NEW PAVEMENT

Toronto Firm Secures the Contract—Special Meeting of Board of Works.

For the past week the city has been alive with contractors examining the specifications for the William street pavement with a view to tendering. However, when the tenders were opened yesterday only three were in. The time for sending in the tenders expired at 12 o'clock noon yesterday, and the Board of Works met at 1 o'clock to open the tenders. There were present, Chairman McKeough, Mayor Sullivan, Ald. Mounteer, Ald. Waddell, the City Clerk, and City Engineer McNab.

The first envelope opened by the Mayor contained a petition against the pavement. It was referred to the Clerk to report on.

D. L. Van Fleck, Toronto, offered to do the work for $2.17 per square yard for the brickwork and 88c per ft. for the 18x18 inch combination concrete curb and gutter.

The tender of W. H. Carwell, Moore & Kime, was brickwork $2.52 per square yard, concrete work 65c per cubic foot.

William McBean, Toronto, tendered at $2.78 for the brickwork and 70c for the concrete combination curb and gutter.

B. Hole, of Forest City Paving Co., arrived with his tender just after it had been decided to accept the Van Fleck tender, conditional on the initiative being taken in the work.

As the City Engineer had been out of the Board Room in the interval, it was not considered fair to open the tender.

The City Engineer says that on William St. about 45,000 feet of pavement will be laid, and the approximate cost to the property owners by the acceptance of the Van Fleck tender will be $18,000.

Ald. Waddell said he would like to see the city do the work themselves.

Ald. McKeough—No, thanks. The Mayor—Ald. Waddell has not been on that committee long enough or he wouldn't offer to do anything like that.

A majority of the property owners want William St. paved from King to Wade St. There wasn't enough to carry a petition for the work, but it was thought that if the initiative were taken there were enough wanted the work done so that a petition against couldn't get the requisite number of signers. Some, however, are on both petitions and matters are now complicated.

The tenders for the William street pavement also included Sixth street. Van Fleck says it wouldn't pay him to bring his men here for a small job like the Sixth St. pavement, so work is blocked on the Sixth St. pavement until the William St. matter is settled.

PROUD BIT OF BUNTING

Colonel Sam. Holmes owns the Joy Club at Mitchell's Bay and incidentally some 250 acres of land. In dry seasons the colonel has about 300 acres but this year he is about 50 acres shy and in its place owns a piece of the Bay. For all these reasons and others Colonel Holmes thinks he knows the Bay pretty well, but he lost his bearings on Monday.

Colonel Holmes had a party of visitors from the Joy Club out for a sail in Lillian. Capt. Hicklin was at the tiller. The captain steered his course for Martin's over at the Snye. It was four years since the colonel had been there, but when Martin's club house hove in view, the patriotic colonel was very much surprised to see a large American flag flying over the club house.

The colonel thought that Capt. Hicklin must have got off his course and had reached an American port. Capt. Hicklin stoutly contended that he had sailed according to the latest revised chart and there was no possibility of mistake.

The colonel examined the compass and found it all right. When the sloop Lillian dropped into the anchorage at Martin's and the colonel went ashore he realized that the captain had made no mistake. When the valiant man of military experience from the Maple City saw Martin he spoke, "This place looked familiar from the deck of my yacht as she sailed merrily across the Bay," remarked Colonel Holmes with a majestic sweep of his military right hand. "But that American flag stopped me for a while."

Mr. Martin explained that the stars and stripes was the only flag he had so he had flung its folds to the breeze from the loftiest tower on the club house. Colonel Holmes said that his patriotism, his love for his country and his innate soldiery would not permit him to see the American flag flying in Canada and that Martin's club house should fly the Union Jack even if he had to buy one himself.

Owners of flags can now have an opportunity to make a sale.

Letters of administration were granted to Elizabeth Hennessy, widow, for the estate of the late John James Hennessy, of Zone 12, John Courts, Thamesville, solicitor for executors.

HAS GROWN

Former Planet Editor Notes the Wonderful Development of the Maple City.

"I am amazed and delighted with Chatham's wonderful mercantile development and manifest prosperity." Such was the opinion expressed to The Planet this morning by George H. Taylor, who, with his wife and son, is renewing old friendships in the Maple City.

Mr. Taylor is a former editor of The Planet, and is now editor of the Enterprise, published in Rocky Ford, Colorado. He left Chatham in 1880 on account of his health and shortly after went west.

This is his first visit here in 22 years and he is enthusiastic over the rapid and substantial improvement Chatham has made.

Mr. Taylor also speaks in glowing terms of the west, which is undergoing wonderful development. He says it is a great country for the energetic young man.

SEA SERPENT AGAIN

Mr. Arnold, caretaker at the House of Refuge, was standing on the river bank talking to Gordon Lowes just as the boat went by. Across the river there was a log, one end buried in the sand. As the water was displaced by the boat, the free end of the log bobbed around. Gordon noticed it and asked what it was.

"Oh, that's Charlie Williams' sea serpent," said Mr. Arnold. "Well," rejoined Mr. Lowes, gazing intently, "it certainly looks very much like it."

PLEASANT TRIP

A party of Eau residents enjoyed a very pleasant day's outing at Government Park on Friday. Those who composed the party were Mr. and Mrs. Phillimore, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. R. V. Bray, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Lewis, Mrs. Falls, Mrs. W. A. Campbell, Mrs. Greening, Miss Phillimore, Miss Alice Greening, Miss Edith Tackaberry, Miss Nellie Clemen, of Windsor, Miss Mabel Wemp, Miss Belle Smith, Misses Muriel and Katharine Hennessy, Harry Rice, of Cleveland, and a number of young children. The party went over in the Baden Powell and Pice Bros. naphtha launch.

MATTER OF RESIDENCE

Just because he didn't distinguish as to whether his corn field was in Harwich or in Chatham, Harvey Wilson, a colored man, has to pay $3.25. Wilson has some corn planted on the south side of Park avenue. He claimed that Bill Needham's pigs had got in and damaged the corn, so the corn owner went and laid an information against Bill. When Wilson laid the information the Judge was particular in asking him whether it was inside or outside the corporation. The only difference it made was that in the one case Major Coogan would serve the summons and in the other the city police. The same Judge would take the information and try the case. Wilson blundered into laying the information in the city after Judge Houston had spent considerable time and taken particular pains to explain the difference between the city and the Township and where the line of division was.

This morning, when the case came up for trial, it developed that the land where the alleged injury to the corn had taken place was outside the city limits. Judge Houston dismissed the case and ordered Wilson to pay the costs, $3.25, or go to jail.

Wilson wanted a week to raise the money, but the chief wouldn't give him longer than till after dinner. Wilson said that he thought that since he lived in the city that was all that was necessary.

The following is a copy of the register at Colonel Sam. Holmes' Joy Club House on civic holiday—Colonel Sam. Holmes and wife, Capt. Charles L. Hicklin and family, Lieut. Milton Pritchard, Chief of Police John Holmes and family, Miss Brown, Mrs. S. F. Gardiner, Noble Gardner, of Chatham, and Mrs. Ross, of Hastings, England.

While Mr. and Mrs. James Mitchell were driving up the Creek Monday the horse they were driving suddenly shied, overturning the rig. Mrs. Mitchell was thrown out of the rig and one of the bones in her forearm was broken. She returned to the city, where Dr. J. W. Rutherford attended to her injuries.

James Thomas, the man charged with stealing from Wm. M. Drader, was released on suspended sentence. He had references as to character from the man's wife, Geo. R. Groom, Dr. W. W. Hay, Wallaceburg, C. S. Bonn, Chief of Police, Wallaceburg, J. B. McDougall, Indian agent, Wallaceburg, and Steinhoff & Gordon. These all stated that the man was sober and industrious. He was injured in the head about two years ago by the bursting of an emery wheel in the Detroit Spring Steel Works and had not been the same mentally since.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13.

KIPLING ON CANADA.

Nearly every time we have a hot day in Canada some esteemed contemporary furiously shoots a bolt at the devoted head of Rudyard Kipling for referring to Canada as "Our Lady of the Snows." They make no allowance for poetic license or for truth, and they forget that the poet laureate of Great Britain has many a time eulogized the Dominion of Canada, a land where he spent many very pleasant days in days gone by.

In one of his interviews published some time ago by the St. James' Gazette, London, Mr. Kipling had this to say of Canada:

"It is a great country; a country with a future. There is a fine, hard, bracing climate; the climate that puts iron and grit into men's bones, and there are all good things to be got out of the ground, if people will work for them. What it wants is more men and more money. Why don't English men think more of it as a field for English capital and enterprise? Surely there is an excellent opening, both for the investing and the emigrating Briton there. Things don't, perhaps, move quite as fast as in the States, but they are safer, and you are under the flag, you know, and among men of the same stock and breed. Send your folks to Canada, and if they can't go themselves, let them send their money—plenty of it."

THE MARKETS

Planet Office, Tuesday evening, August 12.

GRAINS

Ald. Jno. Waddell, of J. B. Stringer & Co., reports as follows:
 The receipts are small unseed and made up of old grains as yet. New oats and barley are expected to offer in fair quantity in a fortnight. Of greatest import to the oat crop is the bright weather which prevails for a time. The market of new oats will open around 30c and barley around 75c or 80c. Oats promise to be a very full crop.

The condition of growing corn varies exceedingly. There are many fields that are fine, yet there are too many that will not be a third or half a crop and others will not be cultivated. The same applies to beans, only to a greater extent. The market on old grains is easing off almost every day.

HENRY CLEWS' REPORT.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

The pupils of S. S. No. 6, Raleigh, their parents and friends, met in the school house on Monday evening and presented Mr. Rodgers with a handsome Morris chair and Mrs. Rodgers with a silver berry spoon. Miss Marie Rose read the address and the Misses May Parry and Robina Johnston made the presentations. Mr. Rodgers was taken completely by surprise, but made a suitable reply. He is leaving to take a position in one of the Lindsay schools, and was considered one of the best teachers in this county. Following is the address:

Mr. John Rodgers:—It is with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow that we learn of your intended departure from our midst; sorry to have those ties severed which have endeared you to us all by your kindly manner and the devoted and untiring interest you have taken in our school; joy to know that your new home will be in a city where all comforts and advantages will be available both to yourself and family.

If at any time we have seemed ungrateful for all your kind endeavors in our behalf, your generous help will prompt you to overlook our seeming ingratitude and think kindly of the pupils of S. S. No. 6.

Kindly accept this small gift, not for its intrinsic value, but as a token of our appreciation of your devotedness towards us during your short stay with us.

Wishing you and your family health, prosperity and happiness in your new home, and trusting you will not forget your children of Union School, Raleigh and Dover, by whom you will always be held in grateful remembrance.

Beauty is born in the blood. Beauty is more than "skin deep," it is blood deep. When the blood is tainted by disease the flesh will feel it and the skin will show it. Sallow or muddy complexion, pimples, blotches, and eruptions are only the surface signs of impure blood. Face washes, lotions, complexion powders, may palliate the evils but they cannot cure the disease. The only cure is to cleanse the blood of the poisonous matter which is the cause of the outbreak in the flesh and skin. Impure blood can be absolutely purified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its effect on flesh and skin is marked. Sores heal and disappear. The skin becomes smooth, and regains its natural color. The eyes brighten and sparkle, the whole body is radiant with the brightness and beauty of health. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant, and is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics. The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assists the action of the "Discovery" by cleansing the system of clogging matter.

No mind is so great that it cannot be influenced by a small one.

Some people have the unhappy faculty of saying the right thing at the wrong time.

HOME TO PARIS

George Goulet, an inmate of the County House of Industry, has been sent to Paris, France, where his home is. Goulet came to Dover about fifteen years ago. He worked as a farm laborer and, his eyes failing him, he became a charge on the township and was sent to the House of Refuge. After keeping the man two months and his sight getting no better, the Council decided that it was cheaper to send the man to his home in Paris. It costs about $150 a year to keep the man at the House of Refuge, and his ticket home cost $18, so the Dover Council think they did a good stroke of business.

CRICKET

This morning's play in the cricket match between Highgate and the Chatham second eleven resulted in favor of the latter by a score of 74 to 32, one innings. The bowling of Harry Gordon, a young 13-year-old boy, was wonderful for one so small. He bowled seven overs, 12 balls for only one run, getting four wickets and having six maidens overs. Young Frank Dennis also bowled well.

Herring in Tomato Sauce

We have just received a large shipment of these Herring, put up in tomato sauce, they are delicious. The tomato sauce takes away that greasiness and makes the herring as nice, if not very much nicer than canned salmon at about 1/2 the price. We sell them in large oval shaped cans at

They are prepared in the old country and we think far superior to anything we have in this country. Try them.

Wm. Mr. Mowbray will likely accept the offer. The many warm friends and admirers he has made since he has been here will be indeed sorry if he accepts, but will be greatly pleased at his advancement. The local institute will lose one of its best and most popular masters.

BREAKING THE COLT

Frank Traxler had a colt which he wanted to break in. Monday evening he induced Ophore Gore, who knows one or two things about horses, but more about machinery, to undertake the task of breaking in the colt. They hitched the young horse up about seven o'clock and about one minute later Ophore and a friend were in the ditch, the rig was stopped against a telegraph pole and the horse had disappeared up Thames street. Fortunately neither of the young men was hurt, but the horse training was postponed till a later day to give an opportunity to catch the horse. The rig was a little damaged. Ophore Gore had a narrow escape. He was pitched out head first and nearly landed on a pile of tile lying in front of John H. Oldershaw's establishment.

SYRIAN FINED

Charles Frank, a Syrian lad still in his teens, appeared before Judge Houston in the County Court yesterday charged with peddling without a license. He was arrested out in Dover township Monday by County Constable James Rankin. The lad had his grip with him and one could not but wonder how one so slight could carry such a heavy weight. The two grips must have weighed a hundred pounds or more. All these Syrian peddlers who infest the country around say they come from London, and Judge Houston says he thinks a company sends these fellows out. Frank pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs, $5.08 in all. The poor fellow had only $1.00 in all. Some of the Syrians in the city were endeavoring to raise the balance of his fine. Judge Houston had to send out for an interpreter. The interpreter pleaded for Frank, saying it was his first offence.

Mrs. W. H. Judson, Dover St., was taken suddenly ill last evening and was removed to the Public General Hospital. Her husband, in Pontiac, was sent for and arrived here to-day.

Charming Summer Resorts

Two interesting little books of the illustrated folder type have been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System, one being entitled "Songs of the Nipissing," and the other "The Eastern Coast of Lake Huron." The illustrations are very numerous, are of all sizes, and are scattered through the pages to elucidate the text and appear to the eye just as the story told in the letter press does to the mind. The prevailing note in these little works, upon which a profitable half hour may be spent by the reader, is the craving for change, and there can be no doubt that men and women who live in the stress and strain of to-day, and feel the throbs of advanced and advancing civilization, do require change—complete change for mind and body. The haunts described here minister to the intellectual as well as the physical health of the tired dwellers in cities. The physical exercises that can be obtained among the woods and waters create and promote a perfectly sound bodily condition, while the mental life that is to be found, stimulates the intellectual faculties and prompt inquiry and investigation into nature's ways as they are revealed in her flora and fauna. The maps which are in these pamphlets enable the visitor to the wilds, to realize his bearings at whatever part he may be, and the general information given enables him to economize his time and spend it to the best advantage.

FACT AND RUMOR.

The Story of One Postponed Cabinet Council in England.

Cabinet councils give rise at times to rumors that dodge fact and mislead public expectancy. One of Lord Beaconsfield's supplies a case in point.

Queen Victoria, so runs the tale, was anxious about the state of wind and wave in the mid-Atlantic, which the Princess Louise happened then to be crossing. A lord in waiting knew a professor who was a weather diviner, and to him he went with a message from her majesty, who sent also a message to Lord Beaconsfield. The lord in waiting was sent to a theatrical supper—it was Sunday night—in search of the professor. Him he found in this lively company and was himself constrained to listen to the game of words that was passing round. Which would they choose if they had to march, Gladstone or Disraeli? All said "Disraeli" except one, and she said "Gladstone, so that I might elope with Disraeli and break his heart."

The lord in waiting, much diverted, went forth and, finding Disraeli in rather low spirits, told him this tale as an instance of his great popularity with all classes of the queen's subjects. The whimsicality of the thing was congenial to Disraeli, who was kept waiting next day at a cabinet council for the arrival of an important colleague. To pass the time he told the assembled ministers the story of the theatrical supper. Lord Cairns (abstinent omen), hearing, did not smile, and his solemnity put out of countenance the prime minister, who at once made the nonarrival of the colleague an excuse for postponing the council for a couple of hours. The "balance of power" was then unstable, and that afternoon the papers had headlines: "War Imminent. A Second Cabinet Council Summoned." For once the ladies of the stage made history and staggered the Stock Exchange.

TOWN HAD OFFSETS.

So His Claim For Damages Brought In Only $110.34.

"I had been knocking about a Kansas town in the evening," said a drummer with a limp, "and in heading for my hotel I walked plump into an open sewer which had no red light of warning."

"I had a bad fall and broke my hip, and I wasn't yet out of the sewer when I made up my mind to sue for $20,000 damages. I was taken to the hospital, and next day the city attorney called on me to know what I was going to do."

"I am going to sue the town, of course," I replied.

"But what for?" he asked.

"For personal damages. There should have been a railing or a light, but there was neither, and my injury lay me up for weeks."

"But don't you know what you escaped by falling into the sewer?" he asked.

"No."

"Then let me tell you that the roof of the hotel fell in last night and killed three men, and if you had been in your bed you would have been crushed to pulp. You really owe this town something instead of talking about damages."

"When able to get out," continued the drummer, "I found that public opinion was against me and the people ready to stand a suit, and by advice of a lawyer I settled the case for $125."

The maps which are in these pamphlets enable the visitor to the wilds, to realize his bearings at whatever part he may be, and the general information given enables him to economize his time and spend it to the best advantage.

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

The groom, with an impressive face, was still holding the door of the brougham open. "Have you made up your mind?" enquired the woman. "This is the last time of asking."

"I'll go with you wherever it may be."
"Very good. Come along, then."
She was nearer the door than I, and stepped out first. I followed. She gave no directions to the groom or coachman, but apparently they understood what was expected of them, for we walked away without looking back at the brougham. We passed the window of the first-class booking office, and involuntarily I paused, thinking that she would buy a ticket for me. But she did not stop.

"All that is arranged," she said, carelessly. I knew then that she must have counted upon my consent, and the conviction of this fact came with a little cold thrill.
A train was already in at No. 1 platform. I saw that it was announced to run to Bournemouth, but obstinately determined to ask no questions, for the present, at all events, and no reference was made to our destination. We got into a first-class carriage, which my companion asked the guard to reserve for us alone, if possible; and some time passed from her hand to his. She then ordered two dinner baskets, fruit, and a bottle of champagne.

Fifteen minutes later we were steaming out of the station, with the door of our compartment locked against intruders.
"You must be very hungry," said the woman in black, raising the covers of the two baskets, from which arose an appetizing aroma.

"No, thank you. I really don't care for anything," I replied.
But even as I spoke I repented, for I could not tell what ordeal lay before me; and after all, it seemed foolish, even school-girlish, to starve myself for a sentimental scruple. It did not stand to reason that a woman of the strange type should take the trouble to put a paragraph into the newspapers, keep an appointment, and go out of town entirely for unselfish reasons; therefore I might reflect that, even if she meant fairly by me, she had her own purpose to serve, and I need not consider myself deeply indebted to her either for my railway fare or the food she chose to offer. If it were true that I might hope to come into money, I could pay her back for anything that she had expended.

"Nonsense," she ejaculated. "Of course you will eat your dinner. I have the right, in a way, to exact obedience from you, for not only am I much more than twice your age, but I have narrowly escaped being a relative, or, at least, a connection of yours."

I was not pleased to hear this, yet I allowed myself to be persuaded in the matter of dinner, which was to fortify me against unknown trials to come.
"Now I will show you how excellent my great unknown trials to come."

"Yes, I know," remarked my companion, as if in reply to a question. "It is like one you have seen Lady Cope wear. But it is not the same. I am not a thief. It is now a quarter to nine. A little more than an hour more and we shall have reached the end of our journey. I am taking you. On that calculation I should say that, in twice the time, you will have learnt everything in my power to tell you—among others, how I know some of the things which you fondly believed were secrets. Meanwhile, it is no use to catechize me, for I shall only be obliged to put you off, as I have dinner. Now I am going to finish my dinner."

I ate little and drank less. Still, I felt somewhat stronger and more rested when I replaced the dinner-basket on the opposite seat. I had had an ultimatum from the woman in black, and rather sullenly I rested my elbow on the narrow window-sill, turning my face away and looking out into the gathering darkness. At this time I had been comparatively happy and at peace, for I had had several hours with Mr. Bourke, and was looking forward, not only to the next day, but to the day to come. I had been proud that I was to be his "secretary." I had thought with delight of the rooms which Mrs. Jennett had engaged for me, and going off by night with the woman who had lured my adopted mother to her death, I would not have believed the prophecy.

For a long time the woman in black let me sit in silence, then she spoke out abruptly. "You are doing what I advised you not to do! You are thinking of John Bourke again."

What possessed me I know not; but a sudden desire gripped my heart, and I turned on her. "I was thinking of something which you and he have in common."

"Indeed? What is that?" she enquired, unsuspiciously.

"A scar on the arm, shaped like a heart."

I could not tell whether I should succeed in taking this extraordinary creature by surprise or not. She knew so much, she seemed to have such an uncanny gift of divining things which she could not actually know, that when I had taken the plunge, I waited eagerly, even fearfully, for the result. I was prepared for signs of anger, or I was prepared for sneering, was prepared for the most concerted evidences of astonishment. But I was not prepared for what I saw.

She bounded up from the seat, as if she had been struck by electricity, and with one sweep of her hand wrenched off the veil which had still hidden the upper part of her face. I heard the lace tear at its fastenings, but she did not appear to be dusky-pale, and the eyes shone like green beryl. Her bosom rose and fell, while her breath came through closed lips and shivering nostrils.

"It is not true!" she hissed at last. "It is true," I answered.

"Heaven!" she whispered, beneath her breath. And something else she said. I was not sure of all the words. But one I heard distinctly. It was "judgment."

Although the medicine business should, above all, be carried on with the utmost conscientiousness and sense of responsibility, the unfortunate fact is that in no other is there so much humbug and deception. The anxieties of the sick and their relatives are traded upon in the most shameful manner; impossible cures are promised; many preparations are also utterly worthless, and some are positively dangerous to health. As a consequence, all proprietary remedies are regarded with suspicion by many people, and the good suffer for the bad.

For these reasons we announce that our proprietors are the principal shareholders in CHAPTER XIX. The House of Mystery.

Unless this woman were one of the greatest actresses living she had not known of the mark on John Bourke's arm!

Some impulse, which had been like a power outside myself, had forced me to speak the words which had so shaken her to the soul. I did not know whether I had been wise or foolish; but I would not stop there, having gone so far.

"It is strange, since you seem to know so much about Mr. Bourke, that you didn't know more," I ventured, half afraid of the effect my daring might produce. But, though the big pale eyes turned to my face, they looked through me unseeing. And in their tragic light my speech seemed inadequate as the thin piping of a reed after the deep notes of a church organ.

For the first time the woman in black was genuine and human. But her emotion either passed or was controlled by an overwhelming strength of will. Her eyes turned to my face, they looked through me unseeing. And in their tragic light my speech seemed inadequate as the thin piping of a reed after the deep notes of a church organ.

The woman in black was evidently in no mood for answering questions, and I made up my mind to trust to my own observation when we should leave the train. But I had not taken her aliveness and energy into calculation. We had, of course, no luggage. My companion got out first, hastily helped me down—though I did not want help—and, slipping her arm through mine, hurried me across the narrow platform at such a rate of speed that I could not see the name of the station anywhere.

Few passengers save ourselves left the train. The woman in black gave our tickets into the outstretched hand of the sleepy collector; we ascended a flight of stone steps, walked along a covered way, and came through a doorway out into a country road, where only one carriage waited. A groom touched his hat, opened the door of an old-fashioned vehicle, and by two horses, and the woman in black indicated by a gesture that I was to get in before her.

"I can stop and argue; ask where we are and go," I said. "But even if I refuse at first to stir a step until she has explained, somehow or other it will end in one way. She knows that I am dying to have her secret, and she knows how to play upon my curiosity and my will. Perhaps she means to murder me at the end of the drive; but at worst she cannot harm me as great a deal of trouble. So I might as well put a bold face on the matter."

He Was "In the Soup."

"Mon ami," said the Marquis de Croisille the other day, "the hotel keeper's life is a very hard one. If he does not look to the least little detail, the whole thing goes—what do you call it? Ah, yes, on the blink."

"Here is example of what I say. When I had the Legerot, there was once a dinner there at which Chauncey Depew was a guest. I told the chef to put in the menu some dish in honor of him, and I forgot to look at the menu before it went to the printer."

"What do you think that imbecile of a chef had done? There?"
And the marquis produced an old menu card on which among the "soups" appeared the following:
"Purée de marrons à la Depew."

Gently Sarcastic.

The following church notice was recently exhibited: "The service on Sunday morning is at 11 a. m. The supposition that it is ten minutes later is a mistake. Young men are not excluded from the week night service." The seats in the front portion of the church have been carefully examined. They are quite sound and may be trusted not to give way. It is quite legitimate to join in the singing. The object of the choir is to encourage, not discourage, the congregation.—London Answers.

PILGRIM JOE'S LUCK

HE REACHES RED HOT AND MAKES THINGS LIVELY.

After Doing a Very Profitable Business in Tintypes the Pilgrim Accepts a Challenge and Wins a Big Pot of Money.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

ON the outskirts of the thriving and festive town of Red Hot I was met by the mayor on horseback, and as he bid me welcome he added:

"He who hath integrity hath all the world."

"Truth may be crushed to earth occasionally," says I, "but you can't keep her on the grass long."

"Virtue is a beacon fire set on a high hill," says he.

"And the man without guile sleepeth like a babe and fears no evil," says I.

Then he slaps me on the back and calls me an old cuss, and we sought out the nearest place of exhilaration and exhilarated on sarsaparilla. When it became known to the citizens of Red Hot that I was taking tintypes at 10 cents a take, they sat down before me in dozens and scores, and I had a rush of business for three days. Among the last to appear was a woman who was striving to forget that her husband was a miser.

"I was met by the mayor on horseback," had been assisted to die four weeks previously by a band of enterprising citizens. He was found with the goods on him—that is, he was still riding the stolen horse. She was a woman with a double chin, and her weight was 200 pounds. As she sat for her tintype her eyes rolled, her bosom heaved, and she sighed with an energy that humped up her shoulders. I tried to dodge it, but I was too late.

"Hast thou no one to love thee?" she liquorily inquired as she raised her azure orbs to mine. "No," I do not wish to be loved. Let me have the respect of the world for my integrity, and I am content."

"To such a man as thee I could cling as the tender vine clings to the sturdy oak."

"I am not in the sturdy oak business. My mission is to comfort the sorrowful, cheer the discouraged and lift up the fallen. As a sort of side issue I run a tintype outfit, keep a lightning rod and enter my old boss in half mile races."

"But your benign countenance and fatherly tenderness have captured my heart," she insists. And she rises up and throws herself into my arms and bids me take her and be happy.

I dodged, and she fell to earth and rolled over, and when she arose she was a woman scorned. Her love for me had fled away, and my venerable whiskers had been in her grasp and I not spread my wings and soared away. She demanded the sum of $2 for her blighted affections, and rather than have her tip over my wagon and characterize me as a man with a heart of stone I paid it, and she retired with the light of triumph in her eyes. I was saying to myself that a clear conscience needed no lantern on a dark night when a sinful looking critter with the lust of avarice on his countenance came along and looked at my dog and said:

"I have a canine myself, and occasionally, I turn him loose," I says, "but I am allus ready to back up his jousness with a ten dollar bill."

"I have long looked for thee. I will also back the jousness of my canine, and we will bring the two together and let them disport. On second thought let's say $20."

"I seek not riches," says I as I turns my head away, "but humility must be fed and clothed as well as luxury. I'll therefore raise the ante and call it an even $25."

At which the man with the sinul countenance was greatly rejoiced and went away to prepare for business. That afternoon on the public square and in the presence of an interested populace the canine were brought together and allowed to disport. The humble and peaceful demeanor of my dog while waiting for the conflict to begin caused many eminent citizens to bet ag'in him to the extent of $5, and it is needless to remark that I calmly and without undue ostentation lived their money. The disport lasted about a quarter of an hour, and there was no uncertainty about the other dog being licked. His ambition was checked and his pride laid low, and when I counted up I found myself $85 ahead of the game. Thus doth integrity reward itself and virtue stand forth triumphant. I was feeling that balminess of feelin' that allus sets in after a man has come out on top and makin' my preparations to leave Red Hot and journey toward Paradise Valley, when there came another man to detain me. At first I took him for a fellow pilgrim with a mission akin to my own. In his face there was no guile, and in his long whiskers there was a venerableness that made me bow down in respect.

"He who hath not integrity hath nothing," says the old man as he sits down beside me.

"And he who hath humility hath a heap," says I in my modest way.

"A little sorrow sometimes given to man that he may be strengthened," says he as he winks at the hind wheels of my wagon.

"And he who hath never mourned cannot fully rejoice," says I as I purtends to wipe a tear from my eye.

Our emotions kept us silent for a minute or two, and then the venerable birdseyin' old critter turns on me and says:

"Pilgrim, is that old boss of yours on the amble?"

"He can do a purty fair amble for half a mile with me on his back."

"For how much cash?"

"Anywhere from $10 to $50."

"I, too, have a boss," he sighs, "and he is on the amble. While he ambles for money, the cash is used to make the world better."

"'Tis so in my case," I says, "and let us hasten to the struggle. While we dally here the wider sorrows and the orphan wanders wailin'."

Ag'in the populace of Red Hot turned out in their enthusiasm, and ag'in there was a number of those who arrived in judgment when they sized my old boss up for a stationary engine. It was only when I had climbed up on his back and we had got the word to go that he stretched out a pair of hind legs which seemed to be "leven feet long and tore up the sile like a plow run by steam. I jumped him seventeen feet at every yell, and the dun colored boss of him who would have robbed me was left ten rods behind at the wire. I gathered in my stakes, feelin' that honesty was like a full house in a game of poker, and when the venerable old man would have made the people believe that I had fastened stilts to the legs of my boss he found no one to sorrow with him. As the setting sun got ready to set and the lark was callin' to his mate I climbed on to my wagon and pursued my way. There was boodle in my pockets and a calm heart, and while the boss fled took a last bite and the dew descended to moisten my whiskers I hummed softly to myself and realized that it was good to be there.

CHALLENGE

The Grocery Clerks challenge the Aggressive nine of Frank Ryall to a game of baseball for any old date. It is a fact to note that to be on the Aggressive nine you do not have to have ball-playing ability.

SAME OLD "RUBE"

"Rube" Waddell was at his old tricks again Monday. He is pitching now for the Philadelphia Athletics against the Detroit team and played against Detroit Monday. Detroit had Seiver, the old Canadian Leaguer, in the box. A few extracts from an account of the game are as follows:—

Not content with forming the centre of the Philadelphia line of defense the Rube went out and won his own game with the stick. Twice he had safely connected with the ball when such hitters as Lave Cross, Saybolt and the young star Murphy had been unable to do so all through the game, and on his last appearance at bat, in the thirteenth inning he lifted the ball with tremendous power far into left field for a three-base hit, which followed by Davis' single, gave the only score of the game.

The end of the contest came like a thunderclap. Shreck had been an easy out to Casey and Waddell was at bat. But one ball had been pitched to the south paw and the crowd settled down to see if Seiver could strike him out again. The Rube met the next one with a resounding crack. Dick Harley, far out in left, turned his back and started to make tracks toward the score board. It was impossible for any fielder to have reached the ball on the fly, but the crowd had confidence in Dick, who had been fielding a wonder-ful game pulling down no less than five—that looked good for two and three bases. It was too much for human skill and judgment, however, and the ball came down with Harley ten feet away.

It rolled to the score board, Dick made a quick throw to Elbertfeld who had to run out to relay it in, and the "Kid" fired to Casey, just as Waddell started to strike for the bag. It was a close decision but the tall pitcher was safe.

"There it is," yelled Rube, after he had been vainly trying to get the third strike on Seiver in the sixth inning. There it was.

All Rube asked of Shreck was for the latter to squeeze the ball. He countermanded most of the catcher's signals and ran the game to suit himself.

Rube was in as great form as ever as a comedian. He welcomed Gleason when the latter struck out with a swinging handshake, and addressed the bleachers several times from the box, waving his hand like a dizzy sourette.

BROWN'S IN TOWN

The offering at the Grand on Friday night will be the latest fare, "Brown's in Town." The play is said to be very funny, replete with the newest songs and humorous complications. It is the story of a young man of twenty-three, secretly married, who seeks peace and quiet in the country immediately after his marriage to keep the affair from the ears of his father, who does not favor matrimony until his son reaches the age of twenty-five. He does not get the peace he seeks because of the arrival of his relations and friends, who complicate the situation to such an extent that it seems almost impossible to ever straighten it out. The names of the company roster show very plainly to those acquainted with the marked value of the actors and actresses that the company will be one of the most expensive seen in comedy in recent years.

It includes Chas. Horn, Geo. Welch, Perry Alexander, Frank Millard, Hazell Lowry, Fannie Midgley, Edna Hicks, Elizabeth Lindley Whipples, Emanuel Ward and others. The advance sale opens Thursday morning at the Central Drug Store.

From crown to toe—everything a civilized man wears is here except shoes.

Most garments sold in the store are made in our own factory. Well made they must be, or the factory would not have grown so steadily from a small beginning—would not be able to pay the best wages, and provide spacious, airy workrooms for its employees—but these things go with good work as naturally as growth goes with sunshine.

Other lines of garments and furnishings we buy, but our own ideas—and yours—are often worked into them. When you think of it, it takes about as much technical knowledge to buy right as to make the article yourself.

Between making and buying this store has gathered for you the finest all-round collection of summer wear that Chatham men have ever been invited to choose from. If a thing is seasonable, sensible and stylish we're showing it. Test us.
