CHAPTER XLV.
A WOMAN INVOLVED.

"Is a meritorious fair design to chase injustice with revengeful arms.—SHAKESPEARE.

More inscrutable than ever, John Stanfield sat at his table the next morning writing with the same monotonous rapidity as usual—as if the past night had been nothing more than an impalpable dream.

The Hall was wide-awake and the sumptuous breakfast was set out in the luxurious breakfast-room. The early risers were strolling about the grounds, the late ones partaking of the choice viands and talking of the amusements of the day.

The hum of the voices, sometimes the ripple of their laughter, floated up to the small room and reached the silent secretary.

Once the laugh of Reginald Dartmouth rose above the rest, and at its rare sound the pale face bending over the desk grew dark and full of meaning.

Presently footsteps were heard ascending the stairs, and Reginald Dartmouth entered.

The secretary did not look—wrote on, to all appearance deaf and dumb. "Well," said his master, closing the door after him, and standing opposite the still figure—"well, what have you done?"

John Stanfield looked up, pen still in hand. "I have answered half the letters, and marked those of which I have to make further inquiries."

Reginald Dartmouth frowned. "I did not ask you that," he said, sternly. "What have you done toward the work I gave you yesterday?"

"But little," replied the secretary. "There has been but little time."

His master frowned again. "Were you watching yesterday?"

"Yes."

"Did you see nothing—note nothing?"

"I saw and noted—both. I did more. Last night I visited the rooms above and discovered—"

"Yes—yes—what?" said Reginald Dartmouth, with a burst of impatience utterly unlike his usual calm composure.

The secretary's eyes flashed behind his dark spectacles. "Enough to mark the course."

"And that is all?" asked Reginald Dartmouth, impatiently. "Did you learn nothing tangible?"

"Nothing," replied the secretary. "As my master will remember, the time was short and I had no clew. With a longer time and a clearer clew much may be done."

Reginald Dartmouth fixed his piercing eyes upon the inscrutable face. "You have learned your trade in a deep school," he said. "You are useful to me, and you know it; but do not attempt to take advantage. What have you discovered?"

"That the Countess Vitzarelli," replied the secretary, as monotonously and calmly as before, "has a mystery."

"That I knew already."

"And that the mystery has to do with a woman."

"A woman?"

The secretary nodded. "Are you certain of that much?"

"I am; quite certain."

Reginald Dartmouth sank into the chair beside the table and leaned his head upon his hand.

"No time must be lost. I must know this secret. How did you learn it?"

"By listening to a conversation between the Countess Vitzarelli and the count."

"Ay—and how?"

"From the room above the countess's boudoir."

"Ah!" exclaimed Reginald Dartmouth, with an eagerness he tried in vain to conceal. "You have done well and cleverly. You need not doubt your reward. You heard—"

"Nothing, save broken pieces of conversation; but enough to convince me that a woman is at the heart of this matter."

"Well, and the next step? I leave the matter to you. I have too much on my hands to give attention to it. You understand me? What is the next step?"

"London," replied the secretary. "London! When do you wish to go?"

"To-morrow—to-night—perhaps to-day—as circumstances may guide me," said the secretary, curtly.

"Good!" said Reginald Dartmouth. "Have you enough money? Stay—better take more. I would not have you fall me for the want of it. Here are fifty pounds. Is that amount sufficient?"

"Quite," said the secretary, taking the notes. "With these I will hasten to town and get upon the track."

"Ay," replied Reginald Dartmouth. "Spare neither time nor money. Go to London—to Africa, Asia—where you will—but solve this mystery for me. I trust you. You know why? Because I am aware you dare not play me false."

The secretary bowed. Reginald Dartmouth rose and walked toward the door.

As he did so the keen eyes of the youth noted the look of impatient eagerness in his eyes and smiled darkly.

"By the way: what was that cry they were talking about? Did you hear it?"

The secretary thought for a moment. "No," he said; then corrected himself. "Ah, yes, I remember! An owl I disturbed flew out of one of the rooms with a shriek. It must have been that that they heard."

Reginald Dartmouth nodded and the next moment had left the room, and his pleasant voice could be heard humming a light, graceful air as he descended the stairs to join his guests.

John Stanfield looked after him with a strange gaze.

"Money! Ay, I will not spare it, Reginald Dartmouth! I will go to London; but the countess must wait—another mystery must first be solved."

CHAPTER XLVI.
CLOSING TIME AT THE DOCKS.

Though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is led by the nose with gold.—SHAKESPEARE.

All asleep in the red sunset of the East India Docks—a very prosaic place at the best of times, but catching something, the mere shadow and semblance of beauty, from the crimson and yellow rays of the expiring king and reflecting in its tarry, greasy water the glory of the heavens.

Here and there, crowded together in a confusion of masts, spars, and rigging that seemed hopeless of disentanglement, lay the big monsters of the deep, some for unloading, some for lading, others heeled over in dry docks and waiting, like sick elephants, for the plasters of copper and iron and daubs of tar and pitch that are to make them whole again.

All along the quays lie in masses and heaps sacks of foreign produce and merchandise, sacks of grain and wool, hogs-heads of rich and sugar, casks of priceless seal-skins and furs, a medley of wealth and riches past all computation save by the gray-haired old dock clerk, who sits in his worn-out sentinel's box staring placidly at the casks and bales and scribbling with quiet and calm composure with the illused quill.

It is nearly closing-time. The dock laborers are wending their way from the scene of their weekly and daily labors. The Malays and sailors, still tied to their ships, helping lade and unlade, are gathering together and cutting the piece of negro-head that is to last them until they get home; and the brown and ruddy-cheeked captain, who has brought his wife to look at his good ship, the "Mary Ann," is just pointing out, as a last sensation, the top-gallant mast and marking the spot with his forefinger where poor Tom Bowline fell from it in the storm at the Bay.

Observing all these preparations for departure with sleepy eyes, much is the old clerk's astonishment to see a young man, with red hair and a huge pair of spectacles, come sauntering through the big gates and seat himself right in front of the little sentinel box, with his face toward the shipping.

"This is a fine time of day to come marching about," grunts the old man, rather aggrieved by the advent of the stranger and taking his untimely appearance as a personal wrong. "What do you want, I wonder? Come to stare at the masts and rigging like a lot more of 'em, I suppose. To see some of 'em stare at a ship one'd think they'd never seen one before, which, maybe, they never has," he added, with a chuckle. "Lestways, I should think this young chap never had. Well, here's the quarter. I s'pose I'd better go and tell him as it's nigh closing time, or he'll be for starting off round the docks just as the clock goes and feel quite injured at my turning of him out."

Moved by this resolution, the old man laid down his ill-used quill and, straightening his rigid back, toddled up to the still figure of the red-headed young gentleman.

"Good-evening," said the youth, who seemed to have very quick ears and a pleasant though rather pale face—"good-evening. Beautiful night. I hope I'm not in the way."

This speech, if intended to mollify the old man, had the desired effect. The old gentleman, used to rough ways and short words, was disarmed by the polite tone and words and hastened to reply:

"Yes, it's a fine night. Oh, no; you're not in my way! We're nearly closing now."

"Ah; then I must be going!" said the youth, shifting a little on the bale but not getting up—"I must be going. What a splendid lot of vessels you've got in dock just now!"

"Yes," replied the old man, "fine vessels—some on 'em; and there's a good sight of 'em in dock, too. It's the busy time with us just now."

"Ships going out or coming in now?" asked the youth, with an appearance of interest upon his pale face.

"Well, both—coming in, though, mostdays. There's a deal o' shipping homeward-bound this time o' the year."

"Oh!" said the youth, thoughtfully, and edging a little further on the bale, at the same time taking an inviting-looking cigar-case from his pocket and offering it to the old man.

"Will you take a cigar? They are very passable."

Titled Manikins.

Are you a mankin? The question is one that Mayfair maidens and matrons of Belgravia may soon be asking each other. For the "work habit" bred by the war still, it seems, persists, and leisured idleness would seem to have lost some of its charm.

Anyhow, Mayfair is taking to the task of "showing off" clothes with complete seriousness. Critics will, of course, say there is nothing new about the proceeding. But there is a business side to the work that has been lacking hitherto. To be brief, the society woman manikin has invaded the dress salon, and, what is more, is proving herself as capable at her duties as any professional.

To Lady Egerton, widow of a former British Ambassador in Rome, belongs the credit of being a pioneer among employers of the manikin-up-to-date. At her dress establishment in Orchard Street, London, the latest creations are displayed by a number of women well known in the social world, including the Hon. Mrs. Arthur Brodrick. No one would ever have guessed that she had not been at the job all her life, and her fellow-workers behaved with equal self-assurance.

If the habit becomes widespread keen competition is sure to arise between the owners of rival houses.

There is, too, the financial side to be considered.

Payment on a percentage basis calculated on the money spent by each new customer brought to the house might show piquant results.

Lady Egerton herself is quite satisfied with the new feature introduced into her business; her manikins are equally enthusiastic about their work.

There is, too, the financial side to be considered.

Didn't Mean That.

It was a history lesson, and the master was convinced that he had told his boys all the important features and characters connected with the Wars of the Roses. He therefore proceeded to examine.

"Now, boys, what do you know of Margaret of Anjou?" was his first question.

A slight pause, and then quite a good show of hands.

"Well, Jones?" This to a youngster who was waving his arm about like a flag-signaller, working overtime.

"She was v-v-very f-f-fat, sir," stammered Jones.

"Fat! How do you make that out?" queried the master, who had made no mention at all of the lady's physical charms, and was somewhat in doubt himself as to her exact dimensions.

Opening his text-book, Jones, triumphantly pointed to the following passage: "One of Richard's stoutest opponents was Margaret of Anjou."

NOTES OF TRAVEL:
And Reminiscences of a Pleasant Tour.

L. C. MORRIS.
CHAPTER XXIX.
AT NEW BEDFORD—THE BANQUET.

According to arrangement with the Rev. Mr. Uphill, we visited the city of New Bedford, and were entertained at the Rectory in a royal manner. Mr. Uphill is now in charge of St. Martin's Parish; and he is greatly beloved by his people, and his first year's labours were encouraging to him, and helpful to them. Like all Parishes, St. Martin's contributed of its young men to the late war. Some of these dear lads fell at duty's post, and they now sleep in No Man's Land, or in Flanders Field, or lie in ocean's bed. But many of them came back, and to these the Parish gave a warm reception, and tendered them a high class banquet. The banquet was held in the Parish Hall on New Year's Eve, and was a success in every way. Some three hundred and fifty guests were present, and among the number were ninety five returned heroes, several of whom had served in the Navy. Some of these men addressed the banquet, and if what they did at the front, may be gauged by the tone of their remarks, and by the ability with which they made them, then St. Martin's Parish, as well as New Bedford, has just cause to be proud of its sons who went overseas. The majority of those whom we saw looked nothing the worse of their hardships; but a few of them will carry to their graves the marks of shot and shell, and the effects of the deadly gas.

The regular programme of the banquet was short, and contained an address by Senator Bullock. Senator Bullock made a good speech, and all his statements were well received, and we took it, that he is quite a popular gentleman in the parish. Senator Bullock was the fourth gentleman of his class, with whose acquaintance we were honored in our tour, and like the others, he impressed us as being fair and impartial, and keenly conscious of the responsibilities of office, and of the duties of the hour. We think we are quite within the pale of safety to state, that a Senate composed of such men as Senator Bullock, should certainly be a safe-guard to politics, and a moral force to the Republic. Senator Bullock's address was a splendid tribute to the lads of every nation, who, seeing their duty did it, and in doing so paid the price.

But there was a second speaker on the programme, and much interest appeared to be centred in him. To all, except the Rev. Rector, he was an entire stranger; which fact of itself, added a little sensation to the hour. The Rector was very happy in calling upon the second speaker of the evening, and said some things which would imply that this speaker was some really great man; and that the Senator was to be out-shone by a President or by a Premier. Imagine therefore, how surprised the audience must have been, when the speaker was announced as the Deputy Mayor of St. John's, Newfoundland. What a position to be in—a humble Deputy Mayor to follow an American Senator; but as Pope says: "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." The Deputy Mayor had been specially invited to attend, and also to speak; hence there was no backing out, so for the space of thirty minutes, the attention of the audience was his; and then followed much applause; but sometimes applause at the end of a speech is not so much an expression of appreciation of the speech itself, as an outburst of joy that the speaker has stopped talking, especially when he has spoken thirty minutes and said nothing. However, when all was over, and the smoke of action had passed away, it was generally conceded that the banquet was a good one, and that Mr. Uphill was a popular master of ceremonies, and that the great American Senator had done well, and that the stranger from afar was not so bad.

The New Year's Eve was well spent with the parishioners of St. Martin's Parish. The reception to the returned soldiers was all that could be desired, and amid the best of good feel-

Shannahan and Tucker at the Lakeside.
MEET OLD CHUMS AND SPEND A PLEASANT EVENING.

Tuesday evening we wended our way to the Pond, yes the Pond—dear old Klitty Viddy that brings back a thousand memories of days gone by; of chums now sleeping their last long sleep; of athletes now in other lands, who played the game in a manly way, men who didn't crow if they won, or didn't cry or whine if they lost. There are many spots in the country that have a wonderful attraction for you and me, because they bring back memories of pleasant schooldays, and when we visit them, old happenings come up before us. And so it was with Tucker and me on Tuesday evening. We felt glad and we felt sad. But it is good to feel sad now and then, when that sadness is aroused by the remembrance of friends who, when they trudged the pathway of life with you, were companions whose company made the road seem shorter. At the Lakeside we met many of the old stock, and never in our experience have we seen such a large gathering, almost a month before the Regatta. Usually the crowd began to grow larger about the last week preceding the Great Event, but not so this year, they are down there in their hundreds. What a wonderful attraction rowing has for us; how we love to see a slashing crew "drive her thro' the water." What more beautiful sight than six brilliant oarsmen heaving together like clockwork. As you watch them gliding over the Pond, you heave your body unconsciously in unison with the stroke, and as the oars flash your eyes flash too and you live again your boyhood days.

We sat on the Bank down by the T. A. Boat House, and in our company were Mr. M. J. O'Mara, Wm. S. Dunphy, and Michael Malone. Three men who never lost a race for the past forty years, and who have memories like log books. The quickest time in 1894 can be handed out to you by any of this trio, and who won the Fishermen's Race in 1878 is on the "tip of their tongues." We were chatting of report in general and the conversation turned to boxing. A little frizzled fellow who was seated near us, asked me for a match, and then "stuck in his lip" in our recollections of days gone by. Twisting his cute little head "awagside" he says to my friend: Mr. O'Mara—do you know when I saw the greatest boxing bout that ever came off in this town? You, don't you? I'll tell you. 'Twas in the Academic Rooms on Prescott Street, and the contestants were our friend, Mr. Michael Lawlor of the Custom House, and Mr. Frank Morris, now Judge Morris. Everybody laughed when they saw Mike put on the gloves that night. They felt sure that he was in for a sound thrashing, and many of us offered up a silent prayer that Michael may have a peaceful death. But you can never judge a boxer. The stoutest man don't always win. The bout opened in the usual half-hearted fashion, said our talkative newly made companion, but after a while Lawlor made things lively. I don't know if I ever witnessed a more agile pugilist than he, he could hop around like a ring-lark, duck like a pigeon, and swing the left in a John L. Sullivan. Morris was looked upon as one of the leading boxers of the Club, and we all felt that he was bidding his time, holding in, in order to make a grand finish of our friend Michael later on in the game, but as the bout progressed and time went on, those who were half inclined to smile at Michael's presumption, became serious and awakened to the fact that he was a man to be reckoned with. Ten rounds had been sparred, said our sparrowy acquaintance, and we were fanning Michael as he sat in his corner. Says I to him on the sly, says I, what you think of this round, Mike? He looked at me as proud as Mullaly looked when he found he was Mayor and the whole Council, and said—Jim my boy, Frank bites the dust in this round. The going sounded. Tom Cragg, the referee, called time, and both athletes in the full bloom of youth, faced one another with eyes riveted, and fists in readiness for either attack or defence. Like a flash of lightning Lawlor sent his right in the direction of his opponent's left jaw, but the blow was neatly avoided, and then Lawlor let loose with the left and landed on the temple. Quick and desperate was the sparring, upper cuts flowed like water, till with a tremendous swing of the right from Lawlor, which landed on his opponent's nose, and at the same time a bunch of fives found the region of the left ribs, and the hero of many a

JOHN H. PACKER, well-known electrical engineer, of Liberty, Mo., who says that to look at him to-day no one would ever take him to be the same man he was before Tanlac restored his health. Has gained forty-four pounds.

"For two years previous to the time I began taking Tanlac, I lived principally on a raw-egg diet. During this time I was laid up in the hospital for five months and practically no hope was held out for my recovery. I don't suppose any man had a worse case of stomach trouble than I did, in fact they said I could not live.

"Tanlac did not seem to help me much at first, and I had almost made up my mind to give it up, but if I had given it up it would have been the mistake of my life. I stuck to it for a fair test and am thankful that I did for after finishing my fourth bottle, my appetite was better and I noticed myself improving.

"This encouraged me to keep on taking it and in two months I was able to eat a good square meal, and digest it as good as anybody. Then I went back to work and in a few days I had finished my last bottle. I found I had actually gained forty-four pounds in weight and to-day no one would ever take me to be the same man I was when I began taking Tanlac."

The above remarkable statement was made recently by John H. Packer, a well-known electrical engineer of Liberty, Missouri.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renewa.—adv.

hard fought battle threw up the sponge. Our friend went wild as he described the bout, and said it was the biggest surprise of his life the way Mr. Lawlor handled the gloves that night. Mr. Dunphy said the story didn't surprise him a bit, he always knew Mike to be a cracker jack with the gloves. And so we spent a pleasant evening, till the shades of night came o'er the scene, and then we retired to Hayze's and partook of Root Beer and Paris, after which we filled our "dhudeens" and wended out way citywards. If you have not visited the Lake, go down and see the boys. "Twill do you good, you'll meet old friends you thought were dead, you'll hear old tales you heard before and which you love to hear again. Go down, get interested. No matter how wealthy you are, don't get too grand for the Regatta, for then you are poorer than Lazarus.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

AN OLD FRIEND IN A NEW SETTING.

RUTH CAMERON

As I was turning over the pages of a magazine, I stopped at an illustration because the woman's face in it was peculiarly familiar. Whom did it look like? I knew I had seen a face like that before. And in that odd way in which we know things without exactly remembering them, I had a feeling I had seen it in some totally different setting. It must be a resemblance to some friend of mine, I thought. It was an oval face, with attractive but unusually large eyes. I racked my brain for names and acquaintances with faces like that.

I'd like to see that model. When it came over me that it was an acquaintance—but only one printed page. The oval face and large mouth are the characteristics of all the heroines of that particular illustration. I looked back some magazines and found her. The first time she had been a young girl a musician falls in love with the second she was the heroine in a triangle story. I suppose there behind that pictured face model. I'd love to see her and to know how much like and how much the pictures she is.

Do you think it is interesting to watch the work of the various promoters, watch the same types emerging over and over and now and then a new one?

They are strong on defiance. The young girls in another well known illustration have the adorable little chin, and they appear with it defiantly lifting their heads as if always ready to find a moment in the story when the girl is defying someone or that it seems to be easy. I fancy a girl in the modern love story fond of defying someone or another illustration. This time a must have a model with high cheek bones and an exquisitely sweet mouth. All her women, moreover, have an expression of tender brooding, of misty aloofness, that would be my idea of what would allure and fascinate a man ten times as quickly as a brilliant, unobtrusive beauty. I am not artist enough to know whether the illustrator's expression or out of her own consciousness. I incline to think the latter.

I Won't Charge for This Idea.

Wouldn't it be a clever vaudiville stunt if some enterprising theatre manager should borrow all these models, dress them up as some of the most famous heroines they have posed for, and arrange some sort of a skit for them?

Nor would he have to stick to the fiction pages of the magazines. Some of the loveliest of all these ladies come out of the advertising sections. Wouldn't you love to see the lady who is putting the candy into the box, with a smile even sweeter than the chocolates? Or the wonderful one who is shampooing hair of a color that never was on land or sea, but that certainly harmonizes exquisitely with her pale pink negligee? And the feminine illustrator (best of them all, to my thinking) who does the ladies with the brooding, mystical look who has done her very loveliest to advertise somebody's chewing gum? I know it seems almost impossible, but the way she advertises it is to sit beside a dish of exquisite fruits—which are supposed to suggest the flavor of the gum—while the chewing gum itself (probably aided by a commercial artist) retires modestly into the background.

Perhaps there are many people who do not take an interest in any of these pictured personalities of the printed page. If there are, I am sorry for them. They miss a source of interest and pleasure.

SYMPTOMS.

I read no able doctors' books, peruse no almanacs, which tell of frightful ills, padlocks, a bad pain in human back. The more you read about disease the sicker you will feel, and you'll have mumps and housemaid's knees, and fan-tods in the heel. I used to read the almanac that boosted Hooper's pills; I kept it hanging in my shack, hard by the window sills. And when I should have studied hymns, and tracts and things like those, I read of spavins on the limbs, and bunions on the toes. And every time I read a line it filled me with despair; I found I had anthrax in my spine, and dandruff in my hair. Then from my savings bank I drew some nice ten-dollar bills, and to the drugstore promptly flew, and called for Hooper's pills. Oh, Hooper, in a palace dwelt, and Hooper's yacht was fine, and Hooper's butler used to pelt downstairs to fetch the wine; and Hooper lived in Easy Street, and Hooper rode to hounds, while I, on weary, dragging feet to drugstore made my rounds. And then one morn-

I had a ray of reason in my dome, and I got up and threw away the dope that filled my home. I told myself that I was well and felt as slick as wax; glad day, when I no longer fell for Hooper's almanacs!

Irish Plot to Deport De Valera.

Americans are no more likely than Canadians to be filled with gloom at the news that there is a conspiracy on foot to drive Eamonn de Valera from his native soil—which is that of the United States, not Ireland. Eamonn may justly claim to be not merely one hundred per cent., but in reality two hundred per cent. American, for he is both North and South American, with some Irish thrown in for top-dressing. He has as much right to stay in the United States as Justice Cohan, because, like the latter, he was born there, and was just as pro-German as Cohan during the late war. He has a good deal more right to ornament the hotels, restaurants and public platforms of New York and Chicago than John Devoy of "The Gaelic American," one of the few friends of Ireland on this continent who happened to be born there. Why then should Justice Cohan have framed a plot (if certain allegations are true) to deport de Valera to a land which he had rather love at a distance. Most of us were told in childhood that money was the root of all evil, and whether that be true or not, it seems to be the bone of contention among the best little patriots who ever cheered over the drowning of women and children by submarine attack. Some months ago when the Journal intimated that the agitators against Great Britain in the United States owed much of their enthusiasm to the consciousness that there was a big melon to be cut, it received indignant letters from certain readers denouncing the suggestion as base and invidious. We would advise those readers to address their future communications to Justice Cohan and John Devoy.—Saturday Night.

BROTHERHOOD.

Under the miller's grimy shirt,
Under the sweat and the grease and dirt,
Under the rough outside you view,
Is a man who thinks and feels as you.
Go talk with him,
Go walk with him,
Sit down with him by a running stream,
Away from the things that are hissing steam.
Away from his bench,
His hammer and wrench,
And the grind of need,
And the sordid deed,
And this you'll find—
As he bares his mind
In the things which count when this life is through—
He's as tender and big and as good as you.

Be fair with him,
And share with him
An hour of time in a restful place,
Brother to brother and face to face,
And he'll whisper low
Of the longago,
Of a loved one dead
And the tears he shed;
And you'll come to see
That in suffering he,
With you, is hurt by the self-same rod
And turns for help to the self-same God.

You hope as he,
You dream of splendors, and so does he,
His children must be as you'd have yours be,
He shares your love
For the flag above,
He laugh and sings
For the self-same things;
When he's understood
He is mostly good,
Thoughtful of others and kind and true,
Brave, devoted—and much like you.
Under the teller's grimy shirt,
Under the sweat and the grease and dirt,
Under the rough outside you view,
Is a man who thinks and feels as you.

Teachers' Convention.

At yesterday morning's session of the Convention, Rev. Dr. Curtis spoke on the studies of teachers. Such a topic is very important as study is necessary even after high grades have been secured. The necessity of teachers being great students is borne out by the fact that teachers are expected to be versed not only with all great modern achievements and movements but also with the chief events of the past. In no far as study affects the class-room it is imperative that the teacher know his subject fully, as a partial knowledge or confessed ignorance breeds contempt. In order to keep in touch with growing knowledge one must study continually where possible. As far as the methods of teaching are concerned, there is always something new, and something debatable. A teacher who is satisfied to drift, without trying to keep himself up to the times, should be retired without pension. The study of the pupil is always bringing to light something new. One fact—viz. the following of the example of wandering Aristotle prevents the teachers from doing their best study. Our present training of teachers is too inadequate, but the normal school will remedy—in part, at least—much of this, but the normal school is not enough; we want a memorial college, and the abolition of the necessity of leaving the country in order to take an Arts degree.

After Dr. Curtis had finished the Committee appointed at the previous night's session to formulate a salary basis, reported through its convener, Mr. R. R. Wood, the following tentative outline, viz. that a minimum salary for 3rd grade teachers be, at the start, $600 for male, $500 for female. In addition the salary to be raised $25 every additional year for three years, after which no increase be granted. A 2nd grade teacher, male, will as a start have $700, female $600, $25 increase for first four years, after which no increase. A 1st grade teacher, male, will start at $800, female $700, $25 per year for eight years, after which $100 for every additional ten years. An A.A. grade teacher, male, $900, female, $800, $25 per year being granted for 8 years, and $100 for every additional ten years. Such a scheme holds out every advantage for teachers to improve themselves, while even the lowest grades get enough to keep them in decency and comfort. It was moved and seconded that the above scheme, being impossible at the present, be postponed till later for discussion. The discussion of salaries, to meet the present needs, occupied the time of the session until dinner hour.

In the afternoon, Miss Collins, Inspector of R. C. Schools, gave a lecture on story writing, which was not only interesting, but very instructive. To be a successful story teller, as spoken by the lecturer, one must feel. To do this one must cultivate the art of feeling and also refrain from story telling when one is unable to enter into the spirit of the story. Simplicity of matter and manner, dramatic power and presentation without affectation are essential points in the success of this work.

After Miss Collins, Miss Worrall, teacher in Bishop Spencer College, gave an exhibition of drill to the assembled teachers. She had ten or twelve pupils present and put them through the rudiments of drill in a manner that must have pleased everyone present.

Discussion of salaries again formed the all-important topic, and it was moved by Mr. Verge, seconded by Mr. Samson, that we ask the Government for an increase of 25% on the general grant to Boards, exclusive of the 40% increase on augmentation already granted. It was also moved by Mr. Whelan and seconded, by Mr. Griffin that we ask the Government to make the recent 40% increase on augmentation retroactive to January 1, 1920. Both motions carried.

A deputation to wait on the Government will consist of the following: Messrs. Wood, Dwyer, Whiteaway, Butt, Samson, Whelan, Griffin, Verge and Bro. Strapp. It was moved by Mr. House, seconded by Mr. Griffin, that the Government be also asked to make the augmentation payable terminally. Carried.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

The C.E.L. will face the veteran Red Lions to-night at 7 o'clock. Harvey and his gallant little band are determined to do or die in an effort to pierce Hill's armour and thus stop their onward rush for the 1920 pennant, and in a ball game there's no telling what will ever happen. The Institute boys are heavy hitters and seem no way nervous of standing up to Robble's efforts. The lineups will be:

RED LIONS	C.E.L.
Robertson	Churchill
Cahill	Thomas
Hiltz	Churchill
Callahan	Alderidge
Callahan	Gabriel
Munn	Carter
Ellis	Drover
Quick	Windsor
Kielly	Thistle

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

In their clash with the B.I.S. yesterday the Cubs put over 9 runs to the Irishmen's 3. All their runs were made in the first four innings due to poor fielding and wild throwing. From the fifth to the last the young Harps played well high faultless ball, and showed the fans they can do so if they wish. O'Leary, though still crippled, showed his pluck by sticking in the box for the whole game and did splendid work though in the early stages he got no support at all. It was not until the seventh that the B.I.S. found Claude Hall, and a couple of nicely placed hits with the assistance of wild throws by Sweater Gosse and Freddie Phelan brought in 2 runs. In the final stanza they shoved across another. Both batteries worked well, Hall having 16 strikeouts to O'Leary's 8. Both teams are credited with only 1 earned run each. Hall had no Annie Oakley's but O'Leary fished 6 passes. French is charged with 2 passed balls, and Hall's fast one caught one of the Irish batters on the arm and thus gave him free transportation. Eddie Phelan did the only slugging for the evening, and Scooter Mernot has placed to his credit a three bagger and a double tacker. This kid's guardianship of the keystone was brilliant and he has not the slightest fear of spikes. Scooty Sawyer and Manning in the infield of the Cubs played classy ball, while Dickie Power in the Irish outfield pulled down a few long ones in good fashion. There is no doubt the B.I.S.

can come back if they play seriously, and they will likely give some one a jolt in the orphanage games next week.

To the juniors must be given the credit of playing the fastest and snappiest exhibition of the 1920 season. The St. Bon's were victors over the Shamrocks by a score of 4 to 3 in a five inning preliminary. Both batteries did good work, but the palm must be given to young Collins, the St. Bon's catcher. He is an adept at back-stopping and his pegs to the bags are perfect. The fans want more of the junior games and would like to see a game played each week.

We had the temerity yesterday to enter the dressing room of the B.I.S. players, and oh! such rude words they said to us about the horrid things this column prints about their playing to date. We were accused right up the gamut of being everything from a moonshiner to a modern bluebeard. As a matter of fact, at one time we thought they were going to slap us on the wrist. They evidently overlook the main point of the whole issue and that is that we're being paid for telling the public "Nothing but the truth without fear or favour." At the beginning of the season the management of "The Evening Telegram" decided that the sport-loving enthusiast of this town must be pretty near fed-up with reading neutral safety-first accounts of exhibitions in all branches of local athletics where undeserved bouquets are handed out by disinterested scribes as freely as O.B.E.'s were a short year or two ago.

However, our rashness in entering their abode enables us to make the amende honorable to one of their players and this we very gladly do. In describing the ill fated cruise of the "Hary" in the Wanderer sea on Tuesday night we stated that the official scorer's log had charged one Douglas J. French with 3 errors, and on the matter being called to our attention by the irate Duggy we find that Wallace was really the culprit. In the summary they are next each other in the batting list and most unwittingly we charged French with the pawnbroker's sign instead of the general William.

Yes, Dug, as you opine it's heart-breaking enough to be limelighted when you're guilty, but when you make only 1 error and then get featured for 3 it is pretty raw, we'll tell the world.

Will those intending to enter the Prize Limerick competition this week kindly send in their contribution to the Telegram office by to-morrow night, as the prize will be awarded on Saturday.

We have received numerous Limericks wherein the last line rhymes with "Dust" and "crust." These of course are disqualified as the last word in the missing line must rhyme with "league" and "fatigue." Some of the former were quite interesting and clever and it is a great pity they cannot be given space in the column. We would request the senders to send in another effort.

"You Tell 'Em" are still pouring in but as the competition is closed there is no object to be gained in publishing them—unless of course they have a relation to the players or the game.

Woodford Enquiry.

COMMISSION NOT A JUDICIAL ONE.

The Commission appointed to enquire into the Woodford charges met in the Tower Room at 11 a.m. to-day. Mr. Rendell, one of the Commissioners, pointed out that the Commission was not a judicial one and the members were only appointed to take any evidence given by the parties to the enquiry. The parties may be represented by counsel, but it is the intention of the Commission not to be hampered with the legal aspects of the case. They will examine into the matter from a business point of view. Mr. Howley, K.C., was present this morning, representing Mr. Woodford, who gave his evidence freely, stating all that transpired in the Squires' office after the Supreme Court refused to accept his resignation. According to Mr. Woodford's statement, Mr. Gibbs stated on the matter being called to our attention by the irate Duggy we find that Wallace was really the culprit. In the summary they are next each other in the batting list and most unwittingly we charged French with the pawnbroker's sign instead of the general William.

At 5 o'clock that evening he visited Gibbs' office and intimated that he wished another interview with the Premier, Gibbs stating that they were anxious that the resignation should be tendered that night, so that next day at court the proceedings could be withdrawn. Gibbs then wrote out the resignation which gave an excuse for it that, owing to ill health and the necessity of going to Canada to consult a specialist, he (Woodford) was advised by his solicitor not to put the resignation in the wording used. The whole proposition came from the Government. After a consultation with the acting leader of the Opposition (Sir John Crosbie) he went to Gibbs and a meeting was arranged to take place at Squires' office at 9 a.m. on the 18th. At that meeting the three were present and it was agreed the resignation should be tendered before 11 o'clock, both Squires and Gibbs guaranteeing him a position worth $2,000 per annum and emoluments. On being questioned, Mr. Woodford said the position was to be the Superintendent of the Poor Asylum at the salary stated and $500 perquisites. When His Excellency that he was taking a rest from politics. The refusal of the Supreme Court to consent to the withdrawal of the petition nullified the agreement. It was understood at that time by all the parties to the agreement that the court would consent to the withdrawal of the petition. The Prime Minister and Mr. Gibbs were summoned to appear this morning but satisfied the Commission that they would give their evidence when called upon to do so. The enquiry here adjourned until Monday.

Trinity Day By Day.

The intention of the Public Works Department to replace the old sailing ferry on the South West Arm by a modern motor boat, is a step in the right direction; and the fact that its time-table is to be so arranged as to bring the children of the South Side to school at Trinity in the morning, and to take them back to school in the afternoon, is highly commendable, and decidedly creditable to the person who arranged it. The Bar dredged, giving a clear way to Dunfield, and it made a call, the scheme will be well perfect.

Whilst the South Side is—we are to see—being gradually deserted by its people, the Arm itself, either land or water can never be deprived of its natural charms or attractions. In this age of private motor-boats and motor cars, by which most isolated and remote places are so easily and conveniently put in touch with the town institutions and centres, the shores of the South Arm offer several ideal spots for summer bungalows. The points known as "Fahy's Neck" and "The Point" defy competition in this respect, and with the through train times a week from and to St. John's and intermediate stations, a bungalow at either of these points, and a private motor boat, would supply everything necessary to any and happiness for a month or every year. Trouty Brook and Pond—the home of two to pound sea trout—are within a few miles by land of those points, and the North West Arm Brook mouth of which can easily be reached by motor boat, has never yielded its supply of silver fish just in from the sea, during latter part of July and the month of August; and a three or four pound "silvers" will be yours for the asking.

With the South West Arm is associated many pleasant memories, on the part of those who knew it some forty or fifty years ago. There were no vacant houses, and no unfenced lands then on the South Side, whilst a fleet of fishing-boats, with old Robin Hiscock as Commodore—left regularly on Monday morning for Baccalieu Tickle, and returned with loads of fish on Friday evening of Saturday morning, in good time to put it all away, and to clean up before Sunday morning. The South Side Hills to-day would provide excellent and sufficient pasture for scores of sheep; but so long as people in the adjoining settlements are allowed to keep dogs—tied up by day and let loose at night—sheep raising to any extent will not be attempted, and the district will be that much the poorer.

The South West Arm gave us, (as it still does) our first skating surface for the winter, and provided us with a sheet of ice for all and several purposes from December till April. The Trinity Cricket Club had many an enjoyable game there on the days; and on Sunday afternoons and holidays scores of young and old used it as a promenade. I remember what a favourite walk it was with Rev. Henry Dunfield during his winters at Trinity; and this reminds me of a story in this connection. One fall Mr. Dunfield ordered a pair of heavy walking boots from England. They came early in December. They were of the very best, with particularly broad soles and flat heels. On Monday morning the ice in the Arm was covered with an inch or two of light snow, that had fallen quietly during the night. Mr. Dunfield decided that he would try his new boots, so he put them on and went out on the ice. As there was no path at all on the ice to influence a definite direction, he walked hither and thither in different directions, and satisfied that his boots were quite all right he went home, took them off, and put on another pair. Scarcely had he done so when a man from the South Side came for him to go over to see a sick parishioner. He went at once, with the man. They had not gone far on the ice when they came to some of the tracks made in the plastic snow by Mr. Dunfield a few hours before. The man looked at them, and then remarked: "Some flat-footed son-of-a-gun went this way not long ago." Mr. Dunfield said, "yes, yes, oh yes!" but not until he was quite alone did he give vent to his pent up laughter, and he often told the story, as he alone could tell it.—R.I.P.

H.M.S. Lily was stationed in the South West Arm all one summer fifty years ago, and those of us who were boys then, still remember the sham fights on Brine's Hill, the concerts and other entertainments given by the officers and men. Mr. Pittman's co-operation, with a staff of journeymen and apprentices, was then one of the busy activities on the town side of the Arm, and Mr. Bayly's cottage, just above it, was for years a centre of kind hospitality, and delightful social life.

With the passing of Mr. Pittman the co-operation and wharves passed too, and to-day one has to think hard to visualize it all as it was in the days of its prosperity. The Bayly cottage—after the death of Mr. Bayly—passed into the ownership of Mr. W. S. Green, of Bay Roberts, as Mr. Bayly's successor in the Customs' department, and not a few of us to-day recall with grateful feelings, many acts of personal kindness on the part of Mr. Green, Mrs. Green and family, and the open house privileges given by them to the Christmas mummings, at a time when mummings meant nights of real sport. The cottage has long ago given place to a more modern building, and to-day, the property—belonging to Captain Flander, well kept and tastefully cared for—is not only an ornament to the shores of the Arm, but also one of the prettiest residential spots in town.

The one part of the South West Arm which has not only never been deserted, but has also been steadily improving is Goose Cove. The Bartlett, Hewitts, Dampiers, Kanes and Hunts—good old Devonshire and Dorset names—have been there for generations. The old houses have given place to new ones, and everything about several of the properties shows such care and cleanliness, that it never fails to attract the attention of passers-by, as the train emerges from the Loop ravine, and the beautiful South West Arm unfolds itself to view. The late Professor Holloway considered it worthy of being photographed, and given a place amongst his carefully selected views of beautiful and sequestered spots in Newfoundland. No higher compliment could be paid to it, nor do we need any other assurance of its picturesque beauty.

Mr. George DeGrish, who has been a carrier of H.M. Mails for over forty years, has been retired by the Government, on pension. No employee in the service was more faithful than he, and no one was more deserving of an official rest. Long may he live to enjoy it.

Mr. Henry Hunt has been appointed H.M. mail carrier between the railway station Trinity Junction, and the post office.

We are glad to see Captain Barbour back again, and looking better every day. He will command the "Wren" again during the season.

Mr. Thomas DeGrish leaves on Saturday for New York, where he intends to make his home for the future. We shall miss him.

Tenders are asked for the repairing and painting of the Parish Hall. This is one of our prominent buildings, and those in charge of it do well to keep it in good and decent repair.

The Amalgamated School Committee have engaged Mr. T. M. Smith, as Principal of the school, and Miss Goodwin as his assistant. Mr. Smith is an A.A. with highest honors, and has been teaching twelve years. He is a married man. Miss Goodwin has a second grade certificate, and has been teaching at New Melbourne. In order to bring the school up to the standard of efficiency that Trinity once was proud of, but which has been lost to us in the recent past, Mr. Smith will need to be a strict disciplinarian, and in his endeavours to be such, he should have the sympathy and backing of the Board of Education and the parents of the children.

Mrs. (Capt.) Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George DeGrish, came from Norway to Trinity some weeks ago, and has been visiting relations and friends, previous to her leaving for Japan to join her husband, and to remain there for two years.

Mrs. Maidment, widow of William Maidment, St. John's, is spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John Green. Her brother, Mr. A. Gilles is with her.

Rev. Mr. Rowe, of Smith's Sound, was passenger by the Petrel to attend a Deanery meeting at Heart's Content. Mr. Rowe taught school here some years ago, and he has many friends here.

Rev. Hugh Blackledge, of Trinity East, and Rev. Chas. M. Sticksings, of Trinity, exchanged duties at Evenings on Memorial Sunday.

The members of the local Orange Lodge with their friends, celebrated the 12th of July by a picnic and a dance.

Mrs. John White has rented the house belonging to Dr. Bond Cross, and she will use it as an annex to her boarding house, for dormitories.

Mr. Patrick Doherty is enjoying native air at Trinity. His home is at Montreal and his last visit to Trinity was fourteen years ago. We are glad to see him.

Miss Day, of St. John's, is spending her vacation with her friends, the Barbours.

St. Bon's Annual Reunion.

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning, the spacious Chapel of St. Bon's College was thronged with ex-students of the College. In honor of his golden anniversary as a Priest, the celebrant was the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Donnelly. He had as his servers: his two nephews, also ex-pupils of the College. After Mass there was Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament by His Grace the Archbishop, assisted by Leo Murphy Leamy and Flynn, while the choir led by Rev. Bro. Fennesy, chanted the hymns; Mr. E. Devereaux was the organist. Breakfast was served in the Refectory which had been tastefully decorated by the Brothers. At the end of the breakfast the President of the Association, Sir M. P. Cashin, K.B.E., addressed the members. After paying a tribute to the late Bishop Power and the late T. J. Thorburn, he introduced the orator of the day. Then a telegram was read from Bros. Ryan and Culhane who are in Dublin attending a General Chapter of their Order. The message read: "Best wishes for a successful reunion, 1920."

The orator was Rev. Dr. Murphy, P.P. of Brigus, who spoke at length on St. Joan of Arc. His lecture was a fitting one and very deserving of a "place in the College archives. After the oration, according to custom, the members were photographed in a body on the steps of the College. The names of those present are as follows: M. P. Cashin, M. F. Aylward, Rev. M. J. Dear Sir,—I am directed by the executive committee to ask you for a reply to our communication under date of June 10th in connection with the matter of a plebiscite on the Prohibition Act now in force. Your communication to this committee dated June 11th stated, "Your communication of yesterday's date will be read at the next regular meeting of council." Dear Sir,—Some time ago I announced in the House the decision of the Government to appoint a commission to inquire into the whole matter of the Prohibition Law in Newfoundland and its enforcement, moonshining in Newfoundland and its prevention, the use of substances known as "Dope" and the prevention of that evil, an examination into the liquor laws of other countries, and the possibility of the application of some system to Newfoundland conditions which would on the one hand prevent the evils resulting from the excessive use of intoxicating liquors and on the other prevent the evils arising from the use of moonshine and dope as beverages. It is anticipated that the Commission will consist of seven persons, and your Committee is asked to nominate two, the Prohibition Vigilance Committee will be asked to nominate two, and the remaining three will be nominated by His Excellency the Governor in Council. I would be glad to hear from you as soon as you find it convenient, as the Government appreciates the considerable amount of labor involved in connection with this inquiry and would like the Commission to get to work without undue delay.

Dear Sir,—Replying to your letter of June 30th, I am directed to say that the decision of the Government to appoint a commission to inquire into the whole matter of the Prohibition Law, etc., does not in the least interest us as a committee. What we want is a reply from the Government to our letter of June 10th as to whether there is any intention on the part of the Government to introduce a bill to grant a plebiscite on the question of modifying the Prohibition Act in accordance with the wishes of 15,000 electors who have signed petitions to that effect. Failing the decision of the Government to introduce such a measure, is the Government as a party, prepared to leave every member free to vote as he personally desires in this question? Kindly arrange to let us have a reply by noon Monday so that I can place your letter before our committee which meets Monday night. Yours very truly,

It is not the intention of the Government to introduce any legislation whatever at the present session in relation to the Prohibition Act.

Dear Sir,—At a meeting of the Moderate Prohibition Committee held last evening I brought to the attention of the Committee your letter dated June 30th and July 6th in reference to the matter of a modification of the present Prohibition Law. The Committee after full and careful consideration on the matter requested me to inform you that they regret not being able to meet the request submitted by you and unanimously decided not to appoint two nominees to serve on the commission as outlined in your letter. I may add that this decision was reached from the viewpoint that the Moderate Prohibition Committee was appointed by the public for the purpose of securing a plebiscite from the country and that all the petitions presented to the House asked that such a plebiscite be granted. The Committee finds itself unable to associate itself with a commission which body is directly opposite to that for which the Moderate Prohibition Committee was called into being. The committee is calling a public meeting on Tuesday night next when the full correspondence between the Committee and the Government will be given the public for consideration.
Yours respectfully,

The Fall of the Bastille.

The siege and capture of the Bastille was one of the most remarkable events in the history of the world, and of human liberty, for it marked the end of feudalism. Up to then the kings of France and their prime ministers and chiefs of police could by secret order cause any man to be imprisoned in the Bastille. Once in there in all probability he was never brought up for trial but left there till he died. After the fall some sort of trial and judgment became necessary. The Bastille was built about 1369 as a military fortress, but from an early period it was used chiefly as a prison. Many distinguished persons, from "the Man in the Iron Mask" downwards, being confined in it. It had long been an object of intense hatred to the people of Paris, and they finally resolved to destroy it. On July 14, 1789, the Bastille was garrisoned by something over a hundred soldiers with DeLaunay in command. The mob of Paris howled round the walls, inspected the moat and drawbridge, and did not like the look of them, so a deputation of citizens got admitted to the central courtyard, but De Launay said he would blow up the Bastille rather than surrender. The deputation not going out quickly enough De Launay fired on it. The sight of blood maddened the mob which obtained cannon and small arms and settled down to attack and take the place, cost what it might. They tore down the drawbridge and set forward towards taking the main building. The attack went on for hours till the garrison was weary, and arranged terms of surrender with the leaders of the mob. De Launay and his soldiers were marched off to the town hall, but many of them were killed on the way. On succeeding days the Bastille was totally destroyed. For many days the fallen fortress was visited by crowds of curious and horrified citizens. They pierced its dark staircases and mysterious passages; they entered its awful cells, which reminded them of graves; they shuddered at the heavy chains in each dungeon, and the great stone which served as bed and as chair. Strange instruments of torture were found, but all of these devilish engines had been long unused, for the rule of Louis XVI. was mild. There was not found so much as one political prisoner in the Bastille, and only seven prisoners of any description. A duke told the King of France the news. "Why, that is a revolt," said Louis. "No, sire," said the duke, "it is a revolution." Thus the great French revolution was fairly launched on its career till Napoleon came to the top and despotism took control once more.

In One Day.

In America, it is said, there are many men who have added a million or two dollars to their "pile" between breakfast and luncheon; and more who have sat down to their breakfast table to write their cheque for a million, and have gone to bed without a dollar.

It is not long since Mr. Joseph Hoadley made £200,000 in five minutes by the clock on the New York Cotton Exchange; and before he sat down to his dinner he was £300,000 richer than when he cracked his morning egg.

The late Mr. Harriman once made £400,000 at the rate of £50,000 a minute; and on the same day one of his porters cleared £10,000. Mr. Theodore Price, a few years ago, made £100,000 in five minutes' gambling in cotton, and doubled his winnings before he went home.

Mr. J. J. Livermore, who but a few years ago was office-boy to a Boston broker, is credited with having added £100,000 to his capital in less time than it takes a man to eat his breakfast; while during a recent week Mr. Patten's profits on a speculation in maize totalled £400,000.

And the losses are on an equally magnificent scale. Mr. Joseph Leiter in one unhappy hour dropped £320,000 through a 20 cents fall in the price of wheat; Mr. Jacob Astor and two of his friends lost £600,000 between breakfast and luncheon; and a slump in Union Pacific cost a few millionaires, including Mr. J. J. Astor and Mr. Geolet, the appalling sum of £1,800,000.

Hr. Grace Notes.

It is with much regret we record the death, at British Columbia, through an accident, of Mr. George Makinson, son of Mrs. George Makinson of this town. The sad news was received by telegram on Monday last. For some years past Mr. Makinson had been engaged in the timber business, being the owner of a large mill, and had met his death through a quantity of lumber falling on him. He is survived by a widow and one son, besides a mother, two brothers, and three sisters, to all of whom we extend our sincere sympathy.

Mrs. Barrett, nee Miss Mary Pottle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pottle, Water Street West, is at present in town on a visit from Sydney. She is accompanied by her four children.

A concert given by the pupils of Victoria Street School, took place on Thursday evening last and proved a great success. The star items being a beautiful little operetta, entitled, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Each of the children, from the youngest tot to the older boys and girls, went through his or her part with a grace that won the applause of the large audience present after time. Great credit is due Miss Butt, the Principal, and Miss Cron, for the pains and trouble that must have been taken to train such a large number of youthful performers, and the children are to be congratulated on the success of their performance. The proceeds, which amounted to about $150.00, are to be devoted to the school.

The British Band Excursion to Bell Island took place on Wednesday, under conditions that were ideal. The steamer with the excursionists left the Public Wharf about 8 o'clock a.m., and returned Thursday morning about 7. Although not so successful numerically as might have been wished, those that took advantage of the occasion were delighted with the trip across the Bay. A football team from town accompanied the excursionists, and a match was played with a Bell Island team, which resulted in a draw, each side scoring two goals.

Mr. Allan Parsons, traveller for the Newfoundland Boot and Shoe Co., St. John's, is in town on a business trip.

Mrs. Freeman Yetman has just opened a grocery store in the one lately vacated by Miss Thomas on Water St. West.

Captain Dennis Hayse, who has made quite a record as a fish killer out of Boston, Mass., the past year or so, arrived home last week on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hayse, South Side, who will accompany their son on his return to the land of Uncle Sam.

Mr. Alexander Parsons (Lal), son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Parsons, motorist from St. John's on Saturday. Lal went over with the first five hundred of "ours," and was invalided from the Dardanelles. Later he joined the Canadian Flying Corps, and if we remember aright, had the honor of flying the first mail plane between Canada and the United States. Mr. Parsons is leaving again on Wednesday, and many friends join in lots of good wishes for his future welfare.

Mr. Thomas Goff, formerly of this town, but for the past nine years or so of New York, came in by Saturday night's train to spend the summer vacation with his friends. Before leaving Hr. Grace "Tom" was a very popular official of the Postal Telegraph Office, and his old friends are very pleased to see him once more amongst them.

Another football match, this time between a Heart's Content team and a Hr. Grace eleven, was played in Shannon Park on Saturday evening before quite a number of spectators, including visitors from Bay Roberts, Carbonear and Heart's Content. The game, which was an interesting one, was won by Hr. Grace boys, scoring 3 goals against the visitors' 2.

Misses Mary Ward and Elizabeth Foley are in town on holidays from the Capital City.

Codfish are still very scarce on the Hr. Grace "grounds," not more than ten or fifteen quintals being under salt up to the present time. Caplin, which "struck in" here last week, have also disappeared, due no doubt to the heavy Westerly winds of the past few days. Fishermen are anxiously looking forward to a change in the weather—"a North Easter with a tumble" to stir up the fish, which is thought to be in the deep water.

CORRESPONDENT.

Hr. Grace, July 11, 1920.

Issued By Authority.

Codfish Standardization Commission

TO THE FISHERMEN OF NEWFOUNDLAND:

PROPOSAL REGARDING THE METHODS TO BE ADOPTED TO IMPROVE THE CURE OF NEWFOUNDLAND CODFISH.

1. That the position of the Newfoundland Fisheries in relation to those of Norway, Iceland and Britain be placed before the fishermen and the public through the Press, and in any other manner that will illustrate the necessity for improving our cure of fish if we are to successfully market our fish in competition without that from other countries.
2. That a full and complete statement of the essential features of curing that must be adopted by all fishermen if the cure is to be improved shall be published and circulated throughout Newfoundland and Labrador.
3. That Inspectors shall be appointed whose duty it shall be to examine and inspect all fishery and curing stages, boats, etc., throughout Newfoundland and the Labrador with a view to—
 - (a) Explaining the methods to be adopted to improve the cure;
 - (b) Bringing about an improvement in the construction of sanitary conditions of Fishing Stages;
 - (c) To collect and distribute information as to catch of fish or other matters affecting the interests of the fishermen and the country generally.
- NOTE.—The Inspectors should eventually be given authority to condemn stages that are unfit for the sanitary curing of fish.
4. That fish purchased from the fishermen by exporters, whether in St. John's or in outports, shall be bought subject to a cull.
5. That all exports of fish from Newfoundland and the Labrador shall be inspected by duly qualified inspectors and certificates issued specifying the nature, style, cure and quality of the fish, and that specific standards shall, if possible, be laid down for the guidance of the Inspectors.

SUMMARISED, THE REQUIREMENTS MOST ESSENTIAL FOR IMPROVED CURING ARE:

- (1) Clean boats, stages and splitting tables.
- (2) Well split fish.
- (3) Fish to be well washed from knife—all blood, liver and gut to be removed.
- (4) Clean stage for curing fish.
- (5) Regularity in salting.
- (6) Fish to be washed thoroughly on back and face when taken from salt bulk.
- (7) Fish to be bled as soon as taken from the water when possible.

LABRADOR.

Same qualities for all markets.

No. 1 FISH.

Fish to be split to the crux of the tail, washed from the knife, free from blood stains, clots, liver and gut. To be firm, thoroughly salted and well pressed. To be washed out of salt bulk by hand. All slub and slime removed from back. To be dried sufficiently to stand shipment without loss in weight. Fish not complying with these requirements to be classed as No. 2 quality and to be stowed in such a manner in the vessel as to form a distinct part of the cargo.

SHORE FISH CURED LABRADOR STYLE

To be known as Imitation Labrador. All Shore Fish cured Labrador style will be graded as such and not as Labrador, and must be cured as above. The making of this quality of Imitation Labrador is not encouraged as the demand will be very limited.

The black should be removed from the fins of Shore and Bank Fish from 18 inches up. Such fish when well cured will be classed Extra No. 1 and will command the highest price.

CURING OF FISH.

Fish is an article of food, and this fact must be kept clearly before all those who have the handling of it from the time it is caught until it reaches the consumer's table. Unfortunately, this fact is lost sight of by nearly all those who are occupied in the Fisheries of Newfoundland, whether they be the catchers, curers or exporters. There is not sufficient care exercised by any one of the several classes of handlers. The fishermen in their anxiety to get their catch under salt forget the fact that the fish they are curing is to be eaten by some person many thousands of miles away possibly many months hence. The exporters in their desire to, first: secure a large stock, and second: to send it to market quickly, also lose sight of the same fact. This must change, and in future all interested in the fisheries must always remember that they are handling an article of food, and treat it accordingly.

The first essential feature of all processes for handling food products is cleanliness. The boats into which the live fish are thrown from trap or hook must be clean, sweet and free from gurry of past catches. The stage upon which the fish are thrown from the boat must be clean. The splitting tables must be clean and kept clean throughout the whole time that the fish is passing over it. The curing stages must be thoroughly cleaned before the season opens, and kept clean during the whole season. Pound boards should be well washed frequently. Water is plentiful and cheap and should be used without stint. Stages should be limed at least once every year, inside and out.

With thoroughly clean boats, stage heads, splitting tables and stages, the first step towards good fish is secured. The next is cleanliness in handling the fish. All blood, livers and gut should be removed; all slime and gurry thoroughly washed off before the fish is put under salt. This can only be done by well washing the fish when split in plenty of clean water.

The fish should be split to the crux of the tail and laid open evenly without pockets. The sound bone should be removed to about half an inch beyond the end of the sound, to allow the blood in the bone to drain out. If this is done the fish, on going to salt, will have every chance of turning out of salt bulk or pickle a perfect fish.

Salting should be done with care. Much fish is spoiled by irregular salting and by careless packing in bulks. Salting should be completed without delay. Fish should not be laid away to be salted at convenience. Washing out from salt bulk should be done by hand—every fish being washed back and face separately. Eighteen hds. Cadiz salt should be used in salting Labrador cure. Shore cure should not be bulked higher than three feet and from ten to twelve hds. Cadiz salt to the hundred quintals.

The length of time for remaining in salt bulk or pickle is a matter for the judgment of the person in charge of the curing, as also in the curing once the fish has been washed out of bulk.

In some cases it is thought advisable that hook and line men should throat their fish immediately they are removed from the hook. This permits the fish to bleed, and not only insure a whiter fish but retards decay of the fish.

The foregoing approved by the Standardization Commission.

Minister Marine and Fisheries.

"Moonshining" in Many Lands.

The introduction of prohibition into the United States, and the continued arrests of many persons for having liquor illicitly in their possession, has brought to light the fact that there was once a war in America over the distilling of contraband spirits.

The American colonists, having risen against the Mother Country over the Tea Tax, found their own Government insisting on a Revenue tax on all spirits. The people of Eastern Pennsylvania strongly objected, and when their objections were over-ruled, actually rose in arms.

The business is recorded in U.S. history under the title of "the Whisky Insurrection," and the great President Washington had to raise a force of 16,000 men to subdue the trouble. Many homesteads were burnt, and quite a number of lives lost before peace was finally restored.

The countries which have always been "up agin" the tax on spirits are Ireland and the States of Kentucky and Tennessee in the United States.

The game is known as "moonshining," because, while the stills may be worked by day, the illicitly-distilled liquor is always distributed at night.

In Ireland the Royal Irish Constabulary are always busy hunting moonshiners, and hardly a month passes without the discovery of a still.

When a still is found it is destroyed, and any store of liquor discovered is treated in the same way. Just before the war a party of police raided a still in County Mayo, and, as one of them said, "It went to our hearts to burst up the kegs and pour all that good liquor down the drain."

But they did their job, and went away. When they were gone the owners of the still, who had been in hiding, returned. They took up the grating above the drain, removed some brickwork, and drew up a large cask full of whisky. Knowing what would happen, they had prepared for the police visit by gutting this cask in position beforehand.

Mountaineer Moonshiners.
All through that wild, wooded country, which surrounds Panther Knob and Little Frog Mountain in Tennessee, the mountaineers still defy Prohibition, just as for generations past they have defied the Revenue authorities.

One of the most wonderful characters ever known in this district was Betsy Sims, "the beautiful giantess." Betsy was six feet in height, splendidly built, extraordinarily handsome, and the head of an organized gang of distillers.

The Revenue men tracked her at last, and found her in a hidden "still house" in the most inaccessible part of the ranges. Even then she refused to surrender. She fired the place, and tried to escape under cover of the smoke.

An officer saw her and seized her. She drew a knife and stabbed him. It took three men to make her a prisoner.

The story of two brothers, Silas and Milos Wood, is well known in this region. They had a still. An acquaintance, David Payne, wanted to come in. They refused, whereupon he returned, Revenue men and arrested them.

They served a year's imprisonment. When they got out Milos sent Payne a message not to come "a-breshing against my palings."

David came. There was a quarrel. He shot Milos and his uncle, and himself went to the "pen" (prison) for ten years. From this murder started a feud which still rages among the fierce mountain men.

Marvelously Loyal.

They are marvelously loyal one to another, these moonshiners. A man called Gus Heddon had long defied the law, but at last was tracked down and caught in the very act of working a still.

He turned, to find two "Revenue" men with their pistols pointed at his head. At that moment, through the open window, he saw his partner, Silas Reilly, coming down the path with a bag of meal over his shoulder. The "Revenue" men saw him, too.

"You make a sound, Gus," threatened one of them, "and I'll shoot you dead!"
Gus Heddon's reply was to shout a warning to Reilly at the top of his voice. Next moment the pistol spoke, and he fell, mortally wounded.

Go up into that country to-day, and you will find these men living in one-room shacks. The walls are loopholed, and a Winchester or Martini repeating rifle hangs in a rack above the fireplace.

Do not fancy, however, that illicit distilling is confined to the wild parts of the United States. There are stills in the big cities. Not many years ago the New York authorities became aware that the Revenue was being defrauded in this manner on a very extensive scale. They set their best detectives to work, and gradually unearthed a huge conspiracy.

No fewer than 238 people were arrested as members of the Whisky Conspiracy Ring, and it was found that they had defrauded the country to the almost incredible extent of $2,786,000.

The devices resorted to for tapping off the spirits which they produced in their hidden stills were extraordinarily ingenious. In one case, the turning of a gas-cock produced a flow of whisky from the gas-tap.

MACHINES THAT HAVE BETRAYED CRIMINALS.

With the blackmailer and many other types of criminals, the anonymous letter has always been a very useful expedient.

It is a common belief that a letter written by a typewriter cannot be identified. That this idea is ill-founded was proved in the recent "E.S. minute" case. It will be remembered that this case collapsed with dramatic suddenness when certain anonymous typewritten letters were traced to a witness who had denied all knowledge of them.

This startling revelation was brought about by the managing director of a well-known typewriter company, who is an expert typewriter detective.

"Despite the supposed standardization of machines," said this unconventional sleuth to the T. B. man, "there are really no two machines in the world which are exactly alike."

"The cause of this individuality among typewriters is that the type is not engraved—which would be a far too laborious and costly task—but goes through a process called 'rolling up,' in which it is struck out by a revolving stamp. This produces irregularities obvious to an expert eye. In fact, when a typewriter leaves the factory, a specimen of its writing is always retained and signed by the adjuster. Should any complaint arise, a letter written upon the machine will always enable us to trace it back to the mechanic who passed it."

A Dramatic Case.

"One typewriter will reveal to the expert an incomplete 'o,' or a 'p' which always strikes a trifle below the line, while a few minutes' further study will show him a dozen different idiosyncrasies which serve to make that particular machine unique."

"Again, the individuality of the operator always shows through his or her typing. In the recent case at Manchester the typist in question revealed herself by her habit of writing long words on a fresh line, instead of dividing and hyphenating them."

"I have never failed to trace a document to the machine used in writing it. Most people who are the recipients of unsigned letters of a defamatory or blackmailing nature have a vague idea as to who the sender is. In investigating a case, therefore, my first step is to secure a specimen of writing from a likely machine, and compare it with the offending letter. This leaves no doubt as to the innocence or guilt of the suspect."

"I once investigated a very dramatic case which demonstrated the extremely tell-tale nature of the typewriter. A man, wishing to bring about the death of a certain woman, wrote on his typewriter an anonymous letter to her doctor. In it he suggested to the physician that it would be worth his while to poison his patient."

"After a short time, however, he learnt that the doctor, so far from acting upon his dastardly suggestion, was probing the matter. Growing alarmed as the net of investigation was closing around him, he took a poker and battered his typewriter, explaining on inquiry that he had had an accident and dropped the machine."

"But in spite of the rogue's attempt to mask his guilt, the damaged typewriter still retained enough evidence to secure him a well-deserved sentence."

Nameless Men-of-War.

The other day, on the James River at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, was launched the dreadnaught, Maryland. There were press photographers and there were hundreds of burly workers whose labor had gone to put her together. She has 32,000 tonnage, is 600 feet long and will have as her first battery eight 16-inch guns and, of course, a full quota of smaller calibers. As modern warships go, she has no bad lines and ought to make a useful member of the American fleet; we are told that she has been "designed to be the most powerful warship afloat," and, for the sake of the American Navy, we trust that this will prove to be the case. The professional observer, however, is bound to point out the fact that, when completed and fitted, her usefulness will be much increased by having aboard a full crew properly trained, and such a thing seems hard to find at present. The problem is somewhat different for the merchant marine, in which building goes on steadily and there seems to be little anxiety about crews. For instance, at Hog Island during the year ending March 31, there will have been launched 611,575 dead-weight tons of steel ships and there will have been delivered some 686,875 dead-weight tons of ships. The first ship that Hog Island turned out was the Quisconck and was christened by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. The ship has a record of 60,000 steaming miles and after doing 37,500 miles was dry-docked and was found to be in good condition. Hog Island in 1919, had an average daily working force of 30,000 and consumed a staggering amount of material; all this is fine enough, but the merchant marine is always dependent on the navy, and these by a mile long and have guns that shoot twice around the Horn, they are of no particular use without crews. Steamships are not propelled by wind—"Christian Science Monitor."

Tea and Entertainment.

At "Home for Aged and Infirm," by Wesley Church Epworth League. It was our privilege yesterday afternoon to be present at a pleasant time arranged for the inmates of "Our Home for the Aged and Infirm," for it is time to drop that unfair and unworthy name, "The Poor House," for it is not now the most dismal place on earth, and it is not now ill lighted, and ill ventilated and situated in the "region of smells." The Lady Superintendent, Mrs. Ross, had done great things, and her successor, Mrs. Miller, and her assistants have accomplished wonders in a short time. To the new Superintendent, Mr. A. Miller, must be accorded great credit for the transformation of many discreditable surroundings, into more satisfactory conditions. The inmates were most cheerful, not a single complaint of food, or treatment, and had the kindest words for the Matron, Wardens, and Assistants. The tea served was a very beautiful one, cake and pies, ice cream, candy and oranges for all, with some tobacco extra for the men. One hundred and ten sat down to tea, and about twenty bedridden patients were served in their rooms. The concert opened at seven, the piano exercises by Miss O'Donnell, perhaps seventy-five years of age, amazed everybody. The skill of many years ago remains in her fingers and the old time melodies in her memory. The selections were both classical, difficult, and brilliant. After two encores she sang very sweetly the old popular air, "When You and I Were Young." Mr. Saunders also sang, "Tip to Kelligrews," which was loudly applauded. Mr. Geo. Cox gave a first rate solo, and Miss M. Abbott contributed two lovely songs. A vote of thanks to Mr. Miller, Supt., the Salvation Army Band, Mr. Moore and friends for valuable services of the Band, was spoken to by Mr. Mark Pike, President, seconded by Mr. Pelley. Mr. A. W. Miller replied with a fine address. The Chairman congratulated the young people of the League in giving up their afternoon to make others happy, their motto in action, "Look up and Lift up." Speaking of the improved conditions in "The Home," electric light, etc., he hoped the Government would point it in this fall. After the speech the S. A. Band played two verses of "Abide with me, fast fall the evening," and the entire audience, about three hundred, rose and sang the verses "I fear no foe," and "Hold thou thy Cross." Those in residence started cheers for the entertainers, and the strains of "God Save the King," terminated a very pleasant time for all. There is no joy so genuine as bringing an hour of cheerfulness to sad, and sick and aged for "Inasmuch... ye did it unto Me." A.W.M.

Bedrooms & Beds

There's nothing more important to the bedroom than the Bed itself, is there? From the point of usefulness or ornament it ranks first. Does your Bed suit your taste? Does it harmonize with your room? Does it give you the sleep-comfort you need? No? Well, then it's time to discard it and get another, quick.

We are showing All-Brass, Brass and Enamel, and All-Enamel Beds in all sizes and very fine designs. Each and all of which Beds can be fitted with Springs and Wool or Felt Mattresses if desired.
