cision to issue a war journal is meeting with criticism from the press. It is considered inconsistent with the Government's proposal to issue an order for newspapers to cut their size to save paper. If there is a necessity for saving paper the Government should not use up what the newspapers are made to save. It is argued that the Government might petter supply war information direct to the newspapers as the best available medium of communication with the public, which seems logical.

Sift Your Coal Aahes

It is impossible to make an exact est-

It is impossible to make an exact estimate of the coal wasted in Canada each year through the carting away of unconsumed carbon, but it is tremendous. A glauce at any ash heap in the spring, after the melting snow or spring rains have washed away ashes from the cinders, will show much coal unconsumed. The most careful furnace or range firing will not overcome this loss. Coal which lies against the metal firepot only burns from one side, and, when shaken out, it has not done its full duty. This coal when separated from the ash is again available. All ashes should, therefore, be well sifted to secure this fuel. You may be able to afford to throw these cinders away. You may, by some

Is it right for a school trustee to take odd jobs around the school, such as hauling wood, etc.? COUNTRYSIDE.

Lambton County.

(Morally, we can see nothing wrong with driving to church in a motor car, but while the necessity of saving gasoline is existant, it would be the part of any good loyal citizen to leave the car in the garage if any other mode of transportation were available. No, it is not right for a trustee to take pay from himself when it is a question of the public's money.—SUN EDITOR.)

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S ASTORIA

Three Essex men, whose combined ages totalled up to 273 years, died in one day last week. They were Dr. W. R. Merwin aged 87 years, John Moffit aged 102 years, Stewart Lane aged 84 years. 102 years, Stewart Lane aged 84 years.

A particularly sed death occurred at Dunwich Saturday, when the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Barret, of Coynes road was blown into a well and drowned. The little gurl and her sister had gone to the neighbor's to play with Mrs. Brown's children, and were there only a short time when the accident happened. Mrs. Brown went to the well to draw a pail of water, and the little girl followed her. Mrs. Brown was just in the act of placing the cover on the well when the little tot was blown by a gnst of wind and fell over the wall.

A pleasent medicine for children is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, and there is nothing better for driving worms from the system.

National Fish Day

October 31st is National Fish Day. It is the new national day which for its benefits ought to be as well known as Thanksgiving. The intention is to make known the tremendous wealth of our Canadian seas and lakes, now largely going to waste because people's tastes have run toward meat. At present the annual value of Canadian fisheries is $52,000,000 or only about one-eighth of a dollar a week for each person. Forty three years ago it was $35,--000,000. The fish industry and fish consumption have not kept pace with the general progress of the country. A revival is long overdue. average price of fish is about onehalf that of meat, so that the housewife who insists upon getting fish from her local dealer combats the high cost of living. National Fish Day was established to give a right direction to the thought of the people respecting fish in the ordinary home diet. Eat fish October 31st.

Fighting The "Flu"

Spanish influenza, or the "grippe" of a generation ago as a new thing, is with us again and seeking full possession of the people. It has invaded almost every the people. It has invaded almost every province of the Dominion and is epidem-ic in twenty-three States of our neighbors over the line. The military camps, whose medical measures are unexcelled and whose men are of the best calibre, are in the "thick of the fight" against this enemy. Most doctors and nurses in attendance on influenza cases wear masks, the latter asing layers of cambric or linen or other fine material over the mouth, nose and ears to keep out the germ. Some physicians are advocating their general use by people during the epidemic.

In an excellent review of the situation by the Literary Digest of last week, this magazine in answer to the question,

"How to fight the influenza," has glean, ed from several authorities much useful suggestion. The following will be of interest:

Pneumonia developes in one of every thirteen cases of influenza and is a most treacherous and fatal allı. When the patient is apparently recovering and leaves his bed too early the germ gets its deadly opportunity. "A word to the wise," etc.

"Fear is our worst enemy," "The man who worries is already half beaten," "from battle to disease the cool fighter wins," "Because you have a cold do wins," "Because you have a cold do not at once conclude that you are on the road to pneumonia, but conclude the opposite and the chances are that you will win out," "If we keep our system in good condition and avoid fear or apprehension of contagion, we shall be reasonably certain to escape it," are among the significent suggestions.

any certain to escape it," are among the significent suggestions.

New York's Commissioner of Health points out that influenza and pneumonia are infectious diseases caused by germs carried in the matter spit, sneezed or coughed by sick persons or sometimes by persons who, while carrying the disease germs in their mouth and throat show no sign of tilness. He advises the avoidance sign of illness. He advises the avoidance of such 'matter,'' of dirt of every kind, of fatigue, and of overeating. Ontario's M. H. O. advises to avoid damp clothing, wet feet, visiting the sick, and if you suspect you have it, or it has you—"take a purgative, call the doctor, and go to bed."

A Readable Letter From France

Private Ivan Lucas, of Warwick, who has been on the battle line for some time, writes an intesesting epistle from the scenes of strife to a friend in Watford from which we are permitted to take the following extracts:

France, Aug. 29, 1918
Dear Friend:—Once again we are resting after months of strenuous fighting and consequently we have a chance of collecting our thoughts and transferr-ing them from the fields of strife and blood to the fields of peace and the joy of blood to the fields of peace and the joy of life. Thus given a chance our thoughts must be retrospective if we would forget recent events.

And though forgetfulness is balm to a soldier's mind, recent events have been of such glorious achievements that we would not forget them but rather lay such thoughts aside as we do our implements of war.

such thoughts aside as we do our implements of war.

And in doing that to which I have made reference rather than a change of thought, I was confronted with a pile of letters and for each one I must give a plausible excuse for not answering sooner and in doing this I am haunted by one fear, namely, that my supply of excuses may not fill the demand.

In a period of six weeks the atmos-

In a period of six weeks the atmos-phere of political life on the Western front has been changed from one of depression and gloom to one of the pression and gloom to one of buoyancy and hope, and the confidence of the victor firmly rooted in the breasts of the Entente Army, and by the glorious offensive of the Franco-American troops on the Marne and the splendid victory by the Canadians on the Amien front, the hope of Victory has returned and the star of peace risen on the distant horizon, though still obscured by the fog and mist of diplomatic complication. The most wonderful and most important element in our recent glorious victories has been the splendid fighting spirit of our soldiers. Evidence is abundant and proof conclusive that after four years of hardship and privation the spirit of the Canadian Corps was never better, as evinced by their going over the top seven times in a few hours during recent fighting. They go forth every time to die or conquer and that invincible spirit has won them distinction above every nation

Though war is to be deprecated, yet when war is war let it be war to the finish and it is a great distinction to be classed greatest of all in the military annals of competent authorities.

The great bulwark of the army rests with those at home and we do not like to hear of walk-outs and strikes at home. We feel that they at home have little cause for complaint and it does such people little honour when we compare the loyalty of the soldier under far worse conditions to that of the man at home conditions to that of the men at home. Surely our government will see that such things do not occur very often. For there will return to Canada, after the war, not the mild, modest, tolerant men who left Canada several years ago but men strong, virile, active and intensely desirous of having a deepened thought, a broader and more democratic mind taking its proper place in Canadian life both social and politic. And over the present world steeped in And over the present world steeped in this gastly conflict I look and see emerging from it a rennaissance in thought and action, a world cleansed and purified and purged of a system which was slowly but surely sapping the life of the nation and carrying it to a destruction which had no compensation such as this destruction will have.

Thus I have spoken not lightly because I have not the spirit of lightly say I sit.

Thus I have spoken not lightly because I have not the spirit of lightness as I sit among this grey ruin. Not with joking or laughter or with a spice of life because I am naturally grave, but with words in liason with thought and feeling and as I would wish to speak in quiet conversation.

FOR VICTORY

(Copyngat 1918, by the McClure Newspa-per syndeste.)

"You'se a appaiess woman hater, Kenny," rouned blantenant Campbell, "But if you refuse to meet my attrac-tive sister in law, at least, you will consent to meet my attractive wife—she's quite harmless as far as you are concerned and well worth knowing." Kenny grinned.

"You bet I'll meet your wife, Fred—the sooner the better! It's only a lot of silly girls I can't stand."

"Well, she's here now. She's taken a little apartment about a mile from camp-10' Main street. We'll expect you to afternoon tea tomorrow—that will be before her sister gets there, so you won't have to worry. Is that O. K.?"

"It sure is. So long, now-I've got to get back to my job."

The next afternoon was cold and clear, and Kenny walked briskly along and thought rather pleasantly of the hot tea he would soon have offered to him. And he was really anxious to meet Fred's wife, too. They had known each other since they were boys and his friend had married only a month or two before-just after he left training camp. The girl he imagined Fred would pick out would be tall and stately and dignified and very goodlooking-he could see her perfectly in

But he had quite a shock when his ring was answered and he was ushered into the tiny living room to Mrs. Campbell's apartment. To be sure, his hostess was there-very much so-but she was small, very pretty and ridiculously young looking—Fred should have prepared him a little for this.

"We're glad you could come, Lieutenant Kenny. Fred took my sister out for a few moments, but they will be back directly. Do sit down and tell me something about the camp—I'm dying to hear all about it."

"Sister!" thought Tom Kenny, groaning inwardly. "Then she did come after all. Curse my rotten luck!' Aloud he said:

"I've just been thinking it's so wonderful out—perhaps you would like to see something of the place yourself we could take a little walk out in the direction of camp if you want to and you think Fred won't mind." His one idea was to get outside before sister returned—he hoped she never would return!

"Mercy, no-Fred won't mind! He'll be only too glad to get me off his hands for a while."

nie un the best of things, Tom found his little companion decidedly good company. She laughed at his jokes and made herself so agreeable that he found him-self feeling almost disappointed when they finally turned towards home. But the whole afternoon she never mentioned her husband once. When they first started out Tom had turned to her questioningly:

"You are quite sure your husband won't care if you do go off like this?
"My husband!" echoed the girl, blankly. Then light dawned in a moment and she turned her head away to hide the twinkle that shone in her eyes.

"He'd trust me with you, I know," she returned, smiling. "I'm just going to have a good time and forget all about him."

When they got back to Mrs. Campbell's apartment it was so late that Tom begged to be excused, as he had to be back at camp in time for mess. Fred's wife did not urge him to come in, but asked him to come to tea two days later to meet her sister. He tried to refuse, on some sort of pretense, but he found it too hard to refuse anything this girl asked him, when she really wanted to have her own way. So he promised and went back to camp, thinking that Fred was a pretty fortunate man to have such a wonderful little wife, and wishing there were more women in the world like her! On Friday afternoon he found both the ladies home, and he went through the painful ordeal of meeting sister. She was far more stately than Fred's wife, and possibly very charming, but ternoon," apologized Miss Ely. "Fred told me it would only take a minute, and then I found so many things I had to attend to that before I knew it it was terribly late. I was so sorry not to meet you."

"Mrs. Campbell was very kind, and entertained me royally," assured

"I'll bet she did," agreed Fred Campbell, and a gleam of amusement passed between him and his now very demure little wife who was seated at the other end of the room.

"We had a beautiful time Freddie,

I've been thinking we ought to get up some nice little parties while sister is here—just the four of us. I do so love Fred laughed. "Anything you suggest will be all right, my dear." "Then let's go skating Sunday afternoon-it's heavenly on the lake. Will you go, Lieutenant Tom?"

"If Fred's willing. Are you fond of skating?" he asked the silent sister, who had not entered into the conversation for some time. "I adore it!" she assured him. "I haven't been on skates for two years, but I'll probably get along with a little help. You won't mind giving me a few points thi I get used to it, will

"No, indeed!" he assented, almost too promptly, and he thought he noticed Fred cough slightly to cover a laugh. He began to wonder how he get sick on Sunday, but his thoughts were dashed to pieces. He knew that unless he poisoned himself he could never deceive Fred.

"Oh, it will be such fun!" exclaimed Mrs. Campbell, and she smiled at him happily.

They had a very pleasant hour, but Tom had little conversation with Fred's sister-in-law. By mutual consent Fred seemed content that he should talk to his wife, while he himself entertained the stately sister. Tom understood that Fred wanted him to know his wife better, so that he might be more interested in women in general, and that he would approve of his friend's choice. So he listened to the charming little lady and he became her abject slave for evermore. he also thought that Fred had done better than he deserved-he couldn't possibly appreciate such a marvelous girl. And he told him so on the way home. Fred laughed heartily.

"You're wrong, Tom," he contradicted him. "I assure you that I think my wife is the most wonderful girl in the world, and I adore the ground she walks on. But I thought you would be more interested in my sister-inlaw. I really think you are, too—but you don't know it!"

"You're crazy, Fred. She may be wonderful, but girls don't interest me at all-I'm through with all that sort of thing forever!"

But Fred only laughed again and told him he'd be married himself in six months, and Tom walked off indignantly.

The next afternoon Tom Kenny had a note from Mrs. Campbell.

"Dear Lieutenant Kenny:-I'm sorry, but I shan't be able to go skating with you all tomorrow. I've strained my ankle slightly, and would not dare to try to skate on it so soon.

"But the party will be just the same, for my sister is anxious to go. Will you come for her at the same time, and we shall expect you to come doesn't care much about skating.

"Cordially yours,
"ELEANOR CAMPBELL." Tom shuddered. The worst had happened. He would have to get Miss Ely and pull her around the ice alone, and

Fred would stay home and laugh at him. It was too much! But he could not find a way out, so he avoided Fred and appeared at Mrs. Campbell's at the appointed hour. To his surprise he found her alone in the my sister, too!" "I don't understand at all-so many sisters and things that I'm all mixed up. Whose sister are you, anyway?"

"Fred's and Eleanor's—I thought you knew in the first place, but you didn't. And then you began to think I was my sister, and it was all so funny that I just let you. Eleanor thought it was a good joke, and they helped me pretend the other afternoon when you were here. Oh, I hope you won't mind because I'm not Fred's wife—I'm so sorry if you're disappointed in me!"

Tom could hardly believe his ears, and in his excitement he took the girl's hand in his.
"Disappointed!" he cried. "Why, I never was so pleased about anything in my life. I'm so glad you are only Fred's sister that I can't think! The only thing I wouldn't like would be to have you promise to be a sister to me, too. Please don't do that, will you?" Dorothy Ely blushed and laughed as she got to her feet and walked toward "You'll have to invite me to be one first-and besides, I have two brothers of my own. Shall we go skating now, or do you want to wait till my sister can come along and chaperone us?"

"No, I don't, but I'm ready to go anywhere in the world you ask me to, provided you are there, too. Do you think you could be?"

Dorothy looked up at him and then blushed again, and Lieutenant Campbell knew that his suit was won.

A Heroic Nurse.

In December last a thrilling scene occurred beside a humble cot in the field hospital at Salonica. Lying there, her countenance lit by a pleasant smile, was a middle-aged Scotch woman, Flora Sandes. She was convalescing from wounds that had torn her entire right side from shoulder valescing from wounds that had torn her entire right side from shoulder to knee. Bending over the little lady, a royal aide-de-camp to the Prince Regent of Serbia pinned on her breast the gold and silver cross of Karageorge—a rare decoration given only for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle. Around the sick bed were grouped officers and men of the occupant's regiment, in whose regard she stood high, rejoicing with her upon the investiture of so signal a mark of honor. For Miss Sandes, though originally a hospital nurse in the Balkan kingdom, had been given the Balkan kingdom, had been given permission to join its army. Not long afterward she found herself a sergeant, and it was while leading her geant, and it was while leading her men in an assault the previous Sep-tember, during the campaign on the Macedonian front, that an exploding grenade made such terrible havoc of

of the same home army as the daughter of Scotland is the young daughter of Scotland is the young Roumanian girl who turned probable massacre into victory for one of her country's regiments in October of last year. Learning of a Hungarian ambuscade, she hastened to the leader of the approaching troops and informed him of their danger. The valiant maid did more. Placing herself at the head of the column she led it safely, by a circuitous route, to the rear of the enemy. The result was a complete and easy conquest.

was a complete and easy conquest.

Stories such as these have been told and retold in steadily increasing numbers during the last three years. They have been here recalled once more, less for the intrinsic interest in their red-blooded details than to point the truth already stated; such splendily inspiring deeds of woman-hood are so far from unusual that they are positively to be counted up-on whenever patriotism wakens and the pressing need for heroism comes.

Oils From the Antarctic. The results were recently announced of an investigation into a series of oils prepared during the Austra-lasian Antarctic Expedition. These materials included sea-leopard oil, materials included sea-leopard oil, Weddell-seal oil and penguin oil. The oils have been carefully examined in order to determine their characters in comparison with commercial oils of a similar kind. They were found to be of good quality, and could be used for soap-making.

Garden for Invalid.

If you have an invalid friend, you can make her a garden that she will enjoy for a very little money. Buy a small gold fish bowl and have a piece of glass to fit over the top. Then go out into the woods and get a piece of moss for the bottom and find a small plant or a tiny fern and set it out in the moss or plant a nasturtium seed. The moisture from the plant will keep it growing; there will be no need to water it, and the invalid can have her little garden right near the bed, can even take it in her hands and watch it grow. It will be a joy for weeks. d Tallell it waster

Style Suggestion Is Suitable for a Fall Frock.

Navy Serge and Plaid Worsted, or Velveteen in Plain Color is Quite Desirable.

Plain navy and Scotch plaid taffeta are combined in the little frock shown in the sketch. A dress of this type employing a silk fabric must. of course, have a waist lining, not only for the purpose of keeping the garment properly in shape, but also to protect it and give the fabric a satisfactory lease of life. If made of gingham this little frock might be unlined and made as a slip-over model, and it really offers a very good style suggestion for a tub frock.

However, taffeta is the most popular summer silk, and such a dress is always useful and serviceable. A very thin lining silk is the best selection to be made for the bodice lining, as perspiration, cleaning, etc., shrink the cotton linings, and they are never so satisfactory in any way whatever. The lining section hooks up in the center front, and the long tunic of the plain material buttons on the shoulder, small silk-covered buttons being used for the purpose. The sash belt may be of faille, satin or taffeta ribbon about three and a half inches wide, matching the tunic in color, with ends tassel tipped. This belt slips through openings cut in the sides of the tunic, back and front, and therefore clearly indicates the waist line while allowing the dress to conform to the popular straight silhou-

The dress is designed for a girl of fourteen to sixteen years.

If desired, this style suggestion may be very attractively utilized for little fall frock, using navy serge and plaid worsted, or velveteen in plain color with side panels and sleeves of plain taffeta.

Velveteen is unquestionably to be one of the popular materials for next fall and winter season, in the development of outing apparel of all kinds. It is rich looking, becoming, and a good quality of velveteen wears better than silk velvet.

Home-Made Stand.

In order to keep baby's many little things together, procure a good cheese box from the grocer. Nail three strips of wood, measuring about three and one-half feet in length and one by one and one-half inches thick, to the box and cover, equal distances apart, using the box at the top and the cover below. These strips act as legs and may be painted white. Then cover the box and cover inside and out with dainty cretonne. Fasten little brass hooks around the outside of the box. On these may be hung baby's towel, wash cloth, gown and petticoat, etc., ready bath. In the cover below are the folded diapers and in the box the powder puff, talcum, soap, safety pins and any other or ner belongings. At 18 pretty and inexpensive.

Italian Bead Chains.

Something that gives a charming dash of color to a dark frock of serge or silk is one of the new Italian bead necklaces. They are called necklaces, but they are no more or less than long strands of beads, not strung in a circle, but left flat with unconnected ends. They cost as much as ten dollars, some of them, but they are well worth the price, for their pattern is intricate and effective, their coloring is bright but harmonious, and their workmanship renders them flexible and graceful.

The Spy In War-Time.

Since the subject of espionage is very much to the fore these days, I will go briefly into the theory and practice of espionage, confining myself to what is known to all general staffs as "secret field intelligence." This polite term is given by a general staff only to its own agents; the agents of the other side are known as spies. This is a little inconsistent, of course.

of course.

Whether an intelligence officer is a spy or mere scout depends entirely on how he is dressed at the time. If on how he is dressed at the time. If in uniform he becomes a prisoner of war when captured and as a rule he is confined in a fortress. If he has assumed disguise he faces the firing squad next morning.

The fact that an officer has spied upon the enemy in civilian clothing does not make him the less honored among his brothers-in-arms. On the contrary, being selected for the "secret field-intelligence service" is looked upon by the more daring as a cret field-intelligence service. Is looked upon by the more daring as a rare distinction. A commander would be court-martialled if it became known that he had failed to avail himself, for reasons of "honor," of important information brought in by his court and had for that reason mismanaged an action. Espionage is a necessary adjunct to any military establishment—so necessary, in fact, that the spies of the antagonists are done to death when caught.—Geo. A. Schreiner in Harrer's Magazine.

BLOOD-MAKING MEDICINE

It took centuries for medical science to discover that the blood is the life. Now, it is known that if the blood were always abundant, rich and pure, very few people would ever be ill. It was not until the end of the 19th century that an instrument was invented for pressyring. instrument was invented for measuring the red part of the blood. Then doctors-could tell just how anaemic a patient had become, and with medicine to make new blood the patient soon got well.

All the blood in the body is nourished and kept rich and red by the food taken daily, but when, for any reason, a person is run down and cannot make sufficient blood from the tood to keep the body in health, then a blood-making medicine is required. The simplest and very best of blood-makers suitable for home use of blood-makers suitable tor home use by anyone, is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. As an all-round medicine for the cure of ailments due to weak, watery blood no medicine discovered by medical science can equal Dr. Williams' Pink science can equal Dr. Williams' Pink
