FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 10, 1882.

OVER RANGUNE.

It was not to be expected that the queen's speech would contain a confession of the failure of the legislation for Ireland passed during the last session, but unless there has been some vast conspiracy among all classes of people, landlords, tenants and laborers, liberal, conservative, whigs, Tories, home rulers and land leaguers, to systematically misrepresent the actual condition of affairs in that most unhappy island, the congratulatory language of that paragraph of the speech which refers to Ireland is far from being justified by the facts.

It may be that the government is in possession of information which points to the dawn of an era of peace and good-will between the landlords and the rest of the Irish people, and which indicates that the people are coming to regard the land act as something which will give the needed relief, but if so it is seized of information which has strangely escaped all other observers.

To the ordinary looker-on it does appear that the working of the land act has, so far, verified the predictions of Mr. Parnell, not those of Mr. Gladstone. It has not satisfied the tenants, it has exasperated the landlords.

The landlords claim that for the government to declare that the relation of their tenants to themselves is one of status not of contract; for the government to interfere through the courts to fix the rents, is practically to deny that the landlord is not the actual owner of the land. On the other hand the land leaguers claim that the act is tantamount to an admission that the landlord is not actually the owner and that therefore rents, no matter how low they may be scaled, are indefensible.

It is, we think, difficult to the verge of impossibility to reconcile the two bitterly hostile elements. Naturally the landlords view, and will continue to view, the act as a piece of confiscation undertaken to bribe away addition, while the believers in the doctrines of the land league will only look on it as a small modicum of natural right grudgingly dolled out not from a desire to do justice but through fear.

THE PARNELL QUESTION.

A good deal has been said from time to time recently about Parnell's waning influence, and we have been assured over and over again that he had lost the confidence of his friends, but it would seem that all such statements have been, to say the least, premature. The land leaguers in parliament, instead of evincing any desire or intention to repudiate their imprisoned leader, seem to be enthusiastically anxious to proclaim their devotion to him.

Should Mr. Gladstone succeed in getting his proposed new rules for preventing what the majority of the house may choose to consider unnecessary discussion adopted, he will probably be able to prevent a searching discussion of the circumstances of Mr. Parnell's arrest and imprisonment, but if he fails in this he may find it somewhat difficult to say for what reason Mr. Parnell was arrested, and with what crime he is charged. Even if it were true that the Irish leader had been guilty of some offence of which the law takes cognizance, the government would hardly care to name his crime, for then he could not be refused the privilege of a speedy and fair trial before a jury of his peers, and thus the real object of his arrest, the securing of his absence from the house and the platform and of his enforced silence, would be defeated.

It cannot be said, at least by the members of the government, that the land league agitation was not justifiable, for the land act is a living acknowledgment to the contrary, and while every lover of fair play must feel that much must be excused in Mr. Gladstone's trying position, it must not be doubted whether the incarceration of a representative of the people and his enforced absence from the seat to which his constituents elected him, can be justified.

SOURDISPENSE PARAGRAPHS. We have noticed paragraphs in the editorial columns of the Mail from time to time relating to the above subject, wherein they have not only soundly berated certain journals for their abusive tone but have lamented that such modes of "journalism" should exist. After what appeared to be an exposition of its principles in this direction, we naturally looked to the Mail as a bright and shining example of parity in political writing, but in this expectation we have been cruelly disappointed. On glancing over its editorial pages for the period since the local parliament has been in session, the reader would be astonished and disgusted at the violent and abusive articles that have been daily served up by its editor. His stock of scurrilous and vituperative epithets seem to be as inexhaustible as his supply of literary similes. Referring to the Hon. Mr. Mowat—a high-minded man and an honest politician—we find this high-handed writer is not satisfied with insultingly dubbing him "a pretentious impostor," and charging him with "perpetrating disgraceful falsehoods," but "this same little parrot" is termed "a perfectly complete humbug!" His colleagues also receive the benefit of editorial attention, Mr. Hardy being characterized as a "reckless trickster," "an unscrupulous public servant," "a knave," "not only truculent and offensive, but untruthful as well," and Mr. Mackenzie is termed "a shrewd and elegant politician," while the whole cabinet are elegantly termed "a blatant crew of important traitors," and their supporters a lot of "scatter brains."

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY AND POLITICS. "TO THE WORLD: Your correspondent as an Englishman, who has recently written his former very well upon many points, but of course as a lately arrived Englishman would be likely to do has not the marks of all things—especially to be at fault in attacking the character of our late excellent president, Mr. Allworth, who is not only a whole-hearted friend of the poor, but has undoubtedly been one of the most successful presidents the St. George's society ever had.

Most assertions without proof fall dead upon the ear of thought and I confidently appeal to the present financial and benevolent condition of the society to become aware of my assertion that Mr. Allworth has justly won the respect and esteem of all unbiassed Englishmen in Canada and I greatly regret that a haughty majority should have attempted to withhold from Mr. Allworth the customary honors justly due to the man who has done more for the society than any other member of the society, and who is not only a member of the society, but one of its founders.

It is this representative of the nineteenth century no wonder medievalists are sighing for the middle ages.

THE MEAT WE EAT. A Government Day in the Assembly—A Death of a Bureaucrat—Tenders for Public Works.

Yesterday was a government day, but there was no business ready, and the afternoon was taken up principally by motions from private members. Mr. Mowat proposed a measure in reference to the territory included in the boundary award, which will be looked for with great interest. The only warmth was a discussion of appointments of members to shrievalties in their own counties, which the opposition intended was not in accord with the principles laid down by Mr. Blake, while ministerialists said they were within the qualifications made by him at the time. Incidentally Mr. Lauder had to defend himself as one of "the nine martyrs" of the beginning of Sandfield Macdonald's regime.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE. A Government Day in the Assembly—A Death of a Bureaucrat—Tenders for Public Works. Yesterday was a government day, but there was no business ready, and the afternoon was taken up principally by motions from private members.

By ACTUAL COURT seven hundred and thirty-two Trenchards, more or less, carefully and eagerly read the details of the Ryan-Sullivan fight and then declared it utterly disgraceful for the papers to publish such degrading sensations.

Frederick Johnson. We dispute altogether that it is necessary in a province like New Brunswick to have a governor and maintain a government house with the paraphernalia attendant thereon, at a cost from year to year of something in the neighborhood of $20,000. In the state of Maine, a sovereign state in many respects, not the dependency of a dependency, as New Brunswick is, they manage to get along with a governor to whom they pay about a thousand dollars, yet their population is double ours.

TRUCULENT JOURNALISM. TO THE WORLD: For the honor, may the respectability of journalism, I would ask nothing to be done to restrain the extravagance and truculence of the Toronto Mail. Time was when it was recognized as an able party organ, albeit unscrupulous as party organs in this country generally are; but then it did not, as now, brazen out again and again exploded falsehoods and vilify, without a shadow of excuse or justification, the personal characters of our public men. (I refer to a period subsequent to that when it was declared necessary to stab a political opponent under the ribs every morning before breakfast.) It looks as if the most odious had gone forth from a high quarter, not only to carry fire and sword into the enemy's camp, but to pollute the whole political atmosphere with stink gas manufactured in the Mail building—an edifice which surely might be devoted to nobler and more elevated purposes. The attacks which for some time past have been levelled at Messrs. Blake, Mowat, Hardy and Pardee are not such as can possibly help the interests of the conservative party, and which, like the New Brunswick papers, are not to be depreciated by liberals—but it is not time that journalists of all political stripes rose to a higher ideal of duty towards the not unimportant public to whom their publications are addressed, and whose opinions they seek to form. The Mail editor is aptly described in an essay by a well known Edinburgh reviewer: "With a few obvious alterations perhaps you will allow me to transcribe it: 'The species of talent which he pretends to be humble—and he possesses—it has not done that which all men may do and which every man ought to do, who makes his superiors not doing it, and that the liberals laid down rules which they were not willing to be bound by afterwards. Hon. Mr. Pardee said the only object of Mr. Meredith was to cover the government with inconsistency. At Ottawa members were appointed to officiate by the score, and Mr. Meredith approved of it. He had failed in the object of his motion.

Motion carried. Mr. Ross moved for a return of the number of coroners' inquests and the cost of them before and since the recent act. In his county it had reduced the number one half.

AGRICULTURAL SHOWS. Mr. Hay, in moving for a return about agricultural shows, thought it was not distributed rightly, and should be devoted more according to the amount of interest taken in shows, the number of members in societies, and the work done.
