Fashion Hint for Times Readers

The graduating dress which is to be in lingerie style, should be started early in the season, for the beauty of these dress is in the amount of dainty needlework thereon. This model shows the use of machine embroidery in combination with tucking and lace—a feature of this year's lingerie dresses. A long line of deep louncing has been made to go a long way in this pretty frock. It forms the upper part of the skirt and the lower part of the bodice and little motifs cut from the embroidery are set in here and there, enclosed by lace insertion. The edge of the louncing, cut off from the part used as above, forms a fuller flounce at the bottom of the skirt.

A Million a Minute

A Romance of Modern New York and Paris
By Hudson Douglas

Quintance has ceased to breathe. His lips were bloodless, compressed. He stood immobile, stricken, staring. Where had he seen the Duc before? Once at the bungalow at Long Island, and yet again that morning at Antoni. And the Duchess? Ah! it was that which hurt.

She was dressed in purple velvet. Her neck and arms and shoulders, her face, sweet face, from which the wild roses had fled, were all of a tint with that texture. Where had he seen this cold bride of snow before? She was holding her proud head high. Her blue eyes were very sombre as she and her husband stopped where the president stood, while all about them label went on again as though it had never been suspended.

"Hold up, old chap!" said O'Ferral, for Quintance had clutched at his arm, was swaying, with bent knees, like one on shipboard. His features were grey and drawn. The blow had been cruelly sudden, and it was not so crushing. It seemed as though the very light of life had been snuffed out in him. His lips twitched. He was speaking in a low, broken tone.

"Monsieur le Duc—et Madame la Duchesse de Revel. The Duchess of Dreams—my Dagmar! God! I'm going away now. I'm going away, O'Ferral."

CHAPTER XVI.
How Monsieur Fared in the Rue des Trois Freres.

Of the three men who, from such widely different motives, had spared no pains in pursuit of her whom Quintance now knew as Dagmar, Duchesse des Revel, Monsieur de Duc was the last to reach Paris, and that in no over-violent hurry. For, while he may not have wielded such wide powers as Fanchette credited him with, he had always been called up to his rank in life carried with it advantages denied to individuals less fortunately situated.

When the ever-widening jaws had brought his breathless word of the Duchess's final flight, a cable message from New York had served to set in motion that machinery by means of which she was to be detained in Paris for her and so secured that he had been so to his effect in that respect, that he had not in any way lessened his own departure.

But, by the time he reached his ornate bachelor apartment in the Rue de Valenciennes, he had forgotten the fair cause of that delay, was all impatience to behold her who awaited him. He set down at his telephone and called up the Palais de Justice.

The creature who had served his purpose there was one Tisset-Latour, an aspirant for social recognition and very ready to oblige a duke. M. Tisset-Latour was out, it seemed, but his message would be delivered to him immediately on his return, which would not be until late afternoon or early evening. Monsieur gave vent to his annoyance by cursing Jules Chevreil when he appeared, and then demanded that unmoved functionary how he might best amuse himself during the intervening hours.

Jules, who was in not a few respects an admirable servant, had foreseen such demand on his ingenuity and was prepared to meet it with a well-limed programme of all that Paris offered in the way of entertainment. Monsieur decided on the stereotypical at Antoni, and, having once more brooded at his usual restaurant—he always ate with better appetite in public than at any of his clubs—set forth for the "accouter" which he affected in society, a velvet jacket with him as chauffeur.

He was in a restless frame of mind, and after a turn through the sidewalk, where he met but few acquaintances and they lustily occupied, he sought and found Jules active at the betting booth, lace that aggrieved and salty speculator drove him back to the honours forthwith. There he left the red car at its garage and sent his valet about those duties from which he had so lately released him while he himself passed the afternoon at a moody and aimless promenade.

Tisset-Latour was seated in the smoking room when he returned to the Rue de St. Honoré, a little vulgar, over-dressed man, plebeian of body as mind, who used as Monsieur entered, and greeted him effusively.

"Have you brought the address?" the Duc asked bluntly, cutting him short in a long string of compliments and questions.

"Certainly," replied Jules, "you

DISASTROUS FIRE ON HALIFAX WATER FRONT

Halifax, N. S., May 6.—The Halifax waterfront was visited by a heavy conflagration last night which swept away three great warehouses and caused a loss approximately $100,000. The chief sufferers were H. H. Fuller & Company, whose store and wooden office building, and warehouse were completely destroyed.

The alarm was sent in a little after 11 o'clock and by midnight the flames were in ashes and cinders, while adjoining structures were in immediate danger and were already partly on fire.

The fire broke out in a three-story wooden warehouse back of H. H. Fuller's and next to the store. The policeman on duty

CHESTER JORDAN MUST GO TO CHAIR

Murder in the First Degree is the Verdict in East Cambridge Murder Case

Boston, May 5.—After being out from 5:22 p. m. Monday until 11:30 a. m. Tuesday the jury in the case of Chester S. Jordan brought in a verdict in the East Cambridge court against the prisoner of guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury broke the record for the length at which it deliberated, being out eighteen hours.

The verdict was actually given at 12:33, and under it Jordan must suffer death by electrocution.

Jordan, though he was self-restrained, showed more emotion than he has done at any time during the trial. He had a minute or two in the cage before the jury was brought in, and he already knew his verdict. For ten minutes he was pale, he bit his lip and gnawed his fingernails. But when he had to stand with his right hand upraised to listen to the verdict his face was stolid and there was not a tremor about him.

PROF. MURRAY IN THE CITY

Professor W. C. Murray, the new chancellor of Saskatchewan University, passed through the city last evening from Halifax on his way to Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The object of his visit to the States is to inspect the educational institutions in those cities with a view to forming plans for the new university building which is soon to be erected in Saskatoon.

On his way west Chancellor Murray will make a short stay for the same purpose in Toronto. While in the city yesterday he was the guest of Dr. T. Dyon Walker, who is a close personal friend.

THE KERNEL OF THE KINRADE CASE

Mr. Blackstock—Did you write Baum between Christmas and New Year's and tell him that if he had written a letter it must have been intercepted by your people, as you did not receive it?

Florence Kinrade—Yes.

Mr. Blackstock—Your mother and Ethel did not tell you they had intercepted Baum's letter?

Florence Kinrade—No.

Mr. Blackstock—And you were angry when you found it out?

Florence Kinrade—Yes.

Mr. Blackstock—You continued writing love letters to Mr. Baum until February 10, two weeks before the tragedy?

Florence Kinrade—Yes.

Mr. Blackstock—And in one you said that sometimes you think you would go crazy with your trouble. What had that reference to?

Florence Kinrade—I don't know.

What had that reference to, Miss Kinrade? Was that a joke?

Florence Kinrade—No. They wanted me to marry, and he wanted me to marry him and go on the stage, and I was very much undecided.

KINRADE CASE HAS NOT ENDED

Officials Announce That They Will Continue to Probe the Mystery—Inquest Does Not Finish it.

Toronto, May 5.—It was definitely stated at the Attorney-general's department this morning that the Kinrade case will not be dropped but efforts to completely solve the mystery will be prosecuted with vigor.

Deputy Attorney-general Cartwright had a conference with Attorney-general Foy but no particular action will be decided on until they have received the report of the coroner's inquest.

The court of appeal has quashed the conviction of John O'Connell, William J. Fuller, Daniel Wiley and Geo. M. Reid for their connection with the London election conspiracy case. The indictment contained twenty-three counts, all for offences ranging over several years against the election law. The court of appeal holds that magistrate Denison had no jurisdiction to commit the prisoners for trial and Judge Winchester had no jurisdiction to try them.

"The only natural and proper place of trial was at London, says Justice Garrow, who writes the judgment of the court, which is concurred in by chief Justice Moss and Judges Oler and Tenzel. He adds: "The attempt to force trial at this latter city and opposition to very reasonable proposition to change venue, which if granted would have obviated all difficulties of unfairness and even of oppression."

It will be found necessary by the official referee to make a call of $60 a share on Ontario Bank stock holders to meet the deficit of $900. Some stockholders paid $135 for shares and will thus lose $195 on every share. The capital stock of the bank is a million and a half, but holdings by the bank itself and insolvent share holders reduces the stock available for assessment to a million. The share holders are fighting the claim.

How Dean Swift Cured Her

An instance of Dean's Swift's straightforward good sense, accompanied by amusing eccentricity, is related in connection with his visit to a farmer near Quilns, with whom he went to dine. The farmer's wife was dressed very expensively and her gown was gold lace on his hat. The dean of St. Patrick's saluted her as though she were a duchess, and with low bows, handed her a seat, propitiating to her husband that they "look over the farmer's de-mesne."

"The devil a foot a laud belongs to me, or any of my line," replied the farmer. "Bull have a pretty good lesson from my Lord Fingall, but he will not renew it, and I have only two years left."

Mrs. Riley, wife of his host, "There she is, sitting before you, sir," replied Mr. Riley. The dean raised his eyebrows and shook his head: "No, that is not Mrs. Riley, for I've always heard her spoken of as a woman of sense, and this lady is dressed in the fashion of a duchess. No, Mrs. Riley, the wife of a poor farmer, who only leases, would not wear silks and satins and costly ornaments, she would dress according to her station in life."

Mr. Riley, feeling the rebuke, arose and left the room, soon returning clad in a gown of plain stuff, and without jewelry.

The dean rising, advanced to her with outstretched hand: "Ah, this is the good wife of the farmer! Why, madam, your husband tried playing a trick on me awhile ago by presenting a gaily-decked woman of fashion to me as his wife. But I was not so easily taken in. He then took a penknife and cut the gold lace from the young one's hat, and threw it in the grate. Then, resuming his good humour, he entertained the family till dinner was announced. When the hour for his departure arrived he took from his pocket a small bit of paper, neatly folded. Handing it to the dean, he explained: "I do not wish to rob you of the value of your gold lace, but I give it to you in a useful form."

After the dean had gone the young son opened the paper and beheld four shilling notes. Some months later Mr. Riley received notice from his landlord that Dean Swift had asked that his lease be renewed, a request which the Lord Fingall would gladly grant.

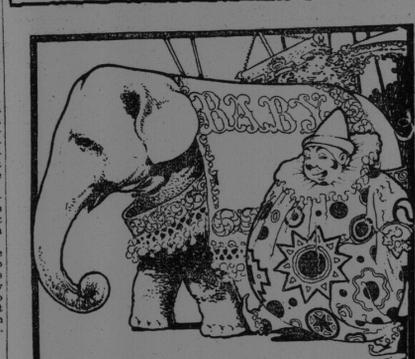

And Mrs. Riley and her vain young son were cured of their foolish fondness for dress which had led them into extravagances their poor circumstances could not well allow.

A FAREWELL SOCIAL

At the close of the weekly prayer meeting in the Congregational church last evening, a social hour was spent as a farewell to Harry Upton, who will leave on Friday for Portland (Me.), where he will supply a church during the summer. Mr. Upton is a native of St. John, and a former member of the Congregational church and was connected with the Whitney mission in Mill street. Lately he has been attending the Mt. Hermon Theological Seminary in Northfield (Mass.), where he will return next fall to continue his studies.

The purpose of the gathering last evening was for his friends to say farewell. There was a short programme, in which the following took part: John McEhe-

SHORTAGE OF FAT CATTLE

Dealer Says This is the Reason Why so Much Western Beef Was Imported Last Year.

Speaking as to the cause of so much western beef being imported to St. John last year as was shown in the annual report of the slaughter house commissioner, a wholesale meat dealer in the market said yesterday that shortage of fat cattle in the maritime provinces was the cause.

This shortage, he said, has been going more apparent every year, the farmers going in more for dairying, saying that they find it pays better than to fatten cattle.

Recently, however, there had been, he said, a movement among the farmers to return to feeding stock for the butchers and a change might be noticeable in a few years. Out of 5,000 head of cattle said to have been slaughtered in St. John last year, he did not think that more than 1,000 were fattened in the maritime provinces.

POLICEMEN WANT LONGER VACATION

A petition signed by the members of the St. John police force has been sent to the common council asking that the annual vacation which is now limited to ten days, be extended to a fortnight. Those on the force claim that ten days is too short to allow them to visit other cities for a length of time. It is pointed out that to go to Boston and return by boat takes four days out of the holiday, leaving less than a week to be spent at the end of the journey.

The matter will probably come before the safety board at the next monthly meeting, which will be held the last week in May.

BAPTISTS FIND LAYMEN'S WORK INCREASES THE FUNDS LARGELY

The Baptist maritime foreign mission board reports a most encouraging addition to their income which they attribute to the influence of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. The last quarter of the financial year of the board has commenced and it has been their usual experience to receive much the larger part of their income during the three months from May till August. Since the beginning of February, however, there has been a notable increase in their receipts, and Dr. W. E. McIntyre was able to announce yesterday that these amounted to $3,000 beyond all previous figures.

GREEN SICKNESS A DISEASE OF YOUNG GIRLS

Interesting and Suggestive Advice That All Should Read.

Many mothers will echo the conclusion expressed in a very interesting and suggestive letter written by Mrs. Zacharia Pollard, of Grand Bay.

"It is one of the illusions of motherhood that once the diseases of childhood have been successfully passed a smooth road lies before their dear ones. Boys bridle themselves, or perhaps break a limb, but the physical illness of the young girl is subject to so many dangers, it is only when some great one has been successfully overcome that we realize how many dangers there are. My eldest child, a daughter, just as she had entered upon the sixteenth year, suddenly developed weakness, her color faded, some unpleasant heart symptoms indicated a lowered vitality of that organ, but strange to say she appeared plump. The bodily functions were obstructed, and a weak or pallid, or yellowish skin gave her a ghastly look. The doctor's note failed to improve the symptoms, we decided to try Ferronose, so highly recommended in the newspapers. It was probably three weeks before any manifest change was noticeable, but once that Ferronose checked the running-down process the upward advance was rapid. I suppose if I had requested to give her Ferronose she would have fallen into permanent ill-health, as it is a deeply thankful that Ferronose has completely restored my daughter to vigorous robust health."

No tonic so nourishing, as strengthening, as Ferronose. It gives you a grand appetite, brings fine color, a healthy glow to the cheeks. If this, you gain in weight. Think it over, Ferronose is just what every person in poor health requires. Sold by all druggists, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50. Try Ferronose today.

MOOSE WADING ABOUT, BEWILDERED, IS SAVED

Chatham, N. B., May 5.—The adventure of a large cow moose provided interest for a large number of people at Douglas town today. The animal swam across the river at early dawn and became bewildered crossing the booms at the Hutchinson mill. It waded about in a few feet of water, gradually getting weaker, while large crowds gathered to watch its movements. Dennis Doyle, chief warden, came from Newcastle and led some men in an attempt to drive the animal to shore by means of a rope and tonight their efforts were rewarded and the moose was straddled out on the bank. It will be allowed to make its way back to the forest.

LOST MEN MAY BE IN PRISON

Escaped Prisoner from Venezuela Tells a Strange Story—What Became of the Crew of the Carrie D. Knowles.

Kingston, St. Vincent, B. W. I., May 5.—It may be that Captain Collins Stephenson and the crew of the whaling ship Carrie D. Knowles, long since thought to have been lost at sea, are alive in a Venezuelan prison. An American seaman, who gives the name of Payne, an escaped prisoner from Venezuela, has made his way to Kingston, where he laid before the authorities an astounding story of the seizure of the Carrie D. Knowles, a Venezuelan whaler, where she arrived five years ago in distress and the incarceration of the captain and his men. So convinced are the authorities here that they have taken his full statement and have taken steps looking to a speedy investigation.

On January 27, 1904, the Carrie D. Knowles sailed from Provincetown, Mass., on a whaling voyage. Her captain was Collin Stephenson and her first mate H. A. Martin. In addition she carried about a dozen men. Payne asserts positively that all of these men are at present confined in a Venezuelan prison. The vessel was supposed to have been lost in a West Indian storm with all hands. Some of the men belonged to St. Vincent and after all hope was given up of their return their relatives put on mourning and the local insurance company paid the claims against it on the assumption that the sailors were dead.

WILY MR. PARKS MAKES ESCAPE FROM CHAIN-GANG

The wholesome exercise of the chain gang does not seem to meet the approbation of some of those who are sent there by Judge Ritchie. Yesterday one made an ineffectual attempt to get away and another, William Parks, succeeded in taking French leave and is still at large. The escape was cleverly timed. About 11 o'clock while the men were engaged in their occupation of breaking stones in the valley, Carl Schultz tried to get away. He was chased by M. Collins, a guard, who was slipping on some loose stones and fell. W. A. Beckett, the other guard, took up the chase and succeeded in catching his man before he had time to get away. Parks had dodged around the end of the shed and took to his heels. Collins being alone at the time could not get him unguarded and Parks was soon out of sight.

Parks was serving a year's sentence on two charges of theft in March. Sentence was imposed for stealing a pair of boots and rubbers from George Coleman on the steamer Hospital and a silver watch from John Fox.

GILBERT'S LANE SEWER

So far no serious attempt to rectify the sewerage nuisance at the corner of Gilbert's Lane and Wright street, is reported. The contention of the city was that the I. C. R. had given the old town council of Portland permission to use the culvert on their property near where the old round house stood, in order to carry the sewerage through. On the other hand, the I. C. R. people here say that the culvert was built expressly to carry off the surface water from the right of way. They question the fact of the agreement having been made and even if there was such an agreement it was many years ago and that part of the city has been built up greatly since.

The culvert became choked last winter and the sewage backed up on to the railway tracks and filtered along a ditch on the other side of the track, making its way to the crossing where it fell into a catch basin, and so into the sewer. For the better protection of the railway property the I. C. R. men have deepened this ditch so that it runs more freely. As long as the weather remains cool there will be no perceptible nuisance, but Thos. Gorman, chairman of the board of health, said yesterday that when the weather becomes warm enough for people to go to Rockwood Park, there will likely be trouble. In the meantime, he said, the matter stands just where it did. Neither the city nor the I. C. R. will undertake to do the necessary work.

PLANS FOR NEW BANK ARE READY

Bank of New Brunswick's Charlotte Street Building will Have Cut Stone Front

Plans for the new Bank of New Brunswick building in Charlotte street are well advanced and the architect, F. Neil Brodie, hopes in a short time to get the specifications drawn up, so that tenders may be called as soon as possible. The building will stand on what is known as the Matthews property, opposite the old Y. M. C. A. building, and will replace the present wooden structure which is occupied on the ground floor by the store of J. Roche & Co. and above by S. K. Matthews.

The building will have a frontage of twenty-six feet three inches and a depth of eighty-one feet. The front will be finished in cut stone in classical design. The main entrance will be in the centre and over it will be placed a large window. The column idea in the present bank will be carried out and on either side of the entrance will be placed a large window. The interior of the building will be laid out for banking purposes only. The main room will be fifty-four feet long by the width of the building. The balance of the depth will be taken up by a book vault on the ground floor, with a safety deposit vault reached by a gallery above. The banking room ceiling will be twenty-four feet high, paneled off with heavy oak beams. In addition to the windows at the side and rear the room will be lighted from above by two monitor lights about nine feet square placed in the ceiling.

The walls will be finished to a height of eight feet in hurlap, above in hard pine tinted. The floor will be of English tiled mosaic. The fittings will be of the first quality and will be finished in American quarter oak. The building will be heated with hot water and will be fitted with electric lights and all modern conveniences.

It is expected that work will be begun by June 1, and it will probably be next April the building is ready for occupancy.

IT COST HIM $20 TO BEAT MILLER

Frank O'Leary Fined in Police Court This Morning for Assault—Much Contradictory Evidence.

In the police court this morning Frank O'Leary pleaded not guilty to assaulting James Miller on Wednesday. Miller, who is a pilot, was sworn, and stated that O'Leary, who is fifteen years his junior, accosted him on the pier at Reed's Point at half past eleven o'clock yesterday morning and accused him of pilfering $8 from his pocket. According to his story he terminated the exchange of pleasantries by retiring to a seat bordering a shed. O'Leary pursued him and invited him to arise and thus enable O'Leary to beat him. Subsequently he partially arose to peer around the corner of the structure when O'Leary greeted him with a blow on the eye. The impetus forced his head against the shed and upon that parting he spotted on his head a swelling appeared, which he exhibited to the magistrate. He claimed that O'Leary followed the initial blow by striking him on the nose. His nose, eye and head were prominent factors in obtaining the verdict. He said that the slumber police was administered to him by the punches and it was a few minutes before he recovered. He asserted that O'Leary has threatened him for two years and denied that he was aggressive in the fracas. He said he clinched with O'Leary to protect himself from his assailant's onslaughts and when he arose both of his hands were in his pockets. He denied that he proclaimed his intention to "wipe the wart up with O'Leary," and neither did he kick O'Leary or kneel him.

William Scott, the second witness for the prosecution swore to hearing O'Leary declare that he would "beat the head off Miller," and saw O'Leary adopt warning tactics by striking Miller on the face among a number of blows that did not reach their destination. He said that he and Miller were partners in a business. John Miller, the complainant's brother, swore to perceiving O'Leary strike his brother twice on the face with the palm of his hand, and no defence was offered by his brother.

On his own behalf Frank O'Leary, who is a boatman, testified. His version of the quarrel was to the effect that Miller had contracted with the captain of the S. S. Bendo to handle the lines of the steamer and they met on board the Elderslieper liner where he had required to seek the engagement of Miller. He claimed that he saw Miller with a gun and that he had refused interference. He invited Miller to go with him to a quiet spot and adjust the dispute by the usual process, but the complainant declined. He afterwards requested Miller to arise and fight, but informed his honor that he did not plan to engage in an encounter if Miller had readily acceded. When Miller arose O'Leary claimed that the complainant struck him on the shoulder and when they clinched he butted. O'Leary displayed no facial attestations of an encounter.

Richard Cline stated that he saw O'Leary strike at Miller and Miller retaliate with a blow on the shoulder. James Ross swore to seeing both swing together, and William Hurley testified to noticing that Miller was the aggressor. He said he saw Miller kick O'Leary in the stomach.

Harry Quinn stated that the first blow was struck while his back was turned, but he saw Miller butting in the clinch. He said the alleged assault lasted three minutes.

In delivering judgment by which O'Leary was fined $20 or two months in jail, his honor referred to the contradictory testimony and stated that it was necessary for a man who was assaulted to keep his hands in his pockets. He said it was permissible to retaliate to a certain extent, and added "we have facts to use in such cases." He deplored the adoption of such measures as physical force when bested in business transactions.
