FRIDAY AUGUST 1, 1890

THE NEGOTIATIONS

The correspondence between the British Government and the United States Secretary of State relative to the Behring's Sea dispute shows that the United States has given up the claim to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over the Behring's Sea. It is not contained in the correspondence that the Sea is a "Mare Clausum," and that therefore the United States has a right to prevent the ships of other nations entering it for hunting seals or for any other purpose.

Settlers, our contemporary has made a discovery. It has found out that the change has come too late to do any good.

ON SUSPECTS

If all accounts are true the census which is being taken in the United States is not reliable. Parties interested in making their cities in which they have an interest look well in the census returns, have not hesitated to perpetrate the grossest frauds in order to make it appear that they contain more inhabitants than they do. Minneapolis men are accused of having resorted to all kinds of unscrupulous tricks to give their city a good appearance in the census. They are bound to send Minneapolis a long way ahead of St. Paul, and the citizens of St. Paul are determined that the reality of their neighbors shall not be successful.

THE VERY REVERSE OF LIBERAL TO BLAME THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT FOR LISTENING TO THE WHISPER OF PUBLIC OPINION.

ON SUSPECTS

When the late Mr. Justice, who was submitted to in his behalf containing "some of the same wrongs" described in the census returns, was only five judges, five bishops, and a dean, and some six hundred eminent statesmen and mathematicians.

Two years ago 8000 whales were driven ashore on the estate of Mr. Bruce at Dunburgh, in the north of Scotland, and they were killed and sold. Mr. Bruce at once demanded that a third of the value of the whales (6000) should be paid to him, in accordance with an ancient custom, by which the "third" of the whale was to be paid to the proprietor of the land on which the whales were driven ashore.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY.

Those who think that Canada is going backwards—and there are, we believe, some who are really of that opinion—have formed their conclusions without enquiry. They have listened to the croakers and the grumblers until they had brought themselves to believe that the country is in a bad way; that it is not only not prospering, but that it is growing poorer and poorer. If these hypothetical creatures would take the trouble to look about them, and think upon what they say, they would see that they were laboring under a dismal delusion, and were fretting about evils that have no existence. One of the best indications of prosperity of a country is the amount deposited in the banks. If the deposits do not increase it is safe to conclude that the very little business is done and that the people are not accumulating riches. If, on the other hand, the deposits increase it is certain that the volume of business has become greater and that the people are saving money. Tried by this test the prosperity of Canada during the last ten years is shown to be great. The following comparative statement gives a very emphatic denial to those who assert that Canada is not prospering. Canadians deposited in 1880. 1890. Loan companies $11,715,000 $18,000,000 Savings banks 13,257,000 20,746,000 Chartered banks 77,891,000 128,631,000 The savings banks deposits in 1890 are nearly triple of what they were in 1880, and the increase of the population is very far indeed from being in the same ratio. This shows two things: That the people have more money than they had ten years ago, and that they are more provident. For one dollar there was in the savings banks in 1880, there are three there now. The number of depositors has, no doubt, increased very considerably, as well as the amount of the deposits. We direct attention to the savings banks for the reason that they are the banks of the working class. The large capitalists and the business men very seldom use the savings banks, but it is in them that the depositors of the wage-earners, generally, deposit their savings.

The reader will observe that the aggregate increase of the deposits amounts to very nearly ninety millions of dollars. This is an immense sum of money, and, when there are three times as many depositors as there were ten years ago, it can show so large a proportionate increase in the same period.

NOT AN IDLE MAN.

Mr. Justin McCarthy might well describe the Prince of Wales as a very busy man. Here is a record of one week's work taken from the London Times: On Monday his Royal Highness held a levee on behalf of the Queen at St. James's palace, and afterwards opened a new public park at Vauxhall. On Tuesday he laid the first stone of the Royal School for Music at South Kensington; on Wednesday he opened the new cricket ground at Paddington. The Prince of Wales, at Marlborough House, presented certificates to nearly one thousand nurses who had joined the National Pension Fund for Nurses. On this occasion the Prince made one of the pleasant and appropriate speeches of which Mr. McCarthey speaks so highly. There was a state concert, too, on Friday, at Buckingham palace, given by the Queen's command. The Prince of Wales was most probably present. Some of these ceremonies were no doubt very fatiguing, and to the Prince, who had gone through so many of them, terribly dull. There were speeches to be made, too, which required preparation. It will be seen from this on-line of one week's work that the Prince of Wales is very far from being an idle man. The speech which he made at the presentation of the nurses' certificates is published in the Weekly Times of the 11th inst., and it is not by any means one of mere compliment. It contains a great deal of information relative to the fund, and the manner of its administration, and the benefits that had been derived from it, showed that he had given a good deal of attention to it and that he took quite a warm interest in the scheme. One passage, as it relates directly to us in this distant part of the world, we will reproduce for the benefit of our readers. It is this: "I understand that the colonial authorities are taking an interest in the premium fund because all nurses working in the British Empire are eligible to join it, and it is a very valuable and profitable plan as that adopted by the London and Guy's Hospitals and other institutions. No one can do without a nurse sooner or later, and all must hope that the council will feel justly, by the result, in their belief that these proceeds will be used to support a fund for the benefit of the nursing profession, and to join the pension fund, and that a great many people will be moved to enquire about it."

MR. HERING'S REPORT.

Mr. Rodolph Hering's report appears to have been carefully drawn up. We do not presume to be a judge of its merits. His opinion is the opinion of an expert and an expert can intelligently pronounce upon it. The choice of a system of sewers and the value of the time in striving to attain the utmost, are matters which have always attended, he made and estimated by a professional man of tried skill and acknowledged ability. Mr. Hering, we understand, is an engineer of high standing in his profession. Having after due care selected him as their adviser the Corporation must be guided by his advice. They have no choice except to consult another engineer of still higher reputation. There will not, we think, be any necessity for doing that. Mr. Hering has examined the ground. He has obtained information from those most competent to impart it, and he has, no doubt, carefully considered and compared the plans submitted to him for selection. The City Council have reason to conclude that he has chosen the best. He has also estimated the cost of the sewers. The sum required is a large one, but not larger than we anticipated. The citizens of Victoria need not complain if the drainage of their city does not cost them when completed, more than half a million of dollars. Mr. Hering's estimate is considerably within that sum. He has

THE BRITISH GRENADIERS.

The Grenadier Guards have been punished for insubordination. Disobedience could not be tolerated in the service, and the men who hesitated to obey orders and all who belonged to the same battalion have been exiled to Bermuda. The nation, although it sees the necessity of maintaining discipline and acquiesces in the banishment of the pet corps, sympathizes with the men. It may be safely concluded that they were harshly used. With the British soldier obedience has become almost an instinct. He is from the first day he enters the ranks taught the necessity of prompt, unquestioning obedience to orders. After a while he obeys without thinking. When the bugle called the men of the 2nd Battalion of Grenadier Guards to parade many of the men, no doubt, jumped to their feet, forgetful of the fact that they had agreed to disobey the call. Why was this? The men had been harassed by drills and inspections and guard duty until their flesh and blood could stand them no longer. That particular inspection was required at a time when many of the men were rested and needed rest. To show that they resented such treatment they refused to turn out when the bugle sounded. When, afterwards, their officers came to the men's quarters and entreated them to come on parade, they followed, went into the barracks square and quietly fell in. They had accomplished their purpose. They had proved to their commanding officer, Col. Matland, that he had gone far enough, and that it would be dangerous to worry them much longer. The men seem to have known that their officers would be punished, and punished severely, for their disobedience, for they tried to prevail upon the married men, on whom punishment would fall most heavily, to obey the bugle call. For the greater number of them refused to appear to desert their comrades. They remained in their rooms until their officers called them out. It appears that an enquiry was made into the soldiers' grievances. General Philip Smith, commanding the Home District, had the "order" books for some time back examined to ascertain what drill had been done by the battalion had performed, and it was found to be excessive. The War Office saw that the men had been badly used, and they were released by General Smith from confinement to barracks. The authorities found it impossible to overlook their offences, and so the men were sent to Bermuda. But Col. Matland did not go with them. The punishment does not appear to be a very severe one for the greater number of the men. Those of them who are paroled from their quarters and families will fill the exile long and distressing, but the remainder will be quite as well off in Bermuda as they were in London. It is not likely that their banishment will last longer than two years. A quarter of a century ago the man would not have been so severely punished for what he had done. It is a sad thing that the men would not have been punished severely for the act of insubordination, no matter how they had been treated by their officers. The enquiry, if it came at all, would come after the punishment had been inflicted.

STANDING ARMIES.

Yesterday we noticed the hopes and aspirations of the members of the Peace Congress. A significant comment on the speeches of these hopeful friends of peace is the fact that both Germany and Austria have recently made considerable additions to their already garrisoned establishments. General Capri, the new German Chancellor, has obtained from the Reichstag an increase of 18,000 men to Germany's standing army, and the sum of 18,000,000 marks as a supplement to the ordinary appropriations for military purposes. General Bauer, the Austro-Hungarian war minister, has applied to the representative of the people for an addition of 2,500 men to the army and a vote of 20,000,000 marks for military purposes. The number of soldiers that almost a day's notice can be brought into the field is simply enormous. According to a paper lately laid before the German Parliament the full strength of the armies of the five great powers of Europe is as follows: France.....3,000,000 Russia.....2,773,000 Germany.....2,900,000 Austro-Hungary.....1,150,000 Italy.....1,100,000 All these eleven millions of men are not actually in barracks but they are all trained soldiers, fully armed and equipped, at the call of the several nations as a moment's notice. The energy that has been displayed in fitting these men for the butchery trade, the time that has been lost in training them, and the money that has been expended in paying and feeding and arming them can hardly be computed. The change which is taking place in the world is a very remarkable one, and it is not surprising that the nations who are making them a burden on the State have made in the social and economic condition of the Old World is something that men who possess the greatest abilities and the widest intelligence cannot even imagine.

THE ADVOCATES OF PEACE.

The members of the Peace Congress are regarded by many as a number of naive enthusiasts who are ignorant of the nature of the war, and who are long as human nature is, they can never be attained. Henry Ward Beecher was in his old age obliged to confess that the proposition which he uttered in the days of the South, that the era of universal peace had commenced, and that the world was now a garden, was a mere delusion. He said that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden. He said that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden.

THE ADVOCATES OF PEACE.

The members of the Peace Congress are regarded by many as a number of naive enthusiasts who are ignorant of the nature of the war, and who are long as human nature is, they can never be attained. Henry Ward Beecher was in his old age obliged to confess that the proposition which he uttered in the days of the South, that the era of universal peace had commenced, and that the world was now a garden, was a mere delusion. He said that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden, and that the world was a garden.

TRAILING ITS COAT-TAIL.

Our attention has been directed to a very singular article in the Nanaimo Free Press of Thursday last. The writer of that article was evidently very anxious to find something to say against the Government...

Germany, who is right belonged to Great Britain, and he is in return for these concessions in a few unimportant possessions in Europe, and one of very great value. The Government has accepted from Germany, they contend, territory which British travellers had explored and which British merchants had brought into contact with civilization...

UNNECESSARY VIOLENCE.

The Nanaimo Free Press renews its attacks on the Colonist. Reflection has shown it that there was nothing in our leading article at which any sensible man could take offence.

A RICH COUNTRY.

The account which Mr. A. W. Smith, M.P., gives of Lillooet shows that it is a fine country, possessing varied resources. A country in which cattle can be kept the year round without any special care.

AN ANGOLOPHOBIST.

Joseph Nimmo, Jr., a very able anti-British and anti-Canadian writer, has been for some time trying to create ill-feeling among the people of the United States against Canada.
