O'REGAN KILLED

Fatal Ending of Boxing Bout
in St. John.

NORTHROP ARRESTED

Referee and Six Seconds also Under Arrest.

The boxing tournament at the Queen's Rink last evening had a tragic ending. In the sixth and last round of the preliminary bout between Fred Northrup and "Cap" O'Regan, the latter was knocked out, and never rallied, his death occurring about half an hour later. Northrup and the time-keeper, referee and seconds were placed under arrest.

The fatal termination of this bout was most unexpected, as up to the time that O'Regan collapsed he had been putting up a good fight and although much lighter than his opponent, showed more cleverness.

The first two rounds the men boxed seemed to be evenly contested, while the third was in Northrup's favor. In the fourth round O'Regan forced matters, and more than held his own, landing repeatedly on his more burly opponent, and finishing strong. In the fifth round Northrup had the advantage, although it was not apparent that his opponent had sustained any severe injury, as he came out for the sixth and fatal round, seemingly in good shape. Northrup cut loose, however, in this round and landed a couple of hard blows on O'Regan's jaw, which seemed to weaken the latter although he rallied and fought back with vigor. When the men had gone a little less than two minutes, after a series of clinches, during which Northrup leaned against his opponent, O'Regan stumbled against the ropes as if in a daze. Northrup was motioned to his corner by the referee, and O'Regan assisted to his corner.

It was an anxious time, too, for all concerned in the affair. As soon as the young man's case looked serious, Chief Clark had Northrup, the referee, Wm O'Keefe, the ticket seller, Lorenzo T. Richey, and the following seconds, Leonard Sugrue, Louis Sealey, George Hicks and Andrew Coyle, who were in the ring at the time, brought into the private room and as soon as the boy was dead placed them under arrest. They were taken to the central station and locked up, it being too late to secure bail.

Frederick Northrup, who by the regrettable fatality is placed in a rather serious position, is twenty years of age and has no regular occupation.

STRIPPING SALMON.

Interesting Work Now Being Carried On At Carleton Pond

Alexander Mowatt of Campbellton, N. B., has been for the last few weeks stopping at the New Victoria. Mr Mowatt, who is an officer of the marine and fisheries department, is here in connection with the arrival of the spawning season, which has just begun. The salmon which are now in the Carleton pond, are being seized, placed in fresh water for a short time and then stripped. The eggs are then fertilized and placed in trays. They are afterwards taken to the hatchery, where under favorable conditions the young are hatched and thence distributed to the various streams and lakes throughout the country. By this process at least 85 per cent of the eggs become young salmon, whereas if nature were allowed to follow her own course only 4 per cent. of the eggs would be fertilized. The best proof that this work is not a thankless one is the fact that the catch this year is the greatest since 1880. The active work of stripping the fish will consume the better part of two weeks and every afternoon from one to three o'clock a very novel spectacle may be seen by those interested enough to go to the Salmon pond.—St John Sun.

Tuesday night after making an autopsy on the body of Chas. O'Regan, was: "In my opinion death was caused by compression of the brain due to the effusion of blood."

Train Carried Martin Foley's Arm 600 Miles

Montreal, Oct. 28.—The finding of a man's arm on Victor's Bridge has been explained in a remarkable manner by the statement of an I. C. R. official. He says the arm belonged to Martin Foley, who was killed at Barnaby River, N. B., 582 miles from Montreal. Foley's body was badly cut to pieces, and the arm was carried on the truck nearly six hundred miles.

POACHING CASES.

Judge Chauveau Sitting at Cansapscal,

DYNAMITE USED.

On the Matapedia River for
the Past Few Weeks.

On Thursday last Judge Chauveau, of Quebec, who was sent down at the request of Mr John Hall Kelly, M. P. P., opened Court at Cansapscal in order to try a large number of cases that were brought before him.

The Riparian Association being in great part composed of "The Restigouche Salmon Club" and "The Matapedia Salmon Club", through their manager Mr. Maxwell Mowat, of Campbellton, brought up among others 4 dynamite cases, the accused being Alfred Cote, J. M. Tremblay, Frank Beauregard and Ernest Labre.

Mr John Hall Kelly was looking after the interests of the plaintiffs, and issued warrants for these offences under the article of the Criminal Code which punishes such an offence by 7 years imprisonment.

The Matapedia River has been made the prey of these dynamiters for some weeks past, but once proof was secured, the different Clubs decided to proceed without mercy.

The defendants were represented by Messrs. Poulet and Fiast of Rimouski, and have adopted proceedings which will give their clients delay, expecting thereby to see the prosecution drop their cases, which, however, will not be done.

Mr. Kelly, speaking to our reporter yesterday, stated that The Riparian Association has decided to have this kind of work put a stop to, and that for every offence that would be committed a warrant would be issued.

and the other Ludger Tremblay, are also under arrest for poaching and their cases are also being dealt with.

Some of the members of the Quebec Provincial police were called in by Judge Chauveau, in order to see that the prisoners under arrest are in safe keeping.

Yesterday Judge Chauveau adjourned the Court until the 25th, the four, accused of using dynamite, giving one thousand dollars bail and the others five hundred.

When the prisoners heard that Judge Chauveau was to be called in to try their cases they went before a Justice of the Peace at one o'clock in the morning and were convicted. Mr. Kelly has attacked this conviction and has issued papers impeaching the Justice of the Peace Hoppel, who helped the prisoners in trying to evade justice.

The Crown will now intervene and the probabilities are that the Justice of the Peace, Hoppel, will be arrested as soon as Judge Chauveau gives his judgment on the points of law raised before him.

On Monday last Jos Poirier, station agent of St. Alexis, was arrested and condemned to one month in jail for having committed an assault on one of the guardians of the Restigouche Salmon Club.

Mr. Mowat has been tracing these cases for some time past and has positive proof in every instance.

A Natural Laxative

Inward cleansing is as necessary as outward bathing. To keep the bowels free and regular is of even greater importance than to keep the skin-pores from becoming clogged. The neglect of either invites disease. Everyone needs a natural laxative occasionally, to free the bowels of accumulated impurities. For this purpose take

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Graphic Description of a Trip to the Old World

(Written especially for Events by Geo. D. Bain)

After leaving the tower of London with its many sad and interesting memories of the past, the next thing in order will be a visit to Saint Paul's cathedral and Westminster abbey.

Saint Paul's occupies the site of a church built in 610 by Ethelbert. After the destruction of this church by fire about 1090, a new one was commenced which was 40 years in building. Alterations and additions were continually made to this edifice until 1666, when it was destroyed by the great fire.

The present building was erected between 1675 and 1697, according to designs of Sir Christopher Wren, at a cost of about £800,000. It is built in the form of a Latin cross, the length being 500 feet, the transept 285 feet long, and the west front 185 feet wide. The towers at the west front are each 222 feet high. The dome is 365 feet from the ground, and 145 feet in diameter.

The interior presents a massive and imposing appearance, and yet there is simplicity and beauty in its vast proportions. Here the memories of the past and the shadows of the departed are all around you, and here are tablets and stones commemorating the lives of the great, the noble, and the good.

The tombs of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Dr. Samuel Johnson, Lord Nelson, Duke of Wellington, General Gordon and other distinguished men especially admirals and generals are in this church.

Here is the brave who sank to rest, by all their country's blast. Westminster abbey is the next place to claim attention, but as it is quite a long distance away it is advisable to take an omnibus—the bus seems to be the general mode of travelling in the city, except where the underground railway can be conveniently taken. The omnibuses carry passengers on top, as well as inside—the overhead passengers reaching their seats by means of a stairway at one end of the bus. Most people prefer riding on top, especially during fine weather.

Visitors to Westminster abbey are admitted free to the main church, but a fee of one shilling is collected from those desirous of seeing the chapels of the Kings. A guide accompanies the visitors and fully explains everything of interest.

The history of the abbey goes back as far as the history of the city of London. The early sovereigns of England found it necessary to have a place to worship in. It was also important that monarchs be crowned, and still more important that after they got through with their chequered earthly career they should have a fitting place to rest in and so a shrine of some kind was erected on the site where Westminster abbey now stands.

As to the date of the erection of the first building, a good deal of uncertainty exists. According to some traditions as far back as 170 A.D. a temple dedicated to Apollo stood on the present site, and later, a church built by Siebert King of the East Saxons, was erected.

It is certain, however, that since the time of the Saxon King Harold about 1040 Westminster Abbey has been the leading church in England. The fact of its being the coronation church, together with its proximity to the seat of the English government gave it much importance.

The present Abbey was commenced by Edward the Confessor, and practically completed by Edward the first son of Henry III but additions were made to it down to the time of Henry VII.

The length of the building including Henry VII's chapel is 530 feet, the length of the transept 205 feet, the height of the church 102 feet, and of the towers, 225 feet.

The choir or place where the coronation of English sovereigns takes place, is a fine specimen of early English architecture, the decorative work being very elaborate. It contains, among other tombs, those of Siebert, a Saxon King, Anne of Cleves and Edmund Crouchback, Earl of Leicester. The north transept is occupied principally with monuments of warriors and statesmen, and in the south transept the "poets corner" are found memorials of most of the great English writers from Chaucer to Hackney and Dickens. Charles R. Darwin the man who started the religious world with his "Descent of Man" sleeps here among the other illustrious dead.

Henry VII's chapel, which is remarkable for the treasured work of the roof, with its magical fan tracery, contains besides the monument of Henry VII the tombs of other English sovereigns and their children.

In the chapel of Edward the Confessor, are the coronation chairs of the English sovereigns, the stone of Stone, the old coronation seat of the Scottish King, the altar tomb of Edward I and the shrine of Edward the Confessor.

A tomb of more than ordinary merit is that which encloses the remains of the young princes who were murdered in the tower. It is called the "cradle tomb" and is fashioned out of white marble in the shape of a cradle, in which the royal children are represented sleeping together. The design of this tomb is so beautiful that it is specially pointed out to visitors.

More Deadly Than Famine

Neglected catarrh sooner or later causes consumption which destroys more human beings than famine and war combined. The way "Catarrh" cures catarrh is very simple; it first kills the germs that causes the irritation; then by soothing away the congestion and inflammation it cures the discharge, hawking and dropping in the throat. "I suffered so continually from nasal catarrh," writes Ernest R. Dakin of Rosemont, "that I scarcely knew what it was to be free from headache and pain over the eyes. Catarrh relieved me at once and made a thorough cure." No other remedy cures like "Catarrh" cures!—Try it for your next cold.

BAD FIRE IN HALIFAX

Army Store House, Full of Combustibles, was Destroyed

Halifax, Oct. 28.—A conflagration raged for two hours last night on George's Island, in the centre of Halifax Harbor. The fire broke out in one of the large wooden buildings situated on the North end of the island, and which are used as army stores and work shops, in which are stored quantities of paint, oils, and other inflammable articles.

The lower part of the city was brilliantly illuminated, and it was thought by many that the fire was in the business section. George's Island is one of the strongest fortifications here, and tons of powder and gun cotton are kept there, and it was feared that a tremendous explosion would result, as it was impossible to get apparatus to the scene. Fortunately the flames did not reach where the gun cotton and powder were stored, the former, it is understood, being kept in a magazine under ground.

A large force of soldiers was ordered out and sent to the island in transport boats, to help fight the flames and several city tug boats played on the fire.

It is impossible to get an estimate of the loss, but it is said it will be heavy. This is the first of any importance that has occurred on the island since the settlement of Halifax.

In Time Peace

In the first months of Russia-Japan war we had a striking example of the necessity for preparation and the early advantage of those who, so to speak, "have shingled their roofs in dry weather." The virtue of preparation has made history and given to us our greatest men. The individual as well as the nation should be prepared for any emergency. Are you prepared to successfully combat the first cold you take? A cold can be cured much more quickly when treated as soon as it has been contracted and before it has become settled in the system. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures of colds and it should be kept at hand ready for instant use. For sale by all druggists.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA.

This world has never seen a more striking or significant contrast between two nations than is presented just now by Japan and Russia. After a gigantic struggle in which Japan was uniformly victorious because of better preparation, higher military skill, and more self-sacrificing patriotism, her people have settled down to the task of restoring their country to a state of prosperity, while Russia is a seething cauldron of political revolution and her industrial recuperation is seriously retarded. To all appearance the Japanese will have obliterated all traces of the bad effects of the war long before the Russians have well begun their difficult task.

The contrast between the two empires is not due to the amount of natural resources they respectively possess, for Russia far exceeds Japan in area, population and economic opportunities. It is not due to the lack of intelligence and endurance in the Russian people, for in both they might fairly rival the Japanese if they had a chance. It seems to be due to the respective political organizations of the two countries. Russia is an autocracy; Japan is a constitutional monarchy. In Russia the people have little to say about the way in which the public service is administered; in Japan they have a great deal of control over all affairs of State. In Russia political discontent manifests itself in the form of revolution; in Japan it finds expression in a change of the Monarch's advisers.

While it is bad for the Russian people to be autocratically governed the political distraction to the country is just now a good thing for the world at large. It will for a long time prevent the autocracy for forming any plans for territorial expansion, and will thus become in some measure a guarantee of general peace. It seems likely to promote a good understanding, if not a formal alliance, between the Russian and British Empires, which would make the outlook still brighter for the progress of civilization the world over.

Amidst the darkness and confusion in which Russia is plunged there are signs of betterment discernible. In spite of the persistent measures of repression, which have become a temporary necessity, there seems to be no change of intention on the part of the Czar, to call a National Assembly. Such a body, even though its powers may be very limited, can hardly fail to accomplish some positive results, but that is of less importance than the discipline of self-control to which not only the elected but the electors will be subjected. Political energy, which now finds vent in revolutionary movements, will begin to expend itself in Parliamentary discussions and popular propagandas. This great change will probably be promoted rather than retarded by the return of the army from Manchuria for while the soldiers are likely to diffuse a feeling in favor of continued peace, they will bring with them a heightened capacity for organization and greatly increased political intelligence.

Consumption

There is no specific for consumption. Fresh air, exercise, nourishing food and Scott's Emulsion will come pretty near curing it, if there is anything to build on. Millions of people throughout the world are living and in good health on one lung.

From time immemorial the doctors prescribed cod liver oil for consumption. Of course the patient could not take it in its old form, hence it did very little good. They can take and tolerate it for a long time. There is no oil, not excepting butter, so easily digested and absorbed by the system as cod liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, and that is the reason it is so helpful in consumption where its use must be continuous.

We will send you a sample free.

If you care that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Can Eat Anything Now.

How many Dyspeptics can say that?

Or perhaps you are dyspeptic and don't know it.

Have you any of these symptoms?

Variable appetite, a faint gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach, unsatisfactioning of food, rising and soiling of food, a painful load at the pit of the stomach, constipation, or are you gloomy and miserable? Then you are a dyspeptic. The cure is careful diet; avoid stimulants and narcotics, do not drink at meals, keep regular habits, and regulate the stomach and bowels with

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS,

Nature's specific for Dyspepsia.

Miss Laura Chicoine, Belle Anse, Que., says of its wonderful curative powers:—

"Last winter I was very thin, and was fast losing flesh owing to the run-down state of my system. I suffered from Dyspepsia, loss of appetite and bad blood.

I tried everything I could get, but to no purpose; then finally started to use

Burdock Blood Bitters. From the first and am now feeling strong and well again.

I can eat anything now without any ill

I feel it saved my life."

THE TRIBUNE AND THE RESERVOIR MATTER.

The Tribune again comes out this week with another bumptious effort to settle the reservoir matter.

It says:—

"Having the best interests of the town at heart, we feel it our duty to strongly urge upon the town council the advisability of the amicable settlement with Mr. Duncan for his land upon which the dam for the Campbellton water works system is built. There is no doubt whatever that this land is a valuable piece of property, both to Mr. Duncan as well as to the town, and therefore he must at least be fairly well compensated. Leaving out the question of the water right, which is disputed, or even granting for argument sake, that the town has the water right, what good is it to them without a controlling power. It is this power now which Mr. Duncan wishes to be compensated for."

The Tribune certainly puts up a poor case when the only argument it can advance for settlement is that of the fancied controlling power of the land over the water right; and this, too, after lengthy articles of a bombastic and know-it-all character.

Now, what is there in this argument? We do not profess to know the full bearing of the law on the matter, but it is a well-established fact that a board of arbitrators could not take into consideration the value of a piece of land to the party moving in the expropriation proceedings, but its value to the owner, and on this view they would have to give their award. In the present case, therefore, it is not a question of how much the land is worth to the town, but how much it is worth to Mr. Duncan. In other words, the land is to be valued as if the reservoir were not in existence nor ever would be. This fact was brought out at the water works arbitration proceedings between the town and the Water Supply Co.

Then the Tribune states that the land is a valuable piece of property and that Mr. Duncan should be paid a reasonable price. Will the Tribune state its valuation of the land or what it considers a fair price for the same? Would the Tribune dare to say that $3,250 is a "reasonable price" for 6.56 acres of land in the woods back of the town?

Our contemporary also devotes considerable space to a review of the reservoir matter, which is, for the most part, ancient history, and sadly fails to give any new light on the subject which its ostentatious led its readers to expect.

EVENTS did not say that any case in connection with the reservoir matter was settled out of court, and here the Tribune again displays its ignorance of the facts. The case we referred to was that of Miss Stewart against the town, in which Mr. McLatchy acted as counsel for the town, and we might again repeat as this is the only case outside of the present arbitration case in which that gentleman ever acted in the town's behalf, we would like to know how the Tribune can make good its statement that he is responsible for "saddling upon the town heavy law costs." Mr. McLatchy informs us that he was not engaged to act for the town in the present case until after the action for trespass had been decided against the town. He was attending to his duties as M. P. at Fredericton, when the proceeding were instituted and the first intimation he had of it was obtained from the newspapers. How then is he responsible for the heavy law costs? No amount of Tribune verbosity can relieve it of its ridiculous position on this question.

RUSSIA'S LIBERTY

Compelled by the spread of the Revolution the Czar has bowed before the storm and proclaimed liberty and constitutional government for all the people of the empire.

Monday night the autocracy of the Romanoffs and the order of things ceased to exist in Russia. Emperor Nicholas has surrendered and Count Witte comes into power as Minister-president with an imperial mandate which will enable him to convert the farcical national assembly into a real legislative body, elected by greatly extended suffrage and to confer upon the people fundamental civil liberties, including free speech. These include freedom of the press the right of assembly, and immunity of the person, including the right of habeas corpus.

These welcome tidings reached St. Petersburg shortly before 6 o'clock Monday evening. Count Witte has spent the day with the Emperor at Peterhof, going over the final draft of the manifesto to which he insisted that certain minor modifications be made, and before taking the train for St. Petersburg, he telephoned to a friend that the Emperor had affixed his signature and that the Imperial mandate comprising the conditions upon which he had agreed to accept office was in his pocket. These include freedom of the press, the right of assembly and the immunity of the person, including the right of habeas corpus. Let us hope that out of the new there will develop order, liberty and prosperity. The Russian Premier himself in his message to the American people uses the opportunity to impress upon his own people that happy results can only follow the action of the Czar by their peaceful co-operation. He says:

I am sure the American people, who understand what freedom is, and the American press, which voices the wishes of the people, will rejoice with the friendly Russian nation at this moment when the Russian people have received from his imperial majesty the promises and guarantees of freedom, and will join in the hope that the Russian people will wisely aid in the realization of those liberties by co-operating with the government for their peaceful introduction. Only thus will it be possible to secure the full benefits of the freedom conferred upon the people.

Ottawa despatches state that the date for the meeting of parliament has been actually fixed for January 11th. It is thought that the season will be a short one.

Citizens are beginning to wonder at the Tribune's attitude on the arbitration case and deep down at the bottom of things there is an eager questioning. Why all this condemnation of the town's position? Why assail the town's lawyer at the very beginning of the case? Why charge the council with squandering the people's money because they decided to arbitrate and advocate the paying over to Mr. Duncan $3,250 for 6.56 acres of land? Who is to be benefited? Why is the Tribune so feverishly anxious for a settlement? And echo answers, why?

It is probable that the degree of M.D. will shortly be conferred upon the Tribune for its efforts in "doctoring" the town's sores.

THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ...

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

"No, no, my dear fellow, there is no cause for alarm. It is not upon this occasion the instrument of evil, but it will rather prove to be the key which will unlock our mystery. On this syringe I base all my hopes. I have just returned from a small scouting expedition and everything is favorable. Eat a good breakfast, Watson, for I propose to get upon Dr. Armstrong's trail today, and once on it I will not stop for rest or food until I run him to his burrow."

"In that case," said I, "we had best carry our breakfast with us, for he is making an early start. His carriage is at the door."

"Never mind. Let him go. He will be clever if he can drive where I cannot follow him. When you have finished, come downstairs with me, and I will introduce you to a detective who is a very eminent specialist in the work that lies before us."

"When we descended I followed Holmes into the stable yard, where he opened the door of a horse box and let out a squat, lop eared, white and tan dog, something between a beagle and a foxhound."

"Let me introduce you to Pompey," said he. "Pompey is the pride of the local doghouse—no very great flier, as his build will show, but a staunch hound on a scent. Well, Pompey, you may not be fast, but I expect you will be too fast for a couple of middle aged London gentlemen, so I will take the liberty of fastening this leather leash to your collar. Now, boy, come along and show what you can do."

He led him across to the doctor's door. The dog sniffed round for an instant and then with a shrill whine of excitement started off down the street, tugging at his leash in his efforts to go faster.
In half an hour we were clear of the town and hastening down a country road.

"What have you done, Holmes?" I asked.

"A threadbare and venerable device, but useful upon occasion. I walked into the doctor's yard this morning and shot my syringe full of aniseed over the hind wheel. A doghound will follow aniseed from here to John o' Groat's, and our friend Armstrong would have to drive through the Cam before he would shake Pompey off his trail. Oh, the cunning rascal! This is how he gave me the slip the other night."

The dog had suddenly turned out of the road into a grass grown lane. Half a mile farther this opened into another broad road, and the trail turned hard to the right in the direction of the town which we had just quitted. The road took a sweep to the south of the town and continued in the opposite direction to that in which we had started.

"This detour has been entirely for our benefit, then?" said Holmes. "No wonder that my inquiries among those villages led to nothing. The doctor has certainly played the game for all it is worth, and one would like to know the reason for such elaborate deception.
This should be the village of Trumping-ton to the right of us. And, by Jove, here is the brougham coming round the corner. Quick, Watson—quick, or we are done!"

He sprang through a gate into a field, dragging the reluctant Pompey after him. We had hardly got under the shelter of the hedge when the carriage rattled past. I caught a glimpse of Dr. Armstrong within, his shoulders bowed, his head sunk on his hands, the very image of distress. I could tell by my companion's grave face that he also had seen.

"I fear there is some dark ending to our quest," said he. "It cannot be long before we know it. Come, Pompey!
Ah, it is the cottage in the field!"

There could be no doubt that we had reached the end of our journey. Pompey ran about and whined eagerly outside the gate, where the marks of the brougham's wheels were still to be seen. A footpath led across to the lonely cottage. Holmes tied the dog to the hedge, and we hastened onward. My friend knocked at the little rusty door and looked again without response.

And yet the cottage was not deserted.
For a low sound came to our ears—a kind of drone of misery and despair which was indescribably melancholy.
Holmes paused irresolute, and then he glanced back at the road which he had just traversed. A brougham was coming down it, and there could be no mistaking those gray horses.

"By Jove, the doctor is coming back!" cried Holmes. "That settles it. We are bound to see what it means before he comes."

He opened the door, and we stepped into the hall. The sound swelled louder upon our ears until it became one long, deep wail of distress. It came from upstairs. Holmes darted up, and I followed him. He pushed open a half closed door, and both stood appealed at the sight before us.

A woman, young and beautiful, was lying dead upon the bed. Her calm, pale face, with dim, wide opened blue eyes, looked upward from amid a great tangle of golden hair. At the foot of the bed, half sitting, half kneeling, his face buried in the clothes, was a young man, whose frame was racked by his sobs. So absorbed was he by his bitter grief that he never looked up until Holmes' hand was on his shoulder.

"Are you Mr. Godfrey Staunton?" said he.

"Yes, sir. But—no, you are too late.
She is dead."

The man was so dazed that he could not be made to understand that we were anything but doctors who had been sent to his assistance. Holmes was endeavoring to utter a few words of consolation and to explain the alarm which had been caused to his friends by his sudden disappearance when there was a stir upon the stairs, and there was the heavy, stern, questioning face of Dr. Armstrong at the door.

"So, gentlemen," said he, "you have attained your end and have certainly chosen a particularly delicate moment for your intrusion. I would not brawl in the presence of death, but I can assure you that if I were a younger man your monstrous conduct would not pass with impunity."

"Excuse me, Dr. Armstrong, I think we are a little at cross purposes," said my friend, with dignity. "If you could step downstairs with us we may each be able to give some light to the other upon this miserable affair."

A minute later the grim doctor and ourselves were in the sitting room below.

"Well, sir?" said he.

"I wish you to understand, in the first place, that I am not employed by Lord Mount-James and that my sym-paties in this matter are entirely against that nobleman. When a man is lost it is my duty to ascertain his fate, but having done so the matter ends so far as I am concerned, and so long as there is nothing criminal I am much more anxious to hush up private scandals than to give them publicity.
If, as I imagine, there is no breach of the law in this matter, you can absolutely depend upon my discretion and my co-operation in keeping the facts out of the papers."

Dr. Armstrong took a quick step forward and wrung Holmes by the hand.

"You are a good fellow," said he. "I had misjudged you. I think the best thing that my companion at leaving poor Staunton all alone in this plight caused me to turn my carriage back and so to make your acquaintance. Knowing as much as you do, the situation is very pleasant to me. I am glad to hear that you are a good fellow."

"I have told you all that happened,
Mr. Hopkins," she said wearily.
"Could you repeat it for me? Well,
if you think it necessary I will tell these gentlemen what occurred. Have they been in the dining room yet?"

"I thought they had better hear your ladyship's story first."

"I shall be glad when you can arrange matters. It is horrible to me to think of him still lying there." She shouldered and buried her face in her hands. As she did so the loose gown fell back from her forehead. Holmes uttered an exclamation.

"What is this?" Two vivid red spots stood out on one of the white, round limbs. She hastily covered it.

"It is nothing. It has no connection with this hideous business tonight. If you and your friend will sit down, I will tell you all I can."

It was on a bitterly cold and frosty morning toward the end of the winter of '97 that I was awakened by a tugging at my shoulder. It was

Holmes. The candle in his hand shone upon his eager, stooping face and told me at a glance that something was amiss.

"Come, Watson, come!" he cried.
"The game is afoot. Not a word! Into your clothes and come!"

Ten minutes later we were both in a cab and rattling through the silent streets on our way to Charing Cross station. The first faint winter's dawn was beginning to appear, and we could dimly see the occasional figure of an early workman as he passed us, blurred and indistinct in the opalescent London reek. Holmes nestled in silence into the fur of my coat, and was glad to do the same, for the air was most bitter, and neither of us had broken our fast.

It was not until we had consumed some hot tea at the station and taken our places in the Kentish train that we were sufficiently thawed to speak and to listen. Holmes drew a note from his pocket and read it aloud:

Abbey Grange, Marsham, Kent.
2.30 a.m.

My Dear Mr. Holmes—I should be very glad of your immediate assistance in what promises to be a most remarkable case.
It is something quite in your line. Except for releasing the lady, I will see that everything is kept exactly as I have found it, but I beg you not to lose an instant, as it is difficult to leave Sir Eustace there.
Yours faithfully,

STANLEY HOPKINS.

"Hopkins has called me in seven times, and on each occasion his surmises have been entirely justified," said Holmes. "I fancy that every one of his guesses has been right, and that he has collected, and I must admit, Watson, you have some power of selection, which atones for much which I deplore in your narratives. Your fatal habit of looking at everything from the point of view of a story instead of as a scientific exercise has ruined what might have been an instructive and even classical series of demonstrations. You slur over work of the utmost finesse and delicacy in order to dwell upon sensational details which may excite but cannot possibly instruct the reader."

"Why do you not write them yourself?" I said, with a sad bitterness.

"I will, my dear Watson, I will. At present I am, as you know, fairly busy, but I propose to devote my declining years to the composition of a textbook which shall focus the whole art of detection into one volume. Our present research appears to be a case of murder."

"You think this Sir Eustace is dead, then?"

"I should say so. Hopkins' writing shows considerable agitation, and he is not an emotional man. Yes, I gather there has been violence and that the body is left for our inspection. A most suicidal would not have caused him to send for me. As to the release of the lady, it would appear that she has been arrested in her room during the tragedy.
We are moving in high life, Watson—cracking paper, 'E. B.' monogram, coat of arms, picturesque address. I think that Friend Hopkins will live up to his reputation and that we shall have an interesting morning. The crime was committed before 12 last night?"

"How can you possibly tell?"

"By an inspection of the trains and by reckoning the time. The local police had to be called in; they had to communicate with Scotland Yard; Hopkins had to go out, and he is in turn had to send for me. All that makes a fair night's work. Well, here we are at Chislehurst station, and we shall soon set our doubts at rest."

A drive of a couple of miles through narrow country lanes brought us to a park gate, which was opened for us by an old lodge keeper, whose haggard face bore the reflection of some great disaster. The avenue ran through a noble park between lines of ancient elms and ended in a low, wide-spread house pillared in front after the fashion of Palladio. The central part was evidently of a great age and shrouded in ivy, but the large windows showed that modern changes had been carried out, and one wing of the house appeared to be entirely new. The youthful figure and alert, eager face of Inspector Stanley Hopkins confronted us in the open doorway.

"I'm very glad you have come, Mr.
Holmes, and you, too, Dr. Watson. But, indeed, if I had my time over again I should not have troubled you, for since the lady has come to herself she has given so clear an account of the affair that there is not much left for us to do. You remember that Lewisham case of burglars?"

"What, the three Randalles?"

"Exactly; the father and two sons.
It's their work. I have not a doubt of it. They did a job at Sydenham a fortnight ago and were seen and described.
Rather cool to do another so soon and so near, but it is they beyond all doubt.
It's a hanging matter this time."

"Sir Eustace is dead, then?"

"Yes; his head was knocked in with his own poker."

"Sir Eustace Brackenstall, the driver tells me."

"Exactly; one of the richest men in Kent. Lady Brackenstall is in the morning room. Poor lady, she has had a most dreadful experience. She seemed half dead when I saw her first. I think you had best see her and hear her account of the facts. Then we will examine the dining room together."

Lady Brackenstall was no ordinary person. Seldom have I seen so graceful a figure, so womanly a presence and so beautiful a face. She was a blond, golden haired, blue eyed, and would no doubt have had the perfect complexion which goes with such coloring had not her recent experience left her drawn and haggard. Her sufferings were physical as well as mental, for over one eye rose a hideous, plum colored swelling, which her maid, a tall, austere woman, was bathing assiduously with vinegar and water. The lady lay back exhausted upon a couch, but her quick observant gaze as we entered the room and the alert expression of her beautiful features showed that neither her wits nor her courage had been shaken by her terrible experience. She was enveloped in a loose dressing gown of blue and silver, but a black sequin covered dinner dress was hung upon the couch beside her.

"I have told you all that happened,
Mr. Hopkins," she said wearily.
"Could you repeat it for me? Well,
if you think it necessary I will tell
these gentlemen what occurred. Have

Is your Coal
Wasted or Used?

It is comparatively easy to build a range that will make a lot of heat, but it requires the exact science of Pandora range building to produce a range that will use all the heat in the coal without waste.

A common range may burn twice the coal that a Pandora will, and yet do only half the work.

If you use a Pandora range you can be certain that your coal money is not wasted, but used.

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE

HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health is the Great Source of the Power to Inspire and Encourage—All Women should seek it.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration, and the greatest help-mate of my life."

Mrs. Bessie Ainsley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness, whites, irregularities or the blues, she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Ever since my child was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with inflammation, female weakness, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman, and I feel so grateful that I am glad to write and tell you of my marvelous recovery. It brought me health, new life and vitality."—Mrs. Bessie Ainsley, 611 South 10th Street, Tacoma, Wash.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ainsley it will do for every sick and ailing woman.

If you have symptoms you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

PANIC PREVAILS

Blood shed in St Petersburg is Feared

BUSINESS SUSPENDED

Railway and Telegraph Communication Interrupted.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28, 11.20 a. m.—A condition bordering upon a panic prevails here to-day. Business is completely suspended. Soldiers are everywhere in the streets, and bloodshed on a large scale is feared. The government is trying to appease the inflamed population, but the revolutionaries seem determined to force an armed conflict. The last railroad link connecting the capital with the outside world was broken last night, when the Finland railroad discontinued service between St. Petersburg and the Finnish border, but communication by water is still open. The cable is still operating, although the post office is closed and the only newspapers to appear to-day were the official messenger and the army organs, which printed directions for the military. The former contained a letter from General Treppoff, who is in command of the St. Petersburg garrison, and addressed to the provisional governors, instructing them to allow public meetings for the discussion of political questions and interpret the law liberally under Count Witte's direction. The government realizes that suppression by arms in the tremendously excited state of the country would be fatal and meetings are allowed as stated. Further meetings at the University here have been prohibited, and buildings set aside for meetings in St. Petersburg, and General Treppoff has instructed the governors to select buildings in all the cities.

Much alarm is shown at some of the embassies for the safety of foreign subjects, and the situation is being gravely discussed. Beyond preliminary arrangements for the despatch of embassy mails by boat, however, no steps have yet been taken. Telegraph communication with the interior is open, but the despatches received are meagre.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28.—Serious rioting occurred at Reval last night. This morning the city is ablaze. The theatre and spirit shops are burning.

MOSCOW, Oct. 28.—At a meeting of delegates representing the different political parties it has been decided to unite in the establishment of a government, and to act independently of the Imperial authorities.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28.—Telegraph communication with Moscow is now interrupted.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—The conditions in Russia are beginning to have a marked effect on the financial and commercial life of Berlin. The grain market yesterday was widely excited through the interruption of arrivals from Russia and prices jumped up and down spasmodically. Large blocks of Caucasian wheat and Russian rye were bought for Berlin account.

Wheat opened at $1 a ton higher, and oats $1.25 higher. The suspension of the Russian freight movement is doing special damage to German trade because of the unusually heavy stocks of agricultural products which are due to arrive from Russia. Owing to the near approach of the treaty between Russia and Germany going into effect, German merchants have been buying for speculative purposes. The news from Russia also effected the Bourse yesterday most adversely, and Russian bonds gave away to an extent greater than after the defeats at Liao Yang and Mukden. The weakness spread to all departments of the market and Domestic Iron and Coal shares suffered severely, especially the shares of companies dependent upon Russia trade. One feature developed on the Bourse was the active selling of Russian exchange. It is explained that these sales were made partly by the holders of Russian securities as insurance against depreciation.

GOMEL, Russia, Oct.—The strikers here to-day threw a bomb at the chief of police while he was driving through the principal thoroughfares. His carriage was wrecked, and the chief and two cossacks, who were escorting him were badly injured.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28.—From all over the empire the story is the same—work stopped no newspapers printed, schools closed and the business life of the people suspended. The cry of the masses is always the same, political liberty. The military is in possession; the inhabitants are terrified. Many cities are in darkness and at Reval a mob began work last night. The rioters raided the shops and morning the city is on fire, theatre and spirit shops are burning.

Kharkoff is under martial law. The most startling news, however, comes from Moscow, where all the political parties have joined in a resolution to set up the provisional government. Details, however, are lacking, and the exact progress of this attempt at formal insurrection is not known.

ASHKABAD, Russian Trans-Caucasia Territory, Oct. 28.—The employees of the Central Asian railroad have struck.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, Oct. 28.—The railway men on the Trans-Baikal line have struck.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph declares that the prospects of internal reform, which were within an ace of realization, have vanished. The bureaucracy has been scared back to its reactionary attitude by the spectacle of the vast population on strike. All that had been done to pacify the people has been interrupted if not undone. The unconquerable procrastination of the bureaucrats created disbelief in their intention to reform. The result is anarchy unredeemed even by such good intentions as hell is paved with. There is no law in force. Everything is forbidden, yet all things are allowed. Killing and incendiarism are permitted.

It is even lawful to order the death of others by daggers or rifles levelled against peaceful citizens.

Meetings are strictly prohibited, but they are daily summoned and are attended by tens of thousands of persons.

The laws are repealed, not by other laws, but by common consent of interested persons. Government by hesitancy, by tergiversation, by giving with one hand and taking with the other, has utterly shaken the confidence of the whole nation, which will no longer be satisfied even with a constitution if on paper only, but which will continue to combat until genuine guarantees are granted by or wrested from those in authority.

WHAT MIGNON SEES IN CAMPBELLTON

(Special Correspondence of the World)

CAMPBELLTON, Oct. 23.—If the name of this place were spelled differently one might conclude that nature had suggested it because there are humps enough on its back to remind one of many beasts of burden.

The town straggles along the south shore of the Restigouche River about two miles, but climbs the hill's at the rear but a short distance. The streets are crooked and hilly and after a rain the mud lies three or four inches deep with but very few crossings; the sidewalks—where they are any—are the worst of any town's in the province, the planks being worn into holes of all sizes, and people with small feet have to be particularly careful of their pedal extremities.

A mud sidewalk is now being built as an experiment. The principal business street runs parallel with the river and is called Water St.

The buildings for the most part are old and shabby, but the new post-office now nearing completion will be an ornament to the street; it is built of brick with stone trimmings and is on the south side of the street.

The building now in use is on the north side, and, as no crossing approaches it, is a problem to get there without wading on a wet day.

There are six or seven hotels scattered the length of Water street,—all shabby on the outside and far from first-class in any respect, we are told.

Churches of all denominations are represented, and all are at the east end of the town. The homes, for the greater part, are tasteful and some of them handsome; almost all are surrounded with a patch of weeds or badly kept grass plots. A great lack of taste is displayed in this respect, the excuse being that the season is too short for flower culture.

Some of the prettiest homes are situated on the hillside back of the town, and the view obtained from the windows is grand, but the climb to the houses is anything but agreeable or restful. The buildings are placed without much regard to regularity and give a visitor the impression that they were built before the streets were made and in consequence stand in odd corners and just where a piece of ground happened to fit the dwelling. In this respect Campbellton differs from any town I have previously visited.

There is no opera house or public hall of any kind, which is a great drawback, as the people are an amusement-loving class and would patronize amusements generously if they had the opportunity.

The I. C. R. tracks run through the length and centre of the town, and trains dash through at all hours of the day and night; engines with clanging bells clatter and clash up and down with long trains trailing behind, or shunt back and forth, jarring the stillness of the night and smothering the sounds of the day. The streets cross the tracks at right angles and are entirely unprotected. In many cases approaching trains are not visible to the pedestrian or driver till a few feet from the crossings, so that people, and especially children, who have to cross the tracks are in constant danger, and it is a wonder that more accidents do not occur, as the express trains dash through the crossings at great speed. The station is a long low wooden building situated at the west end and has an immense yard with a large number of tracks.

The principal industry is lumbering, and many mills are situated all along the shore. Shives' mill at Athol, about three miles west of Campbellton, has a very pretty situation on a level point of ground that runs along the shore of the river. The mill looks to be first class in every particular and is surrounded by huge piles of lumber ready for shipment. A track from the I. C. R. runs down to the mill, and the cars are loaded and shipped to market by rail.

Croup

A reliable medicine and one that should always be kept in the home for immediate use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will prevent the attack if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even the croup cough appears. For sale by all druggists.

The houses of the workmen stand in monotonous sameness along along one side of the road that leads to the mill, and rather detract from, than add to, the beauty of the picture as viewed from the highroad above.

The river is not deep enough for vessels to go above Campbellton, but lumber is shipped by vessels from the mills here.

The I. C. R. gives employment to a great many people here. The river is about a mile wide opposite the town, and a ferry boat plies back and fourth at irregular intervals during the day to Cross Point, where a small village is situated.

A mile or two west of Cross Point is the Indian Mission, and quite an interesting place it is. A lumber mill gives employment to the Indians who live there and who demand their pay at the end of each day's work. A fine stone church with gilded spire is the pride of the mission, and here the Mission Fathers, in their unique costumes, lay down the law. The homes of the Indian families are neat frame houses and seem clean and well kept.

Campbellton supports two newspapers—the Events and Tribune—and the merchants display a good deal of enterprise in their generous support of their local papers.

The social life of every country town has its own peculiarities and that of Campbellton is no exception. The ladies are the most indefatigable callers I have ever met.

When a stranger visits the town the entire feminine population turns out to call on her, and each one pours out the story of her domestic worries with her servants if she has any, or the difficulties she has encountered in the search for one. After these calls are returned the formalities repeat themselves, and that seems the limit of hospitality except on rare occasions. Many pretty, well dressed girls are met in the streets here, and all the people give one the impression of comfortable living and contentment. Taken all around Campbellton—with its grand wooded hills behind and the range of Quebec mountains across the river, with Sugar Loaf lifting its lofty peak heavenward, with the beautiful winding Restigouche at its feet, and its 4000 happy busy inhabitants—is a place well worth visiting.

MIGNON

At first we were inclined to reply to the product of the pen of the disappointed man-hurting old maid. But like the old lady who was kicked by a jackass we consider the source from whence it came.
