The Tariff a Tex.
[Montreal Herald.]

The tariff is a tax no matter whether paid into the Dominion treasury or into the pocket of the tariff beneficiary. We require no futher evidence of this than the fact that the repeal of the duty on raw sugar has reduced the price of sugar to consumers by nearly the amount of the duty repealed. One saplent organ tells us that "the Government recognized the importance to the farmers of cheap salt and promptly cut down the duty one-half." If cutting down the duty cheapened salt, anybody can see that consumers paid the duty—if imported, into the Dominion treasury; if home-made, into the pocket of the protected producer. LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Times correspond-ent at Paris sends to his paper a column dispatch giving the text of Chili's reply to President Harrison's message. If, however, America went to war for a sailors' quarrel Europe might witness a spectation would relieve the monetony of the present times. America having refused to sign the treaty egainst privateering, she would be entitled to equip her entire marine, even American-built vessels as privateers. Happily this is a mere hypothesis. President Harrison's message is merely rhetoric." wreed to leave.

To the Editor of the Advertiser:

I have read Mr. White's address delivered in Woodstock, viz.: "Political Union with the United States." We may agree with him—I for one do not in some points; but, certainly, what he said was proper to be said, and properly said. Wo will say as much for one of the other speakers who have claimed to be Liberals? Mr. H. B. Beard, Q.C., was glad that no one in Oxford county was willing to do the work sought to be done that day. By the data an oath of allegiance to the Queen. (A voice: "Throw him out!") It required such a man to ask them to hall down the old flag, which he hypocritically avowed to cherish.

James Gilmour spoke briefly, after which Hcn. John Carling delivered an address, followed by Professor Saunders, director of the Dominion Experimental Farm. Many practical hints relating to farming and dairying were given. Professor Robertson, who was expected, had made another engagement, and did not attend. A feature of the meeting was the attendance of a group of politicians from London for purposes that need hardly be suggested. Their attendance with the principal speaker gave rise to the suspicion that political intents are more important than the interests of farmers.

A CANADIAN PORTRAIT OF THE GRAND OLD MAN.

It is satisfactory to know that the por trait of Mr. Gladstone, painted by John C. Forbes, the well-known Canadian artist, for presentation to the National Liberal Club of Great Britain in the name of Canadian Liberals, is an excellent likeness. The Grand Old Man himself hath said it after a critical examination. In referring to the visit which Mr. Gladstone paid to the studio, a cable correspondent describes the picture. The veteran statesman is presented full-face, addressing an audience, which, to judge by the expression on his face, is in sympathy with his views. The right honorable gentleman is shown in the right honorable gentleman is shown in the now familiar Galashiels gray tweed, in white vest with the buttons loose at top and bottom, the blue tie with white spots, and a rose in his coat. His eyeglasses are not forgotten, but the elastic band fastening the small glove piece over the place of the lost finger is looked for in vain—artistic reasons will, no doubt, account for this slight departure from accuracy. The pose of the body is good and the head is very fine, while of the whole portrait it may be said that it is a happy representation of Mr. Gladstone in one of his best known moods. He seems to have just made a point against a political opponent-a point which, while it excites neither that anger nor jocosity which may be found in such close proximity in some of his best orations, is yet a good point and satisfies the speaker and audience alike. It would not take much to make the portraiture. In all probability Hon. Wil-frid Laurier will respond to the request free trader. Recently he said:

"My aim is the formation of an Australian party, as against a sectional or local party. I am not discouraged by recent untoward occurrences to the cause of federation, for I still believe that the moral forces in the future life of the country might tend to bring about the union of these colonies. I am as firm as ever in my confidence in the ultimate triumph of free trade in Australia. In every attempt to force on the people a protective policy, I see a mere revelation of old Tory propensities in men who insanely believe themselves Democrats. I think that if by any chance a protectionist tariff were assented to by this Parliament in New South Wales, it would be reversed at the next general this Parliament in New South Wales, it would be reversed at the next general election. Free trade would have a chance of being discussed in a federal parliament on a much higher plane of thought than is possible in the local parliaments. My personal knowledge leads me to believe that in every colony where a so-called protectionist tariff obtains, there is a large number of better-class minds thoroughly imbured with the principles of free trade."

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrotula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Victoria Hall was handsomely filled Tuesday night with a select audience, and those present enjoyed a delicious musical treat at the hands of the Remenyi Grand Concert the hands of the Remeyi Grand Concert Company. The appearance of Edouard Remenyi, the great violinist, was the signal for applause. His opening number was a fantasic on the Huguenots of his own composition. The first touch of the strings preclaimed a master hand. The weird beauty of the lines, the depth of thought and the sudden and majestic flights, exemplified by the consummate skill of the performer, thrilled his auditors through and through. A spontaneous burst of applause greeted him at the conclusion of this lengthy selection. The Hugarian responded to the recall with Schubert's "Serenade," rendered exquisitely. A Romance (in E) and Mazurka (in B) by Chopin and a barcarole by Schubert comprised the second number, and all were given with the same rare perfection. The persistency of some in the audience knew no bounds, and Remenyi good-naturedly replied to a double entore. TENNIS.

Latham and Pettit met again in a court tennis match Monday in Boston for a purse of $150. Pettit was considered to have given Latham too great odds in Saturday's match, in which the Englishman was victorious, so in Monday's match Pettit gave only half 30 for a bisque. Owing to failing light but four sets were played, and they resulted in a draw. Pettit won the first and third sets, 6—4 and 9—7, and Latham the second and fourth, 8—6 and 9—2 The other members of the Remenyi Concert Company are artists of merit.

The comedy-drama in four acts, "A Brave Girl," was presented at the Grand Opera House last night by the Josie Miils Company. The piece is not well known here, but is nevertheless an attractive one, and was well presented. The acting of John E. Ainsley as the loquacious Vasco De Gama Biles was very good, and he won many encomiums. Frank Sheldon made up admirably and took the exacting part of Old Crab very creditably. He is a clever little comedian, with an original freshness of method. Josie Mills acceptably char-

It was delizious, Fay said, and would not Hugh join them? but her husband shook nis head. When other people came to ekate too, and Fay poured out tea for her friends in the damask drawing-room, he always kept near her, as in duty bound; but he took no active part in the festivities, and people wondered why Hugh seemed so grave and unlike himself, and then they glaned at Fay's happy face and seemed mystified. He had always liked his cousin, and he had saw at the saw often irritable about trifies. He had never noticed that sharp tone in his voice before. His cheerfulness, too, seemed forced, and he had grown strangely unsociable in his habits. Of course he was very busy, with his own estate and his wife's to look after; but he wondered why he admit he seemed forced, and he had grown strangely unsociable in his habits. Hugh's mannered do not satisfy Erle's chivalrous entities had not always when he was gentle with her, he hamored her, and petted her; but he here always and here and his little wife together. Hugh's mannered do not satisfy Erle's chivalrous entities had once to himself as he pased his own fortable room rather indignantly. It is 'Yes, dear Hugh,' or 'Gertainly, if you wish it, Hugh,' from morning to night; somehow that sickens a fellow. I dare say she is a little childish and crude in her ideas; that aunt of hers must be a duffer to have brought her up like a little unu; but she is sensible in her way. Hugh had no idea that she was reading the paper for an hour yesterday, that she might talk to him about that case in which he is so interested, or he would hardly have snubbed her as he did, by telling her she knew nothing about it. She looked so disappointed, poor little thing, there were tears in her eyes; but Hugh never saw them, he never does see if she is a little tired or dull, and I don't call that treating a wife well."

Erle was working himself up into quite a virtuous fit of indignation on Fay's behalf; but presently he became secretly anxious. Before the end of his visit he grew afraid more was amiss with Hugh than he at first guessed. He had often stayed with him before, and Hugh had wisited them at Belgrave House, but he had never noticed any sign of self-indulgence.

He thought Hugh was beginning to take more wine than was good for him. He complained of sleeping badly, and had recourse to narcoties. He was reckless of his health too, and worked often far into the night, and when Erle remonstrated with him, he only said he could not sleep, and he might as well occupy himself.

But in reality he never guessed, except and he might as well occupy himself.
