CHRISTMAS Times being cold and bleak
In Halifax, whereof only I will speak,
These (Fax) deny if you can,
That L. T. BRIAND leads the van
For best Machine Knit Wool Hose,
That do not rip at heel and toes;
Boy's Dark Knickerbockers, very cheap,
To keep them warm in snow knee-deep.
Boy's Country Mts, the beautiful to ball,
And Socks to cheer men, great and small.

Attention to our Dry Goods, ladies, pay!
Our Tweeds and Flannels, all, they say
Are the best and cheapest; anyhow,
We're going there to purchase—there, now!
Oh, we'll ne'er forget his 12 cent case,
With Toys for all the human race,
In Gold and Silver, Pewter, Tin and Wood,
Picture Frames, Mirrors, and Lace so good.
It would almost puzzle one what to get,
To fill the little stockings of our darling pet.

The address to our friends, we say,

Is GOTTINGEN STREET, by the way,

One door south of North End Market Store.

The Number is 73, the Street I said before.

L. T. BRIAND attends to patrons all with care,

And sends your parcels Home, Sweet Home! everywhere.

PUTTNER'S EMULSION.

PORT HAWKSBURY, N. S.

I beg leave to certify that I have used "Puttner's Emulsion with Hypophosphites" with great satisfaction, and in cases where Cod Liver Oil is called for I can heartily recommend it as an agreeable mixture, disguising so successfully the nauseous taste of the oil, that in no instance have I seen parties refuse to take it. * * *

PUTTNER'S EMULSION.

CAPT. JOHN R. HIRE, of Schr. Lillian, speaks of it thus:

"I was suffering from a severe attack of inflammation of the chest, caused by a heavy cold brought on by exposure at sea, and on making my next voyage, I took with me a good supply of PUTTNER'S EMULSION, which I am happy to say has perfectly cured me; indeed I cannot praise it too highly. I feel that it has given me a new set of lungs."

Any person violating this section shall be liable to a penalty of five dollars for each offence. The possession of any hare or rabbit after the fifth day of March shall be presumptive evidence of the same having been illegally killed or taken.

11. No person shall take or kill, or pursue with intent to kill, or have in his possession, or set, or maintain any snare or trap for the otter or the mink, between the first day of May and the first day of November in any year, and no person shall take, or kill, or pursue with intent as aforesaid any other animal valuable only for its fur, except the bear, the wolf, the loupervier, the wild cat, skunk, raccoon, woodchuck, and musquash, and the fox, between the first day of April and the first day of November in any year. The penalty for each offence against this section shall be five dollars.

13. No person shall take or kill, or attempt to take or kill, any grouse or partridge between the first days of January and September in any year, or shall sell, buy, or have in his possession any grouse or partridge so taken between such last mentioned days, both inclusive; and no person shall take or kill, or attempt to take or kill, or have in his possession any woodcock, snipe or teal between the first days of March or August in any year. It shall not be lawful to take or kill, or have in possession, any blue winged duck during the months of April, May, June and July in any year. The possession of any such bird during the close season prescribed in this section in respect of such bird shall be presumptive evidence of such bird having been illegally killed or taken. No person shall kill any woodcock before sunrise or after sunset.

14. The killing, taking, or having as aforesaid each partridge, grouse, woodcock, snipe, blue winged duck, or teal, shall be deemed to constitute a separate offence; and any person violating the next preceding section shall be liable to a penalty of not less than five nor more than ten dollars for each offence, and an additional penalty of

15. It shall not be lawful for any person to take or kill within this Province any pheasant, or to buy, sell or have in his possession any dead pheasant that has been so taken or killed, under a penalty of two dollars for each offence.

16. Any dead pheasant found in the possession of any person within this Province, shall be presumed to have been taken or killed by such person contrary to the Chapter, until proof to the contrary be given by such person.

17. The killing of robins, swallows, sparrows and other small birds, and birds of song, which frequent the fields and gardens, and the selling and offering for sale and the having in possession such birds when killed, shall hereafter be unlawful.

18. This Chapter shall not apply to birds killed for preservation as specimens of natural history; and any game mentioned in this Chapter may be killed at any time for the purposes of scientific investigation, a special license setting forth the particular purpose of the enquiry, and signed by the Provincial Secretary or his deputy, having been first obtained for that purpose from the Provincial Secy's office.

19. The trapping, snaring or otherwise taking alive or exposing for sale of any of the birds mentioned in the seventeenth section, and the destroying of the nests or eggs of such birds, shall hereafter be unlawful; and any such traps or snares when found may be destroyed,—any such bird if alive shall be set free.

20. Any person offending against the seventeenth or nineteenth section shall for each offence forfeit one dollar, in addition to ten cents for each bird.

The export of deer, wild turkeys, quail, partridge, prairie fowl and woodcock, in the carcase or parts thereof, is hereby declared unlawful and prohibited, and any person exporting or attempting to export any such article shall, for each such offence, incur a penalty of one hundred dollars, and the article so attempted to be exported shall be forfeited.

Here is a quaint anecdote from the biography of Dr. Marshall Hall: Dr. Wilkins had lent Dr. Hall the well-known book, "Body and Soul," and as it was not returned in due time, he sent this note, "Dear Doctor, do send back my 'Body and Soul.' I cannot exist longer without it." The servant who received the note read it (as servants sometimes will), and horror-stricken rushed into the kitchen, crying, "Cook, I can't live any longer with the doctor!" "Why, what's the matter?" "Matter enough," replied the man; "our master has got Dr. Wilkins' body and soul, and I don't care to stay where there are such goings on!"

"Boy, what is your father doing to-day?" "Well, I s'pose he's failin'. I heard him tell mother, yesterday, to go round to the shops and get trusted all she could—and do it right off, too—for he'd got everything ready to fail up to nothing 'ceptin' that."

A NIGHT SCENE.—Policeman: "Now, sir, don't make such a row!" Diner out: "Confound those infamous rascals—why they've actually stolen the key-hole,—and I can't get in!"

"I meant to have told you of that hole," said a gentleman to his friend, who, walking in his garden, stumbled into a pit of water.

"No matter," said the friend, "I have found it."

A BEAUTIFUL DAY FOR SALES.

The Admiral's Cabin-Boy.

"Sail on the weather bow!" shouted the look-out at the foremast-head.

"Do you make her out?" cried a sturdy old fellow, in rich uniform, who was pacing the quarter-deck with a short, quick step.

"Looks like a Dutchman, your honor; and she's coming right down upon us."

The faces of the crew brightened, for when Englishman and Dutchman met on the high seas two hundred years ago they never parted without trying each other's strength; and, to a true sailor, the enemy with whom he has often fought is just like an old friend.

Sure enough as the stranger approached, the Dutch flag flew out at her peak, answered by the Englishman with the flutter of St. George's red cross, not then changed into the modern Union Jack. A few minutes later the two vessels had got within range, and were banging away at each other with might and main.

This was just the kind of sport to suit the rough-faced old gentleman on the English quarter-deck, who felt quite thankful to the storm that had scattered the other vessels of his squadron, and given his own flagship a chance of doing something for herself. In time of peace there was no kinder-hearted man living than Admiral Sir Christopher Mings, or "Bulldog Kit," as his men affectionately called him, who had more than once torn up his own shirt to bandage the wounds of the very men with whom he had just been fighting. But when he once got fairly into the thick of a battle he was a very "rough customer" indeed.

There was one person on board the English flagship, however, who seemed to enjoy this grim work quite as much as the tough old admiral himself. That one was the barefooted, curly-headed, little cabin-boy, who skipped about the deck in his ragged blue shirt and sailcloth pants as merrily as if he had been at a picnic. With the whole air hot and dark with smoke, shot crashing through the timbers, splinters flying like hail, men falling on every side, little Jack still kept flitting to and fro, handing up powder, bringing cans of water to the thirsty seamen, and helping to drag the wounded out of the way, as briskly as if he had twenty hands instead of two.

"Look at Curly Jack," muttered the sailors to each other; "makes quite a holiday of it, don't he? He's a chip of the old block, if ever there was one."

But just at that moment Curly Jack got in the way of a surly old quartermaster, who was running across the deck and stumbled against the boy midway.

"Come, git out the road, can't yer?" growled the man, pushing him roughly aside; "if you ain't fit for men's work yourself, don't hinder them as are."

The boy turned hastily away to hide the indignant tears that started into his eyes. It was hard to be treated so, just when he was doing his best, and one might have seen his lips set tightly, as if he were making up his mind that he would be fit for "men's work" yet.

By this time the two ships had got so close as to be fairly "yard-arm and yard-arm," and the English, throwing out grappling-irons, prepared to board. The Dutch stood ready for them with pike and cutlass, and a hard fight seemed at hand, when suddenly a cry of dismay resounded along the Dutchman's decks. Their flag had disappeared from the masthead!—their ship, no one knew how, had struck her colors! Before they could recover from their bewilderment, the English boarders came leaping on. That moment of indecision was fatal to the Dutch. Taken by surprise, the few who attempted resistance were beaten down, the rest gave way in despair, and the ship was captured. But how had the flag been brought down? Not by the Dutch themselves, for their first officer (the captain having been disabled) declared that he had never thought of surrendering. Not by a shot, certainly, for the top-gallant and royal-masts were still sound. Every one was puzzled; and when a sailor, who had gone up to look, reported that the halyards had been cut with a knife, they were all more puzzled than ever.

Just then a shrill boyish laugh made everybody look round, and there stood the little cabin-boy, laughing with all his might.

"Well, my little fellow, what's amusing you so much?" asked the old admiral, kindly.

"Beg your honor's pardon," answered Jack, still grinning from ear to ear, "but it was sich fun to see how dumbfounded them Dutchmen looked when I pulled that 'ere flag down!"

"When you pulled it down?" echoed Sir Christopher, staring at him, while all the men crowded eagerly forward.

"Yes, your honor; when the yards touched, I jumped from one to t'other, and up to the Dutchman's masthead; for, thinks I, if I can only get that flag down they'll think the ship's struck her colors, and not know which way to turn, and then we can beat 'em easy. So I just out with my knife and did the trick."

Here the sailors, unable to refrain themselves any longer, broke out in a deafening cheer. The gruff old quartermaster, quite for getting his usual respect for the admiral's presence, sprang forward, and seizing Jack's little hand in his great black fist, roared:

"Well, done, Curly Jack! Catch me ever say you ain't fit for men's work again. You're the best man of us all."

"Ay, that he is," cried Sir Christopher Mings, heartily, as he clapped the little hero on the shoulder. "Well done, my brave boy; if you go on as you've begun, I'll live to see you commanding a ship of your own yet."

And Sir Christopher did live to see it, and something more; for, thirty years later, little Jack had become Admiral Sir John Narborough, and was walking the quarter-deck of the very flagship in which he had once been a cabin-boy.
