A Great Intrigue,

Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER XIV.

Five minutes after Lucille and Harry Herne had ridden away from the glade, and when the sound of the horses' steps had died out on the grass, a tall figure rose from the bracken. It was that most honorable nobleman, the Marquis of Merle!

For a moment or two he stood looking in the direction they had taken, his face white to the lips, his eyes gleaming with rage and malice; then he sat down, and clasping his hot, burning forehead in his hands, murmured, "Let me think! Let me think!"

...cuance, which is dreadfully impartial, and, like the sun, favors the just and the unjust, had befriended the marquis that morning. He had not followed Lucille and Harry Herne but he had happened to be walking in the glade, and, on their approach, had, in the most gentle manner, slipped down amid the high ferns, close to the spot where they stood, and—listened!

He had heard every word, and every word had added fuel to the fire of hate which burned in his heart against Harry Herne.

Once or twice, as Harry's impassionate language had fallen upon his ear, his rage had been so great that he had hard work to keep himself from springing out upon him; and when Lucille had murmured, "Harry, Harry!" the marquis had been forced to clutch the grass and gnash his teeth, to keep himself quiet.

What he had feared had come, and quickly. Harry Herne not only loved Lucille, the Lady of Darracourt, but she returned his love, and in the teeth of all that he had said of the barrier between them, would marry him if he asked her.

Ruin—black and utter ruin—stared the marquis in the face as he sat in the twilight and thought of his position. The six months Mr. Slake had given him would rapidly draw to an end; creditors innumerable would join that wily gentleman in swooping down upon him. The Hall would be sold over his head, and he would be cast upon the world penniless, dishonored, and a beggar.

After a time the marquis grew cooler, and his brain settled down to business. By fair means or foul means, Harry Herne and Lucille must be separated, and at once.

That Harry Herne would go of his own accord, as he had said he would, the marquis, who judged other men by himself, never for a moment believed. He must be made to go! Some plan must be devised to carry him out of Darracourt, out of the county, out of England; if it could be out of life as well, so much the better.

He sat until the shadows grew thickly among the trees, then got up, and, smoothing the lines out of his face, went down the hill toward the Court. He had an accomplice whose brain was more acute and subtle than his own, and he must see her at once!

Chance was evidently on his side for that day at least, for, as he walked by a path which led through the Court grounds to those of the Hall, he caught sight of a woman's dress through the trees, and saw that it was Marie Verner.

He approached her and raised his hat as if about to pass by, but said, in an undertone:

"If you are alone, join me at the end of the path."

She inclined her head, and in a few minutes she came up to him where he sat waiting for her.

"It is fortunate I have met you," he said, quickly, "I have something to tell you, something of importance—why do you smile?" he broke off with a sudden gleam of cold displeasure.

Marie Verner looked at him and shrugged her shoulders. "No matter; pray go on. What is this that has happened?"

He scowled, but he sank down on the seat beside her, and told her as much as he could bring himself to tell.

"He said—the hound!—that he would go; but that was only to lead her on—I know the fellow! He will hold her fast and secure; he will marry her and become master of Darracourt if something is not done, and at once!"

Marie Verner was silent for a moment, her head drooping thoughtfully, her keen, sharp, gray eyes hidden under their white lids; then she said, slowly:

"Yes. I am not taken by surprise, my lord. I have my little plan ready cut and dried. It is rather a desperate one, and there are risks—"

"They will not alarm me!" he said, eagerly. "I am prepared for any course, to run any risk to get rid of him."

"First, will you keep your promise and tell me the mysterious word which your key must spell before one can open your secret plate closet?"

The request was put in a most matter of fact tone and manner, and the marquis turned and shot a suspicious glance at her.

She met it with a scornful smile first, then laughed.

"How alarmed you look! You must be—pardon me—very dull yourself, my lord, or must think me so! So you imagine that I expect you to tell me the true word. I do not expect anything so unnatural. Pray don't hesitate! Tell me the lie you were going to!"

He flushed and looked angrily at her.

"What has this child's play to do with this—this matter?" he demanded, impatiently.

"Everything, as you will see, presently!" she retorted, coolly. "Now, my lord, the word! Any word but the right one will do!"

"I cannot see—well, say 'Safety' then!"

"If that is not the right word, it will do very well!" she said. "And now, if you are asked, you can state that you told me the word—"

"I can do so truthfully," he said, impatiently. "I can make it any word on the key by forming the letters into the word I choose when I lock the safe. The word that locks it, opens it."

"I understand," she assented. "Then 'Safety!' is the word. You will remember that you told me so, this evening, just before dinner time."

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor.

That Played-Out Feeling Was Quickly Remedied and Health Restored.

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of secondary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well-known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. I grew thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced—eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfit for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxative medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was sorely struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect."

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and chemists, or postpaid from the Cataract Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

when you met me as I was strolling through the grounds!"

"Yes, yes! And what then?" "Listen!" she said, and she lowered her voice.

He drew nearer, his eyes fixed on the ground, and she whispered some few words.

"The effect upon him was startling; he raised his eyes with a sudden gleam in them that was like the hungry glare in the eyes of a wolf who draws near its prey, and he half rose from the seat.

"It is admirable," he said—"admirable, and it must not, it cannot, fail to succeed! Ah! only a woman could have concocted such a plot with all its details, and of all women only one—you! By Heaven, I have no words to express my admiration!" and he wiped his brow.

"I am glad you approve it; as for me, I must confess that I am rather proud of it. I don't think your young friend will be able to stand against it, and if he should—"

"He cannot!" he broke in. "It is complete in every detail; but the time!"

"That we must leave to circumstances," said Marie Verner. "By the way, I must have some means of communicating with you, my lord. It was important that we should see each other to-night, and yet, if accidentally laughed the suggestion to scorn. Harry—the man she loved, the man whose innate nobility was patent to all—committed a mean, vulgar crime! That was more than impossible—it was ridiculous! Perhaps his parents—his father, his mother—had sinned against the laws of the land. Well, it might be so; but should that separate them?"

"You are right, as usual." He thought a moment. "Put any letter you have for me in the hollow of that tree," and he pointed to one, "and if you wish me quickly, place a vase of flowers in your window; I can see it from just inside the lodge gates."

"Very well," she said. "And now I must go. Remember, my lord, that this evening you told me the word which would open your plate closet!" and, with a significant smile, she left him in a very different mood to that in which she had found him. Exultation, a serenity that was almost fendish, sat upon his white face as he turned toward the Hall.

CHAPTER XV.

In love! Only two words, and yet what a world of meaning in them! The words rang in Lucille's ears, knocked at the door of her heart, as having shut herself in her room, she threw herself face downward on the bed, and gave herself up to the traversing of every word, and look, and incident of the last few hours.

The heart which the world of Darracourt had stigmatized as cold and immovable had melted and throbbled with love at last.

With flushed cheeks and trembling lips she recalled the handsome face, the musical voice, of this strange love of hers; this man with the features of a Saxon prince, the look and bearing of a patriot, but who was only her servant, and, worse still, who confessed to a stain upon his life which rendered him unworthy of her.

She did not think of this at first. Woman-like—girl-like—all she could think of for some time was the love which this strange man cherished for her. What gentle, passionate looks had beamed from his eyes! How his voice had thrilled when he spoke her name; with what manly dignity and sorrow he had told his story—hers and his—and with that despair he had told her that a gulf yawned between them, and had declared that rather than drag her down to its depths he would never see her face again, the face he loved so well.

All this is what a woman thinks of; and Lucille—in whose nature passion had lain dormant up to now, to rise with the all-mysterious intensity of sudden, unspringing fire—Lucille could only think of him. He loved her! She would not doubt it. Every look, every gesture, every touch of his hand had cried it aloud. Every touch of his hands—they seemed to touch her now. She could feel his fingers clinging lovingly, imploringly, to her arm—her hand.

And she! Oh, it was not needful to ask the question. She knew that she loved him; and not to-day for the first time. She tried to discover when first her heart had been drawn toward him. Could it be possible that love had been borne within her the first time she saw him, looking down upon him as he lay beneath the tower on the terrace? Had it sprung up when she found that he had treasured the glove she had worn, the leaf she had carried? When had this sweet, delicious passion crept into her heart, and from there made its way into all her veins, and taken absolute possession of her?

Yes, she loved him! She had been fast clasped in his embrace, his lips had touched hers—hers which never until now had felt the touch of a man's kiss.

A sweet, delicious shame took hold of her as she recalled that embrace—she could feel his lips still clinging to hers; and, blushing and trembling, she hid her face on the bed and whispered:

"Oh, Harry! Harry!—I love you. Yes, I love you!"

Then, and not till then, came the remembrance of the words he had uttered, the awful assertion that between them reared a barrier which no time or endeavor on his part could overthrow. A gulf, he had said!

What had he meant? Could it be that he was thinking of their different positions—she the Lady of Darracourt, mistress of the Court, and almost unlimited wealth—and he a son of the soil? No! He would not have let that alone separate them. He was too full of spirit to permit that to come between them. He had spoken of a shadow, a stain on his life. What had he meant her to understand? Had he committed some crime? She immediately laughed the suggestion to scorn. Harry—the man she loved, the man whose innate nobility was patent to all—committed a mean, vulgar crime! That was more than impossible—it was ridiculous! Perhaps his parents—his father, his mother—had sinned against the laws of the land. Well, it might be so; but should that separate them?"

Not only softer, smoother, more satisfying than any other, but distinguished by the "True Oriental Odor," a fragrance inimitable in its subtlety and charm.

THE MOST STRIKING

feature of the POLAR BEAR is its beautiful white coat, which is in keeping with the whiteness of its surroundings in the Arctic regions. The snow in those regions, however, is not whiter than clothes washed with SUNLIGHT SOAP.

The beauty of SUNLIGHT SOAP is in its purity, and the easy way in which it releases dirt from clothes, without injury to the fabric no matter how fine it may be. It is manufactured with the purest materials and there is a 1,000 Guarantee of Purity on every bar.

Telegram from Secretary of State Harcourt to His Excellency the Governor:—

LONDON, Sept. 6. The following is a summary of the Press Bureau review of the situation in France since the battle at Cambrai on August 26th, where the British troops successfully guarded the left flank of the whole line of the French Armies from a deadly turning attack supported by an enormous force.

The French armies have come into operation on our left and right, relieving the strain on our men.

On August 23rd the French gained a solid success over three German Army Corps near Guise. In spite of this, general retirement to the south has continued. The German armies remaining in practically continuous contact with our rear guard.

On September 1st a very vigorous effort by the Germans brought about a sharp action near Compiègne with a result entirely satisfactory to the British. The front fell upon the Guards Brigade, who lost 300 killed and wounded. Much slaughter was inflicted upon the Germans, and, as reported in an earlier telegram ten guns were captured.

The British troops have not been engaged since September 1st. Advantage has been taken of this quiet interval to fill gaps and consolidate units. Drafts amounting to 10,000 have reached our army, or are approaching on the lines of communication.

During the whole period of fighting the British casualties are estimated at 15,000 officers and men. It is known that a very considerable number of missing, included in this list will rejoin the colors safely. The losses, though heavy, have in no wise affected the spirit of the troops. They do not amount to one-third of the losses inflicted by the British force upon the enemy, and the sacrifice required of the army has not been out of proportion to its military achievements.

The British army is now south of the River Marne, in line with the French forces on the right and left. Latest information is that the enemy are neglecting Paris and marching southeast towards the Marne and the French left and centre.

The German enveloping movement upon the Anglo-French left appears to have been abandoned, either because no longer practicable or in favour of a direct attack on the allied line.

There is no doubt that our men have established personal ascendancy over the Germans, and are conscious that with anything like even numbers the result would not be doubtful. During the rearguard action of September 1st, the Germans were seen giving assistance to our wounded.

The weather is very hot but our soldiers are well and hearty. The horses are in excellent condition. It may be said that the war, so far, has added to the reputation of British arms, but we must have more men so as to operate on a scale proportionate to the strength and power of the Empire. (Sp.) HARCOURT.

At the House.

The sitting on Saturday was brief, there being very little debate. The Bills respecting a Moratorium, Exportation of Pig Sticks and Pulwood and Death Duties went through all stages and were sent to the Legislative Council. The Stamp Bill was read a first and second time.

The House meets at noon to-day and will take up the Committee Stage of the Stamp Bill. This afternoon the Legislature will be prorogued.

IN THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL. Saturday's session of the Legislative Council was marked by an address by the Hon. John Harvey on the present situation as it applies to the world, the Empire and Newfoundland. The business of the day was the passing of the following bills:—Revenue Bill, Loan Bill, temporary and permanent Financial Interests Bill, Exportation of Timber Bill, Bill providing for the maintenance and equipment of a Volunteer force, and Estate Duty Bill, all of which went through the various stages without amendment. The House adjourned at 6 p.m.

"John Bull's Boarding School."

MRS. ROSSLEY'S PUPILS. There is some capital show at Rossley's to-night when Mrs. Rossley's talented troupe will be seen in an original act entitled "John Bull's Boarding School." As everyone knows these children are beautifully trained and everything yet presented by Mrs. Rossley and her pupils has always been well patronized. There are some splendid war songs composed by Mrs. Rossley and the "Dance of the Nations" which will delight old and young. There is also a light and a young. There is also all new pictures, one among them being a three reel feature, "The French Spy," by the Vitagraph Company, and this film is one of the greatest ever shown.

Red McGhee says: The Coffins keep strong in baseball's annals all along. Some of 'em always show Mack's Eddie's head about the most, but Ray ain't quite his star ain't lost his glow. It's fact you can't get distant from that pellet some an' cop his share at all. The Red Sox fans are strong for Ray. They'll swear by Collins any day up round those Boston parts. He's souped through five major years an' hasn't had to shift his gear—his left whip stands the gait. He's beatin' fifty-fifty now although he stumped in Spring somehow an' didn't start till late. When Boston capped the world's biggest Joe Wood was hailed as main squeeze an' copied out center stage. Though Ray had pitched some classy ball he didn't get much thanks at all, 'cause Smokey was the rage. Last year, though, Smokey broke his hand. Things looked bad for the Beantown hand till Ray stepped in the breach. He pitched swell all the whole year through an' made the heavy knockin' crew admit he was a peach. But he still wears the same sized hat—no swelling. An' the players frat elected him vice-pres. The players say they're for him strong, with boss and fans he gets along—his ace in all the decks.

BRITAIN PREPARING FOR LONG WAR. LONDON, Sept. 6. Recruiting for the British Army is being spurred on by a campaign of oratory, addresses by prominent men and speeches at the theatres urging young men to enlist. The Government is making preparations for the training and barracks during the winter of a large army, whose members will be drafted to the Continent as soon as they have been drilled enough for active service.

WILSON LINER MINED. LONDON, Sept. 6. Two hundred survivors of the Wilson liner Runic, which struck a mine in the North Sea, and was sunk, have been landed at Grimsby. About 80 lives were lost.

A MILLION MEN AWAITING BATTLE. LONDON, Sept. 6. A despatch to the Chronicle from Amsterdam, says that an aeroplane dropped three bombs in Ghent and Eecloo without damage to either city. A despatch to the Chronicle from Paris, says that a million men under arms are now gathered in Isle de France awaiting the grand battle of the Nations. Since Tuesday there has been a pause in the fighting along the main front while the Germans have detached a force to the southeast, which force is now reported on the River Marne making an effort to outflank the allies.

GETTING CLEAR OF SPIES. LONDON, Sept. 6. A despatch from Antwerp says that the headquarters staff there has ordered all Germans and Austrians to leave Belgium by midnight on Monday night. All naturalized Germans and Austrians have been ordered to leave the fortress at Antwerp on the same date.

ENEMY'S SOUTH EAST MOVEMENT CONTINUES. LONDON, Sept. 6. A despatch from Paris says it is officially announced that the German right wing continues to go further away from Paris and is still proceeding with the movement towards the southeast commenced by it two days ago. The announcement states that according to the latest information, the enemy's troops have evacuated the region of Compiègne and Senlis.

DESERTS AUSTRIA FOR RUSSIA. LONDON, Sept. 6. The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Milatava, learns, through Bucharest, that the Russians are advancing southwards, after having occupied Czaronowitz without resistance. It is said that the inhabitants of Bukovina, in which district Czaronowitz is located, have joined with the Russians. This, the correspondent says, is regarded as the first sign of the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

GERMANS UNDECIDED. LONDON, Sept. 6. The Matin in a leading article describing the positions of the respective armies, says: "The Germans are stammering before Paris, undecided what to do. France has drawn large bodies of African troops into lines. England has Sepoys landing at Antwerp to harass the German retreat when begun."

ENEMY'S TURNING MOVEMENT CHECKED. PARIS, Sept. 6. Two official statements were issued today. One from Bordeaux says the situation is unchanged on the left. In the centre and on the right the enveloping movement of the enemy is being definitely checked. On the defensive works proceed. At Mauberg the city stands under bombardment despite the destruction of three forts. A second official statement from the Military Governor of Paris says the Germans continue moving away from Paris to the southeast.

EVIDENCE OF ENEMY'S LOSSES. LONDON, Sept. 6. An Antwerp despatch says a sack containing sixty-two thousand identification plates taken from dead Germans has reached Brussels to be forwarded to Berlin.

GERMANS REPORT CAPTURE OF RHEIMS. LONDON, Sept. 6. A German official statement claims that Rheims was captured without fighting.

WITHDRAWN TO PRESSIA. LONDON, Sept. 6. The German troops that crossed the Rhine to try to take Belfort, are reported to have been withdrawn again and transported to East Prussia.

JAP. SEAPLANES DROP BOMBS AT TSIN TAU. TOKIO, Sept. 6. The Japanese Naval Commander reports that two seaplanes reconnoitered Tsin Tau, in the German territory of Kiao Chow, yesterday, and dropped bombs on the wireless barracks there. One of the seaplanes received fifteen shots in its planes, but both returned safely.

SPAIN'S EXPECTED MESSAGE. PARIS, Sept. 6. A despatch from Madrid to the Petit Parisien says that the new Spanish Ambassador to France, Marquis de Villaverde, will hand to President Poincaré a letter which an authorized person declares will make an excellent impression in France.

TSIN TAU COMPLETELY ISOLATED. PARIS, Sept. 6. A Petrograd despatch says the Germans in Tsin Tau are completely isolated by the Japanese.

GERMANS RUSHED TO OPPOSE RUSSIANS. LONDON, Sept. 6. Six German Army Corps to the number of 400,000 men, are said to have been rushed to Prussia and Galicia from France, their place being taken by second line troops.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY PREPARES FOR EVENTUALITIES. LONDON, Sept. 6. The British Admiralty has issued the following notice: "All aides to navigation on the coasts of England and Scotland, both by day and night, may be removed at any time without further warning than is contained in this notice."

THE MOST STRIKING feature of the POLAR BEAR is its beautiful white coat, which is in keeping with the whiteness of its surroundings in the Arctic regions. The snow in those regions, however, is not whiter than clothes washed with SUNLIGHT SOAP.

German Activity at Sea

The news of the last few days points to a renewal of German naval activity in the North Sea.

On Saturday we learnt that the H.M.S. Speedy, a twenty years old torpedo vessel of 810 tons and a trawler had been sunk by striking mines. On Sunday we heard that the Wilson liner "Rune" had struck a mine and lost 80 of the two hundred people aboard, and to-day it is learnt that the H.M.S. Pathfinder, a light cruiser of 2540 tons, the flagship of a torpedo flotilla has also been lost from the same cause. Then we hear too that fifteen trawlers have been sunk by a German squadron in the North Sea, and that the British Admiralty has issued a notice that aids to navigating ports of the British Isles may be removed at any time. All these facts point to a renewal of German naval activity on the North Sea, and we may expect to hear of naval engagements in that area. It may be that it will only be between scouting cruisers who will endeavour to round up the German ships which are again laying mines and attacking trawlers or it may be that the Germans will try a general engagement with their capital ships before the two new British battleships with 15 inch guns can be put into service next month. As a squadron of German cruisers are at large in the North Sea, it is by no means improbable that we shall hear of German raids in the Atlantic and of engagements between them and the cruisers which are now protecting our Atlantic commerce. It would appear that the Germans are not bottled up as effectively as we have been led to believe. The explanation of German torpedo boats arriving at Kiel damaged and others being sunk is not yet forthcoming. It would seem to point to sea fighting near the mouth of the Baltic, and the sinking of the British trawlers to the escape of the British cruisers through the curtain of guarding British warships.

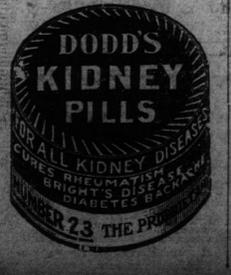

Closing of Legislature.

His Excellency the Governor will close the War Session of the Legislature at six o'clock this evening. The Guard of Honor will be composed of members of the First Newfoundland Regiment, while His Excellency will be attended at the throne by Lieutenant Commander MacDermott, of H. M. S. Calypso, Inspector General Sullivan and the Commanding Officers of the various Brigades. No official invitations to the closing have been issued, owing to the shortness of the time, but provision will be made in the Legislative Council Chamber for clergy, consuls, officials and citizens who may find it convenient to attend.

Some Good Angling.

What seems to be the record for trout fishing in the vicinity of Terra Nova was established by the station agent at that place on Saturday last. Mr. A. S. Hynes, whose prowess as an angler is well known, secured 340 of the speckled beauties after two hours fishing at a point about a half mile from the railway. The total weight of the fish was 120 pounds, which is not considered bad for mud trout. The bureau supplying this information does not say if it was a stop-watch or a "stopped watch" was used by Mr. Hynes.

HERE FROM FRANCE.—The schr. Ellen came into port to-day from France. The passage was made in 20 days. The vessel is ballast, consigned to A. S. Rendell & Co. The vessel left France only the day after war was declared between England and Germany.

Here and There.

JOHN B. AYRE.
Labrador News.

S.S. "Strathcona," Indian Harbor, Labrador, Aug. 30th.

As there is so much interest at present in the Labrador fishery, I send you the results of observations made during this past week between Battle Hr. and here: 1st, the fish taken has been mostly in the bays; 2nd, the fish is not less in abundance than other years, but much more laxy or torpid, and does not move about or feed, in George's Cove, for instance, more than per head than on the outside at Scrammy and inside the bay, more than on the outside. Schooners and shrimen in Rocky Bay were doing better than Spotted Islands, though Griffin's Hr. as usual had fish. Little fish at Grady, Black Island, the Sag Cove better than for years. We saw to-day fish at West Bay, but little or none at Indian, but still fish at Bull Head. Our own deductions seem that in the ordinary trapping water, it is so cold fish that do not come in can't move about much. Two men took their traps to pieces and made seines and thus hauled them. In deep water fish were warmer and moved and fed, but in shallow water on the bait and naturally did not want a flogger.

That fish are taken is shown by the fact that in Sandwich Bay men took up their salmon nets at the right time; but put them down again later and caught more salmon second time than first. While anglers still in abundance on the outer land, I dipped a barrel full of caplin on August 28th in a few minutes at Mullins Cove. Salmon also has been excellent in Sandwich Bay, and the settlers in these two bays if they can sell their produce are not badly off. The farms have spent no little money and all the companies have given high prices. Several men who moved from Labrador to Newfound have begun telling me they wished they had never taken the step; one who came back again, is really now exceedingly better off.

There are places where the settlers have done badly: Spotted Islands, Seal Islands and Boulter's Rock. But these men had a chance of lumbering with Mr. Robinson in Hamilton Inlet last winter and would not remain at it for some reason, which I have not yet understood. Two crews of settlers provided by Dr. Paddon with traps and boats, have, as things go, done well. At least one crew shown they can be good fishermen, a fact I was delighted to have Mr. Jerrett confirm to-day. Last Sunday I visited an old Englishman of eighty odd with the worst cancer of the face I have ever seen. He has a blind wife of about eighty. I found them in the house of a gray-haired settler, who has five mouths of his own to feed. He is no relation, and under no obligation to take such a terrible burden as these two old folk into his house. I asked him, why do you do it? He replied, "Because they were homeless and starving." I asked how long have you had them? "Over a year." How long will you keep them? "I'll keep them away themselves, I suppose." I held my hat off to the man, and began to think I never knew what loving others as yourself meant. How many of us would have done such a thing, however much we talked of the propriety of it?

At a time when ice and bad fishery and war make men feel blue and pessimistic, I felt, Mr. Editor, these few optimistic signs might not come amiss.

Sincerely yours,
WILFRED GRENPELL, M.D.

SHIPOWNER DEAD.
Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
Sir Stephen Furness, widely known in the shipping world died to-day. He was born 1872.

A Thorough System of Espionage.

The thoroughness of the German system of espionage is demonstrated by the experience of a local steel manager in a recent trip to Sydney.

Thos. Cantley, general manager of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co., Ltd., tells of an experience which he had during his trip in Germany examining the steel plant of that company.

During a conversation at one of the large German plants, the talk settled into a discussion of Canadian and American plants, of which the German appeared to be particularly familiar.

This aroused Mr. Cantley's curiosity, and on mentioning the fact, plans were produced by the German firm showing completely the entire workings of the Nova Scotia Company at Sydney Mines and Bell Island. Mr. Cantley remarked that the plans were even more complete than those prepared by his company, and he was informed they had been made by a man employed by the Nova Scotia Co. at two dollars a day. The German firms have also complete plants of other industrial concerns of importance, and their system of gathering information along all lines is wonderfully complete.

Sir Stephen Furness Died Yesterday.

One of the most prominent figures in the shipbuilding world in the person of Sir Stephen Wilson Furness died yesterday at London. This sad news was confirmed to-day in a message to Mr. A. Montgomerie, Manager of the Furness Withy Line in St. John's, received by him to-day from Halifax and also intimated in the public despatch.

Deceased was 42 years of age, being born on May 26th, 1872. He was a son of Stephen and Mary Ann Furness, a nephew of the late Lord Furness and a brother of Mr. J. E. Furness, Director of the Furness Withy Company of Halifax. He was educated at Ashville College, Harrogate, after which he entered the office of his father and received his commercial training. In 1897 he was made a member of West Hartlepool Town Council, was attached to the Durham County Council in 1898, and two years later was made a J.P. for the same place. In 1899 he married Eleanor, daughter of Matthew Forster, C.E., of Mount Brown, Adelaide, S. Australia. In 1910 he became a member of Parliament for Hartlepool. A year or two ago, following the death of his uncle, he was appointed President of the Board of Directors for the Furness Withy Line, and about the same period, though comparatively young man, was signally honored with a Knighthood. He was Vice-Chairman of the following:—Tyne-Tees Steam Shipping Co., Ltd., of the Furness and Nephew, Ltd., Rotterdam; Irvine's Shipbuilding and Dry Docks Co., Ltd., of the Wearside Steel, Coal and Coke Co., Ltd.; of the Richardson's West-garth & Co., Ltd.; Cargo Fleet Iron Co., Ltd.; of the T. Durham Steel & Iron Co., Ltd.; of the Geo. B. Turbull & Co., Ltd.; of the British Maritime Trust Co., Ltd.; Economic Marine Ins. Co., Ltd.; Brown's Dry Dock Co.; Gulf Line, Ltd.; Free Trade Wharf Co., Ltd. He was a devoted admirer of such recreations as motor-touring, shooting and took a keen interest in farming.

The Lion's Whelp.

Kipling never wrote a truer word than when he made Canada say: "Daughter am I in my mother's house But mistress in my own." This expresses Canada, the obedient offspring of the British Empire, but the independent, self-governing Dominion from Vancouver to the Atlantic. Immediately on Great Britain's declaration of war, Canada rose to her defence. The lion's growl was echoed by the whelp.

There is no law which compels Canada to do this. Great Britain cannot compel her to contribute to the defence of the mother country one man, one gun, one bushel of wheat, one dollar of Canadian money, and yet the Dominion has already sent millions of men, equipped men, batteries of gunse, and the offer of an unlimited number of volunteers.

The Gift of Love.

"People think that there are conditions excluding the necessity of love in their intercourse with men, but such conditions do not exist. Things may be treated without love; one may chop wood, make bricks, forge iron without love, but one can no more deal with people without love than one can handle bees without care. The nature of bees is such that if you handle them carelessly you will harm them as well as yourself. It is the same with people. And it cannot be different because mutual love is the basic law of human life."—Tolstoy.

A friend of mine has two daughters. One of them will do anything on earth for her mother, but she has a sharp, irritable manner, and I have never heard her speak a tender word or offer her a caress. The other is not in a position to do much for her mother, except love her, but she does that with all her heart, and not only with her heart, but with her manner and her voice.

And to see her mother expanding in this atmosphere of love and tenderness which the presence of this daughter creates, is like seeing a bud expand into a blossom when the sun comes out after a storm.

Her face lights up. The timidity of manner which she is apt to show in the presence of the other daughter disappears. She smiles, and the moisture of a happiness greater than the happiness of smiles and laughter often comes into her eyes.

This daughter sometimes grieves that she cannot afford to give her mother more. She does not need to grieve. She is giving one of the greatest gifts that one human being can give to another—the gift of love.

The atmosphere of love is to human beings what sunshine is to plants. It makes them grow and blossom. To expect a human being to flourish in an atmosphere of bad temper, of suppressed irritability, of disapproval or dislike, is like expecting a plant to blossom in a dark cellar.

The atmosphere of love is the greatest gift that a mother gives to her children. Another might mend their clothes, look after their health and supervise their manners and morals as well, but no one else could give them that blessed atmosphere of love and tenderness, in which a child will flower into a man or woman most perfectly.

Of course, I do not mean that loving takes the place of doing. There is something wrong about love that talks but will not serve when it is in a position to do so. Love without service is an anomaly. It is like sunshine giving light but not heat. Service is a part of true love, just as heat is a part of sunshine. But on the other hand, neither is heat without light sufficient. Real love gives both tenderness and service, just as naturally as the sun gives out light and heat. And no love which is lacking in either of these elements, is a true love.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Government Finance and the Opposition.

SPEECH OF MR. KENT.

I am sure the House has listened with much interest and attention to the Minister of Finance in the statement which he has just made. The statement is one of an extraordinary character, prepared on the responsibility of the Government to meet an extraordinary occasion. We all recognize that the occasion is exceptional, but at the same time in the discharge of our public duty we must not fail to ascribe effects to their appropriate causes. I want to make clear to the Committee the hesitation of the Opposition in relation to finance and the proposals made by the Government. It is well known, sir, that we have continuously and on all occasions strongly condemned the financial policy of the present Government in all its branches and departments. These opinions have been placed on record here in the House, fully exemplified, and I submit, have been fully justified as time goes by. A statement has been made—I have seen it in the Press—that a substantial agreement has been come to between the Government and the Opposition on matters of finance. That is not so.

Mr. Hunk, the Prime Minister.—Allow me to dissociate myself from that statement. I was much surprised at that statement.

Mr. Kent.—I am not blaming the Prime Minister or any person in the House for that statement; but there is no such agreement or understanding as regards matters of finance between the Opposition and the Government. I stated the position of the Opposition on the opening day of the session. It was this: "That the Opposition was prepared to assist the Government in all matters directly due to the War; that no partisan opposition or factious criticism would come from this side of the House—nor will any come so long as the Empire is engaged in hostilities with a foreign foe. This is not the time, as I said then, to raise these questions. This is not the time nor the session in which we should deal with them. When the House meets next winter to transact its ordinary business we will, I hope, have full opportunity to do so."

Now, sir, as regards the financial position which has just been explained by the Minister of Finance, we cannot admit that the shortage or the conditions which will bring around the shortage this year or which caused it last year are due entirely to the war. The Colony, during the past few years has been overspending on capital and revenue accounts in normal times and this strain on its resources has left it without its ordinary reserves to fall back on in time of adversity such as now confront us. The fact that we are now calling up our extraordinary reserves is ample justification for the criticisms which have been made from this side of the House in regard to the general financial policy of the present Government. But we cannot stop now and go into distinctions between what is due to war conditions and what is due to the financial policy of the Government. When the House meets next winter in ordinary session, when we will have the general papers and accounts

The Hills of God.

In conclusion, I would like to repeat what I said at the opening, that we cannot assent, in the sense of approval, of what the Government is doing now but whatever criticism we have to make upon the subject, we will make it in the ordinary session during the winter when the time comes. Already on last year's transactions the Minister has told us there is a deficit of $237,000. That is a deficit estimated by the Auditor-General. That deficit it is proposed to meet by drawing on the $500,000 which was placed in the last few years. We have not the figures to fully understand what the Minister means by saying that they are drawing on that $500,000 for the $237,000. We should have before us—what we have not today—a full and complete statement of the financial standing of the colony. We had such a statement before us last year, but we have not got one today and it is impossible for us to say what the exact meaning of drawing on that reserve is until we see exactly and have before us the financial obligations and outstanding liabilities of the Colony.

The hills of God are hard to climb,
O tender little feet;
They stand up high above the plain
And beckon to the wind and rain.
And one is Faith and one is Pain.
O tired little feet!

The upward trails are flanked with thorns,
O little pilgrim heart;
The stones that shine so white ahead
Are sacrificial altars spread.
Where you must leave your passions dead,
O little pilgrim heart!

But, ah, the hills of God they lean so close,
Against the feet of God,
You see from off their sunlit crest
The goal that is your prayerful quest.
And hear the voice you've loved this best,
High on the hills of God.

Divorced Life

By Helen Mason, F.R.S.E.

"The Snarler"

Marian's table-mates in the dining room of the Inn were Mr. and Mrs. McCarron and their young son John, and a Mr. Wiley. The latter was a dour old globe-trotter, who prated much about England and her possessions and pitted himself for having elected to spend the summer in Connecticut. He was sixty, thin, unwell, close-fisted, thin-suited, and mumbled his words out of the corner of his mouth. John, called "Johnny" by his parents, was the feature of the family. He was ten, and given to long-drawn discussions and arguments with his elders. His parents, refined and cultivated people of middle age, humored Johnny with endless patience, strove to answer his volley of questions, and between breaths did their utmost to be kind and pleasant to Marian.

It was not her table companions, however, at that first dinner at the Inn, which made the deepest impression upon Marian. It was a pair of steel gray eyes which a young man at a neighbouring table directed upon her a number of times when she looked this way. He was a fellow of fastidious outing attire, with nervous hands, and a taciturn manner with those at his own table. There was some thing hard about his features that laid hold of Marian's attention. In repose, his face was as hard and set as a steel casting. Once she saw him smile; then his eyes softened and danced; half circles of wrinkled radiance from the outer corners of his eyes. In a moment, another glance showed her an utter morose and sullen countenance.

He differed from any man Marian had ever seen or known. She divined the presence of background, character. She picked him for an unusual personality. Accordingly, the several glances of his which had been directed her way interested and flattered her.

Latter over, the diners drifted to the verandah, where cooler breezes stirred, where early-evening was projecting cool shadows hither and yon. The McCarrons introduced many of the guests of the Inn to Marian. Among them was the dark man with the hard, sullen face, save when it smiled. "Miss Winthrop," said Mrs. McCarron, "let me present Mr. Calhoun."

"I'm glad you came," he said abruptly.

"Why?" she challenged.

"Why shouldn't I?" he countered. He looked at her gravely for a moment, then smiled such a frank, naive and boyish smile, that further challenge on her part was completely routed, and she turned entirely kindly eyes upon him and laughed.

"Don't expect me to say the sort of things you're used to hearing," he added. "I don't know how. I'm too blunt and brusque. Down in Atlanta, where I live, the lawyers call me 'The Snarler.'"

"So you're a lawyer?" observed Marian with heightened interest.

"A sort of lawyer," he replied with soft accent. They were approaching the boat landing. "Do you care to canoe?" he enquired.

"I love it," she returned eagerly.

He helped her to a comfortable seat among the cushions, shoved off, and began paddling with strong, measured, efficient strokes. Mournful willows, weeping perennially on the banks, slipped silently by. The water lapped the sides of the graceful craft curiously. Marian felt the spell of her companion's personality. She, too, was glad that she had come.

QUEEN ELIZABETH born 1533. She came to the throne in 1558 and reigned forty-five years. She was a sincere lover of her country, a masterful and enlightened ruler—fickle as far as her favourites were concerned—and added distinction to a distinguished period. The naval supremacy of England, the extensions of her colonies and the glory of a great new literature of which Shakespeare was the brightest ornament are features that are associated with her reign.

WHITTIER died 1892, aged 87. American poet, sometimes called the poet laureate of abolition. Although somewhat lacking in fire and concentrated passion, his poems have the freshness of spring flowers.

To do is to succeed—our fight is waged in Heaven's approving sight. The smile of God is victory!

The German Empire.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Sivash."

The German Empire is a world power which is contained, with difficulty, by Europe. It has 200,000 sq. miles and 65,000,000 round citizens. It alarms England on the west, backs Russia off on the east, impinges seriously on Austria to the south and reduces France to a state of frantic irritation on the southeast. It is not large in area, but has a 14-inch rifled voice with large penetration which is widely respected.

The German Empire once consisted of a large number of kingdoms, each of which ate a different variety of sausage and were otherwise at variance. About fifty years ago, however, these nations united and since then Germany has grown until even Russia is respectful in its presence.

The German Empire has two armies which inspire great fear. One is composed of a million soldiers and the other consists of several thousand traveling men who are selling goods from Cape Horn to Nome. Germany manufactures everything, from battleships to Teddy bears, and its cities are growing faster than Chicago. They do not, however, grow in the same way. German cities are handsome and clean and whenever a man throws paper on the street he is arrested. Americans subject to heart failure from great shocks should not visit German cities.

Germany is surrounded by the North Sea, the Baltic Sea, the Alps and Customs houses. Its greatest rivers are the Rhine, the Elbe, Wurzburger, Pilsener and Munchener. There is not much water in Germany and the citizen who drinks any of it is charged with wasting a natural resource.

Germany has the finest musicians, the deepest thinkers, the largest airplanes, the fastest automobiles, the greatest steamships, the tallest cathedral, the staunchest lieutenants and the most obedient private citizens in the world. The whole duty of Germany is to obey the army and the whole duty of the army is to obey the Kaiser. The Kaiser is Germany's greatest feature. He rules everything in the Empire but the Crown Prince and is equal in power to four ordinary kings, a captain of industry and a municipal boss.

German boys go to school until they acquire spectacles. They then serve in the army, raise mustaches and spend a happy life obeying the laws, listening to grand opera and trying to make a glass of beer last until the garden closes. No one knows what German women do, but they don't count anyway.

Germany has no paupers, few drunkards, still fewer law breakers, no lies and no ward politicians. If it wasn't so overrun with army officers, each of whom requires as much room as a box car, it would be an ideal place of residence.

People are doing more reading to-day than ever before, and it is very important to those who wear glasses that they should be properly fitted. If you have any trouble or are in doubt, go to TRAPPINELLA, the Eye-Sight Specialist—sept 21.

The Vacationists.

The ones who toll, the summer through, at home, in dreary occupations, are always bored by that weird crew returning from their long vacations. There's naught more ludicrous to the rent, who can't forsake his tiresome labors, than stories told, with full intent, of joys abroad, by gurgling neighbours. I toll like blitzen in my den, while others go to sea or mountain, and then, when they come back again, each mouth becomes a bubbling fountain, that pours forth yarns of wild delights, of heavenly sails on lake or river, of lovely maids and moonlit nights—and I stayed home and dined on liver! If ever I should go away, to dodge the summer's beastly weather, when I come back I'll sigh and say, "It was a nuisance, altogether! I don't enjoy the ocean's foam, nor woodlands dark, nor mountains sunny; hereafter I shall stay at home, and do my stunt, and draw my money."

Then all my friends who couldn't go, will gather round me and embrace me, they'll wipe away their tears of woe, and to the soda fountain chase me.

Life's Pathway.

The week opening bill at the Nickel Theatre to-day is a very clever one which has been arranged with great taste. The principal film is entitled "Life's Pathway." It is in two reels acted by the Thanhouser actors, Flo Labodie in the leading character. She is seen in a dual role and does some very clever acting. Everyone should make an effort to see this splendid picture. "The Flirt" is a fine comedy-drama. There will be a comedy and a Pathe weekly this evening. Mr. De Witt C. Cairns will sing "A Son of the Desert Am I."

Prospero Back.

The S. S. Prospero, Capt. A. Kean, arrived Saturday afternoon from the Northward, after a quick round trip. She brought these passengers in saloon:—Messrs. Rev. Prescott, H. Taylor, Crawford, Alcock, Ridley, Sulley, Evans, Dr. Mallett, Jancy, E. Breen, Blackmore, Roberts, W. Blacklar, Taylor, J. Hanlin, Wylan, R. Manuel, F. Bugden, J. Belton, Ebsary, J. F. O'Neil, J. Lockyer, W. Clarke; Mesdames Blackler, Oakley, White, Spurrell, Ebsary, March, Targett; Misses Cutler, Bedford, Alexander, Boyles, England, Jennings, Day, Hughes, Somerton, Simmonds, Earle, Labe, White, Alderdice, O'Neil, Bussey, and 49 in steerage.

For Better or Worse.

The all feature programme advertised for the Crescent Picture Palace to-day is one that is sure to please the patrons of this popular picture house. The two reel feature: "For Better or Worse" is produced by the Eclair Co. famous for good productions. It is a high class society drama which contains a fascinating story. "The Forgotten Letter" is one of those touching southern romances of early days that gets the attention from the start, there are also two first class comedies with the comedy favourites, Pearl White and Baldy Belmont.

Miss Clark sings two numbers: "My Hero," from the opera The Chocolate Soldier, and the ever-popular Scotch ballad, "Within a Mile of Edinboro Town." On Wednesday Miss Clark sings: "A Heart Cry from the West," a Newfoundland ballad; words by Dan Carroll, music by Rev. P. Sheehan.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company.
Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Yours truly,
D. JAMES DAVIES, B.S.C., F.C.S.
Analyst and Assayer.

AN IMPROVEMENT.—The Prospero reports a great improvement in the codfishery north, especially on the French Shore. During last week some handliners got exceptionally good fares, due to the presence of squid, which, however, are not extra plentiful.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DANDRUFF.

THE NICKEL—Another Big Week-Opening Bill.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, featuring "LIFE'S PATHWAY."

A two-part production, presenting the clever Thanhouser actress, Flo Labodie, in a dual role. This photo-play indicates the episodes in the lives of two sisters—who take divergent paths, which lead them into different points, letting fate shape their destinies and fickle fortune their futures. A pretty story—excellently handled.

THE FLIRT—A la Dion Boucicault's comedy-drama, "The Jilt." A PATHE WEEKLY—With some late events interestingly depicted.

A KEystone COMEDY—With a riot of fun and then some!

P. J. McCARTHY, Pianist. JOSEPH ROSS, Realistic Interpretation. DeWITT C. CAIRNS sings the Baritone Solo, entitled "A Son of the Desert Am I."

The Eastern Trust Company!

Pitts Building, Water Street, St. John's.

Dear Sir,
We beg to draw your attention to the advantages offered, both in the way of security and privacy, by our Safety Deposit system which has recently been installed in our vault. The system is the most modern and complete that is known, and is deposited in a vault of exceptional strength and safety. The boxes are individual and can only be opened with the joint aid of the key in the possession of the Company and of that in the custody of the customer. They are of solid metal and are arranged in nests of fifty, so that no box can be removed from the vault separately from the rest.

The boxes are rented at $4.00, $5.00 up to $20.00 a year, according to size.

An inspection of the installation is invited.

Presents an All-Feature Programme To-Day.

"For Better or Worse." Feature in 2 Reels.

Mr. Elmer Randolph, a popular author, being advised by a friend to try opium with the hope of getting ideas for a story he is writing, becomes addicted to the opium habit. How he loses his reason and is subsequently cured is told by the famous Eclair Co. in one of their best presentations.

THE FORGOTTEN LETTER is a very charming romance of old Virginia.

Pearl White, the popular Crystal star, excels herself in the sprightly comedy, SOME DOINGS.

HAROLD'S BURGLAR is another lively comedy in which Baldy Belmont figures.

MISS ALICE CLARK, Prima Donna, sings (a) "My Hero" from the Opera Chocolate Soldier; (b) "Within a Mile of Edinboro Town." Prof. Spencer at the piano.

On Wednesday Miss Clark sings "A HEART CRY FROM THE WEST," a Newfoundland ballad. Words by Dan. Carroll; Music by Rev. P. Sheehan.

Picked Up Motor Boat

The Furness Liner Kanawha, Capt. Kellman, arrived in port yesterday afternoon from London after an excellent passage of eight and a half days from London.

When the ship berthed a mysterious looking boat was seen on the after deck. This boat was picked up about twenty-five miles off this port and there was nobody in it. This gave people on the wharf the impression that a tragedy had happened, but, fortunately, such was not the case. The dory contained a three horse power motor engine, a half dozen oars and a quantity of gasoline. The outfit which is perfectly intact is owned by one Patrick Deane, of Logy Bay. One day last week while there was a heavy sea on the boat drifted from its moorings off to sea.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Berle Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.—ap17.

Enthusiastic Welcome.

A large gathering of ex-pupils and friends of Rev. Bro. J. E. Ryan, who arrived by the Pomeranian, were down to the pier last night to meet him. As the ship berthed the reverend gentleman was greeted with an outburst of welcome by those assembled on the wharf.

Rev. Bro. Ryan has been absent from the city for about two years, having returned to Ireland because of failing health. Bro. Cooney came with Bro. Ryan, and will take up residence at Mount St. Francis.

SAW ACTIVE SERVICE.—Capt. Alexander is a passenger on the Allan boat Pomeranian, bound for Halifax. He will be attached to a Canadian Regiment. Capt. Alexander saw active service in the South African War.

Brotherhood.

Thread the days with sympathy,
The world needs heart—
So oft without the healing touch
We meet and part
The day is empty at its close,
We fall to say,
And carelessly, through lack of thought,
We spoil a day.

The tears and griefs of human kind
Make no appeal,
And burdens press them low, and yet
We do not feel.
We live in such a busy age,
"The great and grand—"
That oft we lose the blessed art
Of being kind.

The day is empty at its close,
Whatever our gain,
If we have missed our Master's steps
And lived in vain.
We only gather out of life
The highest good,
When self is lost for His dear sake,
In brotherhood.

WANDERERS, 11; RED LIONS, 2.

Saturday at St. George's Field, the much talked of Challenge Match between the Red Lions and Wanderers resulted in a win for the latter by 11 runs to 2. Both teams had out their full strength, the Red Lions being especially reinforced by the addition of "Billy" Anderson who has returned for volunteer service. It was the Wanderers day out, however, and Brown, backed up by Hawless fielding pitched a remarkable game, no Red Lion reaching first base in the first three innings and only three men getting to third base in seven innings. Only four hits were made from Brown's delivery, whilst Anderson was hit pretty freely. Features of the game were a running catch by Munn and the batting of Burkhardt the latter getting four hits in as many times at bat. The score and line up follow:—

Umpires: Messrs. Chesman and Kesner; Scorer, Mr. P. E. Outerbridge.
