POETRY.

Almsgiving.

Upon the water cast thy bread,
And after many days,
It will return again to thee,
In God's mysterious ways.
Hand in hand, and side by side,
The wheat grows with the tares,
And so amidst life's swirling dust,
Some angel unawares.

Upon the water cast thy bread,
Be it word or deed,
It will return a thing to bless,
In some sad hour of need.
Be the giving e'er so small,
E'en to the widow's mite,
Send it forth with hope and trust,
The precious in his sight.

Upon the waters cast thy bread,
To those who stand or fall
Beneath some dark and fatal stain,
His love is over all.
And thou shalt harvest golden sheaves,
From every seed that's sown
And scattered on the yielding earth,
Or mid the rocks and stone.

Upon the waters cast thy bread,
And God shall measure mete,
Full unto the overflowing,
Perfect and complete.
If only given, in touch or look,
Hath He not said to thee:
"It shall return--'tis not forgot,
Since it were done for me."

SELECT STORY.

The Hero of Beaver Head.

BY ALVA MILTON KERR.

CHAPTER III--Continued.

He started to get the boat at the head and save the man; then he stood still with his fists clenched, and watched the boat come down the bay. No one seemed to notice it, and outwardly it drifted, borne on the long, rolling swells. It passed by the bay, and he waved and strained in the conflicting currents of feeling that beset him. Should he save him? He saved him but yesterday! Lo his reward! But was not he who might save a life and would not, almost as guilty as he who took one? Something like this passed through his mind, but he could not reason; his thoughts seemed scattered and confused by his anger.

The boat drifted through the mouth of the bay; there the unbroken wind quickened the swells, and it passed into the open deep. Thousands of miles of water spread away before it, and without food or oars the unconscious father went outward into the glimmering waste.

At last the boat dwindled to a speck and died in the blue gulf, and a great white cloud shrouded upon it, like the marble covering to a grave. At that poignant sense of separation fell upon the boy, the first sharp throes of anguish as the bond that nature had placed between them parted. He stood appalled at the decaying, raving, drowning, rose before him, and with a cry of terror, he broke through the hate and rage that bound him, and ran towards the head.

The boat was lying there with prow upon the yellow sand. He pushed it out and leaped in and spread out the oars, those trusty water-wings that were to move him upon the wildest, strangest journey of his life. He swept her out upon the swells. Thank fortune his arms and chest were well nigh as thickly muscled as a man's! His poor, halting legs would not be needed in this bitter race! He thought of his mother and looked up at Beaver head. Carl was standing upon its verge.

"Tell mother that father has drifted out to sea, and that I'm going after him!" shouted Paul. "Oh, Carl, tell her I'll bring him back to her if I live--if I live!" and he laid the boat about on the water, and sent her out with all his strength.

"Tell mother I let her go!" Tell her I couldn't wait to see her! O Carl, he went to her wife and father never came back--no more!" Then the voice failed; the boy upon the cliff heard it no longer, and turned and ran toward the house, and Paul went outward on the swells.

He sat facing the great furrowed front of the head as he pulled. Would he ever see it again? All that he loved was up there save the poor father tossing toward the sunset. He saw figures running to and fro upon the height; his mother was among them! A choking lump rose into his throat, but he never once slackened his desperate stroke. Outward he went, outward, outward, as if life and hope lay only in the dangerous central sea. The head began to sink; slowly it went down, but his eyes never left it for a moment. Soon its top alone was visible, a bluish spot with moving specks upon it. Then slowly that, too, went down, and reappeared, and sank again, and he was alone upon the wide, mysterious sea.

He closed his eyes, his breath coming hard with the struggle, and a great wretchedness fell upon him as the land with all it held, was parted utterly from him. But he did not pause; outward, outward he went, crying in his heart to God for time, for daylight, in which to save the one he had lost.

Suddenly he leaped up and looked narrowly across the vast expanse. Nothing was there save the ever-changing belts of light and shade as the floccid clouds blew over, and with a pitiless cry he sprang to the oars and drove the heavy boat onward. Oh, if he could but reach his father ere the sun ceased to brighten distant objects on the water!

He pulled with every muscle strained well nigh to breaking. At last he felt himself turn sick with labor, and fell upon his knees and dashed his face and head with water. He was dripping with sweat and his heart was fluttering from great violent action. He thrust his hot arms in the water to the shoulders as he hung over the side of the boat, and his dizziness passed. Then he leaped up again and pulled feverishly forward. The first great surging sense of crime and pollution never lifted itself from his spirit for a moment. A deadly exhaustion began to creep upon him, but he could not rest; the boat kept leaping outward, and over all the face of the deep there was no sound save the oars working in the locks, his laboring breath, and the low splash and gurgle of the water under the advancing prow.

At last the sun began to go down, and his eyes again across the wastes. But nothing was visible, and he sank down, ill with agony and exhaustion. The sky seemed to turn round above him, and the ocean seemed to shift from side to side. He was a pitiable picture as he sat there, clutching the boat in his dizziness. His hat was gone, one arm was bare to the shoulder where his shirt had been torn away in his struggle with his father, his face was streaked with blood and his hair hung about his throbbing temples in sweat-dampened strands. His tongue was like dust in his mouth, and his throat seemed parching. Oh! for a cup of water from the spring on Beaver head! But what right had he to ask for water? He, a murderer, searching for innocents! He caught the oars and sent the little craft desperately onward. Presently he stood up and looked abroad again. Half the sun was in his sea, and a great road of gold ran from his boat into the very heart of it. Suddenly, as he gazed, a moving dot entered the golden way, and began drifting into the sun. A piercing cry of joy leaped from the boy's lips. He seized the oars and the boat flew onward. He was far to the south of his father, and miles and miles of water lay between them; but that encumbrance was more refreshing than days of rest and bankers of wine. Oh! if God would but stay the sunset, would but keep the day alive another hour! But even while he prayed the light began to wane, shadows rose out of the sea and huddled together here and there; the filmy runners of the night came over the ocean from the east, the westward moving darkness rolled slowly over him, and he was alone with the stars upon the wide, mysterious main.

Crises of despair broke from his lips at last, a sickening faintness fell upon him, and his swollen hand dropped limp from the oars. Heaven was against him! He was a murderer! A murderer alone with his heart upon the taunting, spectral deep.

Slowly the night wore on, every moment a thorn pressed deep into his heart by remorse and fear. And what would the gray dawn bring? Would it bring his innocents back to him? or only the morning's flare upon the empty, beautiful waste? At last his head began to fall from side to side; at times he seemed pitching from the boat, and ere long the stars looked down pityingly into his upturned face, as, asleep in the stern, with one swollen hand upon the helm and the other trailing over the side of the boat, he went plunging onward into mystery and gloom.

CHAPTER IV.

Brave Eric Iverson and a comrade had been absent six days upon the sea, searching for the lost man and his son, and the people of Redwood town began to wonder if they, too, had not gone down to rise no more. But the two men had taken water and provisions with them, and many who knew of Eric's tender heart said it would be long ere they returned could he bring no tidings to the sorrowing woman and her children up there on the frowning head. No storm had come; only a soft and steady wind rolling the shining swells forever onward. Day and night it blew, and incoming schooners had to make long tacks to right and left that they might enter the little harbor.

Over the but upon the cliff the hours of dread and sharp expectancy had passed, and now the gloom that comes of settled, certain death seemed creeping on. The mother, torn with grief and apprehension through the first days, could do nothing. She seemed to live day and night there at the edge of the precipice, with her hungry eyes searching the wide, mocking reaches of the sea.

But now she began to work and wash again, moving about much like one in a sad dream. Little Gabe, though her eyes would sometimes fill with tears, played with Lannie and Gabe under the trees, happily forgetful of the dark shadow of sorrow that lay upon the place. But Carl and Jimmy felt the cloud of sadness about them, and much of the time were silent. The elder boy began helping his mother as Paul had done, and Jimmy kept the children from the precipice and watched the azure circle of the horizon for Eric's sail. It seemed to the poor mother that the rescuers would never return, and the blighted look grew in her face, and she lifted them hour by hour to the wide world of water.

Other mothers, touched by pity, came to help the drunkard's broken family, bringing food and clothing, and as the time passed the village babbled with dark prophecies of shipwreck for Eric, and conjecture as to the total phases of this strange race for life upon the sea. The men at Eric's wharf where he had been foreman of the lumber loaders long looked many times each day towards the west, thinking of their absent leader, and wives and mothers standing at the gates or in the doorways of the cottages upon the heights above the bay thought often of the lonely family over on the head, and turned their eyes earnestly towards the far horizon line.

On the seventh day the wind shifted and lulled, and just before sunset the moon came warmly down the path and stood looking out upon the shining flood. Her heart seemed numb with longing. When would she wake from this dreadful dream?

The children were playing down on the sand below, and suddenly Carl gave a shout of joy; the mother looked up, and there, seeming not three miles away, was Eric's boat! She gasped, trembling from head to foot. Yes, it was surely Eric's boat, battered and with sails patched and torn. Breathlessly she hurried down and came among the children, where, whispering and clinging to each other's hands, they waited at the water's edge.

Just when the sun was sinking Eric's yacht swept through the mouth of the little bay. The children held their breath, and the mother strained her pale face outward. She did not see the men saving their hats up at the wharves nor the wives and mothers watching from the yards and doorways about the bay. The boat was all there? That was Eric's face, and there was his brave companion; what other object was that lying on a litter in the bow? The woman shook as with an ague, but even while she trembled and questioned the boat rounded on the glassy field and swept up to the landing by the head, and Eric, battered and worn, leaped out and made it fast. But the woman did not see him; she was clinging to the side of the boat and straining her eyes down upon that muffled figure in the bow. Men came running from the bluff, and the platform was gongly lifted out, and there looking like death itself, lay Trave Armor, clothed in his rags and the dying light of the day.

The woman threw herself upon her knees beside him and called him piteously; the children crowded forward with frightened whispers, and the men stood about with averted faces. In a moment, in answer to her calling, Armor's eyes opened weakly; then with a kind of cry, he tried to lift himself toward her, but was all too weak.

"Oh, Trave," moaned the woman, "where is Paul? Where did you leave him?"

"He was lost, Lucy! He was lost! He saved me, but he--was--lost!"

The woman stared at him a moment blankly, then with a cry of desolation she hid her face upon the sick man's breast and wept.

"But, After all, What Can I Do?"

Many a Christian woman, earnest and true, will ask this question. May I suggest some of the answers which have come to my own mind, first reminding my readers that they need not neglect home's sacred ministries for any other? Take the time, rather, that has been given to things that were unnecessary, to superfluous sewing, calling, visiting, reading, resting, reverie, and that alone for this "Home-Missionary Work" of the W. C. T. U.

1. Dear sister in Jesus Christ, you can kneel before God and ask Him to show you what He would have you to do. You can also ask His daily blessing on the field, and on the workers there.

2. You can begin in your own home in the lullaby song, the twilight story, the family pledge, with "line upon line, and precept upon precept," to train your sons and your daughters to be total abstainers.

3. You can prepare the way for consistent precepts by a perfect example, abstaining scrupulously yourself, not only from even social use of all wine and the beverage, but the medicinal use and caloric use of intoxicating drinks; and you can study to prepare food that shall be so wholesome that it will not "lie like lead" upon the stomach which often craves a drink to "wash down" an ill-cooked meal.

4. You can study to make your own home so attractive, by reason of its cleanliness, its simple yet attractive adornings, its books, music, and games, and above all by its sweet, Christian atmosphere, that its attractions for your sons will not be outmatched by those of the saloons.

5. You can organize your Sunday-school class into a temperance society, getting each member to sign the pledge, and by prayer and personal influence securing the conversion of each; for, after all, as a reformed man said, with shaking voice and tearful eyes, "If I'm to stand, ladies, it's got to be the Lord behind the pledge!"

6. You can personally pray for and appeal to any intemperate man of your own acquaintance; visit the homes of inebriates to lead them "the helping hand" if needed, to pray with and for them, and to use your influence for their restoration to manhood.

7. You can go to the prison in your vicinity, visit the inmates, talk with them of Christ, pray with them, leave little books and papers full of blessed lessons, and get them to sign the pledge.

8. You can circulate our temperance papers and publications. A dollar will secure you a good many papers and tracts.

9. You can go quietly, with the loving spirit of Christ in your heart, and gentle words on your lips, to the home of the saloon-keeper, and talk with his wife and family, and put some temperance publications in their hands.

10. You can, with one or two lady friends, go to any saloon in your neighborhood, and talk and pray with its keeper, and those who frequent the bar, taking your pledge-book, and seeking signatures.

11. But you can never do these things at all, in any effective and true sense, until your own heart is full of Christ's love and consecrated to his service, and unless your practical good Samaritan help goes hand in hand with your prayer and faith.

But, per contra, if you begin this day simply and honestly to do any of these things, or any other true womanly thing in this cause which your own heart suggests, how you will "grow in grace!" How your own deepest nature will be lighted up by God's smile. How sweetly you will learn what Christ can become to the soul that goes gently and lovingly upon his errands!

Dear Christian sister, you who read these lines, you are one of the "living epistles" by which the critical age is deciding how it will answer the question, "What think you of Christ?" You are a leaf out of the world's Bible. It "wants facts." In God's name, live it the shining fact of your loving, helpful life "hid with Christ in God."

—Frances E. Willard.

Stop and Think.

Do young men, who are in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors ever stop to think what such a practice is doing for them? It not only threatens to destroy health and manhood, but it shuts them out from better positions in the employment of those who conduct the business of the country. No drinking man can secure a position as teacher in a college; as bank cashier; as superintendent of any railroad; as ticket agent in any important city in the country. In fact there is scarcely any place of trust that will in these days, be entrusted to a drinking man. Not because a drinking man is more dishonest at heart than others, but because he cannot be trusted. He is more liable to neglect his business than is a sober man and the temptation to use his employer's money is much greater. Young men who are just starting out in life should remember this.

If you want knowledge you must toil for it; if food you must toil for it; if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work his life is a happy one.

The Use Of

which, while thorough in action, strengthen as well as stimulate the bowels and excretory organs.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels became regular and natural in their movements. I am now in excellent health."

—Win. H. DeLanoy, Dorset, Ont.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Burwellville, Va.

"For years I have been subject to constipation and nervous headaches, caused by derangement of the liver. After taking various remedies, I have become convinced that Ayer's Pills are the best. They have never failed to relieve my bilious attacks in a short time; and I am sure my system retains its tone longer after the use of these Pills, than has been the case with any other medicine I have tried."—H. B. Stodge, Weimar, Texas.

Effective

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease, by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, it is so easy to use, that I will send TWO HOTTEN PILLER, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on the disease, to any sufferer who will send me their EXPIRES and P. O. address.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 2, 1891.

Parliament Prorogued.

The Dominion parliament prorogued on Wednesday. The session has been a stormy one and a continual wrangle has kept the house in session several weeks longer than there can have been any absolute need for.

The Exhibition.

The Provincial exhibition was formally opened on Tuesday by the Lieut. Governor and will be closed to-day. The exhibition is said to have been a very successful one. The attendance has been large, the weather good, and the exhibits very creditable to our Province.

To Our Readers.

A glance at our subscription books shows that a large number of the subscribers to the ACADIAN are in arrears, some for several years. We have never before referred to the matter through our columns and would not do so now, did we not feel it to be necessary, as we very much dislike "dunning."

School Meeting.

The annual school meeting was held in the school-house on Monday evening, and as usual was poorly attended. It seems strange that the ratepayers should allow a dozen or so persons to transact the business of our public schools.

Ben Butler is a figure that belongs to the nation, and Americans from Atlantic to Pacific are interested in this unique American character. The New England Magazine has made an arrangement with the publishers of Ben Butler's autobiography, enabling it to publish extracts from the book in the October number, some months before the complete work will be given to the public.

Relics of the Acadians.

MR. W. C. ARCHIBALD MAKES AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

To its long list of attractions, in and about its precincts, Wolfville has added, within a few days, a veritable French-Acadian cellar, or at least, the site of an Acadian dwelling. Under a knoll of sand six feet high, it had lain since fire had destroyed it, and when the sand was removed many objects which had been buried for at least one hundred and thirty-seven years were brought to light.

Several years ago Mr. A. cut off this knoll about four feet, and while doing so came upon a lot of stone. As the soil was free from stone elsewhere upon which he worked he inferred they had been used in a foundation. Again this year Mr. A. cut down what was left of the knoll and used it to level up the piece of wet, low land that lies at the foot of his property near the street.

While doing this he made a discovery that led him to investigate fully the existence of the ruins of an Acadian dwelling on his farm. The whole foundation was dug up and when the search was ended he had the following articles, enough to make a good collection for any amateur museum.

Leading from the floor, which was prelaty of the cellar, was a stone drain in perfect condition. Slate and stone had been used and these were fitted so well it has retained its position and was clear through a great part of it. This drain led down to what was then a low, marshy ground and upon which the salt water would flow during the highest tides.

Naturally we ask how these relics were so well preserved. The building or hut that once stood here did not decay. Fire was the means of its destruction, perhaps of its preservation to us. The greater part of the cabin was undoubtedly burned. As the ruins lay, pieces of clay, the floor, half burned sticks and the property of the interior, of iron and stone, the whole thing must have been heated by sand, and kept undisturbed till now.

Thus we have the main facts of the interesting discovery. We have not needed that further evidence to show that the Acadians dwelt on the hillside where Wolfville now stands. They were found wherever there was marsh land, and here the humblest tenant of this humble cabin only ten feet square, had just beside his house a piece of marsh, and extending from Mr. Pich's line to the college grounds. On Mr. Pich's farm thirty years ago French apple trees were cut down. In a trench dug on Mr. Hamilton's property only two years ago a lot of stone was found and a well-made hammer.

In its November number the Compendium will publish a series of letters written by Gen. W. T. Merriman to one of his young daughters, between the years 1859 and 1865 and covering most of the important events of the war of secession. These letters present graphic pictures of a great soldier amid some of the stirring scenes in which he was a giant figure, and in them the patriotic spirit of the Federal general is seen to have been most attractively tempered by a strong affection for the Southern people.

TESTIMONIALS CHURCH'S Mineral Map OF NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX, February 10th, 1891. I have no hesitation in saying that Church's Mineral Map of Nova Scotia is also, as a General Geographical Map of the Province, much superior to any heretofore published.

Its delineations embody all, or nearly all recently completed or projected enterprises in the different counties, among which may be mentioned the Ship Railway in Cumberland, the O. & N. G. R. W. through Cumberland, Colchester and Pictou, the Cape Breton Railway, Terminal City in Guysborough, the Stewiack Valley & LaSalle, Hants Central, Cornwallis Valley, and Nova Scotia Central Railways, together with the location of many new post offices with their connecting roads, in remote settlements, and much other valuable information not to be found on any other map of the country.

EDWIN GILLES, JR., A. M., F. G. S., M. R. S. C., Deputy Commissioner and Inspector Works and Mines of Nova Scotia.

I have examined with more than ordinary care and interest, Church's Mineral Map of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton. I take great pleasure in saying it is a work of superior merit, and remarkably adapted to the wants alike of professional and business men, schools and families.

It is the first map of Nova Scotia that has been drawn and published from actual surveys made for the purpose, and as such is far superior in its delineations to all others which have preceded it. The publishers have had many years experience in the preparation and publication of the various county maps, and have thus gathered the data for this correct and beautiful production, for which they are deserving of substantial encouragement and appreciation from the people of the province.

H. CONNOR, Inspector of Schools for Halifax County, DARTMOUTH, July 7th 1891.

HALIFAX, 21st January, 1891. I have examined with care Mr. A. F. Church's Mineral Map of Nova Scotia. It gives me much pleasure to express my opinion of the merits of the publication, which may be done in few words, and in an unqualified way.

As a General Map of the Province, it appears to be superior to any heretofore published, and in addition to this, it presents to the eye, in a readily accessible, convenient and graphic form, a large amount of accurate information regarding the resources and distribution of the various minerals of the province, which in itself is so beautifully furnished.

To every one directly interested in the development of our mineral wealth, this map must be simply indispensable. It will also be highly appreciated by teachers. Mr. Gilpin's theory, printed in bold type on the face of the map, gives the most terse, accurate, and business-like exposition of our Economic Mineralogy that has ever been presented to the public.

It is the most modern and most correct Map of the Province yet published, and in addition to other valuable features it shows by variously colored marks the location of about twenty of our most important minerals.

The distribution of all our minerals of economic importance is thus conspicuously shown so as to take them in at a glance over the map.

A. H. MACKAY, Principal Halifax Co. Academy.

[From Rev. BROTHER JOSEPH, Director Christian Brothers, Principal LaSalle Academy, Feb. 3rd, 1891.]

My Dear Sir: I have given your Mineral Map of Nova Scotia a critical examination, and I assure you, it gives me great pleasure to say that it is one of the best maps I have ever examined. It is exceedingly useful in the study of mineralogy of Nova Scotia enabling the pupil of a class to thoroughly conversant with the localities in which the various metals, both precious and useful, are to be found.

It should be in every School of the Province. Yours respectfully, BROTHER JOSEPH.

DR. ALLISON, Superintendent of Education for the Province of Nova Scotia, says in the Journal of Education, "Church's Mineral Map of Nova Scotia, recently put on sale, is worthy to come into considerable use. Its special character will tend to popularize it in many parts of the Province, while it fully answers the purpose of a general map."

BOARD OF SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS, HALIFAX. A. F. CHURCH, Esq.

Dear Sir:—Your letter in re your Mineral Map of Nova Scotia, was read at this Board last evening, and the sample was examined.

The Commissioners have agreed to take six copies for departments of the Principal Schools. R. J. WILSON, Secretary. We are pleased to notice the publication by A. F. Church, of a new map of Nova Scotia. It is, we think, the most accurate yet, and makes a specialty of indicating where valuable minerals are located by about twenty different conspicuously colored or shaded marks. It is therefore well named, "Church's Mineral Map of Nova Scotia." It is especially interesting in the school room. The Educational Review, January, 1891.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 2, 1891.

Local and Provincial.

The schr. Harold Borden arrived on Saturday last from Sydney, with a cargo of coal for Mr W. J. Higgins.

We would direct attention to the fall-time-table of the W. & A. R. which appears in another column. The fast steamer express is to be withdrawn tomorrow.

The new W. & A. railway station at Annapolis will have a frontage of 112 feet. A large gang of carpenters are engaged in the construction of the building, and rapid progress is being made.

Lost, between Avonport and Wolfville, a small pocket diary; also in the village a pearl cuff button with gold band. The finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving one or both at this office.

Mr Edwin Rand, of British Columbia, is sick with typhoid fever at the residence of his brother Evered Rand, of Canard. The announcement will cause sincere regret to a very large circle of friends in this county.

Wringers selling low at Brown's. The review of volunteers in camp at Aldershot took place last Friday. The three battalions, 68th, 75th, and 93d, with the King's county Troop of Cavalry, were reviewed by Commandant Gordon, the usual large attendance of spectators being present.

Service next Sunday, October 4th, in St John's church, at 11 A. M., morning prayer, holy communion, and an address by the Rector on this Subject:—"The Divinity of Christ and the Christian Sacraments; or, the depreciation of the sacraments has led to the depreciation of Christ."

We would call the attention of fruit-growers and those contemplating engaging in that pleasant and profitable branch of husbandry to the canal of the "Earncliffe Gardens" in another column. The advantage of buying home-grown stock has already been pointed out in these columns and is well understood by fruit-growers.

On Saturday evening last, William Mortimer, of Grand Pre, had a valuable two-year-old colt after "Tamano," killed on the railway at Minor lane crossing, Grand Pre. Nine colts succeeded in getting off the dike as the train was coming into the station at Grand Pre, the dike gate being left open, and ran into the station grounds. As soon as the train became stationary, the driver was notified that the colts were ahead of the train and given back; but instead of this being done, the train was again started, resulting in the killing of the above mentioned colt. Two others which had succeeded in jumping three of the railway culverts, were brought to a standstill by falling into a narrow bridge just east of the tank and a half mile from the place where they got on the track. The train was then stopped and the two colts were recovered with much difficulty.

"Lightnings" Hay Knives, to cut hay in the mow at Brown's.

Berwick Cleanings. Kirkpatrick, who escaped from Constable Harris a few weeks ago, while under arrest under the Scott Act, was retaken on Thursday last in the Berwick Hotel by Constables Selfridge and Harris, and brought before Magistrate Thomas on Saturday and fined $100 and costs and lodged in Kentville jail the same evening in default of payment of a former fine of $50.

Rev. E. E. Daley is recovering slowly. Rev. Thomas Rogers kindly consented to preach for him last Sunday. Mr R's kindness and sermon were highly appreciated.

Mr and Mrs Adam Bowley have returned from their wedding tour. Messrs Parker and sons, and Almon Morse have gone to Halifax with large exhibits of fruit and vegetables, &c. R. Killam has his beautiful, jet black, two-year-old colt on exhibition.

Mrs Thomas Skinner, who has been spending the summer at Margareville has been on a visit to Mrs J. B. Chute, while on her way to Wolfville. Dr. Jacques was here over Sunday. H. M. Shaw, has gone to McGill to study medicine, instead of completing his course at Acadia.

Another interesting wedding is to take place in the Baptist church soon—"So 'tis said."

A new company, Messrs Chute and Sanford, expect to open a Boot and Shoe Store, in the new block, in a few weeks.

A Fashionable Wedding.

On Wednesday, the 23d inst. at the home of the bride's father, the marriage of Mr C. H. Borden, our popular boot and shoe merchant, and Miss Cora M., eldest daughter of Robert Macklin, Esq. of Gibson, N. B., was solemnized. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock, A. M., and was performed by Rev. B. N. Nobles. From a copy of the Frederickian gleaner of that date the following is clipped:—

The drawing room where the ceremony was solemnized, was beautifully decorated with ferns and white asters. The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, and was attired in a bridal robe of cream faille, Franchise silk, with court train, and trimming of embroidered chiffon. She wore a cream aigrette in her hair which was tastefully arranged, and carried an exquisite bouquet of cream roses and maiden hair fern and made a charming bride. Miss Gertrude Macklin, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and wore a lovely costume of pale violet silk beautifully trimmed with chiffon, embroidered with violets. She carried a bouquet of carnations and maiden hair fern. Mr Clinton Borden, of Somerville, Mass., supported the groom. After receiving the congratulations from all present, the guests sat down to breakfast in the dining room which was prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers, the mantel being banked with ferns and moss.

Immediately after breakfast the bride retired to change her dress for a very becoming traveling costume of grey cheviot and a handsome cape of navy blue broad cloth, with high collar of blue ostrich feathers, and wore a vasser hat trimmed with blue birds.

A number of friends went to the C. P. R. depot to see the happy couple away by the 11:20 train, amid showers of rice and hosts of good wishes. Mr and Mrs Borden will visit St John, Halifax and other places before returning to Wolfville, where Mr Borden has erected a handsome residence. The invited guests numbered over fifty, with few exceptions all were relatives of the contracting parties.

A long list of the presents is appended, among which we notice a number of very valuable and useful ones. The ACADIAN joins with a host of friends here in wishing Mr Borden and his fair young bride all possible happiness and prosperity.

TENDERS! LADIES' BAZAR.

Tenders for Court House Grounds and Buildings thereon, or any portions thereof, and for buildings separately. The County Council in April Term, 1891, passed the following resolution:—

Whereas it is believed that the present site of the said buildings is unsuited for the same and can be sold for a large sum of money. Therefore resolved that an advertisement be inserted in the County papers inviting tenders for the whole of the said lands with the buildings, and for portions of the same with or without the buildings, and for buildings separately.

Tenders for the whole of the above property, or any portion thereof, with or without buildings, or for buildings separately, as per above resolution, will be received at this office until November 30th, 1891, exclusive, envelopes to be marked "Tenders for County Grounds." The Council reserve the right to accept or reject any tender or all of the tenders.

T. A. MUNRO, MERCHANT TAILOR.

Owing to my rapidly increasing trade I have found it necessary to enlarge my place of business. With the best help that can be secured I am now better prepared than ever to guarantee perfect satisfaction to all who may favor me with their orders.

Encouraged by the very liberal share of patronage extended to my Custom Tailoring Work during the few months of my residence here I would hereby ask the favor of the attention of the public to the increased facilities for extending my work, and the better inducements which I now have to offer.

For the better accommodation of my customers I am now showing a line of goods suitable to my trade, personally selected and embracing many of the neatest and latest patterns in SCOTCH, ENGLISH AND CANADIAN TWEEDS, FINE WORSTED COATINGS, &c. A full line of TAILORS' TRIMMINGS always on hand.
