59TH YEAR. NO. 23434

LONDON, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 6, 1922

PRICE, THREE CENTS

ESTABLISHES JUVENILE COURT IN LONDON

FEDERAL CABINET TO CONSIDER REPORT OF RAILROAD BOARD AS UNREST PREVAILS IN SHOPS

Union Men Carry Their Troubles to the Minister of Labor, Charging That Conciliation Body Failed to Consider Justice of Wage Cuts—Employees in London District Promise to Fight.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—The Dominion cabinet, at a special meeting today, will consider the case of the railway shopmen on Canadian lines with reference to the findings of the conciliation board, which has announced in favor of the tentative wage cuts.

The promise of cabinet consideration was given yesterday by Hon. James Murdock, minister of labor, to R. J. Tallon, president of Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, American Federation of Labor, in an interview at Ottawa.

A report was widespread in Montreal this morning that the shopmen have communicated by telegraph to the minister of labor their refusal to abide by the award.

Mr. Tallon interviewed this morning, said: "We put before Mr. Murdock our position as embodied in the minority report of the board of conciliation, and pointed out that the findings of the board had absolutely nothing to do with the main issue before the board—that is, the question of the justice or injustice of the reduction in rates of pay. The board simply sidestepped the issue. We pointed out that we expected the government to insist on the board dealing with the question before finally disposing of it.

"The government's answer will be a determining influence on the schedule committee's deliberations tomorrow, and will largely influence the outcome. We shall know whether the government is going to insist on the board's functioning as intended by the industrial disputes investigation act."

Predict Strike.
A general feeling of unrest was apparent Wednesday morning among the 1,000 or more shopmen employed on the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways in this district as a result of the report of the conciliation board's minister of labor Tuesday afternoon.

For the past few weeks the board has been investigating the disputes between the Canadian Federated Shopmen and the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways. The findings of the board were to the effect that the reduced wage schedule should be made effective temporarily from Aug. 15.

Although reports have been received from different parts of the United States that shopmen in that country are determined to work to the general opinion in Canadian union circles is that regardless of the action taken on the other side of the line the 40,000 odd shopmen employed on the Canadian roads will strike rather than accept the reduced pay, which ranges from 5 to 9 cents an hour.

Refuse to Accept.
Several of the local employees declared that the shop employees in London are determined not to accept the new schedule and are ready to walk out if the word is given. Union officials in the city, although not willing to make a definite statement as yet, hinted that the men are in a dangerous mood and will not hesitate to strike if they are pressed too far.

Joseph Corbett, general chairman of the Grand Trunk shopmen in Canada, will leave for Montreal Wednesday night, where an emergency committee meeting representing all the shop employees on the Canadian railways is called for Thursday, Sept. 7. Mr. Corbett did not let the latest development in the strike situation until after the representatives meet.

Regarding the alleged report by a prominent official of the Grand Trunk Railway that 60 per cent of the normal shop staff on the western lines of the road is already back at work, Mr. Corbett said:

Toronto City Council Vote to Give Electric Lines Right-of-Way.

Opposing Forces May Carry Long Fight to Higher Courts.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—After an all-night session and many previous sessions extending over a week, the Toronto city council this morning at 6:30 o'clock passed the agreement giving entrance to hydro-electric radial railways on the harbor front property. The vote was 15 to 8 in favor of the agreement.

The debate on the question was of record length. It started on Aug. 29, and was continued from day to day, except on Sunday and Labor Day, until the final act this morning. The sessions frequently extending far into the night. The net time of the debate was 43 hours.

When the vote was taken this morning, two members were absent. Alderman Birdsell having gone home at 3 o'clock and Alderman Whetter having been overcome by the heat of the day.

GIRL KILLED ON FARM AS HORSES RUN AWAY

Fall to Ground From Wagon Results in Almost Instantaneous Death.

Cheltenham, Ont., Sept. 6.—Miss Annie Hutchinson was killed last night while working in company with her brother, on the Hutchinson farm at the second line, West Cheltenham.

The horses of the vehicle she was driving became frightened. Miss Hutchinson was thrown from the wagon, suffering a deep gash in the head, resulting in almost instantaneous death.

William Hutchinson, brother of the deceased, who was working in the fields, was knocked down in an attempt to stop the runaway team, and suffered slight bruises about the head and legs. Miss Hutchinson passed away before a doctor arrived.

It is not known whether Miss Hutchinson suffered death at the feet of the running horses or whether she was caught under the wheels of the wagon or died as a result of the fall to the ground.

CLAIMS WATER OF HURON UNFIT FOR HUMAN USE

E. V. Buchanan Points to Experiences of Goderich in Seeking Supply.

TOWN MAY DRILL WELLS

Believes Fact Should End London's Agitation For Lake Scheme.

When the town of Goderich, situated as it is on the shore of Lake Huron, has already undertaken a search for pure, fresh water beneath its surface, E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the London public utilities commission, and a stout defender of the city's well system, questions why there should be any further agitation here for a "Lake Huron" to "London" water scheme.

Lake water, chlorinated, once consumed as pure by the citizens of Goderich, has now been condemned as unfit for usage by the provincial board of health, according to prominent members of the Goderich waterworks commission, who visited London this week.

Explaining that operations have already been commenced and that one well is at this moment being sunk, the Goderich commissioners interviewed Manager Buchanan, seeking all information pertaining to London's experience in well drilling and the search through the district for a fresh supply.

From all indications the visitors were visibly impressed with the situation in this city and appeared determined to institute a similar undertaking in their own community. Manager Buchanan contends that this is further evidence that the citizens of London are being and will be more adequately served by the well system than by the expenditure of huge amounts to transport water from either of the lakes.

While the initial test of the city's new well in Southeast London is set for Saturday, he points out that the contract with the Ontario Drilling Company provides that one year shall then elapse before any final decision is rendered. This will allow the city time to make sure that the well will not peter out and incidentally enable the company to furnish water that may not be apparent at the first tests.

5-Year-Old London Laddie Is Canada's Youngest Golfer

BY ISABEL C. ARMSTRONG.

"NOW, just watch me bat the ball further'n Daddy."

The speaker was a sturdy wee man, with flaming halo of red hair, one of his chief charms. He was dressed in a little blue suit that is a kind of a uniform with him in summer weather, and beside him lay a bonnie Scotch plaid bag.

But the bag didn't contain arrows. As first glance at the owner might lead to believe. Instead, there was a fascinating set of golf clubs, just exactly what the young man, proudly, boasted. London to be the youngest golfer in Canada.

Master James Hubert Grant, to give him a dignified name to which he does credit, is just as keen on his game, as proud of a good putt or approach as any grown-up golf fan could be, even if he is only 5 years old. He got his name, by the way, from his two grandfathers, the late James Grant, formerly of London Township, and later of London, for many years prominently connected with the London Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and the late ex-Ald. Hubert Ashplant, leading businessman of the city. He's the one and only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Grant, 224 Central avenue, and a nephew, by the way, of Miss Mary Grant, clerk and treasurer of London Township, elected last week president of the Ontario Municipal Association.

Practically unknown to the past summer Jim, as his acquaintances take the liberty of calling him, has been out on the links at the Hunt Club with daddy, an interesting and picturesque little figure on the greens. The grownup golfers delight to call the attention of visitors to the contrast of ruddy hair, blue suit, green grass and gay tartan bag, a vivid bit of added decoration to the charming scenery. But they are very particular not to let Jim see them laughing when he shouts, "Now, daddy, watch me bat the ball across that pond."

And drive he does, with assurance and technical skill, which evoke the surprised admiration of onlookers. Sometimes he is very good.

Sometimes toward the end of the eighteen-hole course, the legs of the juvenile golfer grow a bit weary. Under those circumstances he adopts for himself a measure of poetic license. He trots away ahead of his daddy, tugging his tartan bag, filled with clubs just the right size, and he settles himself comfortably under a tree, near the high up hole, to make the most of life until daddy catches up by regular methods. When the moment arrives he hops up, then chinkily and finishes with a flourish.

Even if he is a bit addicted to applying baseball terms to golf, it is the only respect in which he fails to be a perfect golfer.

DIVISION COURT TO TEST RIGHT TO MAKE WINE

Inland Revenue Department Carries Abel Case to Higher Authorities.

APPEAL AGAINST RULING

Authorities Desire to Clear Away False Impressions of Act.

Determined that no false impression must get abroad respecting the provisions of the inland revenue act, the operations of stills or the manufacture of wines for home consumption, the federal authorities have decided that the recent case against William Abel, of London, recently acquired in police court on a charge involving a breach of the act in question, must be threshed out in a higher judiciary.

Information to this effect was made known Wednesday by the local crown officers, who declared that notice of appeal had already been filed, and the case will be reopened before His Honor Judge Joseph Judd at the next sitting of the first division court, Sept. 12.

William Abel, who with his wife, was a defendant when the case was first heard before Police Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon, has been duly served with the notice of the appeal, and will be represented again by his counsel, William B. Henderson.

As anticipated at the initial hearing this case had developed more or less into a test case, involving the issuance of permits for the brewing of light wines for domestic use only. Several weeks ago the Abel residence was raided by a squad of police under Police Inspector Lucas, accompanied by Cecil Webb, inspector for the local department of inland revenue. Numerous bottles, demijohns and other vessels containing what the officers claimed to be spirituous liquor, were seized and analyzed.

In court the defence contended that the various bottles contained blackberry wine and tonic for home use only, and the further claim was entered that as no utensil was used other than milk bottles and jars, no distillation had taken place.

LEAGUE ELECTS MORE OFFICERS

Earl of Balfour Named as Vice-President at Geneva.

France Preserves Silence On Note Sent to Great Britain.

Geneva, Sept. 6.—The League of Nations assembly today elected as its six vice-presidents the Earl of Balfour, Great Britain; Gabriel Narraux, France; Senhor Gomez, Portugal; Hjalmar Branting, Sweden; Amelio Gimenez Cabanas, Spain; and Dr. Momtshlo Ninichitch, Jugoslav. The six new vice-presidents, with six members elected by the assembly committee, will make up the steering committee to organize the business of the assembly under the rules along with the president.

The debate on the work of the league was reopened by Lord Robert Cecil of Great Britain, representing South Africa. Alluding to the situation in the Near East, Lord Robert asked why the League of Nations could not intervene between Turkey and Greece, and halt the bloodshed in Asia-Minor.

FRANCE SILENT.

Paris, Sept. 6.—The French foreign office is preserving the strictest silence regarding the note sent by Premier Poincare to Great Britain last night, in reply to the British request for consideration of the possibility of taking steps to bring about an armistice between the Greeks and the Turks. It is reported in well-informed quarters, however, that there are certain differences of opinion between France and Great Britain over the possibility of arranging an immediate armistice.

France is strictly in accordance with Britain that peace must be made in Asia-Minor as soon as possible, but there is a strong feeling here that the Turks will not accept an armistice until their present victory is made absolutely certain, and the evacuation of Smyrna is assured. Official advice state that the Agra government will demand reparations for the damage caused by the Greek army in Anatolia and punishment for alleged atrocities committed by the retreating Greeks.

GREEKS REPULSE TURKS.

Athens, Sept. 6.—Fresh attacks by the Turkish Nationalists have been repulsed by the Greeks, who inflicted severe casualties on the Turks, according to an official communication issued last night. The statement says:

"The enemy's advance toward Akardag met with stubborn resistance from our troops, who repulsed fresh attacks. The number of the enemy killed and wounded exceeds ten thousand. Our forces retired in order, destroying communications. The enemy has not yet occupied Eski Shehr, although the town has been evacuated five days.

"The massacres and persecution of the Christians in the evacuated districts continue. A considerable number of refugees are following out retreating troops."

WILL KNOW FATE OF MINERS SOON

Jackson, Cal., Sept. 6.—The fate of 46 miners entombed by fire since a week ago Sunday night in the depths of the Argonaut gold mine here, probably will be known within the next 24 hours, it was predicted today as rescue crews tunnelling toward the imprisoned men were nearing their goal. Opinion was divided as to whether the men still were alive. Belief that the men had not perished was revived yesterday when rescue workers heard what sounded like blasting signals emanating from far down in the Argonaut shaft.

CITY COUNCIL YIELDS TO DEMAND OF LONG AGITATION AS IT VOTES TO PROTECT RISING GENERATION

Leaders of Many Organizations Pleased With Action of the Aldermen, Who Take Definite Action After Fight of Two Years—Appoint Magistrate Graydon as Judge, But Fail to Proclaim Act.

Expressing much satisfaction at the action of the city council which Tuesday night decided to establish a juvenile court in London, leaders of various organizations who have labored to obtain this object declare that the persistent agitation for a juvenile court here, as conducted by The Advertiser during the past two years, has exercised an important bearing on the final decision of the council.

M'MULLEN ASKS TRIAL BY JURY

Arraigned in Sarnia Police Court On Jail-Breaking Charge.

Magistrate Urges Reward for Governor Who Stopped Prisoner.

Sarnia, Sept. 6.—Edward A. McMullen appeared before City Police Magistrate Henry Gorman at the Sarnia court house this morning charged with breaking jail by force and violence on the morning of Sept. 2.

Through his counsel, Wilfred S. Haney of Sarnia, McMullen elected trial by jury. Evidence was taken. McMullen presented a sorry spectacle in court in contrast to the alert dapper figure who occupied the prisoner's box when the jury disagreed to his guilt in the Wyoming bank robbery trial in June last.

His black hair was matted above the white bandage which encircled his head, and through which the blood stains on the left temple showed plainly the spot where he received the full force of the baton of Warden James N. Dodd.

He was unshaven, with a ragged moustache, which he has grown, accentuated his generally disorderly appearance. The ugly gray of jail garb had replaced the neat lounge suit McMullen wore when last in the court room. The prisoner was manacled by a long chain to Governor Dodd.

Only the bright black eyes were unchanged. They gleamed as McMullen followed with close interest the story told in evidence by Turnkey Pat Burns, the first witness. His expression was sullen, however, and he could not hide the appearance of concern which was, cloaked at the trial by the continual use of chewing gum.

McMullen was committed for trial. Magistrate Gorman paid a splendid tribute to the action of Governor James N. Dodd in tackling McMullen, though faced by apparently a real revolver. "His conduct is a splendid example to all officers of the law, and I think Governor Dodd should be commended to the proper authorities for reward for his bravery," the magistrate said.

Only a few spectators were in court.

CAPTURES LIQUOR CARGO, NOW FACES LEGAL FIGHT

New York Customs Officials Take British Trawler With Clearance Papers.

New York, Sept. 6.—Customs officials admit that they may have a legal fight on their hands in connection with the capture on Thursday by a dry navy boat of the British-built trawler Gamma, with a $1,000,000 cargo of liquor. The Gamma's captain produced his ship's papers which he formerly said he had lost.

While the revenue authorities declared that they had clear justification for the seizure, because the Gamma refused to stop until three shots, only one of them a blank, were fired across her bows, the captain, whose name was given as Joyce, pointed to his clearance papers for a voyage from Halifax to Havana as proof of the legitimacy of his mission. The papers were said to be in good order.

TAKE 25 BODIES FROM COAL MINE

Whitehaven, England, Sept. 6.—Twenty-five bodies had been recovered this morning from the coal pit in which forty men were entombed by an explosion yesterday. Heavy falls of rock and the presence of much gas are hampering the rescue squads, and it is feared the pit will have to be sealed, as was the case when 135 workers were lost in a neighboring mine in 1910. Tragic scenes are being enacted at the pit-head, where the women relatives of the entombed miners are gathered.

Last summer, in co-operation with the Kiwanis Club, and Children's Aid Society of this city and similar welfare organizations, The Advertiser placed the situation in London before the public with the result that the city council considered the advisability of establishing a juvenile court here.

However, the council stood firm in a decision to appoint no other person as juvenile court judge excepting Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon, and, as it seemed at that time that other names were being pressed vigorously for the appointment, the problem was allowed to drop.

Last June, in the opinion that a juvenile court would serve the best interests of the city, the issue was revived by leading organizations of the community. Finally this campaign bore fruit in that the city council appointed a special committee, consisting of Aldermen H. M. Childs and Mayor Cameron Wilson to investigate and report upon the local situation.

This committee brought in a report to the council Tuesday night and the council accepted it by establishing a juvenile court for London with Police Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon as judge. While the object of those organizations co-operating with The Advertiser to obtain the court has been to have the juvenile delinquents act proclaimed in London this has not been done.

Explains Delay.
Mayor Wilson explains the delay by stating that if the act were proclaimed, the attorney-general would have power to appoint the judge, and as the city council desires to exercise this power, the act was not put in force. Now that Mr. Graydon has been appointed judge of the juvenile court, Mayor Wilson pledges himself that the juvenile delinquents act will be proclaimed here as soon as the court commences to function, and conditions warrant such action.

Provided that this pledge will be carried out within a reasonable time, advocates of the court are satisfied. Having obtained their object, members of the Kiwanis Club, Children's Aid Society, Women's Labor Party and other organizations are of their persistent work in the interests of the children.

Establish Court.
Establishment of a juvenile court for London, with Police Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon as judge was decided on by the city council in regular session Tuesday night, after much discussion. A. Barbour and J. K. McDermid declared their object, representing the Children's Aid Society, and in accordance with their request Mayor Cameron Wilson and Aldermen H. J. Childs will confer with them in working out details of the new court.

In future child delinquency cases will be heard by Juvenile Court Judge Graydon in rooms on Carling street, adjacent to the police station, which will be rented for the purpose.

Can Secure Rooms.
Submitting a report on the juvenile court situation in this city, Ald. Childs declared that Magistrate Graydon is willing to act as judge, and that two suitable buildings for the court can be secured on Carling street adjacent to the police station. He asked that the council endorse the action of the special committee on this subject.

"I would like to ask if the police magistrate is going to find time to act as juvenile court judge," said Ald. L. S. Holmes, who pointed out that such an appointment entails much time on the part of the judge.

"He is doing it now," explained the mayor.

"That mere fact is the reason for the change," commented Ald. Ashplant.

Continuing Mayor Wilson stated that advocates of the court are in favor of Mr. Graydon as judge.

"This thing has been stalled from year to year," declared Alderman O. I. Cunningham. "The plans are not now as I would like to see them, but can be built up later. What we need most is a good probation officer to bring the information to the court. We must get a start somewhere."

"It is one of the most important questions of the year," said Alderman L. H. Douglas.

A. Barbour Speaks.
A. Barbour, president of the Children's Aid Society, was then asked to address the council. He submitted that the plans as prepared do not call for a juvenile court in the true sense of the word.

MORRISON WING OF U. F. O. GAINS FARMERS' SUN

Pro-Drury Supporters Lose in Fight To Elect Directorate.

POLICIES ATTACKED

Considerable Bitterness Manifested At Annual Meeting of Shareholders.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Farmers' Sun, the organ of the U. F. O. party, today developed into a battle for control of the paper between the J. J. Morrison wing of the party and the pro-Drury forces, and resulted in a complete victory for the Morrison following.

The Morrison anti-broadening directorate was re-elected en bloc by a vote of 7 to 1, the single cabinet minister who was elected to office going down to defeat by a similar margin. Attacks on the policy of isolation for the U. F. O. as supported by the present management of the Sun, were without avail. The controversy was marked by considerable bitterness.

Following a preliminary skirmish over the question of admitting proxies, which was won by the Morrison force, who possessed 550 proxies to their opponents 80, a discussion arose on the question of the recent employment of a new editor, J. C. Ross, former editor of the Sun, started the pot boiling by declaring that the directorate had gone over his head to appoint a Legislature reporter antagonistic to the government, and had given instructions that the reports of the proceedings of the house were to be printed without editing.

Gordon Waldron, K.C., solicitor of the U. F. O., aroused the ire of the "broadening-out" faction by declaring that the directorate had fallen back on the use of proxies to combat an intrigue which aimed at securing control of the paper.

Col. Fraser said J. C. Ross had juggled the balance sheet for January, 31, 1922. He had a signed statement from the auditors to prove it, he said.

Gordon Waldron: "Then the manager submitted a false statement."

President J. Z. Fraser, in his official address, made bitter comment on the series of letters issued by the committee, which had tried to oust the present management. W. C. Good, M. P., one of the directors, took strong exception to this part of the president's address, and F. G. Sandy, M. L. A., remarked that if that "kind of feeling was going to be created the end of the U. F. O. movement is not far away."

The portion of the president's address which aroused Mr. Sandy read as follows:

"Farmers cannot be stampeded by disgruntled members or dismissed inefficient employees, but for downright treachery and ingratitude nothing has equalled the latter attack. The circular of August 18 teems with untruths, but the crowning act of infamy was the unsigned circular letter sent out on Aug. 29. In all classes of society, as well as in newspaperdom, the most despised man is the anonymous letter-writer, the sneak who has no courage to come out boldly, but strikes from ambush."

ESTABLISH COURT FOR CITY CHILDREN

some, and mentioned the fact that there is no opposition to Mr. Graydon as judge. He regretted that the special committee of the city council had not conferred with the Children's Aid Society, although he understood that such was the original intention. He counseled such a consultation before final action was taken.

"We know nothing about it until we saw the paper tonight," said J. K. McDermid. "The aldermen think they can settle this thing without consultation with people who have given several years of study to it."

He asserted that the city council was anxious to have a juvenile court for London and Middlesex, with one probation officer for both districts.

Want Separate Building.

"One of the main reasons why we want the court is to proclaim the juvenile court act," continued Mr. McDermid. "The plan as outlined in this evening's Advertiser means a separate building."

He lauded this feature as overcoming the contaminating element when children are haled into police court as at present, and cited instances. Mayor Wilson questioned these instances, mentioning that in his opinion those who criticize the system have not investigated it personally.

As a comeback Mr. McDermid stated that he had investigated the present situation and knew whereof he spoke. He further alleged that delinquent children had been taken from their homes in London by constables in uniform, which action he condemned, although he wished it understood that it was not the officer's fault. He urged that the court be held at different hours than those of police court.

"This is the first time I have heard of the Children's Aid Society in connection with the juvenile court," said Alderman H. J. Childs.

"I did not know until tonight that you were head of the committee," replied Mr. McDermid.

"A separate building seemed most in the mind of the Kiwanis," explained Alderman Childs, "and Magistrate Graydon was of the opinion that it could be handled. It is not necessary to declare the juvenile delinquent act."

Lads Kiwanis Club.

"The Kiwanis Club is doing a splendid work," stated Mr. McDermid, "but the Children's Aid Society has been officially connected with that work for 25 years. Can't we get the act proclaimed and the court established?"

"That would delay action," cautioned Mayor Wilson.

"I am a Kiwanian myself," said Mr. Barbour, "but what the Children's Aid Society does is different. It has a status in Ontario and must do certain things. It handles cases where the Kiwanis Club cannot act."

Why can't we go into a deeply and thoroughly plan a credit to the city of London?"

"I think we are looking the stable after the horse is gone," said the mayor. "Juvenile courts are not stopping juvenile delinquency. When the court was discussed some time ago, names were suggested such as the Toronto court, and the mayor agreed that it would be best to support the name of Magistrate Graydon. He possesses not only a knowledge of the law, but the personality and sympathy for the children, and I believe any attempt to hold up a court at the present time is opposition to Mr. Graydon as juvenile court judge."

Probation Officers.

The mayor pointed out that automatically on establishment of a juvenile court the Children's Aid Society and Soldiers' Aid Commission representatives automatically become probation officers.

"This appears to have been a deliberate attempt to ignore the Children's Aid Society," interrupted Ald. H. B. Ashplant.

"I rise to point of order," came back Ald. Childs. "You can't put that down me."

"I believe you," replied Ald. Ashplant.

"Oh, you don't believe me," said Ald. Childs, "or you wouldn't say that."

On vote of the council being taken it was decided to establish a juvenile court in London at once, with the Children's Aid Society in consultation.

Ald. Holmes then moved that City Engineer H. A. Brazier be instructed to conduct an early survey of sanitary and storm sewers of London.

"That was done four months ago," declared Ald. Drake.

Ald. Holmes also moved that an early survey of water mains be made in London. He alleged that some water mains in the city have no pressure, and that serious consequences may ensue in case of a big fire.

The motion carried, and with it was incorporated a recommendation that No. 1 committee investigate the possibility of providing the fire department with a motor pump to raise water pressure.

DURING THE MEETING of the city council Tuesday night, a request was presented by a Chinese citizen for permission to move his laundry to another district of London.

"We turned that fellow down before, didn't we?" asked Ald. L. S. Holmes.

"No, this is a different one," explained Mayor Wilson. "The fellow we turned down was One Lung. This fellow's name is Yung Lung. The request was granted, subject to the advice of Building Inspector A. M. Piper."

GORDON BUTLER of Hamilton, the new assistant physical director of the London Y. M. C. A., took over his duties Wednesday morning.

SQUIRE STRIKES STRANGE CASE

Dominion Authorities Lay Information Against Dorchester Men.

Clover Seed Alleged to Have Contained Noxious Weed.

During the many years that he has presided in the Middlesex county police court, Squire W. H. Chittick has never encountered such a case as the one Wednesday morning, which involved as complainants the federal authorities at Ottawa, and as defendants, W. H. Shiels and Clarence Harris of Dorchester.

Both men, the former a storekeeper in Dorchester and the latter an agent for a local seed firm, were charged with having for sale, contrary to section 6 of the seed control act, a federal statute, clover seed containing noxious weeds in excess of the stipulated proportion per ounce and lacking the required label designating the same.

The defendants, after a frank explanation of the manner in which they obtained the seed were assessed merely the costs of the proceedings, while the bench and the crown representative united in the opinion that the real culprit was the firm from whom the commodity was purchased. In fact, the crown expressed surprise that the statute was so drastic in its wording, while the bench explained that in all his experience in district courts he had never encountered a parallel case.

The statutes so provide, however, that when the defendant furnishes the data of the purchase and the name of the person from whom he obtained the goods the costs of the proceedings alone will be assessed. This was done.

Shiels stated that he purchased the clover from Harris, believing it to be No. 1 quality. Harris declared that he secured the seed under similar circumstances from Young and Ferguson, seed merchants.

The crown stated that the firm in question had advanced the information that once they had discovered that the seed failed to measure up to requirements they had withdrawn the same from their sale list.

In the meanwhile the local authorities will acquit the Ottawa department of the facts of the case to date and await further action.

CIVIC SWIMMING "HOLES" REMAIN OPEN TO BATHERS

Dressing Houses Closed and Children Risk Police Interference if They Undress in Open.

While one of the city's supervised swimming "holes" on the south branch of the Thames river was closed for the season Tuesday night, members of the playgrounds committee explain that the remainder of the pools will remain open indefinitely.

In this particular instance the supervisor, a school teacher, was compelled to relinquish his duties as the schools reopened.

In any event, as E. V. Buchanan, director, points out the attendance during September will be slim and gradually lessen as the month progresses. As far as the members of the committee are concerned, he states, there will be no objection registered by them if the children frequent the pools after they are formally closed, although the bathers will have to assume all risk of interference by the police if they choose to undress on the banks. The dressing sheds will be closed.

RECIPROCATING the action of the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, who have invited Mayor Wilson and members of the London City Council to attend their fair, directors of the Western Fair Association will invite the Toronto mayor and council to visit their fair here next week. Following the request made to do so by the London aldermen.

FEDERAL CABINET TO CONSIDER REPORT

Corbett declared that the report was not true.

Employ Strikebreakers.

"Why, the Port Huron shops," he said, "which normally employ more than 100 men have only about 40 of their old staff on the job, and conditions are the same all over the western lines. The strikebreakers hired by the roads are only receiving half the pay the shop employees are demanding."

The report submitted by the board of conciliation to the Minister of Labor reads in part:

"The parties should confer as soon as conditions permit with regard to permanent rates of pay."

2. That the reduction of 5, 7 and 9 cents an hour, of which the railway gave notice, be effective temporarily from Aug. 15, but when definite rates are agreed upon they be effective from July 15.

The report is signed by Alex. Smith of Ottawa, chairman of the board, and Isaac Pitblado, K.C., of Winnipeg, representing the employers.

WELCOMES HURON COLLEGE ALUMNI

Principal Waller Outlines Wonderful Future of Institution in Address to Graduates.

The continuation of the annual meeting of the Huron College Alumni is in progress Wednesday. Rev. R. Herbert of Preston, who occupied the chair, gave a brief outline of the business of the meeting.

Rev. C. C. Waller, M.A., D.D., principal of the college, welcomed the delegates and members to the meeting. The speaker referred to the fact that many of the Alumni had made wonderful progress in the past few years, which had an important bearing on the history of the college. He also spoke of the wonderful future which lay in store for the college.

A very interesting paper was then given by Rev. Professor Cosgrave, M.A., the principal speaker, on "The Trend of Religious Thought in England."

In the course of his lecture, the speaker stated that in spite of the efforts of all of the learned scientists, in past ages, to discredit many of the fundamentals of religion, the pendulum seems to have swung to the opposite extreme, and today, science and religion are co-operating in their efforts to explain the origin of the universe and the spiritual life possibilities.

The program for the afternoon includes a paper by the Rev. Canon Sage, D.D., and a paper by the Rev. Professor Anderson, B.D., on "Democracy, Ancient and Modern."

After supper, service will be held in the college chapel, and an address will be given by Rev. Mr. Abhyankar of Bombay, India, "The Story of My Conversion."

Thursday morning the election of officers and election of two college graduates to the council will be held.

GRANT RADIALS HARBOR FRONT

Maxwell, Risk, Johnston and Beamish—S.

The agreement will have to be ratified by the Ontario legislature before it comes effective.

It provides for a fifty-year lease by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission of a six track right-of-way over property in the jurisdiction of the board of harbor commissioners of Toronto at a nominal price of one dollar a year, the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission to have control over the radial railways entering Toronto on the harbor lands.

Give Strong Opposition.

The agreement in question was strongly opposed by the Toronto Transportation Commission, which contended that it practically handed over to the provincial hydro-electric commission the right to run electric cars within the city limits to the detriment of the city's interests, as represented by the transportation commission—in short, that the provincial body could run cars and collect fares independently of the transportation commission in the latter's territory.

The Toronto board of trade and board of harbor commissioners also opposed the agreement.

They claimed that, while the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission as at present constituted, with Sir Adam Beck at its head, would not likely do anything detrimental to the interests of the city, the personnel of the hydro commission might in time be changed in such a way that it would not work in harmony with the interests of Toronto.

These two boards opposed the idea of handing over to an outside body the streets of Toronto and land on the waterfront owned by the city.

The agreement which was adopted by the Toronto City Council this morning affected directly the proposed radials from western and southwestern Ontario.

It has been freely stated by those opposed to the agreement that the legality of the pact will be tested in the courts.

give the royal game all its due. Of course everybody is predicting for him a great future with such a fine early start, and he hasn't any grave doubts on the subject himself.

Destined To Be Golfer.

The big idea of making James Hubert a star golfer originated when the red-headed little man was still very much of an infant in arms. Daddy noticed how he lunged and drove with his strong little arms, and he proudly called attention to the fact there was a born golfer if one ever lived. Factious friends might be inclined to predict instead a pugilistic career. Mr. J. D. Grant stuck to the golfing theory, and it looked like a conspiracy of Providence when the discovery was made of the juvenile set of clubs in the Tartan bag when son was just two and a half years old.

Ever since then the small laddie, with the dignity and pride of a chieftain of his clan, has been growing up with the science of golf, though it is only during the past year that he has been giving it his five years' old serious attention.

The Amateur photographer caught him a few days ago on the greens at the Hunt Club in a characteristic pose as he was about to make what he announced to be his last "bat" of the afternoon. Other experts present called it a bit of real putting.

There had been no infringement of the law. Police Magistrate Graydon viewed the situation as the defense presented it, and accordingly dismissed the case.

Crown officials state that they have been in receipt of a strong communication from the department of inland revenue at Ottawa, setting forth the declaration that there must be no misunderstanding on the part of the general public as to the granting of permits for this purpose. In view of this the appeal has been entered, and much information is expected to be revealed at the next session.

understand was that every watering place, such as Torquay and Exmouth, was filled with visitors of the middle class and others who seemed to have money, despite the unemployment. At London, conditions are about the same, as there are always a lot of people unemployed on the streets there.

Solicit Subscriptions.

"These people solicit subscriptions in a quiet way. Business conditions in England are quiet, and the storekeepers are complaining. Food and clothing if anything are cheaper than they are in Canada today."

Asked regarding the weather conditions during his trip Mr. Heaman said: "They were not very good. It was cold, and we had considerable rain, but the crops were very good. We also visited France and Belgium, but we did not see as many out of work in France as in England. All the hotels were filled with visitors wherever we went. It was the same in Belgium. Brussels seemed busy and the country was repairing the damage wrought by the war. I visited a great many of the battlefields, which were being rebuilt in many cases, while some were not going ahead as fast as the others."

"Will things pick up in England?" Mr. Heaman was asked.

"Everyone is anticipating that things will be better," he stated. "The demand for coal has made better business. One thing about the unemployment is the number of Socialists produced. At Hyde Park on Sunday you can find a dozen different people preaching different religions. Great Britain is the only nation in the world that will allow Socialists to parade the streets and fly the red flag.

"I heard them at Hyde Park denouncing the King and government. The police allow it so long as they do not fight. At Trafalgar Square it is the same, the Socialists calling Lloyd George awful names."

"The unemployment has not produced any marked increase in crime in England," concluded Mr. Heaman. "There is a slight increase due to unemployment. I enjoyed my trip greatly, and visited my native village in Devonshire during my holiday."

PROTESTS GUILT OF CAR THEFT IN POLICE COURT

Sidney Middleton Acknowledges Merely Hiring Stolen Property.—Gets One Year.

When Sidney Middleton was brought into police court this morning to receive sentence for the theft of a car, he protested that he had not pleaded guilty to the charge of theft, but had only acknowledged he was in possession of stolen property. The auto was the property of Harry Marshall of London.

"I said that I hired the car from a man whom I did not know in St. Thomas, and that he told me to take it to the Dominion Car Sales, on the Market Square in London. I did not plead guilty to theft," protested Middleton.

"What you say is not true," Magistrate Graydon stated. "You pleaded guilty and the story that was given released the other man who was held with you, as it was brought out that he was only a passenger. He missed the train for London at St. Thomas, and an officer saw him carrying a London license, and suggested that he get you to give him a lift. I don't think what you have said has helped you. However, it will not make the sentence more severe. One year in the common jail."

"I want a remand," continued Middleton.

"But you have been convicted," the court reminded him.

"I sent for witnesses and for a lawyer, but they were never notified," the prisoner retorted as he was led away to the cells.

PARENTS MEET WITH TEACHERS

Attend Conference With Teaching Staff of South London Collegiate.

Gathering Strikes New Note For Secondary Schools of City.

A new note was struck Tuesday evening in the relationship existing between a staff of a secondary school in London and the parents of pupils attending, a note of mutual interest and understanding. The largely-attended parents-teachers' meeting held at 8 o'clock in the attractive auditorium of the new Victoria School to enable the London South Collegiate staff and the fathers and mothers of high school students of the district to discuss the curriculum together, and to get acquainted, acquainted well for intelligent and appreciative co-operation from the very beginning.

Intense interest was manifested by the parents, who filled every seat in the hall, coming in response to an invitation extended by the president, Mrs. John Rose, and executive committee, Mrs. E. H. McKone, on request of the platform with the president, Mrs. Rose, were Messrs. H. W. Paddell and T. C. Benson of her executive, Trustee A. E. Silverwood, representing the board of education, Principal E. H. McKone of the Victoria School, and Principal E. A. Miller of the new collegiate unit, and the majority of the members of his staff.

Principal Miller, addressing the gathering, announced that one of his chief objects in seeking a meeting of the parents of secondary school students of the district was to thoroughly explain the new curriculum which had been introduced within the past year or so, and through which considerable confusion had arisen in the minds of the public.

He drew attention to the greater elasticity of the new curriculum than former curriculum, with opportunity afforded to adopt to an appreciable extent to community conditions, placing a large share of responsibility on local boards and principals. Instead of the hasty curriculum which involved a great strain on both pupils and teachers owing to crowding of subjects, the new curriculum, he pointed out, has fewer subjects, and thus affords opportunity for more concentration on the part of pupils.

Pupils are not expected to take more than eight subjects in any one year, and this number may be reduced to five on advice of the principal. The home work problem is thus finding a solution, and an opportunity is afforded to give more attention to individuals, with the idea of helping them to do their best work for which they are best adapted.

Offer Alternatives. With regard to the courses, these, he stated, offered three alternatives, matriculation for entering the universities; a straight teachers' course to prepare for entering normal schools; and a combined matriculation and teachers' course. It is not too heavy for the average student, and, at the end of four years, they are equipped to go into any one of several vocations, or to be admitted to normal schools for teacher training.

Seven or eight choices are open to them instead of a possible one or two.

The advantage of such broad training was pointed out from the fact that the majority of boys and girls do not make decisions regarding their vocations until between fifteen and twenty, and some drift into their work rather than decide. "Our policy in the London South Collegiate," declared Mr. Miller, "will be to guide boys and girls as far as possible in the choice of life work, and in this we want the co-operation of the parents. He expressed the conviction that the school is an ideal place for doing ideal work."

Reviews Building Issue. Speaking as a representative of the board of education, Trustee A. E. Silverwood reviewed the school building situation in London since the old collegiate was built in the eighties, followed by a long lapse until 1910, and the beginning then of the aggressive building campaign to bring the schools up to a desired standard. His only regret was that the London South Collegiate was not starting out with a new building, and he was not afraid to predict this would be remedied at the earliest possible date.

Principal E. H. McKone paid warm tribute to the quality of the new collegiate staff, the splendid spirit of co-operation he has himself met from parents in London South, and the fine type of pupils that will make up the roll of the new school.

A solo by Miss Ullah Kennedy, accompanied by Mr. C. Percy, was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

Following the discussion of the curriculum, an informal reception was held, when the South London parents had an opportunity of meeting and chatting with the members of the staff. Refreshing sandwiches, cake and coffee were served, presidents of the five mothers' clubs in the district interested, or their representatives, acting with Mrs. Rose in making arrangements. These were Mrs. A. C. Cress, acting for Mrs. H. B. White, Victoria school; Mrs. S. F. Martin, Tecumseh; Mrs. W. L. Lowe, Witley road; Mrs. C. M. Linnell, Empress avenue; and Mrs. C. Walker, Riverview. Mrs. Rose conveyed the deep regrets of Trustee Mrs. J. I. A. Hunt, who was unable to be present.

Market Gardener Carries Corn African Fashion

RICHMOND street assumed a tropical aspect Wednesday morning when a market gardener wended his way through the downtown district carrying a large basket of corn on his head, just like the African ladies bear their burdens in native haunts.

The gardener attracted the attention of many pedestrians, and just to show that he was an expert in the art of balancing, he stopped at King street, lit his pipe, and continued his way without removing the basket from his head or touching it with his hands.

FORMALITY is at times disregarded by the London City Council, and Tuesday evening proved one of the occasions when convention is overruled. Owing to the heat of the council chamber, Mayor Wilson ruled that coats could be disregarded for the evening, and that "shirt-sleeve diplomacy" would prevail during the session. It did.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE Society of the Methodist Church held a meeting of its members, now entered into the state of matrimony, by formerly Miss Eva Francis (Mrs. A. S. Business was practically dispensed with at the meeting, and following the presentation games enjoyed a social time spent.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR Children's Day at the Western Fair, and consideration of a program for the evening, are among the important items of business to be transacted at the meeting of the Lions' Club at the De Luxe Cafe, Thursday. No meeting have been held during the summer, and it is expected that there will be a large turnout in order to prepare for a successful season. Preparations are to be made for ladies' night, Thursday, Sept. 28.

SERVICE OF STREET CARS on Hamilton road east of Egerton street was discontinued Wednesday morning, owing to the fact that the paving operations on this thoroughfare necessitate elevating the car tracks. It is expected that the service will be resumed in two weeks' time. Hamilton road is closed to vehicular traffic from Egerton to St. Julien streets pending completion of the new pavement. Dundas street east, which has been closed for some time, will likely be opened to traffic Saturday night.

LONDON manufacturers will be given an opportunity of learning the present conditions in foreign markets and also of increasing their export trade when two of Canada's trade commissioners visit the city in October. Dr. J. W. Chamber of commerce officials are anxious for the London manufacturers to wish to discuss trade conditions with either Dr. Ross or Major Johnston to get in touch with them so that an interview may be arranged.

"They promised to let me know today," said Major Weekes. City Clerk S. ASKS REPORT ON AUTO OPERATION

Alderman Douglass Claims Information on Cost Refused by Buchanan.

Ashton Deplores Fact That Industries Do Not Locate in London.

Declaring that he had been refused the information by E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the public utilities commission, recently, Alderman I. H. Douglass moved at a meeting of the city council Tuesday night to have a full report on the cost of operation of every auto operated by the public utilities commission during 1920 and 1921 be prepared for the next meeting of No. 1 committee.

"That information was refused me by the city treasurer," alleged Alderman Douglass. "At least," Mr. Buchanan refused to give it to the city treasurer so he could not give it to me."

"They should use a little diplomacy," declared Alderman H. B. Ashton. "These officials have no right to say this and that to city aldermen."

"I never asked Mr. Buchanan for anything that he did not tell me," said Alderman Gordon B. Drake. "I think he is one of the best city officials that way. You did not go to the right person."

Asked Treasurer. "I went to the city treasurer, but I thought was the proper officer to give out the information," said Alderman Douglass.

"O, he'll get it for you," advised the mayor as Alderman Douglass' motion carried.

During the meeting Ald. John Ashton deplored the fact that other municipalities are obtaining new industries while London is apparently being overlooked. He intimated that there was "something wrong" as London offers transportation, power and other facilities for new factories.

"It is disappointing," admitted the mayor. "We have done everything possible."

"We should spend less on pavement and develop the industrial area," advised Ald. F. B. Watkinson, who urged that a bridge be constructed over the Grand Trunk tracks at Ashland avenue, and that sewers be constructed in this district.

Would Cost Million. "The industrial area is not near Nilestown," charged Ald. G. B. Drake. "It takes so long to get out to it, that it would cost a million dollars to build sewers. We should sell it."

"I think Ald. G. Bartholomew Drake exaggerates it," said Mayor Wilson.

"Produce the industries, and we will put down the sewers," asserted Ald. Childs.

"That's the crux of the situation," added the mayor. "There is no use spending thousands and then getting no factories."

Ald. Childs asked that some action be taken to continue Marshall street east through the property occupied by the Jubilee Rink prior to being destroyed by fire. The proposal was referred to No. 2 committee.

The council decided to expend $750 on the construction of a small building to house a fire apparatus at Queen's Park during the period of Fair Week. It was pointed out that a tent has been used for this purpose, but afforded inadequate protection.

Asks for Report. Alderman Holmes inquired when a report of the special committee appointed to investigate the transportation problem in London would report.

"As soon as it has completed an investigation of the problem," replied the mayor.

"Is it investigating?" asked Dr. Holmes.

"It certainly is," retorted Dr. Wilson, "but has not completed the job." "It hasn't started it," was the sharp shot of Alderman Holmes.

Alderman Ashton then asked when a report from the "joke department" would be submitted to the council. Asked to be more definite, he explained that he referred to the analysis department of the city, declaring that September is rather late to receive a report for 1921 city finance.

"I know of no other corporation in the same situation," he stated.

It was explained that the auditor's report had been received in July.

"That's very good," commented Ald. Ashton.

The council recommended that the town-planning commission define an area in South London where stores to serve that community will be located. It was also decided to accept the offer of the county in granting a site on King street for the erection of a city registry office, and the city solicitor was authorized to enter into negotiations with the county and close the deal.

No action was taken on the proposal to eliminate the left-hand turn for vehicles at Dundas and Richmond streets.

LOCAL GRAND TRUNK officials have been notified that sixteen special passenger trains will be run from various points in Western Ontario to the city from Sept. 9 to 15, to handle the Western Fair crowds.

ALTHOUGH MAJOR G. H. WEEKES, solicitor for the London Housing Commission, rules that Tuesday night was the time limit for Hayman & Willis, contractors, to name an arbitrator to sit with the commission representative on a board to fix responsibility for defects in roofs of Pine Lawn survey houses, no arbitrator had been announced up until Wednesday afternoon. "They promised to let me know today," said Major Weekes. City Clerk S. Baker has received written acceptance of his appointment as London Housing Commission arbitrator from Harry Walton, building inspector of Sarnia, who was appointed last week.

September Straw Hats Drive City Fathers Wild

RIOT IN COUNCIL HALL.

IN several large cities of the United States and Canada, Labor Day is regarded as the time limit for straw hats worn by males. After that day the summer headgear is parked in the attic for the winter, or relegated to the ash can. Owners who dare to wear a straw hat after this date, do so at their own risk, as the favorite hobby of their friends is smashing of hats.

Tuesday night was marked by a meeting of the London City Council. Ten of the eleven aldermen wore straw hats, and Mayor Cameron Wilson was present with a similar top piece. While viewing the array of straws in the waiting-room of the council Tuesday night, a scheme to crush them filtered through the brain of a reporter, who was on the job.

Selecting Ald. H. J. Childs as his confederate, the scribe unfolded his scheme, knowing it was safe because this city father did not wear a straw hat Tuesday night. The reporter offered to assist Ald. Childs in smashing every straw hat present, including his own.

Ald. Childs agreed it would be a good stroke of business for the haberdasher, but refused to be a party to the plot.

However, when the reporter went to retrieve his own bargain hat after the meeting, he discovered to his dismay that someone had accidentally pushed a fist through the crown, and that Ald. Childs was wearing a smile that would not come off.

Undaunted, the victim of this atrocity, paraded before the city council with his battered lid on his head, and suggested that other members of the straw hat brigade present stage a free-for-all smashing campaign.

Assisted with the force of destruction, Ald. H. J. Childs seized the straw hat of Ald. G. Bartholomew Drake, which was worth one dollar at least, and before that official could voice a protest, placed it upon the floor.

The entire mob made a dash for this goal, with Ald. Drake in the van. However, the victory was credited to a reporter, who brought his right foot down upon the new lid, simultaneously with a thrust from Mayor Cameron Wilson.

Ald. L. H. Douglass was singled out as the next victim, but he wisely placed his straw hat behind his back. An attempt was made to push him back against the wall violently, but was unsuccessful.

Finally, the owners of straw hats who were present realized that there was four work afoot, and accordingly they marched out of the building in single file, guarding zealously the headgear of 1920 vintage. The final score showed that Ald. Drake and the reporter were the losers, both possessing straw hats resembling the housing commission dwellings on Pine Lawn with their leaky roofs.

REVISION COURT GRANTS APPEALS

Reduces Assessment of Business and Residential Properties in Many Cases.

The court of revision, held in the city hall at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, P. B. Fetterly presiding, met with a rather interesting and complicated case, in the appeal of the Elliott & Marr Co., to the effect that their stockholders were being asked to pay taxes twice on dividends paid by the company. Mr. Jared Vining, the lawyer in the case for the appealing company, said:

"Mr. Chairman, the assessment department had no right to change figures sworn in on the return given in by my client and mutilate it in such a way. They should have either returned it for correction or taken the customary proceedings." Mr. McPherson, a stockholder in the company, stated "that he did not care to pay taxes twice, and that was what he was doing."

In one stage of the meeting the court thought the matter should be given over to the court of appeal for judgment. Mr. Fetterly stated: "I feel that I cannot make anything from this matter."

The argument continued for some fifteen minutes longer, and upon further thought the matter was reserved for a later decision.

Mr. M. Gunne, who has been employed by the McClary Manufacturing Company, made an appeal that he was being assessed twice on his earnings while with that company. After some consideration the court decided in Mr. Gunne's favor.

The third case up before the court was that of William Left & Co. Mr. Left stated "that his factory was only worth $2,000, and he would sell it to any member of the court on deposit of a check for the said amount." The property was assessed for the amount of $4,100, which seemed a very large amount to him.

Mr. Left also had a house that he considered was only worth $3,000 and was taxed for a much larger amount. The court announced a reduction of $1,000 on the factory and $300 on the house.

Judgment was announced in favor of the appealing party in many of the smaller cases, and after sitting for some three hours the court adjourned for the day.

WEARY OF ABUSE, SCHOOL TRUSTEES Decide to Retire From Civic Arena

Too much effort with but little else than a heap of abuse in return, is the chief reason for retiring from public life advanced by those members of the board of education whose term of office expires November next, and who assert that nothing can be done in the present indications it would seem that when the next poll will be asked to choose a brand new set of trustees, as each of the six who are concluding their two-year term, have already intimated, at some time or another in recent weeks, that they will be through for good in 1922.

School Trustee Rev. A. A. Bice, chairman of No. 2 and the salary committee of the board, is the latest to declare in this strain, submitting amongst other reasons, that his time does not permit him to give what he terms as satisfactory service to his own and school duties.

Other members of the board have already expressed themselves similarly, adding that the abuse and criticism that they have been subjected to since their election is neither desirable or just.

Thus it may be that the citizens may be compelled, to inject brand new blood into the board of education circles for 1923.

AUTHORITIES TO ENFORCE ACT

School Officials Reluctant, But Say Law Leaves No Other Course.

Chairman Smith Declares Revolution Only Thing That Will Stop Measure.

Now that the public schools have re-opened parents of children have become more impressed with the fact that the adolescent school attendance act is the law for this province and must be enforced until such time, perhaps, as the people see fit to demand a repeal.

While even reluctant to enforce rigidly the regulation just effective, that all pupils who have not attained their matriculation standard, or their 16th year, must attend at least part-time classes, school officials stress the point that they have no alternative in the matter.

Within the past 48 hours particularly members of the board of education have been besieged with dozens of frenzied parents who relate piteous tales whereby their every means of support is curtailed by reason of the new regulation of the act.

"I have had several telephone calls in this respect," School Trustee Edwin Smith, chairman of the board, commented Wednesday, "from parents who state that they will be subject to great inconvenience and even distress in many instances. I noted one sad case in particular last night of a widow with several small children whose only means of support was the eldest son who will not reach the age of 16 until the fall."

Chairman Smith points out that although the parents or guardians implore the members of the board to use their influence with the school attendance officer to obtain exemption, such is impossible. Everything rests upon the discretion of Dr. George Weir, and the latter has already stated time and again that he also is practically powerless to act other than stipulated by the act.

"Nothing short of a revolution can stop the enforcement of this legislation," he has stated.

SAYS WORK STILL SCARCE IN BRITAIN

W. G. Vincent Brands British Unemployment Situation as Critical.

From conclusions drawn by W. G. Vincent, 165 John street, who has recently returned from a trip to England, the unemployment issue is still decidedly serious, although there seems to be a great deal of money in circulation amongst the working people.

"While in England," Mr. Vincent said, "I gathered that the old cry of poverty is just as outstanding as ever among the poor classes, but close observation tends to dispel this idea because, go wherever you will, you will find that there is still a great deal of money amongst the working people in England. When the season is on, they travel all over the country on pleasure-seeking trips, taking in the races, the seashore and every other place of attraction."

"But the unemployment question in the British Isles is still in a critical condition. It would seem to the casual observer, however, that a large amount of this is due to the arrangement made by the government for paying 'out-of-work' money of whom will not work or try to get anything to do."

"I think the government scheme in itself a worthy one, but it does not seem to be worked out in the proper manner, and the whole question seems to be one for which a conclusion must be sought, as it is the cause of much bitter feeling among the rank and file of the people."

"There is a wonderful system called the allotment plan, which has been working out successfully all over England throughout the past few years. It was started, no doubt, by the exigencies of war, when it was impossible to get fresh vegetables. Some of the allotment holders, notwithstanding the very small amount of land they are able to work, grow some very fine garden produce as the result of long evenings spent with spade and hoe. The amount each holder has to pay for a small plot of land is soon made up in the production of vegetables and he is well repaid for his hard work."

"It seems a pity, though, that what were once splendid fields and valleys, which were the delight of people of the towns and cities, are now cut up in small trade, and one must go further afield for a glimpse of the real beauty of nature in England."

LEFT HAND TURN SHELVED TILL NEXT COUNCIL SESSION

Issue Brought Up For Discussion Laid Over For Half Hour, Then Forgotten.

Although the matter was brought up for discussion before the city council Tuesday night, no action was taken on the proposal of Ald. G. B. Drake, that the left-hand turn for vehicles at Dundas and Richmond streets be prohibited.

This proposed change, which is opposed by businessmen of the downtown district, was laid over for a half hour when brought up for discussion. However, the issue was forgotten, and the council adjourned before reaching a decision.

This means that the left-hand turn will be in order at Dundas and Richmond streets until the next meeting of the city council at least.

Council Forbids Parking On Carling Street

FOLLOWING the action of the city council Tuesday night, in passing a bylaw, no parking of vehicles will be allowed on the south side of Carling street, between Richmond and Talbot streets. City Engineer H. A. Brazier has been authorized to place "no parking" signs on this thoroughfare warning the motorists of a change in the law.

In passing the above law, the city council followed the recommendation of No. 2 committee, who made it in deference to the request of merchants whose property faces Carling street.

MAKES NEW CLASS AT CITY SCHOOL

Principal Wyatt Creates Special Ungraded Promotion Form For Students.

Another stride in the elementary education of city pupils was noted with the re-opening of the schools Tuesday when, for the first time, a "special ungraded promotion class" was created by Principal Edward Wyatt in the St. George's school.

The chief objective of this arrangement, which entails no additional expense as Senior School Inspector V. K. Greer explains, is to take those pupils whose classification does not appear to be the best and prepare them in a month or two for a class where they can do better work.

In certain instances this will mean that bright pupils will be placed in a grade ahead in a short period of time while in other cases it will mean that students will be rendered better able to pursue studies in their own class.

It is emphasized that no additional cost will be incurred, nor will any extra teachers be required, as each of the other teachers of each school will take a few additional children in order to lessen slightly the class of the special teacher.

Should any success be noted as anticipated, it is not improbable that the scheme will be enlarged to include the other public schools as well.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION TO FEATURE DISTRICT MEETING

Methodists Will Also Discuss Missions and Evangelism At First Church, Thursday.

Missions, evangelism and the work of religious education will take up a large share of discussion and business at the meeting of London Methodist district, which commences in the First Methodist Church Thursday, Sept. 21.

Rev. Jesse Arnup of Toronto, field secretary in mission work, will address the afternoon session on missions, and Rev. Walter Milson, field secretary in the department of social service and evangelism will conduct a conference, along the lines of his work.

Rev. Perry Dobson of Alma College, St. Thomas, will head a delegation from that city, who will ask support of the district in their campaign for funds to carry on the work of their educational society.

In order to secure as large an attendance as possible, each circuit in the district has been asked to send at least six delegates and as many more as possible.

The Retired Farmer.

IN A VOTE taken in a village north of London a few weeks ago on the building of a new school, the verdict was against the project.

It was common talk in the village on the day after the vote that the retired farmers had gone against the idea of the new school, as they had no children to send to school, and were interested only in keeping down the rate of taxation in the place.

AN ADVERTISER representative happened to be in the place at the time, and in order to find out where some of the retired farmers stood in the matter, asked one or two of them what they thought about the matter, and what their attitude was toward the expenditure of money for the new school.

One of them stated the case fairly well, and there can be no doubt that many others of the same class have had the same experience as this one.

He stated, in brief, that he had retired from the farm nine years ago, and figuring on what it had cost people to live for some years previous, he thought when he had a certain amount of money in the bank, and more on first mortgages, he could get along on the income from his means, and live comfortably for the rest of his days. This man is now 72 years of age, and has his wife and another relative living in the house. For the first two or three years all went well, and he was able to get along very comfortably on his income, but starting around 1915, toward the end of the year, he had found that the cost of living had been going higher and higher. His income, being derived from interest payments, was a fixed quantity, and there was no way in which he could go ahead to better himself. The only thing he could do was to cut his living expenses as much as possible. This he found it difficult to do, as he claimed his home had always been conducted in a very modest way, and there were very few items that could be eliminated. He had secured some vacant land not far from his house, and had done what he could to grow his own vegetables, but he had figured on this in the first place when he left the farm.

The result of it all was that he found that he had on a number of occasions had to cut into his principal to help out of his income, and by so doing he had, of course, cut down his income. He claimed that right now, under present price conditions, he was paying out more for his living than he was earning from interest, and that he thought was sufficient to keep his home going for the rest of his days.

"If I persist in living long enough," he said with a smile, "it may be by the time I am 80 years of age I shall have to go to work again."

He admitted that he had voted against the building of a new school because he could not afford to pay his share toward the enterprise. He stated frankly that had he been in a better position he would have been glad to cast his vote otherwise.

There must be numerous cases similar to this one all over the country. The retired farmer in question stated that right in his village there were a number of people in the same position as he found himself. They found after they had retired that they had not enough to live on.

It is easy enough to say that the retired farmers are interested only in keeping down the tax rate, but honestly, what would you do under similar circumstances?

Paragraphs.

WRITING paragraphs is getting to be quite a business. Every second mail nowadays brings in a suggestion from some U. S. syndicate that we can brighten up our pages by the use of this material.

No doubt there is room to brighten up the pages of this, or any other paper.

But here's a sample from a batch turned out a couple of days ago by one of these syndicates:

"The Allied countries don't appear to be in so much of a hurry to 'come across' as we did in 1918."

Now, we don't suppose for one single minute that this viewpoint represents solid American opinion.

There are many things that might be said about "coming across in 1918," the last year of the war, but they are not being said.

Then, here's another one that has a peculiar slapstick touch to it:

"When anything goes wrong in Europe they just pack up their troubles in their kit-bags and bring them to the United States."

No particular harm in the remark, perhaps.

But one might ask, in all seriousness, just what the European nations get when they pack their troubles up and bring them to the United States.

Has there been anything in the way of serious attempt or positive accomplishment that would lead one to believe that the great American republic had earned the reputation of a very enviable one—of being a place where European ridges can be ironed out?

Seriously, we rather like good paragraphs, and will make our bow to the man who can produce good ones, but we fear this particular syndicate is going to be sadly out of luck when it seeks to peddle its stuff in the Canadian market.

Farmers in Alberta.

SHALL we go forward or turn back?

Such is the question discussed by H. W. Woon, president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture and of the United Farmers of Alberta, in the current issue of the U. F. A., published in Calgary by the United Farmers of Alberta.

Mr. Woon deals at some length with the method of selecting and electing candidates, and touches on the ticklish point of whether a representative, after election, should be subject to the direction of the organization electing him. At the end of his article he comes nearer to a candid discussion of this point than he does in his opening remarks by saying that "it is said that some of the members (Farmers) who received nomination and election at the hands of farmers' organizations are seriously considering dissociating themselves from those organizations, and at the same time continuing to hold office that they accepted as representatives of those organizations. If this be true, then bitter indeed are the first fruits of the young tree of democracy. How badly have we chosen, and how herculean is the task before us! It will be only fair and just to assume that these members accepted nomination and election in good faith, believing in what they were undertaking to represent, and that after getting in a different environment, and under a different influence they changed their minds, and now think they were wrong and that after all the political party system is right. This, of course, they had a perfect right to do, and the process might be perfectly honest and honorable. But is it right, and square dealing, to continue to hold office after they have withdrawn from their electors, and are representing no one but themselves? Should they not, when they find that they can no longer conscientiously represent what they undertook to represent, lay down their commission and seek re-election on the basis of their new-born convictions?"

With this belief there can be little fault found, unless it be in the school of blind politicians, and fortunately the ranks of that institution have been sadly decimated in recent years. We have had in Canadian politics several instances of members resigning when they found themselves out of sympathy with the policies of the party they were chosen to represent.

Mr. Woon also claims that there is no difference between a group and a party, and in that he is quite right. In his own words he holds that there are those who "believe in a form of organization in the interest of politicians, but which is not in the interests of the people," and from that point argues that any political movement must find its guidance and direction from the bottom up, rather than from the top down. It is a fact, he claims, that years of party schooling have created a sort of political autocracy in the land, by which we have built up a machine for the glorification and benefit of a few professional politicians.

It is hard to justify such a statement by the rule of political history, especially of recent years. Whether citizens organize in groups, or parties or anything else, the very fact of organization carries with it the necessity of leadership, and political leadership can very easily run into an autocracy, no matter whether those concerned are Liberals, Conservatives or Progressives. Mr. Woon can hardly claim that any one party has a monopoly on the peculiar brand of virtue that will eliminate this tendency.

APPARENTLY Mr. Woon has given heed to the charge laid against the U. F. A. of being sectional, and representative of only the agrarian class, for he says in one place:

"But, without discussing the merits of democratic organization itself, they tell us that the farmers are organized on the wrong basis. They say that organized on this basis we are narrow, selfish, Bolshevistic, etc., etc. All of this seems to have a pleasing sound to the ear of the autocratic and the professional politician, but it doesn't prove anything, mean anything, nor get anywhere. If it is wrong for citizens to organize, tell us so and tell us why. If it is right for them to organize, and the farmers are organized on the wrong basis, tell them what the right basis is, and how they can organize on that basis. They will listen to reason; they desire wise counsel."

To the last of which we may say nay, nay. If Mr. Woon is indulging in some fine form of sarcasm, well and good, but if he is seriously bidding for all and sundry to come forward, each with his separate quota of advice on how to run the farmers' organization in Alberta or in any other province, then we can hardly take him seriously.

Mr. Woon is a man of wide experience, a hard-headed businessman, and on his appearances at Ottawa he created a favorable impression. He is in a position to state plainly what the Progressives of Alberta have in mind. It would be interesting if he would continue his discussion, and depart entirely from generalities. He starts a real discussion on a real subject, but furnishes only half an answer. In dealing with politics it is well not to leave too much to be read between the lines.

Our Hindsight.

NOW that we have no coal in sight, a great many people are beginning to think what a fine thing it would be to do more research work in Canada to see what can be found at home.

This notion is neither shrewd nor helpful.

For years there have been a few public-spirited men in the Dominion who have given of their time to the carrying on of research work in the Dominion, but their efforts have been poorly recognized and scantily appreciated.

Now that we run our heads into the stone wall of a cold winter with no coal, we begin to rub our eyes and look around.

Not until we are half-way down a steep hill with a gully at the bottom do we look around to see if our brakes are working.

Not until our house is on fire do we look through the old tin box to find out whether we have any insurance or if it was allowed to lapse a year and a half ago.

Likewise the county council has a meeting at the place where a heavy load went through the bridge and killed the driver and drowned the horses.

So also the fire chief goes around to find out why it was that the asbestos curtain was not working in the theatre, or how it was that the sprinkler system was out of order in the factory when the fire started.

Of 99 out of every 100 people it can be written that they do things when they have to and not one bit before.

So right here in Canada we have been running over to the United States year after year with our scuttles. And year after year we have seen that we were living in a fool's paradise.

Each succeeding strike has been more deadly than its predecessor, and every time transportation has been crippled in United States we have known for positive fact that our coal supply was endangered.

And yet, in the face of these certain facts we have each year dusted off the old coal bucket, and packed off to the United States coal fields, apparently quite secure in the knowledge that we could get what we needed for the immediate present.

Now that we can't get it, we become wonderful investigators, or researchers, or home-talent expounders. All this feeling that is created now toward finding or developing something in Canada that we can burn to keep us warm is simply a passing notion, and as soon as it is found that the old nag will draw up at the side door with a load of United States anthracite, we will forget all about our desire to investigate and our passion for research will become only a foolish memory.

The men who have tried to carry on research work in Canada may have been formally thanked for their efforts, but that is where it has ended. The mass of the people are not interested, nor will they become interested in the problem. If we are going to solve our fuel problem in Canada it will be the few "cranks" and "faddists" who will some day hand us the solution. And after it has been done we will wake up and make the discovery that we are indeed a very remarkable people.

A Generous Move.

EDUCATIONAL authorities in Hamilton have been compelled to restrict school attendance to children more than ten years of age, owing to the outbreak of infantile paralysis in that city this summer.

When public and separate schools of Hamilton were opened Tuesday morning, classes were limited to senior grades, this action being taken on the advice of physicians of the city, who pointed out that the majority of victims of the dread disease were less than ten years old.

While the infantile paralysis situation at Hamilton is well in hand now, the authorities believe in taking no chances on a new outbreak. Other municipalities of the province, where the disease has been detected are waging a similar battle, for the children.

London has fortunately escaped an outbreak of infantile paralysis. This good luck is no doubt due in the first place to the excellent measures taken by the medical profession in the affected cities to prevent the disease from spreading, and secondly, is the result of precautions exhibited by the health authorities and public in London.

Co-operation of this nature is of benefit to all concerned. It is hoped that it will not be necessary to continue the school-closing regulations in Hamilton much longer, and that the much-dreaded infantile paralysis, with its terrible results, will become a rarity in municipalities of Ontario.

TO THE EDITOR

SLAUGHTERING THE TREES
Editor Advertiser:

Sir,—With much that Mr. Bapty has to say on the above subject we are in hearty accord, as the way our trees are mutilated calls for the severest remonstrance, and it certainly is high time the care of our parks and trees was placed in the hands of someone who understood them. But when he mentions the name of W. E. Saunders we must protest with all the earnestness of which we are capable. Why, had it not been for the timely intervention of General Manager Gaultz in 1913, nearly one-half of the finest maple and spruce trees in Springbank Park would have been sacrificed just to satisfy a passing whim of this parks commissioner, acting with another by the name of Emory B. Hamilton. Even today, visitors to Springbank may see for themselves marks made by an axe on hundreds of trees, put there in order to indelibly distinguish them for being felled the following winter. Let it be said to the credit of Mr. Gaultz that directly he was apprised of the intention of these parks commissioners he gave orders for the holes made in the maple trees to be filled up with a mixture of cow manure and clay, which was immediately done, and, to some extent, healed the wound made. But in the case of spruce trees doomed for removal, where a branch had been chopped off of one side, and consequently disfigured, orders were given to have all these trimmed up, that is, all the lower branches removed, and so today one may see what might have been beautiful stately evergreens so mutilated as to be hideous to behold. Our parks system is the laughingstock of the horticultural world, and Mr. Bapty does well to call for a change. Yours truly,

CARING FOR CANCER

Editor Advertiser:

Sir,—I do not know whether it is permissible or not, but was wondering if there would be space for a few suggestions of mine.

Almost all the papers one gets hold of these days have some reference to the prevalence of cancer.

One sees figures quoted of legacies and donations to be given to the finder of some cure for the dread disease. I have not noticed anywhere any reference being made in regard to the prevention of cancer. To make clear my meaning, I am compelled to state my own case. I am living on a farm with an aunt and my four boys. My aunt is in the last stage of malignant cancer. When the cancer had got a fairly good hold of her we tried to see if there was a hospital where she could be taken care of for a price we could afford to pay, but all the doctors we consulted had the same to say. They could not do the cancer patient in the hospitals unless one was prepared to pay heavily for the care and necessary attention.

In the hospitals are sanitation, quiet, and all necessary conveniences for sickness, in marked contrast to home treatment.

The doctor draws flies, and try as one will to keep the pests down there are still some who will escape even the most vigilant person. No one needs telling that flies are a house-to-house caller, and there are no means of telling where the pests have come from.

Now, another menace—out on the farm all refuse has to be either burned or buried. Well, where one man might bury his refuse, the next tenant might possibly turn in his hogs, and no one needs any lessons on how hogs will uproot everything. Our private physician says that out of 38 cases of cancer under observation all the females who had care of the patient developed cancer.

That, to my way of thinking, is a direct contradiction to the physician who insists that cancer is non-contagious.

Now, what I want to suggest is: Could not the interest of some of those donations be applied to the founding of some hospital where afflicted persons could have sanitary treatment and care? Could not some of those funds now lying idle be used equally well for prevention of cancer as the cure?

For a new, growing country the fatalities from cancer are remarkably high. Would it not pay Canada in the long run to help those afflicted by finding some place whereby they might have sanitary treatment and thus prevent any possible contagion?

My own personal experience is that it is very hard to keep everything sanitary where there are children and where there are no conveniences at all for sickness.

Trusting that I have not asked for too much space, your valuable paper, and thanking you for the kindness in bringing this little matter to the front, I remain,

A GRATEFUL SUBSCRIBER.

Yesterday's article explained that, in the practical use of characterology by salesmen, it is easy to observe whether a prospect has a convex profile and to draw valuable general conclusions from it.

It is equally easy to observe whether he has a concave profile; that is to say, a "dishd" one, with projecting forehead and chin.

Nor is it hard to keep in mind that, if he has, he also has a slow, deliberate, reflective and plodding nature, and that he is most likely to be amiable instead of peevish like the convex.

You can rush the convex, providing your story is well ordered and properly emphasizes the high lights. But you mustn't try to rush the concave, or you will probably bring to the surface that fund of obstinacy which balances his good humor.

Give him details, appeal to his reasoning power, and be prepared to spend a great deal more time with him than you would with a person of convex profile. Give him plenty of time to deliberate, and if this involves a second waiting for this than to press him unduly for a decision at once.

FIND COSGROVE SHOT CLOHECY

Members of Coroner's Jury
Reach Verdict in Short Time.

Accused To Have Preliminary
Hearing in Owen Sound
Thursday.

Special to London Advertiser.
OWEN SOUND, Sept. 5.—That Rev. Father Thomas Joseph Clohery came to his death by gunshot wound inflicted by John Cosgrove, deaf mute, on Saturday night, Aug. 19, 1922, was the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury that inquired into the death of Father Clohery, in Columbus Hall, Proton, this afternoon.

Many witnesses were called, including Mr. and Mrs. Michael Connolly, at whose house Father Clohery died. They told of undressing him, and of his statement that "the dummy shot me." Mr. Connolly also told of another incident between the priest and Cosgrove. The former got up from the breakfast in the Connolly home when Cosgrove grappled with him. He attacked the priest again and was then put out.

According to the witness, the priest said that when he opened the door of the church on the fatal night he heard a rattle and saw the prisoner pull up what he thought was a broom. The priest pulled the door shut, but later Cosgrove pulled it open and fired point blank.

William Cosgrove said that Cosgrove had worked for him, and that he had a rifle on the day of the shooting. He did not see the rifle after the shooting. The accused did not like the priest, nor the church, he said.

James Woodgate said the prisoner had made threats to shoot the priest. Michael Cosgrove, a brother of the accused man, said John Cosgrove had a spite against the priest. The jury was only a short time arriving at a decision. Cosgrove, the accused, will have his preliminary hearing in Owen Sound on Thursday.

To Discard Freckles,
Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

It is said that creams containing animal grease cause hair to grow. You run no risk of acquiring superfluous hair from using ordinary mercurized wax. There is nothing better for a discolored skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimply skin. Get an ounce of mercurized wax at any druggist's and apply it like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. Soon you will observe a most remarkable transformation.

The ideal wrinkle remover is made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered sassafras in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost immediate results.

Herbert Wilson Given Life Sentence.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5.—Herbert Wilson, ex-convict of London, Ontario, convicted here last week of the murder of Herbert Cox as they tried to escape from prison, was today sentenced to life imprisonment. Notice of appeal followed the sentence. Motion for a new trial was refused.

"I am a man of God; I trust my future in His hands," said Wilson when sentence was pronounced. Then he asked for a Bible. If he is forced to spend the rest of his days in prison, he is quoted as saying his plan is to devote his time "to the uplift of my fellow-prisoners."

2 LONDON WOMEN INJURED IN CRASH

Cars Collide On Narrow Road—way Four Miles North of Lucan.

LUCAN, Sept. 5.—While attempting to pass at a point where there is a very narrow roadway, about four miles north of Lucan on the London and Goderich highway, two automobiles crashed this afternoon with resulting injuries to three people. Both cars were badly damaged.

Mrs. M. J. F. McCully, 194 Hamilton road, London, was driving a sedan car, accompanied by Miss Watson, also of London, and the other car going north was driven by Mrs. Henry Ellworthy of Exeter.

Mrs. McCully and son, John McCully, who had been summering at Bayfield, were returning to London, and Mr. McCully in a touring car loaded with baggage was following the car driven by his mother.

Mrs. McCully had a knee wrenched and her back badly bruised, and Miss Watson had an arm broken.

Mrs. Ellworthy, besides having her lip cut, was badly shaken up.

Dr. Orme of Lucan was called and attended the three injured women.

Mrs. McCully and Miss Watson were taken to London by Mr. McCully, who unloaded the baggage from the touring car.

The accident is said to be the tenth or eleventh occurring this season at this stretch of narrow road.

MERCURY CLIMBS TO 92 IN LONDON

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—Ontario sweltered today in a heat wave which ranged temperature between 80 and 92, Toronto recording the maximum. London was nearly as hot as Toronto with a temperature of 92, while Parry Sound in the north recorded a maximum of 82 and Kingston 78.

A stiff breeze blowing off Lake Ontario saved the situation somewhat for Toronto and up to a late hour tonight no heat casualties had been reported. Toronto's temperature of 93 was 14 points above the average for this day figured over a term of years.

ORDER GREATER CAUTION IN SAFEGUARDING MAILS

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—(Canadian Press.)—A warning to postmasters throughout the Dominion to exercise greater caution in the safeguarding of mails is issued today by the post-office department. The department states that investigations into cases of lost and stolen mails have shown many irregularities on the part of the postmaster in either delivery or receipt of the mail which has been the subject of the inquiry.

Postmasters are therefore warned that mails to and from an office must pass directly from one postmaster to the courier or vice versa, no matter at what hour of the day or night the receipt or delivery takes place.

DECLARES C. M. A. NOT IN POLITICS

J. R. Shaw States Association
Never Gave Dollar To Party Fund.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—John R. Shaw of Woodstock, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in an address at the Canadian National Exhibition directors' luncheon today, said that the Manufacturers' Association was not in politics, and had never contributed a dollar to a party campaign fund. "The public idea that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association exists solely to boost the tariff 'high as Haman's gallows' is wrong," added Mr. Shaw. "That is not our purpose."

President Shaw said the Canadian Manufacturers' Association believed in sending out statements of its views on public questions and leaving the issue to the people and accepting their verdict. "We believe," he said, "that the present industrial system, which has done so much good for Canada, should be continued, and we are glad to see that the present government has not greatly changed the tariff."

Mr. Shaw said the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was a democratic body of 4,500 members scattered throughout Canada.

70 MINERS STRIKE AT SANDERS CREEK

CALGARY, Sept. 5.—Because the company refused to recognize the check-off, 70 miners employed at the mines of the Western Canada Collieries at Sanders Creek, between Rocky Mountain Horse and Nordegg, have gone out on strike, according to Robert Peacock, secretary of District 18, United Mine Workers of America. The trouble developed after formal organization of the miners into a local of the United Mine Workers, which the company refused to recognize, he said. Settlement is expected soon.

Every Woman's Desire

Is For a Beautiful Home

SHE dreams this dream from the time she gets her first doll and begins making doll clothes and cardboard furniture. If she marries the right kind of man her dream will be realized.

A beautiful home does not mean a mansion nor a palace—five small rooms in an apartment house can be made as beautiful a home as a brownstone front.

If the man and woman are really in love with each other they will prefer a beautiful home to any and all other pleasures. They will work to save and make their home refined and beautiful, and when they succeed they will find more real pleasure at home than anywhere else.

If your home is not the kind you have dreamed about, it is because you have not invested your savings in the home, but have squandered them in search of pleasure. One piece of new furniture a month will soon make your dream come true.

DESTITUTE, ALONE, CLINGS TO HOUSE

She's one of Many Cared For by Catholic Women's League.

"She is an elderly woman who should have some one with her all the time to look after her. She has practically nothing but the tiny house in which she lives, but it is home to her, and she cannot be persuaded to give it up and go to Mount Hope, where everything would be done for her comfort and welfare."

In the foregoing words, Mrs. Joseph Leech, president, presented to the women's department of The Advertiser Tuesday afternoon an arresting word picture of one of the typical cases looked after by the Catholic Women's League, in connection with social welfare activities, during the past summer. Though educational work has been suspended during the holiday season and plans for resuming this will be made at the first meeting after vacation, next Sunday afternoon in the Catholic Club, the need of personal service to the needy, strangers and friendless has gone on quietly and unremittently all through the hot days.

"Need and loneliness and suffering do not take holidays," said Mrs. Leech, when comment was made on the summer achievements. "and unfortunately the case of this elderly woman is not an isolated one. Most of the needy with whom we have been dealing recently are the aged who are left alone and without service of income at a time when they are too decrepit or feeble to aid themselves."

"While the woman of whom I spoke is really a great anxiety to us, one can scarcely blame her for wanting to cling to her own roof-tree as long as she can, better off as she would be in an institution."

Apart from providing for the needy in a material sense, the league has been quietly and effectively filling its mission of extending big sister care to stranger girls in the city who are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and particularly those who have recently come from the old land. "Our experience has demonstrated to us the need of a boarding home for girls," said Mrs. Leech, where, in a homelike environment and recreational and educational facilities are offered, similar to those of the Y. W. C. A. and the Rosary Halls established in Toronto and other cities. One must expect to start anything of the kind in a small way."

Thousands Of Women Are Now Taking This Newer Form Of Iron

Worn-out Housewife Tells How She Quickly Regained Her Health and Strength.

"Only a short two weeks ago I was tired, nervous and worn-out from the iron I was taking. I was so weak and nervous that I could not keep up another day. A short two weeks' treatment of the newer form of iron has given me a marvelous strength and energy. Now I can do my whole house without help, and do not have to sit at home in the evening 'all-in' sick and nervous."

The above is a typical hypochondriacal story says Dr. Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital and now of the Westchester County Hospital. "You cannot be well and strong and energetic unless your blood is rich in iron. It is your red blood that enables you to resist and to do all the work that your vital organs and as a result you may have pains in your heart or kidneys, indigestion, headache, and feel all 'run-down' and tired out."

HADASSAH HEAD NOW RECOVERING

Local Secretary Brings Cheerful News of Canadian President—London Work Resuming.

The serious and prolonged illness of Mrs. A. J. Freeman of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Hadassah Chapter, has been a matter of deep concern and sincere regret to the members of the London Hadassah. Mrs. Freeman was unable to attend her home in the spring, owing to illness, and the announcement has come that she has been suffering from diabetes and severe heart trouble. Mrs. I. Goldstick, secretary of the local chapter, who has been in touch with her, brings the good news, however, that there has been a decided improvement, and that she is carrying on at least some of the duties of the national presidency to which she was re-elected in July. Mr. Goldstick, who was one of the delegates to the Zionist convention, attending also sessions of the Hadassah, reports that the chapter throughout Canada is continuing its earnest efforts this year on behalf of the upbuilding of Palestine. "The outstanding feature of the convention," he told The Advertiser, Tuesday, "was the presence of the executive of the Zionists of the world, Nahum Sokolov, who brought the message, new at that time, of the United States Congress had ratified the British mandate with regard to Palestine, a step since taken by the League of Nations. A unique feature of the convention was the very general representation. There was scarcely a chapter of any size throughout Canada but had at least one delegate there."

The local Hadassah Chapter executive is planning to pick up the threads dropped for the summer months in the course of a few days. The executive will be called together by the president, Mrs. Fishbein, and plans made to bring a speaker for the opening general meeting.

Mrs. Jared Vining and Mrs. H. K. Miller entertained last week at a delightful bridge and tea, given at the Bungalow Tea House, Springbank, in honor of Miss Helen Burns of New York, and Mrs. Charles Williams of Timmins. Four tables of bridge were in play, the prize going to Mrs. Williams.

After an absence of some years from the city, Mrs. R. W. Puddicombe will take up her residence here for the immediate future. She has leased the apartment in Hayman Court which Col. Eric and Mrs. Reid have been occupying. Mrs. Puddicombe has been spending the summer in Goderich.

Through the hospitality of her hostess, Mrs. Donald McLean, several friends interested in her work enjoyed an hour's visit with her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Thompson, on Tuesday forenoon, previous to her leaving for the East. Among these were Mrs. Charles Leonard, Miss Christie, Miss F. McCall, Miss L. M. Fraser and Dr. Jameson.

Westminster Hospital Staff Doctor Married To Charming London Girl

A pretty autumn wedding took place Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, when Ora Good, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baker White, was married to Dr. David Harvey Nichol of Westminster Hospital, son of Mrs. Nett of Owen Sound.

The service took place at the home of the bride's parents, the Ridgeway. The rooms were effectively decorated with an abundance of pink and white asters, arranged in bowls. Rev. Mr. Dethius of Kitchener, an old friend of the family, performed the ceremony.

The young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in her graceful wedding gown of white kitten's ear crepe, falling in simple lines and caught with a girlede of pearls. A court train lined with pale pink chamois was felt from the shoulders, where it was fastened with pearl ornaments. Her veil was of tulle, with a band of pearls and orange blossoms, and was caught at the back with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a shower of Ophelia roses.

Miss Marjorie White was her sister's bridesmaid, gowned in peach pink canton crepe, with panels and insets of wool lace, and she carried Columbia roses and mauve sweet peas. Silver slippers completed her costume. Dr. Sidney Horne of Westminster Hospital was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the guests numbering 75. Mrs. White, mother of the bride, wore a gown of taupe canton crepe, with a corsage of roses, and Mrs. Nichol, mother of the groom, was gowned in black charmeuse, and her corsage was of mauve sweet peas.

A buffet supper was served from a table decked with Sunset roses and asters.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichol left by motor on a honeymoon, the bride traveling in a gown of castor brown kitten's ear faille, a brown turban, and a smart cape to match. Upon their return they will reside in London.

Miss Elsie Hardy, sister of the bride, who was becomingly attired in a dress of henna canton crepe with a hat to match. Mr. Chester Millman acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. The gift of the groom to the bride was a rope of pearls, to the bridesmaid an envelope mesh bag and to the best man a pearl tie-pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Teams left, amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Niagara Falls, Toronto and Ottawa. On their return they will reside on Woodman avenue.

A pretty wedding took place Saturday, Sept. 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Guilds, Maple Grove Farm, Guilds, Ont., when their only daughter, Helen Adele, was married to Glen T. Mitton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Mitton of London.

The ceremony, which was performed on the porch, banked with flowers, palms and ferns, was performed by Rev. Dr. Warner, late principal of Alma College, St. Thomas, assisted by Rev. C. W. Briston of London, a former pastor.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in an ivory silk crepe meteor gown, with a veil and orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played in October.

COOPER—HOLLANDS.

SARNIA, Sept. 5.—The wedding was solemnized at St. John's rectory this evening of Laura Genevieve Hollands, daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. W. H. Hollands of Sarnia, and George W. Cooper, also of this city. The Rev. F. G. Newton officiated. The bride, who was unattended, wore a dress of black canton crepe and a black velvet hat trimmed with silver. The contracting parties were very popular young people of the city.

Average life of a $5 bill is ten months. Then they must all be made in October.

RESURRECTION ROCK

by Edwin Palmer

"It is so nice of you to come here, Miss Ethel. Mrs. Cullen will be so pleased when she hears of it." Mrs. Wain always spoke as though Agnes was certain to return. "I was wondering yesterday if this might mean you were soon to arrive."

"This" was a letter which the housekeeper was offering—a square, firm, well-filled envelope with British stamps and with the British strip, "Opened by the Censor." The address was written in the bold, vigorous handwriting, which Ethel observed with a start.

The letter was from Barney's friend of the Canadian battalion who had written Barney of her father's attempt to speak to him, who had told Barney to hasten to Resurrection Rock, and had foretold that he would find someone named Barney and another person named Carew there. The letter read:

"My Dear Ethel Carew: 'I am addressing you without the usual prefix of Miss or Mrs., because I do not know which to use. I am writing you to report the substance of a communication meant for you, and which was received from a person who is dead.'

"The afternoon, when sitting with Mrs. Brand, Philip Carew once more was present and wished to speak. Perhaps because it was earlier in the sitting and the medium was not tired, he received several perfectly clear and coherent messages. What I had done in regard to Barney Loutrelle was wrong. When I asked how wrong, I received the reply, 'Not so much wrong as incomplete.'

"I then asked what I should do to make it complete, and I got the reply: 'It is no use, really, at all. Earlier it seemed so, but not now. It is no use without Quinlan.'

"When I asked for Quinlan's whole name and address, and who she was, I got the reply, somewhat impatiently, 'James, of course, James Quinlan, Chicago.' And he said that 'she' was Ethel Carew, and requested me to write her at once all about it. I will quote this verbatim, since, though it was meaningless to me, it was clearly most important:

"See Quinlan and tell him not only I, but Robert, who is here beside me, says to do it. That is the only way. And he will be happy when it is over. It must be done. Tell him the cost there is nothing.' Very sincerely, 'HUSTON ADLEY.'

CHAPTER X.
BENNET CULLEN, eldest son of Lucas Cullen, Junior, was a hearty young man who considered that whenever he had something particularly difficult to do with anybody, it always made matters easier to give that person a good dinner; and in his cousin 'Ethel' he found he had an obstinate proposition.

The big room in the Blackstone was clearing as groups departed for the opera; the nearest tables all were deserted. Bennet paid his check and lit a cigarette; he leaned easily upon the table.

"Do you know anyone named Quinlan?" she asked.

"Old Jim Quinlan? Surely. Father used to have him about the south side yards for old times' sake."

"Why?"

"He was with grandfather years ago."

"Oh. Was there someone connected with him named Robert?" Ethel asked.

"Bob Quinlan? He was his grandfather."

"Was?" Ethel repeated. "He's dead?"

"Shot down in flames near Cambrai, he was," Bennet said. "He got into aviation as observer and machine gunner. Old Jim—I hear he went sort of nutty not long afterward. It seemed that Bob was all he had left. Most of his family in disasters, some one said; then the war took Bob."

"How long ago was he associated with grandfather?" Ethel returned.

"Where was it?"

"Why, back in the old pine days," Bennet replied impatiently. "Old Jim was head sawyer of one of grandfather's mills. Lost his fingers then; he only half his fingers on his right hand. Why?"

"I came back here because—"

Ethel began, looking steadily at her cousin. "The trouble I had with grandfather at St. Florentin, Ben," she made another start, "was over a man whom Kinchele killed on Resurrection Rock."

"Killed a man?" her cousin was repeating in a whisper, looking about swiftly and then bending further across the table.

"You mean—murdered him?"

"Oh, Ben, I don't know; but I'm afraid so."

"What—what the devil?" Bennet scolded. He glanced about and shifted his feet as though to rise.

"Give me all of this," he commanded. "Straight."

"So she told him quietly and without passion, as 'straight' as she could."

"You say you accused grandfather?" he assailed her hotly, when she had finished, "of killing this Loutrelle picking up yours?"

"That's true, I said I was mistaken. It wasn't Barney; it was said to her in pitying disgust. 'You little fool!'

She sat back, quite white and quivering, under the constraint of controlling herself against Bennet's anger.

Before writing to Barney that night, Ethel reread the letter from Huston Adley. Her immediate course of action had become quite plain to her; yet she reconsidered thoughtfully before recording her purpose.

"My dear Mr. Loutrelle," she addressed Barney, "last night I had a remarkable experience—" and she detailed how she had confirmed, through her cousin, the existence of James Quinlan and Robert, and the history of Quinlan's associations with her grandfather, and his recent disappearance.

"Before I met you and you told me of your experience with the Philip Carew who wished to speak with you, and before this letter about my father came to me, I might have visited a medium without thinking so much about what I was doing."

"I want to be very sure that, when I try, it will be through some fitting person—that nothing about my approach to him will degrade him or lead me into danger of offending or losing or ever misunderstanding him. For that reason, I would be very glad if you could write me whatever you think will help me; you know how little I know about these matters; and I do not know whom to approach here. It would be far better for me if you could happen to be here. Oh, I am not asking that. But if you find we've nothing more to gain by remaining near the Rock, come down here and I'll wait for you. Your friend, 'ETHEL CAREW'."

She was a little quiver as she undressed and made ready for bed. It was difficult, when living among the articles chosen and arranged by Agnes, and so expressive of her tireless vitality, to believe that she could have been completely obliterated.

There was a large flat package from London, tied with cord and stamped with English postage; the censor had

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS.

HELLO, HELEN, THOUGHT I'D COME OVER AND SEE HOW YOU WERE FEELING AFTER OUR VACATION!

OH HELLO, DORIS, COME RIGHT IN! I DON'T THINK I'LL EVER GET QUITE RESTED UP AGAIN!

A VACATION LIKE THAT DOESN'T MEAN MUCH TO THE GIRL SIDE OF THE FAMILY—SHE HAS JUST ABOUT AS MUCH TO DO AS IF SHE WAS HOME!

YOU'RE RIGHT, DORIS—ALL I DID WAS COOK AND WASH DISHES!

I'LL CALL THAT VACATION A FLIVVER!

HAVE HIM TELL WILBUR THAT I DON'T FEEL LIKE COOKING DINNER EITHER!

I'LL CALL HIM RIGHT UP AND TELL HIM THAT WE ALL THREE WILL BE DOWN!

HELLO TOM? SAY, OLIVA, DORIS, DANNY AND MYSELF ARE COMING DOWN AND HAVE DINNER WITH YOU AND WILBUR THIS EVENING—

BUT SAY, I DON'T—

WE'RE COMING! THAT'S ALL—GOOD BYE!

opened it, sealed it again and sent it on. The paper bore the legend, "Photographs."

She found three photographs, all identical, of a group of young men in uniform, who appeared to be officers of the Canadian and of the American armies. The faces were all strange to Ethel, until, with a start which stopped the beat of her heart, she recognized train from Quesnel for Chicago—Lucas Cullen, Senior, and his wife. And upon the day of their arrival, the first news confirming the assumption of Agnes's death reached the city.

It came to Lucas Cullen, Junior, in a communication not dissimilar to that letter which had awaited Ethel at Scott street; but Lucas's letter, instead of being from an unknown person, was from an English peer of international reputation for his work in sciences. He wrote to report a message which he had received from the other world, which stated that "Agnes Cullen," having become cognizant, in the next existence, that uncertainty as to her death was causing confusion in this world, wished it known positively that she was dead.

CHAPTER XI.
LUCAS CULLEN, Senior, received information of this extraordinary bit of intelligence soon after his arrival at his son's home.

"What are you considering doing?" his son inquired.

Lucas laughed as he liked to laugh when planning a shrewd and clever coup. "Hale Sir Horace Clebourne into court, of course, to swear for us that Oliver's wife is dead! Then when we have our English ruling, we'll carry it into our courts on the verity—is that a good, legal-sounding word, Luke?"

"I think it will do," Luke said.

"On the verity of the death of our dear Agnes, as already presumed by the court—but not proved. So we prove it; witness, Agnes herself; testimony taken and sworn to by Sir Horace Clebourne, Doctor of Science, Baronet and the rest, sworn to by the best brains of England. We'll get 'em. I know it's new, son—it's new; but the old man never had to wait for someone else to show how to do a thing."

HER UNCLE LUCAS CALLED EARLY THE NEXT MORNING.

Barney Loutrelle. In each of the prints his identity was unmistakable.

Her uncle Lucas called early the next morning to ask what she was doing about her business matters. When she said that she had failed to obtain help, he told her he had decided to "protect" her interests in the projects under way.

That afternoon she received a letter from Barney, in which he reported that upon his return to the Rock he had found affairs just as she left them.

"I have seen no one from St. Florentin," Barney continued. "But I think that Kinchele has got out. I have found an Indian who saw a stranger about here three days ago, who, I think, is the fellow that slept in that shack opposite Rest Cabin, Miss Carew. From what I can make out from Ozibee, he was an old man who seemed a bit off his head from exposure, perhaps. Anyway, he seemed wholly purposeless and harmless, and I think we were wrong in connecting him up with our affair. I couldn't obtain any better description of him than he was tall and gray-haired, and wore a short mitten on his right hand, as the ends of his fingers were off."

This determined Ethel to telegraph Barney to come at once to Chicago. But before him, two others took the train from Quesnel for Chicago—Lucas Cullen, Senior, and his wife. And upon the day of their arrival, the first news confirming the assumption of Agnes's death reached the city.

It came to Lucas Cullen, Junior, in a communication not dissimilar to that letter which had awaited Ethel at Scott street; but Lucas's letter, instead of being from an unknown person, was from an English peer of international reputation for his work in sciences. Radio Radiations

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Twenty million radio receiving sets will be in operation in the United States within five years, and a proportionally large number in Canada.

That is the startling prediction made here by Lee De Forest, inventor of the vacuum tube.

By 1927, De Forest adds, radio will be developed so that any person will be able to operate it with ease, and it will be cheap enough to be in the home of every family in the country.

Broadcasting will make itself as indispensable as the wire telephone. De Forest believes. Weather forecasts and market reports for the farmer, health and beauty talks, public speeches, concerts and many other forms of entertainment will be sent out in a much more centralized basis than prevails today.

RADIO IN ENGLAND.

In England, the postoffice department has supreme control over radio communication. Until last September the manufacture, sale or possession of radio apparatus was restricted by the postoffice authorities under the defence of the realm act. Now, with the lapse of this act, all that is required is a license to operate a transmission or receiving set.

RUPTURE KILLS 8,000 ANNUALLY

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificates being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

Fall Coats Shown

A FEW of the very advance models of fall coats are beginning to appear. They show straight full lines with interesting sleeves that are a little narrower than they were last season.

Heavy pile fabrics are expected to be most in demand and linings are of brilliant brocades and satins.

Brown in rich bronze shades is very good and is expected to be the most fashionable color for fall. Embroideries are used for trimming, but not so much as plain stitching or various tailored trimmings of the material itself.

Western Municipal Representatives Demand Same Rights As Provincial Delegates.

CALGARY MAYOR SPEAKS

Protests Government Plan To Restrict Civic Members To Speaking.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—(By Canadian Press).—The question of admission, with full voting and deliberative powers, of the representatives of municipalities, labor and soldier organizations and similar representations arose in the very early stages of this afternoon of the conference between the federal and provincial authorities on unemployment.

The invitations had been extended only to representatives of the nine provinces through their premiers, and all except Prince Edward Island had sent government officials to the conference. When the prime minister, Right Hon. Mackenzie King, opened the conference he called attention to the fact that today's proceedings had been intended to be restricted to the representatives of the various governments.

Hon. James Murdock, minister of labor, and chairman of the conference, also stressed this point and asked the representatives of municipalities and other bodies to withdraw until tomorrow morning, when, after organization, they would be given an opportunity of presenting their views.

Calgary Mayor Protests.

Mayor Adams of Calgary protested and urged that full powers of representation be given to municipalities and other bodies. The outside delegations left the room to return for tomorrow's meeting. Subsequently it was decided to admit these delegates to the meetings and to the discussions, but without voting power. This decision was reached after considerable discussion.

The understanding in calling the conference, it was claimed, was that only the federal and provincial governments would participate in the conference, and the latter would secure the views of the municipal and other organizations and be able to represent them. However, many Western municipalities, instead of falling in with this view and presenting their ideas to the provincial governments, had sent delegations to attend the conference without direct invitations.

When the question of admitting the municipalities was settled the conference heard somewhat optimistic reports on unemployment prospects from all provinces of the Dominion. With the exception of the Ontario speaker and one of the Nova Scotia delegates, all declared that employment conditions in their provinces at present were normal or better.

Man in Stolen Car Runs Into Constable's Machine.

Special to London Advertiser.
OWEN SOUND, Sept. 5.—A Chevrolet car was stolen last night, and the thief headed south toward Toronto. At Chatsworth he literally ran into the high constable for Grey, Major Pembroke, who was returning from a fire investigation. The two cars crashed and the driver of the stolen car jumped clear and ran across the fields. The stolen car was brought back to Owen Sound. This morning Roy Cross was arrested, charged with the theft, and will appear before Magistrate Cressor tomorrow.

better. These two speakers warned that the conference must prepare for emergencies this winter before adjourning.

Manitoba's delegation sounded a direct warning to unemployed single, physically fit men, that they would receive no relief during this winter. Those not physically fit and the married men might need assistance, but fit single men would get none.

The conference continues at 10 o'clock in the morning when the municipal delegates will be present with their status definitely established.

The war-time tendency toward centralization in federal and provincial questions was dealt with by Premier King. One of the purposes of this gathering should be to define what were federal and what provincial matters affecting unemployment. An instance of the centralization during the war was found in the Canada wheat board where the federal government during the war had taken power to control wheat marketing. Last year it had been found there was no power to renew such control under federal power alone.

The government had also taken steps to meet unemployment crisis in the past which were not actually federal matters.

Cites National Debt.

The premier advised the delegates to keep in mind the increase in the national debt during the war. This had increased more than the provincial debts because the federal government had shouldered some burdens which were more properly matters for the provinces. Some of these burdens were continuing and they were a serious matter for the government to face. The prime minister also dealt with the two methods of progress in individual or collective effort. Progress through self-reliance was better than through depending on central government or other action. During the war the public mind had come to accept many things as part of the duty of the federal government which had previously not been thought such. Canada must get back to a basis of self-reliance on the part of both individuals, municipalities and provincial governments if she was to progress as she should.

FARMER'S WIFE REGAINS HEALTH

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fork River, Manitoba.—"I saw in the newspapers where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing so much good to women, and as I needed something I began to take it. I used to be very sick but I am not now. I live on a farm in the homestead district and we have to do all our own work. I tell all the women I see what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for me. I think it saves me from going to a doctor and is the best medicine women can take."—Mrs. WM. COULTAS, Fork River, Manitoba.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for the ailments peculiar to women. It is prepared from medicinal plants, with care and accuracy. It can be taken by women of any age. Such symptoms as pains and irregularities, all those feelings, backache, headache, hot flashes, nervousness, with a general run-down condition, indicate some form of female trouble.
