

TROOPS GUARD WHARVES AT MONTREAL NOW.

Strikers Became Riotous and One Man Was Shot.

Montreal despatch: The situation on the Montreal wharves as the result of the longshoremen's strike assumed a serious aspect to-day. The Mayor this afternoon called out the militia to preserve order and to protect the shipping in port. The regiments ordered out are the 65th Mount Royal Rifles, the Victoria Rifles, and the Duke of York's Canadian Hussars, or all told over 600 men. They gathered at their armories this afternoon and proceeded to the scene of the disturbance. As the result of the longshoremen's actions operations in the harbor were completely tied up, and it took all the efforts of the Mounted Police to prevent a serious clash between the strikers and the non-union men, who were employed in unloading the vessels. The strikers proceeded from one vessel to another and succeeded in enticing many of the men from work. In one case they overpowered the police who were there to carry away. They also set fire to part of a vessel's cargo.

three or four policemen at that ship the mounted squad started off at a canter to reinforce them. At this the crowd broke into a run to race the policemen, but the latter got there just ahead of the crowd. The whole wharf looked alive with men. The laborers working in the sheds and on the wharves ran on board the vessel and down below. The shouting of the advancing crowd and the galloping up of the mounted squad had given warning to the officers and crew of the ship and they appeared at the gangways. For a moment the police managed to hold the crowd back. Then someone shouted, "There are some of the scabs up at the end of the shed!" The words were repeated and a general rush made round the little line of policemen through the sheds. The crowd charged round towards the aft gangway, and it looked as though the men might try to board the ship.

There are many theories as to the cause of the slide. Some declare that there was an eruption and that it started the rocks; others declare that the quality of the rock being almost pure lime, the great heat of the last week caused the snow melt, and that the water worked its way down into the lime, and slacked it, thus causing the start.

There are five steamships in the harbor waiting to be unloaded—the Headliner Carrigan Head, the Leyland liner Alexandria, the Thompson liner, the Donaldson liner Salcia, and the C. P. Three vessels from the wharves were being worked on board, but between eight and nine, a few policemen having been stationed on each wharf, operations began in front of the crowd of two hundred or two hundred and fifty men at work altogether on all the ships.

A TALE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AND WOMAN'S PERFDY

The men had finished the rustic gate, and one of them, taking off his cap, handed the marquis the key.
He took it, looked at it for a moment, and held it out to Elaine...

Who? Why, the marquis! Look! The marquis had disappeared from the tower. The marquis had gone.
CHAPTER VIII.
The marquis had gone. The major had left the house immediately after calling Elaine's attention to the disappearance of the flag, and on his way to the club had met Ingram, the steward, and learned from him the particulars of the sudden departure.

HEART DISEASE

A Trouble Much More Common Than is Generally Supposed

A healthy person does not feel the heart at all. If the heart makes itself felt it is a sure sign of some one of the many phases of heart trouble. Some of the symptoms of heart trouble are shortness of breath, trembling of the hands, violent throbbing or fluttering of the heart, sharp spasms of pain, oppression on the chest, dizziness and clammy sweating, irregular pulse, and the alarming palpitation that is often felt most in the head or at the wrists.

Most of the troubles affecting the heart are caused by anemia, indigestion or nervousness, and when any of these causes lie at the root of the trouble it can be surely cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You must cure your heart disease through the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can easily see why this is the only way to save yourself. The heart drives your blood to all parts of the body. Every drop of your blood flows through your heart. If your blood is thin or impure your heart is bound to be weak and diseased; if your blood is pure, rich and healthy, it will naturally make your heart sound and strong.

Not only did she not mean to discuss him, but she did not mean to think of him, and when she went into the garden, or to one of the windows looking down upon the Castle, she carefully refrained from looking in the direction of the flagstaff. It would not be possible to force a visit to the Castle, and her father's hints, but she resolved that they should not haunt her; and Elaine was a young lady of some determination and strength of mind.

It was this May Bradley, the rector's daughter, and Elaine's special friend. The two girls formed a very striking contrast. Elaine was tall, slender, with brown eyes; May was fair, with blue eyes that seemed to be always dancing merrily; her light, almost flaxen, hair broke in little flossy curls over her forehead; her manner was small and always smiling, and she was altogether as charming and bewitching a little girl as was ever sent to plague a susceptible man.

A BLESSING TO CHILDREN

Strong words, but truthful, and the experience of a mother who has long and oughtly tested the young Baby's Own Tablets. Giving her experience with the use of this medicine, Mrs. George Hardy, of Fourchu, N. S., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets, and find them a blessing to children, and I am not satisfied with-out a box in the house at all times." These Tablets cure all the minor troubles of babyhood, and are safe, they are prompt and effective in their action, and are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. They always do good—they cannot possibly do harm.

They are found in all homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used. You can get these Tablets from any druggist, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

He drew her by the sleeve of her dress to the window, and pointed. "Who? Why, the marquis! Look! The marquis had disappeared from the tower. The marquis had gone. CHAPTER VIII. The marquis had gone. The major had left the house immediately after calling Elaine's attention to the disappearance of the flag, and on his way to the club had met Ingram, the steward, and learned from him the particulars of the sudden departure.

CHAPTER IX.
It is the night of the town ball, and although the hour is still an early one the room below the ball is nearly half full. The ball is an important function in the opinion of the Barfieldians, and the stewards gather pride themselves upon the decorations, and the arranged and the arrangements generally. At present, though there appear to be plenty of people, none of the local celebrities have arrived, and the small crowd who come have come early to snatch some of the first dances of the list are enjoying themselves amazingly; far more, indeed, than they will have a chance of doing later when the rest of the town arrive and the room grows crowded and partners scarce.

TELEPHONE "TAPPERS" AND HOW THEY WORK.

"Of all the strange occupations, the strangest is that of telephone tapper," said an old employee of the telephone company the other day to a reporter of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. "There aren't ten men in Chicago who know what a telephone tapper is, but there are hundreds of persons who have come to grief through his work."
"The tapper is a man who is hired by the telephone company. His business is to tap the wires on party lines, hotels, and such places, to see if the telephone is being used by persons who are not careful of what they say. Often the company receives complaints that telephone wires are being overheard, and they are unavoidably overheard. The company tries to do away with this sort of patronage. Hence the tapper.

"The tapper must be a man of infinite patience. I have known them to sit for twenty hours at a stretch waiting for a signal. When a complaint is made that the wrong kind of talk is circulating on a party line, the tapper goes to one of the houses, generally the home of the complainant, and taps the wire. This is done with a specially constructed instrument, which has a receiver and a transmitter, just as does any telephone. It is connected to a regular phone, and then the tapper sits back with the receiver clamped to his ear, to await a call.

"He takes notes on every conversation for an hour, and sometimes he must repeat his vigil day after day. As a rule he does not have to wait more than a few minutes before he can use the telephone. He is at the instrument about as often as they can find time."
"Not long ago a complaint was made by a man on a party line. He said that a very disgusting conversation was being carried on over the wire, and that his wife and daughter could not take down the wire without hearing something they should not hear.

"The tapper was sent out to investigate. He rigged up his instrument and sat down to wait. All afternoon he stuck to his post, hearing only the orders given to the butcher, the grocer or the coal man. Finally, in the evening, shortly before dinner, the bell rang three times. The tapper looked at his notebook and learned that the call was for the home of a well-known family. Soon after the click was heard as a receiver came from the hook, and a young woman's voice called out, 'Hello!'

"The tapper knows perfectly well what is going on about town, and could tell many stories. He is a close-mouthed fellow, however, and knows it is best to keep still. If the people who use telephones knew they were telling their stories to a tapper as well as to the person at the other end of the line they would be more careful."
"Tappers themselves say that dead men and telephone tappers tell no tales, but the latter keeps a record of what he learns and in the record are the names of some people who are supposed by their friends to be of goody-goody sort.

"It is a peculiar kind of work at any rate, and one of which the public knows nothing."
Slavery of City Life.
Pittsburg Dispatch.
It is a popular fallacy with young America that the salesman, clerk and bookkeeper occupy a higher place in the social scheme than the farmer or mechanic. One of the deplorable consequences is seen whenever a merchant or manufacturer advertises for help of this kind and the applicants turn out by scores and hundreds to get the place, ready to work at almost any price. It would be found on investigation that most of these had come up from the country and smaller towns to "accept positions" attracted by the promise of city life at large salaries in the city.

"If I don't stand for your way of doing, and I'll take a punch at you the first time I see you," said one of the men, with a liberal supply of oaths. "If you do your wife won't know you when you go home, the other retorted, sandwiching a few smoking epithets between the other words."
The verbal duel grew hotter. The tapper had the name of one of the men, but the other he did not know. But he finally got it. The conversation was over.

As a Spring Medicine

There Are Two Reasons Why There is No Treatment so Thoroughly Satisfactory and Lastingly Beneficial as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The body of man can be influenced in health or disease only through two channels—the blood and the nerves. During the winter the blood becomes thin and watery because of the artificial life we are compelled to lead indoors—the artificial food, the breathing of impure air, the lack of exercise, and this is why most people find it necessary to use a blood builder and nerve restorative in the spring.
For two reasons Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most satisfactory spring medicine that you can possibly obtain. In the first place, it is gently laxative. Just enough so that when taken regularly it ensures proper action of the bowels. Secondly, it forms new red corpuscles in the blood, or in other words, makes the blood rich, red, and life-sustaining. Through the medium of the blood and nerves Dr. Chase's Nerve Food influences every nook and corner of the system, giving new vigor to the vital organs, such as the heart, lungs, stomach, liver and kidneys and ensuring their regular and healthful action.

There is, then, a compensating thought that those who have dyspepsia in this life will find nothing worse on the other side.
