WINNIPEG, Dec. 17.—It is curious how environment modifies people's thoughts and politics. When I was down in Nova Scotla and New Brunswisk a few weeks ago I found the people of the castely provinces le-joleang in the prospect of a Canadian navy and in an era of shipbuilding and commercial expansion. Nova Sco-tia has great coal mines of her own

He warningly contends that there must be "large concessions, big sacrifices, in both principle and principal," if the kingdom is to avoid "what it would need, but a few more blunders and a little more obstinacy to expand into a blood red catastrophe," This opinion carries all the more weight because expressed by a sharp critic of Mr. Balfour, who also is supposed to be in favor of a new conference, with a broader base of authority. King George is giving the situation more attention than ever and has laid aside temporary work on the coronation program, a matter he intends to keep within personal control. His own plan would be to give the Hudson Bay Railway to the Canadian Northern, the road now nearest on the way. He would give them a subside and bind them in turins to run the road on certain lines. He thinks one company would run it better than more, and that a company that has other ousiness to do can more easily run the line and find rolling stock than a line that had only grain to carry for a few weeks in the year. If he can not do this, then he may give the contract for building the road to the Ma and Mann construction, and later on give the operation of the road on terms to the Canadian Northern. His policy will not develop until later on. The first of the opening services of the completed partion of the new St. Barnabas Church, Danforth-avenue, was held Friday night, with a congregation of 300 in attendance. His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto preached and other clergy attending were: Archdeacon Ingles, Canon Dixon, Canon Farncombe, Revs. G. I. Taylor, J. B.

Fotheringham, L. Vaughan, D. T. Owen, A. H. Owen, A. H. Brachen, G. Typer, R. Seaborn and T. Summer-hayes. Prayers were read by Rev. J.

B. Fotheringham and Archdeacon In-

B. Fotheringham and Archdescon m-gles. In bidding the lord bishop and other clergy and laity welcome to the new church, the rector, Rev. Frank Vipond, spoke feelingly of the loyal efforts of many of the parishioners to carry on the work, which had been beset with many difficulties. These were not yet over, but he knew the spirit of his par-ishioners and looked forward with fullest confidence for the future. The sermon of the bishop was an samest and eloquent appeal to the par-ish to appreciate their heritage of mem-bership in the old apostolic church and in their new structure, which was God's means and man's need. Of their rec-tor's need for their support and pray-ers, he spoke with intense earnestness and for forty minutes held the congre-gation's closest attention. The singing by choir and congrega-tion was very hearty. Much credit is due to Choirmaster W. Edmeads and Organist Mrs. Hitchman for the splen-did rendition.

Twould be a Waste of Time to Shop from Place to Place for Gift Furniture When such a Wealth of Beautiful Things Awaits You HERE

The Adams' Store is to-day-as we try to have it every day in the year-completely stocked in every department. We do not buy sparingly as to be "out of this" and "out of that" when a season nears its end, but plan to have here the goods you have a right to expect when you come for them.

The great holiday buying -more advanced this year than ever before - has not left this store like an empty bark washed upon a barren shore, with only odds and ends to pick from. Instead. the stocks to-day look full and fine -as though we had just started the season. And there are cases upon cases, crates upon crates, of brand new goods that have just come from abroad. It's a great thing for a big, generous, gift-buying public to have a store like this—a great thing, indeed.

A quiet wedding took place in St. Paul's Church, Bloor-street east, last week, when Miss Margery Elizabeth Greene, daughter of Canon Greene, Orillia, was united in marriage to Mr. William Thomas Gerald, Maple-ave-nue. Canon Goy performed the cere-mony, assisted by the bride's fabler. Canon Greene. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Ernest Greene, and wore a suit of navy blue broadcloth, farge black hat and black furs, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. Mrs. Er-nest A. Greene was matron of honr, wearing a suit of brown broadcloth and a large black velvet hat and car-rying a sheat of yellow chrysenthem-ums. The best man was Mr. Allan Greene, and two of the bride's sis-ter, Mrs. Stewart, who wore an ame-thyst sour. Evening Hair Bands such as will b. sure to appeal to any lady, in shades to match gowns.

barlione, who has studied for some yea. s under Randegger and Shakespcare in London has lately resigned his posi-tion as principal of the vocal depart-ment of the Pittsburg Conservatory of Music to take up his residence in Toronto. Mr. Armstrong contributed several songs to the Twilight Musicale last week and his numbers contained such splendid selections as "Dio Pos-sente," Faust by Goumod; "Drinking Song," Cavaliera Rusticana by Mas-cagni; "Canadian Home Song," by Edward Manning, and "Barcarola," La Gioconda by Ponchielli which were given in a style worthy of the com-positions. Mr. Armstrong has a voice of great range, resonance and superior tone quality, and which he uses as a tone quality, and which he uses as a fine instrument wherewith to express the whole musical import of his songs. The audience was very appreciative and lavish in encores. Mr. Armstrong is also a writer on musical subjects and his residence in Toronto will doubtless be attended by much success. Another important feature of the program was the plano numbers given by Mr: Hungerford who has studied for four years in Europe with Pro-fessor Lambrino of the Moscow Unilance versity and known as the Leepzig vir-tuoso. Among Mr. Hungerford's selec-tions were Chopin's etudes E major, alues of horses in Canada on page inday World of December 11. I was very much surprised and used at the ridiculous criticism and amazing difference in figures of the shortage of horses I am credited with giving in my address at the Fat Stock Show at Guelph. Your reporter was either not there, was misinformed or got his figures twisted, and I hope you will make this correction, not only on your reporter's behalf and mine, but for the benefit of the general public, as I did not wish to convey the bies that "I know it all" onvey the idea that "I knew it all." The figures I gave were from the Ontario Agricultural Blue Book for 1909 and 1910, and not from 1904, as report-Here are a few figures that I did at the average increase for the last five years was 11,000 a year up The number of orses in Ontario in 1909 was 728,000, ut up to July 1 of 1910 they had de-4000, making only 724,000 up date, but a greater number had been sold, viz., nearly $8,000, mak-ing the number sold and short about 102,000, and that I would venture to say that 75 per cent. of these had left Ontario for other Canadian provinces, as I had been informed by the commerdial editor of a Winnipeg paper that about 27,000 horses had passed thru Winnipeg to the western provinces in less than three months, the first part of this year aid in reference to American statistics that horses had increas the United States nearly 4,000,000 in the last five years (and never mentioned such figures as 13,000,000 or 21,000,000) and that there were more horses in the United States, at this moment than there ever had been and that the prices were the highest on record, and as far After the eventuate but dealers are were the highest on record, and as far as belittling the horse industry, noth-ing was further from my thoughts. ing was further from my thoughts. the trouble and run all the risk after then forthcoming Derby. As Melton This remark was very uncalled for, the animals leave the farm. First started at 15 to 8 and Paradox at 6 and I think your reporter had better take a little of David Crockett's motio to himself. As to my friends at Ottawa, I prob-ably have more friends right in The Teronto World office than there, and UNION would like to call your there, and would like to call your reporter's at-tention to page 10 of this same issue on "Reporters' Fakes and Mistakes." Respectfully yours, J. Herbert Smith. What the Globe Reported. The following appeared in The Globe of Dec. 8: In opposition to Edison's prediction that the world was approaching a horseless age. Mr. Herbert Smith of the West Toronto Horse Exchange, in an address on "Different Types of Horses and Their Market Values," said that there were more because because Horses and Their Market Values," said that there were more horses in Am-erica at the present time, than ever be-fore, and that prices were never so high. At present there are over twen-ty-one million horses in the United States, or an increase in ten years of mearly eight million head. In the Do-minion of Canada in 1909 there were 728,000 horses, at an average value of 728,000 horses, at an average value of $150 each. Ontario was depended on by the other provinces to supply horses and Mr. Smith was sorry to see the horse industry falling off in this pro-. . . . . . "How to remedy the existing evils was Mr. Smith's last point, and, in this connection he criticized the Ontario Government for its lack of interest in leaving the breeding of horses to pri-vate enterprise. "It is almost impos-sible in many districts to secure stal-lions for service," said Mr. Smith. "and the government could do nothing better than establish varies in the prebetter than establish grades in the pro-vince and see that proper horses were distributed in the different counties. The standard of horses in Ontario was being deteriorated every year because of the breeding of poor blood. Germany is spending millions per annum in the encouragement of good horse breeding, and this country should do the same."

story, the first act of which was enact-ed recently in the store of one of To-ronto's merchant princes. The head of the firm one day on his usual rounds noticed a young woman behind the counter silently weeping, and he asked her the cause. She quiet-ly refused to answer, and he requested a forelady to make enquiries. It was learned that the girl's father was out of work, that he was in need of an of work, that he was in need of an operation, that there was no one sup-porting the large family besides her-self and that help was needed for the maintenance of the family.

The merchant prince immediately sent instructions to the girl to report at the office, that he wanted to drive her home to see her father. Accord-ingly he drove with her at full speed to her house, at once ordered the fato her house, at once ordered the fa-ther removed to the hospital for treat-ment, telephoned his surgeon to be ready for an operation, ordered neces-saries for home consumption, told the young lady to stay at home till he sent for her, sent her regular wages and wiped off all indebtedness in con-nection with the father's operation and nursing.

A wedding of the greatest interest to a wide circle of friends and ac-quaintances took place on the 14th inst. at the residence of the bride's brothr-in-law, 66 Tranby-avenue. ### World Office. Saturday Evening, Dec. 17.

The past week has been a hard one for brokerage offices, because of the for brokerage offices, because of the smallness of speculation, and a lean one for floor trading operators in con-sequence. The various insiders have had to adopt an attitude of fighting declines, because they are not pre-pared to try and attempt upward market movements. The financiers are floundering in the dark, just to the same extent that the left-over public in the market are doing. For over a year the market manipulators have misjudged the actual situation. They the market manipulators have dged the actual situation. They thought that they could fight tive acts and future have acts and future legislation, have backed up their opinion by porting prices. The record of the shows how falsely the promises e big fellows were, and may be as a measure of how much y they have made.

An unwilling market is all that can be said of the present make up. It is believed that the large bulk of stocks are held by financiers and companies which they control. Many unthinking-by argue that the stocks can be dis-posed of because they see a daily market. But the great point just now is that there is no market, except that made by those who are except that made by those who are except that the so discutted transition has developed, altogether unexpected, ex-cept by J. J. Hill and some others, whose grasp of the future has enabled them to become what they are. The certainty that tariff reform is a pressing economic movement has alto-gether disturbed past calculations, and willing market is all that can

Democracy and Privilege

In his critical essay on Heinrich Heine the late Matthew Arnold opens his review of that remarkable poet's career by quoting Heine's own summary of his life work concluding with the sentence, "Lay on my coffin a sword; for I was a brave soldier in the war of liberation of nity." Concurring in this estimate to the extent that if not prently a brave Heine was yet a brilliant; a most effective soldier in that war, Arnold has the following acute observations on the European conditions of his day and they are even truer now. "Modern times," he says, "find themselves with an immense system of institutions, established facts, accredited dogmas, customs rules which have come to them from times not modern. In this system their life has to be carried forward; yet they have a sense that this system is not of their own creation, that it by no means corresponds exactly with the wants of their actual life, that for them it is customary not rational. The awakening of this sense is the awakening of the modern spirit. The modern spirit is now awake almost everywhere; the sense of want of correspondence between the forms of modern Europe and its spirit, between the new wine of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and the old bottles of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, or even of the sixteenth and seventeenth, almost everyone now perceives; it is no longer dangerous to affirm that this want of correspondence exists; people are even beginning to be shy of denying it. To remove this want of correspondence is beginning to be the settled endeavor of most persons of good sense. Dissolvents of the old European system of dominant ideas and facts we must all be, all of us who have any power of working; what we have to study is that we may not be acrid dissolvents of it."

The want of correspondence between the forms of ancient institutions and the modern spirit is still more marked in the twentieth century. Those who have been born into them naturally resent changes intended to bring them into more harmonious accord with the democratic ideas and ideals that increasingly prevail. The dissolving agencies are visibly at work thruout Europe and they are not without that acridity which Arnold deprecated. Responsibility for its appearance lies at the door of inherited privilege which has stubbornly resisted the onward march of reform. Institutions like the British house of lords have been their own worst enemies. Every concession required by the increasing democratic temper of the people has been wrung from the wearers of coronet and ermine at the point of the bayonet and even then has been whittled down to the smallest proportions. The record of the house of lords during last century is a melancholy one. It attempted to prevent the first reform bill and brought the country to the verge of revolution before it yielded under threat of the creation of the necessary number of peers to carry the bill into law. It resisted the measures designed to secure purity of election and opposed the abolition of the army purchase system. It objected to the opening of the two great universities to nonconfor-mists and to the introduction of the secret ballot. Within the last five years the peers wrecked the Education Bill, the Scottish Small Holdings Bill, the Scottish Land Values Bill, the House Letting Bill, the County Courts Bill and rejected the Plural Voting, Licensing and London Elections Bills, besider altering for the worse many other reform measures. But during the ten previous years of Conservative government no bills approved by the government were either rejected or mutilated. Even this long list only represents a part of the indictment laid by the people against the

Bloor Street Viaduct

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Every citizen who has the interests of Toronto at heart should vote for the by-law providing funds to erect the viaduct connecting Bloor-street with Danforth-avenue. Absence of this necessary link east and west has retarded the growth of one of the city's best residential diswest has retarded the growth of one of the city's best residential dis-tricts. In every other direction there is rapid expansion and progress, the northeastern section isolated by the Don River and valleys remains stagnant and isolated. To refuse this urgent improvement is grossly unfair to the east end which has always shown itself willing to support public works required by other districts. The injustice from which it has suffered ought not to be continued and the sooner reparation is made the better for the whole city. From motives which can scarcely be of a public nature a dead set is being made against the viaduct. Those engaged in this effort are none too scrupulous in their arguments and hope to terrify the ratepayers into opposition by alarming assertions regarding the cost to the city. The simple fact is that the viaduct will carry itself and will with-in a very short time not only result in meeting the necessary yearly pay-ments but will be an actual source of profit. Its provision will both add largely and immediately to the assessment values and will start and stimulate building expansion which in turn will still further increase rate re-turns. This has been the case in other and less favorably circumstanced districts and no reason exists why this splendid residential tract should not improve in even greater ratio.

Still Good

The Vancouver Province deduces from the recent street car dis-turbance in Toronto the inference that this city has been good so long that a fling was absolutely necessary, and the pay-as-you-enter cars were simply made an occasion. In fact, The Province avers that we righteous people have been restrained so long that when the opportunity arose we rather overdid the riot business.

The Province is disposed to rob us of our well-earned reputation for piety and sobriety, and thinks that we will now cast all respectability to the winds and cultivate a license in conduct that will leave Chicago and San Francisco in the shade. It thinks that once the overly good depart from the straight path they go with headlong speed to the very

In the first place, we doubt whether the occurrence of recent date should be magnified into a "riot." The mob was certainly much annoy-ed over the situation created by the traction company, and we fancy that a great proportion of the crowds on the streets were attracted by the noise of a few, and were not disposed to damage the property of the street railway company, but were naturally eager to be around when some-railway company, but were naturally eager to be around when some-thing exciting was doing. Should The Province man come to Toronto during the Christmas week, he will find that everybody, now that the ardor of the boys has cooled down, is kindly disposed one to another. We are not going to allow a scribe three thousand miles away to rob us of that good name, which is our most cherished possession.

Hereditary privilege must go but it is not the only kind of privilege against which the masses of the people have to contend. In America the public interest in menaced by an oligarchy of wealth even more dangerous to the nation than a hereditary aristocracy. The case on this continent was aptly put by Gifford Pinchot, late of the United States Forest Service, when he said that "there is no question that begins to be so important or that will be so difficult to straddle as the great question between special interests and equal opportunity, between the privileges of the few and the rights of the many, between government by men for human welfare and government by money for profit." At bottom an oligarchy whether conducted to preserve hereditary privilege or to produce private profit is equally objectionable. Of the two indeed the latter is the more objectionable since it has not the finer qualities which distinguish a genuine aristocracy. The moneyed interests out to extract profit know no scruples and have no standard which, however defective and limited, yet, so far as it goes, makes no encroachment on personal honor. But the corporation out for profit has no personal conscience and worst of all, it vitiates even the individual conscience. Corporation officials will do, in the name of the corporation, things that they would repudiate were they held personally accountable. They will violate contracts and statutes, disregard every moral obligation, outrage every demand of decency and treat the people on whose pennies they depend as dumb, driven cattle, if by so doing profits can be increased.

Mr. Pinchot hit the nail on the head when he said that "It does not matter whether the undue profit comes thru stifling competitors by rebates or other crooked devices, thru corruption of public officials or thru seizing and monopolizing resources which belong to the people. The result is always the same-a toll levied on the cost of living thru special privilege." Special privilege is indeed the antithesis of the democratic principle. Democracy has been properly characterized as government of the people, by the people and for the people. The curse of the nations born into British traditions has been the subordination of personal to property rights. Better kill a man than a hare was an old English adage, true in fact less than a century ago. So late as 1831 no less than 1601 death sentences were passed in England, only 14 being for murder, and mitigation only came with the reformed house of commons. Things, in that respect are different now, but if less obtrusive the evils of special privilege are quite as rampant and in the end as regardless of personal rights. Before the better order can come there must be clearer recognition of personal and public rights and of the fact that whoever, whether an individual or an aggregation of individuals, that undertakes to perform a public service or to administer public property has undertaken a public trust. The house of lords has fallen because it abused its position in the interest of the landed aristocracy, the American oligarchy of wealth is tottering because it has placed private profit above the public good.

The war against privilege is only beginning. Little has been done compared with what has yet to be done. Over in the United King-dom the reform party has accomplished more within the last five years than in the preceding three quarters of a century. Where indeed is the old Tory party committed as its twentieth century representatives are to the abandonment of an hereditary house of lords, to the breaking up of large landed estates and to measures of social reform which not so long ago would have been branded as revolutionary. Mr. Balfour during the present electoral campaign proclaimed himself a democrat and complained that the people's party were less democratic than he. But all this democratic profession and advocacy of social reforms is the last despairing attempt to detach the people from the movement that seeks to bring the old institutions, rules and dogmas into harmony with the progressive spirit. The same course is being run in the United States where the dead hands of the makers of the constitution are now being felt as fetters on the free development of a real democracy. The twentieth century will bring and is bringing vast changes.

HOW OTHERS HAVE BUILT Architectural Suggestions Artistic and Practical In the residence of Mr. M. Bertram, which has just recently been completed on Russell Hill-road, we have a house that will be readily appreciated by those of an artistic mind. It is designed with extremely simple lines which seems to be a growing tendency nowadays and its color is kept in perfect harmony with the wooded surroundings. Clinker brick of even surface with grey mortar blend well with the brown or copper colored trimming of the exterior. The walks and stoop are brick laid in cement and a pretty feature here is the entrance being apparently on the level of the terrace which is after the English domestic style.

SUNDAY MORNING

The greatest interest in this house is in the layout of the rooms and especially the halls. The reception hall is a stair hall and a room in itself. The curved lines here on the plan indicate two steps up to a platform which becomes a private sitting space or nook with a bay window separated from the more public portion of the hall. The stairway which is a neat detail with pierced balusters, and the entire woodwork including the beam ceiling is a wal-

Dogs in Commerce. The dumping of 20,000 pariah dogs from Constantinople on the Island of Oxia, in the Sea of Marmora, has evoked ceaseless protests from all lovers of animals thr

The British Society for the F of Cruelty to Animals has e solemn protest on the grounds banishment of the dogs has humanly carried out, that the f to fine with the customs of western civi-lization. The protest has been lodged with Sir Edward Grey. An enterprising Frenchman has opened a business in the bones and skins of the dead dogs. His object is to export the skins to Berlin, Paris and London, where he imagines, they can be converted into gloves. The manager of Messrs. Dent ridiculed the proposition. "The dog's may prove a valuable nt," he said, "but
