The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER LIII.

"What can be the matter? What has gone wrong in the girl's life?" thought the kindly woman. "The only thing that she reminds me of is a flower broken by a tempest."

When chance gave her a few minutes alone with the general, she turned to him with an anxious face.

"Sir Arthur," she said, abruptly. "What has happened to Leah?"

"To Leah? Nothing," he replied. "Nothing!" said the duchess. "Are you blind, that you cannot see? She has death in her face."

"My dear duchess, you exaggerate," answered Sir Arthur, laughing. "She has not been well lately; she has tired herself by nursing Hettie. Besides, the journey has been a trying one."

"Nonsense!" said the duchess. "That will not account for the change. Tell me—for I am her best friend—is all right between Leah and Sir Basil?"

"Yes. The wedding has been delayed on account of Hettie's illness, but Leah does not mind it. Basil would have been with us now but for the Parliamentary business."

"And you are quite certain that there has been no misunderstanding between them?" pursued the duchess.

"Certain? Most assuredly! Basil came with us as far as Dover; and you should have seen the lovers parting! All is right there."

"Beautiful Leah Heston is going to die," said the duchess to herself; "and nothing will persuade me that all is well between her and her lover."

The general did not feel quite so sure that all was right when he parted from his niece. She was not looking well, certainly, and the way in which she hung round his neck with kisses, and murmured words of gratitude struck him.

The duchess made one effort to win the girl's confidence. The family had been a week at Montone, and Hettie was already much better.

"Leah," she said, gently, one day, taking her hand, "you know I have always been your best friend. I love you with a great affection, and I am more than distressed about you. You are not happy; will you tell me why?"

Leah bent her head and kissed the kindly hand that rested in her own. "I am as happy as it is in my nature to be," she replied, gently.

"Talk me, Leah, is all well with you and Sir Basil?"

"All's well," she answered. "Dear duchess, I have nothing to tell. If I had, it would be told to you, my best friend."

"Dear Grace-of-Rosdene was not satisfied."

"There is nothing to cause you any unhappiness then I am convinced that you are altogether out of health. No girl could look as you do without some reason for it. You have completely changed. Every one is asking me what is wrong with you."

After that Leah took a sudden resolution.

There was in Montone a celebrated English physician, Dr. Evan Griffiths—a skillful, prosperous man, very popular among the invalids and the English at Montone. He lived with his mother in a pretty little villa. Popular as he was, he had never married. It was said that he had no time for wooing.

One evening, as Dr. Griffiths sat alone in his study, the servant announced a young lady. She had sent no card and had given no name, but looked very ill.

At first the doctor felt annoyed. He had no liking for mysterious patients, and felt it hard that he could not have one card in peace over the Lancet.

"Show the lady in here," he said, impatiently.

But his impatience died away when a tall, closely veiled woman came in and stood silently before him.

She did not speak until the servant had closed the door, then she raised her veil so that he could see her face and he was startled by its delicacy and wonderful beauty.

"I know that I am calling at an unusual time," she said. "I thank you much for seeing me. I have a question to ask—a question of life or death. Will you answer it?"

"If I can," said the doctor. "Does it concern yourself?"

"Yes," she replied. "And then he felt that death and not life would be the answer, if he could judge from her face."

Lord Cecil's Dilemma

—OR—

The Picnic Woodall Forest

CHAPTER I.

He pressed a cold kiss on the brow of his daughter. He only saw a lanky girl of thirteen in short frocks. He did not think that she was pretty or even would be, and she shrank from her hard-featured parent abashed and afraid. That was five years ago, and my lord had come home again to find his child the most beautiful of women.

It was her mother over again, and his heart immediately went out to her, filled with love and yearning.

"Gladys!" he said, softly, holding the shy-faced girl from him at arm's length, and eagerly devouring every perfect feature. "Can this be my Gladys!" He suddenly pressed her to his bosom, murmuring: "You are the very picture of my dead wife, child! It seems that she is rebuking me for giving you so little of my love and care!"

"Oh, papa, it makes me happy to hear you say this—to feel that you love me a little." She nestled closer to him, and he smoothed the shining strands of her rich, brown hair. "My aunt has always been so good to me, and I love her very, very dearly, but I have often felt, papa, that there was something missing in my life."

He did not answer her, but his eyes became misty, and there was a sensation of choking in his throat.

"I will make amends for the past, my darling," he replied, at last. "I have only just awakened to the knowledge that I have a sacred duty before me—the duty of living for my daughter. What must you have thought of your father all these years?"

"Dear papa," she said. "I always knew that you were good and noble. How could you be otherwise when you worshipped the memory of my mother? Aunt Marcella has told me—Aunt Marcella has said that you would love me some day when the keen edge of your grief had worn away, and I have waited for you with faith and patience. I did not understand you as a child, but now I am a woman! I am eighteen!"

He started and a spasm of pain crossed his face.

"Eighteen!" he murmured. "A woman! Had he found her only to lose her again? At eighteen her mother had become a wife. He would question Lady Marcella about Gladys."

"I am glad that I am like mamma," she went on, "because it makes you care for me. Papa, aunt says that you have a picture of my mother looked away somewhere. I should so like to see it."

"I had it removed from the gallery when she—she left us," he replied, huskily. "I was jealous of every eye that looked upon all that was left of my sainted wife; but it shall be replaced this very day, Gladys. It is the picture of one of the purest and fairest women that ever added honor to our noble race. I have ever carried a miniature of my wife next to my heart. This you shall see now; the painting tomorrow."

From a fine gold chain that encircled his neck, he detached a tiny locket. His fingers trembled, and he paused a moment before pressing the spring, while Gladys waited with humid, expectant eyes.

The locket opened, and the face of the girl's mother was looking at her; a face of almost scintillating beauty, smiling with the gladness of happy youth.

"Oh, papa!" gasped Gladys, tenderly kissing the miniature. "Am I like this? Am I half so lovely as this? Oh, why could not my darling mother have been spared us?"

There was a passion of regretful sorrow in her voice, and Lord Howard echoed:

"Why?" Then he passed one hand over his face, and added: "I have sent the same cry to heaven many times, Gladys. I have rebelled against God in my agony, but these are things which we mortals may never understand."

Gladys reverently pressed the locket to her lips and the earl replaced it in his bosom. Then winding her soft white arms about his neck, she whispered:

"Papa, you must let me love and comfort you, for dear mother's sake, as much as it is in my power. This is the one link of sympathy between us that no earthly power may sever!"

A bitter cry escaped him, and he pushed her away almost rudely.

"Don't, my child," he said. "Speak not to me of comfort, hope, or for happiness in this life, for you belong to a race that is accursed—accursed by reason of a parent's crime!" Then he took her in his arms again, adding:

"What madness is there in my words! My troubles must have hurt my brain!"

I'm thirsty not for wine to drink In lighted halls where glasses clink. But for the day's refreshing breeze Filtered through fragrant orchard trees. And for the joys of field and hill Where weary eyes may drink their fill.

I need refreshments—not the sort Of tabled board or bottled quart. But strength renewed by wandering far. Where all the summer's splendor's are. A day or two where waters roll. And I can be refreshed of soul.

DE SATISFIED!

There are many young people who seem to think that if they see the old folks of the family have warm rooms, enough to eat, and clothes to cover them, they have done their duty to them nobly. Would they be satisfied with warm rooms, enough to eat and clothes to cover themselves with? Has anyone ever satisfied with the conditions of these primary wants, the care man days when it was difficult to satisfy them that man's wishes did not go beyond?

Thankful But Not Happy.

It is a fact that young people of whom to be affronted by when they become aware of it, but it is a fact that the same old folks want more than they want attention, they want a chance to talk about their lives. They want to be useful, they want to be important, they want to be thanked for all these things and to be thankful because they have a roof to cover them and a fire to warm them, they may be thankful but they will not be happy.

A few days ago I heard a woman complaining because her mother-in-law is a shut-in beats against the bars of her captivity. "She has nothing done for her," said the mother, "and yet she isn't happy. I don't understand it." If anyone in the world should understand it that person is the one for she herself has had painful experience in being shut out she was very far from being

The Wedding Day.

It has been proved that the Scots have a particular liking for marriage on the last day of the year, and December 31 has more weddings than any of the other months of the year. When February enjoys the same good fortune it is very clear, but it is possible that the 28th loses its privilege once every four years.

"There's a Reason"

on a stormy February day, and without such modern conveniences as a spring or umbrella, things went ill with the pretty bride in all her finery when the rain fell and no shelter was available. That is why our ancestors of long ago spoke of "visiting the church porch" to get married, and not as we would to-day of "going to church" for the same purpose.

The throwing of rice at weddings, though still practiced, has of late rather gone out of fashion. Rice is the most prolific of grains, and has been ever emblematic of good fortune and the hope of a "quiverful" to bless the union.

An old Chinese legend tells us how nearly two thousand years before the birth of Christ there lived a far-famed magician in China called Chao. To him came a Chinaman—one Pang—for advice as to his future.

Everyone knows that at the best of times this is a doubtful thing to do, whether in ancient China or within a sympathetic circle in modern Highgate—Result—disney, for Pang learned that his fate was death and that the next six days would be his last "Doctors differ," however, Pang forthwith hid him to another sorceress, possessed of the fair name of Peachblossom, who however, only corroborated Chao's decree, though she promised to avert the calamity by her charms.

It is not surprising to learn that Chao was amazed to see Pang walking the earth on the seventh day; and the workings of the minds of sorcerers are revealed when, far from being delighted to see his ill-omens retorted, Chao at once flew into a passion on realising who was responsible for the miscarriage of his prophecy, and he resolved to destroy Peachblossom, whose power was evidently greater than his own.

With the cunning of a man versed in both the wiles and the dependences of the female sex, Chao approached Peachblossom's parents, and with fair words pretended to seek the daughter's hand in marriage for his son.

The simple souls consented. Sorcery apparently had no power over parents. The marriage cards were exchanged with all the necessary formality and the day fixed, but Chao had chosen well, and on that day the sign of the Golden Pheasant was in the ascendant. He went about his business chuckling to himself.

But Peachblossom knew exactly what old Chao was up to, and knew that as soon as she sat on the ceremonial red chair at her wedding, so surely would the great spirit bird strike her to death.

Peachblossom feared neither man nor bird; and evidently accustomed to the male sex, she used but a simple art to assure herself of the success of her purpose. At the fateful hour she caused large handfuls of rice to be thrown outside the doors of the temple, and while the bird gobbled up the grains she passed safely on her bridal way.

Before the motion was put Sir P. T. McGrath explained his reasons for asking the question re the Fever Hospital. Sir Patrick understood that it was the intention of the government to abolish Sudbury, which action, he thought, would be very wise. He always contended it was a bad bargain to purchase this hospital, as the work could easily be done at the General Hospital with much less expense to the colony. Referring to the Sanitarium he was startled to learn that for 56 patients who were undergoing treatment at this institution, there were 50 officials to care for them. Throughout the world in institutions of this character it was always recognized that at most there is one attendant for two patients. In connection with tuberculosis Sir Patrick referred to the splendid work accomplished by the late Hon. John Harvey, and he regretted that the campaign organized by this gentleman had not been continued.

Mr. E. K. Bishop, endorsing what had been said by the previous speaker, thought it highly improper that the Fever Hospital should be under the control of one man no matter how competent.

Mr. News spoke briefly on the efficiency of the work as carried on under the present control. The committee stage of the Bill was put through and it was given a third reading. A Bill entitled "Taxes on certain incomes" was given a brief reading after which the House adjourned until Friday next at 4 p.m.

Legislative Council.

TUESDAY, June 6.

Shortly after the House opened yesterday afternoon, His Excellency, Sir C. Alex. Harris, accompanied by his private secretary, Col. North, arrived and were conducted to the Council Chamber by President Ryan. There was only one visitor, Rev. Mr. Fillastre, brother-in-law of His Excellency, present. Mr. North being instructed summoned Mr. Speaker and members of the House of Assembly to attend the Council Chambers. When all had assembled, the Clerk of the Council Chamber read the following bills which were assented by His Excellency, Marine Disasters; Delinquent Children; Central and District Courts; Judicature Act Amendment; Business Profits Tax; Aerial Air Service; Repeal; War Pensions Act; Customs, (further amendment); Postal and Telegraph Service; Commercial Cable Co. Agreement; Protection of Animals; Stamp Duties; Enforcement of Judgments; R. C. Episcopal Corporation.

After the conclusion of this formal ceremony the House went into committee on the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Tuberculosis Sanitarium, and the Sudbury Hospital."

Hon. Geo. Shea who had charge of the Bill explained that it was for the purpose of handing over the control of these institutions to the Board of Governors of the General Hospital, thereby facilitating their management. He stated that the Sanitarium cost the Colony about $110,000 per year, and the average number of patients were from 65 to 70. The advantage of the institution is the isolation of the patients which tends to minimize the spread of the dread disease. Sudbury Hospital had been purchased by the Militia Dept. at the cost of $29,000, and was devoted to the care of military patients. The annual expenses in connection with this institution were $10,000. Regarding the questions asked at the second reading of the Bill by Sir Patrick McGrath, the leader of the Government said: "The reason why the Fever Hospital was not put under the control of the Board of Governors was that being a place for highly infectious diseases it was handed by the Dept. of Public Health of which Dr. Brehm was head. No specific amount could be voted towards this department, as at any time an epidemic might arise, calling for increased expenditure. The Government therefore deemed it advisable to have the department under the direct control and its executive head responsible. To expect the Board of Governors to undertake the management of this hospital in addition to the activities in which they were already concerned would be unreasonable."

Before the motion was put Sir P. T. McGrath explained his reasons for asking the question re the Fever Hospital. Sir Patrick understood that it was the intention of the government to abolish Sudbury, which action, he thought, would be very wise. He always contended it was a bad bargain to purchase this hospital, as the work could easily be done at the General Hospital with much less expense to the colony. Referring to the Sanitarium he was startled to learn that for 56 patients who were undergoing treatment at this institution, there were 50 officials to care for them. Throughout the world in institutions of this character it was always recognized that at most there is one attendant for two patients. In connection with tuberculosis Sir Patrick referred to the splendid work accomplished by the late Hon. John Harvey, and he regretted that the campaign organized by this gentleman had not been continued.

Vital Statistics.

Those who are interested in the Vital Statistics of Newfoundland, as published month by month, in the daily press, from copy furnished by the Registrar General, will have a subject for reflection in the perusal of the Annual Report of that official for the year ended December 31, 1921. This report, of course, contains tabulated statistics for the full year, and is therefore somewhat behind the current monthly returns, which are always ready for press at the end of each period, so that those who like to keep abreast of the figures can always refer to the per mensem statements and make up their totals from these. For the report under review we beg to thank the Registrar General, who epitomises the annual return from the various deputy registrars in the preamble of his official statement. It will be interesting to note that there were 12,921 registrations for the calendar year ending December 31, 1921. These are summarized as follows: Births, 7,272; Marriages, 1,522; Deaths, 3,497, giving a natural increase in population of 3,775. A comparison of 1921 with 1920 statistics shows that there was a falling off in births during the former year of 527 and a decrease in the number of marriages totaling 316. The number of deaths however, were 762 less than those registered in 1920. The rate per thousand being 13.29, the lowest hitherto recorded. In the city the death rate was 16.06 per thousand, also making a record, the number of demises being 595, less by 102 than those of the previous year. As usual, next to deaths from old age, Pulmonary Tuberculosis claims the highest number, that for the year being 389. At the same time it is worth noting that this is less by 110 than deaths from the same cause reported for 1920. The rate per thousand of population is but 1.47, the lowest in the history of the Colony, and to quote the Registrar's words "speaks volumes for the good work done in combating this disease." It would be impossible here to give in detail the tables per town and district as published in the report. Space only permits of a general statement such as the above, but to show with what great care and accuracy the registers are kept, it is but necessary to refer back to the figures of population as estimated by the Annual Reports of this department in order to discover that there is but little difference between the approximate and the actual, all of which shows how very careful the Registrar is in the compilation of his general returns. The total population of Newfoundland as shown by the last census returns of 1921 is 259,317; of Labrador, 3,621, making a total for the Colony and its dependency of 262,938. The Telegram takes this opportunity of congratulating and complimenting the Registrar General, Mr. W. J. Martin, and his capable staff on their close attention and devotion to the important duties of their department.

Fish Exporters Meet.
OUTRIGHT SALES AND PORTUGUESE TAX DISCUSSED.
That careful consideration must be given the question of outright sales, was the decision reached by the Fish Exporters' meeting over which Mr. J. Long presided yesterday afternoon. It was admitted that outright sales would be welcomed by the trade, but the London Brokers, whose letter was under discussion, were not the purchasers of the fish. The matter was one for arrangement between buyer and seller. It was thought that any effort to force outright sales might have a bad effect on our markets, and would open them to our competitors. The suggestion that a resolution should be passed endorsing the brokers' suggestions, was not entertained. The feeling was that this might operate against the exporters. The Portuguese tax on fish entering that country was also discussed by the exporters, and a committee consisting of Messrs. J. Long, C. Pratt and J. Campbell was appointed to draft a letter to the Council of the Board of Trade for transmission to the Government who will be asked to take the matter up with the Portuguese authorities.

Mr. Wilde, who is a New Yorker, began his career in 1910, after having previously graduated from Trinity Chapel into a Boys' Quare. His longest run was with Henry W. He went overseas with the Americans and was wounded in the arm and had part of his left foot shot away. There are 15 pieces of shrapnel still in his leg, so he may be said to have a sort of limb is concerned. On demobilization he took a course at Columbia College in play writing and dramatization. He has produced ten vaudeville acts. One "The Dress Rehearsal" is not playing in England and two others are running in the United States. He is producing an act for Billy Clifton next year entitled "Outward Appearances." Mr. Wilde was featured for several years in "Oh, that Melody." ESCAPED CONVICT NOT LOCATED.
Since 1 p.m. yesterday, when he was reported to be in the woods between the T-bay and Portuguese Cove Roads, nothing has been heard of Kitchener Edwards, the young convict who escaped from the Penitentiary on Monday. The police, both mounted and plain clothes, are keeping up a constant search, but so far their efforts to locate the fugitive have been futile. Edwards, clad only in his prison clothes, and without food, is making a desperate attempt to hold his freedom. Either he must have received food from residents of the district in which he is hiding, or else he is possessed of an extraordinary stamina. He will probably head towards the sea with a view to getting away in some vessel.

Conference Sends Greetings.
BRITISH LEGION TO G. W. V. A.
The following message has been received by the Secretary of the G.W.V. A., Capt. Gerald Whitty:
"The British Legion in Conference, representative of the 1870 branches, received with the greatest pleasure your cordial message and desire to most heartily reciprocate your good wishes."
This is a reply to a message of greeting sent by the local G.M.V.A. to the Conference, which opened on June 2. Capt. J. J. Fox is the Newfoundland representative. The British Legion and Ex-Services Men's League is the British organization to which all imperial branches of G. W. V. A. are affiliated. They met on Friday last for a three days conference to discuss matters of great importance to all ex-servicemen.

HIS DIARY.

June 6.—Up betimes, and to Water Street, where a minute or two with Mr. Baird upon a discourse of the railway and it will be but another fortnight when the agreement ends. To the Board of Trade where I have discourse with Mr. Urphart of the players now in the city. They very good, but their plays have no plot but will, I hope, improve. One did lend me the book by Mr. Sinclair called "The Brass Check." A most amazing tale and divers charges made in it which are hard to credit, and yet must be true. I hear how Mr. Coaker writes in his journal of his being overweight and when I see him, I will advise him of a course to take to reduce him. The House sits, but adjourns till Monday, nor any business done. The Opposition did ask for an adjournment for a month, and this, because they wish to leave the government to settle the railway matter themselves. My wife takes her first lesson in driving the motor coach and is, she says, doing well with it, which I doubt.

Wind up the Wednesday half-day by seeing "Madam Sherry."

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

A TARIFF 'BOOMERANG.

WASHINGTON, June 6.
Pessimistic predictions as to the effect of the tariff bill on trade of United States and Canada, South America and Europe are being made daily by Senate Democratic leaders and other opponents of the bill. Senator Stimmons, a Democratic leader who has been making a study of the effects of increased British preference by Canada, holds United States is confronted by a heavy slump in export and import trade, by reason of the high rates in the bill. He foresees greatly enlarged trade between Canada and United Kingdom, and believes Great Britain will gain much in world markets by the alleged prohibitive tariffs of the pending bill. He pointed to the fact that trade between Canada and United States dropped fifty per cent. since the emergency tariff bill passed.

LENINE ILL.
RIGA, June 6.
M. Yureneff, Russian Soviet Ambassador to Latvia, announced to-day that Premier Lenin is suffering from acute gastritis, with a high temperature, following an attack on May 28. An official bulletin, issued to-day, says the Premier's condition shows some improvement.

Fires Burning Out.
BOTWOOD IN NO DANGER.
Botwood is in no danger from the forest fire which broke out near Bishop's Falls on Sunday. The fire is rapidly burning itself out, but continuing in the direction of the sea. Only the smoke was seen at Botwood. The inhabitants of Wigwam Point were frightened and left their homes, but the place is not now in any danger.

Here and There.
Est. MRS. STEWART'S Home Made Bread.—april, 6mo
GOING TO DOMINO.—S.S. Portia will likely sail on Monday for Labrador, going as far as Domino.

PRESENTED PHOTOGRAPH.—Mr. E. A. Pavn, Secretary of the Board of Trade, has presented to the Museum, a photograph of the Church of St. Brigid's in Jersey, where the flag of the Newfoundland Fenicians rested for so long. The photograph is of the greatest interest, and Mr. Pavn's courtesy is highly appreciated.

Early Egyptians Discovered Year.

The calendar which we use for marking time came to us from the Romans, but the people of old Rome were not the authors or inventors of the plan by which the year was divided into 12 parts. That distinction belongs to the Egyptians, and they say it is to be credited, and it is not likely that the venerable Greek historian would have given to the people of the Nile empire any honor which he could claim for the people of Hellas. Herodotus wrote nearly 600 years before Christ that "The Egyptians were the first to discover the year, which they divided into 12 parts, and they made more wisely than the Grecians, in that the Grecians insert an intercalary month every third year on account of the seasons; whereas the Egyptians, reckoning 12 months of 30 days each, add five days each year above that number, and so with them the circle of the seasons comes round to the same point."
That seems to have been a pretty good calculation to be made by people who lived 2500 years ago and who had no such thing as a telescope. And it is likely that when Herodotus wrote the people of the land of the Nile, pyramids, lotus and the mummy had been observing that kind of a year for thousands of years, dividing it into 12 months, dividing the month into 30 days and adding five days each year so that the months of spring would always come in the spring and the months of winter would fall in winter.
In naming the months, Herodotus says the Egyptians were the first who introduced the names of the 12 gods and that the Greeks borrowed those names from them. They claimed to be the first to assign altars, images and temples to the gods and to carve the figures of animals on stone—Kansas City Star.

Physic in Plants.
We have all become so accustomed to go round to the chemist's shop when we require medicine of any kind that we quite forget that our grandfathers found remedies for every common complaint in the hedgerows.
An old manuscript book, written nearly a hundred years ago, tells of many of these simple remedies.
For tonics for spring use she recommends an infusion of the common camomile. Of wild mint she made an infusion which was a useful stomachic, and valuable, she says, in case of colic. Sage tea she recommends as a stomachic medicine, but adds that the plant should come from chalky soil. Gentian is another common plant recommended for the tonic properties of its roots.
Instead of pills, she made an infusion of the inner bark of the common elder. She says that this must not be used too strong. The yellow inner bark of the black elder is also a purge.
Found in the Hedge-Row.
One ounce was boiled in a quart of water, and to this was added a small amount of ginger and some caraway seeds. Roots of the hemp agrimony, gathered fresh, and boiled in beer, are equally efficacious.
For children suffering from worms, the flowers of the common tansy were gathered, dried, powdered, and mixed with treacle. Yarrow has always had a great reputation with herbalists. The freshly-gathered tops were used to make a drink which is said to have been most valuable in case of bad legs and ulcers.
Marsh-mallow, she writes, is excellent for poxities, having soothing properties, and mullen leaves boiled down she used for a liniment for bruises and sprains.

HEROIC CONDEMNED MANUFACTURE AND USE.

At a mass in the Church, at South River, on Sunday, Rev. Dr. ... eloquently, but forcibly, ... present that he would not ... among the people of his ... any "moonshining." Fire at South River.

HEROIC EFFORTS AVERTED BIG CONFLAGRATION.

On Sunday last, just after the morn- ... ing's services at the various churches, a fire which might have had disas- ... trous results under other conditions, broke out at South River in the store of Mr. Fred Hussey. It was located in the upper portion of the building and quickly attracted the attention of the residents. Apprised by telephone of the occurrence, Rev. Dr. Whelan and Rev. Fr. Casey of North River in- ... stantly had both their cars out and quickly recruiting men rushed them to the scene's walls, others pro- ... ceeded in carriages and on foot. A bucket brigade was formed of resi- ... dents of South River, Clarke's Beach and North River, and men who chop- ... ped through the roof with axes soon had the fire under control, though the roof and upper portion were badly damaged with the stock contained in that part of the building. All worked splendidly and with precision, but had a high wind been blowing a serious conflagration must have occurred.—COM.

Coffee is Grown.

It is generally spoken of as a bean, but that part of the tree that we use is really the fruit. The tree grows naturally to a height of twenty to thirty feet, its natural growth is checked by growers, who keep the trees as flat as the ground. The cutting does not hurt the tree and it is far more con- ... venient to gather the fruit.

The coffee tree begins to bear fruit at about three years old, and continues for about twenty years, after that time it begins to decline. The fresh blossom and green fruit will appear on the tree at the same time.

The fruit of the coffee tree is round and looks like our cherries, but when it is ripe, it is eaten as we eat our cherries. It contains two seeds—the white which we are familiar with in a skin, with their flat sides. The meat of the fruit is called pulp, so when the fruit is gathered it is dried so the seeds may be removed.

Coffee came first to be used in Arabia, but it has been known for at least a thousand years. It was introduced in Europe three hundred years ago.

"Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" Breaks Record

"Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" proved last night to be the St. John's public, that it is a 24-karat attraction. The picture was all it was claimed to be. Motion picture enthusiasts are not an easy lot to please, but they all walked out smiling in spite of the fact that they had some difficulty getting through the crowds. The story of the downfall of Joe Morgan, who is cheated out of a lumber mill which his father had founded, and his regeneration after the death of his child, who was killed by a heavy beer glass thrown by the cheat, Simon Slade, is one which the theatre-going public are well acquainted. But in the screen version, there is interwoven another romance concerning Dora Slade, daughter of the saloon-keeper, and Willie Hammond, a wealthy village boy, who also falls a victim of Slade's criminal doings.

"Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" has an appeal that is unusual. There is something about it that gives it a touch of humaneness that is not seen in an ordinary photoplay. The continuity was written by one of the best play adapters in America, and the story is played by a competent cast. John Lowell plays a difficult role to perfection, whilst Baby Ivy Ward wins the hearts of movie fans by her skillful acting.

The First Reform Bill.

The first agitation for Parliamentary Reform was the most protracted and, in its later phases, the most violent that England has experienced. That the representative system of the times had become outworn and hon- ... eysombed with abuses, had long been evident; but it was natural for the oligarchy entrenched behind it to defend the position to the last. Hence arose the peculiar obstinacy and bit- ... terness of the struggle. The outbreak of the French Revolution, while it quickened for a time the demand in England, soon aroused by its excesses the opposition of the large moder- ... ate section of the people, and thus retarded instead of advanced the pos- ... sibility. But after the final peace, when the triumph over Napoleon was suc- ... ceeded (as triumphant wars gener- ... ally are), by internal distress and dis- ... content, the agitation was renewed with vigour, after a violent crusade by the popular leaders in the country, the Whig Ministry, which had suc- ... ceeded to power after many years of almost unbroken exclusion, intro- ... duced the first bill for Parliamentary Reform, which was brought in by Lord John Russell in 1831. The subse- ... quent controversy was embittered in the House and serious tumults and riots followed the rejection of the Bill in the Lords. The worst case was at Bristol, which was partially sacked and burned, but similar if smaller demonstrations occurred in all parts of the country. Lord Grey, the Prime Minister, then proposed to create as many peers as were necessary to pass the Bill; but this course was not needed. Acting under the advice of Wellington, about one hundred of the most hostile peers absented them- ... selves, when the Bill came up again, and at last (June 7, 1832) it became law.

"As Moses Muses."

(Newspaperdom).

I think the newspaper feature business has just about reached that point of congestion where the pendulum will swing to the other way. Every abuse curses itself in the reformers' hands. As the pendulum swings back, the low-powered stuff will fly off into space and the worthy only will survive. Instead of buying features in bulk, editors will pick out what they really want and reject what they don't. Instead of filling their pages with the slobberings of 57 varieties of the 2 x 4 writers, they will select a few features of merit, and let it go at that.

To-day the average newspaper is filled with shams and a casting box.

Little is written outside a few columns of local stuff. The papers are letting unknown nobodies make a temporary fame in their columns, and a business appears clear across the country. What is lacking is originality. To edit a paper with a pair of shears, a paste, pot, and a casting box is lastness gone to seed. It is easy, but it isn't ennobling or inspiring. It is not producing good journalists nor advancing journalism. Some of these days the backward swing of the pendulum will begin, and then I think there will be a lot of empty tin cans for sale at prices that should forest the sardine, salmon and sprout industries.
