Impressive and Helpful Service at the Sanctuary of the Latter Day Saints.

Earnest and Elequent Address of Elder Leverton Warm Welcome Extended to the Soldiers.

soldiers of the 24th Kent Reg: ment, headed by the Bugle Band, al tended divine worship at the Latter Day Saints' Church yesterday and listened to one of the best addresses that they have yet heard. As Col. J. B. Renkin remarked to his men on their return to the drill shed, it was one of the most refreshing sermons that the regiment has yet heard.

There was a good turn-out of officers and men in every company excep B company, In that division there was only one officer out, Lieut. O. L Lewis He was heard to remark that he could do the commanding all right if he could only find his command. The weather was favorable yesterday yesterday and the men and officers looked smart in their great coats and forage caps.

The members of the regiment filled the body of the modest and neat litle chapel of the Latter Day Saints Elder Lamont presided and Elder Long and Elder Green offered up prayers.

Mr. Lamont welcomed the soldiers and said that he had a warm spot in his heart for the red coats, as he had belonged to the 26th Battalion and had camped on Carlington had belong and had camped on Heights.

Elder Leverton, District Representative, preached the sermon and delivered a magnificent address from the cred a magnificent address from the

THE EMERALD IS LOST.

Wreckage Washed Ashore Two Miles East of Gull Light.

Toronto, Nov. 30. - There seems to be scarcely any doubt that lost, with Captain McMaster and all on board. It was learned on Saturday that some wreckage had been discovered on the shore about two miles east of. Gull Light, and about two miles from Cobourg. In consequence of the report, Captain John Willfams, a friend of the family, and Messrs. Marshall Woodcock, George Carter and W. W. Carter, brothers-in-law, left yesterday to investigate. The latter two returned last evening with the pieces which had been found, namely, the cornerpost of a cabin, part of the side of the cabin and a piece of tongue-and-grooved board, which apparently had been used for a cupboard. The paint which remained corresponded exactly to that of the cabin of the Emerald, but the most convincing proof was the height of the cornerpost.

The crew of the Emerald consisted of eight persons, as follows:—Captain McMaster; Walter McMaster, his twenty-two-year-old son, a sailor; Thomas Slight, Port Hope, mate; John Seldrick and J. Bowerman, sailors, of South Bay, near Picton; A. Wright of St. Catharines, and a sailor from Ogdensburg, whose name is unknown, and the cook, a woman, of Gull Light, and about two miles

KILLED A TRAINMAN.

Boy Murderer Says He Started in Canada.

Chicago, Nov. 30 -Previous to his career as a hold-up man and murderer in Chicago, Peter Neidermeier, one o the boy bandits, was already a murder-er, according to a story he gold in the Harrison Spreet Police Station on Friday. A cording to his story, his first victim was a trainman in Canada. To the police officers and railroad detec-victim was a trainman in Canada. To the police officers and tailroad detectives who were questioning him he related the circumstances as follows:—

"In 1805 I was beating my way west on a freight train loaded with coal bound 'from Portage, Ont. When viding on too of the train I was ordered to get off by a man whom they called 'Captain,' but whose name I never learned. I heard afterwards he was a railroad detective. He ordered me from the train, and when I refused to go off he threw tool at me. I threw back at him, and one of the lumps struck him on the head. Then he drew a revolver and fired twice at me. Bott times he missed me, and then I drew my revolver. I fired six shots, and three of them hit him. I shot him, in the head, in the abdomen and in the side. He ran a few feet, and fell dead on top of the car. I searched him and found no money. Later the train crew came along, and I heard they found so in his pockets. I was sore when learned what I had missed. I was only a boy then, but I did not intend to be rain over by any officer, and when he tried to make me get off the train I decided it would be my life or his, After shooting him I got off the train and went from there, to Winnipeg, and heard no more about the case."

Winnipeg, Nov. 20—(Special).—None of the police or railway officials here or at Rat Portage know anything of the story told by one of the Chicago boy bandits, that he had in 1805 killed a man while riding on a freight train between Winnipeg and Rat Portage.

London, Ont., Nov. 30 .- Mr. John M. McEvoy, barrister, of this city, who was one of the counsel of the Govern ment in the Gamey investigation, is the plaintiff in three libel suits for damages arising out of the famous case, and the amount claimed in each instance is $10,000. The London Free Fress Printing Company is named as defendant in one of the actions, notice of which has been served. It is alleged that The Free Frees of a recent date contained a telegraphic report throwing suspicion on Mr. McEvoy in comnection with the disappearance of the leaves of the Crossin cash book at the time of the investigation.

R. R. Gamey, M. P. P., is the defendant in another of the cases, and Alex. Wright, the organizer for the Conservative party in the Province, is the defendant in the third. The actions against these parties are based on statements made by them implicating Mr. McEvoy in the mutilation of the cash book. plaintiff in three libel suits for damages

A LIFE FOR FIVE CENTS.

Restaurant Keeper in Chicago Killed a Man.

Chicago, Nov. 30. - Because he was short five cents in settling for his breakfast, Marcus Sheehan, a guard on the South Side Elevated goad, was shot and killed yesterday by James Berganus, proprietor of a State street restaurant. Having but fifteen cents in his pockets, Sheehan ordered a meal which he thought called for that amount of money. When he came to pay for the meal, however, he was told by Berganus that he owed 20 cents.

That is all the money I have," said Sheeland." "I'll give the other nickel this afternoon." Sheehan." "I'll give the other nickel this afternoon."
"You'll pay now, or, you will never leave this house," said Berganus.
Sheehan laughed and turned toward the door, but before he could reach it Berganus drew a revolver and without a word of warning fired. Sheehan was shot in the head and killed.

Throwing Sheehan's body out upon the sidewalk, Berganus locked up the place and fled. He is still at large.

NEW ARMORY

Col. J. B. Rankin, K. C., received instructions from Colonel Peters today to have the new armory erected on the point of the Park near where the cannon is. The site of the new drill shed has been speculated upon considerably for some time, and now that the location of the new armory has been definitely fixed, the minds of everybody will be set at rest, except possibly the bowlers. The drill hall will interfere with their lawn. This is a hardship to the bowlers, because they have spent so much time and money on their lawn and have it in the best of condition. The spot selected, however, is a very appropriate one and the building will make a marked improvement to the make a marked improvement to the

NO B ESSINGS IN FREE TRADE

The Duke of Devonshire presents very old argument in reply to Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's plan for an Imperial preferential trade policy, com-ments the Toronto World. He warns the workingman to beware of a policy which will cause an increase in the price of bread. This warning the Duke of Devonshire advances with a positiveness that seems to admit of no questioning. 'A duty on wheat he reasons will inevitably lead to an increase in the price of bread.

This positiveness is not supported by Britain's recent experience with a tax on corn. The tax on corn did not increase by a fraction of a farthing the price of the loaf. Some free traders explain this circumstance with the fact that the tax did not remain is force long enough to being about the increase in the price of the loaf which in time would have followed. There is the other important fact that the wag is of the British workingman would be increased under a policy of protection. If he were obliged to spend more to live he would likewise earn more. This is the history of high tariff nations. Mr. Chamberlain's enemies have not much to show for the long test of the virtues of free trade. The hard fact remains that after years of trial of the policy of free trade the British workingman has a margin of only a few cents a week over the bare cost of living. The loss of those few cents, the free trader argues, would bring the British work—

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

In securing the support to surround Mr. Elmer Buffham in his production of Shakespeare's beautiful comedy, "The Merchant of Venice," Messrs. Fletcher and Stronach have looked the theatrical world over for the right artist in the right place. One of the leading members of "The Merchant of Venice" company will be Mr. Charles Pierson, the veteran actor who will be remembered by old time attendants of the theatre. Mr. Pierson is one of the few surviving members of the old school of legitimate actors, having been a prominent member of the companies of such artists as Edwin Forrest, Rossi, Edwin Booth, Laura Keene, etc. Time has dealt most kindly with this veteran of the stage, and he retains all the spirit and life of the golden age of the drama. His unctuous comedy and pleasing personality will be one of the features when "The Merchant of Venice" is presented in our city on the evening of Thursday, Dec. 3.

A REMINISCENCE OF SOUTH AFRICA

On Friday there arrived in Chatham, addressed to Victor A. Skirving, an interesting souvenir of the South African war. The citizens of price of bread did not rise in obedicence to the tax on wheat.

If the issue between Mr. Chamberlain and his enemies were a purely theoretidal one there would be little difficulty in pronouncing upon it. The theoretical proposition advanced by the advocates of free trade?

Mr. Chamberlain's figures, which show that the workingman has more to gain from a policy of preferential trade than from a policy of free trade, have not yet been shown to be false. "Yes, yes, I know that. But how am I to transfer the note E flat from the organ to my voice?"

This was a question no choir-lead-

"With exquisite falsetto now and then." But his own voice, in the reading But his own voice, in the reading of majestic passages, was beautiful and, when he launched into invective against schoolboy misdemeanors, very dramatic. One day he took some friends on a "surprise" visit to one of the college houses, fully expecting to find his good boys hard at work. But alas! they were enjoying a "brew," an impromptu meal of corce and rosst polatoes. The next oa and roast potatoes. The next day in class the dean began, in a low and mournful voice, to narrate the story of his disillusion.

"I confidently expected to be able to point with pride to my sixthform boys absorbed and immersed in a study of some Attic masterpiece, English Governing Capacity. Public Opinion republishes from The London Times the following summary of a review of a recent blue book dealing with Indian affairs: The de-tails of ten years of Anglo-Indian administration are of a character which no Englishman can read without pride in the governing capacity of his race, or without satisfaction in the thought that this capacity has been continually exerted in prompting the happiness of subject peoples, in securing to them at once the blessings of liberty and of order, in promoting their industry and material prosperity, and in educating them to take a constantly increasing part in the management of their own municipal affairs. The increase of popula-tion has indeed been seriously check-ed, but the extension of irrigation has added enormous tracts of land to has added enormous tracts of land to those previously under cultivation, and, especially when taken in conjuction with the extension of railways, affords the best possible security against famines as consequences of dry seasons in future. The difficulties which were brought about by the steady depreciation of the rupee have been successfully encountered, and the adoption of a new monetary system has enabled the Government to conduct its financial transactions withhas enabled the Government to conduct its financial transactions without uncertainty and without loss, and to bear the heavy expenditure incidental to famine charges and to little wars. The internal organization of the native or protected States has in the meantime been improved, and there have been many indications of the increasing degree in cations of the increasing degree in which the native rulers and the na-tive nobility have come to regard themselves as members of the great themselves as members of the great British community, and as being in-terested, equally with ourselves, in all that contributes to its greatness. The English as conquerors and rul-ers of India have now outlived the time at which they could be looked upon as aliens, and may fairly claim to be regarded as the natural repre-sentatives of the great dynasty whose place they have taken.

Thackeray's Irony. Justin McCarthy says that Thackeray often created quite erroneous impressions of himself by indulging in irony in the presence of people who were incapable of understanding who were incapable of understanding it. One curious instance which he gives is this: "Thackeray had been dining at the Garrick, and was talk-ing in the smoking-room after dining in the smoking-room after dinner with various club acquaintances.
One of them happening to have left his cigar case at home, Thackeray, though disliking the man, who was a notorious tuft-hunter, good-naturedly offered him one of his cigars. The man accepted the cigar, but, not finding it to his liking, had the bad taste to say to Thackeray, 'I say, Thackeray, you won't mind my saying I don't think much of this cigar.' Thackeray, no doubt irritated at the man's ungraciousness, and bearing in mind his tuft-hunting predilections, quietly responded, 'You ought to, my good fellow, for it was given me by a lord,' Instead, however, of detecting the irony, the dolt immediately attributed the remark to snobbishness on Thackeray's part, and to the end of his days went about declaring that Thackeray had boasted that he had been given a cigar by a lord!' ner with various club acquaintances

A souvenir of an unpleasant experience the late Lord Salisbury once had is preserved in a Cabinet at Hatfield House. It is an ugly looking stone, of over a pound in weight, with which a window of a carriage containing His Lordship and his two daughters was smashed at Dumfries, on the evening of Oct. 21, 1884. The Marquis had delivered the last of a series of political speeches in Scotland, and there was a riot in the streets at the close of the meeting. The occupants of the carriage were fortunately unharmed, and Salisbury's daughters secured the missile and took it with them to Hatfield, to show to the marchioness, A card tied to the stone bears its history in the handwriting of Lady Salisbury. THE WORD MELODRAMA

It Has Drifted From Its Derivation and Original Significance.

Nowadays "melodrama" is in general use as denoting a purely sensational play, with an all but impossible hero, heroine and villain among the charac ters represented. Formerly the word kept more closely in its signification to actual derivation. "Melodrama" is com-pounded of the Greek words melos, a song, and drama, an action, a play and was applied to two sorts of per formances when it first came into use.

It signified a play, generally of the romantic school, in which the dialogue was frequently relieved by music sometimes of an incidental and some times of a purely dramatic character. On the strength of his "Pygmalion" J. J. Rousseau is credited with the invention of this style. Some of the so called English operas of the older sch as the once famous "Beggar's Opera" and the once popular "No Song, Ne Supper," are in reality true melo-

In the second place "melodrama" was applied to a peculiar kind of theatrical composition in which the actor recited his part in an ordinary speaking voice the orchestra played a m less elaborate accompaniment appro priate to the situation and calculated to bring its salient features into the highest possible relief. The merit of the invention of this description o melodrama belongs to George Benda who used it with striking effect in his "Ariadhe auf Naxos," produced at Gotha in 1774.-London Globe.

The Ordeals of a Doctor. It is often claimed by outsiders that having a profession dulls a woman's sympathies, but I cannot believe that this is true in the practice of medicine, where one side of the work is so immeasurably sad. I have seen a baby that came after fifteen years of waiting and hoping and was rejoiced over daily and hourly for a wonderful year suddenly struck down and gasp its little life out in a day with pneumonia. These are the times when it hurts to be a doctor, to find that all the knowledge that you possess, all the skill at your command, is as so much chaff before the wind. To have a woman cling to you, begging you to save her baby, is an ordeal to which no human bady, is an ordeal to which no human being can grow callous. You must feel as though the brand of Cain were upon you when, with all your efforts, you cannot save the little life. Not years nor experience can lighten hours such as these.—Everybody's Magazine.

Storms of Old England. In the year 944 in London alone 1,500 houses were blown down; in October, 1091, a great number of churches and 500 houses were destroyed; in 1235 it thundered for fifteen days consecutivethundered for fifteen days consecutively. The dreadful night during which Cromwell's spirit passed has formed a theme for poet and partisan. And the great storm that "o'er pale Britannia passed" in November, 1703, the most terrible in British annals, also has its enduring record in poetry. It did damage in London to the amount of £2,000,000; over 8,000 people were drowned in floods in various parts of the country; twelve men-of-war, with the country; twelve men-of-war, with over 1,800 men on board, went down in sight of land, and the Eddystone lighthouse, along with Winstanley, its inventor, was swept away.

CHANGING ONE'S NAME. The Method Is a Rather Costly One

Many people change their names without asking permission from any without asking permission from any one or paying any fees whatever. This is certainly the simplest way of getting rid of a name you do not appreciate, but it is apt to prove expensive. For instance, such a course is strictly illegal, and the government could step in at any time and demand the payment of a heavy fine; and, further more, if the individual who changed his name without consulting anybody happened to come in for a large sum of money unexpectedly the authorities of money unexpectedly the authorities would decline to recognize his claim if he had failed to pay the fees due to the heralds' college for assuming name not given in baptism.

There are two ways of changing your name, and they are both rather costly. One method is to have a private act of parliament passed for your benefit. This course is generally followed only by peers and people to whom money is no object, for it costs £750. This nearly all goes in fees to minor officials for bringing your case before the legislature, inasmuch as the actual passing of the bill costs practically nothing. And the only advantage you will gain from this expensive way of going to work is that inquiries will not be made into your past history, which by the other alternative are un avoidable. The usual method adopted for legally changing the name is somewhat te dious, if less costly, and you must have very substantial reasons for so doing or your claim will not be allowed. If, for instance, you inherit property which makes it conditional that you change your name you can do so on payment of about £50 in fees.

In the first place you must com-municate with the home secretary, who, if he considers your claim valid, will refer you to the heralds' college and the king of arms. These officials will make full inquiries into your history and satisfy themselves beyond question that your reason for wishing to make the change is in every way legitimate. This done, they will again communicate with the home secretary. who will lay your claim before the king, for he alone has power to auorize the change being made. Eventually, after some months of waiting, you will be informed by the heralds' college that his majesty has approved of your claim and the change of name is published in a remote corner of the London Gazette.

Finally it is worthy of mention that no one can hold a public appointment under government who has changed his name without the consent of the king, however brilliant may have been his services to the country. The reason for this is rather curious. The name given you at your baptism is in theory ratified by the sovereign as head of the your own responsibility you are deliberately breaking a law of the land:—Londen Tit-Bits.

Startled the Chaplain. An English clergyman tells many quaint stories of his experiences as a prison chaplain. One of these relates how he took a reformed burglar out for a drive in the country after an forced seclusion in one of his majesty's prisons. The burglar appeared to enjoy himself immensely, but when they passed a pretty house standing back from the road and bearing evidence of the taste and wealth of the owner the burglar fairly gloated over it and, turning to the canon, exclaim "What a lovely little crib that would be to crack, sir, wouldn't it?"

more evidence of the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing in New Brunswick. Mr. Harris makes, the following statement for publication:

"I suffered for two years and a half from Kidney Troubles, being unable to attend to my work the greater part of the time. I tried many medicines without getting any benefit, but actually grew worse.

"I took three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy for Kidney trouble." Bright's Disease is the most advanced stage of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that will cure it. But it is wiser and safer to guard against Bright's Disease by using Dodd's Kidney Pills when your Kidneys give the first symptoms of distress—pain in the back or slight urinary disorder.

PRINCIPAL OF UPPER CANADA COL-LEGE ON SCHOOL TRAINING.

Impressions After a Year's Teaching the Canadian "Tom Brown"-Utility and Culture-The Classics-Religious Side of School Life-Where Canada Is

Principal Auden's outlook upon education in Canada combines the fresh viewpoint of the traveler with that of the actual citizen. He came here a stranger, has already gone from coast to coast, has assumed the leadership of Canada's chief Public School, and spent the best part of one year in practical experience with Canadian youth, says The Toronto

A pedagogue is commonly said to be recognize at sight. Principal Auden would pass quite as readily for an Anglican Canon or a man of letters. His habitual cast is gravity—not of the scowling, trudite sort that inspired the portrayal of Goldsmith's schoolmaster, but the sedate poise that marks a man conscious of a great life-work. Naturally, he is chiek in this country of a class be-coming all too rare in these days of feminine pedagogy in Public Schools. His Point of View.

He is not an orator. Neither is he an experimental faddist. He stands as an academic descendent of Arnold of Rugby. His point of view is that of the cultured Englishman; his at-mosphere that of the English Public School after the manner of Eton, Winchester and Rugby. Such schools existed in England when Upper Can-ada College was the site of an In-dian camp. Less than a century has seen the development of an educa-tional system in this country em-bodying many of the best traditions of England, "Tom Brown" is also a Canadian. And to the man whose life-work is to educate the Canadian Tom Brown, educational problems in this young land are replete with original interest.

Residential vs. Day Schools. AN HOUR IN THE WOODS.

Principal Auden believes that Canada needs more residential schools The absorption of parents in com mercial pursuits naturally minimizes culture in the home. Doys are left largely to their own devices, to iscuous contact with lads not of their own age, and to the perilous influences of the street. This begets mannishness and loud manners. Canadian parents are often absent from their families on business matters and home-building in the West. The day school cannot efficiently look after such boys. Moreover, the day school tends to machine methods and the obliteration of a teacher's per-sonality, whereas the boarding school substitutes the constant personal in luence of a house-master who d votes his whole time to his pupils.

Utility and Culture, As to utilitarian vs. culture stud es, Mr. Auden observes a tendency mong us to exalt the former. This s natural in a new country where commerce takes precedence of culture. Boys are imbued with the instinct of vocation-hunting before they are able to spell the words of a common letter. This leads to a desire for specialization at an early age, and tends to sacrifice the all-round development necessary for safe citizen-ship. Culture, however, is on the increase. Parents are finding more time to tutor their own children. Canadian homes are getting an at-mosphere in which good literature, art and manners are becoming char-

A knowledge of practical science, the Principal considers, is necessary for every boy. Science has recently become a main factor in civilization. A man can scarcely be called a mod ern citizen who does not know the rudiments of physic, chemistry and electricity. This is a new development. Manual training he regards as a good thing to engage a boy's sur-plus activities, but believes it far less necessary here than in England, where boys have not the natural handiness that distinguishes Canadian youth. He also observes that Canadian boys are more imbued with the spirit of practical progress, a useful stimulus in the class-room. The inherent danger of this, however, consists in the tendency to crowd curriculums with courses of study, to rush pupils through schools too rapidly, and to make examinations the end rather than the means of a sound education—which the Principal considers has nothing to do with either typewriting or stenography. handiness that distinguishes Canagraphy.

English and the Classics.

English of Class

The vexed question of Classics vs.
English as a means of culture has much engaged the attention of Principal Auden. As an Englishman, he much engaged the attention of Principal Auden. As an Englishman, he naturally cleaves to the classes. He regards Latin and Greek as essential parts of a true education. Latin he commends no less for its disciplinary value than as a means of comprehending the structure of English, Latin makes a boy think no less than mathematics. It is the world's model of concise structure, consistent grammar and logical syntax. A boy should learn his grammar in the Latin, which is the mother of English grammar. The understood necessity of this explains why Latin figures as a daily item in the U.C.C. time-table in all but one form. Greek it considered as an indispensable mastel for style, and the recognized great source of literary appreciation. It should be taught with a minimum of grammar, as freely as possible, not at all as a means of mental discipline. The Principal regards Homer as more necessary to a school boy than Milton, if studied in the original. He observes that the tendency here is to teach English more than classics. This he explains as due to the lack of English literature in the home. The school is called upon to supply the lack, This defect he expects to disappear with the growth of culture and a con-

as has recently been the case in

A Seeming Paradox.

A Seeming Paradox.

At first blush it seems a paradox that an English master should give two dead languages precedence over the language of Chaucer, Shakespeara and Tennyson, as a source of English culture. But it must be remembered that decent English is second actives to the English boy. He bered that decent English is second nature to an English boy. He knows his Shakespeare independent of the school master, reads better books, scans a larger percentage of dignified newspapers and listens to more standard English speeches. In this country we are yet subject to rustic dialect, bad patois, American isms and foreign languages. There is no second to the isms and foreign languages. Therefore, English as a definite object of study is tenfold more necessary here than in England. Principal Auden wisely bolieves that great mo els of poetry and prose should not be sub jected to the indignity of grammati-cal analysis; neither should Legisl-words be laboriously parsed.

Bible Should Be aught. As to religious instruction. In Principal believes that the Dibi should be taught in the schools. In also contends that the best gospel o all is the personal, every-day re ligion of a teacher's life and character. Regarding women as tea hers he believes that they are a sh ning success with young pupils, but funda-mentally lacking the gift necessary to enforce discipline among boys above the elementary forms.

As students of French and Germa they excel, but as teachers of these languages, are rather prone to miss the deeper meaning of a translation. Their appointment here to the very best posts in the modern language courses of collegiate institute stands as an agreeable contrast to the English practice of paying a man three or four times as much as a woman for doing the same work. Another obvious superiority of the Canadian over the English educational system is the establishment of agal system is the gestalishment of agricultural colleges. Such institutions as the O. A. C. would be a sheer impossibility in England, where agriculture is largely traditional and, in fact, fast becoming obsolete.

A City Father's Outing With Mis Boy or

Saturday Afterneon. The boy didn't know what to do with himself. I didn't know what to do with myself. It was a lovely at-ternoon. I decided that a lesson in nature study wouldn't do either of us any harm, so off to the woods we and summer, but not in late autumn.

The trees were there with some touches of autumn glory lingering in the faeded leaves, but the air was still, and there seemed few birds still, and there seemed few birds about. But only for a little, for after climbing the slippery hillside we dropped in on a sociable party of song sparrows who had not yet gone south. But they were shy and wary, and the boy and I did not get much more than a glimpse of them. Not so with the white-breasted nuthatch, however and the boy watched inhowever, and the boy watched in-terestedly as I showed him the bird traveling gravely head downward on the tree trunks looking for insects. Further on we caught a flash of blue as a shy bluejay dashed squalling into a thicket. We walked a little further to where the ever-greens that had been favorite maunts of the redstarts in summer time grew in verdure untarnished by Artist Autumn's brown paint pot and busy brush, and stid down through the dead leaves to the foot of the ravine, where a downy woodpecker beat his feeble tattoo on a dead tree, and here I showed the boy kow the little woodpecker held his tail feathers against the bark to give his busy better leverage. Now we were homeward bound, and after a space the familiar "chich-a-dee-dee" saluted us and we got into a whole family of the busy little blackcaps feeding industriously and calling cheerily to each other right under our very noses. The boy was delighted, for the birds tame within three feet of us as we stood breathlessly silent beneath the cedars watching their restless flitting. I showed him one bird diving into the curled up leaf that some grub had selected for his winter quarters, little dreaming when he did it that a little black-capped chickades would some day find him out, pull him from his lair, cat him, and then would some day find him out, pull him from his lair, eat him, and then wipe his bill on a twig while two admiring mortals looked on. Among the chickadees we saw one kinglet they often travel together in the fall and winter—and then we left them to finish their suppers unobserved. There were only one or two things yet to show the boy before the city claimed us. One was the bank of yet to show the Boy Belove the tray claimed us. One was the bank of sand which the bank swallows had pierced in a hundred places during the summer and had reared their families therein, and it was not surprising to

The Mainstay of Age The digestion of age is weakened. Nourishing, easily-digested foods are required. That is why Tillson's pan-dried Oats is the best breakfast dish for age. The cooking turns the starch into easily-digested dextrin. It is rich in proteids, carbohydrates and fat. Tillson's Oats is a food, not a fad. Tillson's Pan-Oats dried India's Sacred Cattle.

Few people traveling in India can fail to notice the part played, whether in the flesh or its representation, by the cow and the ox. Sacred cat-tle wander unmolested and unmolest-ing through the streets of the cities, more especially in the south, generally decorated with garlands of flowers; stone 'mandis,' the bulls of Siva, keep guard before his temples and round his tanks; they are portrayed in fresco or in carving on the walls of many a rock carven. Oxen turn mills, plough the land, are the drawers and carriers of water, and, above all, are invaluable for drawing loads. Cattle, as is well known, are by Hindoos held in great and super-stitious reverence. Ganges water poured over a cow's tail being equivalent to the kissing of the sacred book or taking an oath. Yet, un-fortunately, the draft bull often re-ceives very rough treatment at his driver's hands. So long as the animal's life is not taken ill-treatment counts as nothing among these people, who regard the brutes as sacred.

Didn't Think the Queen Would Like It. An English paper tells a funny story of Prince Edward of Wales when he had only a few years to his when he had only a rewystar to give him some idea of heaven. "Everybody will be happy there," she said. "Every one will share happiness equally." "Really, truly equal?" asked the

After some seconds came the ques-tion, "Will great-grandma (the Queen) go to heaven?"

Shocked, the teacher assured him that it would be impossible to doubt shape, but rarely clubbed. The fore and hind wings are generally fastened together during flight by a "hook and eye" arrangement. The chrysalis is not angular and is inclosed in some sort of Jewels on an Idel.

The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of those re-markably hideous images possess such valuable head ornaments as one made for the idol Parthasathy, in the Triplicane temple at Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees and is made of sovereign gold studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and dia-mond at 300 rupees apiece.

writing as an art. The letter no longer can be regarded as primarily the carrier of news. The expression of one's opinion about great contemporary events is indeed still left to the letter, but how much of an incentive to friendly correspondence is lost by the fact that every part of the world knows of important happenings almost knows of important nappenings amount simultaneously is not to be lightly estimated, says Gunton's Magazine. The stimulus to writing that comes from having "news" to impart is done away that have that have the same that hav with, and it is not always that even the gifted letter writer can afford to lose that incitant. It is only the correfor 15 years and he thanks he has worked long enough to enjoy a rest from his labors. The deal was talked over on Saturday but it was not completed until this morning. For the saving quality of the genuine letter is in the ability of its author to put himself into it. If he writes about trivial things he does it with a grace of interest that disguises the triviality. He must not make his little fishes talk little these but he should, as Goldy whales, but he should, as Goldsmith himself knew how to do, make his letters of perpetual interest be-cause of the aptness of their style to has been served by one J. I cling to that perhaps fanciful theory that no primitive instinct of man is altogether lost. It is modified, amplified, refined; that is all. With all our public or are hardware will be a second or the second of the second or culture we are barbarians still. Mar is a clothed savage. And now and again he delights in doffing the clothing and returning heartily to savagery. How delightful the feel of the briny breeze and the bolsterous wave on the bare pelt! Mr. Edward Carpenter rails at the, I think, eleven layers of clothing that intervene between our skins and the airs of heaven. Whitman reveled in his nude sun bath. What a treat, too, sometimes to get away from the multicoursed dinuer and to bite downright audibly into simple food in the fresh air and to lap water noisily from the brook! Well, walking perhaps is the primal in-stinct, ancient as Eden, where the Lord God walked in the garden in the cool il is at a loss to understand of the day. And if my theory is correct walking will persist till in recovrect walking will persist uit in recovered paradise man walks with his Maker again. CREDIT DUE TO SOMEBODY Where Did We Get the Right to Borrow In Mathematics?

"Where did we get the right to bor row in mathematics?" asked a man who takes an interest in curious things. "We always pay back-a thing we sometimes fail to do in other relationships in life-but where did we get the right to borrow in the first instance? Take a simple illustration in subtraction: The teacher will tell the pupil to subtract 4,322 from 6,421. We put the problem down after this fashion:

Here we have the problem and the re-We know that we cannot say 'two from one.' So we borrow one and say 'two from eleven,' and we get the result 'nine.' We pay back promptly, for instead of saying 'two from two leaves nothing, we say 'three from twelve leaves nine.' But by what au-thority do we say this? When did we discover that this method would give us correct mathematical results? That's what I would like to know. Here we have one of the problems which the doctrine of evolution may deal with. I suppose some old fellow in the long ago found that it was necessary to de-vise a method of meeting this math-ematical emergency, so he hit upon ematical emergency, so he introduced the idea of borrowing from one row of figures and paying back to the next, and so met and conquered a very serious difficulty. The idea originated with some one, and to that some one we owe something. Mathematics would be a meaningless science without this con venient plan, just as other things would be useless but for the olever inventions of men who have gone before. There is the thing, for instance, which stands for nothing, the naught, that round symbol 0. It has a history. We know how they calculated before it came into existence. But I will not tell you about it now. I was speaking about the borrowing habit in mathematics, and that is enough to think about at one time. Do you know how and when it origi-

KEYS OF THE BASTILLE.

These Historic Relies of Old Paris

Owned by an American.

The keys which locked the great gates of the Bastille at the time of its fall have been in America for a number of years. For nearly a centucy they remained in the possession of the family of the Frenchman who took them from the famous prison, though they have recently come into the pos session of an Englishman living in Quebec

When the mob stormed the prison on July 14, 1789, a Parisian, Carrier Lechastel, is said to have been the dirst to rush over the drawbridge as it fell. It was he, at any rate, who overtook a fleeing jailer and took the keys from him. The mob immediately stuck the keys on the end of a spike, and an ense throng paraded with them through the streets. They were considered one of the most valuable trophies of the revolution.

Lechastel kept the keys, and they remained in his family until 1859, when a descendant of the family emigrated to America, taking them with him. Eventually the keys were sold to John Hamilton of St. Louis, who kept them for twenty-five years, exhibiting them from time to time, when they were sold to a Canadian.

One of the keys was obtained in France by General Lafayette and was presented by him to George Washing-ton a year or two before his death. It hangs in the mansion at Mount Vernon and has been seen by thousands of visitors there.

The keys at present are very old and rusty. The largest of them is twelve inches long and is quite heavy. The smallest is of fine workmanship, the socket being shaped like the ace of clubs, and is supposed to have belonged to the treasure rooms. This and another key measure six inches in length, while the other two are about ten inches and much heavier.

Really Antique.

An excellent plaster of paris cast may be seen in one of the Egyptian may be seen in one of the British museum of the famous sycamore statuette known as the "Sheikh-el-Beled," or "Village Sheikh." The original dates from 3900 B. C. and is still in perfect condition, although it is the oldest known specimen of wood carving. It represents an overseer of the workmen engaged in building the pyramids close to Sakkarao, where it was discovered.

Killing Sharks by Electricity.

In the British navy the engineers have a curious way of killing sharks.

They seal up a dynamite cartridge in an empty can and put the can inside a lump of pork. The pork is thrown overboard on a wire which has been connected with an electric battery. When the shark takes the bait, the engineer presses a button, which explodes the cartridge and kills the fish.

He noticed how frequently you came to see Dolly and scented danger ahead and Dolly and scented danger ahead and simply put his foot down on it, just as fathers have been doing ever since the flood. My dear boy, you've got a bitter pill to take, but you've got to swallow it like a man. You've reached point where two roads fork. It is for you to decide which one you'll take.

"I was wondering how far you had

"I don't understand," he said. "She knows—that is, I think she knows how I feel, and I have hoped that"— "Never mind about that," interrupted Miller laconically. "There is a chance for both of you if you'll turn square around like sensible human beings and ook the facts in the face."

"You mean"— "That it will be stupid, childish id focy for either or both of you to let this thing spoil your lives." "I don't understand you."
"Well, you will before I'm through

"It's none of my business," Miller burst out suddenly.

There are simply two courses open to you, my boy. One is to treat Colonel Barclay's wishes with dignified respect and bow and retire just as any European gentleman would do when told that his pile was too small to be con-

"And the other?" asked Alan sharp-

"The other is to follow in the foot steps of nearly every sentimental fool that ever was born and go around look-ing like a last year's bird's nest or, worse yet, persuading the girl to elope and thus angering her father so that he will cut her out of what's coming to her and what is her right, my boy. She may be willing to live on a bread and water diet for awhile, but she'll lose flesh and temper in the long run.
If you don't make as much money for her as you cause her to lose, she'll tell you of it some day or, at least, let you see it, and that's as long as it's wide. You are now giving yourself a treatment in self hypnotism, telling yourself that life has not and cannot produce a thing for you beyond that particular that life has not and cannot produce a thing for you beyond that particular pink frock and yellow head. I know how you feel. I've been there six dif-ferent times, beginning with a terrible long first attack and dwinding down as I became inoculated with experi-ence till now the complaint amounts to hardly more than a momentary throe when I see a fresh one in a train for an hour's ride. I can do you a lot of good if you'll listen to me. I'll give you the benefit of my experience."

"What good would your devilish ex-perience do me?" said Alan impatient-lovers of the ideal, sentimental brand are ever happy after marriage, but I do believe that open eyed courtship will beat the blind sort all hollow and that in nine cases out of ten, if people were mated by law according to the judgment of a sensible, open eyed jury, they would be happier than they now are. Nothing eyer spoken is truer than the commandment, 'Thou shalt have no other God but me.' Let a man put anything above the principle of living right, and he will be miserable. The man who holds gold as the chief thing in life will starve to death in its cold glitter, while a pauper in rags will have a laugh that rings with the music of immortal joy. In the same way the man who declares that only one woman is suited to him is making a god of her, raising her to a seat that won't support her dead, material weight. I frankly believe that the glamour of love is simply a sort of in-sanity that has never been correctly named and treated because so many people have been the victims of it."

He tells about the cure in the following words: "I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly. I never took anything that did me se much good. I had a severe pain in the small of my back and could scarcely get up or down without help. I could hardly urinate, but when I did the pain was terrible. I was in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, last winter and when I came out I was some better but not cured. It was then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. ALONG PICCADILLY.

There the Tide of Social London Flows to the Fullest.
Piccadilly seems cold and blatant by contrast as one charges down it. Yet even here, be the sunshine ever so bright, the visitor is crowned in the pearly haze that tones, attenuates, unifies, most if not all of London, that haze that has tantalized and defeated how many artists! Even over Piccadilhow many artists! Even over Piccadilly, even over this the most mundane of all London streets, it throws its saving glamour. Indeed the whole splendid gamour. Indeed the whole splendid avenue might serve for a studio, not for its values alone, but for the com-plexity of the types that throng it. It is the quintessence of London, the dis-tillation of all London humanity, to be studied nowhere so narrowly as from a bus top. Perfect Du Mauriers in the original approach, pass by and are left behind or stand in groups looking from the club windows. Phil Mays in the the club windows. Phil Mays in the life swarm beneath one, and characters from Thackeray and Dickens jostle unsuspectingly on the sidewalk. The clubs alone, which never look so thoroughly clubbable as when hastily glanced at from a passing bus, will store one's memory with a bundred. store one's memory with a hundred recognizable types. All England, all the empire, indeed, sooner or later finds Its way to Piccadilly. One cannot pass down it without a sight or some glit-tering, turbaned, alien figure, majes-tically isolated, majestically unheeded. Regent street may claim a grander sweep, and by virtue of its shops a more devoted femininity, but it is along Piccadilly that the tide of social London flows brim full.—Sydney Brooks in Harper's Magazine.

In Frozen Russia.

In Russia, where the cold in winter is very intense, the markets are very curious things. The meat is frozen, the carcasses of dead animals, as sheep and pigs, stand upright outside the stalls; everything, even game and poultry, requires to be thawed before it can be cooked, and the market people's dress is as picturesque as it is warm and comfortable.

Then the rivers are frozen over all the winter long, and so thick is the ice that every one can skate anywhere and any time. Stalls are put up on the ice and busy markets held there.

In the Asiatic part of Russia the people live chiefly by hunting and fishing, and the fur of the Russian animals is very beautiful—the ermine, fox, sable, sea ofter and others.

At the end of the winter, when the snow melts, the huntsman pursues the elk, wearing long shoes, in which he can glide over the snow very quickly, while the poor elk sinks into the snow deeper and deeper every step and is at last overtaken and killed

His Two Purchases. A story is told of a Louisiana merchant who came to New York determined to secure a bargain. He wanted cheap cloaks, and after trying in vair to suit himself at the wholesale houses he bought a job lot at auction. He examined the goods hurriedly and had them shipped home. In due time he was confronted by an excited head salesman who said the garments were

"They didn't look that way," said the merchant.

"But they are," replied the clerk, The merchant persisted that the cloaks would sell, but they didn't. In desperation he returned them to New York to be disposed of to best advantage. On his next trip to New York he again visited an auction house and bought a lot of cloaks. When he returned home and examined his purchase he saw that he had bought the same lot as before.

The Bird Moncpolist As is generally known, the cuckoo lays its eggs in the nests of other birds, leaving them to be hatched and the young cuckoos reared by their foster parents. The young cuckoo throws the other birds out of the nest and gets all the care itself. After murdering its foster brothers and sisters in the most deliberate and callous way it is thence-forth tended with the greatest devo-tion. Long after it has left the nest the great bird, apparently big enough to get its own living and many times larger than its foster parents, is fol-lowed about and fed by them with the same care as when in the nest.

Oak Wood.

The oak is a historic wood. As early as the eleventh century it became the favorite wood of civilized Europe, and specimens of carving and interior finish have come down to us from that early day, their pristine beauty en-hanced by the subduling finger of time. The early colonists brought with them to the shores of merica their love for this wood, and here, too, the oak acquired historical interests.

On one of its quaintest stories it is now customary to throw doubt. Be it true or no it is an engrossing tale. In the room over the old gateway died the Countess of Nottingham, who confessed the wrong done to the Earl of Essex. Queen Elizabeth had given the Earl when prime favorite a ring that was to obtain him a favor whenever asked. The time came that when in prison and condemned to an ignominious death it was put to the test to ask the favor of his life. Charles the First created the Great Park, as it was called, to distinguish it from the Little or Deer Park near the palace, whereby hangs a tale. He had large wastes of his own, and he not only enclosed these, but forcibly dispossessed gentlemen of their dispossessed gentlemen of their houses and farms. He certainly offered them good sums of money, but they were ejected, even when they de-clined to sell. The King's councillors strove in vain to turn him from his project, and the park was completed, the Earl of Fortland being appointed its first ranger in 1637. The Com-monwealth seized the park, and in 1649 presented it to the Corporation of the city of London. At the Restoration, in 1660, the park was given back to the city of London. en back to Charles II. The palace perfect state, notwithstanding damage of the Civil war, to be propriated to the use of the widow of Charles I., who continued to reside in it till 1665.

Further trouble came in the reign of George II., with the Princess Amelia as ranger of the park. She had so poor a regard of public rights that she shut the gates against all comers. The right of free way was however, asserted by an action brought by John Lewis, a brewer, and to the credit of Richmond be it stated that when he in after life he came reduced in circumstances the in-habitants raised an annuity for him. It was in the park that George II. used to shoot at flocks of turkeys sitting on the trees, a peculiar form of sport certainly.

The circumference of Richmond Park is close on nine miles, and bowered in noble trees is White Lodge, where little Prince Edward was born. Close by is Pembroke Lodge.

BURIAL CUSTOMS.

The disposal of the dead among civilized nations has usually consisted of one of the following three ways: Firstly, of closing up the body in earth or stone; secondly, of burning the body and committing to earth the ashes and, thirdly, the embalming of the body. The earliest form of interment which we have any account was that of the paleolithic cave dwellers, who buried their dead in natural grottoes and crevices in the rock similar to those in which they had lived. When we come to the later stone age we find that the people throughout Europe buried in chambered barrows and cairns. Next comes the bronze age, with its changes, and among oth ers the burial of the dead. The chambered barrows passed away, and in their places barrows were frequently used without chambers, and cemeteries of stone cists set in the ground were largely employed. Frequently a nat-ural eminence of sand or gravel was the place assigned for burial, and around it were circles of standing stones. During these prehistoric times cremation was also practiced side side with the simple interments of the people. In pagan times it was custom whether the dead were buried with or without cremation, to put in their graves such articles as urns or vessels of clay, bronze, gold or glass, clothing, personal ornaments, implenents and weapons of warfare. Cremation was largely abolished when Christianity spread over the country, and the interment of grave goods was restricted to kings and priests, who continued to be buried in their royal and sacerdotal robes and with their insignia of office. Down to the tenth century cremation was customary among the tribes located along the Volga. Here also human sacrifices in honor of the dead prevailed. Records of eyewitnesses of the horrible ceremonies have come down to is. Charlemagne prohibited this usage among the conquered Saxons under pain of death. THOUSANDS WERE DROWNED. Result of a Typhoon Off South Coast China.

Victoria, Nov. 30.-Advices were received from South China by the Athenian of the loss of thousands of lives as a result of the destruction o several hundred fishing junks in a ty-phoon off Swatow. The Hong Kong Government tender Stanley and sev-eral British torpedo and gun boats towed a number of the junks, which survived the typhoon, to places of safety.

Diphtheria in Frontenac.

Kingston, Nov. 29.—(Special.)—Diphtheria of a mailgnant type has broken out in Palmerston and Clarendon townships, Frontenae county, and is spreading. Several deaths have already occurred at Clarendon Station, and two at Snow Road. Physicians are scarce, the people are poor, and a sad condition of affairs exists. The disease is considered epidemic.

Lorne McAllister's Death at Owen

Owen Sound, Nov. 28 .- One day about four weeks ago Finlay McLeod and Lorne McAflister, two young residents of Sarawak, set out to hunt partridge about eight miles from Owen Sound. When passing under a log the gun in McAllister's hands was accident ally discharged, the shot lodging in McLeod's back near the base of the spine. After lingering for several days McLeod died. His companion was heart-broken, although the affair was clearly accidental. Hard luck has followed young McAllister ever since. Last Saturday while working in a bush in Keppel he was struck by the limb of a falling tree, receiving serious injuries. He was brought to the General and Marine Hospital, where after suffering terribly he died this morning from rupture of the kidneys. dents of Sarawak, set out to hunt

A CHANCE FOR DREYFUS. Judicial Examination of His Case Assured.

Paris, Nov. 30.-The efforts of Alfred Dreyfus, who was dismissed from the army and imprisoned on Devil's Island for alleged treachery and afterwards tried at Rennes, declared guilty and then pardoned, to secure a judicial examination of his case has at last been crowned with success. After examining the dossier in the case submit-ted to him by General Andre, the Min-ister of War, Minister of Justice Valle has transmitted that document, to-gether with the petition of M. Drey-fus for a revision of his sentence to M. Durand, the President of a commission of six members instituted by the Minister of Justice. This commission will pronounce upon the admissibility of a request for a revision of sentence. M. Dreyfus owes the favorable action taken to the careful consideration given the case by the Minister of War, General Andre, whose conclusions are regarded as in the highest degree favor-able to Dreyius since they determined the Minister of Justice to refer the question of a revision to a commission. It is said that M. Cribelin, formerly principal keeper of the records of the headquarters staff, has made important.

Premier Balfour Talks of a Comm Scheme-Includes Colonies.

London, Nov. 30,-Premier Balfour at the United Club dinner Friday, said an empire defence scheme is not a problem of home defence, with which the navy could deal; it is a problem of foreign defence. He did not think the people would either shrink from sacrifices or be found unequal to the greatest strain which patriotism may be called upon to endure if only we can bring together the separate Governments of which the empire is composed and have some common scheme of defence, not dependent upon the War Office alone, dependent upon the War Office alone, but drawing its strength from all self-governing colonies. Referring to the subject of conscription Mr. Balfour declared against it. In case the vast resources of the great military powers were brought against this country we would have to depend, not upon the army, but upon the readiness of the population here and in the free colonies to join in opposing the aggressor.

LORD ROBERTS MAY RESIGN. The Present State of His Health is

Not Satisfactory. London, Nov. 30 .- Although no public announcement of the fact has yet been made, it is understood that Lord Roberts is about to resign as Commander-in-Chief.
