers returned. It was summer then and the wild-rose vine was still in bloom. They found the wild-rose vines twined so closely about some object lying on the grave that they had to bend closer to see what it was. To their surprise and horror they found it was the skeleton of a man, but who he had been, or how he had come there no one knew; only this, someone must have lain down to die on the moss grown grave that was "Sacred to Reine."

They never knew they were carrying out the last fervent prayer he had uttered on earth, when they dug his grave and laid all that remained of him beside Reine.

CAUGHT IN THE ICE.

How a Trader's Ingenuity Saved Himself and Comrade.

The fur trader sat on the steamer wharf at Quebec, leaning back on a packing box. For a moment he looked down at the first sheet of ice that had skimmed the broad St. Lawrence; then he said: "That ice there is about as thick as it was the time I got caught on my first trip north into the barrens.

"Another fellow by the name of Andrew Damson and myself had been trading with Indians in British Columbia. We broke camp at the end of the season, and started to the nearest settlement, which was ten miles south of us, with a big lake lying between. We found the ice had all gone out, and we couldn't cross on sledges, as we did when we came up. To go round the lake meant a mean journey on account of the marshes. As our provisions were used up and we had already sent our pelts out, there didn't seem to be any reason why we shouldn't paddle the six miles across. Our outfit was light, and we figured we could reach the other side before dark.

"Three or four Indians, who were coming in with skins, saw us we were setting out, and yelled something to us about the ice. Later on, I wished I'd listened to them.

"We got along well till about the middle of the afternoon, when the wind whirled around into the north, and it got cold within ten minutes. It began to snow, too, first in little spits and then thicker and thicker, until we couldn't see a canoe's length ahead of us.

"There was only one thing to do, and that was to spread out the blankets into a kind of awning, and curl up to sleep and wait for the morning, when we could see our way.

"Damson woke me at daylight, and I looked out. The fall of snow had been light. We were about a hundred yards from the shore, and I could see that the storm had blown over quickly. But on every side the lake was covered with ice, not thick enough to hold a man and not thin enough for a boat to push through.

"'Damson,' said I, looking sober, 'we'd be in a bad way if this ice shouldn't get strong enough to walk on, or else melt enough so we could paddle. There isn't anything left but a half can of beans, and this canoe is leaking.'

"The hours went by. We ate nearly all our provisions, and slept over the next night pretty anxious, and cold and hungry, and trying to keep out of the water that was gradually rising in the canoe. The next morning the ice was still too strong to break through, and yet it was too weak to hold us.

"Then Andy hit upon a plan. He first tore out two of the braces that ran from side to side of the canoe.

"'What are you going to do?' says I.

"'I'm going to build an ice raft,' says he, and he lashed the braces across the end of the paddles. Then he tore pieces of the birch bark out of the sides of the canoe, fastened them across between the paddles, and finally had a patchwork raft nearly six feet long and four feet broad. 'There,' said he, 'that will spread your weight over a bigger area of ice, and you can lie down on it and push with your toes. You go first. It will hold you all right, but it won't hold both of us.'

"'How shall I send the raft back to you?' said I.

"'I've already thought of that,' said he. 'Take this ball of cord we used for tying up the skins. I'll tie this on to the raft here. If anything happens to you I may be able to pull you out, and if you get there all right I can haul the raft back.'

"The raft would just barely hold me up, and it was ticklish work pushing my way to shore, spread out on my stomach on the raft; but I accomplished it at last.

"Then he pulled the raft back to the canoe, and for a moment I couldn't see what he was doing with the cord. But all of a sudden he stood up and threw something toward me. It fell about half-way between us, but glanced and slid along the ice almost to my feet. It was his heavy hunting knife with the cord tied on to it.

"'Haul away!' said he, when he had spread himself out on the raft. 'Easy! etsy!' and atl ast I managed to pull him to shore. I never felt anything better than the solid ground under my feet. If it hadn't been for Andy's ingenuity, it would have been starvation, drowning or freezing for both of us."

Niagara's Beauty Not to Be Marred.

"Niagara Past, Present and Prospective" was the subject of an address to the Empire Club in Toronto recently by Frederick Nicholls. The past of Niagara was illustrated by stories of the North American Indian, the Jesuit Fathers and its conquest by France and England. The rate of recession has been from one to five feet a year. The cliff between the upper and lower rivers is not a solid rock, but is composed of strata which is first limestone, then shale, afterwards hard rock with softer rock intervening. The soft rocks were sawn away by percolation of the water from shore, causing the hard rock to fall. On account of the hard rock being at the surface, the general appearance will not vary much as there will always be a rock projection for the water to flow over. A resume of the legislative acts and the efforts of the late Lord Dufferin to establish a national park were recited, together with the privileges given to electrical companies. It was thought that the amount of water to be used by these respective water privileges would mar the scenic beauty of the falls, but he was of the opinion that whether the depth of the flow was 12 or 14 feet it would be as awe-inspiring as ever.

Newspapers for Indians.

A weekly newspaper that is, without doubt, unique in journalism has made its first appearance in the vicinity of Montreal. It is called The Caughnawaga Gazette, and its object is to supply news and matters of interest to the residents of the Six Nations reserves. It consists of four pages. The first is printed in English, the second, which conveys the same information, is in French; the third in Indian, while the fourth is devoted to advertisers. The announcement of policy is made in a modest manner, and the chief note is the expression of a desire to increase the feeling of harmony and goodwill in the reserve.

The charity that hastens to proclaim its good deeds ceases to be charity and is only pride and ostentation.—Hutton.

How to Fill Space.

The editor of a newspaper published at Treves has devised a new method of filling his columns during the present quiet time, when local news is scarce. He simply prints a list of the names of places for which tickets are issued at the railway station, and, as the list is a very long one, it will serve to fill up gaps in several issues.

AT FRIENDSHIP'S CALL

By ETHEL BARRINGTON

Copyright, 1904, by Ethel Barrington

Dusk was clouding the landscape as Noah Sterling, powerfully built, with blue eyes in contrast to his gray hairs, stepped on the porch. He leaned against the framework of the door and smoked his pipe, apparently oblivious to the voices floating out from the kitchen. Yet he heard, for his brows lowered and met above his eyes, and his teeth shut sharply on the brier's stem.

"I'll enter no family unwelcomed. Your father has his pride, I mine"—The girlish voice was pitched high and broke suddenly. Then followed indistinct pleadings from her companion, whom she answered: "It's true, all true. But I'm in the mill, a mill hand, while you—some day you will be boss; you'll own all; you"—

"Don't say it, Bess. I am the unhappiest creature in the world, the son of a self made man. Father forgets he was once a laborer, choosing his wife for himself. I'll do the same. Let him do what he will with the property. I've brains and hands. His blood fills my veins, and I'll win out, as he did."

"You are all he has in the world. I'll not come between you"—

Noah Sterling glanced into the dim room. He could see Bess fighting against her love and the stalwart son of the mill owner as he held her hands. Noiselessly he stepped from the porch to the coolness of the little garden. It was quite dark when he returned, but no light greeted him from the open door, but a low sob broke the stillness and guided him to the girl's side. She sat by the table, her head buried in her arms, her slight frame trembling with emotion. Noah watched her silently.

"Oh, Daddy Noah, my heart is broken"— The words were scarcely audible. Sterling sat down heavily, resting his work worn hand on her arm.

"You sent him away bravely. Now you cry for him."

Bess cleared her voice. There was a little laugh of self pity in her tone as she spoke.

"That's the woman of it. Yet it's you who spoiled me. When did I ask for aught—and you not give it to me? Oh, dad, if you could only help me now!"

"You've set your heart on this. You truly love young Thadd?"

"He's all the world"— Sterling withdrew his hand abruptly. Impetuously Bess flung her arms about his neck. "Not that I love you less, dear, or ever could, but you loved my mother—you understand—you must—you are all that is left to me now."

"Understand! Sure I understand." Soothing her, he drew her to his knee and held her in his arms, as he had so often done as a child. Comforted, she prepared to retire.

"Are you not going to bed?" she questioned, her candle illuminating her heavy eyes.

"Presently, child."

Yet he had scarcely stirred when the gray dawn showed in the east; then he rose stiffly, determination in his face. "I've just got to do it. I swore I never would, but I will."

At noon next day Noah Sterling entered the office. Thaddeus Giles, the boss, was writing when the foreman appeared, but he nodded kindly.

"Sit down, Noah. I'll be through in a minute." Sterling took the indicated chair near the desk, absently twirling his cap in his hand.

"Glad to see you, old man. Anything special that you dropped in for?" asked Giles, pushing his papers from him and swinging around in his chair.

"I wanted particular to see you," began Sterling uncertainly. "It's about the young folks—your boy Thadd and Bess Hardy"—

"Stop, Noah," broke in the mill owner sharply. "Some things I allow no interference in. It's none of your business anyhow."

"Hold hard. I'm one of your hands—have been for years—yet we were kids together, you, Tim, and me. Was there ever a scrape that we didn't share?"

"We were sure enough pals." The boss' eyes twinkled at sundry remembrances.

"When Tim died—you don't recollect—you were planning your own big deal. But I knew. There was a baby, Thadd. I ain't never told you. But the night Tim went I sat with him. He worried awful about that baby. Seemed as if he just couldn't die till I set his mind at rest. I swore the child should be first with me, at any sacrifice I'd make her happy, and I will—I will." Sterling leaned forward. Giles returned his look questioningly.

"I don't understand what you are after," he said at last.

"Bess is Tim's daughter—Tim and Bessie's baby."

"Bessie Fields that was?"

"The same. You begin to see now."

"Come, Noah, this is ridiculous! Because Tim was our playmate it does not follow I should allow my son to throw himself away upon his daughter, a mill hand. However, for the sake of old times and what I owe to you besides I'll make my position clear." As Giles paused he showed in every line the inflexibility that had gained for him success, but he was reckoned a just man. "I worked and planned night and day, year by year. Now I am rich. My son will be richer still. He is the center of my ambition. He must marry in the world for which I educated him. He must be the gentleman his father had no chance to be."

"What your boy is to you Bess is to me," said Sterling, with an effort. "I loved her mother. The words sort of strangle me, Thadd. I call you that just once, for we are back in the old days. Yes, the words choke me, but for Bess' sake I'll speak them. She said I had always given her what she cried for, though I'm none too sure of myself this time. I am going to try. You want a lady for your boy. You want more—a pure, good woman. Bess is that. She has book learning too. But, Thadd, it cost money, all I'd saved, and when I took the spell of rheumatism cash ran low, and she—bless her grateful heart—she went into the mill till we could pull things straight. It's the factory stamp you have against her—that's how she got it. Thadd, you mind the year of the strike; it's all of twenty years now. You had just opened your first shop, with everything tied up. It was sink or swim, and there was no insurance. You remember the powder the strikers smuggled in and the slow match burning when you and your watchman came suddenly upon it. You were white, and I don't know as I blame you. Death brushed shoulders with us that night. Your watchman stood to his duty. I cut that match"—

"I would have given you a share in the concern," protested the boss, living again the suspense of that awful moment.

"I'm a workman—never could be different. But you were grateful. You gave me a promise—a sort of oath"—Giles sat motionless, the dawn of comprehension in his strong self willed face. Noah held him, eye to eye. "Seems like taking a mean advantage. It's powerful hard to ask. But I loved her mother. Don't decide now. See the girl. Learn to know her. I'll stand aside. I'll not be in your road."

"It's a pretty stiff test," said Giles slowly as he rose, memories, pride, ambition, gratitude, all warring within him. Then he stretched out his hand, and the two locked palms. "You have been a long time calling, but now you have spoken I honor your claim, old friend."

Unappreciated Services.

Chatting across the table in an uptown restaurant, two young men exchanged confidences concerning their activities in a nearby department store. "I can work to the limit of my strength if it is appreciated," said one of them, "but the more one does for the head of my department the more he exacts, and he appreciates nothing." The other young man subscribed to the sentiment and added, "I put the new boy who came a few days ago wise to the situation and advised him not to hustle quite so lively, for if he ever lets up a little it will be concluded that he has lost interest in his job." An employer who overheard the conversation remarked to a friend who was lunching with him: "That is the secret of shirking service. The man who never has an appreciative word for those in his employ when they manifest an interest in his business stunts available usefulness and discounts the diligence of which he would otherwise get the benefit."—New York Tribune.

Posting Sister's Beau.

He was a naughty little brother, but little brothers always are naughty on such occasions. Sister's young gentleman was waiting patiently in the drawing room, and Tommy opened fire with:

"Are you going to propose to my sister tonight?"

"Why, I—er—er—er—what do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing! Only if you are you ain't a-going to surprise her. At dinner jus' now she bribed me an' my little brother to go to bed at half past 7. She's hung four Cupid pictures on the parlor wall, moved the sofa over in the darkest corner, got ma an' pa to go callin' next door, shut the dog in the cellar an's been practicing 'Because I Love You' on the pianner all the afternoon. You'll get her all right, only if she tells you 'bout its being sudden tell her it's all bunkum!"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

DON'TS FOR STOUT WOMEN.

High authority on dress matters offers these suggestions to the stout woman:

Don't wear wide belts.

Don't trim a skirt except at the bottom.

Don't wear a tight fitting coat if you are fat.

Don't wear a sleeve that is full below the elbow.

Don't use frills of any kind on a gown. Use flat trimmings.

Don't wear fluffy things around the neck. Let the neck finishing be as flat as possible.

Don't wear bow ties. Wear something small and narrow if you wear any tie at all.

Don't wear an Eton coat. Always have your coat line extend as far below the waist line as possible.

Don't wear a high cut decolletage. Have the low bodice cut to an extremity of decollete, and build up the top with patchy effects to the required height.

A False Note.

"Don't you hate anything like that?" asked a woman of her neighbor in the car, looking where she had indicated by a nod. There was apparently nothing that would incite such a remark but a stylishly dressed girl who had just taken her seat. But as the eye traveled down her costume in search of what offended it rested on the bottom of her skirt, beneath the folds of which was visible the dusty, bedraggled edge of her underskirt. All the daintiness seemed to vanish, and suggestions of untold carelessness arose in the mind.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

RAINY RIVER MAN HAD TROUBLES

TILL DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HIS KIDNEYS

Then his Rheumatism and Other Pains Vanished Once and for all—His Case Only one of Many.

Barwick, Ont., June 5.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Rheumatism, or any other disease resulting from disordered kidneys is the experience of many of the settlers of this Rainy River country. The case of William John Dixon of this place, is a fair sample of the work this great Canadian Kidney Remedy is doing.

"I had Rheumatism so bad I had to use a stick to walk. I had pains in my back and right hip, and I had to comfort in sleeping.

"I could no more than dress and undress myself for nearly two months, and for nearly three weeks I could not lace my right shoe.

"My brother advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I did so. After taking three boxes I could walk around and lace up my shoes and do my work. Six boxes cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for sick Kidneys. Sick Kidneys are the cause of nine-tenths of the ills the human family suffers from.

The First Astor and the Poet.

John Jacob Astor and his son rigidly attended to business in the same office, a little one story building in Prince street, just east of Broadway. Their constant companion there was Fitz-Greene Halleck—Marco Bozzaris Halleck. Halleck became a clerk for Astor in 1832 and worked seventeen years. The employment, he himself said, was not "profitable, but permanent." Astor warned him when he began not to talk to any one of his wealth. The two men became great friends. Halleck spent months with his patron at his country seat and became one of the trustees of the Astor library. The poet frequently rallied the old man on his wealth. "Why, Mr. Astor," he would say, "if I had $200 a year and was sure of it I would be content." The great landowner took him at his word, and in his will, much to the amusement of bohemian New York, left Halleck an annuity of $200.—Burton J. Hendrick in McClure's.

The Chilly House of Commons.

A speaker in the house of commons has to address "the most chilling, nerve destroying audience in the world." Even such a cool headed, seasoned orator as John Bright once said, toward the end of his career, too, "I suppose I ought to be ashamed of myself, but the fact is that I never rise in the house without a trembling at the knees and a secret wish that somebody else would catch the speaker's eye and enable me to sit down again." And Disraeli, who boasted that he had no nerves, declared: "The blare of trumpets, a thousand lookers on, have induced men to lead a forlorn hope. Ambition and one's constituents have induced men to do a far more desperate thing—speak in the house of commons."—London Mail.

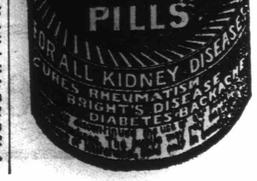
Going to Bed In India.

Going to bed in India is a very different process from going to bed at home. To begin with, it is a far less formal process. There is in the hot season no shutting of the door, no cutting yourself off from the outer world, no going upstairs, and, finally, no getting into bed. You merely lie down on your bed, which, with its bedding, is so simple as to be worth describing. The bed is a wooden frame with a webbing laced across it, and each bed has a thin cotton mattress. Over this one sheet is spread, and two pillows go to each bed, bolsters not being used. That's all. Some people do not even have the mattress, preferring the coolness of a piece of fine matting.

Crimes Against Animals.

"The cooks of today," wrote Yuan Mei, a Chinese author of the nineteenth century, "think nothing of mixing in one soup the meat of chicken, duck, pig and goose. But these chickens, ducks, pigs and geese have doubtless souls, and these souls will most certainly file plaints in the next world of the way they have been treated in this. A good cook will use plenty of different dishes. Each article of food will be made to exhibit its own characteristics, while each made dish will be characterized by one dominant flavor. Then the palate of the gormand will respond without freak and the flowers of the soul blossom forth."

Crossing the Legs.



Continually crossing the legs and thus making the joints brittle was stated at an inquest in England to have caused the death of a Bristol asylum inmate. While pulling on her stockings her thigh bone cracked

The Snake's Skin.

When the snake sheds his skin, which occurs frequently—as often as every four or five weeks—the skin of the eyes comes off with the rest. Translucent in most parts, the skin over the snake's eye is perfectly transparent.

Ants and Fruit Trees.

For at least four centuries ants have been used in China to protect fruit trees from insect ravagers. Orange trees in Canton are much injured by worms, which infest them, and ants, red and yellow, which make their nests on trees, are imported from the hill country to protect the fruit.

Managing Editor of the Regina Leader

These sketches of Western Canadian editors have demonstrated, if nothing else, that this is a country in which, as Shakespeare said, "Youth must be served." It is essentially a country of young men. Indeed, in perhaps no other country in the world can the same be said with an equal degree of truth. Of all the editors hitherto dealt with in this series of articles, the proportion who have attained middle age is insignificant, and the great majority of them have been men whose extreme youth, when considered in conjunction with the responsible positions they occupy, and the respect they deservedly receive from those who know them, gives one accustomed to always associate responsibility with age a severe shock.

Mr. W. F. Kerr, secretary-treasurer of the Leader Times Co., and managing editor of the Regina Leader, is a typical instance of how western conditions encourage industry and ability. Three years ago he was appointed editor of the most influential weekly paper in the Northwest Territories, and at that time he was only twenty-six years of age. Eight years before that he had been a C. P. R. telegraph messenger boy. The wide arch between the two positions Mr. Kerr had spanned by his own efforts and talents, favored of course, by the opportunities offered him in the wider field the west afforded. The bare facts as stated, constitute the highest authentication, both of Mr. Kerr's capacities and abilities, and of the possibilities of self help and self advancement possible in western Canada.

There must be something in hereditary bias towards certain life callings, for Mr. Kerr,—William Franklin Kerr is the full name—comes from a family of whom several members were newspaper men. His grandfather, Dawson Kerr, founded one of the first papers in Bytown, Canada West, now the city of Ottawa. It was known as the Ottawa Valley Advocate. Mr. Kerr's father, Dawson Kerr, worked on the Advocate for some years as a compositor, it being his special duty during the Crimean war to set the matter pertaining to that struggle. This was before the days of the Atlantic cable, and there was fierce rivalry after the arrival of a mail packet from England to see which local paper could first get out the news, the fastest compositors being always put at that work. Another of Mr. Kerr's family, an uncle, after whom he was named, was also a newspaper man, being editor of the Jackson City (Michigan) Citizen during the American Civil war.

It was thus no doubt inevitable that the Mr. Kerr should drift into the world of journalism. From his earliest boyhood the smell of printers' ink and the rush and hustle of a newspaper office had attractions for him. While still at school his amusement used to be, not so much in sports, though in out of door life few men take a keener or more healthy interest, but in setting type and running a small hand press.

Mr. Kerr is a Huron boy, having been born in Goderich in October, 1876. He was educated at St. Thomas public schools, having in the interval been at Grand Rapids (Mich.) and Ottawa, with his parents. After completing school, he entered the C. P. R. telegraph service at Ottawa, and for two seasons was detailed in the House of Commons branch office, where he naturally became acquainted with the most prominent men in Canadian journalism and politics. In 1898 on the contest of the Free Press passing from Mr. W. F. Luxton, Mr. A. J. Magum was selected by the management as its editor. Mr. Magum was the doyen of the Ottawa Press gallery, and when he began the selection of the staff for the new regime, among others he selected was Mr. Kerr, in whom he had detected the promise of higher possibilities in the faithful discharge of his duties as a telegraph messenger. It was in October, 1898, that Mr. Kerr joined the Free Press staff, as the assistant and secretary to the editor in chief. Towards the end of his period of service with Western Canada's great daily, he was given several important special assignments, one of which was to accompany the Prince of Wales across the continent in his Canadian tour. Mr. Kerr was the youngest of the correspondents accompanying the royal party.

In February of 1902 the increasing political duties of Mr. Walter Scott, M. P. for Assiniboia West, and the editor of the Regina Leader, and his long absence from Regina, made it necessary for him to depute his work of managing the paper, and, in looking for a man to act in his stead, his choice fell on Mr. Kerr. In addition to his duties as managing editor of the Leader, Mr. Kerr is now the secretary-treasurer of the Leader-Times Company, the concern which owns both the Regina Leader and the Moose Jaw Times.

As is well known, the Leader is, with three exceptions, the oldest of the Territorial papers, its seniors being the Saskatchewan Herald, published at Battleford; the Edmonton Bulletin, the paper of which Hon. Frank Oliver is proprietor, and the MacLeod Gazette. The Leader was started by Nicholas Flood Davin and by the C. P. R., in reality for the purpose booming the Regina town site and was subsequently purchased by Mr. Walter Scott. Under his management and that of his deputy, Mr. Kerr, it has attained a still stronger hold on the confidence of the people of the Territories. It is now engaged in the erection of a new home, that will be the most up-to-date newspaper building in the new province of Saskatchewan, and outrival that of any office in Canada in a town of no greater population than Regina. It will consist of three stories and a basement, and without equipment, will cost $25,000.

As a newspaper man Mr. Kerr is admitted by all to be one of the most able in the west. Neither in his writing nor in his personal characteristics does he display any of that flashy brilliancy which, especially among journalists, often passes for talent. His qualifications are of the solid and enduring variety, strong, common sense, a levelheadness that no excitement can sweep off its feet, a steady devotion to high personal and professional ideals, moderation of utterance combined with fearlessness of thought, considerable talent in organization and a high degree of executive ability. He is as yet young, and the possibilities of his future may best be measured by the accomplishment of his past. His friends—of whom he has hosts, without as far as is known, a single enemy—confidently predict for him that he will be a figure to be reckoned with in both the thought and the action of the new province of Saskatchewan.

As might be gathered from his newspaper affiliations, Mr. Kerr is a staunch Liberal, one of the founders of the Young Men's Liberal Clubs of the west. He is an attractive and forcible public speaker, and in request on that account in all campaigns.

PALE, FEEBLE GIRLS

A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY RESTS ON MOTHERS OF GROWING GIRLS.

A great and serious responsibility rests upon every mother whose daughter is pasing the threshold of girlhood into womanhood. She is at a crisis, and if she is to be a healthy, happy woman, she must develop rightly now. She must not be pale, sunken-eyed, sallow, languid and bloodless at this time. She must have additional strength and rish, pure blood to help her to strong, healthy womanhood. There is only one absolutely certain way to get new, rich, health-giving blood, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every pill helps to make rich, life-giving blood, that brings strength to every organ in the body and the glow of health to pale, sallow cheeks. Thousands of pale, anaemic girls in all parts of Canada have been made well and strong through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Rachel Johnson, Hemford, N. S., says:—"As a result of overstudy in school, the health of my daughter, Ellen, became greatly impaired. She grew extremely nervous, was pale and thin, and suffered from most severe headaches. She had no appetite, and notwithstanding all we did for her in the way of medical treatment, her suffering continued, and I began to feel that her condition was hopeless. Indeed I began to feel that her mental powers were failing. One of my friends strongly urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I was willing to do anything that might help her I sent for a supply. After using the pills for less than a month, we saw that her vigor was returning, and in less than three months her health was fully restored. Considering the fact that she had been ill for two years, and that doctor's treatment did her not one particle of good, I think her cure speaks volumes for the wonderful merit of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The new blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make, is the whole secret of their power to cure diseases. That is the reason these pills cure anaemia, heart palpitation, headaches, and backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney troubles, and a host of other ailments due to bad blood or a weak nerves. But be sure you have the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt, write direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

William Pinkerton, the detective, was praising the various cash registering devices that have come of late years into world-wide use. "These machines," he said, "have undoubtedly diminished crime. I heard of a clerk in a grocery store the other day who was getting $8 a week. He had to be on duty at 7 o'clock in the morning, and he was not through till 7 and sometimes 8 at night. "He found time, though, to get married, and the week after the ceremony he asked his employer for a raise. "'Why, Horace,' the employer said, 'you are getting $8 a week. What ails you? When I was your age I kept a wife and two children on $8 a week and saved money besides.' "They didn't have cash registers in those days,' said Horace, bitterly."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A well known judge fell down a flight of stairs, recording his passage by a bump on every step until he reached the bottom. A servant ran to his assistance, and, raising him up, said: "I hope your honor is not hurt?" "No," said the Judge, sternly, "my honor is not hurt, but my head is."

COLOR OF CIGARS.

The Black Weeds Are Not Always the Strongest Ones.

Probably there is not one smoker in a thousand who would not be surprised and, in fact, incredulous if he were told that the color of a cigar is absolutely no guide to its strength. Yet such is the case and a fact well known to cigar manufacturers and importers. The belief of smokers that cigars of dark color are strong and those of a lighter shade are milder is, in point of fact, as fallacious as it is general. This is but one of many delusions harbored by consumers of tobacco which practical cigar men have smiled at and indulged from time immemorial.

A maker of Havana cigars uses but one grade or blend of tobacco in the body or filler of his cigars. Exactly the same stock is used in his conchas as in his perfectos, in his claros as in his maduros. After the cigars are made, however, his "selector" takes them in hand and classifies them according to the relative shades of the wrappers. This is done to effect a uniformity in the appearance of each box of cigars and to enable the dealer to readily indulge the whims of the self deluded smoker.

Inasmuch as the wrapper constitutes not more than one-tenth of the cigar, it will readily be seen that the degree of its strength or mildness is very inconsiderable in effect. In this connection, however, it is interesting to note that tobacco tradesmen versed in the intricacies of the industry rigidly bar the light colored wrapper from their own smoking tables, knowing that it generally indicates that the leaf was prematurely cut and improperly cured and that it impairs the flavor and burn of the cigar. Cubans, who, by the way, are notably partial to mild tobacco, avoid smoking light colored cigars just as they avoid eating a green orange or an unripe banana.

The prejudice of these natives and of tobacco tradesmen is a logical one and serves to throw into bold relief a peculiar misconception of facts which is both amusing and embarrassing to venders of the fragrant weed.

Whether cigar smokers will ever awaken to the fact that a dark cigar is if anything milder and invariably sweeter and more aromatic than a light cigar remains to be seen.

When Bishop Codman was appointed to the Episcopol diocese of Maine he made a tour of his diocese and happened to stroll into a woodman's cottage. They caught some wild thing out here in the woods a couple of weeks ago, if that's what you mean, but I think my husband said it was a woodchuck."

Happy Days for Baby

The healthy child is a happy child. All its little troubles vanish when it is digesting its food well and is free from childish ailments. The greater part of these ailments arise from stomach and bowell troubles, feverishness, teething and worms. Baby's Own Tablet's act like magic in these cases, and when children are restless at night they always give sound refreshing sleep. Mrs. A. LePage, St. Lawrence, Que., says: "Baby's Own Tablets had marvellous results in the case of my two months old baby. He was nervous, troubled with colic and badly constipated, but after giving the Tablets he began to improve at once and is now in good health. I also gave the Tablets to my three year old boy who was troubled with worms and they cured him as well. Both children are now the picture of health, and I am always praising the Tablets to my friends." You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any druggist or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It hapened at a "rummage sale" at Ottawa the other day. An elderly woman, whose appearance showed the effects of battles with many realities of the world, was examining a bit of crepe which had been sent from the mourning robes of some respectable family. The price was five cents. "I think I'll take it," said the woman. "My husband is not very well, and may not last long. A few years ago," she added, confidingly, "I bought a widow's bonnet here. I have never had any need to use it, but I have lent it around to all my neighbors." Thus does the spirit of bargain-hunting spread.

Methuselah, being only a little over 400, and still in the vigor of young manhood, bethought himself of the duty of providing for his descendants and made application for a policy of life insurance. The medical director of the company coldly turned him down. What's the matter? demanded Methuselah. "Don't you consider me a safe risk." "No sir, replied the medical director. The records show that your father lived only 365 years, and the probability is that you have some hereditary taint. We can't afford to take chances on you. Methuselah said nothing. He merely went ahead and outlived the insurance company.

The World is Full of Pains.—The aches and pains that afflict humanity are many and constant, arising from a multitude of indistinguishable causes, but in the main owing to man's negligence in taking care of his health. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was the outcome of a universal cry for some specific which would speedily relieve pain, and it has filled its mission to a remarkable degree.

A city girl was visiting her country cousin. While walking out several butterflies passed her. "Oh! dear me! what charming little birds! They are a perfect treat!" They are not birds, my dear," replied her cousin; "they are butterflies." "Oh! you don't say so! Then those are the dear little creatures that fly from flower to flower and gather the sweet butter that we use. They are too sweet for anything."

"Do you find that it costs as much to keep your automobile in repair as it would to feed a horse?" "I never had a horse, so I can't say. But there's one advantage. It would have to go on eating just the same."

A young lady teacher, who was a great favorite with the poet Whittier, had recently married. Meeting the young husband one day, Mr. Whittier remarked: "John, thee ought to be on the schoolboard." A flashily-dressed negro walked into the West Sixty-eighth street police station the other night and asked Sergean Thomson if he could have a detective. "What do you want a detective for?" asked the sergeant. "Well, boss, mah wife done run away with another man and Ah thinks she wants me." "You'll have to go to a private detective for that, we can't help you." "How much will one of them cost me?" "About $5 a day, and he'll take at least two days." "I'm; two days at $5 a day! Ah guess I'll let her go, boss."

The western man who had raised fifteen bouncin boys received a cordial welcome when he called at the White House. "Ah," said the President, shaking hands, "I must congratulate you. What a blessing it must be to raise such a family of boys!" "Well," replied the westerner, slowly, "it's what I call an expensive blessing. Wasn't for these boys thar'd be a roof on our house today." "But, my dear sir, I do not understand. What has become of the roof?" "Why, by gum, I used up all the shingles spanking the boys."

A beggar stopped a passer-by with this: "Say, boss, gimme a dime for booze." The dime was forthcoming, and then the beggar said: "Now, I'll tell you what I'm going to do with this. An English lawyer was cross-examining the plaintiff in a breach of promise case. "Was the defendant's air when he promised to marry you perfectly serious or one of joculority? he enquired. "If you please, sir" was the reply, "it was all ruffled with 'im a-runnin' 'is hands through it." "You mis apprehend my meaning, said the lawyer. Was the promise made in utter sincerity?" "No sir, an' no place like it. It was made in the wash 'ouse an' me a-wringin' the clothes," replied the plaintiff.

"'Mamma, what would you do if that big vase in the parlor should get broken?" said Tommy. "I should whip whoever did it," said Mrs. Banks, gazing severely at her little son. "Well then you'd better get up your muscle," said Tommy, "cuz pop's broke it."

For the Overworked.—What are the causes for despondency and melancholy? A disordered liver is one cause and a prime one. A disordered liver means a disordered stomach, and a disordered stomach means disturbance of the nervous system. This brings the whole body into subjection and the victim feels sick all over. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a recognized remedy in this state and relief will follow their use.

Father, in the hall, has been standing for half an hour while Millicent and Harold bid each other good-night in the doorway. "'Parting,' quotes Harold, 'is such sweet sorrow that I could say good-night till'"——At this speech father gets a Shakespearian inspiration of his own and tramps down the stairs. "Seems to me," he asserts, that there is too much adieu about nothing here."

Something More Than a Purgative. To purge is the only effect of many pills now on the market. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are more than a purgative. They strengthen the stomach, where other pills weaken it. They cleanse the blood by regulating the liver and kidneys, and they stimulate where other pill compounds depress. Nothing of an injurious nature, used for merely purgative powers, enters into their composition.

A Parisian scientist, while testifying to the greater purity of the air in the vicinity of forests, does not attribute the cause to a greater richness in oxygen—the quantity of the latter being the same in the atmosphere of woods as in plains—but to the absence of those agents which vitiate the atmosphere of towns. When forests are not surrounded by marshes a well treed region is next to exempt from epidemics. Versailles is a case in point. It is surrounded by a screen of forests. Epidemics are unknown, yet the city has the most wretched water.

Holystone.

The holystone is a soft stone used by sailors for scrubbing decks and is said to have got its name because it was originally used solely for Sunday cleaning. Others assert that the first stones used for this purpose were taken from churchyards, while it is also said to get the name from the fact that a sailor has to go on his knees to use it.

WHEN NERVES PLAY OUT

Mind as Well as Body is In Danger—Help Found in

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Suicide, insanity, failing sickness, paralysis. These are some of the results of worn-out nerves.

The vitality of the body cannot stand the strain, and, overcome by worry, failing health, anaemia, menstrual derangements, overwork or exhausting disease, mind and body have been wrecked.

No one would neglect a disease so dreadful in its results as nervous exhaustion if the danger were only realized with the first symptoms.

The time to begin the restoration of the nerves is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is when you find yourself unable to sleep at nights, suffering from headaches or neuralgic pains, indigestion or weak heart action.

Loss of flesh and weight, growing weakness and debility, a tendency to neglect the duties of the day, gloomy forebodings for the future, and other implications of depleted nerves.

You cannot liken Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to any medcine you ever used. It's a mere vitaliser and tissue-builder of exceptional power.

Naturally and gradually it rekindles life in the nerve cells and forms new red corpuscles in the blood—the only way to thoroughly cure nervous disorders.

Mrs. W. R. Southerland, St. Andrews, Man., writes:—"In February, 1903, I was stricken with paralysis, fell helplessly on the floor and had to be carried to bed. The doctor pronounced it a bad case as I had no power in my tongue or left leg. I remained in that position for six months without obtaining benefit from the doctor's prescriptions or other medicines.

"My husband advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the use of this treatment all symptoms of the disease disappeared. I can now talk plainly, my leg is all right and I can do my housework. How grateful I am to be cured by so wonderful a remedy."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Now there will be a tournament and lovers of the game will have an opportunity of seeing some first-class lacrosse. Edmonton Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Calgary will play here August 3, 4 and 5. All the teams are fast and good sport should result.

After the Lethbridge Lacrosse team left town on the 1st July. Mr. H. Powley, Manager of the Assiniboia Hotel, missed some articles of wearing apparel from his room. He was brought down, put on trial before Mesars Benson and Gilbert, found guilty and, treated as a first offender, fined $20. and costs another $30. His name is McDonald.

Britain to Build Greatest of Warships.

Construction of the largest and most powerful battleship in the world is soon to begin at the Portsmouth dockyard. It is planned to build the vessel from the laying of the keel plates to the hoisting of the pennant in a period of sixteen months. Thirty to thirty-six months is the average time at present devoted to the building ofbattleships of smaller size. This rapidity is calculated to result in a great economy but nevertheless the cost is estimatededed at nearly $10,000,000. So heavily will this vessel be armed that she will be equal to any two battleshipsnow afloat, and her striking power at such a range as that at which the engagement opened in the battle of the Sea of Japan will be as great as any three battleships of the ordinary type. The displacement will be about 18,000 tons. The Dreadnought, as this battleship will be called, will mount twelve 12-inch guns of the latest type, throwing three 850 pound shells every two minutes. The vessel will be driven by turbines and will, it is said, be able to steam at upwards of 20 knots an hour. She will carry no secondary armament.

A meeting of the Executive Committee was held on Saturday last. Present 1st Vice President Huckvale, Messrs Day, Taylor, Wright, Sissons, Forster and Secretary Bray.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Sissons and Forster that in the opinion of this committee meeting it is considered advisable to call a general meeting of this Association to consider amalgamation with the Western Association and that this Committee views this arrangement most favorably and that this meeting be called for Friday evening, September 20th, (the last night of the fair.) Carried.

The subject of a Stock Inspector was then discussed when it was moved by Messrs. Sissons and Taylor that Messrs. A. J. Day and W. Huckvale be a committee to employ a competent man as stock inspector in Winnipeg at a salary of $125 per month to work in connection with the Western Association

The question of a deputy veterinary inspector was next discussed and some correspondence was read between the Secretary and Dr. Rutherford Veterinary Director General. A letter from the latter dated the 7th July said that the Commissioner of Police has undertaken to see that satisfactory arrangements are made with the above object in view.

The Secretary was instructed to write the Commissioner of Police, send him a copy of Dr. Rutherford's letter and ask for information as to what arrangements are made.

The question of the Crawford defence fund was discussed and on motion of Messrs. Day and Sissons it was resolved to pay Mr. Grant and Mr. Becker the half of their claim as it appears Maple Creek had undertaken to pay a portion

True Economy

Isn't half as much a matter of never spending a cent as of spending a few dollars with sense.

Look at it This Way:

You've got to wear clothes of some kind this summer. A barrel or fig leaf costume would be economical enough but hardly appropriate, and the heavy uncomfortable clothes you've been wearing are no more suitable for these sizzling days than the coolest barrel ever coopered. For very little money we will provide a feather-weight two piece suit so light that you'll hardly notice it, and so excedingly cool and comfortable that the thermometer in your back bone will drop instanter. When we say they're 20th CENTURY Tailored Suits, we've said the best thing about them that could be said of any clothes.

MASON & RISCH

THE PIANO WITH A SOUL

Mason & Risch Pianos are famous for that peculiar carrying power known as the singing tone. Not all tones classed as musical are music unalloyed. There are certain qualities of tone that are strangely diffusive They carry far and retain their singing character where other tones become indistinct or even lost. A sheet of gold leaf, thinner than the thinnest tissue, will completely block the powerful rays of the strongest searchlight, while the X-rays, merely glowing with a faint light, will penetrate an inch of solid steel. So it is with music: some tones are diffusive and carry, others become more or less absorbed in space. The tone that "carries" the singing tone, is due to perfection of finish and perfect vibratory equilibrium of all the tone producing parts of a piano. It is always a tone of the utmost sweetness and purity. The Mason & Risch Piano is full of "sing" being especially fine in its blendings of the human voice, which it rounds out and sustains in a happy union of melody and harmony. Our literature explains the many points of superiority of the Mason & Risch piano—the piano with a soul. Send for it to-day.

Note and Comment

[By OBSERVER.]

The man who said only female mosquitos bite probably made his investigation when the males were off on their holidays.

A Boston newspaper has a strong editorial in favor of annexation with Canada. As Mr. Fielding has just announced his $9,000,000 surplus, it rather looks as if Uncle Sam wanted to marry us for our money.

These Japs are a sardonic people, certainly. At the launching of their great battleship Katori at Barrow, Eng., the other day, "pigeons were liberated from a balloon on the ships bows, as an emblem of peace and good will." Russia can appreciate that grim joke.—Boston Journal.

Crops in Central Russia have failed. That's all now. Russia has had everything else happen to it that's on the list.

A railroad is being proposed to Hudson's Bay, and if it is built there will be a golden opportunity to bring Cap. Bernier's Polar outfit home by freight.

There are rumors of a mutiny on the cruiser Canada. The advantage of this mutiny over the one on Knaiz Potemkine is that the world will be able to pronounce the name of the ship without dislocating its jaw.

A good many tourists spoil their trip through the 1000 Islands by making the fatal mistake of starting to count the islands.

Say what we like and put the blame where we will everyone must regret the unpleasant episode in connection with the lacrosse match which failed to come off between our boys and the Lethbridge team. Up to the day on which it occured the teams were on fairly good terms, but disagreements like this breed bad blood. The Hat team still consider they were entitled to play the men they put forward and Lethbridge, I suppose still believe they were not.

Lacrosse is conducted under established and well defined rules and the point would surely have been fairly settled by those whose business it is. The refusal therefore, of the Lethbridge team to play can hardly be excused and it is a pity they did not put in their protest and then play. But as I would rather "pour oil on the troubled waters" than stir up strife, I suggest that in the interests of sport the matter be relegated to Limbo. Let the boys meet next time as if it had never happened and "play ball," so that the crowd may have their fun which-over side wins on the field or before the protest committee.

The cry is "Save the trees." The largest trees in the C.P.R. garden are just where the new platform is likely to be built, but, considering the years they have taken to grow and what a beautiful appearance they present in a country where we have miles and miles of treeless prairie, it would seem almost a sin to cut them down. I am sure that the whole town would welcome the news that the C.P.R. had decided to arrange so as not to do so, and many people think they could be trimmed up and the platform built around them. However, that is a matter for the C.P.R. officials to decide, and I have no doubt they realize quite as much as anybody the great value of trees in the prairie towns and will no doubt save them if possible. If this should catch the eye of those who will have the decision in the matter I hope they will endeavor to save at least the best of the trees and build around them.

I "hurrahed" last week because there were no mosquitos in Medicine Hat, and on the very evening that the paragraph appeared two ladies in different parts of the town were chased by the little pests. So that there were at least two of these little insects in town and no sooner did my note appear than out they came and protested. Of course it may be that they were flattered at being mentioned. It may be that the "personal par" tickled their vanity and swelled their heads, and in the exuberance of their spirits, they came forth fluttering and to flutter. In future I'll try to leave sleeping dogs lie, for one of the victims has now a swelled eye.

Postmaster Shaw, of South London, Ont., has been fined $2000 by Judge Meredith for voting at the last Ontario election. It seems to be a general opinion that a whole lot of people get paid for voting in this country but with the poor postmaster named above, the "boot was on the other leg." And what a shocking offence his was to be sure Well, they do say that while one man may steal a sheep, another mustn't look over the fence.

A tornado occurred near Red Deer on the 10th. of this month, and the papers say the disturbance was of real cyclonic proportions and cut a swath through the country as clean as if a gang of bushmen had gone through. It seems to me then that even the very elements have joined to divide Alberta at Red Deer Perhaps the Capital question will be settled in the same way.

Calgary is likely toget an unenviable reputation over their last fair. The sensation developed from the open gambling permitted on the fair grounds. The authorities refused to interfere until just before the close, when the man having the ground privilege was arrested, and at once released on his own recognizance to appear for trial on Monday. He has not left the town, but has not been brought up for trial, and the police refuse all information concerning the case, even professing ignorance of the name of the man. On Sunday the pulpits took up the case. The daily papers have been devoting columns to the subject, and rumors of graft are rife.

The captain of a Canadian schooner which happened to be at Charlotte, N.Y., on the Fourth of July, hoisted the Union Jack. The collector of the port, a Mr. Bump, compelled him to lower the flag. Commenting on this incident, the Chicago Tribune says:

"The conduct of the Charlotte collector was unspeakably stupid. The Canadian schooner had a right to fly the Union Jack. It is the only flag it has. Presumably the captain hoisted the Union Jack as a mark of respect, not dreaming that it would excite the uneasy and petulant patriotism of anybody. He did not know that Bump was on gaurd, ready to vindicate the majesty of the Republic by forbidding the flying of the 'meteor flag' of Britain in American waters on the Fourth of July."

The Chicago paper calls upon the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington to administer a 'fitting rebuke to "this fierce and unmitigated American named Bump." There should be no more of these silly "flag incidents" on either side of the line.

MARRIAGE.

This woman's soul and mine are one
One spirit; one career;
Not only till the days are done
Of our communion here;
But after, though we singly brave

The passage perilous,
That small seclusion of the grave
Has room for both of us.
Both? We are as a single life—

And death itself shall spare
The dust of husband and of wife
That slowly mingles there.
One may go first and one remain

To hail a second call;
But nothing now can make us twain
Whatever may befall;
For we have long since passed the bounds

Of Self, of Time, of Space,
And felt the freedom that surrounds
Love's final dwelling-place.

THE WINNIPEG THEATRE.

A rare treat is in store for those who visit Winnipeg during exhibition week. Manager O. P. Walker, of the Winnipeg theatre, will offer the amusement-seeking public that week the world famous Pollard Lillipution Opera Company, which is now making its second highly successful tour of the United States and the larger cities of Canada. This large company of talented little ones appeared in Vancouver and Victoria immediately upon its arrival from the Orient, a few months ago and captivated everyone by the remarkable performances it gave of "The Geisha," "The Belle of New York," "A runaway Girl," "The Lady Slavey," "The Millionaire," and other high class royalty comic opera and musical comedies. The company numbers about fifty, and is perfectly equipped in the way of costumes and scenery for all the pieces of its repertoire.

Croup is Deadly.

It must be stopped quickly. Nothing so sure as Nerviline. Give it inwardly, and rub it on chest and throat—croup soon vanishes. No doctor can write a more efficient prescription than Polson's Nerviline which reaches the trouble and cures quickly. The marvelous power of Nerviline will surprise you: the best household remedy for coughs, colds, sore chest, croup and internal pain of every kind. Large bottles have been sold by all dealers for nearly fifty years at 25c.

THE WORLD'S CATTLE PER CAPITA.

Some cattle statistics based upon the last cencus in the different countries are not without interest to Canadians. There are estimated to be 318,747,540 cattle in the more highly civilised countries of the world. The total number is not of so much interest as the number of cattle per head of the population. The three countries having the highest number per capita are to be found in South America, Uraguay coming first with 7.078, Paraguay with 6.585, and Argentina following with 4.495per capita. Australia stands next with 2.325. Then there is a big drop to Bosnia with .815, with Canada next with .767, and Denmark close up with .714 per capita. Then follows the United States with .707, or considerably less than Canada. There is a general decrease then to Great Britain and Ireland, with only .276 per capita. Japan stands at the foot of the list with only .031 head of cattle per capita. The average per capita for all the countries in the list is .382.

THE HOME PAPER.

Not until one leaves home does he really appreciate the value of his home paper. That distance lends enchantment is truly proven in this case. When a man pulls up stakes and shakes the dust of his old home from his shoes to seek pastures new, he naturally has a hankering to know what's going on in his old home. It is then he appreciates the home paper that had always made weekly or semi-weekly visits to his home, but which he had heretofore looked upon as a mere circumstance in the whirlpool of life. Its regular visits to those who are abroad are like a spring shower upon the parched field. The movements and actions of those we left behind is ever of interest and we are delighted in reading about our one-time neighbours. Truly the home paper is not really appreciated until we get where it is hard to get.

THE Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada will hold sittings as follows:—

At Fort William, Ont., on 7th day of September, 1905.
At Winnipeg, Man., on 11th day of September, 1905.
At New Westminster, B.C., on 19th day of September, 1905.

Notice of the specific places and hours of sitting at these points will be given later.

The Board will not sit at other points in Western Canada unless for the purpose of hearing complaints which shall have been formally made to it in writing, and duly served upon railway companies, or other parties interested, in sufficient time to have become ripe for hearing under the general rules of the Board.

Attention is called to the following provisions of the rules:—

"3. Every proceeding before the Board under this Act shall be commenced by an application made to it, which shall be in writing, and signed by the applicant or his solicitor, or in the case of a corporate body or company being the applicants, shall be signed by their manager, secretary or solicitor. It shall contain a clear and concise statement of the facts, the grounds of application, the section of the Act under which the same is made, and the nature of the order applied for, or the relief or remedy to which the applicant claims to be entitled. It shall be divided into paragraphs, each of which, as nearly as possible, shall be confined to a distinct portion of the subject, and every paragraph shall be numbered consecutively. It shall be endorsed with the name and address of the applicant, or, if there be a solicitor acting for him in the matter, with the name and address of such solicitor.

"The application, so written and signed as aforesaid, shall be left with or mailed to the secretary of the Board, together with a copy of any document, or copies of any maps, plans profiles and books of reference, as required under the provisions of the Act (a) referred to therein, or which may be useful in explaining or supporting the same."

The complainant must have the application served on the opposite party, who is allowed TEN DAYS from service of the application to answer it, and the applicant is allowed FOUR DAYS from receipt of the answer to reply to it. TEN DAYS' notice of hearing must be given, unless for special reasons the Board shall order otherwise.

Dated at Ottawa this 22nd day of June 1905.

TITLE PAGES.

They Were Unknown Until After the Invention of Printing.

The most surprising thing in the history of the title page is the fact that it was utterly unknown until a few years after the invention of printing. In the days before that great era, when all books were in manuscript, no scribe ever thought of prefacing his work with a separate page or leaf devoted to the title.

When printing took the place of writing, changes came gradually. In many early printed books there was still scope for handwork. Initial letters were left for the "rubrisher," as he was called, to decorate and illuminate by hand.

As books multiplied this practice, of course, soon died out. Occasionally wealthy and luxurious book owners would employ a skilful illuminator to adorn the pages and margins of a printed book just as in former days manuscripts had been illuminated.

The manuscript practice of surrounding the text with an ornamental border was also often applied to early printed books. The introduction of the title page showed the same mingling of old and new.

Printing was invented about 1450, but no title page, properly so called, is known before 1470. In the earliest examples the title is either, as in manuscripts, given in the first two or three lines of the first page, to be immediately followed by the printed text, or is simply, as it has been called, a label—that is, it consists of a very brief title at the top of a blank page.

There was one curious exception. A "Kalendar" printed by Ratdolt at Venice in 1476 has a full title page in the modern style. This remarkable page consists of an introductory poem surrounded on three sides by ornamental borders, with, at the bottom, the place of printing and date—"Venetiis, 1476"—and the names of the printers.

But this is quite an exceptional instance. Such a title page is hardly found again for twenty years and did not become common till about 1520, more than forty years later.

A particularly noticeable feature in many title pages of the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries is the length of the descriptive titles. Controversial pamphlets and books of travel and adventure especially have titles which are extraordinarily long winded. The whole page is filled with small type, giving an analysis of the contents of book or pamphlet.

Then toward the end of the seventeenth century and through its successor came the reign of the bold and plain title page, and the plain title has lasted until the present day.

Rosemary.

In the south of Europe the rosemary has long had magic properties ascribed to it. The Spanish ladies used to wear it as an antidote against the evil eye, and the Portuguese called it the elfin plant and dedicated it to the fairies. The idea of the antidote may have been due to a confusion of the name with that of the Virgin; but, as a matter of fact, the rosmarinus is frequently mentioned by old Latin writers, including Horace and Ovid. The name came from the fondness of the plant for the seashore, where it often gets sprinkled with the "ros," or dew of the sea—that is to say, sea spray. Another cause of confusion perhaps was that the leaves of the plant somewhat resemble those of the juniper, which in mediæval times was held sacred to the Virgin Mary.

Why Many Young Men Fail.

It is the fault and the cause of the failure of so many bright, capable young men that, being put into a certain workday rut, they make no effort to climb or even crawl out of it. They do not seek the work that is not routine and go beyond the terms of the bond in search of additional labor in order to attract the approving notice of their employers; they do not go to their posts before or remain at them after the fixed hour; they are content to do enough, and no more than enough, to earn their hire. The life of the average clerk is generally genteel, easy, cleanly. He need not soil his hands or his clothes, and his ambition is satisfied with these pleasant conditions.

Sad State of Poetry.

For songs the use of poetry has for some time been abandoned, and words, any sort of words, have been employed instead. With patriotic songs any suggestion of poetry is held to be fatal to success. It is probable that in another ten years some member of parliament will introduce a short bill making the production of any other sort of poem a criminal offense, and it is not impossible that the member of parliament will be a publisher.

Men Repeat, but Do Not Copy.

Grant—It is easier to say a good thing than to do a good thing.

Henderson—Very true. But when you say a good thing you are flattered by persons right and left making use of it as if it were their own, but you have few copyists when you do a good deed.

Advantage of Position.

"Hold on!" exclaimed the boy who was under. "Let's arbitrate this thing!"

"There ain't nothin' to arbitrate!" panted the boy on top, pummeling him vigorously.

What Would You Do?

People are fond of telling what they would do if they had $1,000,000. It's safe to bet that nine men out of ten if they had $1,000,000 would do nothing.—Kansas City Independent.

A YANKEE CONTRIVANCE.

Roosts and Dropping Board That Are Raised by a Pulley.

I have several little Yankee contrivances that I have never seen used by others, and I will describe one—namely, my roosts and dropping boards, of which I send you a drawing:

A A are the 2 by 4 studs at back of house.

B B are hinges of the old fashioned hook and eye pattern and long enough

THIS IS THE WAY IT LOOKS.

so that the dropping boards do not come within six inches of the walls of the house.

C C are sides or frame of roosts and are hinged at B B to the studding.

D D D are the roosts.

E E are the dropping boards, six inches below roosts.

F F F F are strips of wood four inches wide and a half inch thick that hold the roosts and dropping boards together.

G is a pulley fastened to a rafter overhead.

H H is a rope (one-half inch) fastened to the roosts and passes through pulley (G).

I is a trough at back end of boards, six inches deep and V shaped. There is also a lath nailed all around the edge of boards to keep the droppings from falling to the floor.

Now to operate. In the morning when I feed and after the birds are all off the roost I pull rope (H) and lift the roosts and platform altogether. The droppings roll back and down into trough (I), from which they can be removed in less than half the time by the method of scraping.

The roosts are fastened up all day, which induces the fowls to work and not roost all day. Neither is there anything in the way fastened to the floor, and I use the entire house for scratching shed in cold weather. By untying the rope and unhooking at the back all may be carried out of house to be painted or burned for vermin.—L. G. Householder in Poultry Keeper.

The Hen Wasn't to Blame.

We have visited breeders' yards and seen birds standing upon the nest panting and breathless from the heat and so weakened and exhausted from the ravages of lice that they actually died on the nest. One case of cruelty that we will never forget was one in which just such a bird figured. She was a large overweight bird and so infested with lice as to make her wild with pain and unable to sit or stand still. Her owner had set her upon a sitting of high priced eggs of a new variety and set his hopes high for a good hatch. The poor bird, not being able to properly incubate the eggs, had finished her labor with four chicks as the result. While suffering a thousand torments and tramping around the nest she had trampled upon and killed three of the chicks. The human brute who owned her had no sooner discovered the facts than in his rage he grabbed the bird from the nest and with all his strength hurled her to the ground. She writhed a few moments and then, bleeding and crushed, lay quiet and soon breathed her last. Perhaps I imagined it, but to me there seemed to be an indescribable, pitiful, reproachful look in the eyes of that dying bird which told as plainly as words could possibly tell that she loved her chicks a thousand times more than did or could the man who took her life and that she would have given her life in protecting them. She was only a hen, you say. Well, maybe that's all, but the God who sees the fall of the sparrow will see the hen also, and I thanked him from the bottom of my heart that he gave me one which would not permit me to wantonly, cowardly and inhumanly destroy a dumb creature with the motherly instinct of that hen. People who are capable of doing such things can never prosper.—American Poultry Journal.

Water on Demand.

Water is an absolute necessity at all times for fowls. Don't think for a moment that the fowls can do well or live a great while without plenty of water, and during hot weather this should have special attention, for a clean, cool drink is as grateful to them as to ourselves. No one should neglect the water supply for either the young or the old stock. In fact, they could not long grind their food or pass it through the crop without plenty of water to aid in the process, for by the aid of the water is the food softened, digestion aided and the system sustained. It is not much trouble to fill the water pots twice a day during hot weather, and the fowls need it every hour. Watch the little chicks run and take a little at a time, then run away to feed, and soon they come back for a little more. This continual supply of moisture aids them in grinding and digesting their food, and they must have it all the time and plenty of it or they will not thrive as they should.

When the Cat Twitches Its Tail.

If you see a cat twitch the end of its tail when it sees young chickens, you can bet your last dollar that it is a chicken eater. It may not touch them in your presence, but at night or when the coast is clear it will lie in wait and grab one or two and feast at your expense.

Principal Pay for Peace Envoys.

The salaries of the Russian peace plenipotentiaries have been fixed at $200 per day each, besides an allowance of $7,500 for travelling and other expenses.

care must be taken in the selection of the dam as the sire. One rancher took the trouble to bring in the best quality of mares from Ireland and good English hunting horses for sires. The result is that you can pick out of the stock of that ranch in a moment wherever you see it.

"Then the driving type is prominent in much of the stock coming from the American trotting blood. These horses are good enough for driving, but long backed and not fit for riding.

"While the range life makes the horses hardy, it seems to me that they are often ruined through mishap of one sort or another if left altogether to look after themselves. My belief is that a horse is an animal requiring careful tending, and that a great deal of care is usually required to get good animals.

"I am not in love with the western methods of breaking. It is rough and ready, certainly, and is 'breaking' in the literal sense of the term. A horse is not handled until he gradually loses fear, but is thrown and cowed into submission. This method is a fruitless cause of vice in horses, and of what is quite as bad loss of spirit.

"Another respect in which western horses do not come up to army ideals is in point of size. Large horses are required, and the range animals are more of the 'cob' as a rule."

An explosion occurred on Tuesday at a large colliery in the Rhondda Valley and about 150 miners were killed.

In the House on the second reading of the bill creating the province of Saskatchewan. Mr. Borden offered the same amendment as to the Alberta bill, that the control of education be left entirely with the new province. It was voted down ninety to thirty-seven, the same vote as on the Alberta bill, except Morin, Dorchester, Conversative, who supported the amendment. He was absent last time without a pair: Sifton paired.

ALBERTA'S HORSE SUPPLY.

COMMENT OF COL. BRIDGE ON THE REMOUNTS.

Contrary to all expectations, the British remount officers, Col. Bridge and Major Dradge, were able to buy horses in the range country well within the price limits set by the Imperial authorities, namely, $200 laid down in England, says the Farmer's Advocate. In Southern Alberta about six carloads were picked up at prices ranging around $125, a figure that horse buyers in Winnipeg consider remarkably low, and which they believed would not avail to purchase sound young horses of a type that sell, when broken, throughout the grain growing districts for from $175 to $250. Col. Bridge also stated that there is still a large number of ranch horses suitable for agricultural work that can be bought for less than he paid for his selections, but that buyers have to go out onto the ranges for them.

It was most unfortunate for all concerned that the train carrying the four cars of horses purchased by the re-mount officers was badly wrecked near Rat Portage on the 20th ultimo, and nearly all the animals killed or injured. Before leaving Winnipeg, Col. Bridge gave the following impressions of western horses and horse breeding conditions.

"In some respects the western horses are most satisfactory. Their hardiness and fitness generally are a good deal commented upon. I never saw grass fed horses so hard and fit. In England grass fed horses are invariably pot-bellied. These ranch horses right off the grass were equal to any work. Some were driven 60 miles, and seemed not a whit the the worse for the trip. The country where such conditions prevail has wonderful possibilities.

"Then the conditions under which they were brought up make the ranch horses hardy and active. They have abundant exercise on the wide ranges, and are at once capable of work impossible to an English horse with but a three acre field to run around in.

"In other respects western horses are open to criticism. Great enough care is not exercised in the selection of the dams and sires, dams especially. There seems to be an idea abroad that if one parent is good, it does not matter so much about the other. This is a great mistake. The stock is very apt to show the bad features of the weak parent. To have really good stock, just as much

Belly River Mystery.

(Lethbridge News.)

Word was brought to town on Tuesday that the body of an unknown man had been found lying in the shallow water in the St. Mary's River, just opposite Fort Whoopup As Coroner Higinbotham was out of town, Coroner Matheson, of Raymond was sent for. He arrived on Wednesday and empanelled the following jury and drove out to view the body: Robt. Wallace, foreman, H. Brown, E. O. Fitzgerald, R. E. Kirk, Geo. Bennett and J. Edey. Sgt. Goodwin, of the R.N.W.M.P., accompanied the party and assisted in getting the remains to the shore. Though the body was in a bad state of decomposition there were many evidences that he was a cowboy and that he had been the rider of the horse that was found drowned near Lethbridge some two weeks ago. Indeed there seems little room to doubt this, as the drowned man when found had no trousers on and his shoes and socks were also missing and these articles were found fastened to the saddle of the drowned horse.

The deceased was a man perhaps 5ft. 9 inches tall, weighed about 160 pounds and was between 25 and 30 years old. He wore a heavy woollen undershirt a black cotton overshirt, with small white stripe, and blue serge coat and vest. In his vest pocket there was a one dollar bill and a package of tobacco. His right arm bore two vaccination marks. As to whether or not he had been a clean shaven man could not be ascertained as the flesh had fallen away. He also wore a pairof gauntlets, the wrists of which of which bore a monogram and the letters M.L. appeared in large characters and are thought to be his initials. These and other marks upon his person and clothing it is thought will likely lead to his positive identification later on. The jury's verdict was that he is "an unknown man who probably came to his death by accidental drowning." The remains were buried near where they were found and the spot was marked.

THE WAR.

JAPS INVADE RUSSIAN TERRITORY.

The Japs have landed troops on an Island belonging to Russia.

The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Tokio sends a description of the Japanese invasion of the Island of Sakharin, written by a correspondent of the paper at Aomori Japan, which in part is as follows:

The Japanese left their temporary base on July 4, and reached their destination on July 7th. The Russian cruiser Novik was found at Cape Enduma, stranded on a half submerged reef, and in a wrecked condition.

The Russians fired only three or four shots before they destroyed the forts and barracks. Heavy guns undamaged were afterwards found in the fort where they had been hastily and imperfectly mounted. The greatest confusion was witnessed in the streets of Korsakovsk.

The Russian troops were running in all directions, and the men were looting and setting fire to the houses. All the citizens were panic-stricken.

The streets are now desolate and obstructed with the ruins of charred buildings. Finding that the Japanese respected property and treated the people kindly, the citizens are beginning to return.

MANY FARMERS DESTITUTE.

Minneapolis, July 14.—Hundreds of farmers of Northern Minnesota have lost homes and property as a result of the overflowing of the government reservoirs along the upper Mississippi. Many are approaching a state of destitution.

The Calgary Herald got out a special Provincial number on the last day of June. It consisted of 28 pages, of which four were printed in a pretty shade of brown ink. The issue contained original articles by Governor Forget, Walter Scott, M.P., and the Editors of the Alberta Star, Nanton News, Raymond Chronicle, Wetaskiwin Times, Medicine Hat Times and others, and "experiences" by the Rev. Father Lacombe and Rev. John McDougal. It was a very creditable production.

THE WAR.

JAPS INVADE RUSSIAN TERRITORY.

The Japs have landed troops on an Island belonging to Russia.

The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Tokio sends a discription of the Japanese invasion of the Island of Sakharin, written by a correspondent of the paper at Ao ori Japan, which in part is as follows:

The Japanese left their temporary base on July 4, and reached their destination on July 7th. The Russian cruiser Novik was found at Cape Enduma, stranded on a half submerged reef, and in a wretched condition.

The Russians fired only three or four shots before they destroyed the forts and barracks. Heavy guns undamaged were afterwards found in the fort where they had been hastily and imperfectly mounted. The greatest confusion was witnessed in the streets of Korsakovsk.

The Russian troops were running in all directions, and the men were looting and setting fire to the houses. All the citizens were panic-stricken.

The streets are now desolate and obstructed with the ruins of charred buildings. Finding that the Japanese respected property and treated the people kindly, the citizens are beginning to return.

ATHABASCA'S BISHOP DEAD.

Winnipeg, July 14.—Bishop Young of Athabasca died in England.

MANY FARMERS DESTITUTE.

Minneapolis, July 14.—Hundreds of farmers of Northern Minnesota have lost homes and property as a result of the overflowing of the government reservoirs along the upper Mississippi Many are approaching a state of destitution.

The Calgary Herald got out a special Provincial number on the last day of June. It consisted of 28 pages, of which four were printed in a pretty shade of brown ink. The issue contained original articles by Governor Forget, Walter Scott, M.P., and the Editors of the Alberta Star, Nanton News, Raymond Chronicle, Wetaskiwin Times, Medicine Hat Times and others, and "experiences" by the Rev. Father Lacombe and Rev. John McDougal. It was a very creditable production.

MCMASTER BAND.

The McMaster Evangelistic Band began Union Services here on Sunday, and will continue them during this week. On Sunday morning two of the Band conducted services in the Methodist Church and two in the Presbyterian, while the others were in the Baptist Church. All these services were well attended. In the evening a mass meeting of the three congregations was held in the Opera House when the spacious hall was filled to the doors. On the platform at addition to the McMaster Band were local clergy and a Union choir from the three churches named above with Miss Gertrude White, who acted as accompanist.

The service consisted of short addresses with solo and quartette singing between. The members are all very earnest preachers and doubtless their visit will be productive of good

Each afternoon at 4 o'clock there is a meeting of some particular class conducted by Mr. Mitchell, of New York city, who has for several years made a specialty of christian work among children. One day he meets the boys of a certain age and has a heart to heart talk with them, the next day the girls of a similar age and another day he meets the mothers. A large number of converts are reported and Christian sentiment is aroused.

The inspiring music of "The Glory Song" which has taken all Britain by storm has been introduced by these gentlemen and is sung by the audiences with wonderful spirit and evident enjoyment.

The Band is composed of graduates under graduates and one professor from McMaster University and one gentleman who is a specialist in children's work. In its composition the band is unique including young men preparing for law, medicine and the teaching professions as well as men in the regular ministry. They have among them a quartette that is one of the best that has ever visited the west and they sing soul stirring gospel songs with wonderful power. They are all practical men filled with faith in the message they proclaim that is convincing and magnetic. In these meetings denominational lines have been cast aside entirely and the pastors and congregations of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches are meeting as one people and hundreds are attending seldom if ever seen before inside of any church.

The leader of the band, Rev. Russell Coutts, is a most eloquent, powerful and tactful preacher.

(Specially Written For The Times.)

The opening services of the McMaster Band on Sunday last were a decided success and augured well for the services to be continued throughout the week. While it is a matter of great regret that the original leader of the band, Rev. R. Coutts necessarily absent on account of illness there is such a unity among the members of the band that it cannot but be felt that they have a leader present with them in the person of God's spirit.

The morning services at the uniting Churches were a good preparation for the rest of the work of the day. The Quartette, Messrs Bryant, Benson, Vail and James conducting the service at the Presbyterian Church; while Messrs Mitchell and Eaton were at the Methodist and Messrs Hackness and McPhail at the Baptist Church.

In the afternoon Mr. Mitchell held a mass meeting for boys, and the expectations raised from the encouraging reports received of this work elsewhere were not disappointed, nine of the boys present taking their stand for Christ.

Amid the rollings of thunder and the lightning flashes from without the large gathering in the Opera House in the evening, were hushed into an attitude of expectancy to hear the message of grace from the lips of these men who know God, and the earnest attention of the crowd revealed the interest. The Union Choir gave good assistance in the chorus singing. The famous "Glory Song" seems to have found a place in the hearts of the people of Medicine Hat.

Mr. C. S. Eaton, who is leading the band temporarily, had so arranged the programme that it was especially suitable for a hot summer evening, none of the messages were long, and with the quartette and solo singing interpersed held the attention of the audience to the close. The after meeting led by Mr. Mitchell was full of interest to those present, the more abundant life of the leader overflowed and touched other lives, so that many spoke of the saving power of Christ and definite results followed.

Now is a day of opportunity for Medicine Hat such as seldom comes for the advancement in social and individual righteousness, for this band of men with their earnestness, their unity of purpose, their consecration to God, their exaltation in life and message of Jesus Christ are here to do us good. There will be meetings held every evening this week in the Methodist Church commencing at 8 o'clock, the meeting to be a gathering for prayer at 7.15 p.m. On Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. there is to be a meeting for boys only from 12 to 18 years of age in the Presbyterian Church led by Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell does not preach, but talks to the boys out of a heart rich with experiences of 22 years work amongst them. Do not miss these opportunities of meeting and hearing the McMaster Band.

U. S. GUNBOAT BLOWN UP.

One officer and thirty-nine members of the crew of the United States gunboat Bennington were killed, and nearly 100 sailors were injured, some fatally, at 10 o'clock Friday morning by a boiler explosion that disabled the vessel in San Diego harbor. Fifteen sailors are missing. There were more than 250 men aboard when the accident occurred, and many were hurled or forced to jump into the sea by the terrific explosion, which lifted part of the dock, and compelled the beaching of the ship.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Directors of the Agricultural Society was held in the Secretary's office on Saturday July 22nd.

Present. F. G. Forster (president) R. McCutcheon, (Vice-Pres.). W. T. Finlay, W. Houghton, W. H. Hunt, W. C. Harris.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and on motion of Messrs Finlay and Harris were confirmed.

The President read list of subscriptions which Mr. McCutcheon and himself had obtained. The various sums aggregated about $370 and there are one or two more to hear from. In addition they reported that a number of special prizes were offered as usual.

Messrs Finlay and Harris reported in connection with the application of Medicine Hat to be selected as a site for an Experimental Farm, and Mr. Finlay read some "Reasons why this district should be selected by the Government."

Proposed by Mr. Hunt seconded by Mr. Houghton, that the above committee draft a resolution to be forwarded to the Minister of Agriculture. Carried.

Mr. Finlay and Mr. McCutcheon were appointed a committee to arrange for use of the rink as usual for the Exhibition.

Moved and seconded by Messrs McCutcheon and Finlay that this meeting adjourn until Saturday 26th August at 3 o'clock.

JOSEPHSBURG.

St. Anne's Church has been greatly improved. A "Bee" was formed on the 12th July, and a willing body of workers put new siding on the building and gave it a coat of paint. It is worthy of note that two ladies of the congregation did the painting. At the same time a good horse shed was put up on the parsonage grounds near the church. This building will hold about 18 horses. Mrs. H. V. Lewis-Hooper and the ladies of the congregation dispensed refreshments in a tent. A large number of people attended the "Bee" and much credit is due to them for the hearty way in which everybody worked.

Last Monday a "Bee" was held at St. Alban's Church when about 40 friends of the Church assembled and in the course of the day built a horse shed and fenced the burial ground. The ladies of the congregation prepared two very elaborate meals, dinner and tea, and the work was finished by about 8 o'clock in in the evening.

The Rev. W. Nicolls conducted services and administered the holy communion on Sunday, while our Missioner, Rev. H. V. Lewis-Hooper, took the services at St. Barnabas Church, Medicine Hat.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT 5-13-4.

Six townships eighteen miles in length and twelve miles in breadth, in the Josephburg district, have recently been organized into a Local Improvement District, named 5-13-4, for the purpose of improving roads, building bridges and culverts, keeping down noxious weeds and improving the district generally. The district is divided into six divisions of six miles square, and each division elects one Councillor from its ratepayers.

The Councillors for the ensuing year are: Jacob Schneider, Jacob Will, John Frisch Jr., Jas. Robinson, John Weiss Jr., and Peter Draudson with Jas. Robinson as Sec.-Treas.

Six hundred and eighty seven quarter sections of land have been assessed this year at 1½ cents per acre. No personal property is assessed. The ratepayer has the privilege of working out the biggest part of his assessment, and is allowed $4 per man and team or $2.00 per day for man only. This year the assessment on 160 acres amounts to $2.40 The ratepayer being allowed to work out $2.00 and pay 40 cents into the treasury.

The district has already purchased twenty four scrapers and about ten thousand feet of lumber. The work for this year has just been finished. Thirty men and teams having worked for about three weeks. No doubt the travelling public will appreciate the good work done and no doubt there are many places which require improving yet, but a few years will see good roads and bridges through the district if we are to judge by the work of one year

Mr. W. T. Finlay, our energetic M. L. A. has surpassed all expectations in getting improvements made by the North West Government. He held meetings all through this district some time ago to learn the requirements of the people. The meetings were well attended and the people's wants made known to him. He recommended work amounting to over $1000.00 and not one instance of disappointment occured. The new district has taken up the work heretofore carried on by the N. W. Government and is in a position to know where to make improvements to best advantage.

No authoritative statement, however, has been made. Mr. Balfour's government was defeated in a vote on the Irish Land Commission. The subject was not one of prime importance and the government may not dissolve until next year.

BOERS AND BRITISH GRAVES.

Speaking at the fourth annual meeting of the South African Graves Fund Committee, Earl Roberts said that, visiting last autumn a Boer farmer gt Driefontein, he was much struck by the neat and well-cared-for appearance of a small grave-yard on the farm.

It contained the graves of about twenty British soldiers, and Lord Roberts learned that the Boer farmer had fought against us and had been deported for two years, but on returning he had looked after the graves of his fallen foes, considering it is his duty to do so.

READY-TO-USE PAINT.

IT'S MERITS AND VALUE.

Prepared or ready-to-use paint has slowly but steadily won its place and become the generally used paint of to-day. Its status in this locality is well proved by its wide use in the last five.

"Its success" said a prominent paint dealer yesterday, "is due mainly to two causes: first, to the inherent difficulties and disadvantages in buying paint materials and mixing them by hand; and second, to the raising of the standard of prepared paints by most manufacturers.

"The old crude hand-mixing of paint" he continued, "was bound sooner or later to be displaced by modern scientific processes—the wonder is that the old methods were persisted in so long in view of the economy and bettor results obtained by good prepared paint.

"The man buying the raw materials is not in position to test the various ingredients to make sure that he is securing the best quality. The large manufacturer is forced to make careful tests in order to protect himself against being loaded up with inferior goods. Then the materials cannot possibly be combined in so accurate proportions, the pigment and oil so thoroughly incorporated nor the colors made so uniform and true when the quantities used are largely guessed at and then mixwith a stick in a tub or pail as when each ingredient is weighed and measured, and mixed by exact formulas and ground in mills specially built for the purpose. It is hand work against machinery; guessing compared with scientific exactness.

The dealer further stated that the convenience of buying and using prepared paint appealed to every property owner. All he had to do was to decide on the colors he wanted and then get the paints ready to go on his buildings without the worry or expense of buying the various ingredients and the risk of not getting the desired colors."

Asked regarding the position the painters took towards prepared paints, the paint man said: "They take the same stand as I do, they oppose 'cheap dope' brands of ready-mixed paints and endorse good prepared paint. They find it easier to apply than lead and oil and that it helps them to do a better job."

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

To The Editor of The Times,

Sir,

I trust you will kindly permit me in the sacred names of Mother, Wife, Sister, Daughter, to enter a protest against the gross libel on the fair fame of women generally and wives in particular, which was presented to us at the Opera House on Saturday the 15th inst. It is but little to the credit of Marie Corelli that she should have written a book from which such a play could be adapted. To judge from the play the book must be one which a pure minded woman would turn from with disgust, and a careful mother would not allow her daughter to open. And the audience as a whole apparently enjoyed as a huge joke scenes which might well have been hissed and hooted down with cries of "shame." O 'Tempora! O Mores! Surely these things ought not to be. I should like to ask "where was the moral?" I can only say that I could find none. Was it contained in the declaration by the Countess Romani that "no woman loves her husband for more than a week after marriage?" or in her yielding herself to three, to her, different men in the course of as many days almost?

Even Fabio Romani, whose generosity and nobility of character were beyond praise, proved less than a man, once, when he found he was entombed alive, again when he discovered that in a night his hair had turned grey and his face aged so that he was no longer recognizable by his friends. His love for his worse than worthless wife also did not prevent his planning a most diabolical retribution for her, out of which he was shaken by an earthquake, which led him to finally commit her and himself to God! Where was the moral?

Loathesome mental and bodily diseases are not the rule but the exception, and they are not allowed to be paraded before the public but are relegated to our hospitals and asylums. Similarly there have been such women as Lucrecia Borgia and other monsters of immorality, and the sad "sisterhood of shame" alas exists, of whom, however, the majority are now what they are just because they once did LOVE—not wisely but too well. Whereas it would be rank blasphemy against the name of love, to connect that word even in thought with the character represented by the Countess Romani in this piece

Why should moral leprosy of the most baneful description be made the subject of an evenings amusement, the result of which on some minds may be a lowering of the standard of feminine virtue, or of the estimation in which are held those who, to us rougher, coarser mortals, are the embodiment of love purity and unselfishness.

Is it not just such pieces as this which—however good the acting—bring the stage into disrepute, and spoil its influence for good?

Yours truly
One of the Crowd.

All Ready For Baby,

The young mother thinks, when she has completed the baby garments that are to clothe the little form, But she is not all ready for baby's coming, unless she has done something more for the baby than merely to prepare his clothes. Many a young mother who goes through hours of pain and suffering wonders why it was not possible to prepare in some way for the baby's advent, and to avoid the agony that seemed almost unendurable. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the one medicine for women which prepares them perfectly, both for the burdens and pleasures of maternity. It prevents the morning sickness from which so many women suffer. It strengthens the whole body, so that there is no nervousness nor anxiety. It promotes a healthy appetite and causes refreshing sleep. It gives the mother strength for her trial and makes the baby's advent practically painless. Healthy mothers have healthy children, and it is the general testimony of those who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a preparative for motherhood, that the children were healthier and happier than those born after months of mental misery and physical anguish on the part of the prospective mother.

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter absolutely without fee or charge. As chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. R. V. Pierce, assisted by his staff of nearly a score of physicians, has in the past thirty years and over treated and cured more than half a million sick and suffering women. The testimonials of these cured women are on record. A large number of them were cured when doctors had pronounced a cure impossible and after enduring years of useless suffering.

Let no sick women hesitate to take advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer, but write at once and so secure the professional counsel of a specialist in the diseases of women, entirely free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Hoped for Death.

"For the sake of poor suffering women, I feel it my duty to inform you of the great benefit your medicine has given me," writes Mrs. Callie Bowles, of Watts, Iredell Co., N. C. "I was in a most miserable condition when I wrote to you, I had uterine disease so bad I could scarcely walk and suffered such dreadful misery I hoped to be relieved by death. You wrote to me to take your 'Favorite Prescription' and I have taken eleven bottles of it, and two of your 'Pleasant Pellets.' I am entirely well and feel like a new woman. I feel thankful to God and to Dr. Pierce for the blessings I now enjoy. I have a fine big boy, two months old and never got along as well in my life. I can't praise your medicines enough."

Very Thankful.

"I will be very glad to say a few words for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. P. S. Douglas, of Mansonville, Brome Co., Quebec. "During the first four months when I looked forward to becoming a mother I suffered very much from nausea and vomiting and I felt so terrible sick I could scarcely eat or drink anything. I hated all kinds of food. At this time I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he told me to get his 'Favorite Prescription' and a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I got a bottle of each and when I had taken them a few days, I felt much better, and when I had taken hardly three parts of each bottle I felt well and could eat as well as any one, and could do my work without any trouble, (I could not do any thing before). I feel very thankful to Dr. Pierce for his medicine and I tell all who tell me they are sick to get these medicines or write to Dr. Pierce."

MANAGING THE HOG.

TYPE OF ANIMAL BEST SUITED FOR BREEDING PURPOSES.

Long, Loose Make Up Rather Better Than the Dumpling Shape—Feeding Brood Sows—Care of Young Pigs—Value of Pasture.

Discussing the hog problem in The Breeder's Gazette, A. J. Lovejoy of Iowa says:

In the first place it is all important that one should start with as good a quality of breeding stock as his purse will procure. The sows should be of a long, loose make up rather than the plump dumpling type, for in this type one will find a more prolific sow and a more motherly dispesition. She should be coupled with a boar that is a little more compact in his make up and yet not enough to be extremely different. Both should be well proportioned, wide in chest, full in heart girth, good strong back slightly full or arching a trifle, broad and full in the loin and with good hams, legs short or medium, feet strong, nose short, face wide, neck short and well filled and jowl medium to full. With about this type of sows and a boar of the same general type one should be ready to begin the operation of raising first class hogs for any and all purposes.

To get the most out of them will depend entirely on the breeder and feeder. He must first have a liking for the business or he will never succeed. As to the feed problem the nearer one can come to raising the greater part of the feed on the farm the better. No man should undertake the growing of hogs for profit without a good hog pasture, as this is not only one of the most healthy parts of their diet, but one of the most economical. The breeding sows should have this pasture during all of the season that grass can be had, and when the winter comes something should be furnished that will in a measure take the place of grass. Among the better substitutes we have found either sugar beets or sorghum to be quite satisfactory. Hogs or shoats will eat both with relish. These feeds are only to be used in conjunction with grain as a general thing. During the season that the sows are carrying their young they should have a slop composed of ground oats or oats and corn equal parts ground finely. If the oat hulls are sifted out, so much the better.

Wheat shorts or middlings mixed with either or both of the above foods will make them all the better. All should be made into a good rich slop and in very cold weather fed warm. We have practiced feeding warm feed for many years and can see no reason to change, especially for young pigs or shoats. For hogs that are being fed for the market this will not be necessary, as the more corn one can get them to eat the last 60 or 90 days the better. Corn fed on the ear if fed on a floor will be just as satisfactory as if ground for fattening swine, but for breeding sows and younger pigs it is not as good.

First, a sow during the period of gestation should have a feed that will make muscle and bone for the pig that is to come. The same is necessary for the fall pig or late summer one that is being carried over. Sows fed in the above manner will produce strong hearty litters and more at a birth than if fed wholly on a diet of corn. Corn, while producing fat more cheaply than any other feed, will not do for a brood sow. It will bring her to the time of farrowing in a feverish condition, and when the pigs arrive they will be small, weakly and puny. The mother will be irritable and likely to devour the pigs at the first squeal.

But a few sows should be allowed to nest together when getting on toward farrowing, and when close up to this period they should be separated to two or three in a place—if but one in a place, better still. If the owner has done as he should and knows when the different sows are due to farrow he should a day or two prior to this time put the sow in a warm dry place by herself and feed her rather lightly, but on the same feed that she has been having. After the pigs are born the sow should have nothing for 24 hours except a drink of water. This she will need surely. If the litter is large and strong, the feed can be commenced on the second day by giving only a little slop and increasing gradually, until at the end of the first week she can have about all she will eat up clean. Particular notice should be taken that the feed is the same as she has been having, as to change feed at this time will be very likely to produce scours in the youngsters. During the next three months feed the sows all they can eat—that is, of a milk producing character. If one has milk to mix with the ground feed or middlings, he will have an almost perfect feed.

As the pigs grow and show signs of wanting to eat a place should be provided where they may go by themselves and drink a little milk or a rich slop, with a little shelled corn to crack. Carried on in this way, together with the pasture, if in season, they will at 3 months of age be ready to wean or will then have practically weaned themselves. Continue the same feed, adding corn with pasture, and push them along as fast as possible till they are 6 months old, and they will be ready for any market or if pure bred to sell to farmers and breeders. Pigs fed from sows cared for in the above manner should make fully a pound per day till 8 months old and are very often made much heavier.

Bullet Pierces Heart and Man Still Lives.

According to the New York Tribune, a man in Livingston, Staten Island, is alive with a bullet in his lung which passed through his heart. Unable to trace the course of the bullet by a probe or to credit the indications, Doctors Brady and Rossford, of St. Vincent's hospital, borough of Richmond, put on the X-rays, and found the probe had been telling the truth. They were so startled they repeated the examination, and then, that there might be no question as to what they found, they called in several physicians. All agreed that the bullet had passed through the heart and was in the lung.

W. J. THOMPSON.

W. J. THOMPSON.
Editor and Proprietor of the Elkhorn Advocate.

Mr. W. J. Thompson is one of the oldest and best known newspaper men of the Canadian West, having been in the country since 1892. He is a practical printer, like the majority of the editors of the weekly press of the west, and learned the art in his native town of Tilsonburg.

On coming west he first located in Virden, but after engaging in newspaper work there for less than a year, he went to Elkhorn, where the Advocate was established. For a year Mr. Thompson was foreman in the office, and for five years was manager. During this period the Washakada Indian Industrial school controlled the newspaper. The art of printing being one of the trades taught the inmates. In 1898 the school closed down their industries, and Mr. Thompson purchased the Advocate buying a new plant for the purpose of continuing the publication of the paper.

The Advocate is Conservative in politics, and in its comment on public matters speaks with no uncertain sound. It is recognized everywhere as one of the most aggressive members of the Western Canada conservative press. As might be judged from his long mechanical experience, the Advocate leaves little to be desired in its externals. Its press work is excellent, its news arrangement understandable, its advertisements—of which the number indicates the papers popularity among business men—well displayed, and the type faces employed show care and taste in selection. Mr. Thompson has the reputation among his fellow journalists of producing one of the best local papers published in the west, and the Advocate well and worthily upholds this reputation.

In 1900 Mr. Thompson established the Moosomin World, conducting the new enterprise for one year, when he disposed of it to a local joint stock company.

Mr. Thompson may fairly be characterized as an energetic and public spirited citizen, one always alert to advance the interests of the town and district in which he resides. He has issued many descriptive pamphlets, well written and well illustrated, of the locality, and in other ways has endeavored to bring the attention of the outside world to the advantages of the Elkhorn county, of which, as is the case with nearly every Western Canadian, Mr. Thompson is an enthusiast never tiring of giving facts as to its fertility, progress and opportunities. He takes a keen interest in all forms of sport, and assists in every movement for the welfare of the community. He is secretary of the Elkhorn grain growers association. For several years he has been president of the local Conservative association and also of the local football club, an organization, famous for its victories. He is a notary public, a magistrate and a commissioner, and, altogether, one of the busy men of the west, who believes in Longfellow's motto "Something attempted, something done," every day for the betterment of himself and the community.

Mr. Thompson recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, marrying last January, the daughter of the late John McLeod, the pioneer merchant at Elkhorn. He has a beautiful home in the village, and takes a great interest in trees and gardening. Most of the trees and shrubs that can be grown in Manitoba may be found on his grounds, which in summer time are a paradise of floral beauty.

Mr. Thompson is the type of that class of western Canadian citizen that constitute the hope of western progress,—men who are practical, enthusiastic, capable of organizing, possessing executive ability, and have enough imagination to foresee the future possibilities and certainties of the West. Few men have done more to develop the district in which he resides than Mr. Thompson. The work he has done in the Elkhorn vicinity is being duplicated in hundreds of other centres by editors and other pulic spirited men, who found their reward in the rapid promotion of what a few years since would be regarded as idle dreams. These men are nation builders in the highest sense, and it is to the credit of the newspaper men all over the West that they are the mainspring and back stay, the strength and the initiative of all the movements inaugurated by these heralds of progress.

To Prevent is Better Than to Repent.—A little medicine in the shape of the wonderful pellets which are known as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, administered at the proper time and with the directions adherred to often prevent a serious attack of sickness and save money which would go to the doctor. In all irregularities of the digestive organs they are an invaluable corrective and by cleansing the blood they clear the skin of imperfections.

An Englishman was asking for information about the state of education in an Irish county. "Can they all read and write?" "Troth they can, every mother's son of them." Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

When Bishop Codman was appointed to the Episcopal diocese of Maine he made a tour of his diocese and happened to stroll into a woodman's cottage. Asking the woman of the house if there were any Episcopolians around there, she replied: "Well, I don't know. They caught some wild thing out here in the woods a couple of weeks ago, if that's what you mean, but I think my husband said it was a woodchuck."

RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRIVEN OUT OF THE SYSTEM BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

"My life was absolutely made miserable by rheumatism," says Mr. Geo. F. Hilpert, of West River, Sheet Harbor, N. S. "I am employed every spring as a river driver, and in consequence am exposed to all sorts of weather and exposure in the cold water. A few years ago while engaged at my work I was seized with the most acute pains in my back and joints, I became almost a cripple and could scarcely move about. I had medical aid, but it did not help me. Then I began taking a remedy alleged to be a cure for rheumatism and I used ten dollars' worth, but derived absolutely no benefit. The constant suffering I was in began to tell on my hitherto strong constitution and I became so badly run down that I despaired of ever being in good health again. Then a friend called my attention to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although somewhat sceptical I decided to try them. I had only used a few boxes when I began to feel better, and after I had used something over a dozen boxes I was again in good health. Every twinge of the trouble had left me, and although I have been subject to much exposure since, I have not had a twinge of the old pain. I can honestly say that Dr. Williams Pink Pills cured me after other expensive treatment had failed."

Rheumatism was rooted in Mr. Hilpert's blood. The cold, and the wet and the exposure only started the pain going. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured because hey drove the poisonous uric acid out of the blood and filled the veins with that new, rich blood that no disease can resist. These pills actually make new blood, and that is why they cure common ailments like rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, anaemia, indigestion, headaches and backaches, kidney and liver troubles such as neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and paralysis. And it is this same way that they cure the irregularities and secret troubles of women and growling girls. No other medicine can do this, and ailing people will save money and speedily get good health by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once. But you must get the genuine with the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, on he wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TORPID LIVER INDIGESTION

The Most Common Ills of Life and How They Are Cured By

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Slow passage of the food through the intestines, where the most difficult part of indigestion takes place, is the usual cause of indigestion.

As a result of this delay, the food ferments and the digestive organs are filled with gas, giving rise to such symptoms as belching of wind, rising of sour taste in the mouth, smothering sensations in the chest, pains about the heart, heart palpitation, headache and dizziness.

To overcome these distressing symptoms the liver must be awakened to action by the use of such a medicine as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Once the liver is active there is a good flow of bile, which as nature's own cathartic, quickens the pace of the food through the intestines, removes the foul impurities, and restores good digestion and the regular action of the bowels.

Stomach medicines are of no avail in this, the most serious form of indigestion. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills bring prompt relief and cure thoroughly because of their direct and specific action on the liver.

Mr. Duncan McPherson, Content, Alta.' writes:—"I was for many years troubled with indigestion and headache and derived no benefit from the many remedies used. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and after taking four boxes the result is that I am once more in the full enjoyment of good health."

Mrs. J. C. Johnston, Carman, Man., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from kidney trouble, and have used Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills with very marked benefit. I cannot say too much for this medicine, as it seemed to be the only treatment that suited my case."

Because they positively cure the most common and frequent ills of life Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pill are invaluable as a family medicine. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, on every box.

THE DAIRY DEVON COW.

A Good Word, With Some Proof, For This Breed.

The selection of a dairy breed may seem difficult, as one man says Jersey, another Ayrshire and a third Holstein. We have no fault to find with these noble animals; they are the foundation of many grand dairy herds. What is wanted in a dairy cow is the staying quality that will put her on the right side of the ledger when the books are balanced. One breed that is not as often mentioned as the above is the Devon. As to their milking qualities, Dr. J. C. Morris, of Philadelphia, remarks:

"The cows are noted rather for their length of period in profit than for the quantity given. They milk usually up to within six weeks of calving. My herd of Devons has averaged me over five times their weight in milk annually for some years, due allowance being made for heifers and very old cows which have been retained for breeding reasons. Analyses made by the Philadelphia milk inspector shew Devon milk to contain nearly 14 per cent. solids, of which 5 per cent. are butter fat and 9 per cent. other solids, including 3 1-2 per cent. casein, 4 1-2 per cent. lactin and 1-4 per cent. salts. In other words, nearly as much fat as the Jersey, with as much casein as the Ayrshire and more sugar than either. Hence the fat globules rise more slowly in Devon milk than in the thinner or more watery milk of other breeds. The Devons are easy keepers, good rustlers, gentle and kind; in fact, the farmer's cow." These statements of Dr. Morris are borne out by the records of his herd as given in the Devon year book for 1904.

No one going into the dairy business will make any mistake in choosing the Devon, by using the same care in selecting his cows as he would in any other breed. No breed of cattle will do better when amount of feed is considered for the amount of profit per head. Where the Devon is known the consumer will not change readily for any other. On account of its quality it always commands the highest price where known.—American Agriculturist.

The Banana.

The prohibitionist looks on with favor, for it does not mix with alcohol, and some think the habitual use blunts the longing for firewater. Thus Captain Parsons of the English-West Indian line says that since his seamen and stokers have been allowed to help themselves freely to the cargo of bananas they have not wished so much rum. There is a trace of copper in the banana, and deep thinkers believe this is beneficial to the human clockwork.

The taste for the banana is not acquired. As Mr. Crichton-Browne exclaims in a burst of Ciceronic eloquence: "An appreciation of it is not reached through slow stages of diminishing repulsion, but comes at the moment of first introduction. The infant absorbs it greedily; children devour it with delight; the adult does not despise it, and the edentulous octogenarian blesses its agreeable tenderness."

Costermongers In Morocco.

In Morocco the costermonger recommends his wares by pledging the credit of a saint: "In the name of Muiai Idriss! Roast chestnuts!" "In the name of our Lord Mohammed Al Hadji Popcorn! Popcorn!" "In the name of Sidna Ali-bu-Rhaleh! Melons! Nice, sweet melons!" "God is gracious! Beans! Fried beans!" "There be no might nor majesty save in Allah! Water! Cool water!" These and the like are heard at every turn. Even the auctioneer who is calling out the price of a slave or the bids for a Rabat carpet is careful to interlard his professional talk freely with allusions to his Maker and the plethoric roll of Moorish saints.—London Times.

RHEUMATISM WILL SUCCUMB to South American Rheumatic Cure because it goes right to the seat of the trouble and removes the cause. Many so-called cures but deaden pain temporarily only, to have it return again with doubled violence. Not so with this great remedy. It eradicates from the system the last vestige of the disease and its cures are permanent.—71

Father, in the hall, has been standing for half an hour while Millicent and Harold bid each other good-night in the doorway. "'Parting,' quotes Harold, 'is such sweet sorrow that I could say good-night till!'"—At this speech father gets a Shakespearian inspiration of his own and tramps down the stairs. "Seems to me," he asserts, that there is too much adieu about nothing here."

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

Keep Minard's Liniment In the House

An eccentric farmer near Highland, Kan., was married e other night. "Do you," said the preacher, "take this woman to be your wedded wife, to love and to cherish in sickness and health, for better, for worse, for rich or for poor, until death do you part?" There was an awkward pause. Then the bridegroom finally replied: "Them's the calculations."

Admiral "Bob" Evans in a recent conversation with a group of officers threw a great white light upon one of the methods at least by which the Japanese have attained that splendid adaptability to European and American ways. "When I commanded the New York some years ago," he said, "I had a Jap servant with whom I was especially well pleased. He was prompt, remarkably quick to learn, and took such a deep interest in everything that sometimes, just to amuse myself, I devoted not a little attention to explaining things that he appeared not to understand. A good waiter, too, he was. Well, finally he disappeared. "Some time later, when on the European station, I made a call on a Jap battleship lying in the harbor of Marsailles. The captain met us at the gangway and escorted us to his cabin. As we were seated he suddenly turned, threw off his hat, and whipped a napkin over his arm. "'The captain would drink?' he said in a tone I remembered. "'Kato!' I cried, jumping to my feet. "'The same,' he said, bowing. 'Captain Kato of the Mikado's navy.'"

On the day of the funeral the undertaker started to put the man into the same hack with his mother-in-law. The man balked. "I won't ride with her," said he. "But you must," replied the undertaker. "The other hacks are all full." "Well, if I must I will," said the man, but it will take away all the pleasure of the trip."

Mary Ann Reilly and Patrick Reilly of County Cork were a devoted couple. Mary, dying, pledged her husband to have the following carved on her tombstone: "Her lies Mary Ann Reilly, a good wife, waiting for her husband." Twenty-one years later Patrick, being himself about to die, ordered that the following addition be cut upon the stone: "Here is Patrick at last." Pat's graceless son was not satisfied. He had long yearned for his inderitance. He had carved below the two previous inscriptions this: "Late es usual."

TUESDAY, JULY 25th, 1905.

Dawn of the Millinium.

The municipal millenium is about to dawn at Medicine Hat. We have increased comforts and decreased taxes.

Every Convenience. Light Taxes.

Medicine Hat occupies a unique position among towns. The town possesses nearly all the conveniences of a modern city—waterworks, cheap gas for cooking, lighting and heating, etc., and the tax is only 14 mills on the dollar. What other town can show anything like this?

"Soon be no Taxes There."

The above was the heading given to an interview in which the Editor of this paper recently told the Winnipeg Free Press something about what the revenue for natural gas is doing for Medicine Hat. A reference to the heading seems apropos at the present time, because as will be seen by Council reports on another page of this issue, the rate of taxation in Medicine Hat is four mills less this year than last, nothwithstanding the fact that expenditure on public improvements have been heavily increased all round.

The authorities have issued orders that all the cattle must be dipped this fall between August 15 and October 31. It is thought that this dipping will wipe out practically all of the mange remaining in the herds of this district, and most cattle men agree with the authorities and will do their duty willingly.

The Merchant's Bank.

In calling attention to the annual statement of the Merchant's Bank of Canada which appears on another page of this issue we would direct the readers attention to the fact that the Bank occupies a very strong position throughout the financial world and as an evidence of its stability it is only necessary to point to the splendid asset of $18,722,013 immediately available. Another point which is of the greatest importance is the fact that after declaring a dividend of seven per cent, the management has been able to carry to the rest account the large sum of $200,000 besides writing $50,000 off the bank premises account, and contributing $15,000 to the officers pension fund. After all this has been done the handsome balance of $74,000 is carried forward as a credit balance. These are points which cannot but be very gratifying to the Board of Directors, the shareholders and the officers of the institution.

The Medicine Hat branch is under the able control of Mr. H. E. Bennetts who has a Western banking experience of over 10 years at several different branches of the Bank. The steadily increasing business of the Bank at this point is an evidence that the public fully appreciate the fact that the Bank has always made a point of using their great resources for advancing the mercantile, ranching and farming interest of this district in every possible manner. The Bank has undoubtedly shown special facilities in handling the financial end of all branches of the cattle business.

Medicine Hat Town has every reason to entertain a kindly feeling for the Merchant's Bank. The Merchant's was the first chartered bank to establish here having opened the branch in 1898, and during the time when, through a clerical error, in the debenture issue, the Municipal coffers were in a worse than depleted condition, the Merchant's Bank came readily to the Town's assistance. These are all sound reasons why the Merchant's Bank has done, and is doing well in the gas town of Western Canada.

Raving about the Embargo.

Several Western papers continue to print ravings about the British Embargo on store cattle, but we notice that very few, if any of them, have any ideas of their own upon the subject the matter being copied from English papers or inspired journals upon this side of the water. The Ottawa Government, or the agricultural side of it at any rate, are doing very much the same thing. We quite admit that from a purely sentimental point of view the Embargo looks like a slight upon Canada by the Mother country, but as a matter of fact it is no such thing, and the agitation for its removal comes from dealers and graziers on the other side (a mere handful of men) and the transportation companies. We repeat what we have said before, many times, that Canada should keep her store cattle, grow them into beef, and the time must come when that beef must be sent across the water dead, in cold storage. We suppose the "minor papers" of the West will go on coping articles upon the subject, but there is little likelihood of their meeting with any success. The Embargo is not likely to be removed. Let it remain. It is "a blessing in disguise" for Canada.

Lesson in Advertising.

A duck which faithfully stuck to business during the summer and laid several dozen of large fawn colored eggs complained that she wasn't appreciated.

"See that hen over there." said the duck; "she has't laid as many eggs as I have, nor as big. but she has books written about her and verses composed in her honor, while nobody is saying a word about me."

"The trouble with you is," said the wise rooster that was standing near, "that you don't tell the public what you have done. You lay an egg and waddle off without saying a word, but that sister of mine never lays one without letting everyone in the neighborhood know about it. If you want to cut any figure in the community you must learn to advertise."

Mr. A. P. Burns has a large staff at work enlarging the Toronto St. School and is rushing the work.

A word or two about our advertisers, who are after all, the main bulwark of a paper, should not come amiss. They represent the best in the trade, for the reason that only the best advertise. It is the firm which is up-to-date, which is constantly and rapidly turning over stock and which has new goods to sell every month, that has news for the advertising columns. These are the firms that are progressive, and that it pays to buy from. Firms which do not advertise must be looked on as unprogressive and behind the times, whether they really are so or not. The moral to be deducted is a two- fold one. It should teach the public to patronise the advertisers, because they are the progressive firms and have the latest goods. It should teach the firms who do not advertise to get up with the procession, because they are otherwise regarded as back numbers.—Ex.

The Autonomy Bills have received their third reading and on September 1st the infant provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta will become members of the great Provincial family. Infant provinces they will be, but large enough to take their place with the older members of the family and as capable of assuming the responsibility of self government. Receiving provincial powers is but a stepping stone along the line of progress. It now lies with the electors to place the best men the different constituencies can produce at the head of affairs so as to reap all the benefits possible under the new order of things.

WEDDING BELLS.

LYNCH—LEE.

A wedding in which practically the whole town took a very lively interest was solemnised at St. Barnabas Church, on Wednesday morning, when Mr. W. G. Lynch, Manager of the Claresholm branch of the Bank of Commerce and Miss Galena Lee were united in marriage. Mr. Lynch was until recently accountant at the Bank of Commerce here and Miss Lee is a sister of Mrs. Adison Day and comes from Texas, but has resided in Medicine Hat for several years. Both the contracting parties had a large circle of friends in both town and country, hence the interest manifested in the event.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Nicholls, Rector, in the presence of a large number of friends notwithstanding the early hour at which it took place, namely 7 o'clock a. m. The Church was very prettily decorated for the occasion a conspicuous object being a large floral bell suspended from the chancel arch

Thr bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. A. P. Day. The bridesmaid was Miss Nesbitt and the best man Mr. A. B. Irvine. The bride was attired in a travelling costume of Navy Blue.

Mr. F. L. Crawford, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, drove the bride to the Church and afterwards conveyed the bride and bridegroom to the station.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mrs. C. F. Smith played the wedding march on the organ.

The happy couple left on the 7.45 transcontinental express, for Laggan where the honeymoon will be spent. There was a large party to see them off and rice was much in evidence.

NEW CITY HALL.

The contract between the town and Messrs Oakes & Everard for the erection of the new City Hall was signed on Thursday.

Messrs Oakes & Everard intend to erect a paling around the site and commenced this work on Friday.

A Receipt for Kisses.

To one piece of dark piazza add a little moonlight; take for granted two people. Press in two strong ones a small, soft hand. Sift lightly two ounces of attraction one of romance; add a large measure of folly stir in a floating ruffle or two, one or two whispers Dissolve half a dozen glances in a well of silence; dust in small quantity of hestiation, one ounce of resistance, two of yielding; place the kiss on a flushed cheek or two lips; flavor with slight scream and set aside to cool. This will succeed in any climate, if directions are carefully followed.

Be Done With Catarrh.

Why allow this filthy disease to poison your system? It drains your strength, ruins digestion, pollutes the breath, makes you repulsive. The one certain cure is Catarrhozone it cures because it destroys the cause of the disease, cures thoroughly because it goes wherever the Catarrh is, cures every case because its vapor destroys the Catarrh germ instantly. To get well and stay free from catarrh get Catarrhozone and use it; satisfaction guaranteed.

MASON & RISCH

THE PIANO WITH A SOUL

Mason & Risch Pianos are famous for that peculiar carrying power known as the singing tone. Not all tones classed as musical are music unalloyed. There are certain qualities of tone that are strangely diffusive They carry far and retain their singing character where other tones become indistinct or even lost. A sheet of gold leaf, thinner than the thinnest tissue, will completely block the powerful rays of the strongest searchlight, while the X-rays, merely glowing with a faint light, will penetrate an inch of solid steel. So it is with music: some tones are diffusive and carry, others become more or less absorbed in space. The tone that "carries" the singing tone, is due to perfection of finish and perfect vibratory equilibruim of all the tone producing parts of a piano. It is always a tone of the utmost sweetness and purity. The Mason & Risch Piano is full of "sing" being especially fine in its blendings of the human voice, which it rounds out and sustains in a happy union of melody and harmony. Our literature explains the many points of superiority of the Mason & Risch piano—the piano with a soul. Send for it to-day.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

Premier Haultain possesses the happy faculty of being able to say things, and at Ottawa recently he put it very pat when he said, "I asked for a Province and you gave me twins.

The Lethbridge News approves of my comment on the disputed lacrosse match here and agrees that the subject should be "relegated to Limbo." The News says:

This is a good suggestion. Both teams evidently think their contention is right (ours claims to know it) but no good can result to either town from enlarging upon such differences.

It seems almost incredible but, according to the Daily Mail "Overseas Edition,"

There is now wandering about Shropshire and Denbighshire probably the most interesting old warrior in the world in the personageof John Vaughan, who has the unique honor of having been bugler at the famous battle of Waterloo.

Vaughan, who has lived under five Sovereigns, was born in the Army with the Royal Warwick Regiment. He saw daylight first at the remote date of March 13th 1801. As a mere boy he joined the army in the reign of King George the Third, serving twenty-nine years with the 17th Lancers.

He was bugler at the battle of Waterloo at the age of fourteen years three months, and clearly remembers the famous victory. Vaughan served through the Crimean war and the Indian mutiny, where he was badly wounded.—

Many a natural born fool would not be suspected if he only had sense enough to keep his mouth shut, says a New York philosopher. Very true but if he had sense enough to keep his month shut, he would not be a fool.

My note of two weeks ago about there being no celebration here and that the Orangeman were all going out or town was not intended to reflect upon the Orangemen for not staying at home. I know their annual celebration is movable. I was merely having a hit at our town for not organising a celebration.

The street sprinklers are giving great satisfaction and it will be no longer possible to charge our town with being the dustiest in the west. People living north of the track however, think that the cart operating on that side should go through the streets rather than through the avenues. Doubtless the work will be arranged satisfactorily and I counsel patience in this respect, for it will take a little time for everything to get into a good methodical swing.

There is another point on which I may offer a word. The big things being done on the south side in the way of street grading was absolutely necessary and if it has cost a good deal of money it will add permanently to the improvement of the town and encourage building operations which will increase the revenue

There has been a certain amount of criticism as to the way in which the work has been done, but that is inevitable. So long as the Council can show value for the expenditure andsubstantial improvements the main thing has been attained.

I am never an apologist for the Council—I am often a critic, but we must remember too that a Councillor who conscientiously performs his duty to the public has to do so at considerable personal sacrifice, and it will be in order to ask once more when are we going to get an engineer to take charge of all these public works. We are asking a great deal of Councillors when we expect them to do work which properly belongs to a salaried official.

Whew! this is hot weather. Were it not for the refrigerators and the ice-man how should we ever have sweet milk and butter in our houses?

Speaking of milk however, I heard a conversation between a milk seller and a housewife the other day. The milkman asked if the milk "kept" all right. The answer was that it did so considering the heat. "But" added the lady, "I take great care to clean and scour my milk can every time it is used." There is the secret If a woman takes the milk in in a dirty can or jug sourness is the result and quick sometimes too.

The milkman should be particular too. I read the following in a farm paper recently:

It is no wonder that some of our milkmen continually have trouble with their milk, judging from the way the cans and other milk-holding vessels are neglected. One item of this neglect is the taking home from cheese factories of whey, in the same cans that brought the milk and leaving the whey in the cans almost to the time when the cans are wanted again. Cans should not be used for carrying whey at all, but, if so used, they should be emptied as soon as received at the farm-house and thoroughly washed at once.—Farm Journal.

In another paper I came across the following:

A good many of our readers will be building new barns and stables this season. While they are planning for that work, one feature should not be forgotten, and that is the sheathing with matched and smooth lumber inside. Unless this is done, it will be exceedingly difficult to prevent the accumulation of dust and siftings from the hay, especially where it is stored above the cows on scaffolds. Under the ordinary arrangement of our stables, it is very difficult to either keep the insideof the stables clean or to whitewash them effectively. To leave the lumber rough, even if it is matched is to do the work but half. It is better to make a complete job of it and have a barn that will be in years to come a satisfaction in every way.

The care which is given to milk on the farm where produced, whether it is to go to a milk market or to be made into butter or cheese, with the location, construction and arrangement of dairies or milk rooms, their equipment and management, show great variety and lack of uniformity in every country, says HenryE. Alvord.

The good the bad and theindifferent are common to all. Good milk rooms, well located, thoroughly built shaded, cool and well kept are not hard to find in any dairy district. Construction is heavier and more durable in Europe; convenience and ease of management are common in America. Excepting Denmark and Sweden, no country compares with America in the general appreciation and use of cold water and ice in the care of milk. The almost entire absence of refrigeration in France and the general ignorance of the value of cold in dairying is truly astonishing. In the matter of dairy appliances and equipment the United States is surpassed by no other country, although Denmark and parts of Great Britain stand about as well.—Farmers Review.

Some of the figures recently published on Colorado dairying follow: 8,000 cows supply milk to Denver, and 43.000 daily supply milk to the rest of the State. It takes 25,000 cows to supply the cream used. About 45,000 cows are supplying milk to creameries and 7,000 are supplying milk to cheese factories. It is estimated that 12,000 cows are supplying butter to the ranches. The annualmilk consumption for the entire state is put at 89,425,000 quarts and the number of quarts of cream used is reported at 5,475,000. The value of all cows in the state is given as $5,119,500 and the wholesale value of the milk is placed at $2,-966,312.

Whitewash is a valuable adjunct in keeping the cow stable clean. Our milkmen have learned this long ago at least those that have to sell milk to exacting buyers. Visiting the farms in the vicinity of Elgin, Illinois, one is struck with the frequency of the whitewashed stables. One of the great advantages of this wash is that it shows dirt readily, and when it has been applied a stable cannot get very dirty without the attention of the owner being called painfully to that fact. As a germicide whitewash ranks high, and dairymen should use it more than they do.

There now! I seem to have preached quite a sermon about milk and butter, but it is a seasonable subject, and butter makers should be very careful, for the finding of hair or dirt in butter is exasperating to the man or woman who likes things done in the right way.

Only a little golden hair
That set my heart in a flutter;
Only a little golden hair,
And I found it in the butter.

Settlers continue to pour in. Trains travel in five or six sections a day out of Winnipeg and distribute the people all over the country. Even as far west as this the night train from the east is generally in two and three sections crowded with homeseekers. Three thousand arrived at Winnipeg from Ontario in one day last week.

"Westward ho" was their slogan and no one had time to be lonely. The cars were all packed to the limit, and no end of amusement was furnished along the route by the impromptu efforts of talented homeseekers. Westward, ever westward, they went until the green hills of older Ontario gave place to the rocky defiles of the newer portion. Then through miles of wilderness they passed until the flat prairie broke upon the vision with all the splendor of a new country, and the fabled region of the west was at hand. Faces filled the windows of the coaches in wonder at the never ending stretches that were lostin the faint blue of the far distant horizon. Many a one thought of those lines of Bryant where he says, "Lo, they stretch in airy undulations far away as if the ocean, with its gentle swells stood still with all his rounded billows fixed," and felt that he had caught the spirit of the theme.

THE SHERIFF'S POSSE

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1904, by Frank H. Sweet

Seis Pessner moved haltingly along the face of the cliff, crouching almost to the rock to obtain the slight concealment afforded by a few stunted bushes, until he arrived at a sharp bend, where he rose cautiously to his feet and gave a quick glance down into the valley and back over the way he had come.

It was a wild, rocky way, ending in this long climb up the face of the mountain, but his glance flashed over it in a swift, comprehensive scrutiny. All was desolation, solitude, save at the base of the very slope up which he was struggling, where a compact group of men were following his trail as surely and unrelentingly as bloodhounds. Even as his glance flashed down at them there came the returning flash of sunlight on a leveled rifle barrel into his eyes, and he ducked and slipped around the bend. As he did so a bullet flattened against the rock behind where his head had been.

"Steve Finter," he thought grimly. "No other man can shoot like that. He must have seen my head up. If only I can get up to my cabin I won't mind. I can pick off Steve from there, and maybe some of the others before they close in. I—I hope Luisita ain't to home."

Well up on the face of the opposite mountain was Seis Pessner's cabin. Here he and Steve Finter had worked together in seeming harmony until one day Steve had slipped down to the mining town below and accused his partner of having robbed and attempted to murder him and of being a horse thief and contemplating other bold robberies in the neighborhood. He had so ingratiated himself with the sheriff as to be sworn in as a deputy to aid in the capture.

The first intimation Seis had had of the accusation was seeing the sheriff's posse approach the cabin, and almost at the same time he received a bullet in his shoulder. Other bullets had followed, but in some way he had escaped. He had eluded his pursuers and hurried to the mining town, slipping in at night and conferring with some of his friends. The next day these men had done a little quiet investigating for him while he remained in one of their homes. That night, in spite of their warnings and expostulations, he had started back, his face stern and his eyes full of angry determination. But when he saw the posse and threw up his hands in token of surrender, with a paper held conspicuously in one hand, a bullet from Steve's rifle found lodgment in his ankle, almost bringing him to the ground.

After that he skulked and dodged and climbed for hours, using a piece of broken limb in place of the ankle that was almost useless, suffering agony at every step and with only the hope of reaching his cabin and making the last stand as retaliatory as possible.

Now as he crossed into the small valley he tried to keep within the screen of foliage as much as he could. Luisita lived in the cabin nearest with her Mexican father. She must know and grieve, of course, but he would spare her as long as possible.

However, as he was pushing his way through the undergrowth nearly opposite the cabin he came upon her suddenly, carrying her rifle. At sight of him her face flushed, then paled.

"Senor Seis!" she cried. "Oh, why are you here? They are down in the valley. I saw them not an hour ago from the cliff. They will kill you. Hurry! Hurry! You should not have tried to see me now."

"I did not," striving to keep his voice steady. "I tried to avoid you, Luisita. I wanted to spare you all I could. But this is the only way to my cabin, and"—

"You are hurt," sharply.

"Just a trifle. But listen, Luisita. Whatever the charges against me, I know that you believe me innocent. But yesterday I was in the town and obtained proof positive of Steve's guilt—enough to hang him. Only I cannot get word with the sheriff. I have given up thought of it now. They are hot on my trail and will be here in twenty minutes. All I can do is to try to reach my cabin."

"That will not save you," she expostulated.

"No," grimly, "I know it will not. But it will help me to even up the score a little."

The girl threw out her hands imperiously.

"It shall not be that way!" she cried, her eyes flashing. "You shall be saved and Senor Steve punished. And yet I do not understand. Why should he"—

"For plenty of reasons, Luisita. You promised to marry me after refusing him, and then, only two hours before he left, we found a vein of silver, now rich I do not dare to say, but it made Steve try to kill me and, failing, to run away. He came back with the sheriff and his posse. What story he told I can only guess. But where are you going, Luisita?"

"To the bend round the cliff"—over her shoulder. "It is the only way into the valley, and I shall hold the men until you can get away. Do not go to your cabin, but straight on over the mountain. Hurry! The men will not harm me. When you get to the wilder ravines, hide. I will see that the truth is known."

With a shout of remonstrance he hobbled in pursuit, but Luisita did not even hear. She was already rods away, plunging through the bushes with the one thought of being at the bend in advance of the sheriff's posse.

They were edging cautiously across a narrow shelf only a few rods below when she reached the desired point and threw her rifle in position. It was too good a chance to be lost.

"Hands up!" she ordered sternly.

Ten pairs of eyes flashed at her in consternation as the same number of hands rose into the air, but as they saw the face beyond the rifle barrel the hands went down with simultaneous relief. They had thought it Seis. Some of the men began to laugh.

"I said 'Hands up!'" Luisita repeated slowly. "I am not making words, and most of you know how I can shoot. Senor Seis is escaping from you now, and I shall keep you here until he is safe. "Stop," as a rifle barrel rose a little, "or I shall fire! You may kill me, but I can send half of you from that ledge before you do it, and I will. Now, up! Quick!"

All the hands rose except Steve's. With a bitter curse he threw his rifle into quick position, but before he could fire it slipped from his nerveless fingers, and he sank upon the shelf, only saving himself from falling over the precipice by a desperate effort.

"That is only one," called the girl coldly.

"But look here, Luisita," expostulated the sheriff angrily. "You can't thwart the law like this!"

"You are not upholding the law," contemptuously. "You are merely helping a criminal. If Senor Seis were here"—

"He is here," said a quiet voice at her side, and another rifle barrel joined hers in menacing the whitening faces on the ledge below. "Now, sheriff," the voice suddenly ringing out clear and stern, "you will take your men and hurry back to town. And I would advise you to take Steve Finter along. The truth is known there now, as you will find, and it may be that you and your men will have to explain a few things. Hereafter, when you seek a man, hear his story as well as his accuser's. I have proof of my innocence and Steve's guilt. You and your men will turn and retrace your steps, taking Steve along. You will find proof of everything I say in town. Now go!"

They stood side by side watching the posse down the mountain. Then Seis lowered his rifle.

"I—I think you'll have to help me to the cabin, dear," he said weakly. "I'm a—a little used up."

Any Name Satisfied Him.

The average office boy who enters the employ of a daily newspaper is promptly christened with a name. The name is usually the first one that pops into the head of the first man who sees him.

A short time ago a scarlet haired youngster went to work in a local newspaper office. "Brick" was the first nickname that the little fellow received. Another employee of the paper thought just plain "Red" would be better. "Rusty" came into use later and then "Scarlet." A new man on the force thought "Vermilion" would be a good name, but this fell into disuse on account of its length. "Pinkey" came into use later, and then the discovery was made that the youth carried a middle name, which was Michael. "Mike" and "Mickey" then came into use, as did "Speck," in deference to the boy's freckles. Finally the horse editor thought "Sorrel" a proper name for the boy, and later he was dubbed "Sandy." He now answers any name that has either a cardinal or a freckled turn to it and appears satisfied with any of them.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Quaint Riddles.

These curious riddles, which all have one answer and are familiar to the people of various parts of France, are quoted in the Revue des Traditions Populaires:

What goes from Paris to Lyons without moving or taking a step?

What goes to Paris without once pausing?

I am very long. If I repose up straight I could touch the sky. If I had arms and legs I could catch the thief. If I had eyes and mouth I could tell everything.

White, very white, it encircles the earth.

If I were not crooked I could not exist.

The queen's carpet, always spread, never folded.

What looks very long in the sunshine and has no shadow?

What arrives first at the market and first reaches home?

Answer: The road.

A Mean Trick.

"Does your husband tell you his business troubles?"

"Yes, but he doesn't know it. I wait till he's asleep, and then I shake him a little and ask him for money."

A Retraction.

She (fiercely)—Don't you ever dare to say again that I'm driving you crazy!

He (meekly)—I won't. I must have been that way when we were married.—New York Press.

Railway Collisions.

A medical authority says that in railway collisions the passengers who are asleep escape the bad effect of shaking and concussion.

Learning Languages.

For learning to read a foreign language Emerson's method is worthy of attention. "Read," he says, "the same dozen pages over and over a hundred times till you know every word and particle in them and can pronounce and repeat them by heart."

Costly Liveries.

The full dress liveries of the British royal footmen cost $550 apiece.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. THOMAS F. RYAN.

A New York Woman Whose Benefactions Run Into the Millions.

Conducted on rigid business principles is the charitable bureau established, maintained and operated by Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan at her home, 60 Fifth avenue, New York. Mrs. Ryan, who is the wife of a millionaire, during the last few years has given more than $2,500,000 toward the advancement of the various charities maintained and controlled by the Roman Catholic church in the United States, besides contributions to nonsectarian institutions. The exact amount of her benefactions will probably never be known outside of the immediate members of her family. Her gifts, however, extend to eight or ten states in the Union, from North Dakota to Texas and from New York to Virginia.

No gift is made until she has satisfied herself personally of its necessity, and, once she determines to build a church, a school or a hospital, immediate steps are taken to establish an endowment fund sufficient to insure its support for all time to come. In carrying out this work Mrs. Ryan has set aside several rooms in her Fifth avenue mansion as her office and equipped them accordingly. Here she spends from three to four hours each day when in New York with her secretary and clerks in examining reports, looking into requests for additional assistance and taking steps to strengthen the financial support of institutions already established.

MRS. THOMAS F. RYAN.

Mrs. Ryan's munificence covers the building of at least 100 new chapels, schools, churches, hospitals, homes for sisters of charity and homes for aged and infirm. In addition to these, there are hundreds of others which have been increased in size, repaired or endowed so that they could not be abandoned altogether through a lack of support. From 9 o'clock every morning until luncheon, at 1 o'clock, Mrs. Ryan gives her entire attention to this work.

During these hours prelates of her church and officials of different charitable institutions are received, as are her architects and contractors or builders whom she has engaged for the construction of a building. Those who have good cause to plead are seldom dismissed without encouragement or a provisional promise, depending upon the outcome of a personal inspection. Those who lack sincerity get no response.

When at her country home, Montebello, in Suffern, N. Y., during the summer, Mrs. Ryan takes her staff with her and transfers her business headquarters from the Fifth avenue mansion to the country place, so that her absence from the city will not hamper the extension or steady maintenance of the institutions already established, and that appeals for new contributions where found to be worthy may receive attention as speedily as possible.—New York Herald.

Face Blemishes.

The girl who is troubled with face blemishes and an oily skin will find help in the following treatment: Bathe the face with hot water and a good soap before retiring, using a rough face cloth or a camel's hair face brush. Press out such of the specks as yield easily. Obtain from a skin specialist a prescription for a lotion which will make the pores smaller and apply this after the bath. By following this mild treatment for eight or nine months the complexion will become spotless and of fine texture. If the pimples are of the ordinary, curable kind, in order to drive them away eat simple and nutritious food, exercise daily and keep the digestion in good order. In addition to these precautions drink a glass of hot water in which a tablespoonful of phosphate of soda has been dissolved every morning before breakfast for about two weeks. If the pimples come from acne only a skin specialist can cure them. If the skin is very oily sponge it with alcohol, but be careful not to use this too often or you will go to the opposite extreme and your skin will become dry. A little borax in the water in which you wash your face is also good.

Don't Nag.

There are two ways of looking at a husband. One is to make up your mind that he has no faults and to consider him a piece of perfection. The other is to recognize his faults and to make up your mind to love him in spite of them. This is the way that will wear. Look out for the good qualities that offset them. You will find them if you take the trouble. Then make up your mind that you will adapt yourself to the failings.

Sensitiveness is after all a form of selfishness, and married life is a perpetual giving up of your selfishness. Don't believe that your husband wants to hurt you or that he is a selfish brute because he has forgotten something you asked him to do. "He would not have done that when he was courting me," you may murmur. Very probably not. But he does other things for you that he didn't do then. Think of those and look after your own transgressions in the way of forgetfulness and neglect and think less of his.

But above all, whatever his faults, don't nag.—Woman's Life.

Lotion For the Hands.

A good lotion for the hands is the following: To four parts of glycerin add one part of tartaric acid dissolved in the smallest possible quantity of hot water. Mix well, apply a few drops to the hands and rub in thoroughly. If hands are badly chapped use more of the lotion, rubbing in thoroughly. Wash in clean lukewarm water, dry well and apply a little more. Applied immediately after peeling fruit or vegetables it will remove stains at once. When hands are badly stained treat as if badly chapped. This lotion will remove ink stains from goods if spots are immediately put to soak in a little of the liquid and afterward washed in clear lukewarm water. The process must be repeated several times.

Rice Powder.

One of the best formulas for a rice powder, which comes from France, is composed of three ounces each of rice flour and rice starch, one and a half ounces of carbonate of magnesia, three-quarters of an ounce of pulverized boric acid, three-quarters of a dram of powdered orris root, eight drops of extract of violet and fifteen drops of bergamot. To prepare the essences should be mingled with the carbonate of magnesia and then shaken all together. If before going out the face is first anointed with cold cream, then the powder applied and all that is superfluous removed the skin will be effectually protected from winds and change of temperature.

The Eternal Truth.

There cannot be one standard of duty or perfection for the two sexes, and it is in comparing the one with the other that the conflicting schools of education both go wrong. In a complex civilization such as ours there is room for professional women as well as domestic women. But the great function, the true vocation, of women is now, as in the beginning, to be a helpmeet for man, to be the mother and trainer of the children who will be the men and women of the future. Men will be forced to realize and respect her position and will deem it an even greater honor to seek her alliance in matrimony.—London Queen.

Scaly Finger Nails.

When a nail appears scaly and broken it is useless to treat it with the ordinary appliances of the manicure set. It may be worked fairly smooth by rubbing with a piece of wash leather that has been dipped in a little moistened pumice powder. But the one essential is to dip it nightly into a strong solution of gelatin and to bandage without wiping. The bandage should not be removed in the morning until the finger has been placed in hot water.

Hanging Out Clothes.

When hanging clothes to dry remember that the thickest part of the garment must be hung highest, for were the thinnest part uppermost the water would run into the thick part, and thus the drying would be greatly prolonged. Next hang up everything inside out, for then any accidental soil is likely to come on the inside of the garment, where its presence will generally not very much matter.

Floor Polisher.

For polishing a floor melt the requisite amount of beeswax (according to size of room), then mix in sufficient turpentine to bring it to a paste. Keep in a jar and rub on with a piece of flannel; polish afterward with a cloth or leather. Plenty of elbow grease is essential. About a quarter of a pound of beeswax to half a pint of oil of turpentine should be the right quantity.

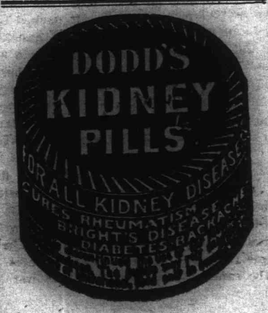
Children's Food.

Salt meat should not be given to children nor food that is highly seasoned. Fruit when it is thoroughly fresh and sound may be given with every meal either raw or stewed. Never allow children to eat much jam, cake, pastry or sweets. The plainest of food is really best for them.

Curried Eggs.

For curried eggs cut one apple and one onion in thin rings and fry a golden brown in butter. Sift into this a dessertspoonful each of curry powder and flour and dilute with half a pint of water. Lay in four hard boiled eggs shelled and quartered. Serve in wall of boiled rice.

Shabby dark leather will look like new if rubbed over with linseed oil or the well beaten white of an egg mixed with a little black ink. Polish with soft dusters until dry and glossy.



When color has been removed from silk by acid it may be restored by touching the spots with a little sal volatile or hartshorn.

Don't wear tight shoes; they make a young face look old, drawn and wrinkled in a few hours.

Take your carpets and even your oilcloths up once a year.

Worse Than the Cure.

Everybody knows that tobacco owes its name to a blunder, the early Spanish discoverers having mistaken the term by which the Caribs designated their pipes for the herb which they smoked therein. But everybody does not know that the application of the lighted end of a cigar to the skin was once gravely recommended as a remedy for neuralgia.

CURIOUS EXPEDIENTS

MAKESHIFTS THAT SERVED USEFUL PURPOSES.

How Water Was Obtained by the Use of Gun Barrels—A Ship Navigated by Means of a Railway Map. Dynamite Used For Driving Piles.

Guns have other uses than that of killing. We all know that hundreds of clocks are set from the 1 o'clock gun fired by electricity from Greenwich observatory, but not everybody is aware that rifles have supplied moisture in desert countries to travelers dying of thirst and thus saved their lives.

In the great Sahara some time ago, says Pearson's Weekly, a globe trotter, who wanted water badly, found it possible to collect a drink out of the mere dampness of the sand. He sunk the barrel of his gun into the ground and it collected enough moisture in the bore to stay his thirst. A timely suck at a gun muzzle has saved many lives in the sun scorched deserts of the tropics.

Water ran short on a merchant vessel in mid-Atlantic not long ago, and the crew did not know what to do to obtain a drink. The captain, however, hit upon a brilliant idea.

He had a number of sporting guns in his cabin, and, taking them on deck, he plugged up the breech ends, filled the bores with sea water and set them them end up among the coals of the galley fire.

As the steam gathered he ran it through other gun barrels until it cooled. The steam collected in the shape of excellent fresh water, and in this way the crew were supplied with sufficient moisture until the vessel touched port.

If you were to drop into the houses of the French peasants you would be struck with the fact that practically every man and woman poked his or her fire with a bayonet.

Some 100,000 bayonets—condemned stores of the French army and used in the Franco-Prussian war—have found their way into the homes of poor peasants, who use them as fire irons.

The bark Ruth, bound from Demerara to Oban with sugar, neglected to procure a chart of the Scottish coast when setting sail. The captain had never been to Oban before, and, not wishing to return to Demerara to get a chart, he looked about the vessel for a substitute.

He discovered a Caledonian railway time table, with the railway map attached. This helped him out of his difficulty, for it acted splendidly as a sea guide. The Ruth cut across the Atlantic and after sailing up the west coast of Scotland dropped her anchor safely in Oban bay.

Without this railway map the captain would never have got his vessel safely through the intricate channels.

Good steel wasn't obtainable when the Germans wished to manufacture some new rifles for their army, so they purchased tons of horseshoe nails which had been kicked about the roads of the world by horses innumerable.

The gunmakers found them a perfect substance for the manufacture of rifle barrels, for the nails, made originally of the best metal obtainable, had received from the constant pounding of the horses' feet on hard roads a peculiar annealing and toughening.

It is quite possible that you are wearing on your hands today drawn up lawyers' briefs or ancient title deeds.

When kid leather was at a premium the French glovemakers hunted high and low for a substitute. One firm, more ingenious than the rest, bought up old parchments of all descriptions. They carefully removed the ink marks and eventually turned the cleaned parchment into gloves.

Ever since that particular firm has supplied Britain with finest French kid gloves made of parchment. The vellum clippings left over when the gloves are made are boiled down and turned into letter cases and purses.

The British forces were about to cross the Elands river during the late Boer war when it was discovered that it was impossible to construct a trestle bridge across it, for the bed of the river was nothing but quicksand. Piles had to be driven, but no pile driver was handy.

The officers of the engineers, however, overcame the difficulty in a way that startled the general in command of the troops. The sappers waded into the water, set up the piles and laid iron plates on each one. On these small charges of dynamite were placed and fired.

After the explosion the piles were as firm as if they had been driven in by a steam hammer. Dynamite explodes downward with a terrific force, and anything below it is pounded deeply into the earth.

Mr. Fosdyke, engineer in charge of the Asaka dam on the Nile, scuttled a ship to save his cherished earthworks from ruin. The dam partly burst, and the great rush of water was forcing the banks from below.

Something had to be done to stop the flow, for a terrible disaster was imminent. Mr. Fosdyke boarded a cargo steamer tied to the bank some distance away and, getting up steam, steered her down the rapid stream.

When she was broadside on the trembling dam the engineer had her scuttled, and as she sank in the rushing waters Mr. Fosdyke and his men cheered themselves hoarse. The scuttled cargo steamer had saved the dam. This remarkable makeshift for a breakwater cost nearly £7,000.

They who depend on the merits of ancestors search in the roots of the tree for the fruits which the branches ought to produce.—Barrow.

EVILS OF THE TRAIN.

Long Street Dresses Are a Constant Menace to Health.

The street dress which sweeps the sidewalk is a death breeder. If the wearer of this dress went out deliberately to gather up the germs of disease and distribute them in her own home and in the homes of her friends she scarcely could succeed better.

The woman with the train to her dress goes downtown dragging the pestilence making contrivance behind her. Of course she holds it up sometimes, but often it trails along in the dirt, gathering into its folds millions of microbes of unnumbered breeds.

When she gets home again this woman who conforms to the prevailing fashions hangs her dress in a closet. The closet no doubt is dark. The rays of the sun never penetrate it. Tuberculosis microbes and most other disease germs love the darkness. They like to get away from the fresh air. They gloat and flourish in this woman's dark closet.

After a time some member of the woman's family falls ill. The dread consumption attacks the fairest one of the lot perhaps or a little child is taken off with scarlet fever or whooping cough.

Then this grief stricken woman wonders where the disease came from.

It is high time the dressmakers abolish the train. There are enough other ways of contracting diseases.—Chicago Journal.

INDIA RUBBER.

Process of Tapping the Trees and Preparing the Sap.

India rubber, or caoutchouc, is a dry, coagulated, milky juice, the sap of trees and shrubs indigenous to the most unhealthy and inaccessible regions in the equatorial countries of South America, in certain areas of west Africa and the Uganda protectorate. The mortality among the natives in the quest for rubber is enormous. The natives are equipped for their hunts by the brokers and venture to the haunts of the caoutchouc trees in boats and by marches through miles of thick forests. But the climate carries off the rubber hunters like flies, and the percentage of those who return from the expedition is very low.

Many properties of a vegetable emulsion are possessed by the sap, which contains the caoutchouc in the form of myriads of minute globules. The process of tapping the trees for the sap is closely akin to the method of extracting sirup from the maple trees in North America. The sap is collected in large vats. The juice is then submitted to a heat and smoke treatment. A fire of palm nuts is made, and a pole is inserted in the vat containing the viscid fluid. When withdrawn from the vessel the end of the pole is besmeared with the sticky substance. The rubber is then held in the smoke issuing from the palm nut fire until the sap coagulates. The treatment in the peculiar smoke effects the curing of the rubber.

When the operation is completed the pole with its charge is once more immersed in the vat of raw caoutchouc and the smoke and heat process repeated and so on several times until there is a large knob or accumulation of rubber upon the end of the pole constituted of hundreds of thin layers of rubber. The end of the pole is then cut out of the rubber, and the spherical mass is duly examined by the broker and labeled according to its quality.

ENTERTAINING ROYALTY.

The Task Is Always a Most Trying and Tedious One.

It must at times, despite the honor, be a somewhat tedious function for a British subject to entertain the king, for the house and all therein are for the time of the king's visit royal property. At luncheon or dinner the host and his guests remain standing until royalty appears. Then the host, if the queen or a princess be present, escorts her to the table, the hostess following with the king. If the king is alone he leads with the hostess.

Neither host nor hostess can give the signal for leaving the table, but must await the royal pleasure. If the queen or a princess be present, when she rises she is followed by the hostess, who for the moment is the lady in waiting. As it is not the proper thing for a servant to hand anything to a sovereign, when tea or coffee is served it is first handed to the hostess, who herself offers it to the king or queen. Oddly enough, finger glasses at dessert are, when royalty dines, placed for them only. When the sovereign dons a wrap no servant is permitted to help, but a lady or gentleman must assist.

Another rule is that if there is card playing for money coin fresh from the mint must be on hand for the occasion. The guests for these royal house parties are selected by the royal personages often weeks and sometimes months in advance, and an invitation to them is really royal command. These house parties are always very small, and it goes without saying of the very smart set.

A very curious old custom is associated with interments in the cemetery of Labruck, Connemara, Ireland. A box of pipes—short clays—is brought with the coffin, and a pipe with tobacco is served out to each mourner. The pipes are smoked in silence after the earth has been filled in and a mound of stones raised above the grass, the ashes are solemnly knocked out on the top and the pipes broken or left behind. The origin of this custom is unknown, but it is thought to be emblematic of "ashes to ashes, dust to dust." Empty black bottles are also to be found scattered about the site.

Fortune Harbor, Nfld., June 12.—(Special).—Scores of people in this neighborhood are living proofs that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ailments from Backache to Bright's Disease. Among the most remarkable cures is that of Mr. Richard Quirk, and he gives the story of it to the public as follows:

"I suffered for over twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney Disease, and at intervals was totally unable to work. After ten or twelve years of doctors' treatment, I had made up my mind that my complaint was incurable. Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills tempted me to try them. I did so with little faith, but to my great surprise I had not taken more than half a box before I felt relief, and after the use of seven or eight boxes, I was fully cured and a new man.

OSTRICH PLUMES.

A Good Method of Renovating Them When Bedraggled.

A suggestion as to how to rejuvenate bedraggled ostrich plumes:

First of all, water will not injure a good plume. Wash it in a tepid bath of slightly soapy water. A small basin is the best utensil to use, as you can swish it around the edge without spreading the feathers too much. The soap should be in such quantity as to just make light suds. Run the feather through your hands gently three or four times to remove the dirt. When it appears clean rinse it in two baths of clear tepid water and drain.

Great care must be exercised in drying a feather, and it is not to be laid down from the moment it leaves the basin until all the moisture has been driven out. To hasten matters it may be partially dried over a stove, but the sun is better. Fan it, but not too much, while the drying is going on.

When the plume is still a trifle moist hold it for about half a minute over a spout of a steaming kettle. This curls the feather, after which it is to be dried rapidly over a stove plate in order not to lose the curl.

Never brush a feather to get it to fall into place; shake it instead. If the ends of the feather prove refractory they may be given an extra curl with a curling iron, though you must be careful that the instrument is neither dirty with soot nor too hot. The best test temperature the finger can stand is a good test.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

BAPTIST SOCIAL.

The Ladies Aid of the Baptist Church held a very successful ice cream-social in the grounds of the Church on Tuesday evening. The Town Band, under the leadership of Mr. J. Leonard (who has succeeded his father as leader of the band), was present and contributed an excellent programme of music during the evening. The weather was all that could be desired and the attendance was large. The sum of $70.00 was netted for the Church funds.

A FINE CROP.

On Thursday last Mr. J. J. Lait, whose farm is known as the Island, situated just on the outskirts of Medicine Hat, brought some samples of growing grain to The Times office. We found them to measure as follows

Red Fife Wheat	4 feet 3 inches.
Rye	4 feet 9 inches
Barley	3 feet 5 inches
Oats	4 feet 0 inches
Alfalfa	2 feet 8 inches.

The Alfalfa we may say was from seed sown this year and Mr. Lait observed that it was put in on the poorest part of the Island.

The barley was perhaps the largest single stool we have ever seen. It had 28 stalks and 28 "ears." These averaged about thirty kernels on each head which would give 840 kernels from one seed, a truly big yield The color of all these grain stalks was a deep green. Mr. Lait's earliest field, about 30 acres of wheat, is ripening fast and will be ready for cutting about the last day of this month.

Merchants Bank of Canada.

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of this Bank was held on June 21, 1905.

Very Satisfactory Reports Presented.

Net Profits for the Year Reached $649,237.

Retiring Directors Re-elected.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Merchants Bank of Canada was held in the Board room of that institution on Wednesday, June 21, at noon, when there were present: Sir H. Montagu Allan, Messrs J. Hodgson, J. P. Dawes, Chas. F. Smith Hugh A. Allan, Thomas Long, Charles R. Hosmer, Alex. Barnett (Renfrew), E. F. Hebden, Charles Alexander, Lieut.-Col. Prevost, Richard White, Fred W. Evans, M. J. Foley, James Moore, Capt. Benyon, Michael Burke, James Crathern, F. E. Meredith, K.C., B. A. Boas, A. D. Durnford, James Williamson, and John Morrison.

The proceedings were opened by Sir H. Montagu Allan, the president, taking the chair, and requesting Mr C. N. Read, secretary of the bank, to act as secretary of the meeting.

The Annual Report.

The president submitted the following report to the directors:

The directors beg to present to the shareholders the annual statement of the bank's business as at 31st May last.

It will be observed that the earnings have fallen somewhat short of the previous year. This has been due in a large part to the generally lower rates of interest prevailing at New York and other loaning centres.

The directors have nevertheless been able, through recoveries realised in some of the securities formerly written down, to add $100,000 to the reserve fund, in addition to writing $50,000 off banking premises, and making the usual contribution to the officers pension fund, carrying forward a balance to the credit of profit and loss account of $73,197.20, which, they hope, will be gratifying to the shareholders.

The office of general manager has become vacant through the retiral of Mr Thomas Fyshe. Mr. E. F. Hebden, the Superintendent of Branches and Chief Inspector, has been appointed Acting General Manager.

The various offices of the bank have been inspected during the year.

All respectfully submitted.

H. MONTAGU ALLAN,
President.

E. F. HEBDEN, Acting General Manager.

The usual motions were submitted and carried unanimously, after which it was moved by the president:

"That Messrs John Morrison and James William on be appointed scrutineers for the election of directors about to take place."

A vote of thanks was tendered the president for his conduct of the business of the meeting; and shortly afterwards the scrutineers reported that the following gentlemen had been duly elected as directors: Sir H. Montagu Allan, Mr Jonathan Hodgson, Mr J. P. Dawes, Mr Thomas Long, Mr C. R. Hosmer, Mr C. F. Smith, Mr Hugh A. Allan, Mr. C. M. Hays, Mr Alex. Barnett.

The meeting then adjourned.

The new board of directors met in the afternoon, and Sir H. Montagu Allan was re-elected president, and Mr Jonathan Hodgson, vice-president.

Town Council Meeting.

A meeting of the Council was held on Tuesday evening. Present: The Mayor in the chair, Councillors Penhale, Stewart, Drinnan, Sissons and Smyth, W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk, C. R. Mitchell, Town Solicitor, W. E. Porter, Supt. of Works.

Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, Ex-Mayor and Messrs H. K. Oakes and W. M. Cross were also present during a portion of the proceedings.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

OFF FOR A HOLIDAY.

Leave of absence for two weeks was granted Mr. Porter who is going east on a holiday.

TO DRAIN RAILWAY ST. SOUTH.

A letter was read from the C.P.R. asking permission to open a ditch on South Railway Street, to carry off surface water which now runs down the hill and into the round house.

After a short conversation leave was granted.

NO KICK.

A letter was read announcing the sittings of the Railway Commission which will be held in the west this autumn.

Coun Stewart—Have we any kick this time.

The Mayor—I don't know of anything.

It was ordered that the letter be placed on file.

AFTER INSURANCE.

Letters were read from C. R. Mitchell and W. N. Adsit asking for a share of the insurance on the new City Hall when the proper time arrives for placing insurance upon the building. They were referred to the Finance Committee.

UNION OF MUNICIPALITIES.

An invitation was received from Mayor Sharpe, of Winnipeg, inviting the Mayor and Councillors to a banquet at Winnipeg and urging the Council to send delegates to the Union of Canadian Municipalities to be held in Winnipeg this month, during fair time.

Dr. Smyth said he thought Medicine Hat should be represented at the meetings. He had read a good about the doings of this Union. It was a great scheme and one which would result in a great deal of good.

Councillor Drinnan agreed with the remarks of Dr. Smyth.

The Council agreed to send representatives and the Mayor and Coun. Sissons were appointed.

MUNICIPAL BOOKS.

Coun. Drinnan proposed that the Council should get some books on Municipal works as such books would be of great assistance to members of the Council.

TheMayor remarked that while he was away he was presented by the City Engineer of Rochester with two years reports on the works of his department, covering waterworks, sewerage and streets, and was a very interesting publication. He would be pleased to place it at the disposal of members as he presumed it was meant for the Council as well as for himself.

ACCOUNTS.

Various bills were referred to the finance committee for report.

REPORTS

The Water and Light Committee re the application of T. Hicks and others for water connections that they did not recommend it because of the expense as it would be a long connection (1775 feet) and there were only four possible consumers.

A similar application from E. W. Dunham was not recommended for the same reason being 366 feet from the main and not much revenue in sight.

Coun. Penhale asked how much had been spent out of the amount estimated.

The Clerk replied that he could not say exactly without referring to the account books.

Coun. Drinnan said the by-law called for $12,000.

The Clerk said he thought about twothirds had been expended, not more.

Mr. Porter said there would not be enough piping in stock for these proposed extensions and there would be a lot of grading as well.

Coun. Drinnan—Don't give us any more grading to do. We shall have the North end kicking.

Coun. Penhale—They are kicking.

Coun. Drinnan—They had $3,000 expended on their streets in grading and so on and nothing was done but repairs this side.

Coun. Sissons—I move that the report be received and the recommendations adopted. I cannot see that we should make such long connections for so little.

Coun. Penhale seconded and the motion was agreed to.

IN THE FIREMEN'S BOOTS.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee reported re the complaint of the fire brigade that during the recent heavy rains Mr. Porter and others had used their rubber boots, stating that Mr. Porter had used them upon his own responsibility.

Coun. Sissons said it was the day of the big rain and the committee thought that there could not be much objection under the circumstances. He had been told that the firemen used the boots for their own private use. He could not say if it were so, but that was what he was told.

Coun. Penhale—One fireman told me there were 18 pairs of boots and only used to one or two fires.

On motion of Councillors Drinnan and Penhale the report was adopted.

ABOUT FILTERS.

The Water Committee recommended that Mr. Porter be sent to Brandon to secure information as to the cost and methods adopted in connection with the City filter works.

Coun. Stewart—Can you manage to take a few days off after your holidays Mr. Porter?

Mr. Porter said he could manage it all on the same trip as he was going to Moosejaw.

Coun. Smyth—If there is any prospect of our getting a town engineer, I think it would be well to postpone it.

Coun. Penhale—You know clean water from muddy don't you doctor?

Coun. Smyth—Yes.

Coun. Penhale—You can tell muddy from clean.

Coun. Smyth—Yes.

Coun. Penhale—I would prefer a mechanical man to go and inquire.

Coun. Smyth—An engineer would know how to filter it.

Coun. Penhale—Well, that would be when we wanted it filtered.

Coun. Smyth—You would want an engineer every month in the year: and he would know a good deal about other things as well. How do you propose to filter it.

Coun. Penhale—Brandon forces theirs and have the best. If that's good enough for Brandon isn't it good enough for us.

Coun. Stewart—I don't know. May be a different class of people.

Dr. Smyth—It is a question whether it would not be well to have a standpipe and filter by gravitation.

Coun. Penhale—Yes.

Coun. Smyth—Well, now, if you first put it in the intake and then have it on the hill, won't you be doing it twice over?

Coun. Penhale—Would you propose to give those people up there dirty water.

Coun. Smyth—No certainly not.

Coun. Penhale—What would become of it. It would have to be forced through.

Coun. Smyth—Why not gravitate it, but that is a point on which our engineer if we had one could help us.

Coun. Penhale—Whats good enough for Brandon is good enough for us unless you want to come down to the Grand Forks style, with three reservoirs.

The Mayor—Edmonton adopted a system of sedimentary tanks and spent $20,000 in it, and had to abandon it and adopt the Brandon system of mechanical filtration.

Dr. Smyth—That's all right but I want to guard against spending a large amount of money and have to do it over again.

The Mayor—Well, Mr. Porter would simply report as to cost etc.

Coun. Stewart—Well, Mr. Porter can get information as to what the water was like before filtration.

Coun. Smyth—Very well, then I move that the report be adopted.

Coun. Penhale—I second the motion.

Carried.

THE OTTAWA DELEGATION.

The Mayor then read a written report, which was signed by himself and Ex-Mayor Hutchinson, giving an account of their trip to Ottawa re Strathcona Horse, Post Office etc. The report was almost identical with the statement previously made to The Times by Mr. Hutchinson and published in this journal on the 11th July. It is needless, therefore, to repeat it. The report was supplemented by some verbal statements, and was received and adopted.

A vote of thanks was passed to the delegation and acknowledged by Mr. Hutchinson.

NEW CITY HALL.

MARKET SITE

The committee appointed to consider the offer of sites for a market reported. There were two offers before the Council as follows:

Harlow, Blythe & Co. offered the Purnal property, on Main Street North including livery stables, for $6,500.

F. S. Pingle offered the lots on Montreal St., occupied by Harlow & Co., as a lumber yard, 12 lots for $7,100.

After some discussion as to the relative merits of the two sites, the Council were agreed that both were good offers, good even as a speculation, being well worth the price asked.

Coun. Sissons favored the Purnal site, but the others were in favor of the Montreal St. lots.

Eventually, on the motion of Couns. DesBrisay and Drinnan, it was agreed to purchase the Montreal St. property, subject to ratification by the ratepayers to whom a bylaw must be submitted.

Coun. Sissons asked what about the proposal to buy 5 acres of the Cousins property for an athletic ground. The committee reported that $300 per acre was the lowest price Mr. Cousins would take.

No motion being made the subject dropped.

NEW EDINBURGH.

A letter was received from the New Edinburgh Company, enclosing account for purchase of their property as sanctioned by the bylaw. The net amount was $2,523.75.

On motion of Messrs. Stewart and Sissons the finance committee were empowered to arrange for payment.

What a sure saying is handsome is what handsome works or never take a book by its cover. What a lovely picture a ripe bunch of grapes make? But when I saw a beautiful young lady under the influence of wine and acting as if crazed, who would ever think that through man's invention and ill usage of God's kind gifts to us a most useful and pleasant fruit is changed from good to evil.

When we think that it takes seven full days to travel across the United States with the fastest train from east and west, but from three to four from north to south what an enormous area of land with the great quantity of fruit and grain that God in his goodness help us to grow so much more than we can use that were the knowledge of God is not is great famines we are enable to send to send the grain across the sea with many products of great value.

Other nations seeing the advantages here has praised and admired this good land of freedom. But oh we would be sorry to hear any servant of the Al mighty God say to us with all our good that woe should be our portion instead of blessing, but think where this woe comes from illusing God's good gifts. Even in Canada the great land of the free many are yet slaves to strong drink. But let each of us who want a blessing and not woe strive to overcome evil and not be overcome of evil. Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey his servants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness

MARKET REPORT.

Winnipeg, July 20th.

Dear Sir,

Since our last report the markets have weakened in all points. Grass cattle are coming forward in big numbers and the weather conditions in England are very unfavorable for the best trade. This is the advice we received by cable today. Common grass cattle are being shipped into the Winnipeg market freely and are selling low. We advise holding back any half finished stuff. Any good export cattle should be sent forward as there are no prospects of an improvement.

We quote markets as follows:—

Winnipeg—
Best Export cattle (buyers assuming freight)	3¼
Butchers	3 (delivered)
Common	2½ to 2¾ "
Hogs (wanted)	5¾
Toronto—
Best grain fed exporters	4¼ to 4¾
Best butchers'	3¾ to 4¼
Common	2¼ to 3
Montreal—
Best exporters	4¾ to 5
Best butchers	4 to 4¼
Common	2½ to 3
Chicago—
Best cattle	5.40 to 5.90 per cwt
Common	2.40 to 3.50 " "
London & Liverpool	10.50 to 10.75 " "

KILLED BY CATTLE.

BODY LAY ON THE PRAIRIE FOUR DAYS.

It is with deep regret that we have to chronicle the fact that Alexander Deutchman, a farmer living about two miles south of the Cypress Hills, on Willow Creek, near the saw mills was killed on Sunday week by range cattle. A melancholy feature of the sad event is that the body lay on the prairie for four days before being discovered. The deceased, who was sixty years of age, settled in the district only last spring. He came from Suver, Oregon U. S., where his wife and family still reside, and he stated to a neighbour a few days ago it was his intention to send for his wife and family in a short time so pleased was he with his location at Elkwater.

The circumstances attending the tragedy may be briefly stated. On Sunday week (the 16th inst.) deceased attended divine service at the house of Peter Furhman, where services were conducted by Mr. G. Beimett, Baptist Minister at Irvine. After service a little boy named Noble came there and Deutschman asked the boy if there were any cattle on his crop which was not fenced. The boy said, no but that there was cattle near, Deutschman then asked Furhman to lend him a whip which Furhman did. Deutschman then left and went in the direction of his house. He was expected to return in the afternoon to Sunday School of which he was the Superintendant, but he did not come back. They wondered why he did not return but as there was a heavy shower of rain about the time for school, it was thought that had stopped him coming. On Monday Daniel Miller, of Josephburg, went to the place to see him and found the place locked. On Tuesday Miller met Furhman in Medicine Hat and told him he had been to Deutschman's place and found it locked up, and that Deutschman had been chased by a certain bull and that he had better go and look as he might have been hurt. Furhman returned and went over to Deutschman's place on Thursday and not finding him at the house rode over to the crop. He found Deutschman lying on the edge of his crop. Furhman then went to Medicine Lodge and notified the R.N.W.M.P. Police and Sergt. Wilson took the matter in hand and notified the coroner (Dr. Smyth, Medicine Hat).

Upon examination a shot gun was found about 25 yards from the body deceased's hat was discovered some distance away. Some rubbers which he had worn on Sunday morning were found one about twenty yards away and the other some thirty yards on the other side of the body. His spectacles and hymn book were lying on the ground, the hymn book torn up. The gun contained an exploded shell and the empty shell was jammed in the breech while a loaded shell was found on the ground near the gun.

The sum of $44.45 and a bill for $100 was found in the clothing.

Dr. Smyth went to Medicine Lodge on Saturday, examined the body, which had the neck and one arm broken and held an inquest at the house of Harry Mudie, the same day. The following composed the jury: William Rutherford, Wallace Nicholl, Harris Garlow, Lawrence Sexton, Harry Mudie, Edwin Leslie.

After hearing the evidence the jury returned the following verdict:

That Alexander Deutschman came to his death by being attacked and killed by range cattle while travelling on foot on the prairie.

The funeral took place on Sunday, the body being interred on Furhmans place, the Baptist minister officiating.

It appears that Mr. Noble, who lives near deceased's place, heard cattle making a great racket on the Sunday, and looked out, but paid no more attention as he thought the animals were fighting.

BINDERS AT WORK NEAR MEDICINE HAT.

Mrs. Peter Robinson will not receive again until October.

Judge Harvey and Mr. Powell (Court Stenographer) arrived in town on Monday evening. The Supreme Court opens here to-day.

CUTTING HAS COMMENCED.

The "hum of the binder is heard in the land." Harvest has commenced.

Mr. Brigeman is cutting oats.

Corbett & Fleming commenced cutting oats yesterday.

Mr. Zahniser commenced cutting wheat and barley on Monday.

Mr. T. W. Follis has cut a piece of rye and will commence on his wheat thisweek.

Mr. Babington commenced cutting wheat to-day.

Frequent thunder showers, occasionally very heavy, are keeping the ground cool around growing crops

"Crops are holding out and filling out fine," said W. R. Babington to The Times yesterday.

Mr. Wm. Houghton's crop is looking very true and good. He will begin harvesting in a few days.

The grain crops on Mr. Robt. McCutcheon's farm, just across the river are looking fine. The stand is true and of good color.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

Monday morning, July 17th opened dark and cloudy, with frequent showers. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, one could see that there was something more than usual on hand on the Creek. Men were hurrying along some on horseback, some in rigs, all armed with hammer and saw. We enquired of one what the row was about. Why we are going to build a stable and fence the ground at St. Alban's Church, aint you coming to help? Alright, but what about the grub? Never mind, we will trust the ladies for that. On we went and found 14 boys right eager for the fray. T. Lait was booked as director of ceremonies and he soon had every man at his post, and the work went merrily on till the whistle blew for dinner, which the ladies had laid out in the Church. Shortly before this the clergyman, Rev. H. N. Lewis-Hooper and his lady appeared on the scene. He is a typical britisher, who, when his country needed men, shouldered his musket and fought for his Queen under the burning suns of Africa. But now in times of peace he has donned the armour of his heavenly King. After greetings and dinner, he threw off his coat and let the boys see that he handles a saw or hammer as well as a text. By five o'clock the stable was completed and everyone ready for tea which was served on the lawn. Afterwards the boys made short work of building a substantial fence. We all wended our way home feeling we had had an enjoyable time and done a good days work.

Here we had good sample of Western broadmindedness. The reserved Anglican, the staid Presbyterian, the wet Baptist, the more excitable Methodist, and the silent Lutheran all worked side by side.

Last Sunday Rev. Nicolls, of Medicine Hat held communion services in St. Alban's, large attendance.

The herders in charge of Goose Lake cow camp, discovered on returning to their tent one evening that a watch and slicker had disappeared during their absence. After a short consultation, they decided to visit a neighboring camp, where they persuaded the occupants to dig up the missings articles.

Mr. J Brown has returned from a visit to Uncle Sam's domain, bringing back with him a bunch of fine horses.

Haying is all the go. The demand is good but the supply limited.

Crops are looking well. Frequent rains counteract the rather warm weather.

Miss Marshall, of New Glasgow, is spending a few months on the Creek the guest of Mrs. W. Putnam.

It is reported that a German settler on the Cypress Hills, while engaged in driving range stock from his place, was attacked and gored to death.

SPORTING NOTES.

LACROSSE.

Every merchant takes stock now and then, and without doing so he can never tell "where he is at." This stocktaking sometimes shows him to be in a better position than he thought he was.

It is the same in sporting circles. Now let us take stock of our lacrosse club, that is the personnel of the players.

During the last few months about eight members of the old champion team have left town or dropped right out of the game and many people begun to think lacrosse as good as been for a year or two.

But is it so? We think not.

This feeling started several months ago and when McNabb and Hatcher left town it was like putting on the last straw, but we think it can be shown that we have plenty of material here for a good team yet. We have a few of the old hands and some very good new material.

Below we name some of the boys who can play lacrosse and if they will get out Medicine Hat need not take a back seat yet.

Here they are:

These players are requested to be out every night for two weeks to enable the management to have a practice with two goals.

There will be a special practice on Wednesday night.

Now, get out to practice boys and show that there is "something under the Hat."

Cast thy bread upon the waters and thoushall find it after many days.

Truth is like oil for oil and water will not mix. So with truth it always comes out right. There was an only son of a widowed mother who through wrong companionship was led to indulge in strong liquors. His indulgence of strong liquor lost him his position on the Railway. But, as the Bible says, that what you sow you will also reap. So his mother never would believe her boy was lost. After ten years of drifting and careless living he had come down to begging, when he met an old friend. But the friend did not recognise his late superintendant. He felt so lost and discouraged that he was just about to end his life when the thought came to him of home, and, just to see if his mother would still know her boy, he went to the old home just for once. His mother met him at the door and just said, "oh Ernest how glad I am to have you home." She never even asked where he had been or what he was doing, but trusted that God had answered her prayers. God had indeed answered her prayers, for from that time on a drop of liquor or wine never passed his lips. He is now again Superintendant of a road and every man on the road who knows his life story is glad to shake hands with him and run their par. of the road by water. For a man is known by the company he keeps. For the ways of man are before the eyes of the Lord and he pondereth all his goings

Imperial Politics.

The Balfour Government is evidently in a bad way, due chiefly we believe to their educational policy. It is important to the Empire, however, that the Government should remain in power for some time yet for upon this rests the fate of the preferential issue. If the Government passes out under present conditions the preferential question is likely to be laid aside for years. Without a doubt the situation is unique in Imperial politics. It is believed that the Government has lost a great deal of strength of late. and that at a general election it might pass out. But an election conducted on the present arrangement of the constituencies would not fairly represent public opinion, for the distribution of seats, owing to the movement of population, is very uneven. To-day England has one member for every 68,000 people, or for every 11,400 voters. Scotland has one for 64,000 people, or 10,066 voters. Ireland has a member for every 42,703 people, or for every 6,783 voters. If the representation were recast on a population basis the Irish membership would drop by 30, and the English would be increased by the same figure. This would make a difference of 60 in a vote in the Commons. At present the Liberals derive a great deal of Parliamentary strength from the Irish situation. They get the assistance of the large Irish vote always. If the conditions were changed by a redistribution on a scheme of representation by population it would be helpful to the Government and correspondingly injurious to the Liberals. Mr. Balfour has drafted a redistribution measure, and has promised to push it through the present Parliament. His idea evidently is to secure whatever advantage can be derived from the change for the coming election.

Experimental Farms for Alberta.

The Farmer's Advocate makes a strong plea, in the last issue, for an experimental farm for Alberta, and the people of this Western province will feel grateful to the Advocate for the efforts on their behalf. The Government appear, however, to have made up their minds not to establish any more large farms like those at Brandon and Indian Head, but will establish smaller experimental stations at different points in the West. This idea will prove right in practice if the authorities do not make the mistake of having too many. A dozen small farms poorly handled will not do much good for the settler. No matter how many or how few, the stations must be in competent hands or they will be useless. Conditions vary in different parts of Alberta even so that more than one farm appears to be necessary. There should certainly be two—three would be better. In fact we are of the opinion that three good experimental farm station are required in Alberta.

What's the Matter with Canada?

The above slogan would, under ordinary circumstances, be answered: Canada's all right! But, under the circumstances in which it was used by the Calgary Herald last Thursday, the only possible answer is. Canada's all wrong! "All Canada," says the Herald, "is ringing with the story of the country's shame over the Ottawa salary grab."

And that is not all. A government committee is inquiring into the scrip scandal; The city of Montreal is shaken to the depths over an investigation into charges of council graft: Premier Whitney is charging in detail that franchised corporations have been plundering the Ontario public for years. This is not a spectacle calculated to reflect credit on the great Dominion. And yet the people are sound. No one can reasonably find fault with the increase in the indemnity for members, but there the line should have been drawn.

It is a principle of government as old as political economy that a member of a legislative body may not increase his compensation by his own vote. This is elementary law. It is the moral law of Canada, yet it has been violated with an indifference that is startling. Full details of the affair will be found on another page.

Is New Party Wanted?

There seems to be a growing opinion that the remedy for present evils in the political world in Canada is the formation of a new party. People who hold this opinion, believe that Canada's only hope of freeing herself from the policy of "grab and graft," is to inaugurate an entirely new party. Regeneration is needed, but evidently whatever is done will have to start from the outside. At present politicians I practically all imbued with the one spirit of how to get rich quick and be in politics. No one has time to fight the people's battles. The cry for a "Loyal Unionist" party will find many echoes throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Lieutenant-Governors.

The immediate possibility of the government being obliged to fill four important posts in the new provinces is apparent. Alberta and Saskatchewan will each require a lieutenant-governor. These lieutenant-governors will in turn have to decide upon some one to form a government.

It is generally conceded that Lieut.-Governor Forget will be the lieutenant-governor of Alberta. Regarding Saskatchewan, several names are mentioned, but the most prominent among them is Dr. Douglas, who, as chairman of the agricultural committee and a most prominent member of parlinment, is said to be strong in the running for the premiership of Saskatchewan. The selection has not yet been made of the premier for Alberta.

Is Saul among the Prophets?

We didn't see it but we are told the Calgary Herald says the Medicine Hat papers are "too good to be scrapping, and ought to find enough to do boosting the district." Much obliged Brother Herald for the implied compliment, but these little scraps are just our way of taking a little "divarshun." There is just a dash of Irish in our make-up. But oh, Brother Herald, Brother Herald, it is refreshing to find you filling the part of mentor! We have some recollection of big scraps between you and the Albertan, so we are only "copying our betters." But, is Saul also among the prophets?

Never in the history of the country have crop reports from all sections been so uniformly favorable.

Telford, North Grey's member, has been giving away half of the increased indemnity to an agricultural society.

Major Walsh, at one-time commissioner of the Yukon, died at Brockville last week.

Walter Scott has been urged to accept the Liberal leadership in one of the new provinces, but it is said he prefers lieut.-governorship and his claim to choice of office would appear to rest on a strong foundation of vigorous party service.

Canadian people from ocean to ocean regardless of party ties will unite in condemning the pensioning of ex-ministers of the Crown, says the Lethbridge News. The thing is wrong in principle and will therefore be bad in practice. No one would object to a liberal remuneration for high officials while in office, but a law giving rich men like Tuppers and Sifton a pension for the rest of their days just because as Cabinet Ministers they served their country (and peradventure themselves) for a period of five years, will be warmly resented, and we believe, repealed.

WILL COME WEST.

SIR WILFRED AND MOST OF HIS MINISTERS TO VISIT EDMONTON AND REGINA.

Ottawa, July 27.—It is understood that most of the members of the government are arranging their summer programme with the intention of being in the Northwest at the beginning of September. They are going to participate in the ceremonies by which Alberta and Saskatchewan will be launched on their careers as Provinces. Sir Wilfred Laurier will be the central figure in the ceremonies, with Hon Frank Oliver, and with them will probably be Sir William Mulock, Sir Frederick Borden, Hon. Messrs Brodeur, Fisher, Lemieux and Hyman. The Alberta inauguration will take place at Edmonton Sept. 1, and that of Saskatchewan at Regina probably on Sept. 4.

SUNDAY LAWS.

London July 27.—The Privy Council yesterday refused to grant the petition of the Dominion Government for leave to appeal in its Dominion Lord's Day Alliance case. This litigation is the outcome of the appeal of the Lord's Day Alliance to the Dominion Government to pass legislation respecting the observance of Sunday. The Dominion referred the question to the Supreme Court, in order to ascertain if it had the power to pass the necessary legislation. The Supreme Court declared that the right to pass this legislation remained with the Dominion Government. The Government sought to have this decision reversed.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

Victoria, July 26.—The Wellington Colliery Co. today received a wire that the steamer Tricolor coal laden to San Francisco, is ashore at Cape Mendicino. No particulars are furnished.

NORWAY IS DISSATISFIED.

Christiania, July 26.—Commenting on the situation in Stockholm, all the newspapers prefer to await the debate in the Riksdag on the report of the special committee before considering the conditions Sweden desires to impose, but the majority incline to the opinion that these conditions will not be acceptable to Norway.
