SAVE 50 CENTS.—Those who have unpaid subscriptions to THE SIGNAL should pay up at once and save 50c per annum, as accounts rendered after date, for back subscriptions will be charged at the rate of $2.00 a year.

We are glad to state that Mrs. Geo. A. Ross, who came to town an invalid about the latter end of June has been greatly improved in health. She attributes her improvement in health to the fine, dry, bracing air of Goderich.

The bicycle club, under command of Capt. G. B. Cox, are being regularly drilled, and are beginning to do some showy riding. There is always a commotion on the square when "the skids are out" in full force.

A Toronto telegrapher gulled the public by a despatch on Wednesday evening, stating that Ross had won by four lengths. The truth was that Hanlan left "Pompey" nearly a quarter of a mile behind him at the finish—a bad beating.

TRIP EXCURSION.—An excursion to Toronto is advertised for Tuesday August 7th, for only $2.25. Tickets good until next day. Train leaves Goderich at 5.45 a.m. on Tuesday; and Toronto at 3.45 p.m., on Wednesday. See posters.

Mr. Grace has had his heavy field of clover cut by a Sarnia Humming Bird mower. The growth was a heavy one and Mr. Grace believes no other machine could have so successfully worked the field.—It was superintended by Mr. Geo. A. Ross, the local agent.

KNOX CHURCH S. S. LIBRARY.—Over 250 new volumes have been purchased for Knox Church S. S. Library. The "infant class" in connection with this school last Sunday numbered 85. The total attendance on that day was over 300.

Among the successful anglers on Saturday was E. W. Watson, the well known fisherman. He was successful in catching a pickerel and bass caught by him on that day. He and Welsh the jeweller use the rod and troll in their new boat daily.

About 200 Orangemen left here on the 12th of July for Woodstock. The journey home was a tedious one, and the members of the order express themselves as in favor of never placing a foot on a painter.

We were presented with some fine pickarel and bass caught by him on that day. He and Welsh the jeweller use the rod and troll in their new boat daily.

The East Saginaw Evening News thus refers to a couple of old-time Goderich boys, who appear to be in favor in their Michigan home.—"John D. Martin and George E. Passmore will leave on Monday next for Algoma, Michigan, where they will engage in the grocery business."

Mr. Martin has grown up in this branch of trade, and is thoroughly posted in it. Mr. Passmore has been employed at Howry's dry goods store as dress salesman for some years past, and is well acquainted with store work. Both are energetic young men. The News can recommend them to the favorable consideration of the citizens of Algoma.

There is probably more idiotic nonsense written about the American girl than about any other type of femininity. Here is a sample of "English women are content the most beautiful in the world," but American girls are the prettiest. It is all in the family, no doubt, and very proud we should be of the relationship; but we must acknowledge that a good many agencies have been at work to complete that most perfect of creature beings—an American girl. She has in her veins the blood of the Celt and the primitive German; she is partially French, Dutch, Scotch, Irish, Welsh; there is the voluptuous grace of the Italian woman in her gliding walk, and always except in America—you don't often see such feet or ankles out of Spain."

In other words the American girl is a hotch-potch of everything and, "finned down, is a moult of the most heterogeneous breeding. We should say the American girl would hardly feel flattered at the picture.—[Ex.]

VISIT TO GODERICH.—Specialists from the International Throat and Lung Institute 163 Church street Toronto, will be at the Albion hotel, Goderich, two days, July 26 and 27. The surgeons will have a supply of spiro-meters, the invention of M. Souville, of Paris, ex-sicilite surgeon of the French Army, for the cure of Catarrh, Catarrh Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption. Consultation and trial of the spiro-meter free. Don't fail to see the surgeons while here, as they make a speciality of diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs and are curing thousands of cases every year that have been given up to be by visiting in general practice. Crowds are flocking in every town and city. As proof of our wonderful cure we will refer you to Mrs. Spick, Harrowsfield P. O., near here. Consumption; H. Miller, Kingston, Asthma; Mr. Boucherville, Ottawa, Catarrh Deafness; Geo. Agar, New Edinburgh, Bronchitis and Lung Disease; and thousands of just as wonderful cures which we could refer to. For particulars write to 173 Church St. Toronto or 13 Phillips square, Montreal.

Mr. Hart, the miller, whose property was swept away by the spring freshets, is going to Australia, to retrieve his fortune. He is a fine fellow, and the best wishes of the community attend him.

Price, his partner, is still conducting a flour and provision store in town, and is popular with the public as a dealer.

David Fisher, of Colborne, has the sympathy of the community in the loss of two young sons aged respectively 7 and 14 years of age, from diphtheria. Mr. Fisher has had much sickness in his family of late, his two daughters just having recovered from an attack of the terrible disease which carried off the boys.

Dr. Kay, of Belmore, an old and prominent resident of the locality, died on Friday last week, after a lingering illness and intense suffering. His funeral was attended by a large concourse, over one hundred vehicles being in the procession, and the remains were buried with the honors of the Orange order, of which society deceased had long been a member. His brother of Mr. T. M. Kay, reeve of Uxbridge, and was a native of that township.

FIRE ALARM.—The fire alarm rang out about 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, and the fire company was promptly gathered, when it was discovered that the shingles on an addition to the International hotel had been ignited by a spark from the chimney. A few pails of water judiciously applied, saving the ereeling of the hose by the brigade, and the engine was at once taken back to the fire hall. We have been informed by the secretary of the fire brigade that there is vacancy of one member he would like to see filled by a competent person.

LAWN PARTY.—The lawn party held on the grounds of Mr. Wm. McLean, on Tuesday evening last, under the auspices of the ladies' aid society of the North street Methodist church was very well attended and was highly successful. The evening was decidedly on the cool side, but this did not seem to militate against the demand for strawberries and ice-cream. During the evening a number of selections was played by the Goderich band. Mr. McLean has the thanks of the ladies of the church for kindly giving them the use of his grounds for the holding of the lawn social.

THE NASHVILLE STUDENTS.—The concert in the North street Methodist church given by the Nashville students was not so largely attended as was the one given by the Fisk jubilee singers some months ago. The attendance outside the church was large, owing to the fine state of the weather. The singing of the Nashville students in no instance can compare favorably with the cultured harmonies of the Fisk jubilee singers. Notwithstanding this fact, however, a good rendering of a number of the old-time plantation melodies was given, the strong features being the quartettes and choruses.

Some person or persons broke into the house of Mr. W. G. Smith on Monday afternoon last, in the absence of the members of the family, and abstracted $10 in money and a roll of factory cotton. Constable Yule has the matter in hand, and believes he can make justice overtake the guilty party.

A LIQUOR CASE.—John Slattery, an old offender, was on Thursday charged by License Inspector Yates, with keeping liquor for barter and sale in an unlicensed house. It appears that Slattery, who is blind, lives in a little shanty on the outskirts of the town, and sells liquor illicitly on Saturday nights and Sundays, when licensed houses are closed.

A keg of beer was left at his place by the brewer's delivery wagon on Saturday, and was shortly afterwards seized by Inspector Yates. A wholesale liquor dealer testified that the frequently sold liquor to the defendant, and gave it to him at hotel rates. The magistrates, Messrs. P. Adamson and S. Pollock, however, dismissed the case, and the keg of beer was restored to Slattery. The license inspector feels aggrieved at what he deems a miscarriage of justice, and as Slattery's house has a very unenviable reputation in the neighborhood, it is a pity it could not be rooted out. Those who licensed hotels should not be tolerated for a moment, if the evidence is as all strong enough to convict.

KNOX CHURCH S. S. TEACHERS' SOCIAL.—The attendance at the strawberry and ice-cream social held in the basement of Knox Church on Monday evening was much larger than had been expected. Owing to a misunderstanding, Mr. Attila's promised gift of strawberries was not forthcoming, and the promoters of the social at the last hour (especially the small boys) were grieved with ice-cream, some got little or nothing during the evening. The programme of music, readings, etc., was one of the best yet offered at an entertainment of the kind. Mr. John Robinson's solos were enthusiastically received, his encore "Bonny Mary of Argyle" being the crown of the evening. The duet "Lark-board Watch," which was sung by Miss Maggie McKay and Mr. Robinson was well given. Miss Cooke's solos were very nicely rendered, and her accompaniment of Mr. Robinson's solos was much appreciated. Mr. Fred Bond's concertina solos were loudly applauded.

a little excitement, but the auctioneer, being used to talking for a fee, couldn't be bowed down to his work with his usual vim. Besides "Crunk" is not a beverage for loosening the muscles of an auctioneer's throat. Anyhow, he sold the cake at a fair figure, and that was all that was wanted.

THE SUPPER TABLE
was filled from 5 p.m. until 7 o'clock. Notice had been given that no meals would be served after the latter hour, but even without the notice it would have been difficult to find material to dine upon, so vigorous had been the onslaught upon the refreshments.

THE PAVILLION
appeared to do a profitable business during the afternoon and evening, and the lads and lasses kept the platform and the string band well occupied.

THE WEATHER
held up well during the day, although once or twice the sky clouded over and threatened heavy rain. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon a slight rain fell down, but it only lasted a short time, and failed to put the slightest dampness upon the proceedings. In the evening the moon came out bright and clear, and while some danced, others promenade the paths of the grove, in converse so-ade or lightsome, as the spirit moved utterance.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Rev. Fathers Watters and McRae, of Goderich, and O'Connor, of Wawanosh, were present during the day, and theological student McManus collected the gate fees.

Messrs. Farr and Fox superintended at the refreshment booth, and Messrs. Fox, B. B. B. and McManus laded out the ice-cream.

CARD OF THANKS.
Rev. Father Watters desires to re- turn thanks to the ladies of the congregation and others who worked to make the picnic a successful event. Also to the members of the several Protestant bodies who turned out so largely and contributed financial aid otherwise.

Lacrosse Echoes.
I captured a goal—Bill Ellard.
So did I—Jimmy Henderson.

Mousquetaire gloves have been improved by a series of elastic on the inner side of the wrist.

Checked summer silks come in the new colors, two of which, as a rule, appear in each pattern.

Jet sequins form the ornamental fringe of black tulle tabliers and draperies on black evening toilets.

Terra cotta, dark blue, and dark red are frequent combinations in suits and in millinery this spring.

Satin cords, braided in rather intricate designs, are used as the heading for other trimmings on rich costumes.

A pretty foreign fashion for small girls is to dress them in pelisses of red or pink, entirely covering their white dresses.

One of the newest neck arrangements is a plaiting of lace sewn down one side of a narrow band reaching from throat to bust, with a succession of loops of "baby" satin ribbon or rows of velvet down the other, forming a heading.

The preferred trimming of white, rough straw English walking hats, in two entire birds—pigeons, ring-doves, or parquets. These birds are placed on the left side of the hat, fastening down a scarf of crepe de chine or velvet, which surrounds the crown.

The latest novelty for morning hats in the city, for driving, and for the seaside are high-crowned English walking hats of rough white straw with sloping crowns, brims pointed front and back, and rolled close against the crown on each side.

One of the prettiest novelties in evening costume is the basket of flowers attached to the dress. It may hang from the waist by a chain of leaves or flowers, or be fastened to the back drapery and appear to rest against it.

Flowers matching the hue of the silk foundation are wreathed around the crown or massed at one side, mingled unusually with cascades of the lace.

The daintiest and most convenient of spring trifles are the new "manchons" or muffs, matching the costume and trimmed with velvet lace, flowers, or prettiest of all, with small birds. A little concealed pocket in the muff affords a hiding-place for card-case, handkerchief, purse, or vinaigrette.

Prepare Now for Winter Plants.

Those who have small green-houses or cultivated flowers in their windows, have set out their geraniums, and other quick-growing plants for the summer.

Many make the mistake of taking up these plants in autumn, after they have grown all the season in the open ground, and putting them to be replaced in the window or green-house.

The result will always be "long-legged" misshapen plants, which, instead of blooming satisfactorily during the winter, will take a long time to recover, and never be worth as much as new plants from cuttings.

Such plants may be prepared for this month and next, and with very little trouble. Of course those who have green-houses with appliances for propagating need no directions, but many lovers of flowers have to content themselves with such plants as may be grown in the windows of the living rooms.

These become attached to their plants, and when one is set out in the bed they expect it back again. When such a plant goes out, consider it thrown away, for it may as well be, and set about replacing it. The following method will give a few plants with little trouble.

Take a common store box, such as a starch or soap box, knock off both cover and bottom, and if need be strengthen with extra nails. Tack over this a piece of cotton cloth and the frame will be ready. Select a place where the soil is light and sandy, or if the ground is stiff, spade in some sand or coal dust to make it light and open and place the frame over it.

It cuttings of geraniums, cupheas, verbenas, or other such plants are placed in the soil and covered with the frame they will soon take root and form nice specimens, which, when they begin to grow, may be potted and be ready for winter.

If the frame is where it will be shaded at midday, all the better; if not, tilt it a little when the sun is very hot, to give ventilation and prevent overheating.—[American Agriculturist for July.

Breath Pure Air.

Let us urge the importance of full and deep breathing. Of what use is air unless it is breathed? and the amount of air which any person shall breathe is largely within his own control.

Thousands of people are half-starved for air simply because the muscles which perform the function of respiration have become so depleted, weak, and tired that they allow the work to go on by default.

The muscles which breathe are the intercostal muscles which unite the ribs to each other, and, even more truly, the muscles of the abdomen. The abdominal muscles are, beyond all question, the most important voluntary muscles of the body.

Their vigorous operation is not only necessary to good breathing, but to good digestion and good circulation, and of the worst evils connected with feeble digestion is the consequent feebleness of the abdominal muscles, which restrict not only digestion, but breathing, and the operations of the bowels as well as the circulation of the blood.

"You Fust, Mass!"

A minister officiating at a wedding had better not lay any plans for sport on his own account. The laugh may come in the wrong place for him, as it did at a negro wedding in Virginia, where two brawny, ruby-lipped negroes called upon a young and popular minister to be married.

The minister was fond of fun, and invited some of his intimate friends, telling them that he would have an extra performance in the ceremony. The parlor was well lighted, and the guests, with mirthful faces, were seated when the couple were shown in. The ceremony proceeded with a little tittering of the guests and no little agitation on the part of the lovers.

As it ended and the minister pronounced them man and wife, he added with a smile: "Samuel, salute your bride." The new-made husband looked all around the room, and seeing by the mirth of the crowd that all was not right, he excitedly said: "You fust, mass! you fust!" and prompted by a look of the fond husband, the bride raised her ruby lips for the expected kiss.

The tables had turned. The surprised minister stepped back hesitatingly and said: "I will soon have a bride of my own to kiss."

In promulgating your eclectic cogitations, or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable, philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosities.

Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensiveness, a collected consistency, and a concatenated cogency.

Eschew all conglomerations of fatulent garbology, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous decantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thronal bombast.

Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profrundity, pompous prolixity, paitaceous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity, and vaniloquent vapidity.

Shun double entendres, prurient jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent.

Manners is a more important acquisition than is generally thought. The best and kindest people destroy their own influence, and, what is worse, often create a prejudice against goodness, by a hard, dry, discouraging manner; more especially, after all, manner is generally on the whole a tolerably fair index of the mind.

FIRE AND SWORD:

A STORY OF THE MASSACRE OF GLENCOE.

CHAPTER XXVII.

IN THE ROADSIDE INN—THE GLENCOE MENDICANT.

Slowly, irregularly, and with much difficulty Glenlyon marched his detachment forth of the doomed and blasted valley, the smoke of whose ruined villages bleeted the overlying stretch of sky, and hung in black mournful patches around the cloven peaks of the mighty hills.

The numerous batches of horses and cattle which the invaders drove before them very much retarded their progress north, and the heavy snowfall of the previous night had all but rendered the roads impassable at some parts. The bloody task to which Glenlyon had willingly committed himself, had been duly accomplished, and he was satisfied with himself and men. Only one man of his detachment had been found guilty of conniving at the escape of the pursued clansmen that morning, and without formality, or the briefest court-martial examination, he had been taken to the front and summarily shot.

"Thank God, captain," he had answered, when questioned about the charge, "I am able to truly say that I was soldier enough in spirit and true courage to persistently fire my musket into the air, if need be, guiltless of murder."

These words doomed the poor but callant Buckley, for it was none other than he, and within five succeeding minutes he had paid the penalty of his humanity with his life. So they left him lying there among the slaughtered MacDonalds—unburied save by the covering shroud of the snows.

"If a MacDonald is seen on the way north shoot him down, men." These were the Captain's words to his troops as they issued from the defiles of the great Glen. "The Government does not want to be burdened with prisoners, and we have more spoil than we can well carry, he added: "but we can spare a bullet or two, when well invested, remember."

But few if any of the fugitives were described during the return march. The Glencoe men, estimating at its true value the ferocity of the red-coats, had dragged their wives and families to the inaccessible retreats of the mountains forming the eastern extremity of the Glen. Within the drear shelter and unfathomable solitudes of the "Devil's Staircase" they crouched for sight, and the wild ravines of Appin, south of the Glen, screened them from the keen blast of the wintry air and the still sharper edge of the cruel bayonets. The mass of the men of the Glen is a historical fact, but the tragedy of perishing families located within these bleak and wintry wilds may be conceived in imagination but can never be written and remains recorded in the ear of Heaven alone.

There was only one open return road for Glenlyon's soldiery, and that, as we have already indicated, was the slightly round-about road by the head of Loch Leven, a few miles east of Invercoe. And this route the long, straggling cavalcade of men and animals were forced to take plodding their way through roads clogged with drifted snows, the surrounding hills echoing all the way with the angry noise and howlings of the wearied cattle.

Reaching the head of Loch Leven, they crossed without difficulty the small river which flows into it, and proceeded thence in oblique north-westerly direction towards the military garrisons stationed at Inverloch and Fort-William.

Holding due north, the roads in the vicinity of Glen Nevis were found so heavy with snow that the larger portion of the troops were obliged to bivouac in the open fields, forming a cordon-line round the restive droves of cattle, resuming their journey to Fort-William on the following day, whither Glenlyon and his subalterns, with a military escort, had preceded them.

That same night, and for weeks afterwards there was feasting and revelry among the rude soldiery and officers of the garrisons of Inverloch and Fort-William.

A portion of the appropriated cattle was sold, and the money thereby obtained was duly divided among the officers and men who took part in the bloody work in the Glen.

The song of the revellers was loud, but their mirth rang a hollow note. The shrieks of their late victims mingled with the hurrahs of their joviality, and the visionary gleams of the burning villages and the blood stained snows of the ravaged valley flitted in nightmare trances through the madness of their mirth.

Five days after the return of the soldiery, Sergeant Barber, along with two of his military associates, was sitting in a back room of a rude hostelry adjacent to the Inverloch garrison. Inverloch Castle, it may be mentioned was situated a couple of miles north of Fort-William at the junction of the Dochy with Loch Leven, or Loch-Eil, as it is more commonly called. The massive structure still stands. It does not date further back than the Scottish War of Independence, and is believed to have been erected by Edward I., surnamed Longshanks, or the Hammer of Scotland, to overawe that part of the country. The castle since then has had a chequered history, and has played a prominent part in the stirring events of feudal times. A former castle occupying the present site is said to have been the residence of royalty more than a thousand years ago.

The strong military garrison then recently erected at Fort-William was the headquarters of Colonel Hill, and the soldiers had been transferred from the Castle because of insufficient accommodation, only a few men being left to sentinel its dismantled walls. Of this small garrison party Sergeant Barber formed a part, and the district being now over-awed and quiet the military discipline and exercise was in consequence relaxed, and the hours accorded to social revelries proportionately extended.

The Sergeant then, as we have just said, was sitting in the back room of a rude roadside hostelry adjoining the Castle.

It was yet the middle of February, and the days were still short, and the nights chill, and dard, and long.

The day in question had been a stormy one, and the night was fast settling over the brow of the mighty Ben Nevis in clouds of darkness and snow.

"It was yet the middle of February, and the days were still short, and the nights chill, and dard, and long.

"A wild night outside, lads," remarked the Sergeant, as the wind struck, now and again, the broad-dinged shutter which protected the small bole-window of the apartment. "The wind is off the Ben, and has a searching pin in it," saying which he thrust his hands for the twentieth time amongst the tongues of flames which arose from a well-fed fire of peat and dried turf.

"Nothing for it, Sergeant," replied one of the three bon-rivants, "but to keep pledging the King's Royal health in the best of liquor."

"God save King William!" echoed the third person in the room.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed the loud-voiced Sergeant, "that's rather good. Let's drink to that capital toast," and with one accord the three King's musketeers filled up and promptly drained off their tumblers.

"All out, lads?" asked the Sergeant, referring to the conditions of their general table canteen; "liquor dry?"

"As a drained moss, Sergeant," replied one of the three.

"Bang! bang! bang!" went the hilt of the Sergeant's sword on the rude table before which they sat, and quick on the summons the old hostess came waddling in as fast as loose clothing would allow, and although well-nigh eighty years of age still fresh and stuffy on her feet, having breathed all her days the finest airs of mountain and hillside, and drank nothing more than unadulterated Highland whisky made from the clearest of barn water, and run from the "smallest of home-made stills."

"What was the shentleman's will?" she asked, in a broken lowland tongue.

The three soldiers each shoved over their empty pots, and resumed thereafter their conversation by the fire, the homely-looking old hostess departing with empty "stoups" in silence.

In a very short time she had refilled them, and returning to the room, placed them one by one on the table, with the remark that "better drink wasna to be had between Cape Wrath an' the Mull o' Cantyre, which was a lang cry, as they wad allow. Na, lads, no even in the great Duke's cellar at Inverary," she added as a clinching climax.

"True, true, Mattie," acceded the Sergeant. "But tell me, Mattie, what's come of your pretty granddaughter Kate to-night? I miss her bonnie face much."

"Deed, Sergeant," replied the plain old hostess, "she's sheltered fore the cauld blast the night in the faulds of our shepherd's plaidie, I'm jabsin. She snodded herself weel and bonnie an hour ago, an' I'm no looking for her back till the ten hours; at any rate the plaid's a warm hap, lad."

"The devil she is," exclaimed the non-plussed Sergeant, "then I may at once begin a pilgrimage of Jerusalem, done up in tears, lamentations, sackcloth, and general ashes."

"The ashes!" echoed the old hostess, not perceiving the point of the Sergeant's not-over-brilliant joke, "fat's the matter with the ashes, Sergeant, looking in the direction of the gate as she spoke? Does the fire need a fresh peat? There's an airtain' o' turf in the bunker beside ye there. Tak' yer wull o' thes, Sergeant, tak' yer wull o' thes, for the blast whilk is blawin' at Ben Nevis and through the snaw is c'en sharp and smell," and thus delivered, the tough old hostess waddled forth of the room, to resume her spinning wheel by the kitchen fire.

"A stiff old forest oak, that, Sergeant," said one of the three when in a small door which divided the hostelry, had closed on the old hostess, "a relic of the Flood I could opine."

"Yes," laughed the Sergeant; "and Kate, her pretty granddaughter, as you know, is undoubtedly a lineal descendant of the beastions Eve. Thoght I had favorably impressed her," he added; "but devil seize these Highland jades, a Southerner has no chance with them. They hold the kilt before the trows in all cases, although the wearer should sport red hair, a freckled countenance, and a pair of national cheek-bones as high as tup's horns—fact!" and the loud speaking Sergeant laughed out his rude mirth, and was chorussed therein by his two merry associates.

"You're about right there, Sergeant," put in one of the revellers; "Here's t'ye."

"So be it," acceded the other, and the Sergeant's "very good health" was thereupon duly pledged and drank.

"About right I am," Barber repeated, "should think so. When we were garrisoned at Fort William last year I fixed on to a pretty lass at Fassfern, up by Lochell—as pretty a bird as a fowler ever netted—and I thought myself favored by her; but she fits to the house of an obstinate old mule of an uncle in Glencoe, and when I next met her there, lo and behold! the kilt is once more triumphant and I practically nowhere. Beshrew me! but I could have shot the scoundrel. I promptly challenged him, but the dog would not fight," and strong in the assurance of his lying words, the bragart Sergeant applied his lips to his tumbler, and drained off a fresh glass.

"You would have your revenge out during the affair in the Glen," put in one of the sitters.

"Partly, friend, only partly! The old man was shot, and the maid throwing her arms about him at the moment shared the bullets meant for him alone, but the dog whose blood I thirsted for escaped me—coward that he was! Heaven send us another meeting some day soon! Drink, lads, drink!"

At this moment the door of the room was pushed up, and the broad face and form of the homely old hostess filled the nether end of the lobby.

"A stranger, gentleman," said Mattie, May I bring her in?"

"What! my pretty Kate?" eagerly asked the Sergeant, half rising from his seat, not thinking that his Highland hostess had unconsciously confused the genders.

"Na, na, Sergeant, she's only a pair o'uld beggins gabberlunzie man. Can ye spare her a coin?"

"Bring the rascal in," replied the Sergeant, and presently the hostess returned to the room, followed by the bent and wasted looking form of an old man, covered with a jacket of ragged sheepskin, and wearing a beard and head of snow. He had a wallet slung by his side, and his right hand clutched a knotted crutch, on which, with every alternate step, he heavily leaned for support, as if rheumatism in his lower limbs.

"Alms, gentlemen, alms; for the love of heaven!" petitioned the gabberlunzie, extending a trembling hand. His voice had a pathetic quaver in it when he spoke and his eye alone showed the presumption of aught approaching to mental elasticity or spirit. For these important facial organs were black and piercing, and despite the pressure of years and sorrow, which very obviously bore down the poor homeless mendicant, still looked out from beneath his white bushy eyebrows with something of the fire and energy of youth. "Alms, gentlemen, alms, for I am starving! and heaven bless your kind hearts!" he continued repeating, standing uncovered in the presence of the Sergeant and his two associates.

The apartment wherein they sat was unlighted save by the glow of the fire-light, and the face of the mendicant was in deep and impenetrable shadow. The such as was seen of his face seemed old and feeble and worn.

"Sit down, old man, sit thee down," said the Sergeant. "If I mistake not you are a MacDonald, by the color of the tartan rag wrapped round your extremities, and meant to pass muster for a kill, I suppose? Eh? What sayest thou, sir?"

"Alas, yes," acceded the poor, shivering mendicant. "I was a Glencoe man, but I was too old to be shot; too old to be shot? Would to God I had died with the rest of the brave, prave men o' the Glen!"

"What, fellow! would you dare to speak well of these rascally thieves? and in the presence, too, of the very men to whose indulgence you owe your miserable life? Have a care, old scrap gatherer! Pray, for your own good sake, have a care!"

"Alack-a-day," sighed the aged beggar "that I should live to wander forth over Scotland a fugitive and a beggar!"

"Drink off that; there," and the Sergeant extended towards the trembling mendicant a jug of strong pot-ale. "You seem cold, old man; and if I mistake not there is snow on your bonnet and shoulders, eh?"

"That iss so, sir; the wind is frae the Ben, an' there is snow in it," replied the mendicant, and putting the jug to his lips he drained off a portion of the energizing liquid and seemed refreshed thereby, and thankful; but still kept his face well shaded from the glowing fire-light.

Rash Judgment.

We are daily tempted and solicited into rash and self-fettering judgments. The mental interests of society are too few to suffer personal character and faculty to remain unconvanched. Conversation runs on persons rather than on things, and we are directly asked for an opinion. Great evils come out of such questions. In the first place you may have no opinion, nor be entitled to have one. Your opinions of me slowly and silently grow up in you; and scarcely has this process begun when you are suddenly asked to define them. Yet it is probable, such are our habits, that you will not have the simplicity to resist the snare. You will be hurried into precipitate judgment—mere first impressions will be hardened into permanent conclusion—you will presumptuously speak of the deep inner nature or unknown capacity in a man from slight and insufficient hints—you will commit yourself to some defined view of him, and never again have the free privilege of open, candid, receptive intercourse unbiassed by your own rash judgment. There is a rudeness and irreverence of nature in thus assuming to judge any man. It is a baron attitude. When we have once judged a man we have as it were closed his access to us at all unexpected avenues. We are pledged to one view of him—he is no more an infinite possibility to us—we have measured him, and never more can look upon, with the freshness and reverence of an undefined hope.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880. I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine. J. J. BABCOCK, M.D.

Well Rewarded. A liberal reward will be paid to any party who will produce a case of Liver, Kidney or Stomach complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure. Bring them along, it will cost you nothing for the medicine if it fails to cure, and you will be well rewarded for your trouble besides. All Blood diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, and general debility are quickly cured. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price only fifty cents per bottle. For sale by J. Wilson.

For 10 Cents. You can purchase a bottle of Polson's NERVILINE, the greatest pain remedy in the world. Nerviline cures headache, neuralgia, toothache, pains in the side or back, rheumatism, &c. As an internal remedy, Nerviline is prompt, effective, and pleasant to take. Nerviline has no equal as a pain-killing remedy, and a test bottle costs only 10 cents. Call at James Wilson's and invest 10 cents. Nerviline, Nerviline, nerve pain cure.

A Man on a Drug Store. Never will such a rush made for any Drug Store as is now at J. Wilson's for a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons affected with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs or any affection of the Throat or Lungs, can get a Trial Bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at above Drug Store. Regular size $1.

One Experience from Many. I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In my frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and found so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, "Hurray for Hop Bitters! Let may they prosper, for they have made another well and us happy."—The Mother.

Never Give Up. If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by J. Wilson.

At first of winter vanish under the benefic influence of the sun's rays, so does Bright's Disease, Dropsy, stone in the Kidneys and Bladder, and Inflammation of the Kidneys, leave the body under the administration of Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure. Sold by J. Wilson.

Household Hints.

Never let tea boil. For rough hands, use lemon juice. Strong lye cleans faded pork barrels. Tepid milk and water clean oilcloth without soap. Have as much fruit always on hand as you can afford. A hot above held over furniture removes white spots. Smoke dried mullin leaves in new clay pipe for bronchitis. Sprinkle sassafras bark among dried fruit to keep out worms. Pop corn is a good lark for Sunday nights with milk for drink. A handful of hay in a palful of water neutralizes smell of paint. To make a carpet look fresh, wipe with a damp cloth after sweeping. Clean tea or coffee cups with scouring brick; makes them look good as new. Cover plants with newspapers before sweeping. Also put a little ammonia upon them once a week. Washing pine floor in solution of one pound of copperas dissolved in one gallon strong lye gives oak color. Remove flower pot stains from window sills by rubbing with fine wood ashes and rinse with clean water. Mixture of two parts of glycerine, one part ammonia and little rose water whitens and softens the hands. Corn husks braided make a serviceable and handsome mat. The braids to be sewed with sack needle and twine. A cheap support for vine before a window in a prairie country is a branch of a tree. Dig a post hole a short distance from the house and set your branches. Train your vines like this. To wash CHINTZ.—Make a lather of the best soft soap, add one tablespoonful of vinegar and a pinch of salt to every quart, a large proportion to rinsing water; rinsing quickly and the color will be as good as new. BLACK CASHMERE.—The best way to cleanse black cashmere is to place the dress or goods in strong borax water, make lukewarm. Let it remain in soak all night. Then take out and hang on a line to drip until nearly dry, when it may be pressed off. Do not rinse or wring. IRON RUST FROM LINEN.—To remove iron rust from linen, apply lemon juice and salt; expose to the sun. Make two applications if necessary. Then, when perfectly dry, rinse in clear cold water. Lemon juice can only be used on white goods, as it takes out printed colors as well as stains. HOMEMADE YEAST.—Four large potatoes, four tablespoonfuls of flour, two of sugar, one quart of lukewarm water; soak one yeastcake in a cup of water while you are mixing up the rest; put it in a warm place 12 hours; then it is ready for use; one cupful makes five loaves; keep in a cool place. TO RENOVATE SILKS.—Sponge faded silks with warm water and soap; then rub them with dry cloth on a flat board; afterwards iron them on the inside with a smoothing iron. Old black silks may be improved by sponging them with spirits. In this case the ironing may be done on the right side, thin paper being spread over to prevent glazing. FOR FRECKLES, THE FOLLOWING LOTIONS.—1. Muriato of ammonia, half a drachm; lavender water, two drachms; distilled water, half a pint; apply with a sponge three times a day. 2. One oz of lemon juice; quarter drachm powdered borax; half drachm sugar; mix and let stand a few days in the glass bottle; then rub on hands and face occasionally. STAINS FROM DRESSES.—Stains from fabrics may be removed by moistening the spot with a solution of Epson salts in a few drops of hot water. Rub it in well the first time and then moisten again. Next fill a tin vessel with boiling water and set it on the stove placed a few minutes, and afterwards wash out in soft water. It is advisable to have articles thus treated washed immediately. COCAUT CAKE.—Two cup powdered sugar, three eggs, one cup sweet milk, three cups flour, two teaspoonful cream tartar, one teaspoonful soda. Bake in layers. Filling.—Whites of three eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, and one of powdered sugar, to which add one-third of a package of desiccated cocoanut. BLACK WEDDING CAKE.—One pound powdered sugar, one pound butter, one pound flour. Boil eggs, one pound currants, well washed and dredged, one pound raisins seeded and chopped, half pound citron, cut into strips, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one nutmeg, one teaspoonful cloves, one wineglass brandy. Cream the butter and sugar, add well together before adding half the flour. The spice should come next; then the beaten whites, stirred in alternately with the rest of the flour, last the brandy. Bake two hours in deep pans lined with buttered paper. This cake will keep several months. To make a plain cake, take half the quantity of fruit, seven eggs, and three-fourths of a pound of butter. POISON IVY. As several cases of poisoning have occurred from the handling of this seemingly harmless plant, we publish the following recipe, which is said to be an unfailing remedy, and may prove very useful to some of our readers in the future:—Put ten to twenty drops of bromine in one ounce of olive oil or glycerine and apply three or four times a day, especially on going to bed. The bromine is volatile, so only a small quantity should be made. Jane Grey Swisshelm is out with fresh commendation of the corset; "Man, in Christian civilization," she says, "sees no beauty in the female form unless there is a notch all around it, like that with which a woodman denudes a tree. The deeper the notch the better is he pleased, and in making this notch for his admiration and convenience a woman as surely, if not as shortly, takes her own life as the woodman takes that of the tree."

Cold and Heat.

Women make a mistake in trying to increase their comfort in hot weather by covering the arms and neck as lightly as possible, while the trunk, certainly in part, has five, six, eight or ten thicknesses of covering. In a congregation of ladies dressed in this way and gentlemen dressed in broadcloth throughout, every lady will be fanning herself and consciously suffering with heat, while the men, apparently entirely oblivious of the weather, are at liberty to give undivided attention to the sermon. Men do not bear heat better than women by constitutional endowment, but by reason of the fact that they are so clad that the lungs are free to take in abundance of oxygen, and the blood free to flow to every part of the system. Besides the circumstance that the woman can only half breathe, and their clothing piled up on some parts causes too much blood to accumulate there, and consequently those parts lightly covered have too little blood, and as a matter of course they must suffer. By securing to themselves greater uniformity in the distribution of the clothing and making it loose and easy, ladies lose their dread of summer's heat and of winter's cold as well; for there are multitudes of well-to-do women in this country who have never known what it is to be dressed comfortably warm in cold weather.—[Dr. H. N. Austin.] Teeth Retained by Drinking Water. A well-known dentist called the attention of a reporter to the effects of Allegheny River water on the teeth of a large portion of our citizens. He stated that there were more persons afflicted with white decay or crumbling teeth in this vicinity than in any other city in which he had practiced. The teeth of those afflicted with this form of disease were generally very white, and they gradually crumbled into powder. He attributed the great prevalence of white decay here to the absence of lime in the drinking water. People suffered from acidity of the system, and lime was the alkali which would benefit them. In the eastern portion of Pennsylvania, or rather in countries where the people drank "hard" water, they generally had hard and sound teeth, but in communities where "soft" water was used the opposite result was found. He advised the drinking of lime-water by people troubled with white decay. Water Bouquets. I raise quite a variety of flowers, consequently I am quite fond of making bouquets. One I think very handsome is the water bouquet. The smallest flowers are the prettiest. I generally take sweet slyssum, fuchsias, rose geranium leaves, and perhaps a pink or two, arrange them in a small bouquet, wind the stems closely together with thread, then leave about a finger length of thread, to which fasten a small piece, also fasten tin foil around the stems. Get a pail of water, a glass tumbler, and a small plate, put the plate in the bottom of the pail, your bouquet in the glass in the pail upside down upon the plate, raise up your plate, and if all the air is out of the glass, you will have a beautiful bouquet to adorn parlor or school-room. Scholars are always anxious for something new. Golden Opportunities. How lamentable that we should go through the world misunderstanding one another; letting slip golden opportunities for glimpses into men's better nature, which might have knit our hearts to theirs in a brotherhood of love, and drawn the veil of charity over faults which, in our blindness, seemed to us without a virtue to balance them. Angels turn sorrow away from this soul-blindness of ours, and friends laugh over the final fall of despair which our helping hands might, at such moments, have averted. Well for us all it is that He, who is himself without sin, more merciful than man, sees gathering tears in eyes that we deem hard and dry. Doesn't Change Nature. Some people fear that marriage will suffer if we establish female colleges, but this is a mistake. The president of Vassar college (for women) was asked whether the wisdom the young ladies acquired made them look down on that miserable creature man as a deplorable object, to which he replied with a smile, that "man was the first institution the first woman ever knew," and she will in future as in the past look up to him. To prove that the young ladies can learn Greek and master trigonometry and still think of marriage, all I have to say is that three of the graduating class go to their homes to be married this summer. These are Solid Facts. The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, Tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by J. Wilson. [4]

The Tricycle &c.

The girl on a tricycle has already made her appearance at the summer resorts. As observed at Newport, she sat between two wheels, which were connected by a short axle-tree, on a kind of saddle—stride of it, but not so circumstanced as to make divided garments necessary, as in riding the back, man fashion. Her feet reached down to treads, and her hands were employed in steering by means of a device connected with a low front wheel. Her posture was not that of sitting, however, but her figure was suspended nearly perpendicular, and her legs were moved a great deal like those of a horse afflicted with springhalt, or a swimmer treading water. Her knees came up high with an action more productive of good exercise than of grace. And yet she was a symmetrical and pleasing traveller. The prescribed costume is soft, thin flannel, with a blouse waist, and a skirt reaching just to the gaiter tops. It is obvious that the latter could not be steadily maintained, in view of the high treading required to work the tricycle, without some special modification of the garment. This want has been supplied by taking an idea from the equestrian habit. Lengthwise of the skirt in front two gussets are set in at points where the knees will protrude into them in riding. Kind Words. Give the young and struggling a word of encouragement when you can. You would not leave those plants in your window-boxes without water, nor refuse to open the shutters that the sunlight might fall upon them; but you would leave some human flower to suffer from want of appreciation or the sunlight of encouragement. There are a few hardy souls that can struggle along on stony soil—shrubs that can wait for the dews and sunbeams—vines that climb without kindly training; but only a few. Utter the kind word when you can see that it is deserved. The thought that "no one cares and no one knows" blights many a bud of promise. Be it the young artist at his easel, the young preacher in his pulpit, the workman at his bench, the boy at his mathematical problems, or your little girl at the piano, give what praise you can. How to Make Children Moral. I sometimes think that instead of beginning, as we do, with a whole heaven and earth embracing theory of duty to God and man, it might be better to adopt with our children the method of dealing only with each particular instance of moral obligation emphatically as it occurs; with each particular incident of life, detached, as it were, from the notion of a formal system, code, or theory of religious belief, until the recurrence of the same rules of morality under the same governing principle, invoked, only in immediate application to some instance of conduct or incident of personal experience, built up by degrees a holy precedent that would have the force and efficacy of law before it was theoretically inculcated as such. Whoever said that principles were moral habits spoke, it seems to me, a valuable truth, not generally sufficiently recognized or acted upon in the task of education.—[Mrs. Kemble.] To the Medical Profession, and all whom it may concern.
