Among these may be mentioned the wonderful feat by Diavolo, who loops the loop on a bicycle, at once the most death-defying and daring act ever presented before the public. Just as a child swings in a circle a bucket full of water, Diavolo sweeps the circle at a frightful speed without falling. This feature alone created a profound sensation in New York city and all

105 DEAD BODIES TAKEN FROM MINE

Victims of Thursday's Disaster at Johnstown-Workings Well Searched.

Johnstown, Pa., July 12 .-- One hundred and five are now dead from the explosion on Thursday at the rolling mill mine of the Cambria Steel Com-pany. It is improbable that this record will be much increase. In no case, it is expected, will the list exceed 110 or 115. The mine workings, while it was dangerous to enter yesterday, were thoroughly explored by a searching We Should Cultivate the Habit of Good party during the night. Early this morning the charred and mutilated bodies of fifteen victims were brought to the pit mouth and taken to the morgue. The bodies were found in the upper end of the heading, where the explosion occurred. They were all lying far in from the point of the expiosion, and could not be reached until the heading had been entirely clear-ed of noxious gases. Three deaths occurred during the night at Cambria hospital. These were among those who were brought out of the mine yesterday afternoon, living, but unconscious.

Another of the same number is in a precarious condition.

It was learned at the pit mouth today from mine officials that every heading and chamber both to the right and left of the main Klondike heading was searched during the night, and that not a trace of any dead or living victims was found. It is admitted, though that some may have crawled into ob-scure workings in their flight from the after-damp, which followed the explosion and there died.

WILL GO TO WORK MONDAY. Mine Superintendent George T. Rob-Inson said today that the mine would be ready for work Monday. He said there has not been the slightest danger from explosion since the original and only one of Thursday. The mine, he admitted, especially the section known as the Klondike, always contained gas. It did not exist in dangerous quantities, he said, and the cause of the explosion must have been due to comeone violating the rules as

KIDNAPPED GHILD FOUND AT LAST

Mother Identifies Her Child Stolen Years Ago.

ROMANCE WITHIN A ROMANCE

Girl Was Married to Her Cousin Not Suspecting Any Relationship Between Them.

Chicago, July 11 .- A romance within a romance is the life story of Mrs. Ethel Bloom, 714 West Sixty-first street. And with all this Mrs. Bloom is only 16 years old. Here is some or the remarkable features of this girl-wife's career:

Kidnapped from her parents' home in New York when 4 years old. Found twelve years later on July 12 of this year by her father shortly after she had married a cousin, not sus-pecting any relationship. Church records found which lead the father to doubt the identification, and it is decided that Mrs. Bloom is not the missing New York girl after all.

Mother of the kidnapped child comes to Chicago and positively identifies Mrs. Bloom as her daughter, the daughter also being confident of the relationship.

The parents who now believe they have found their long missing daughter are Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Nathan. Mr. Nathan is a New York merchant. The girl, who has been restored to them, is the wife of her cousin, Nathaniel Bloom, who is a son of Rabbi Manuel Bloom. They were married in Aurora less than six weeks

OAKHALL CLOTHIERS.

The Event of the Season.

Our Big Semi-Annual Mid-Summer Sale of Clothing and Gentlemen's Furnishings, Commencing Monday, July 14th; Ending Friday, August 1st.

These sales, as the public are aware, we hold twice a year, viz., midwinter and midsummer. They are looked for by our many customers like the flowers in May, and are as welcome because of their real bargain character. A stock of the magnitude of ours cannot be maintained fresh and new and upto-date-free from "hold-overs"-except by means of these definite and pronounced sacrifices. Clearance-genuine and sincere like this-is essentially the method of leaders. You'll not be surprised at the important reductions, for they are usual with us at this time. It has become well known that no special selling equals the OAK HALL CLEARING SALES. The cold, unseasonable June has left us with a very heavy stock, which must be greatly reduced to make room for our new fall goods. July is supposed to be a dull month, but it won't be in this store. Our sales have got to just double up, and sacrificing profits, while still maintaining our regular high standard of quality, is going to do the business. Remember, they're not sale goods you buy here now at sale prices-not a few old plums laid out for a bargain day. Your confidence in us is too much appreciated for us to juggle with it in any way. To deceive is not business wit, but business suicide. We show you straight reductions on goods you've learned to admire, to class as the best of their kind, and to buy with the full knowledge that you're buying what's absolutely dependable, and hundreds of Men's Suits, hundreds of Young Men's Suits, hundreds of Boys' Suits, etc., to choose from; every style; every size. You may not find all sizes in each pattern, but every size many times over will be found in the immense stock you have to select from, and this has just been augmented by several cases of short lots from our factory in Hamilton (The W. E. Sanford Mfg. Co., Limited)-choice goods which have not yet been offered to the public. No such opportunities for close buying will occur again this season. We won't offer them, and others can't.

Our space will only permit us at this time to give you an example of how it will effect Men's and Young Men's Suits:

$3.35 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $6.00. $5.95 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $8.50. $6.95 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $10.00. $8.45 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $12.00. $11.50 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $14.00. $12.95 FOR SUITS THAT WERE $16.00. This is typical of the reductions in all departments.

Handlers' Strike.

Toronto, July 11.-The International Iron Molders' Union at this afternoon's session of their triennial convention, voted to widen the scope of their interests by carrying a resolution to permit the discussion of politico-economic questions. There is a clause in the constitution of the union which reads: "No subject, partisan, political, religious or personal nature, shall at any time be admitted." The resolution carried today was not intended to nullify or permit the transgression of this rule, but it was felt that non-partisan questions of national importance should come within the purview of the organization. The resolution carried by a majority of about two to one. OTTAWA STREET CAR MEN. Chicago, July 12.-Members of the Truck Drivers' Union, as individuals, in sympathy with the striking freight handlers, refused to haul freight this morning and every freight shed in the city was closed up. The men, in many instances drove their wagons to the warehouses and blocked the entrances and exits with them. Others refused to take out their trucks at all, or else drove to the headquarters of the union and begged permission to re-frain from work. They pleaded fear of personal violence by freight hardlers on picket duty, such as befell a number of teamsters yesterday. J. Toronto Daily Star Summer Resort in connection with their paper, a forty-page directory of the summer resorts in Canada. Each district is tabulated, giving the location, names of hotels, proprietors and terms per week. Full information is given regarding the leading and minor resorts and put into such handy and attractive form as to easily solve the perplexing question of where to spend the vacation.

In issuing a directory of this sort, the "Star" gives to its readers and other pleasure resort seekers, a useful and up-to-date guide. The informa-tion contained in the directory has been gathered with care and has been supplied almost entirely by the proprietors themselves, this season. KHAKI GREEN FOR Jailer of the Biddles Wants a Divorce THE BOYS IN BLUE Several Co-Respondents Named.

Pittsburg, July 11.—The charges preferred by Peter K. Soffel, ex-warden of the Allegheny jail, in his suit for divorce from Kate Sohel, who fied from jail with the Biddle hothers, has been made public. The suit was entered on June 28, but the papers have only just now reached the files. Infidelity is alleged, and the following named as corespondents: Carl Johnston, Harry Jones, Julius Wild, Mike Roach and William Muelstein. It is asserted there were others unknown to the husband. A NEW COLOR FOR UNIFORMS

Another Style of Caps for the Soldiers - Better Swords for the Officers.

Washington, July 11.—Nearly all the poetry about the brave deeds of the "boys in blue" is in grave danger of being rendered obsolete. Of course, so far as campaign clothing is concerned the blue has been a back number ever since the beginning of the Spanish war. This catastrophe is rendered imminent by the army uniform board, which has been in session in this city for several by a reporter for the Dispatch yester-day Mr. Scandrett said that he only heard from Mrs. Soffel in an indirect months and of which Major-General Hughes is president. It has submitted its report to the Secretary of War. The board recommends some very radical and far-reaching changes in the uni-forms of both officers and men of the United States army. MEN IN KHAKI. In the future the soldiers must be called the "Men in Khaki," for the famous and characteristic blue field uniforms, if the recommendations of the board are adopted, will be done away with except for occasions of semi-dress. For field uniform the Extradition Proceedings at Quebec board has designed a suit of "khaki green" color, not by any means pre-senting a beautiful appearance, but considered by army officers as most serviceable. In the summer and for hot climates this uniform will be of light weight and in the winter and cold climates of heavy material. DROP THE BLUE.

The long blue overcoat worn for so many years by both officers and men will be cast with the blue suits into the remnant pile, and a long overcoat of this same brownish green color will be substituted.

In the expert opinion of the officers who constitute the uniform board the new color adopted will be most diffi-"There is nothing in the statement cult for an enemy to see on the field of battle. An Affront on Canada.

The report of the special counsel of the United States Department of Justice, on the Gaynor-Greene case, is insulting to Canadian justice. In the interests of international good feeling it should not have been given out for publication. This is the least the American department might have done. Gaynor and Greene are under arrest, charged with embezzling $2,000-Quebec City in pursuit and kidnapped them with the most reckless and insolent contempt of the Quebec courts, their buccaneering captors, but were returned to Quebec where extraditorney-General of the United States being represented by Mr. Marion Erwin. Mr. Erwin complains to his department that obstacles are being thrown in his way, and insinuates that undue influence is being exerted by the prisoners' lawyers, because they are connected in a professional way with the heads of the administration of justice in the Dominion, and in the Province of Quebec. This communication, insulting to Canadian statesmen and Canadian courts, has been made public and will be the basis of an appeal to the British embassy at Washington by the American department of justice. Of course the British Government will not aggravate the insult by interference in the case, but will let Canadian justice take its course. The United States must fight it out in Canadian courts. If the Quebec lawyers are battling for their, clients, it is only natural after the manner in which the city has been outraged by the kidnapping officers

Destroying Nationalities.

The Russianizing of Finland proceeds remorselessly, and scarcely less drastic is the Prussian policy of repression in Schleswig and Polish Prussia The benignant policy of Great Britain in South Africa shines by contrast.

In Finland, Russia is engaged in a wanton attempt to crush the spirit of a nationality. There was no question of Finnish loyalty. Under the mild constitution granted the province by Czar Alexander I. in 1809, and untouched by every Czar but the present one, Finland has been tranquil and contented, and has fulfilled every obligation to the suzerain power. But the Finns have maintained their own religion, their language, their customs, and their unity as a race. The reactionary advisers of the present Czar determined that Finland must be Rusforcing Finnish conscripts into Russian regiments instead of permitting them to serve under their countrymen. Half a million citizens addressed the Czar, protesting against the new decree as a violation of the constitution, but the appeal was ignored. In Helsingfors, on April 17 last, only 56 out people. They have steadfastly declined to fuse with their Russian and Prussian conquerors, either politically or socially, or to be rooted out of their own country. Old Age Pensions.

Old-age pension schemes are now in working order in New Zealand, Victoria and New South Wales. New Zealand is the leader, beginning four years ago; Victoria followed a year ago, and New South Wales six months later. In New Zealand the maximum pension is $90 a year; in the Australian states, $130 a year, or 10 shillings a week. In New Zealand the beneficiaries must be over 65 years of age, and must satisfy keep the ducks from laying hard-boiled certain requirements to to residence and character. No one is eligible for a pension who has property to the value of $1,350, or an income of $260, and there is a provision also for a deduction from the full rate in proportion to such property or income as the pensioner may have. It appears that during the first year 7,487 pensions were granted. The next year the number was increased by 4,699, the next has not felt the burden. Our Australian brethren are making radical social experiments, and other countries will be able to profit by the results, whether these are a success or a failure.

If we were to examine a list of the men who have left their mark on the world, we should find that, as a rule, it is not composed of those who were brilliant in youth, or who gave great promise at the outset of their careers, but rather of the plodding young men who, if they have not dazzled by their brilliancy, have had the power of a day's work in them, who could stay by a task until it was done, and well done; who have had grit, persistence common sense and honesty.

Marriage Ceremony Abruptly Came to an End.

THE UNEXPECTED HAPPENED

Expected Bride Has an Income of $60,000 a Year-Groom Got Away.

Washington, July 12 .- A story of a half completed marriage ceremony came to light today in which the principals are Frank Mitchell, a clerk in the car department of the Southern Visitor (to Nebraska farmer)-It has Railway offices in this city, and Theodora H. Van Wyck, daughter of the late Senator Van Wyck, of Nebraska, and said to have an income of $60,000 a year. The affair occurred on July

On the evening of that day a couple appeared before the Rev. Dr. Radcliffe, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and said they desired to get married. The man, who said his name was Frank Mitchell, showed Dr. Radeliffe a marriage license made out in due form, and the minister, after calling two of his household as witnesses, proceeded with the ceremony. He had read a portion of the ceremony, when he noticed that Miss Van Wyck was very nervous, and when he asked the question "Do you take this man to be your lawful wedded husband," he was much astonished when the prospective bride promptly answered "No, I don't." Van Wyck

"Because," Miss Van Wyck answered, "this is too serious. I've got to think it over." Mitchell endeavored to persuade Miss Van Wyck to continue with the ceremony, but she flatly refused to and after more entreaties, which likewise proved of no avail, Miss Van Wyck is said to have turned to Dr. Radcliffe and astonished him by suggesting that the three "go down and have a good supper and forget all this

Dr. Radcliffe, when seen today, refused to discuss the matter, saying that he had hoped to suppress all mention of the affair. He admitted, however, that a pair giving the names mentioned above had called on him to get married on the evening of July 2, but had left without having the knot tied. He refused to go into details. Inquiry at the Southern Railway office develor the fact that Frank Mitchell, who and been employed for some time in the car department at a small salary, obtained leave of absence about ten days ago with the expressed intention of getting married. He is said to have told several of his fellow-clerks that he was going to marry a very rich girl and that he did not intend to work any more. The marriage license appears on the books in the clerk's office made out

Miss Elizabeth Hesselman, Treasurer of the Neenah, Wis., Schiller Club, Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Her Monthly Suffering and Improved Her General Health.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I was always a healthy girl until about a year ago when I caught a severe cold coming home from a party. For months after that I was very irregular and suffered severe pains for a day or two. I lost flesh and strength, and became alarmed. My mother procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and I began to take it faithfully. I soon found that my general health improved, and within a couple of months I became regular to a day, and suffered no further pain, and several of my friends have been helped through its use since." - ELIZABETH HESSELMAN, 129 First St., Neenah, Wis.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS. Toronto, July 11.—There was a light run at the cattle market today, though quite heavy enough for the general character of the quality offering, which for the most part was the kind not wanted. For of the quality offering, which for the most part was the kind not wanted. For good quality, either butchers or exporters, there was a good market and prices were steady to himmer. For choice exporters higher prices were paid than on any other day this week, though most of the choice lots were bought up in the country and were being shipped through to the east by Mr. Gould, who paid as high as $6.75, the top price. Export ewes were steady, but the lamb trade was demoralized, too many coming in. Calves were also easier and were unchanged. The following sales were made; J. Gould bough bout 200 export cattle at $6 to $6.75. W. H. Dean bought a load of light exporters, 1,150 lbs, at $2.50 to $3; 20 feeders, 1,000 to 1,100 lbs, at $2.50 to $4.90. T. Halligan bought a load of mixed butchers, about 1,000 lbs, at $2.60. James Collins bought a load of 24 butcher cattle, mixed cows, 1,020 lbs; at $3, with $10 back on the deal. J. Rowantree bought 12 shipping cows, 1,125 lbs, at $4.40. Wesley Dunn bought 140 sheep at $3.40. 250 lambs at $4.25 calves at $3.75 per cwt. C. TOWED BY A SHARK

Queer Things Happening in the Gulf Since It Got Salty.

New Orleans, July 12 .- From all parts of Mississippi Sound and the bays and bayous off the Louisiana and Missis-sippi coast come wonderful stories of the unprecedented saltiness of the Gulf waters, and of the appearance of deepwater fish hitherto unknown here. At Horn Island, Harrison county, Miss., a number of devil-fish, one measuring 30 feet from tip to tip, have been harpooned by fishermen. has also been an invasion of man-eat-

A party of gentlemen from New Or-leans, while fishing today at Ship Island, fastened their three boats to-gether and steadied them with a heavy anchor. A shark became entangled in the anchor, carried all three boats out to sea and finally wrecked them on the shore. The fishermen narrowly escaped with their lives. They are all prominently socially and in club life in New Orleans. FLANNEL SUITS.

LORD KITCHENER ARRIVES HOME FROM SOUTH AFRICA

MET BY CHEERING THOUSANDS

Receives a Magnificent Ovation at Southampton-French and Hamilton Greeted.

Orotava, which left Cape Town June Roberts, Lady French, Major-General 23, with Lord Kitchener and staff on Sir Francis R. Wingate, who succeedboard, arrived here at 8:30 o'clock this Owing to the fact that Major Gordon, who was also a passenger on the steamer, had been stricken with smallpox, Lord Kitchener and his staff only were allowed to land.

MAGNIFICENT WELCOME. Lord Kitchener landed at 9:15 a.m. He was accorded a magnificent welcome from a huge throng of people. After a brief, official reception at the docks, the general was driven through the decorated and crowded streets to Hartley Hall, where he received an address from the Chamber of Commerce, expressing admiration of the generalship, resource and skill which he had shown in South Africa, and hoping that the peace which he had secured would be lasting, and mark the BEGINNING OF A NEW EPOCH of prosperity and commercial development throughout the empire. In reply Lord Kitchener declared that whatever success had been achieved was due to the rank and file of the He thanked those who had looked after the friends and relatives of those left behind in South Africa. FRENCH AND HAMILTON.

In response to clamorous calls for Gen. French and Gen. Ian Hamilton, they also spoke, the former remarking that they had throughout been inspired by the example of their chiefs.
The freedom of the borough was conferred on Lord Kitchener, and the party was then obliged to hurry away in order to meet their London engagements. The progress of Lord Kitchener and his companions to the railroad station was marked by scenes of remarkable enthusiasm.

MET BY PRINCE OF WALES. London, July 12. - Lord Kitchener arrived at Paddington Railroad staon at 12:48 p.m., and was greeted by heering crowds.

Lord Kitchener arrived at St.James' Palace at 1:27 p.m. The Prince of Wales was already there awaiting him. The Prince of Wales welcomed Lord Kitchener at Paddington, where an address was presented to the general. The latter shortly after started for St. James'- Palace.

THE HERO IN OLD LONDON

Immense Crowd Eager to See the Man London, July 12. - Lord Kitchener

reached London at 12:48 p.m. His progress through the metropolis after three years' absence at the Boer war was one of the most memorable of the many remarkable receptions of the past three years. The small procession of carriages containing the general and his staff, in simple, serviceable veldt dress, lacked spectacular fea-tures, but evidently the crowd was there in its tens of thousands to see the man of the hour, and not a pag-

From the moment he set foot in London to the time of his disappearance beneath the portal of St. James' Palace he was the object of such an outburst of popular enthusiasm as to quite overshadow the demonstrations on previous and similar occasions. The plat form at Paddington railroad station, when Kitchener arrived, looked more like a reception room of the war office or India office, than a railroad station.

Prince of Wales Welcomes the Commander-in-Chief.

It was covered with a profusion of flowers and palms, while rows of decorated stands, crowded with spectators, had been erected at all parts, from which a view of the returning general could be obtained. The platform itself was crowded with

DISTINGUISHED PERSONAGES, including Indian princes in resplendent costume, generals and other officers in full uniform, and many ladies in beautiful summer dresses. The Prince of Wales, the Duke Connaught, the Duke of Cambri Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge (who is now very infirm), Lord the commander-in-chief; Roberts, Southampton, July 12.—The Pacific Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary; Steam Navigation Company's steamer tary; Mr. Brodrick, the war secretary; the Duchess of Somerset, Lady Opening This Lord French Major-General Duchess of Somerset, Lady ed Kitchener as sirdar of the Egyptian army and governor-general of Soudan, and Major-General Pacha, British inspector-general of the Soudan, were mong those assembled to greet the general.

When Lord Kitchener's train arrived, punctual to the minute, a tremendous cheer greeted the latest hero as he emerged from his car and shook hands with the Prince of Wales. He stood head and shoulders above nearly everyone on the platform, and his workmanlike khaki uniform, with the læge brown sun helmet made familiar his pictures, was in STRIKING CONTRAST to the glittering uniforms and rows of medals and orders worn by most of those in waiting. The reception lasted ten or fifteen minutes, when the Prince of Wales and other members of the royal family drove off. After an interval Lord Kitchener and Generals French and Ian Hamilton took seats in one of the royal carriages, and followed by the brilliant headquarters staff, headed by Lord Roberts, and an escort, left the station amidst loud cheers from those inside, which grew into a perfect roar as Kitchener and his companions came in sight of the great gathering out-

In spite of his hatred of "palaver," the general was obliged to submit to the presentation of welcoming addresses at Paddington and other points on his way to St. James' Palace, but his replies were cut as short as politeness permitted, and he showed evident signs of relief when the procession restarted.

TRIUMPHAL PROGRESS. The route throughout was decorated with venetian masts, banners, flags, and streamers, with motioes of welcome, the house fronts were draped, and troops lined most of the way, colonials and Indian soldiers being utilized as well as the local regiments. Every vantage point, even to the housetops, was occupied by sightseers, and solid masses of people gathered in all the open spots, such as Hyde Park

At Victoria Gate, the mayor Westminster presented an address to the national hero, expressing high admiration of his tenacious genius, indomitable energy and devotion to duty, and Kitchener, with the brevity habitual to him, uttered ten words of thanks, and drove off.

Shortly before the arrival of the procession at Buckingham Palace, Queen Alexandra and the princesses appeared on a balcony and remained there until the victor of South Africa had passed on his triumphal journey to the St. James' Palace, which he entered amid a final hurricane of cheers. Kitchener and the generals who acmpanied him were entertained at luncheon in the great banqueting hall, where covers were laid for 50 persons.

The Prince of Wales occupied the central seat, with Lord Kitchener on his right, and Lord Roberts opposite. Among the guests were the premier, Lord Salisbury; Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Brodrick and Mr. Raglan, the undersecretary for war. The hall was hung with pictures representing war scenes.

Council Has No Power to Start Fund But May Give Grant.

Ald. Campbell and Chief Roe, the committee appointed to look into the the city itself could carry out a scheme of superannuation it would be a good thing, but the law does not allow the council to do this. All that can be done so far as has been learned, is to have the firemen form a benefit society, similar to that existing in connection with the police force, in which the men would pay a portion of their wages. The council is empowered by law to make grants to such societies. It is likely that this will be the substance of the report that will be prepared upon the subject.

The flames also spread by means of the elevator shaft to the floor above, where a large storeroom reconciliation has been forthcoming for stock was located. This stock was all damaged. Almost the whole con-tents of the store were damaged by either fire, water or smoke. The stocks of the stores adjoining on each side-Adams' grocery on the west, and Scandrett's on the east-were slightly injured by smoke. Mr. Eacrett was unable to give any estimate this morning of the value of the stock, the amount of damage done, and the insurance, as he had not been able to get at his books. The damage will be very heavy, but a large part of it will be covered by insurance.

> CHEESBROUGH-TEMPLE. Mr. Joseph Cheesbrough, of the Rogers, Brown Company, of Chicago, a former Londoner, was married at Kincardine on Wednesday morning to Miss Sadie Fisher Temple, daugnter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Temple, of Princess street. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, and was performed by the Rev. Samuel Sellery, B. D., of Dun-das, uncle of the bride. The bride wore white silk, with white organdie, and was assisted by her cousin, Miss Minnie Sellery, Dundas, who wore a costume of white muslin with bertha of lace. Mr. John Mack. Hamilton, uncle of the groom, was best man. Among the guests were Mr. Fred Cheesbrough, father of the groom; Mr. John Sellery, sen., the bride's grand-father: Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hardey, and Miss Cheesbrough, of this city; Misses, Collins, Sturgeon and Hoffman, The presents were numerous and very handsome. Miss Olive Sellery ren-dered Mendelssohn's grand Wedding March artistically. Mr. and Mrs. Cheesbrough left amid a shower of rice for Chicago, where they will make their

SOME INTERESTING GOSSIP ABOUT TROTTER AND PACER

When John Hussey drove Elastic fic'ds at Detroit will be small. Few Pointer, the brother to Star Pointer, a of the trainers have their horses keymile in 2:07 at Detroit the other day, he overthrew the belief that Ed Geers would have an easy victory in the Chamber of Commerce stakes at Detroit, with Direct Hal, even though that horse has shown a mile in 2:081/2. The record for this first of the big annual events of the season for pacers seems in a fair way to be broken this year, for it is fair to assume that both lastic Pointer and Direct Hal will be in form to pace in about 2:06, when they start in it. Never before have two green pacers been ready to begin the season with workout miles to their credit below 2:09.

The gray gelding, Elderone, by Box Elder, 2:23¼ holds the season's re-cord of 2:09½, his nearest rivals for the honor being Beauseant, 2:12, by Bow Bells, and Polar Wilkes, 2:11%, by Erie Wilkes. When Elderone took his record, Gold Brick, son of Hal Parker, 2:11%, was second, and this horse with the bunco name went such ood race that he way well bear watching in Chamber of Commerce stake at Detroit. Replying to a question regarding the cause of Ed. Siever's hard luck, he said: "Siever is one of the greatest southpaws today in the business, having uiding spirit of the organization any amount of speed, curves and control. The only thing against him has been the lack of team luck, the team being unable to hit behind him. Take, for an example, the second game he pitched this season against Chicago, in Chicago. The papers there referred to him as the 'greatest pitcher ever seen.' He won that game from Chicago by a score of 2 to 0, the latter securing but four doubtful hits off him, no player reaching any further than second base during the nine innings. there any wonder London people should feel proud of having produced such a player. of Harold H., when Tuesday's sun began the work of drying up the Windsor track. All Canada is now wondering what license it had for such fulsaw Harold H. meet a defeat more complete than has ever fallen to a horse aspiring to championship honers. Harold H. sold for $8,000 or thereabouts, was made to look dear at 30 lion, Dan Patch, and amongst the 6,000 enthusiasts who saw their hopes blasted there was still enough to cheer the gallant son of a great campaigner when the deciding heat had been won. Never was a rout so signal. When the match was made by the association in the interest of the sport of harness racing it was expected that both 98 (C. J. J. Mackessey, the New York horseman, who is now racing a stable of ponies at Fort Erie track. "It was his blackguarded into the fight which be won. Around Brooklyn in August and September, 1898, was a very fresh negro boxer, who went under the name of Black Griffo. He knew about as much about Griffo's ring tactics as a mudturtle does about English history, but he was a fresh coon and a hard-hitting one, too. He whipped two or three Brooklyn boxers, and finally one night he ran against Carter, who used to take in all the shows in that part of New York. They got into an argument then and there, and finally a match was made. It looked like 19 to 1 on the negro the night they met in October that year, but Black Griffo and his friends received one of the worst defeat of their lives, for Carter won in ten rounds of about as hard slugging as I ever witnessed. I then and there predicted a good ring life for Carter, and today he is as good as any man in his class.

C. S. Titus, of the Union Boat Club suade English rowers to visit the United States. He has invited F. S. Kelley, of Balliol College, Oxford, and R. B. Etherington-Smith, of the Leander Rowing Club, in the name of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen to attend the August or some subsequent meeting of the association at Worcester, Mass. Commenting on this invitation the Sportsman yesterday morning said there must be good oarsmen who are willing to go to the United States and if that is the case time and means may be found sooner or later to send them.

Carter is said to be in the best of condition for his go with Weinig on Monday night. The latter has the admiration and the backing of nearly every western and southern horseman now racing at Fort Erie. They saw his hree battles in Hot Springs last winter and they saw his fights with Mar-vin Hart and Joe Choynski. They have all read about his gameness in betting and they are willing to string along their own money with a man who will back himself. In this at least Weinig is unique. He always backs himself for big amounts in every ring battle. The preliminary boxers are popular and should put up good exhibitions, and the outlook is for big house.

There have been few seasons when the weather interfered with the early race meetings more seriously than it has this spring, says the Horse World. In March it appeared as if the season would be auspicious for early racing. but May and June were both characterized by so much cold, wet weather that training, except in a few favored sections of the country, was seriously interfered with. Now, just before the time of opening the Grand Circuit who rides a tandem with a friend who series of races, the members of many can see that smaller fields of starters will be seen at the first of the big mile track meetings than is usually the case. Whether these conditions will affect the racing beyond the first few weeks of the season is uncertain. Probably they will not; indeed there are those who predict that they will result in exceptionally brilliant performances later in the season, basing their reasons on the belief that the enforced slow preparation most of the horses have been subjected to will make them faster and better in August and September than they would have been had they been hurried in their work and raced at extreme speed in July. Woodstock was the visiting team and Brown Jackson, of Seaforth, did the whistle solo, and when it was all counted up Woodstock had 11 and Stratford 4-and nobody killed. Poor old Stratford, the home of J. D. Mc-Crimmon and a summer race meet. It is going to the bad. It will soon class in the C. L. A. as Montreal and Nationals do in the N. A. L. U .- and that means that its one object in life will be to get beaten.

Telephone reports from Orangeville "Everybody practicing hard, and so many men in sight we don't know how to pick Saturday's team." All the old players who had retired got the fever afresh when the Dufferins trimmed St. Kitts, and they are now working to make up for lost time, says the Toronto Telegram. And, by the way, it might be remarked that Orangeville is rich in players. The Dufferins have nineteen men, all of whom have figured in senior lacrosse In addition to the team that beat the Athletics they have Swain, Jimmie Irvine, Campbell, Tiny Henry, Ed. McIntyre, Goodall and Booth. Most of the other teams could use a few of these spare men to advantage, too. Toronto Globe: It is a pretty fair sort of a team that the Tecumsehs will line up against the Athletics, at St. Kitts tomorrow, and it would no be surprising if they square matters with Courtenay Kingston's aggregation for the unexpected defeat some weeks ago. The team will take position as follows: Goal, Dobbin; point, Grimes; cover point, Graydon; home, Clark, Roach, Angus; center, Hogen; defense, Soules, Kelly, O'Connor; outside, Durkin; inside, Greatrix; spares, Mackenzie and Wil-kinson. The team and a large number of supporters will leave on the 8 o'clock. Mr. Peter McMillan will referee the game.

meeting last night and decided to finish out the season, says the Beacon.

There are some interesting rumors | have to pay a forfeit of $100, and i is just a question whether it would not be better in the long run if the took this course. The Iroquois' nex game is with London on July 26.

Notwithstanding the apathy of the public, the Stratford twelve are game to the end, and they will be in Woodstock next week to play their scheduled game stronger and more deter-mined than ever, predicts the Sentinel Review. The team's rough play and rowdiness, if the players themselves are responsible for it, cannot be con-demned too severely, but it is not at all fair to discourage a team that is doing its best to play the scheduled games in the face of the greatest obstacles. True, it is claimed that the Iroquois indulged in rough tactics with the Cockneys of London, but now since they played so fairly and decently with the local Beavers, does it not look as if the Cockneys themselves made the ex-hibition culminate in its end? Nothing of the kind. It looks as !! the man who acted as referee in the last game wouldn't stand for roughhouse play. That's all. Two great games of lacrosse will take place in the other C. L. A. dis-trict today. The Tecumsehs meet the St. Kitts on the latter's grounds, and Brantford plays at Orangeville. Both St. Kitts and the Dufferins have been putting in their best licks of late, and it looks as if they would land their games. Still, you can't always tell.

THE CORONATION TOURNEY. New York, July 12.-Charlie White, the American, who went to England to show the English sports the difference between refereeing prize fights in this country and England, arrived here from Liverpool yesterday. White refereed the majority of the bouts at the fistic carnival of the National Sporting Club, which was held last month. He said that the American idea of judging a bout in the ring was received favorably by the British sports and he thinks that the scheme may be emulated by the English referees in the future. "I had a splendid time abroad," continued White. "The carnival, while not a financial success, was certainly artistic in every sense, and those who attended received their money's worth. I guess the failure was due to the postponment of the coronation. The majority of the bouts were interesting. The mill between The lacrosse club executive held a Ruhlin and Sharkey was a fast one neeting last night and decided to and exciting throughout. I think that when Sharkey arrives here he will seek Advice To Umpires.

Tony Mullane, who umpired in the Pacific-Northwest League this season, observance of which will help any umpire to success. Said he:

"I drink nothing stronger than coffee, and whenever possible sleep nine and ten hours every night. I have found that loss of sleep will ruin an umpire's eye quicker than anything else, and a little 'sociability' every night will soon knock his judgment out. I believe an umpire has a much harder position to fill than a playerthat is, if he wants to do the right thing-and he cannot take too good care of himself. "The fact that I pitched ball for vears is. I think, quite an advantage. like to stand behind the pitcher. Before he has thrown half a dozen balls I learn the catcher's signals, and know just where the pitcher will try to deliver the ball. I also watch the pitcher's hand, and can always tell what he is going to throw. This enables me to watch for the ball to be delivered in a certain place. goes there it is a strike; if not, it is a ball. I make it a point to be as close as possible to a base when a play is made and what I see with my own eyes satisfies me, no matter others may say or think."

A Poisonous Drug Still Freely Used

Many people are brought up to believe that coffee is a necessity of life, much moisture have been rare, on the system makes it hard to loosen its grip even when one realizes its injurious effects.

A lady in Baraboo, writes: "I had used coffee for years; it seemed one of the necessities of life. A few months ago, my health, which had been slowly failing, became more impaired, and I knew that unless relief came from some source, I would soon be a physical wreck. I was weak and nervous, had such sick headaches, no ambition, and felt tired of life. husband was also losing his health. He was troubled so much with indi-gestion that at times he could eat only a few mouthfuls of dry bread. We concluded that coffee was slowly poisoning us and stopped it and used hot water. In training schools for nurses, instructions are, of course, given in all matters of this kind, but let any woman ask herself, "Could I give a bath to a person in bed without wetting the clothing, or change the undersheet while the bed was occupied?" and she will smile at the seeming impossibility; yet when she is shown, she will wonder why she did not discover the right way herself. SUNDAY MUSIC. To the Editor of the Advertiser: On Sunday afternoons a large numper of our citizens take advantage of Victoria Park for the purpose of enjoying a little fresh air and relaxation.
Would it not be a good idea to have some sacred music between the hours of 4 and 6? The excellent band of the Seventh Regiment has a good supply of such music, and it is said that they are prepared to give concerts should the necessary authority be obtained for them to do so. No harm can be done to anyone by such performances, and they would be a great source of pleasure of a most reasonable nature.

It is to be hoped that no obstacle will be thrown in the way, should such a desirable move be A CITIZEN.

New York, July 12.-Rifka Balsky, & bookbinder girl, tried her hardest to kill herself yesterday morning at 9 Monroe street, where she boarded with Mrs. Lena Cohen. Rifka has been unhappy for many days because a relation took from her $43, the savings of two years of work, with which she meant to educate herself. The other day she saw the man and asked him to give the money back, and he laughed at her. She went out to her work at the usual time yesterday, but came back in an hour, and went to her room and lay down.

Mrs. Cohen told the neighbors about this, and they urged her to go and ask Rifka why she did not go to work. "I feel badly," said Rifka.

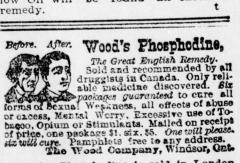

"Have you bought medicine?"

"It is here," said the girl, holding up a package from which sifted a green powder. Mrs. Cohen ran out to the hall and screamed to the people below: "She poisons herself; Rifka would kill herself; bring the ambulance." She ran back into the room just in time to see the girl drinking a mixture of the powder and water from a glass. When the neighbors burst in the door, and while everybody was screaming, the girl picked up a butcher her hands. NINHAM DIED FROM HEART FAILURE, DUE TO A SHOCK

Report of Autopsy.

Other Evidence Given at Inquest, Which Stands Adjourned Till Tonight.

The sixth session of the Ninham inquest, held last night, was the shortest of the series, as it lasted less than two hours, starting about 8:15 p.m. and closing at 10. Contrary to expectations, the inquest was not concluded, one reason for this being the absence of a witness who had been summoned, and the other being the mentioning by two witnesses of some fresh names, whose owners' testimony might have been of value. The inquest was adjourned till tonight, when it may be concluded; but it was stated by the officials that should any witnesses try to keep out of the way, or should any additional evidence loom up, another adjournment will lowing injuries were found: One bruise take place to allow of further sessions being held.

Four witnesses were heard during the evening. The most important evidence was, of course, the report submitted by the doctors performing the autopsy, and their testimony arising out of it. They found that Gus Ninham's death was caused by stoppage of the heart, due to injuries received and the attending excitement. Four ribs had been fractured after death. The injuries found on the head were inflicted he before death. A healthy man would not have been killed by such injuries. The evi-dence of another witness tended to fifth was broken four inches from the show that Sharkey's hotel was open after the hour at which Sharkey said he closed up. SEVEN WENT TO SHARKEY'S. The first witness called was Wm. Worrall, 795 Colborne street. He said that he went to Sharkey's on the night of June 21, in company with Michael and Patrick White, James Fox, Percy Stone, George McLean and John Stone, George McLean and John Clark. The party did not stay at Sharkey's more than 10 minutes, then they drove south on the sideroad. They then turned east and drove to London View Hotel, where they stopped about two minutes. The party then drove direct to witness' house in London, where witness and White

Witness met the other members of the party about 11 o'clock, near the corner of Maple and Richmond streets. Witness had left a lady friend at about 10:30 on Central avenue, and then walked down to Richmond street, where he met the Whites and Stone. They stood about ten minutes, then went to King street, where they waited about fifteen minutes. They met Fox and 'ark at this point. Someone proposed a drive, and McLean and White went to Hues-ton's for the rig. When the rig came all got in and drove direct to Shark-Witness was not sure that it was not 12 o'clock before they started. They drove pretty fast. The party alighted at Sharkey's, and all went in. They met Hugh Sharkey, jun., just inside the door. They went into the room at the end of the hall, where the piano was. There were three men in the room, but witness did not know any of them. John McArthur was not present, and witness did not see him that night at all. The party stayed in the room, and then Hugh Sharkey came in and said,

NOTHING DOING HERE, BOYS; you might as well get out; we're all closed up.' The party then left, there was no conversation save the above with Sharkey. Witness did not see anyone outside. The party, in driv-ing to Sharkey's did not meet any rigs or persons. On arriving at Sharkey's witness did not see any person in the fields or running across When driving up the sideroad witness saw some people on a road or lane running west. There was about half a dozen people, and they were standing in a group. It was too dark to see if they were

He was not driving and did not take notice. He was quite sober, as he had not had a drink since the afternoon. London View Hotel was closed when the party came to it, and they did not see anyone there.

Dr. C. F. Neu, one of the physiciars who conducted the post-mortem examination on the body of Augustus Ninham, on June 23, was next called. After being sworn, he produced and read the report prepared by himself and Dr. Waugh. It was as follows:

Apparent age about 40 years.

Weight about 185 pounds. Body well nourished. Post-mortem rigidity well marked. Post-mortem lividity on back, neck and upper part of front of chest. Inspection-A bruise half an inch in in diameter, one inch external, to the outer angle of the left eye, and half an inch below. Another bruise on the right elbow, about the same size, just below the outer part of the joint. These were the only bruises visible on the body.

RIBS BROKEN AFTER DEATH. To Mr. Magee, Dr. Neu said that the knocking down of the deceased and the injuries to the chest would produce the shock to the heart which caused death.

The party started from in front of blows were delivered on the body to he Walsh House, in the city, short- cause the fractures found.

It was impossible to say how many blows were delivered on the body to he walsh House, in the city, short- cause the fractures found. The breaking of the ribs occurred after death, perhaps 5 or 10 minutes after. Death would be immediate—a question of seconds-following the shock of the heart. The breaking of the ribs after death was apparent by the absence of oozing of blood from the torn vessels at the seat of the fracture. The oozing of the blood might continue for only a few seconds after death, or for some minutes.

The injuries upon the head were inflicted before death, while that upon the cheek was inflicted several hours before death. There had been at least three blows delivered upon the head. No mark upon the right eyebrow was the ribs were broken. Ninham could not have spoken after the breaking of his ribs.

There were no indications of alcohol in the contents of the stomach. Had there been much present it would have been noticeable. A strong, healthy man, with his heart and other organs in normal condition, would have survived the injuries inflicted on Ninham. To Coroner Ferguson, Dr. Leu said that a moderate blow would have been sufficient to cause Ninham's death, considering the condition of his heart. To Mr. Magee Dr. Neu said that without meeting with violence Ninham might have lived for years, or might have dropped dead any minute. The injuries on the head and body might have been caused by kicks from a To Mr. Faulds, Dr. Neu said the in-

DR. WAUGH CONCURRED. Dr. Waugh followed Dr. Neu on the stand. He had taken part in the postmortem with Dr. Neu. He concurred in Dr. Neu's evidence. There were no marks on the surface of the skin of the head, he said.

AT HOTEL WITH A LADY. The next witness called was Chas. Bricklin, who was previously mentioned as having been at Sharkey's with woman companion. He testified that on the night of June 21, he left the city about 9 o'clock, drove straight to Sharkey's, and stayed there about an hour, or a little more. He reached the hotel about 9:15, and returned his horse to the livery at 11 o'clock. He protably left the hotel about 10:20.

McArthur left the room as soon as he ceased singing. Witness and his companion got into their buggy on the west side of the hotel. Witness did not know who took his buggy to the shed and who brought it out again. He had no idea as to the number of persons he saw at the hotel. He could not say there were more than twelve. He saw five or six in the bar, and could hear some people speaking at the front of the house. On leaving the hotel witness drove direct to the city, but did not drive very fast, Witness did not notice who were on the veranda at the hotel when he came away, and could not say if McArthur and and did not hear that night of any injury to any Indian. Witness was positive that he left before midnight. To Mr. Faulds witness said he did not look at his watch when leaving the hotel, but he judged that he left about 10:30. The liveryman looked at his watch and said that it was 11 o'clock when witness and his companion reached the livery in the city. Witness did not know who brought his rig out of the shed. It might have been John McArthur for all he knew. Someone was in the shed when witness left the hotel; but he did not know who it was.

To Mr. Magee, the witness said that nobody got into the buggy with him and his companion after they left the

at Coronation Banquet

An Invitation to Visit Norway-Queen Expresses Sympathy for Miss Strathy's Family.

London, July 11 .- In the absence of Joseph Chamberlain, who has not recovered from his recent accident, the Earl of Onslow, Under Secretary for the Colonies, presided at the Empire coronation banquet, which was held in the Guildhall tonight. The brilliant company of over 600 persons included the colonial premiers, the Indian princes and other distinguished visitors now in London. The Earl of Onslow, congratulating NO ALCOHOL IN STOMACH.

To Mr. Faulds, Dr. Neu said, there was no evidence of the blows on the coronation, referred to the colonial conference now being held in London as being more likely to confirm the Dr. Neu could give no estimate of as being more likely to confirm the the length of time after death that principle of free trade than to tend in the direction of protection. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Premier, made a speech, in which he dwelt upon the development and prosperity of the Empire.

The hight Hon. E. Barton, Prime Minister of the Commonwelat's of Australia, said to attempt to establish an imperial zollverein, based on the ontire needom of exchange in the products of each portion of the Empire, was at this stage utterly impossible. Sir Alfred Jones, of the Elder-Dempster Company, has invited the premiers and Canadian members of Parliament here, with their families, to visit Norway on the Lake Simcoe. David Campbell returns to Canada on July 12. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and other ministers will give a dinner at Hotel Cecil on July 15, in acknowledgment of the civilities they have received. Sir Edmund Barton, the Australian Premier, is booked to sail for Canada about the middle of August, en route for Sydney from Vancouver.

Sir Gilbert Barton, M. P., will ac-empany Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier on a tour of Jersey and other Channel islands at the end of this month. The Jersey officials are arranging a handsome reception for the Canadian Premier's party.

MISS STRATHY'S DEATH

When the coping stone fell crushing to death Miss May Strathy, daughter of Edward W. Strathy, of Lachine, the unfortunate lady was walking with Mme. Delacherel, who was injured. Queen Alexandra sent the following message of sympathy: "The Queen is greatly shocked to hear of the sad accident, and wishes a report sent at once. Please convey Her Majesty's deep sympathy to the sufferers, and, if possible, express to the relatives of the lady killed Her Majesty's distress and sorrow at this lamentable event." Deceased will be buried at Birming-ham, where her uncie was buried. It is said the deceased's mother dropped dead at Montreal station is years ago.

Premiers and Princes Present | The Negotiations With Columbia Have Been Started.

To Be Paid That Country for Relinquishing the Panama Route.

Washingtion, July 11.-Negotiations States and Colombia, by the former will acquire the right to build the Panama canal, have virtually begun, Minister Concha, of Colombia having conferred with Secretary Hay on the preliminaries of the negotiations. Mr. Hay will be out of the city a few days, and on his return the negotiations will proceed.

Minister Concha has been fully clothed with authority to go on with the treaty. The main features of the treaty are pretty well settled, as the protocol signed some time ago was quite full setting forth the prospective arrangement in case congress acted favorably on the Panama route. THE PRICE.

The amount to be paid Colombia for a relinquishment of exclusive rights to gold, payable on the exchange of ratifications of the treaty, and in addition Colombia is to receive an annuity at the end of 14 years, to be determined by mutual agreement at that time. This annuity is expected to be $600,000 a year, as the immediate payment of $7,000,000 covering the period of the next 14 years is considered a basis for fixing the annual rental at $600,000. CONDITIONS.

In transferring the rights of Colom-bia to the United States the language about two pounds of dynamite under used by the act of congress will be Florine's feet, killing him instantly followed to a considerable extent, and and breaking every bone in his body. there will be a transfer of such jurisdiction over the six miles zone as will who was standing about 15 feet dispermit the exercise of American autant, narrowly escaped death by a thority with American courts, sanitary officers, police, etc. The question of transferring complete political sovereignty is about the only point which could raise obstacles to the negotiations, but it is expected that this point will be avoided as the act of congress appears to contemplate a transfer of jurisdiction and not a transfer of political sovereignty.
COLOMBIA'S PREFERENCE.

They say, however, that there is far less popular demand in Colombia for the Panama canal than there is in Nicaragua for the Nicaragua route, and this apathy may delay the conclusion of negotiations by the United States Senate and the Colombian congress before it becomes effective.

JOHNSTOWN'S MINE EXPLOSION CAUGHT THE MEN AT LUNCH

HEROIC EFFORTS OF RESCUERS

Several Dangerous Sections of the Mine Yet Unexplored-Distressing Scenes at the Morgues.

Johnstown, Pa., July 12-1 a.m.-Two members of the relief party, sent home for a rest, said upon leaving the mine, shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, that 52 bodies were loaded on cars, Eighty-seven bodies were recovered ready to be brought out the first thing ready to be brought out the first thing nightfall. Still a party of officials after daylight. This will swell the and miners searched on three miles dead list to 143.

WORK OF THE SEARCHERS.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.-The searching party that entered the mines this morning penetrated to the four left headings, and which they were unable to reach last night. They found in one group twelve bodies. They believed six of these were living. At 2 o'clock p.m. they sent out for medical assistance. Two doctors have just gone in.

From the position of the bodies the dead miners were eating their lunch when stricken down by the explosion. Buckets and the remains of their lunches were found scattered over the lunches were found scattered over the noon cheering word came from the floor. Evidently their lives were mine that life yet lingered in some of snuffed out painlessly.

Distressing scenes are constant about the temporary morgue, and on the side of the river at the foot of the descent from the pit mouth, where women and children are still waiting. Several thousand are congregated at each point.

As fast as sides of the cars, and were placed in were identified as Poles. As fast as identification is completed, the bodies are being taken to their houses. At noon the charnel house was about cleared of bodies.

SOME RESCUED.

This afternoon eight living men were brought out of the Westmont They were found heading in slope. the Klondyke section by the rescuing party. After the doctor had worked with them for a while they were able to be brought out. They were removed to the Cambria Hospital, where it is reported they have a fair chance of recovery. A little further on in No. 4 heading the rescuing party found eight other men, who were still alive. These were in a more serious condition than the ones found first. The physicians in the rescuing party administered oxygen and other restoratoo weak to risk bringing them to the surface.

Eighty-seven dead bodies have been taken from the rolling mill mine of the Cambria Steel Company up to 6 o'clock tonight as a result of yesterfor the treaty between the United day's terrible explosion. Eight men were brought out alive at 3 o'clock this afternoon and six more alive shortly after 5 o'clock. One of the latter died while on the way to the hospital. Three sections of the Klondyke have now been cleared. There are still

The Death List Now Reaches three sections to be explored, and those in a position to know, say as many more men are still entombed and probably dead.

REAL HEROISM.

This has been a day of heroic rescues at the rollings mill mine of the Cambria Steel Company. Thrilling experiences attended the efforts of the forty brave men who went down into the shaft with a very faint hope that their attempt at rescue would be successful. The reward of their efforts was the saving of the lives of four-teen of their fellow-workmen and bringing them to their families. Dead and maimed bodies were located, but no effort was made to bring them out brought up and taken to the morgue from the mine between daylight and inside the mine. Occasionally word would come to the surface that another heap of remains had been exposed. There remain dangerous heading in the Klondike section of the mine yet to be explored. No one knows how many dead will be found there. The mining officials refrain from guesswork on the subject. The impression prevails among the outsiders and certain employes that 150 is a low estimate of the casualty list. Throngs surged about the pit mouth, the improvised morgue at the armory, and the homes of the dead during the day. Bulletin boards were eagerly scanned for news.

MORE RESCUES.

Exaggerated rumors of all kinds prevailed. One report gained circulation that disaster had overtaken the rescuing party which entered the mine shortly after 9 o'clock. This proved untrue. In the early part of the afterthe bodies found. The rescuers made first for No. 4, left heading, which they had been unable to reach the night before. Fallen roofs almost choking up the heading, but through and over the debris the rescuers pushed their way. In an open space they were startled a maniac call that came from a blackened form that rushed at them out of the darkness. The man grasped firmly a pick handle, and tried in his frenzy to beat down his rescuers. He was overpowered and dragged back to the main heading to the cars. Thirteen other living men were that time he had no opportunity found in the chamber, and physicians were quickly taken to the spot. At 3 p.m. the train of nine cars came to the pit mouth, where ambulances

At that time three more headings believed to be filled with dead were unsearched. Thirty-nine bodies were lying within reach in the main head-Three were brought out at 4:35 The bodies were placed in p.m. the coal cars and covered with canvas. The condition of the bodies tives, but at this hour the men are showed that there had been slow death. The only one who could be identified at the pit mouth was Mine Boss Tom Linsen. One of the volunteer rescuers said that fire was raging in parts of the mine that would take some time to quell. Most of those who were brought out alive saved themselves by crawling into a chamber, and turning a valve of a compressed air pipe line which runs along the entry. At 11 o'clock tonight the number of known dead is 90; number of injured in hospitals, 18; number of injured who were able to go home, 4.

Good Crops in Kent.

Chatham, Ont., July 11.-The outlook for a good crop in this vicinity is very bright as regards wheat, oats and barley. Wheat is well filled out, and while a little of it is down from heavy winds and rain, the damage is believed to be very slight. Oats and barley have not been seriously damaged, but corn is very backward, and has suffered severely from rain and cold, and unless the conditions from now on are very favorable the crop will be very light. There is a prospect of a very large root crop.

The costume, too, of gentlemen and ladies has undergone some mutations since the first fine day that our Achilles found himself standing on his bare legs in the corner. There are no high neckicioths, there are no Hessian boots now. D'Orsay has followed Brummel where dress is unnecessary, perhaps inconvenient, and a garment that fitted a man would be pointed at in the present day as simply ridiculous. Our youths are clothed to please themselves, and so, I presume, are the ladies. That an outer fabric of light material, standing several feet from the person on all sides, is a cool and comfortable attire in warm weather, appears a self-evident proposition; but that the beauty of the female figure, so to speak, is enhanced by this upspringing, so to speak, like a jack-in-the-box, out of a volume of circumambient muslin, is a question of opinion which may admit of some dispute. Who shall decide on such matters? Achilles must congratulate himself that his own proportions are independent of all vagaries of fashion and changes of costume.

Above all, if he be wise, should he exult and leap for joy, as it were, in the untrammeled luxury of his naked feet. I speak it advisedly when I say, that on the most crowded day in June I betieve the Greek alone of all that throng around him is ignorant of the suffering caused by a pair of tight boots. Now, I am aware that in this department of art, as in many others, we have borrowed largely from the French. I am not to be told that Hoby and Hubert and the rest have achieved all that can be achieved with so pliant a material as leather, and that even the cunning chiropodist who did so much for Louis Napoleon, finds his profession failing him day by day, for that there are no excrescences now to pare away. So when I speak for the hord of the moral "pitching of the shoe," which the proverb says is "best known to him who wears it' to that torture of the Inner man which all the easings and stretchings of all the coblers and cordwainers who do homage to St. Crispin are powerless to assu he had shown more than common per-spicuity, were this morning at a consid-erable discount in the city. Lord Holyhead, Charley Wing and old Landless lounge in leisurely conclave at the rails, and the nobleman, who is on horseback, recognizes Gordon, and nods to him over the heads of his two friends. With Holyhead's strong, firm seat in the saddle, surely there can be no pressure on the soles, and those feet, thrust home in their shining stirrupirons, ought indeed to be unconscious of a twinge. Alas! "Nobs," like his neighbors, is undergoing the torture of "the boot." Landless, who has one arm linked in Charley Wing's, and the other reclining on the rails, might indeed fairly claim immunity from all mental pangs, such as I have described, on the score of bodily suffering. A general champagne-and-claret gout has reduced him to a crippled amble, and a pair of cloth shoes, even at the best of times; and why he should ever have a care or an anxiety, it is difficult to understand, living, as he does, on a small annulty wrung from the forbearance of his creditors. The Yorkshire property is mortgaged, the Irish estates are under trust. As fine a fortune as was ever wasted has been frittered away, less through vice than sheer carclessness and incompetency, so that none but the lawyers know where it is all gone; and the former Amphitryon of many a joyous feat and hospitable welcome, is satisfied now to dine for seven-and-sixpence at his club, and prose away the evening over his brandy-and-water and eigar. I believe Landless likes his present quitte as well as his former life. Easy, good-tempered, without brains or ambition, the necessities of his existence are but a little whist, a little lounging, much gossip and tittle-tattle (for Landless is kindly even in his weaknesses, and stops short of scandal), a glass of warm negus after he is in bed, and an old servant who robbed him handsomely in former days, and saves every shilling he can for him now, to look after him. It seems he should have no more cares nor anxietles than an ox stalled up to feed; and yet—and yet—within that bloated form there does beat a heart, if you can only get at it, and next that heart, in his breast pocket, lies a yellow, fumigated shipletter that makes every pulsation beneath it a throb of pain. Even Landless loves one thing on earth besides his dinner, and if that curly-headed midshipman, lying sick unto death at the mouth of the Senegal, yields to the fever which is wasting blird or him like a very Rachel, an [To be Continued.]

HEROIC LIFE

With an Eve Single to the Good of Her Fellowmen She Toiled.

The Story of Eliza H. Varney, of Bloomfield, Ont .- Spent Many Years in a Service of Saintly Sacrifice to the Poor and Needy - Ministered to Their Physical as Well as Spiritual Wants Shot Down Danish Flag.

In view of the purchase of the Danish West Indies, pardon me for re-calling an incident of twenty-odd years ago that nearly caused serious international complications, says a New York Press writer. An American marksman, paying a visit to Charlotte Amalia, amused the governor by an exhibition of skill with the rifle. Siting on the veranda of the Government House, he said he could cut with a bul let the signal halyards on the flagstaff of the fort, and lower the Dan-ish standard to the ground. As the lines were almost invisible in the distance, the governor was willing to bet that he could not do it. The shot rang out and the flag fell. Presently a horseman dashed up, informing the governor that someone had fired on the flag. There was great excitement. The governor, none too pop-ular, it seems, with the military, ruined his political future by admitting that the affair was a joke in which he connived. Report being sent to Co-penhagen, highly colored, of course, by the commandant, his excellency was summarily removed.

Watchdogs are to be purchased and trained to accompany the police on their nightly rounds at Schaerbeck, Red Riding Hood. There liv'd in a dark forest once A great man nam'd Strong Bow. And many a mighty deed he did In days long, long ago.

His wife at times went forth with him, Arm'd with the bow and spear, To ride through woods and over floods, To hunt the fallow deer. Their daughter, young "Red Riding

Was call'd a youthful sage— A very clever child was she, Though still of tender age.

Her parents said before they left,
To hunt the deer that day,
"The woods come near our castle door—
The woods reach far away. "Wolf packs are all around, my child, They're here on every hand, And if you venture forth alone, They'll kill you where you stand.

"They loiter in the forest near, And when the day grows dim, If you should venture out of door They'd tear you limb from limb."

Then Strong Bow and his pretty wife, Dress'd in their trappings gay. Kiss'd Riding Hood's sweet rosy cheek. And quickly rode away.

Into the forests deep they rode, Before the end of day. The fallow deer with hounds they chased Till they were miles away.

But little luck there came to them, For early in the day. "Noble," the best of all the hounds, Had from them gone away.

O'er hills they rode, through gloom; glens,
Through many a threatening flood,
Through deep defiles in places wild,
Far in the tangled wood.

Worn and weary they returned, But what was their dismay. When near the castle door they saw There "Noble's" body lay.

And just within the castle door, Among the shadows dim.

There lay the bones of grandmamma,
Who was torn limb from limb. Red Riding Hood had shut her door,

And kept within her room,
And there she saw, from her high place,
How Noble met his doom. Her little heart was sorely pained, For near the great hall door, The bloody bones of grandmamma, Lay scatter'd on the floor.

And oft she thought in after years,

Sitting in shadows lone, Of the great dog that gave his life, That he might save her own. In after years Red Riding Hood Was often heard to say,
"The noblest lesson of my life,
My dog taught me that day.

"His life for mine he freely gave; So trusty, faithful, true—Fiercely he fought to guard the door 'Twas all that he could do."

Soon far the fame of Riding Hood Spread o'er the country round— The noble deeds she often did. Were taught her by her hound. Many years have since gone by,

The wolves return no more, And grandmammas have come and gone, Their blood stains not the floor. But where in all the land today Can faithfulness be found, Greater than that for Riding Hood, Shown by her faithful hound.

Still, still, among the hills of Wales, Where that old castle stood. Some friendly hand points to the grave Of dear Red Riding Hood.

And still some children point the place Where faithful "Noble" fell, To save from fangs of savage beasts
The child he loved so well.

Red Riding Hood did deeds of fame, for often there she fed the poor, Help'd beggars on their way.

She tam'd the birds by feeding them
All through the mouth of May;
They sang her praise, in field and Throughout the livelong day.

Long after dear, sweet Riding Hood Was buried on the hill, The redbreast, when he came in spring, Sang of her kindness still. The linnet joined with him in song

Far in the leafy wood,
To tell of deeds done long ago,
By dear Red Riding Hood. And as they flew o'er hill and dale, Near where the castle stood. They always sang their sweetest song 'Bout dear Red Riding Hood.

And when the autumn season came, They to a warmer clime, Where suns were bright and days were warm, Like ours in summer time. The robin sang, and linnet too.

As they flew through the wood
Of her who liv'd long, long ago—
Their friend, Red Riding Hood

Or sat in silent mood.
Oh! we were always rous'd to song
When we saw Riding Hood.

We'll ne'er forget our sweetest song, Long taught each feather'd brood, To sing in Wales the summer long The deeds of Riding Hood.

"It is the song of all the birds.

Of lark and linnet too.

Thou charming child of long ago,
Our parents sang of you,

"Who fed the birds in winter time— They never wanted food— And cared for them long, long ago? It was sweet Riding Hood.

"Now Riding Hood is seen no more."
She lies beneath the ground;
But when, ah! when, like her of yore,
Shall such a friend be found?

'And we have come from the warm south,
To where a castle stood, That sheltered here, long years ago, Our friend, Red Riding Hood,

Here rests the queen of singing birds, Who gave our parents food;
We'll toil from dawn till early eve,
From love of Riding Hood.

"We may come and we may go,
And sing in the leafy tree.
Have we mong men a friend? Ah! no,
Never a one like thee.

Now wicked boys make war on us, To kill us when they can, But the great God for us has care— Is kinder far than man.

"Oh! shall the time return again, ,
When we sing in the wood?
Our songs shall be as once they were,
When fed by Riding Hood.

"Then we shall sing from morn till night, When boys grow kind and good, And will do, as traditions say, Was done by Riding Hood."

birds will watch you all the day, And as they sung of Riding Hood.
They'll learn to sing of you. Remember what the Saviour says

About the sparrow's fall.

And though He cares much more for you,
His love extends to all. Then take you care, and do no wrong,
To songbirds or their brood;
But feed them when they sing their song,
As once did Riding Hood.

WILL LEARN TO SWIM FIRST ON DRY LAND

National Instruction of New York School Children.

The simple, old-fashioned way to teach a boy to swim was for the other boys to throw him in the water and boys to throw him in the water and merely see to it that he did not actually drown. It worked pretty well, and the boys subjected to the treatment learned fast, although, their parents sometimes considered the way brutal—if they heard anything about it.

Now, in a big city like New York, this is all changed. The boys and girls are both taught to swim, and in New York this year there is to be a considerable enlargement of facilities. It is proposed to give a two months' swim-ming course to all boys and girls under 16 who apply for it, and at the end of the time there will be diplomas for those who have finished the course creditably, and probably a gold medal for the best boy swimmer and an only other for the best girl swimmer. Only those can be admitted who have not learned to swim before.

To one who remembers the old rough and ready methods, the most astonishing part of the scheme is the scientific exactness with which swimming is to be taught—is taught in some places now. The pupil begins on dry land, and practices arm movements under the direction of an instructor, who counts one, two, three to time the motions. When he is supposed to be somewhat familiar with the muscular movements required he is put into the water and there he is taught floating, then the breast stroke, then the overhand stroke, diving, rescuing drowned people by throwing ropes or by diving for them, and then the method of re-suscitating those who are half-drown-

Paine's Celery Compound has saved thousands from nervous prostration and collapse; it has effected wonderful cures in kidney and liver complaints; its victories over rheumatism and neuralgia have commanded the attention and admiration of our best physicians. It has cured disease when everything else has failed. The following voluntary testimonial from a Manitoba lady who owes her life and present good health to Paine's Celery Corporated will about the soul of Compound, will cheer the soul many despondent sufferers. Mrs. R. Cobb, of Seamo, Man., says:

Before using your valuable Paine Celery Compound I was so crippled with rheumatism that I had to crawl on hands and knees from one place to another. I also suffered from neuralgia and dreadful headaches, and could not get more than one or two hours sleep each night. I often thought it would be better to die than live and endure my terrible agony. I was happily advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and after use of six bottles the rheumatism and neuralgia are banished, and I now eat, rest and sleep well. My present improved state of health is due entirely to the virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, which has done wonders for me. My husband is now using it for dyspepsia, and it is doing wonders for him.'

TENNIS WAS PLAYED IN ANCIENT FRANCE

More Popular Than Archery in the Thirteenth Century.

Among the games pure and simple which had so great a popularity that archery was neglected for them, the jeau de paume, or game of tennis, held from early times the most prominent place in France. Everybody played it, kings as well as their subjects. Even monks were addicted to it, and the council of Sens prohibited their playing, especially "in their shirts and in public." The people were so passion-ately devoted to this game, and others of the same kind, that they often left their work on week days to go and play, and various regulations were made at different times, either to suppress such games or to allow them only on Sundays. In England, whither they had been imported, their practice had likewise to be restricted. We are told that in 1292 there were thirteen manufacturers of tennis balls in Paris, while there were only eight booksellers. The French balls were considered the best in Europe. In Louis XI.'s time the manufacturers complained that there were dishonest people who made spurious imitations of balls, containing lime, sand and other materials, which made them heavy and injurious; and the king issued an ordinance to the effect that they should be made of good leather and good stuffing, on penalty of a fine and the burning of all bad balls-the proper stuffing being the hair of animals, usually of dogs. This explains the joke in "Much Ado About Noth-ing," on the beard of Benedick: "The barber's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis balls.

The Rise of the Spicy Carnation in Popular Favor

The carnation pink has been called the flower of destiny. Within the last few years it has risen from comparative obscurity to a position among the most highly cultivated blossoms of the conservatory. "There has been a decided boom in carnations in the last year," said a Broadway florist. "Men ordering flowers for their ushers and best men at weddings choose the carnation frequently, and we have made up many bouquets for brides and maids of honor of the white variety. The flower has, of course, increased in beauty. The carnation you buy today is a different affair from that of five years ago. It has a great deal of character in its style. It does not droop or even bend. It has an erect poise on its stalk, the separate petals of the flower sustain themselves crisply from the center.

"At this time of the year flowers begin to get very scarce in market. It is all that we can do to supply decorative flowers for dinners at the fash-ionable summer resorts. Private conservatories must be robbed to help out the florists at all Newport functions. We are using the daisy quite freely now for decoration. For children's parties it is in favor. We have decorated churches entirely with daisies for some of the out-of-town weddings in country places. Then there have been functions at which wild flowers were used exclusively. The carnation, if it becomes fashionable, will always more of a man's flower than a woman's favori e. While it makes an admirable bouquet for carrying, it is not a graceful corsage flower, although it seems made for a man's coat."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

A DUET.

I sang a song of things that are,
A little song of truths that be,
And tiptoe on a rosy star.
Love poised and mocked at me.

"Oh, bright," sang I, "are woman's eyes, Clear as the sun to seek and see, With knowledge keen, with wisdom "Until she loves," said Love to me.

"Oh, sharp," sang I, "is woman's wit, As any blade of chivalry, Unfailing, sure, her grasp of it!" "Until she loves," said Love to me.

"Oh, fine," sang I, "is woman's ear,
To know sweet truth from faisity,
When to be deaf and when to hear!"
"Until she loves," said Love to me.

"Oh, true," I sang, "is woman's heart—
From wrong, from guile, from falsehood free,
"An unflawed jewel, stored apart!"
"Until she loves," said Love to me.

I sang a song of things that are, A little song of truths that be,
And tiptoe on a rosy star
Love poised and mocked at me.

—John Winwood.

The other night I was a silent and interested listener to the conversation of two men who were ripe in years and experiences. They were both many years' standing, and the other's work had let him see enough of the seamy side of life to write a novel. The business man was telling of some of the funny experiences he had in business life.

"Not long ago," he said, "I went to a small town to wind up the affairs of a man there who had simply been living on our firm (a large Toronto wholesale) for two years. We hadn't stopped him before because the traveler whose customer he was had fewer bad debts to his credit than any other traveler in the house, and we thought the thing would turn out all right; but it was getting too much for us, so finally I went down to straighten things out a bit. I found it was absolutely Impossible to do anything with the business. It was all gone to pieces, so I just had to close up the store and tell the man it would be better for him to take a position.

"He was an awfully nice fellow, and took me up to the house to see his wife, who a perfect little lady. I Taid to her ... the course of our conversation, 'You must find it very dull here in this small place.'

"'Well, yes,' she said, 'but in winter we just take the train and go up to the city whenever there is anything specially good at the theater. My husband and I are both so fond of mu-

"Well, I had to turn away to hide a smile. There were the two of them living at the expense of our firm, and yet she coolly talked of running up to the city for an opera as if it cost 5 cents instead of $5 for the whole trip. It's funny how even the nicest women have absolutely no idea of honor in things like that. I have come across young, and a child to teach him when so many women in my experience who he is old.' Then the priest said, 'What about the church and the love of God?'

"I think you're right," said the other. "In any business transaction I've ever had with a woman, I've usually wished she could be changed into a man for a short time, so that I could tell her what I thought of the mercenary spirit she displayed."

"Yes, I know I'm right," said the business man, and then they talked of something else. It was a pretty hard character to give the woman in business, and a funny little verse came with an odd, whimsical force, into my mind. It referred to women, and ran

"Oh, the gladness of their gladness when they're glad, And the sadness of their sadness when

But the gladness of their gladness and the sadness of their sadness Are as nothing to their badness when they're bad.'

Talking about "beating down," one of the funniest instances of that I ever heard of occurred at the "Pan" last summer. There were four of them there together, a girl of 15, one of 21—these two were sisters-their American aunt from Detroit and another lady.

It was the last day of their stay, and "we were so dead broke." said one of the girls, "that it came to such a point with me that if I had breakfast I couldn't have dinner. We were going through one of the buildings, and just in the entrance was a man selling those long strings of coral beads. Well, auntie so dark, you know, that these beads took her eye immediately, and she stopped in front of him, 'Oh, wouldn't I love a string of those,' she said. 'How much are they?" 'Two dollars and a half,' said the man. Her face fell. She knew she could never pay that, and she said, disappointedly, 'Well, I can't afford them.' The man said, 'I'll give them to you for two dollars.' She shook head and went to move on. 'A dollar seventy-five,' he said, hopefully. 'No,' she said. 'A dollar and a half, then'-I was getting positively ashamed, and when he said a dollar and a quarter we were all crimson, and we began going over all the things we had to pay for be-fore we left falo. 'There's our din-ner,' said I. Our board bill,' said auntie. 'Oh, and my shoes,' said a small voice. 'Oh, yes, and Mary's shoes. Auntie; we can't get it.'

"The man who was a shrewd Yankee with little twinkling eyes, that had been taking us all in, struck in here, and said in the most fearful tones, 'Well, save a quarter for Mary's shoes and take it for a dollar.' We took it. On our way home that night, as we were laughing over it all, I said, 'Well, what's a dollar, anyway? and Mary's little voice struck in, 'Well, it would little voice struck in have meant a good deal to any one of Everyone had it today.' laughed, and the coral beads that cost a dollar have been a standing joke the family ever since."

In Gilbert Parker's book, "The Translation of a Savage," which is, by the way, a most interesting and unusual the following little conversation

"Who can understand a woman? said Lambert to his wife meaningly.

"Whoever will," she answered. "How do you mean?" "Whoever will wait like the saint upon the pillar, will suffer like the slave and demand like a king; have patience greater than Job; love ceaseless as a fountain in the hills; who sees in the darkness and is not afraid of light; who districts not neither be of light; who distrusts not, neither believes, but stands ready to be taught; who is prepared for a kiss this hour and a reproach the next; who turn-eth neither to right nor left at her words, but hath an unswerving eyethese shall understand a woman There are many more remarks on women throughout the book, a few of in the same school. "When once a man has mastered the very alphabet of motherhood, then he shall have mastered the mind of woman.

"There is nothing more wearing to a woman than affectionate attentions from a man who has claims upon her, but whom she does not love. These same attentions from one who has no claims give her a thrill of pleasure. "Romance is an incident to a man;

he can even come through an affair and experiences. They were both with no ideals gone, with his mental over 50. One was a business man of aneness unimpaired; but it is different with a woman. She has more emotion than mind, and her standards are set by the rules of the heart, and when she has broken these rules she has lost her standard, too.
"Every woman—worth the knowing—is a missionary. "It is trite to say that men are vain," says Mrs. Lambert. "I shall remark that they sit so much in their own light that they are surprised if another being crosses their disc."

The literary women of London have been having their annual women writers' dinner at the Criterion, at which two hundred were present, including some of the best-known women of the day. Mrs. W. K. Clifford presided, and made a mutually congratulatory speech on the subject, "Ourselves."

According to the British Weekly's account of the dinner, more eminent than any other writer in the room was Mrs. Humphrey Ward. It is only of recent years that Mrs. Ward has abandoned her original objection to a dinner at which women meet alone. Few literary women understand more thoroughly the art of dressing. In any company she would be recognized as a remarkable woman."

According to the same authority, Mrs. Ward wore a black gown trimmed with rare old lace and pale blue vel-

The National Anthem was sung, but there were no speeches, except that of Mrs. Clifford, which included some interesting remarks about the happiness of women writers. Referring to them Mrs. Clifford said: "The happiest women of all are those who had the sheltered lives, and yet have capacity to reach beyond it. The wisest man I ever knew was a little French-Canadian trapper up in the Saskatchewan country. A priest asked him one day what was the best thing in life, and he answered, 'For a young man's mind to be old, and an old man's heart to be young.' The priest asked him how that could be. And he said, 'Good food, a good woman to teach him when he is then said, 'Well, it is the same-the love of man and woman came first in the world, then the child, then God in the garden. Richard Le Gallienne has begun an interesting series of "Old Love Stories Retold" in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The first of the series is the love story of Sir Philip Sidney and Lady Penelope Devereux. It has a quaint, old world atmosphere full of charm. Sidney is usually remembered by the famous anecdote of the cup of cold water, and the cr as the type of all that was gallant and set in. gentle in the Elizabethan gentleman. He met Lady Penelope when she was but 12 years old, but she was even then so strikingly beautiful that Sidney was strongly attracted by her and became a constant visitor at her father's house. Her father became so fond of him that on his death-bed he expressed the wish that Sidney should marry Lady Penelope. It was soon common talk at court that the earl's wish was to be fulfilled, when everyone was startled by the marriage of Lady Penelope's mother to the Earl of Leicester, Sidney's uncle, and whose heir he had been. But the subsequent birth of his cousin, Philip, deposed him, and he was so poor that he was, in the mother's eyes, not a suitable match for Lady Penelope, so she was married, very much against her will, to Lord Rich, a man of a very different type, with whom she had a very unhappy life. Nevertheless, although she loved Sidney, she refused to leave her husband for him, and in 1583 Sidney married, for various worldly reasons, the daughter of Sir Francis Walsingham, but three years afterwards he died. For nine years after his death, in spite of her husband's brubrutality, Penelope remained a faithwife, but then, apparently le to stand her life, she ful fled with the Earl of Devonshire, and, procuring a divorce from her former shared with the earl his honors and his ultimate disgrace.

As it was made from washing materials it could be easily laundered when necessary.

A second cover was 'made from the same materials, and of the same dimensions. It had a spray of forgetme-note worked in shades of blue, with a tiny speck of yellow and red in the center of each flower, the leaves being in the gray greens suitable for this purpose. This dainty cover held a book entitled "Fair Flowers," and the sentiment thus portrayed added much to its charm.

When a cover is made from very fine material it is better to give it an inner lining of muslin before putting it on the book. Another pretty decoration for

To hear the fashionable woman ordering her summer hats, one would think she was giving her order to the green-grocer rather than the milliner. The lemon hat is the vogue, and hats of strawberries are among the very latest millinery creations.

Fruit hats are taking the place of flower hats, and bananas, grapes, apples and cherries all have a new significance to the woman of fashion.

It is said that Whittier was once sitting on a veranda with a number of ladies at a summer resort, when a girl who had just returned from Paris floated past in a gauzy cloud of rose and faint blue. The ladies exhausted all their adjectives, and then one of them appealed to Whittier for his opinion, laughingly saying that she supposed he disdained to have one on such a mat-ter. "No," said the poet, looking benevolently after the radiant young beauty, and with a poetical reference to the flower-like face, he added: "Truly, I think that young lady's petals are exquisitely fringed and tinted.'

The supple moires of today, however, show much smaller weaves, the watered surfaces are very richly flowered or otherwise figured, and when the foundation is simply moired it is usually veiled with lace, chiffon or tulle-softening the effect of the glinting background, the moire in turn imparting a particularly beautiful appearance to the airy textile which covers it.

Trained net skirts over foundations of taffeta or satin, white or black, with flounces of Chantilly, Venise or other handsome lace, are among the handsomest gowns of the season. If one is possessed of one, two or three lace flounces, the rest of a new summer costume can easily be made by the purchase of about eight yards of double width net. The net skirt should be tucked all around or with spaces left for insertions of lace, and the flounces should, if possible, cover one-third of the length of the skirt on the sides and about half its length at the back. Black Chantilly flounces with black figured net over white satin, with bodice accessories of white chiffon and black lace elbow frills, form one of the handsomest of the and white gowns fashionable this seasop

Mohair and alpaca-which is very much the same thing-are greatly 'avored for practical bathing-suits this year. Like other somewhat wiry woolens, these fabrics do not absorb or retain the water as much as some others, and consequently do not cling heavily to the figure when wet-which is a great advantage. A very satisfactory suit for a young girl is made of blue mohair with tucked skirt reaching just below the knees. The easy blouse has a large sailor collar, vest-piece, cuffs and knotted sash of braid-trimmed white Lansdowne. This is a pretty costume that has been copied in different colors. White mohair looks well with brown or old rose trimmings.
There appear to be more gray, blue and white suits this year than those of darker shades. New costumes for older wearers, that should be called beach rather than surf gowns, are formed of white, fawn color, silvergray, or black silk, with some sort of appropriate ornate decoration of guipure lace and "wash" ribbon strappings. Bathing-shoes are entirely out of date, and bathing stockings with a slender sole inside are almost universally worn. A heavy ribbed or wool stocking of the best quality keeps its shape and prevents the foot from spreading. Those not very elastic and a trifle snug are said to be the most satisfactory. A tam o' shanter made over rubber is a popular head covering, but it is more fashionable still to dress the hair very high on the head and wear nothing at all on it. The most satisfactory and sensible arrangement is to purchase one of the very wide-brimmed hats of good quality that are now sold for a song, merely band it, line the crown with oiled silk and add a strong elastic or ribbon strings to keep it firmly on the These are cool and light and a great shield to the complexion.

Learning by Rhymes.

The trouble is, people won't believe that what is written in rhyme can really be learning. Of course, you have to learn poems and verses to recite on Friday, but then you don't learn them because they teach you anything-you learn them because you have to. But there really are some rhymes that teach you things. Here, for example, is a grammar in hyme, and a very complete grammar, too, so far as it goes. Learn it thoroughly, and you'll find yourself pretty well up

Three little words you often see, Are articles "a," "an" and "the."

And I'm going to starve and not And I'm going to starve and not Every eat anything again at all, And when I'm up with God and got Wings and can look at my pa, and he Comes home and sees my coat in the half And looks all around everywhere, And I ain't there, I bet he'll be sorry he punished me!

And when I'm far away.
And nearly starved and can hardly stand,
There might be a big; bad man come along and say
He'd take me off to some strange land!
And then, when the people told my pa
How cruel he was, bet he'd be
The saddest person you ever saw,
And sorry he punished me!

And when they had no little boy no more, Mamma would cry all day, And when no little boy would open the door

Three things there be in the world, Yvonne;
And what do you guess they mean?
The stable land, the heaving sea,
And the tide that hangs between.

II.

I saw you in the gloaming love,
When all the fleets were homing, love,
And under the large level moon the long gray seas were combing, love.

I saw you tall and splendid, love, And all my griefs were ended love, When on me as I put to land your sea-ward eyes were bended, love.

The little boats were stranded, love, And all their rich bales landed, love But all my wealth awaited me, lowe-voiced and gentle-handed, love.

My love said, "What is the seat"
I said, "The unmeasured sea
Is my heart, sweetheart,
That is stormy and "I" That is stormy or still, With its great wild will, Glorying, stainless and free Or sad with a sorrow be speech to impart, But forever calling to thee, Heart of my heart."

My love said, "What is the tide?"
I said, "The unshackled tide
Is my love, sweetheart,
The draft and sweep
Of the restless deep, Made clean as the stars and wide,
That forever must yearn to the land
above and apart.
Till the day when she sinks to his side
Heart of my heart."

My love said, "What is the land?" said, "The summer land Is they face, sweetheart, Dreaming and warm and glad, In a benediction clad,
With sunshine sweetened and tanned;
And there is the set of the tide, the end
and the start, grounds. As they were walking they came to a long mud puddle which covered the sidewark. Tony's mother called him to turn out with her into the road.

"No," said Tony, I want to go along on the fence.' "You had better not," said his moth-But Tony thought he knew best, so he stepped on the lowest rail and walked sideways, holding on with both hands. "I told you I could. Don't you see ?" Mamma did see. There was a splash and she saw a small boy's feet go into the water. The rail had broken down

"Can't I go to the picnic?" whimpered Tony, putting his hands to his eyes. "Perhaps so," said his mother. "You must run home and put on clean stockings and your old shoes. stockings are on the clothes-bars in Tony ran with all his might. Bridget was gone out, but there was a long row of little stockings on the bars. Quick as a flash Tony pulled off his muddy the matter? "I can't go, anyway, said Tony, with a big sob. "I can't find any stockings that's mates-not one! See! Polly looked at the striped leg and the blue leg, and laughed. "You can see for yourself," he said, pointing to the row. "There's a red one and a brown one and a black one, "Yes I see-two striped ones and two blue ones, and two red ones, and -here-" Polly snatched a blue one from the bars and whisked the striped one off Tony's leg. "There, now," she said, as in a moment both legs were blue. "Polly," said Tony, looking solemnly at her, "I think you're the smartest girl in the world. Don't you?" "Why, no," said Polly, "You're the only one who ever thought so, and perhaps you don't know much about smartness. Come quick, now."

THE ORIGIN OF SLANG

Some Old and New Sayings That Have Worked Them selves Into Our Daily Speech.

A study of slang and of expressions in daily use seidom fails to develop something entertaining. Judgments liffer, and sometimes opinions as to what constitutes slang may be warped of herpen or occur, since instead of spectators dience in definition; transpire instead of herpen or occur, since instead of the pren or occur. in daily use seidom fails to develop something entertaining. Judgments differ, and sometimes opinions as to of happen or occur; since instead of ago, as "a year since," anxious when the milder word desirous would better express the thought; these are only what constitutes slang may be warped because of the local conditions or usages which govern our estimation

The other day in Manhattan, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times, I heard one small boy call to another, who was apparently with a strange

"Where did you find that barbar-

Barbarian sounded like a big slang word, but the boy had used it in its true sense of alien, foreign, strange, unknown. That is the meaning that it had with the ancient Greeks, who considered all foreigners as their uncivilized and uncouth inferiors, and consequently there was a note of superciliousness in their employment of the word "barbarian." But we have no warrant for supposing it to mean savage and cruel.

The expression "right smart," so frequently in the speech of southerners, is not such bad English as we of the north suppose. "Right" as an inten-sive is as old as our spoken language. We say right away and right handy, while the Bible contains the words "right early," and neither of the three is offensive to our ears.

Away down east in the Pine Three State one may occasionally hear a person or thing which has become a failure described as a "gone goose." That is from the Irish language, in which "gan," pronounced gawn, means without, and "gus," pronounced goos, means worth or value. The words are short, sonorous, and easily remembered, therefore some observant Yankee adopted them into the Yankee vocabu-lary. But in English the abstract noun seemed like a concrete one, and the indefinite article was accordingly pre-fixed in all its uselessness.

"Forty-rod" is slang that was introduced into Maine by returned Californians. It refers to whisky so vile that it will kill at forty rods' distance—the most common kind in a prohibition

FEET THAT ARE WELL SHOD

Command More Attention Than a Pretty Face.

There's a Fascination About Dainty Ferinine Shoes and Hose.

"Why is it that women's feet are of such importance?" asked an artist who makes a specialty of girl studies. "I have discovered a secret in the making of salable pictures-that is to obtrude rather than to hide the feet. That is not art exactly, but it is a fact."

"I discovered this quite by accident, In drawing girl pictures I had always studied the face, the poise of the head, the neck, shoulders and upper part of the body. Skirts must conform to modern style in a modern picture, so the best I could do is to make them sketchy with lines suggesting the prevailing cut. The hands and feet I had always added as a detail.

"I had a number of these studies, excellent ones, too, which seemed to meet little success with art editors. They didn't give any reason, just held the picture off and squinted at it, and it didn't seem to strike them at all. person as "Toundered;" and correspondingly amused when a retired sea captain directed me along a country road and around a corner by telling me to "sail down the channel, tack to port at the buoy, and steer no'th." "So one day I studied some of the pictures that Dauber can't make enough of to satisfy the demand. Then it dawned on me. He made the feet so stunning that they held the atten-

I shortened the skirts or else changed the attitude so as to give the feet a chance. is the news, which in these days of hurry, is twice in twenty-four hours furnished us from all the corners of the earth. "Trek," from South Africa, and "hike," from the Philippines, are two recent examples of this. I introduced breezes that furled the petticoats about the ankles and I drew feet that were twice as saucy and devilish-looking as Dauber's. "I gave them all sorts of fancy stockings and put big buckles and bows on their shoes—not flat bows but perky-looking affairs and gauze ros-ettes. I began to haunt the shoe stores to find new things in shoes. "In five days I had disposed of the lot and had orders for more. The art editors sat up, opened their eyes and positively smiled or else winked knowingly.

"'That's the sort of thing, Splat-The reason why a countryman should speak of the sun as the "old haymaker" needs no explanation to anybody who has ever visited a hayter,' they would say. 'Give us some more of those racy-looking girls. They have lots of go and style to them.' of a hit with them until the feet were accentuated. It is funny, isn't it? view, a man's foot is more beautiful than a woman's because it is alpinched in. But men's feet are relatively of no importance. It is true that men are wearing more elaborate hosiery than formerly, but somehow their feet never gain any dignity. They never advance beyond the condition of silk or lace will often be healy to walk with.

"Finally I found a model who was able to enlighten me, although she could give no reasons. But she worked in off hours in a great dressmaking establishment and she had ample opportunities to study the question at Hear the wisdom of the woman model.

"'Women's feet are more important than they ever were before,' she said, they are one of the most attractive and powerful charms that a woman can boast when well dressed. 'There are a few large feet among women, but there are no ugly feet nowadays, for when properly booted any foot acquires the proper lines. But there are no dowdy feet on New York women.

"The common-sense style of shoe, as it was called, has vanished into obscurity. Despite all that is written against the high heel it gives a certain poise to a woman and saves her from being flatfooted. The old style of French heel is no longer worn on the street, but in its place has come what is termed the high Cuban heel. This gives the height of the French heel, but assures a more secure support. "One factor that has had a lot to do with increasing the importance of women's feet and the dressing of them is the long-trained skirt. The necessity for holding this out of the dust when walking makes the foot more conspicuous. So this year women's shoes are ornamented with buckles in silver and gold and brass and gun They have huge bows of satin and taffeta ribbon, which in most cases are put on fresh with each They are elaborately cowearing. quettish in their shape, high, arched over the instep, high-curved under the

"When combined with the hosiery in silk and lisle that is worn now, these shoes make a combination smart foot dressing which while too accentuated to be considered strictly good taste, is undoubtedly attractive to the male sex.

"'An ugly woman with pretty, well-dressed feet will always attract more attention than a beautiful woman who may be badly shod. Even a poorly gowned woman with well-booted feet will win admiring glances on all sides from masculine eyes.

'Any woman interested in the problem can readily learn how important her feet are in gaining admiration, if she ventures out days in succession, dressed in exactly the same costume but with differently "'The first day let her wear a pair of "quiet boots" as all high shoes are called now. The boots may be slightly worn but in keeping with the dress of a properly dressed woman who deabove all things to avoid any special attention while on the street Let her gown and hat be decorously smart, her grooming perfect, her manner dignified. She will have her wish and will go her way with the consciousness that she in no way suggests comic opera.

Varicocele, wasting drains, have exhausted Nature's Electrical forces and left them wrecks drains, have exhausted Nature's Electrical forces and left them wrecks upon the shores of life. Many have sought in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical suffering. They are soothed for a day, or maybe a week, falsely braced up, until, the effects of the drug wearing off like the momentary bracing of whiskey, they sink still lower in vitality, and, with hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and their fellow-man and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling that there is no help for them. Man, do not sacrifice yourself in this way. Do not endure this living death while Nature holds out to you relief in the form of Electricity—that vital element of which, by a life of dissipation, you have deprived yourself—tearing down faster than nature could rebuild. In this great restorative—Electricity—there is life and happiness for you. It restores restorative—Electricity—there is life and happiness for you. It restores power to the weak and indifferent; it builds up the weakened system, and by its vitalizing, stimulating cure it makes the blood jump through sluggish veins, increasing the circulation to every part, assisting Nature to carry off the impure matter which clogs up the wheels of life. But really it does not require the experience of a tailor to establish the fact that bowlegs are more numerous now than ever before. Of course, the tailor, because of the measurements he is required to make, may notice things of this sort more readily than the men who are engaged in other walks of life. have to measure a man's legs when an order for a suit of clothes is left, and we naturally notice the size and shape of the legs. Some time ago my attention was directed to the matter by a man whose legs were just a little above the average when it comes to crookedness of this kind. I made up my mind that I would conduct a little study along this line. The results have surprised me. I have found that but very few men have straight legs—that is, legs that are normally straight. The surprising fact about the matter is that in a majority of instances a billiard ball may be dropped between the calves of the legs.

"Knock knees are not uncommon, but this affliction, if it may be called such, is, I imagine, very largely a matter of inheritance. Bowlegs, in some instances, may be accounted for in the same way, but in a majority of instances they owe their existence to other causes. No doubt the habit of pushing boys of tender years out into the industrial field has much to do with it. Boys are forced out now before the joints of the limbs are hard. fore the joints of the limbs are hardened, and they are required to carry heavy loads and to do other things shells are then cut by an expert which are calculated to produce the rewhich are calculated to produce the result I have been discussing.

"There is no doubt in my mind about this practice being an important factor in the development of bowlegs. Of course, there are more bowlegs it is because your attention has not take the trouble to look. PIRATE WAS SKIPPER OF PILGRIM'S SHIP

Thomas Jones, a Rough Sea Dog, Commanded the Mayflower.

One hundred and two passengers sailed from Plymouth on the Mayflower, says St. Nicholas. They had been so constantly stirred up, in so many ways, since leaving Leyden or London, that they were glad to settle themselves at last for their long voyage. After the two ships' companies were united Carver became governor (in place of Mr. Martin, the treasurer, who made many enemies), and though the vessel sea, all were soon used to the ship-life.

But who were the passengers: the 76 who came from Leyden, 6 went back, leaving 70, and there were but 32 left of those who joined at Southamp ton. Of these 32, 9 were men, 4 young men, 5 women (wives), 8 were boys and cluding the hired seamen and servants of full age), 19 women, 29 young men, boys and male (minor) servants, and 10 girls of all ages. The master of the Pilgrim ship was Thomas Jones, "a rough sea-dog," who had been a pirate, but was a good navigator and had sailed one or more voyages to "Virginia" (as all North America was then called). The first mate (or "pilot") was John Clark, quiet man and good officer, who had also been to "Virginia;" the second also been to "Virginia:" mate (or "pilot") being Robert Copincrease the ense pull on the stock-ing about the ankle and lower limb. had made one voyage to the New Besides these there straight fronted corset, covered in crinkled satin matching it in color. cargo, Mr. Williamson, a fine man, who cargo, Mr. Williamson, a fine man, who clasps that had doubtless also been in some parts of "Virginia," two on each side, holding it taut. We know now that Jones had been hired and ordered by his employers, Thomas Weston and Sir Ferdinando Gorges, and by the Earl of Warwick, whose evil work he had long done, t land his passengers somewhere of the 41st parallel of north latitude. They would then be within the territory of the council of affairs for New England, controlled by the wily ges, who had long wanted these Pilgrim colonists, and plotted and maneuvered to get them upon his domain. This was Master Jones' chance, and he was quick to seize it, and so steal the Pilgrim colony for his masters to form the London Virginia Company, were the colonists' friends and patrons.

practiced among the Sioux; the war dance died with the accession peace; the sun dance has long been frowned upon by the Great Father, and the ghost dance has been peremptorily forbidden ever since the trouble springing from it in that unhappy fight at Wounded Knee in the early winter of 1891. But the Omaha, danced frequently upon the reservation, has not been actually forbidden, although the Indian agents in general disapprove of it, and so far as is possible discountenance its perpetuation. It is primarily a social function, with this unqualified disadvantag, e that it tends toward the continuance of that state of society known to the Indians dur- hard, which will be in a few days ing their days of barbarity; that it has nothing in common with the civilization towards which we are trying to lead the red man. Every time the Omaha is danced the dancers are drawn more closely to the old lives and the old ways; a reverence for the customs of their ancestors is enkindled within them, and whatever refining influences of civilization may have hitherto impressed them are, for the time, utterly forgotten, and eventually much weakened. It is the great social reflection of barbarism and its influence cannot be for good.

The Anglican Mission there gives particulars of one which measured over 11 feet long, and was composed of as many as 1,800 bodies of ants. Three litthe pieces of shell and a dozen English beads were incorporated into it, and there was a native string holding it together, yet its weight only reached 2 drams, 2 scruples, 13 grains. large black ants make big nests in the native gardens, and the native women and girls catch them, pull off their heads, bite off and swallow the other end, and thread the "thorax."

The eyes were very restless, but they were fine eyes for all that; gray with flecks of brown in them. Although he was serv- this. ing his 35th year in the army he wore no stripes upon the cuff of his dress coat. He was a heavy man and the best fighter in the garrison, having at different times nearly murdered the men who had stood up to him. A heavy drinker, he was always, but no one had ever heard him speak evil of a woman. The fact is that he never even looked toward them except from a distance, and so far as anyone knew he never wasted a thought upon the best or the worst of them. This was counted strange in a soldier. No one knew much about Private Mc-Quhirr except that he was partly educated and had come from somewhere in Scotland many years before and enlisted in the American army a few days after he had landed in New Yark. I asked Harry Winslow, who was the second lieutenant of H Company, of which McQuhirr was a member, what he knew about the man.

'Nothing at all," said Winslow, "except that he won't stand being hit over the head with a bucket by his first sergeant, who is a Swede. The last time it happened McQuhirr nearly killed him, and I sent McQuhirr to the guardhouse for striking his superior officer. But I called the sergeant down beautiful all the same and told him that if it ever happened answered "here" at the last roll-call. again I'd have the stripes off him. Can't say that I blame McQuhirr for mauling him once in a while. Quhirr is an old man and not such a bad kind either, but he drinks like a

That is absolutely all that the offi-cers in the garrison knew of McQuhirr. The men knew very little more.

But in the long cold winter months room all to himself. He would sit on the side of his bunk and fill his pipe puffs like an engine starting a heavy train on slippery rails. But when he got it well lighted he would puff away very gently, only little pale blue whiffs showing now and then. Without anyone knowing it Private McQuhirr went back over a great many miles of frozen prairie and tossing seas to the braes of his ain bonny Scotland. The old fellow had a memory. If you could have seen the sweet girl face that looked out from a leather case that he sometimes opened here alone you would also know that he had a touch of romanticism in his make-up. It is hard to say just what things came before the eyes of this battered old soldier. Perhaps he wandered among the whitewashed cottages of at the top, of course, will be the upper some highland village, or looked out upon the Frith from some crag along the rocky shore. Or he may have been picking his way through purple woods with gray mist reaching out to meet the shadows on all sides. Sometimes McQuhirr relapsed into the Scotch dialect when excited, perhaps he talked in it now, gently to himself. All anyone looking out from the barrack window could see was a long stretch of snow-covered prairie and the brown woods that bordered it a mile away in front, and the yellow sides and red roofs of the officers' houses to the west. But here McQuhirr used to sit and watch the smoke being whirled from the long row of officers' chimneys like white plumes floating on the wind. About 5 o'clock would come the sunset turning the sky and prairie into flame. Then the bugles sounded "retreat" and a detail of the guard fired the sundown salute and lowered the flag. Out on the long plazas the companies lined up and stood at "attention" until the reached the ground. Then the men again went in to their cards or papers, and Private McQuhirr to his lonely seat on the edge of his bunk beside the window. McQuhirr would again fill his pipe and this time, knowing that the men never came upstairs at this hour, he would set the picture of the girl up before him on the window She was a pretty girl, and although McQuhirr had probably never seen her enter a ballroom in a gown of yellow satin with overdress of white Paris muslin, he no doubt considered her the most beautiful girl in the world. Here he would sit and smoke in silence, while outside the sun turned things red and gold. Then someone would come to the steps and

"Dinner: fall in for dinner." McQuhirr would then go down to the big dining room and eat his dinner. But you could have found him again one hour later at the upstairs dow with his pipe.

One day he was arrested for some slight offence and put in the guardhouse. The next day he was sent out to work in the hay fields with a squad of prisoners who were serving long terms, and who were, perhaps, some of the most desperate men who ever saw the inside of a military prison. There was only one guard with this square feet, of which 100,000 will go to cutters worked gradually ever toward sub-concessionaries.

McQuhirr stood perfectly anything rash, and besides he had no wish to escape. The two men had entirely disappeared when the guard jumped to his feet and fired his rifle. Three times he fired, and when the smoke cleared away there was nothing in front of the officers' club when I before his eyes but a high field of

"Oh," said the surgeon, a little impatiently, "is that your reason?" Then he added quite impassively, "I think we'll just let him remain where he is.' Winslow was young and impulsive; the surgeon had seen 30 years of service.

A few minutes later McQuhirr opened his eyes and tried to speak. "What is it, McQuhirr?" Winslow, bending over him.

"Could you raise my head a bit, sir?" he said. The officer raised his head, and Mc-Quhirr ran his hand into his breast pocket and took out the picture in the leather case.

"The face was completely demolished by the bullet," said Winslow, when telling me of it, "but I don't think he knew it, because he didn't know me when I spoke to him again." However McQuhirr clasped it in his hand and leaned back and said softly, "Oh, but she was a bonny lassie." He turned his face wearily to the bared window and looked dreamily out out upon the sunset prairie. "My ain sweet lassie," he said.

And while the bugles outside were sounding "first call" for parade, and the young officer was pulling on his white Berlin gloves, Private McQuhirr

The proposal is nothing more than the construction out of steel of an immense "peg top," the same old shape familiar to every youngster in the land, even to the plug on top, which every young American thinks he must cut off before he has a satisfactory article of top furniture. This immense top is to be some four hundred or more feet high. The center is to be an immense hollow steel shaft, thoroughly anchored, within which some twelve elevators are to be run to carry passengers up end of the huge core referred to, and in the extreme of this plug will be an open observatory, stationary, and commanding a view of the entire fair grounds and more. Just below the plug will come the curved upper section, which like a huge umbrella will serve as a roof, protecting the lower portions. Below this "umbrella" will be built the remainder of the in decreasing diameter top and cut in lateral sections into floors, upon which will circular be rented concession space for various attractions, such as candy booths, restaurant, summer garden and beer accompaniment, etc. The main floor it is proposed to reserve for a concession to an immense theatrical presentation, something on the order of "1492," presented at Columbia Exposition with a wealth of scenic inves-titure which made it one of the most profitable of the individual attractions of the fair. Probably the most novel feature of and the whole scheme is the fact that it is flag proposed to build each floor independent of the one above or below, and to arrange for the revolving of each floor about the huge axis in which the elevators are to run, running these floors independently, it is planned to cause each to revolve in opposite direction to that next to it, providing a change of scene for those on all of the floors, and bringing the various parts of the whole exposition to view in the course of the revolution. The entire top will be built of steel on the cantilever plan and will be open to the air on all sides, but it will also be arranged to inclose it during inclement weather with Venetian blinds, so that those who may wish to patronize the exposition on its bad days shall not be deprived of this feature, which it is believed will prove to be a greater attraction than the Ferris Wheel in Chicago. It is understood that the in-terests behind the enterprise are such as to put it in the same class as the Ferris Wheel, so far as support goes.

Among the minor features of the construction will be the painting of each lateral section with a contrasting color and the illumination of each o these sections with different colored lights by night, presenting something in addition to the immensity of the scheme to attract the eye. On the observatory it is also proposed to place features which will add to the novelty of the attraction by night as well as

A New Industry Which Is Doing Wonders in the Jewelry Trade.

"A new industry has grown up in this country in the last few years," a downtown jeweler told a New York reporter. "It is the treatment and setting of crystals and minerals partly as imitations of real precious stones and partly as art objects and ornaments which do not pretend to be any other than they aresimply pretty things. The extent of this industry and the success of its products can hardly be realized by anyone outside the jewelry trade.

side the jewelry trade.

"Chemistry plays an important part in the industry. It is remarkable what beautiful effects can be secured with a bit of quartz by a chemist who has studied this phase of mineralogy.

"There is, for instance the so-called golden opal, which is not an opal at all. It is made by boiling chalcedony, which is merely a species of quartz, in honey, then in a solution of chromate of lead, and finally baking it in hydrochloric acid kept at a moderate heat for a few weeks.

"In the same way deep red carnelians re produced by skilfully burning the ale or dull chalcedonies. Black agate, popular for mourning jewelry is made

Australian Sheep Farms. The sheep farms of Australia are so great that the world has never seen anything like them before. There was big flocks in the days of the archs, when Abraham and Lot had to separate to get new grazing grounds. It is written that King Solomon sacrificed 120,000 sheep when he dedicated the temple, and we know that Mesha, King of Naob, gave Jehoram, King of Israel 100,000 lambs as tribute. The pastoral magnates of those days must intended. At Dwight, Ill., since somehave had large farms, but there are what noted as the abiding place of a farms in Australia as big as all Palestine. There are sheep stations one hundred miles long. These big sta-tions are actual farms. The land is divided up into great fields or paddocks, fenced with smooth wire, except along the road, where barbed wire is used. The average paddock contains 800 acres, but there are many which are larger. Some contain several thousand acres, and single paddocks have from 2,000 to 20,000 sheep. Out of the millions of sheep owned in New South Wales the greater number are kept in fenced paddocks. There are thousands of miles of wire netting put up as fences to keep out rabbits, the station buildings and wages book representing an enormous sum. The rates of wages show an upward tendency, and the rations are on a liberal scale, necessitating food supplies in considerable quanti-

One often wonders whether he has abandoned the habit of reading everything except the current periodicals and popular novels. If the worthies just mentioned and others of their day have been laid on the shelf, so far as educational purposes are concerned, who are their successors? The modern school education is unquestionably a great advancement over that of even twenty years ago, yet is it not possible that in some ways its attitude is a trifle too iconoclastic? Conservatism and clinging to traditions are in their way excellent habits for a commercial people, and we should be sorry to see the boy of to-day grow up entirely ignorant of all those things which make fragrant the memories of our own school days.

PAVEMENTS OF HUMAN SKULLS.

Tombstones and Coffin Lids Used As Footways.

Gruesome, Costly or Odd Material Which Have Been Used for Paving Purposes.

Streets paved with glass are not by any means unknown. The famous Rue de la Republique at Lyons is a notable example. Here the pavement is laid in glass blocks, 8 inches square, which are so symmetrically fitted together as to prevent the possibility of water passing between the interstices. Compressed grass has been used in the construction of a Philadelphia street with, it is said, admirable results; and not long since a scheme for employing compressed paper for a like purpose was mooted in Russia.

An Italian nobleman has lately had the courtyard of his palace paved with slabs of marble, granite and other stone, every one of which has been brought from a different land, Europe, Asia, Africa, America and Australia, have all supplied materials for this curious mosaic, which is composed of over 500 pieces, each engraved with the name of the country or state from which it came.

On the occasion of his accession to the throne of Bavaria, Maximilian Emanuel had one of the roads leading to his palace paved with plates of burnished copper, which, gleaming in the sunshine, had all the effect of the more precious metal, gold. Down this road it was his intention to proceed in royal pomp, but his purpose was unfortunately frustrated by a gang of rob-bers, who one night overpowered the guards and carried off much of the valuable paving.

Louis XIV. had one of the courts of his palace at Versailles paved with squares of silver, each of which recorded some triumph to the French These surrounded a large tablet of gold, in the center of which the sun—the monarch's favorite emblem—was represented by a dazzling blaze of costly gems. Another court of this most sumptuous dwelling was paved with slabs of jasper, agate and other rare

For the love of his youth, Louise de la Valliere, the same ruler, caused to be constructed a lodge whereof the approach was paved with glass mirrors painted with an allegory representing the fervor and durability of his love. Passing from the gorgeous to the fantastic, we may mention the strange fancy of a rich Berlin tradesman, who had the walks of the garden that was attached to his country villa laid down with a number of coffin lids, which he had been at considerable time and expense to collect. They were of all ages and conditions, from the wooden covering for the peasant to the most elab-orate metal work designed for the noble or prince. On his death some years back his son replaced them with ordinary gravel, and subsequently presented the most valuable to a local muemployed in different parts of Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Lincolnshire, and Leicestershire for the purpose of paving, and a year or so ago the inhabitants of the Vale of Belvoir raised a vehement protest against their being used for a pathway leading to the village church. The local authorities, however, endeavored to excuse themselves, on the ground that they had plenty of old gravestones on hand, which, if utilized, would assuredly save the ratepayers' pockets.

Even more grewsome, however, is the pavement at Gwandu, Africa, in the making of which over 12,000 human skulls are said to have been employed The town, which is oval in shape, is girdled by a ring of lofty poles, on the summit of every one of which is placed a skull, while each of the six gates is led up to a pavement of skulls, which from constant friction gleams like a way of polished ivory.

But he never forgot his own nor failed to realize that no insult was gold cure for drunkenness, there a shooting and a dinner. The mayor of Chicago was present. His name matters not. Just before dinner was announced he slapped the Prince familiarly on the shoulder.

"Well, Prince," he said, "shall we go upstairs and wash "Certainly," said the Prince, suavely. He was probably astonished to learn that the mayor of the Chicago at that day washed his hands before dinner. The Risk of Ballooning.

Considering the risks aeronauts necessarily take every time they make an ascent the science or sport or trade (for it partakes of all three) is extraordinarily free from fatal accidents. Mr. Charles Green, who made over 600 trips, died at the age of 84, in 1870. Twenty years later Mr. Eugene Godard, who had made quite 2,000 ascents, died in his bed. On the other hand, among British bolloonists, Capt. Dale was killed before he had completed 200, and Capt. Whelan also, in 1892, met his death in his three hundred and fifteenth ascent. Mr. Percival Spencer, our most noted living English aeronaut, has probably beaten all these records, and has in addition, made parachute descents on all the continents, and on most of the seas surrounding them.

Pilipino Boy's Kites.

Just now as we came in off the street we saw a Filipino boy, about 8 years old, with a feather for a kite, says a writer in the Manila Justicia. feather was not more than two inches long and an inch wide at the flaring end. He had thread tied to it in two places. Of course, the feather did not fly much, but the boy amused himself with it for more than five minutes that we watched him. There were no other children about, and he never said a word. Never complained when it did not fly, or expressed any exclamations of joy when it did. These Filipino boys will fly most of a tree, a piece of newspaper, a For making and flying graceful, art-Filipino boys. Their best flying kites reach a great height, and the way they sail about in the air, one would have to observe closely to not mistake them for a large bird. It is not unusual to see several of these kites in the same locality, and they resemble soaring hawks looking for prey.

"I was hanging close to one of the steel rods," said he, yesterday, "a rod that I was painting. My rope was good and fast. I had no warning of any danger, when the sky and the clouds, and the bottom of the big bridge in the middle of it all, dashed past my eyes and the air whistled in my ears like a typhoon on the China seas. I knew I was going down head first. No, I wasn't frightened. I said to myself, 'Now, I'll strike the river before long, and if I keep going this way I'll hit the water head first, which will be just as good as diving; and being a good swimmer I can easy get ashore.' I wondered, too, if I'd beat my paintbrush down. Funny, what little things a fellow will think about at these times, instead of worrying about his own times, instead of worrying about his own times, instead of worrying about his own neck.

"But about sixty feet down—I didn't measure the distance then—I struck one of the cross-rods a slanting blow with my head. But my legs, sort o' huddled up as I fell, probably, came down full force against the rod. I could hear the bones crack. They made quite a loud noise, like a percussion cap. Still, it was the blow on the head that hurt the most. Then, though not before, I thought to myself, 'Well, it's your last cruise, for sure,' and things got black before me. I guess I fainted.

"But the cold water brought me to. I bobbed up as natural as a harbor buoy. I soon opened my eyes, and I suppose

I soon opened my eyes, and I suppose I smiled. I thought, just as if I was somebody else, 'Say, mate, you didn't die this watch, did you?' I know I felt awful good about it. But soon as I made awful good about it. But soon as I made my first kick, or father, tried to make it, I found that both my legs were hanging as heavy and dead as shot in a canvas bag. They didn't pain me, though. And when I found I couldn't swim I felt my gun was spiked for sure. But just then I heard the crew up aloft on the bridge hollering Good boy, Sailor! You're all right! Keep it up! Boat's coming! Keep a-padding, Jackie! I did sound fine and hearty, let me tell you. And so I kept a-paddling until a man reached me in a boat fifteen minutes after I dropped down.

"I was pretty nearly done up. I knew how my legs would hurt me if he tried to pull me over the gunwale of the boat, and I tried to make him tow me alongside. But he couldn't manage that and he did haul me in, though it was a mighty tough experience. I didn't faint again, and after I was once in the hospital began to feel quite comfortable. I've had very little pain; they take such fine care of patients here."

International Bird Protection.

An international agreement for the protection of birds useful to agriculture was concluded in Paris this spring. The parties to the agreement are Belgium, France, Greece, Austria, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and Spain, and a few smaller states. All birds useful to agriculture are to enjoy unconditional protection, and the destruction of these birds or of their nests and eggs is prohibited. Certain other birds are named as mischievous. Sporting rights are protected. Italy, a country in which the capture northward-bound birds is a regular trade, does not appear as of the treaty

As soon as the time to retire to her bed arrives she issues her order, 'Now I will retire,' and at once three or four maids spread the underquilts, help her-or, rather make her, for she simply stands like a doll-to change her clothes, and at last the girl, swaddled in her night garment, is put to bed just like a person suffering from a serious illness and so the poor thing goes to sleep and releases her maids from their trouble till the morning, when daily routine is resumed. First of all she issues to the maids waiting in her anteroom this extraordinary order, 'I shall get up now,' and then the process exactly the reverse of that of the night before is forthwith commenced by the girls. Day after day this routine is gone through and the spoiled child of the proud upstart peer forces herself from her mistaken notion as to dignity to lead the life of an invalid and to cripple the normal develop-

The best story tells of a visit he paid to the Mount Nelson Hotel, Cape Town, about 6 o'clock one sunny morning. The assistant Swiss clerk in the office did not know the tall, khaki-clad officer who strode in and asked to see the hotel register. At first he refused, but rapidly changed his mind. Soft Drinks for Britons.

There comes a time in the lives of convivial men when their habits have to be reconsidered. The social custom cannot be indefinitely prolonged. There is a time limit to the "long pull." Is it so with nations? There are a good many indications that the chancellor of the exchequer was quite right when he said that the people of this country had nearly gone to the verge of their possible expenditure on stimulants. It is undoubtedly true that there has been a general depression throughout the wine and spirit trade, says the London Telegraph. The failures recorded last year are more numerous than for any previous year for a good while. Many establishments are turning over much less than they did three years ago. Rapid Ride From Nice to Mentone on an Enthusiast's New Machine.

"Well, I will just bet you these that I will beat you from Nice to Mentone on my new machine," said Count de Z. to my friend X., as he held up a bundle of notes he had just stopped to take up from the table in the clubroom upstairs in Monte Carlo.

"Done with you," said X. Eight notes of 1,000 francs each were in his hand, and it did not take long to arrange that we were to start early in the morning, when the road would be more or less clear of vehicles, and to toss for who should go first at a 10 minutes' interval and get a friend to time the finish.

It was a gloriously clear morning when we arrived at Nice; a couple of friends had come out on their machines.

Off went de Z. on his Panhard, and in 10 minutes we started up the steep road, zig-zagging up the hill right up under the white dome of the Nice Observatory, says a writer in the London Mail.

We had gained the level summit of the road at last, and with an animal-like snort and a mechanical whirr at the change of gear we jumped forward at a bound. The surface of the road was perfect and the curves not sharp, but sweepingly rounded. The air up there was deliciously cool, crisp, but not sharp.

Like a brightly colored map, the fringe of littoral lay far below, as it might look from a balloon. We whizzed past a signpost that marked the beginning of our descent. X. was crouched over the wheel like Tod Sloan riding a finish. Tense observation, lightning-like quickness of decision, supreme courage-all were every instant asked from him on that terrific downward ride. Drive a pair of horses down that road, lash them to madness, throw the reins on their backs, and keep lashing them, and still they will have the life-preserving instinct not to jump that wall-but one turn of that wheel and you are catapulting into eternity.

It was often held up over the precipice slope by a wall, and only just wide enough for two vehicles to pass when they held accurately and carefully to their own side of the road. It was nasty to think of what would happen if we were to meet one in the middle of the road on rounding one of these corners. Heavens, what a shave! We were Heavens, what a shave! spinning round a corner where there was a line of stones for repairing the road lying in heaps on the other side. As we swept round we came right on one of those long country carts, empty, and with the spare horse in

Tear, bound, jolt, and we were on the clear road again, every nerve and muscle relaxing after instants of intense tension. Such are the supreme moments in the life the god in the motor car-to decide instantly-and then to swoop, safe and triumphant, adown a new air-shoot of road. The road twisted and turned with sharper wriggling as we neared Mentone, and we swayed from side to side with a sharper swinging.

A last bounding rush down a straight span of road, and we passed the timekeeper on the outskirts of Mentone, and drew up with the rattle of a machine gun, which is the way these iron horses draw breath, to and that we were beaten by 20 seconds!

The Turbine Steamer.

The day of the turbine steamer is apparently in sight, at least for passenger traffic. A year ago the first passenger steamboat, the King Edward, to be fitted with C. A. Parsons patent turbine engines, was placed on the Clyde route between Gourock and Campbeltown, and not only outpaced the fastest paddle steamers on the Clyde, but was also more economical in the consumption of coal. Messrs. Denny Bros. have now built a second turbine steamer, the Queen Alexandra, for the same route, and at her trials she has developed a speed of 21.63 knots per hour, or a knot more than her predecessor. It is claimed for the Queen Alexandra that she is not only the fastest, but the mest palatial excursion steamer in Britain.

How the Mysterious and Puzzling Pictures Are Produced.

Important Developments in the Moving Picture Business.

Trained Camera Actors Are In Employ of Companies Manufacturing the Films.

There have lately been important developments in the "moving picture" business. Practically every theater in the county where vaudeville is either incidental or a feature, has its own projects on canvas a dozen or more active views, the exhibition being given equal prominence on the program with the comedietta preceding or the "musical act" following, says the New York Times.

Of late nearly all of the pictures produced have been either of a comic or a mysterious nature. Where a year or so ago those "in front" were treated to realistic scenes of Niagara Falls, a trip across Brooklyn bridge, or a view taken from the locomotive of an English railway train, they will now be shown with humorous exaggeration how Mrs. O'Grady deals with her husband when he comes unsteadily home on Saturday night minus his wages, or they will be permitted to gaze upon the remarkable spectacle of a clown ambling about the canvas, deed to realistic scenes of Niagara Falls, a clown ambling about the canvas, detaching his head or limbs at will.

wonder in them never lessen. A NEW PROFESSION. The companies manufacturing the films used in these machines have in their employ a large number of persons whose business it is to pose for the pictures. They are the originals of the characters to be seen on the canvas. They are trained "camera actors," and know just what is required of them to make the picture most effective. At one end of a long gallery on East Twenty-first street is a tiny stage. The room is crowded with scenery and properties, and on this stage are enacted most of the tableaux seen later on canvas in the theater. If you will notice, you observe that the characters enact by rapid pantomime in sixty seconds a little comedy which would require five or ten minutes if presented on the stage in the usual way. This is acted originally about feet from the mouth of a big lens, behind which a roll of film two or three hundred feet long is rapidly being reeled across the point of expos-

One of the latest mystery pictures is "The Human Incubator." A man is represented standing before a table on which there are six eggs and a plate. He takes up one egg, breaks it about a foot above the plate, and as the contents strike the latter a little chick picks itself up and runs over the table.

This he does with each egg in succession. When the six chicks are running about he holds the last broken shell again over the plate, a chicken runs backs and apparently jumps up into the shell, which is placed on the table again whole.

HOW IT IS DONE.

This is one of the simplest of all the pictures. In reality the man stands before the camera and breaks an egg into the plate. He then reaches out for a little chicken, which is handed to him, and puts it on the plate. Naturally it immediately runs off on the The same thing is done with table. each of the six eggs until the same number of chickens have actually been put on the plate.

When the film is developed ten or fifteen feet of it represent the man reaching out and putting the chicken on the plate. This part is cut out of the main strip, and the section of the film representing the contents of the egg striking the plate is attached to that showing the chicken picking itself up from the center of the plate where it has been placed in the interval. The apparent impossibility of the tiny fowl returning to the eggs is accomplished merely by reversing the course of the film-that is, making the picture operate backward.

Two similar pictures are "The Tramp's Miraculous Escape," and "The Photographer's Mishap." In the first one, two tramps meet on a railroad track and exchange embraces. One produces a bottle and goes on, leaving it with his colleague of the road. The tramp who received the bottle sits down on a railroad tie, takes several good "pulls" at it, and finally goes to sleep. An express train makes its appearance, and unable to stop in such a short distance, strikes unfortunate man and scatters "fragments of him" in every direction. The train is stopped, and train hands return to gather up the remains. After carrying them for a short distance on a stretcher the tramp jumps out alive and makes a dive for his bottle, which has been left behind.

The other picture embodies the same idea, an amateur photographer having set up his camera on the tracks and commenced focusing when an express train strikes him. He is hurled into the air, but on striking the ground, of horror comes from in front of the canvas when the train strikes the body, for it seems impossible that it is not a reproduction of an actual catastrophe. A man is really photographed on the track until the locomotive gets near.

One of the most mystifying effects obtained is that in the picture "Imto Mentone is the outer side—a small wall of stone about a foot and a half high made its margin. He plunges into the water, only to be thrown back on the bank a second later, as usual, fully dressed. He tries it again three or four times, with the same result, and then in despair finally dives with every garment on. To the observer this instantaneous dressing seems utterly unexplainable. It is done simply by stopping the camera after the man has thrown his hat down or his coat off and waiting until he has put on another. Of course, when the picture is projected on the canvas the redressing interval is lost. He is thrown back out of the water by a reversal of the film. The same principle is applied in the cture where two fishermen get into dispute, and, in the struggle which follows, tumble overboard while grappling with each other. FOR SUBURBANITES. Another amusing and mystifying picture is "Trying to Catch a Train." A suburbanite is seen in bed in the morning. He discovers he has overslept himself, and as he jumps out of bed, shirt, trousers, shoes, collar, tie coat, vest, hat, cane, cigar, and satchel arise from the floor and adjust themselves. He makes a hasty exit. In this the camera is stopped while the man put on each garment, Views on the order of the clown with the adjustable head are of course made by the aid of mirrors. The same thing is done on the stage, and is familiar to everyone. What appears on canvas is simply a photograph of what appears on the stage, only in many cases the mystic effect can be greatly intensified by the way in which the camera may be juggled, so to speak.

Gout in the United States.

A paper read before the American Medical Association by Dr. Thomas B. Futcher, of Baltimore, is summarized as follows: Gout in the United States is undoubtedy more common than is generally supposed. Out of 13,400 medical wards in the Johns Hopkins hospital during a period of thirteen years there were thirty-five gout cases, or 0.24 per cent. of the total number of cases. For the same number of years at St. Bartholomew's hospital there were 116 gout cases out of a total of 31,100 medical admissions, or 0.37 per cent. of the cases. Thus, among hospital patients gout is only about onethird more frequent in London than in Baltimore. All the thirty-six cases were in white males. The largest number of cases occurred in the fifth decade. Twenty-seven of the patients were native-born Americans. The majority of cases appeared to have earned rather than have acquired their gout.

WHY PROGRESS WAS SLOW.

The pessimists are not all dead yet, and some of them may remind me that it is almost twenty years since the opening up of the west by the C. P. R., and that in all the territory between Lake Superior and the Pacific there were less than six hundred thousand people when the census was taken a year ago. They may go further, and demonstrate by mathematics, as it is quite possible to do, that with half a section of land per family the Canadian west would be comfortably filed by ten million people. They may also point out that in the west there are vast stretches of land that by reason of insufficient rainfall are not adapted to cultivation, and must be excluded from the available area. That is precisely where the settlement of the west by mathematics breaks down, and where the man of imagination comes to his own. Take these semi-arid regions for example. The mathematician of a pessimistic turn says we must count them out, so he draws a ring round them and marks the enclosure "no use." The other, who sees pressure of population will make all of America's soil valuable, wonders if it would not be worth while turning the waters of the swift-flowing Rocky Mountain streams upon these parched lands. In far less time than a half century there will be scarcely an acre of good land in the southern regions of Alberta and Assiniboia beyond the reach of an irrigation ditch, and by reason of that very fact these tracts so generally regarded as useless will the most thickly populated in the west.

A VAST IRRIGATION PROJECT.

The great irrigation project upon which the C. P. R. chiefs are now engaged may be cited in support of this statement. By means of 116 miles of canal, the storage of billions of gallons of water in reservoirs formed out of natural depressions, and the diversion of the water of the Bow River, near Calgary, a great stretch of territory, extending from Calgary easterly almost 200 miles, to Medicine Hat, can ever they might go. This project has been presented at some length, as showing how even land now held to be useless will be utilized in the coming years, and how men of affairs are looking to the Pacific and the future of Canadian trade in the countries bordering upon it. So far as the present rush of settlement concerned, however, the Pacific coast outlet is not a pressing matter.

INTELLECTUAL AND MORAL OUTLOOK. A closing word as to the outlook in the national sphere and in the matter of intellectual and moral development. One hears frequently in the east that there is danger of the west becoming Americanized by the very great influx of settlers from the United States. The men who today are engaged in the making of the west have no such fear, so long as the people of the older regions, and especially of Ontario, their duty in bringing Canadian ideals within reach of the newcomers, and in providing them with educational facilities and the ordinances of religion. Rev. Dr. Robertson, the great home missionary head of the Presbyterian Church, whose lamentable death has been a sore blow to the west, had no fear of the future of the country so long as the school, the church, and the mounted policeman, with his firm insistence upon British law and order. accompanied the new settlers wherduty, which all churches in Canada should fulfil! with their utmost energy.

Similar lands in Montana yield to reinforce the efforts of Premier 25.3 bushels of wheat annually as an Haultain to provide that every child average, while Manitoba's average is coming into these lands shall learn the history of Canada and speak the English tongue. The suggestion made from time to time to reduce the Mounted Police and ditches, leave the maintenance of order in the unorganized portions of the teritories regarded. The mounted policeman is the settler's best friend, as well as the visible symbol of Canadian authority. He is doing a work that could not be done by any locally constituted force, no matter how well organized. With these three factors, the church, school and the policeman, working be no fear of foreign ideals, political, of the people there will be nothing to breed discontent. WILL DEVELOP ITS OWN TYPE.

The direction of the intellectual and moral development of the west is perhaps more difficult to forecast than its material future. For the moment men are too much concerned in laying the foundations of empire to think much of literature, the arts and the sciences. There is, however, among the population of the plains a remarkably large percentage of people to whom the term three elements in the rapid settlement | cultured can properly be applied. In | vented.

the early days of ranching, many English university men of good family and of scholarly attainments were among the settlers, and their influence has unquestionably been great in the social and intellectual life of the territories.

That the Canadian west will develop its own type in prose-writing and verse, and choose its own outlook on life, is to be expected, and symptoms are not wanting of the beginning of this process of differentiation from eastern standards. In morals our west will undoubtedly compare most favorably with eastern Canada. There is something that makes for sober living and deep thinking on those illimitable plains where the star-jeweled sky forms an unbroken canopy in the still night. The man of a reflective disposition is forced back upon himself and develops a contemplative type of mind that is very rarely met with among the bustle and hurry of eastern cities or even of Ontario town life. The thinking man is seldom an immoral man, and one can well believe that on these plains there will be evolved a type of Canadians who "fear God and none else besides," who will be tender to the weak, unbending to the strong, who will do justly, love mercy, what were but two years ago unin- free land there, still continues, and and make of the great north a home for millions of the unfortunate, the

The silver taper stand which Sir Walter Scott bought with his first fee as an advocate-£5 5s-and gave to his mother, which realized £72 the other day, had one advantage over a Dickens relic that was sold in December, 1899; it was decidedly less cumbrous. The relic in question was or iginally one of the stone balustrades of old Rochester bridge, and was afterwards converted by "Boz" into a sun dial. When, on the death of the author, the dial came into the posession of Mr. Crighton, of Rochester, he inscribed it with the words: "These relics of Gadshill Place and old This souvenir of the great author was eventually knocked down for £50

Keats' manuscripts were sold rather over three years ago for £695 and £305, respectively. The former sum was given for the manuscript of £3 10s 9d per page; while the "Lamia" was written on leaves that were eventually more valuable than if they had been ten-pound Bank of England 14s 7d for each of its 26 pages. Manuscripts written by Burns command prices that very few authors of today could afford to refuse for the production of original work; "Scots, hae'," for instance, sold in May, 1890, for £70, and three years ago last June his "Commonplace Book" fetched a sum equal to £9 12s per page, or probably over a shilling a word-a which most authors would find very acceptable.

Those collectors who aspire to possess Scott manuscripts must at the same time be prepared to dip somewhat deeply into their pockets. Certainly £62 purchased an introductory in his own handwriting some little time ago; but £106 was required for a portion only of "Tales of a Grandfather"-a sum which was only £14 less than was paid for a seat used by Shakespeare. For the manuscript of "Old Mortality," which was sold on the first occassion for £33, £600 was given recently. Expensive Cigars.

One reads from time to time of the fabulous sums paid for cigars, says the London Tatler. A favorite story is that Mr. Chamberlain never touches the anything cheaper that a five-shilling cigar, and that every time Lord Roths-child smokes ten shillings vanish into the ambient air. According to Mr. Weingott, the well-known tobacco merchant, all such stories are the purest invention. As far as mere quality of tobacco goes, the best cigar in the world can be purchased for one shilling sixpence, and anyone who gives more than this sum is paying for size. peculiar shape, or for some peculiar rarity and not for its excellence. These torpedo-like cigars which one sees in take him for better or worse. Machine Lays Tracks.

A new machine for laying railroad tracks is being used in Pennsylvania. It has proved itself capable, with a crew of forty men, of putting down two miles of track in a day. The tracklayer has a huge crane, sixty feet long, which projects forward over the road, and it hauls behind it a train of sixteen flat cars loaded and rails. A continuous double line of the latter moves forward over rollers and carries the ties withit. Both rails and ties are seized at the proper point by the machinery and placed on the road in front of the train, where they shortly form part of the track over which it passes. This device is said to be the most rapid and the most economical mechanical tracklayer ipBaby's Own Tablets Cure Children's Stomach Troubles. CONFIDENCE IN THEIR LOVE

No Drawbacks Too Great For Cupid's Victims.

Instances When Heroic Measures Were Necessary, But Difficulties Were Downed.

The fact that confidence is the essence of real live affairs is shown by the rash measures to which lovers resort in outwitting parents who for some reason or other or for no reason "Endymion," which averaged out at at all set up objections to a matrimonial match. There is no obstacle too perplexing, no grievance too great for lovers to surmount, and their dealnotes, for the manuscript fetched £11 ings throughout show that whatever else may be said of them they have explicit confidence in each other. A young girl, afraid of her own shadow in the dark under ordinary circumstances, will steal out through a sec-ond story window at midnight and execute a hasty retreat over a high backyard fence in order to carry out her part of a prearranged elopement. She will start out with her lover with little money and practically no prospects all right in the end. And in practically every case of this character her only assurance is confidence. Frequently long distance marriages take place in which the bride and groom are unacquainted with each other, and if it is not confidence that brings about such weddings, then what is it?

A case of this character recently co curred in Hopkinsville, Ky., when Mrs. Gertrude Koon and Jefferson Davis were married by telephone while they were 300 miles apart. The bride did not meet her husband until the day following the wedding, and after having spent twelve hours together they both declared they felt as though they had been acquainted all their lives. Their courtship was carried on by mail and their engagement was brought about in the same manner, so that throughout the whole transaction the only guarantee of each was confidence.

ELOPED AT MIDNIGHT. Elopements of the highly romantic sort usually take place at night, and a striking illustration of this sort is to be found in the case of Ben Pickerell and Miss Ollie Fenwick, of Raywick, Kentucky. They eloped, quite recently, shortly before midnight. The young woman, with a small bundle of wear ing apparel under her arm, climbed through a window, joined her sweetheart, who was waiting on the outside, and together they drove to Lebanon, where at 2 o'clock in the morning they were united in marriage. Pickerell had a rival for the hand of Miss Fenwick, brand which is only valuable for its and on that particular evening, after a late call, he gained her consent to cided to take no chances, and to have unwary. She was in love with Clyde Hall, a schoolboy, and as is usually the case in such love affairs, | rived. her parents offered serious objections, and excluded the young man from their home. But this was only a small obstacle. One night the girl threw her clothes from her bedroom window to Hall, who was waiting on the outside. The next morning she left home, apparently for school. KIDNAPPED BOY TO MARRY. Miss Agnes Vance, of Barren county, Ky, was so confident and so courageous in her quest for a husband that she kidnapped Robert Marcum, her youthful sweetheart, and took him to Gallatin, Texas, where, after some delay, caused by legal technicalities, she finally succeeded in making him her husband.

'This young man, and I," she said to the license clerk, "desire to get married, and I want a marriage license."
"Are you of age?" the auburn-haired clerk politely asked, with a twinkle in his off eye.

To which the maiden replied: "I am of legal age with some margin, but the young man here with me is yet a boy, and this is why we had to run away from Kentucky. His parents opposed the marriage between us, and some women would have surrendered, but I didn't. I just took the 'bull by his horns,' went to the young man's home the other night, and while his parents slept, stole him out from under his own vine and fig tree, and here I am, ready and willing to become his wife."

And with that she paid the fee, took the papers, and marched off to getmarried.

IN A GARDEN FAIR.

Hotheaded Lever, a Coquettish Mistress and an Innocent Rival HAROLD OLSON, IN THE KING

On the gray stone steps that led from one smooth lawn to another stood Cynthia. One foot had sought a lower step, the other lingered above, and the clinging gown of white, out of which peeped shoulders yet whiter, out lined the slender figure. The expression on the face under the large hat, love, if it were love, had come swiftly, bent downward by ribbon tied daintily with but a look to kindle it. Once I beneath the chin, showed rapt attention to the notes of a violin, proceeding from behind the closely cropped

It was a picture a man might look upon for all a summer's day, and then not have his fill. But I, from my seat beneath the trees, found no pleasure

'Curse the long-haired, fiddling fellow!" I muttered, and began to walk across the lawn to Cynthia. But even when I stood below her with my hat doffed, I might have been a man invisible for all the notice I gained.
"Good day, Cousin Cynthia," said I

The music from behind the hedge sobbed and wailed yet louder. I myself could have fancied a tune with more spirit; something to stir a man's blood-to fill him with the wild madness of the charge—aye, or even a rousing song to suit the passage of the wine flagon. But it was evidently to the taste of my cousin, for she still stood listening, and took no notice of

"It is a fair morning," said I at length, thinking she was not aware of my presence, and seeking to attract her notice.

Your voice is not in harmony with these sweet strains, cousin," she re-plied, not favoring me with even se much as a look.

"In truth, a crying child would suit them better," I retorted. Cynthia deigned no reply, but drew aside as I ascended the steps and stood abreast of her.

I fancied she half turned her head toward me, certainly she paused a moment. I ran down the steps.

But then she vanished behind the hedge, and immediately the music ceased. I turned away full of anger and despair, though as yet I failed to realize how that which had happened were possible, and how my dreams of happiness had been shattered in an hour. For on the previous evening there had been dancing in the great house that stood in the midst of the garden, and I, as a favored suitor, had many times claimed the hand of the Lady Cynthia. It is true it had been granted me, and my friends had still no reason to believe but that I was in possession of her heart. But I knew differently, for though her hand was in mine, her eyes sought continually the face of a young stripling, a member of the company of musicians hired to play while we danced. At first I mistrusted my eyes, refusing to believe such a thing. Few were more proud than my cousin, and it seemed impossible that she, of the highest in the land, could smile on a mere fiddler from the court. But a lover's eyes are quick, and the truth, hideous though foolishly, I spoke bitter words to her abide the result as a man should. it was, forced itself upon me. Then, and she returned them. "Perhaps, Dick," she said, softly.

Then I was conquered. I threw myself at her feet, crying that I loved her and would die for her, and all the sweet, mad speeches that lovers make. But she stood quietly, and when I found no more words (they were ever wont to fail me) she looked down at me and said, smiling:

"The sun is warm, and I fear-" I sprang to my feet, for a moment mystery in it I could not fathom. No hating where I had loved. But before I could speak Cynthia held out her hands to me, crying:

in the great interest that is being manifested about old blue china there is a curious tendency to specialize, and the "all-around" collector of ten or twenty years ago has given way to the collector of one particular kind of objects, says a writer in the New York Tribune. It would be interesting to know how many patient collectors there are of pitchers only. I know of over a dozen in New York State alone. Some of them have a preference for only one kind of ware, the ever beautiful luster, in silver, copper rose and lavender tones.

A collection of pitchers of Wedgewood make is not only beautiful and various, but very costly as well. Nor is it yet impossible, even with a collector on the qui vive on every corner. Recently in Boston there was sold at auction a collection of Masonic pitchers in black printed Liverpool ware, several of them bringing over $50 a piece. Most of these were the generous old cider pitchers, standing twelve inches high, and having on them in one design or another a portrait of Washington. The value of the pitchers, or jugs, as a simon-pure collector calls them, is very much increased when the name of the original owner is painted on them. This is generally on the front, inclosed in a wreath, or even in luster bands. The Masonic pitchers without a Washington portrait, are usually of less value, though they are interestingly decorated with quaint old verses, in which the spelling will not bear close scrutiny. The old blue historic pitchers are too scarce and rare to make a collection of any size, but teapots are not hard to find in a great variety of wares. One city in the interior of New York State holds a private collection of 500, all different, and scattered all over the country are many others, a number of them boasting more than 200 specimens. Old glass bottles form another side line of great interest, as many of them were made here to commemorate some event

EVILS THAT FOLLOW LYING

A Liar Loses Self-Respect; It Obscures His Vision.

The Habit of Misrepresentation Leads to Misconception, and the Judgment Becomes Erratic.

At birth, all of us were liars, more or less. This is because lying is the diplothe air of a master (as, indeed, a man matic refuge of helplessness. The instant we learn to know punishment, desire to escape from it becomes a prime

> Morality, like knowledge, is not hereditary, but attained. The child must learn that lying is a sin and a self-injury, just as it must learn by being burnt to avoid the fire

Unless this lesson is learned, the child, youth, man, continues to lie. Many never learn it. Perhaps none ever learned it thoroughly.

Lying comes not of aggressive shrewdness, but of cowardice and of a shallow cunning that is often treacherous and tricks the lie into transparency. But it is not the danger of being found out by others that is most to be dreaded; far more dreadful is it that the liar must know himself to be a liar. His self-respect suffers-the leaven in him loses strength and leaves him dead dough. The cunning that leads to lying is a rot that must permeate the whole character and make a man uncertain of him-

It distorts his perspective, obscures his vision, and warps his comprehension. The habit of misrepresentation leads to misconception, the judgment becomes as erratic as the tongue, and there results the man who "couldn't tell the truth if he wanted to."

"Nothing so shakes the confidence of one's friends as known lying does; nothing so shatters one's own self-confidence as lying does, whether known to others or not.

The cowardice that fathers lying increases with the lie. Fear of detection joins with self-contempt in making the liar a greater coward than before. One lie calls for another in its defense. The poet said it thus: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive."

The tangled web makes it all the harder for the liar to succeed in even an honest undertaking. His lies are a chain and ball upon his foot. They are a beam in his eye and a weight on his heart. He flounders along, most of his energy being required to overcome the impediment, while the truthful man easily outstrips him.

The lying cheat in the "Vicar of Wakefield," who was always swindling everybody, died in jail for aebt, while his honest neighbor, who was swindled a thousand times, steadily prospered and died rich and respected. Fiction-eh? Well, it is immortal as fiction, simply, because it is fact, the world over, all the time.

The Uses of Chaff.

On the whole, as we have said, school chaff does good, though we lo not recommend it quite on the same principle as that on which the stern old country squire recommended, or rather insisted upon, a cold bath every morning for his children, says the London Spectator. "If they can't stand it," he said, "they're not fit to be my sons, and I won't have them." School chaff is wholesome in cases, but it may cramp what should not be cramped. As to the chaff which a man gives and gets at a university, however, we do not think there can be two opinions. It must do good, and it has not the opportunity of doing harm. Only these receive it; the quiet man who wishes to read or to think apart need hardly ever come into contact with his fellows unless he so chooses.

Braised Beef.

There are few ways of cooking cheap beef more satisfactory than braising it. Take a good cut of beef weighing four or six pounds from the rump, if possible. Bone it, tie it neatly round with string or tape and lay it in a large saucepan with a liberal supply of national importance, but they are never pleasing to the eye, which is one of the many charms of all collections of china.

stock to moisten the whole. Stew very gently till the meat is cooked thoroughly; then take it up, trim it neatly and remove the tape and set it on a hot dish. Strain half a pint of the stock the beef was cooked in into a small stewpan, add to it two table-spoonfuls of mushroom catchup and a little coloring. Garnish the beef with a few of the vegetables, pour the gravy

FROZEN DELACICIES FOR HOT WEATHER

Delicious Desserts That Can Be Made in a Few Minutes.

With warm weather comes the craving for good eatables and drinkables, and it is well that the home caterer should learn of one or two helps toward the speedy and easy production of these delicacies. A bag of strong material in which to put the lump of ice while pounding into small saves time and ice; also, for quick rcsults, remember that one measure of salt goes to three of ice, and that while freezing is going on the ice and salt need to be but a trifle higher than contents of freezer. Never pour off water unless there is danger of its penetrating, for this salty water does the quick work (three to five minutes). When the mixture is frozen it should, if possible, be packed, to "ripen," for two or three hours, as this process actually improves its flavor. The water is now be poured off, and the proportions of the measure changed to one of salt

Never fill the freezer interior more than three-quarters full, as the contents increase. All fear of salty water spoiling cream while standing is removed if buttered paper, buttered side out, is fitted over the contents; then even immersion would not matter. With these simple but important hints in mind the following delicious desserts may be produced by a novice:

VELVET APRICOT CREAM. Between seasons it is a comfort to know that a can of apricots costing about 18 cents will, without a drop of milk or cream, added, produce a frozen delicacy, rich in color, creamy and fruity to the taste. So transformed is this can of fruit by following this recipe that those tasting it might imagine | As Professor Petrie writes: delightful blending of many fruits. Wash the apricots through a sieve (vegetable sieve, if possible), add juice and a pint of water, sweeten to taste. When turned out this is a deep cream color and is soft and wonderfully rich. This is sometimes served with whip-ped cream, but it is really superfluous.

IVORY CREAM is another inexpensive surprise that would deceive even the family epicure, and, indeed, is fit to "set before the king of bon vivants." Mash four pealed bananas through a sieve, add two peeled oranges, with seeds and fiber removed, then pulled into small bits (don't waste juice), two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, and one of yellow wine, two-thirds cup of sugar. Melt a full tablespoonful of granulated gelatine in quarter-cup boiling water, mix all together, then fold in a pint of whipped Instead of wine, use water in cream. which has been simmered enough of the carefully grated skin of a deep yel low orange; this gives color and a distinct orange flavor. Pineapple juice, if at hand, adds fruitiness. This may be frozen in small tin pail or mold. CAFE FRAPPE.

It is not generally known that to produce the proper grains in frappe freezing must be done with salt and chopped ice in equal parts. Make coffce clear and as liked for breakfast coffee, both as to milk and sweetening.
Sherbet should be of mush like consistency, and when freezing it is important to remember the rule given for frappe. Sherhet is really frozen punch, with one stiffly beaten white of an egg stirred into every quart; lemon or orangeade may be used instead. If gelatine is used a taplespoonful dis-solved in quarter cup of water will beat un when just forming into 'elly, and will be white and foamy.

GOLD JEWELRY MADE SIXTY CENTURIES AGO

Wonderful Relics of Prehistoric Oriental Civilization.

Chicago is fast attaining the realization of her ambition to be known The German Emperor endeavors to as a city with higher titles to fame follow the "rules of life" laid down by than can be conferred by pork and millions, says an editorial in the Winnipeg Free Press. "Relics of kings who ruled 3,000 years before the Christian era, together with a complaint to a chief of police written an papyrus 2,000 years ago, are displayed for the first time in the Haskell Museum of the University of Chicago. The exhibition is given by the Chicago Society of Egyptian research, and the relics

It bears the symbol of King Menes, who is thought to have reigned about 3,200 B. C. Another exhibit is a piece of papyrus, on which is written a complaint by Nechtemetes to a chief of police, with reference to a robbery on her premses. This piece of papyrus of the third century bears a letter of Demetrius to his father, Heracleides, blaming him for not sending baskets

To those who have followed the progress of Professor Flinders Petrie, the English Egyptologist, who has devoted his life to the exploration of the soil and research into the ancient history of the land of the Pharaohs, there will be nothing very new in the above extract from the Chicago paper named; except the statement that an inscribed bar dating back to King ago, is "thought to be the oldest piece of inscribed jewelry in the world." Professor Petrie in his land tures at the Royal Institution in London, in May of last year, exhibited inscribed jewelry dating from 4,750 years before the Christian era.

The account of Professor Petrie's discoveries in buried Egypt may well excite the sense of wonder and mystery in the most novel-jaded mind. Long-buried tombs of ancient kings been discovered and explored; and although in nearly all cases these have been previously pillaged in the Roman age, enough of their contents remains unbroken or overlooked till now to afford grounds for recon-stituting, in outline at least, a wonderful and unsuspected defilization.

"When we find, for example, speci-mens of goldsmith's work dating from 4,750 years before the Christian era, which have never been surpassed since in technical skill, working of designs, variety of form and perfec-tion of soldering, we are sobered somewhat in our belief that the cess of time means progress, and that the present is the best and noblest We are of civilization. for instance, of the products of modern steam spinning and weaving. Yet the linen woven 6,000 years ago finer in thread and closer in web than our finest cambric. When we are inclined to reflect with complacency on our advance in civilization and our re-finements in religion, philosophy and political ideas, it is as well to consider whether these also were not as highly developed in ancient Egypt, although in the nature of things no complete tangible evidence of them remains.' The soil of Babylonia also is yielding surprising evidence of a civilization not behind our own in essenupheaval of the A general tials. earth's surface would reveal strange things—long-buried capitals of forgotten empires, maybe, and records of the every-day life of men and women like those of today, but so remote in time that, as with the Egyptians of 6,650 years ago, it is with difficulty that we think of them as human beings like ourselves.
