There is scarce a stump or a bush to be seen on my farm, except some very hansome shade trees purposely left for sheltering in the heat of summer.

The removal of these stumps has been accomplished by a very simple and economical process. which I will attempt to describe, in the hope that it may be beneficial to those who have their lands encumbered with trees and stumps. Procure a dry houses, originated a demand for money which el n lever, about twenty feet long, and six to eight inches in diameter, a good stout long chain, with two tain great capitalists, stepped in and exerted all their yoke of oxen; this is all the machinery that is necessary. The mode of operation is thus: - wrap the long chain round the stump a little above the late operations of the Chancellor of the Exchequer ground, and make what is called a log hitch; lay afforded facilities for the execution of this scheme; the lever horizontally on the ground the large end and the parties in question, disappointed of the gains next to the chain and against the stump; make the other end of the chain fast to this end of the lever. drawing the lever tight against the stumps the cattle are hitched to the small end of the lever, and driven around the stump in a circle, of which the lever is the radius. One revolution of the oxen around the stump will generally twist out the largest of them; revived, and that a correspondence with the treasubut should not the power thus applied he sufficient ry has already commenced on the subject. to move the stump, the side roots may be uncovered and cut partly off; after this is done, the stump will be easily removed. You will find this plan much preferable to any " patent stump extractor" that you may have seen pulled in the papers.

" Who shall decide, when Doctor's disagree ?"

although it is probable, not evident to mere casua observers of "men and manners," but which do really and singularly mark out, in a strik ng degree, the denizers of this relebrated city and those of the sister capital. Allow me just to jot you down a w of them; which at the best or worst construcon of their rightful appliance, can only raise a od natured laugh at the expense of either party. o here goes with my string of " Did you evers."

Did you ever see a Quebeckite in Montreal, who, ofter a perambulation of an hour or two in its streets, did not complain of being farged to death; and all for the want of the up and downhill trampng of his native city?

Did you ever meet a Montrealer in Quelier, who lid not elevate his proboscis to a most horrible altirude at our public buildings; and at once puch the Roman Catholic Cathedral of his town into your teeth. (figuratively) and thereby think he smoto our conceit of locality to the dust?

Did you ever meet a Quebec man in Montreal, who did not pretend to talk as knowingly as a landcape painter of scenery, fine views, and such matters, if a friend gave him a drive round the Mountain; always concluding with a knock-him-down assertion, that the famous bay of Naples was universally allowed to be far inferior in magnificace and heauty to the opening bay of the St. Charles River. N. B. This more particularly to carry weight, if the party making the assertion be one of those, who in his own locale, knows as much about the benrings of the Chaudiere falls, or lake St. Charles, as he loes of lake Nipissing or the cataracts of the Nile.

Did you ever walk a Montreal friend over the fortifications on the Cape, showing him rampart, b stion, turret, parapet, scarp and glacis, not omitting the signal tower, and the saluting battery; and did you not observe that, on issuing forth from the ponderous gloom of the Citatel gate, he immediately straitened up, cocked his hat, stroked his chin, and comed altog-ther an altered man-as-uning on the instant a peculiar bearing and expression, which must have reminded you of the story of the Manksman, who, when the Bishop of Bristol made him Legislature, for the completion of the St. Laws present of a shilling, a pound of soap, and a razor, cence Canal, but it would not be available until in the plenitude of his pride and happiness went orth on his way, despising the rest of the world?

Did you ever, in sauntering with a Quehec acmaintance along St. Paul or Notre Dame street in Montreal, and, if taking note of time, you directed his attention to the beautiful clock in the English Church steeple tower with its quadruple dials—ile (the Chairman) unders and that the Previnci I you not always observe that the Quebecker pre-Exchaquer was not in an overflowing state and tended a sudden dimness of vision, and that he could not distinguish the hours clearly, at the same time casting sinister doubts as to the accuracy of their marking for all that; falling back in course, to a ong dissertation on the perfectibility of such things The yield of wheat is expected to be a fifth or sixth He believed that om gentlemen had drawn up in his city-even quoting, in support of his argu-Old Age. - Sal zza de Pedrada praising an old short of an average, and a further importation of foresoft one on this subject, which he would be hapment, the equiverage which edity and lady for her heauty she assured to be anty was reign wheat will, doubtless, be required in the spring. by to lay be fore the meeting. amuse the public from certain public buildings

> Did you ever meet a Montrealler in Queber, after en o'clock at night in the streets, but you found him in a devil of a hurry and bustle, and apparently ent on some particular purpose or object; which. upon enquiry, you found to be centred in the almost hopeless (to j dg from his own words) expectation of getting somewhere, for love or money, the favorite supper of sau ages and mashed potators?

Did you ever meet with a Montr ailer and a Queneckite, who could agree as to which if their cities bore away the palm on the score of superior attractions in the "tair sex" line. In such cases and arguments, the Quebec champion always brings up superior grace in the bearing of his belles : &, among other perfections which he enumerates, he talks of well turned ancles, pretty feet, and the spring and ghtness of a ro-buck in the step when walking -The Mortrealer stumps you with figure and complexion; and says a great deal about mental accomplishments, the beauty of the mind, and such fike. - Thus the discussion goes on, the argumentaive powers of each warming up and sharpening, till at length a " turn up" on the spot, or a meeting at the Windmills or on Abraham's plains, settles the digression, but leaves the main feature of the question s open to dispute as ever ?

Did you ever know a Montrealer ever allow that Quebec could produce any description of fruit, fit to be presented to a christian's eating; or, in turn, did you ever hear a Quebeckite candidly conless that you might, by accident, get a bit of fish in Montreal which a body could look at without fainting?

In conclusion, did you ever know Quebeckers and Montrealites ever, by any circumstance, agree upon any one attributable point of merit in respect to locality beauty, science, intelligence, dress feeding, population, comfort, or even common decency, in regard to the other city. - No you never did, nor ever will; and "that's a fact," as Sam Slick says, GEOFFREY GAMBADO
