CHAPTER XXXIV.

"I will tell you what division I have made of what I have to leave, Isabelle," the countess continues; "and I speak in strict confidence to you, as I told you before, when I informed you that I had provided for you in my will. Lord Pentreath is not aware of the terms of my will."

"You told me you mean to beget Poor Captain Glynn and his wife in some way, dear Lady Pentreath," Isabelle says, with an humble, innocent look of inquiry, "and I said I thought that was so good and generous of you," she goes on, smiling sweetly, as if she has not a selfish thought on earth. "I dare say it was the loss of money that helped to separate them; and I think Dallas Glynn has been tolerably well punished by twelve months of hard work and poverty. And so I said to you when you asked my advice, chere comtesse, that I thought it would be a good thing to try to bring them together again, and save poor Yolande from breaking her heart, dragging out a lonely, miserable life, the slave of Lady Nora's worldliness and selfishness."

"Yes, you did," the countess agrees, looking pleased; "and I thought it was kind of you, as I know you did not like Dallas Glynn. Well, Isabelle, I have left him twelve thousand pounds, the interest of which will give him just about five hundred a year, the sum he was deprived of under the late lady's will. The principal is to be divided among his children, or to revert to Yolande after his death."

"Goodness me!" Miss Glover thinks, "I have repaid Yolande well for that friendly greeting she gave me at Pentreath. I vowed I would do her a good turn for showing that Murray woman and her daughter how she regarded me. But I didn't think I was going to reward her so splendidly. What a generous creature I am! I shall certainly grow quite pious in the long run."

"And to you, Isabelle," Lady Pentreath continues, "I have also left twelve thousand pounds, and my dresses and few ornaments, and my Brussels lace. Lord Pentreath, under our marriage settlement, inherits the rest of my fortune."

"Oh, my dear Lady Pentreath, how good you are to me—how generous and good!" Isabelle exclaims, having indeed a hard struggle to keep from crying again. For the bequest is a surprise, and a most pleasant one. At the most she had not hoped for more than two or three thousand, or a hundred pounds annually. And the jewels and the lace—why, they are worth hundreds more!

"I have put Mrs. Bretz and some of the old servants down for small annuities," the countess goes on, "and I have endowed a couple of hospital beds, and given a few hundreds to some local charities; and that is all, Isabelle, except my diamonds. With the family jewels of course I have nothing to do—they are for the next Countess of Pentreath—with a faint smile that quivers and dies on her pale lips—"but my own diamonds—the earrings and pendants and rings and bracelets—I have given them to Joyce Murray."

It is "Mordcaid in the gate" to Isabelle Glover, even in the first flush of her prosperity, to hear this.

"Indeed!" she says, striving hard to say it amiably. "That is a handsome gift surely, dear Lady Pentreath. I hope she will fully appreciate your goodness. Few women would have been so generous and noble-hearted!"

A spasm crossed the poor faded, sunken face of Lord Pentreath's wife at these words—she understands their meaning so well.

"She will know, Isabelle," she says at last, in low, unsteady tones, "that I thought kindly of her at the last. I hope she will think kindly of me whenever she remembers me."

"I hope she will. She ought not to forget you, if she is capable of grateful feeling!" Isabelle remarks, bitterly. "But, for all that," she says within herself, "I'll make those the dearest jewels Joyce Murray ever wore! She will think them but a poor equivalent for the Pentreath family jewels, and the Pentreath coronet, which she thinks is just waiting for her to stretch out her dainty hand and take. But she never shall—never, as long as I live!"

Later on that same day, as the useful Miss Glover is busily writing business letters for the earl in her admirable, clear, neat calligraphy, while he signs them with an aristocratic and quite flexible scrawl, he—after some uneasy "hamming" and "fidgeting"—asks a question which has puzzled him very much these three days since the countess and her companion returned from London.

"I say, Belle, what the deuce ails you?"

"Ails me?" Miss Glover echoes, pausing with her pen suspended, and a glance of cold surprise at her interlocutor. "I am quite well, thank you, my lord."

"Stuff!" his lordship says, irritably. "You know what I mean. You're in a deuce of a stiff stand-off temper! What's the matter?"

"Nothing," Miss Glover replies, calmly, "except that I have grown much wiser lately. Will you sign that and hand me over those account books?"

His lordship does as requested, scrawls his name viciously, and then looks at Isabelle again under scowling brows, which relax as he gazes at her.

"Come, Belle, you mustn't be stiff with me," he says, going round the table and touching her pink cheek familiarly.

Miss Glover lays down her pen deliberately and rises from her chair.

"You forget yourself, Lord Pentreath," she says, haughtily—and he quails beneath her fashing eyes. "I am not Joyce Murray!"

"Why—why the deuce do you inform me of that fact?" Lord Pentreath retorts, stammering with wrath. "I suppose I'm aware of it without your telling me. You're as jealous of her as you can be!"

"Jealous of Miss Murray?" Isabelle Glover asks, with frigid scorn.

"Jealous of what, pray? Her reputation?"

"Don't you meddle with Miss Murray's reputation," he responds, fiercely. "Mustn't! It is very fragile, I suppose," she retorts, calmly. "It ought to be, from the severe handling it gets."

"From whom?" his lordship snarls, his face lividly red. "From you?"

"Oh, dear, no!" Belle replies, with a careless smile. "I am not a married woman. She hasn't injured me that I am aware of; therefore, she has had no chance of wronging me."

"Joyce has wronged no married woman! How dare you say so, Belle!" he exclaims, agitatedly.

"You are speaking from your point of view, my lord," Miss Glover says, gravely, unmoved, and continuing to add up a column of figures; "but the wife who is robbed by a pretty rival of her husband's time and attention and thoughts, and such affection as men ever do bestow on their wives, and who knows this same pretty rival is waiting—actually waiting, and pledged to wait—until death or dishonor breaks the marriage fetters and sets the husband free—this wife, I say, is apt to consider herself bitterly—shamefully wronged."

Lord Pentreath rises to his feet, visibly disturbed, changing color, and looking both enraged and frightened.

"You are an audacious woman to speak to me so!" he says, haughtily, but in an unsteady voice. "It is a vile attempt to slander Miss Murray and me, while sheltering yourself under Lady Pentreath's protection. You think you are sure of her partisanship!"

But Miss Glover rises too, laying down her pen and closing her account book, while she gazes at him with such dignified, reproof and amazement that the Earl of Pentreath feels "mean," as Americans say, to a most disagreeable degree.

"You are making an extraordinary mistake, Lord Pentreath," she says, in severe tones, in which anger and sorrow are admirably blended. "I made no allusion to you and my loved and honored friend, Lady Pentreath. I scarcely understood your extreme indignation—with a cold smile—even for the sake of your friend Miss Murray."

India is often spoken of as the land of mystery and certainly some of the things that are done by the wandering magicians of that country are almost beyond comprehension. These strange men are met with in all kinds of unexpected places and they assuredly do perform tricks that take a lot of explanation.

Indian Magicians.

The wonder worker is invariably accompanied by a small boy whom he describes as his son, and the paraphernalia of his profession is contained in a couple of baskets.

Minor tricks of the usual type are performed—the disappearing egg, the resuscitated handkerchief, the production of fire through the mouth, the multiplication of marbles, the vanishing rupee, and so on. But the main tricks are the mango trick and the basket trick.

Most people have seen the mango tree trick, famous throughout the world. A small hole is made by the wonder worker in the ground with his fingers, and a mango seed is put into this hole and covered with mud. Water is poured over it and then a basket placed over the top, covered in turn by a cloth.

After a while the cloth and the cover are removed partly in order to give the onlooker a glimpse of a plant which has grown to a height of about six inches. Later the plant is uncovered and is found to have grown to a foot in height with leaves and twigs, and at the last stage of uncovering the plant has reached a cubic and is bearing fresh fruit.

The basket trick is another favorite trick of the wandering Indian magician. With some difficulty a boy is placed into a basket in a doubled up attitude. The basket is then covered with a cloth, and the conjurer draws a long kitchen knife which he thrusts into the centre of the basket. Thereafter the knife is drawn out dripping with a red fluid resembling blood, but when the cloth is removed and the basket is upturned the boy is found to be no longer inside, but approaching the gathering of interested spectators from the rear.

There is also the rope trick, but at the risk of reviving a well-worn contemporary reference to this trick must be avoided.

Lord Haig's Surprise Visit to Edinburgh.

Earl Haig recently paid a surprise visit to Edinburgh Castle and the great Field-Marshal received a greater surprise than he gave by his unannounced visit. He was in multi- and accompanied by his wife and two daughters. "Go back and pay your admission money," was the salute he received when attempting to pass the sentries, who, of course, did not know him under the circumstances. Earl Haig did as he was told and then he, with his wife and daughters, proceeded to look around the Castle. He chatted with several of the men on duty, one of whom he recognized as having seen service at Loos. He left without calling on the Castle authorities and the fact of his visit was not known until some time afterwards. It would have been interesting to have heard Earl Haig's opinion of the state of himself on the esplanade of Edinburgh Castle. It had been completed for nearly a year and had not yet been unveiled. The statue was a gift to the city of Edinburgh from an Indian admirer of the Earl. An endeavor was made to get the Prince of Wales to perform the unveiling ceremony, just after it was finished, but it was put off owing to the donor of the statue being recalled to India. This was followed by further postponements. The statue when Earl Haig was at the Castle presented a very weather-beaten appearance. It was covered with a few old pieces of dirty canvas, and the figure of the horse stood on a pile of stones which showed traces of being rapidly overgrown with grass. The rider had a comical appearance and a broken down barricade suit mounted by barbed wire completed the sorry spectacle.

Shouting by Order.

In the good old days it was the legal duty of anyone actually witnessing a crime to pursue the offender, at the same time shouting to his neighbours to join in the chase. This "Hue and Cry," as it was called, had a legal significance; the first man was bound to shout, his neighbours were bound to join in the pursuit, and the "wanted" man could be taken without a warrant, or, if he resisted, could be cut down, or even killed in the fight. And if he was so killed, it was quite lawful, providing that the Hue and Cry had been duly raised after him.

As time went on habits changed, and in the last century the Hue and Cry was legally abolished. Even now, however, the presence of paid constables does not discharge the ordinary citizen from his ancient duties, and every man is still bound, if properly called upon, to assist the authorities in an arrest.

The only difference is that the mob may no longer raise a legal Hue and Cry, but that the official alarm might be given by the proper person.

Under the Sheriff's Act of only a few years ago, "every person in a county must be ready and appalled at the command of the sheriff and at the cry of the county to arrest a felon, and in default shall, on conviction, be liable to a fine."

And the printed notices we see outside police stations relating to escape of criminals, stolen property, and so on, form such a command. Strictly, everyone should read them and act on them.

This England.

"I am English born and bred," announced the political candidate. "My father and grandfather were English, my wife is English, my works are in England, and my workpeople are all English. I stand before you as an English candidate." And then a pitying voice came from the audience: "Oh, man, has ye nas ambection ave?" Sporting and Dramatic News.

MARKET REPORTS

indicate that there is no surplus of Anthracite Coal in the U.S. The shortage caused by the strike of Anthracite Miners last year has not been made up, and American hard coal will, in all probability, be hard to get and high priced. Coke is an excellent substitute for hard coal, and we have on hand a stock of same that will soon be disposed of because a shortage of hard coal invariably creates an increased demand for our product.

We advise our customers to book their requirements as soon as possible.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE AT AN END.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. Germany's moral or weaponsless warfare upon French and Belgian occupation of her territory and sovereignty may be said to have come to an end. Officially its termination has not yet been decreed, but aside from the noisy minority of the Super-Nationalists, the complete opinions of inside official circles and the sober judgment of political, industrial, financial and labor leaders are no longer under the delusion that the dropping of the people of the Ruhr and Rhineland can be sufficiently referred to make passive resistance an effective weapon for another single day.

STRESSMAN CALLS PREMIERS TO CONFERENCE.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. Chancellor Stresemann has summoned the Premiers of the Federal States of Germany for a conference of the Ruhr situation. It was announced today, to be held on Tuesday. It is looked upon in political circles as assuring early action on the issue of abandoning passive resistance.

A NOTED FIGURE PASSES.

LONDON, Sept. 23. Viscount Morley of Blackburn, former Lord President of the Council and Secretary of State for India, died at his residence at 11, Bedford Square, London, at 11.30 this morning, and the end was peaceful. He was eighty-five years old. Lord Morley leaves no heir and the peerage becomes extinct. The veteran writer and statesman lived for a long time in almost complete retirement. Like his colleague in the Health Ministry, John Burns, he passed from the Government in 1914 because he could not acquiesce in the war policy. Lord Morley came out of his retirement in 1921 to speak on the Irish Agreement and gave his support to the Irish treaty.

CHARLESTON, W. Virginia, Sept. 23.—That the Ku Klux Klan held an initiation in the dining room of the White House was the statement of Rev. Basil E. We have 227 Klansmen in the House of Representatives, 27 in the United States Senate, and we held one initiation in the White House, he said, and you know what that means. Dr. Churchman, a leading Klansman, who was present, nudged a newspaper man at this juncture and whispered, he forgot to mention five members in the Harding Cabinet.

Van Horne Favored Pulpwood Embargo.

Sir William Van Horne, builder of the Canadian Pacific and creator of numerous other important and successful Canadian enterprises, always maintained that Canada should not allow the export of pulpwood. He waged a strenuous fight with the government of the day to protect Canadian forests and the Canadian paper-making industry by prohibiting the export of unfinished pulpwood. "Stumps and holes in the ground; that is all we have to show for our exports," declared Van Horne one day. "One cord of pulpwood exported from Canada yields to Canada and all her interests less than six dollars, but the same cord of pulpwood manufactured into paper yields thirty-six dollars." The figures would be higher today but the principle and the proportion would remain the same. Van Horne also remarked, "No sane individual would waste his raw materials in such a way when he could do so much better with them, and I can see no good reason why a government should do so any more than an individual."

Benedictine Relics in England.

Further interesting discoveries have been made in the course of the excavations at St. Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury, believed to be the first Benedictine abbey in England. In 1900 the site of the eastern portion of the Abbey church and of the convent buildings was bought by public subscription and, under the direction of the late Sir W. H. St. John Hope and Mr. Sebastian Evans, the Tudor Lady Chapel, the crypt of Abbot Scotland (1070-1087) with its three chapels and the eastern side of the central tower, also built by Scotland, were excavated. Then the chapter house and infirmary foundations were discovered under the Abbey Field. In 1913 the work was resumed and the central part of the church exposed to view, including the north transept and eastern part of the nave with the north aisle, and under the Norman foundations, the round church of Abbot Wulfic (1097-1089), and the remains of the north porticus of St. Augustine's Church with the original tombs of his first three successors, Laurence, Mellitus, and Justus.

During the war the work was stopped, but in 1920, largely through the generosity of the late Lord Northbourne, digging was resumed, and since then the whole of the nave down to the west door, and the whole of the south transept, together with an important fourteenth-century chapel, probably the Chapel of St. Anne or the Countess's Chapel, in which was buried Juliana de Leyburne, Countess of Huntingdon, in 1387, have been excavated. In the nave the excavators have found not only the floor and western front

Augustine's original church, with nave and narthex, but some later Saxon extensions probably made in the time of St. Dunstan. These have all been planned by Mr. C. R. Peers, F.S.A., Chief Inspector of Ancient Monuments, and Mr. Alfred Clapham, F.S.A., who are of opinion that in them we have the earliest plan of a Benedictine church in Europe derived directly through St. Gregory from St. Benedict and Monte Casino. A sum of £2750, says the London "Times," is necessary to complete the work, which includes the excavation of the western parts of the north and south aisles, the remainder of Wulfic's crypt, and as much as possible of the ground to the north side of the church.

The Fisheries of Nfld.

By M. E. CONDON.

In my last letter on the fisheries of our native land, under date of July 22, 1922, I hoped that I would have soon recovered my health to go abroad to get capital in the United States and other foreign countries to develop the fisheries of Newfoundland on modern lines with new ideas. Newfoundland would take first place in the markets of the world as a fishing country if we gave the consumer a standardized article of fish food, and also utilized our vast waste of fish for fertilizing purposes. It was a pleasure to me on Wednesday last to attend the meeting in the Grenfell Hall in connection with the fisheries, and to listen to valuable information given by Professor Huntman who represented the Dominion of Canada, Mr. Gardiner, the representative of Newfoundland, and Mr. L. Outerbridge, President of the Board of Trade, and a director of the firm of Messrs. Harvey & Co. His Excellency Sir Wm. Alford, K.C.M.G. in his remarks on our fisheries, Newfoundland's greatest asset, showed how carefully he had been considering the subject, and how strongly he believed in its development.

I am now taking up the pen on behalf of my native land, and will not lay it down until I succeed with my great undertaking. If I cannot get capital here to modernize our fisheries and help to keep my countrymen, the fishermen and others in their native land I shall get it abroad. Newfoundland is the best country on God's earth, and with its great asset, its fisheries, it can provide an unlimited supply of food. Millions are spent yearly on various purposes but not for bait depots, etc. to help the fisheries and those depending on same in the homeland. I may state that I have not alone the masses but the classes at my back in this fight of my life to modernize our fisheries and to utilize a part of our colossal waste which could be easily estimated at tens of millions annually.

Senator Herbert Hoover, of pure food fame, now Secretary of Commerce in the United States of America, says "utilize the waste." Henry Ford of motor car fame and now, one of the wealthiest men in the world, says that he was ten or twelve years tinkering with his motor car before he made same a success. I have given over 34 years of my life to our fisheries, and claim to have a better proposition than Henry Ford. Fish is one of the common necessities that man must have. Our part is to market it in an appetizing and attractive form.

During the past winter I wrote Hugo Stinnes, Germany's multi-millionaire and great industrial magnate, as to our fisheries and my proposition, and I received a favourable reply. I also had a reply from Lord Leverhulme. There must be something in my ideas, or else my letters would have gone into the waste paper basket. Countrymen! why is it that you take so little interest in developing your country's great mine of the sea on modern lines? Our fisheries will always be our greatest asset, and every other enterprise will have to take second place. I have spent those 34 years of my life in the hard school of experience, and will not take any other place to anyone in Newfoundland today in my knowledge of the fisheries.

In the Humber Proposition you have an enterprise capitalized at about eighteen millions of dollars, on which Newfoundland's present and future generations have given a guarantee to pay interest on half of said capital. I am not speaking detrimentally, as I hope for the country's sake that the Humber proposition will be a success. Now my proposition that is before the Executive Government will be capitalized at seven million dollars ($7,000,000) which will include ten or more cold storage and fertilizing plants from Trinity to Pleasant Bay inclusive, with seven fishing vessels to prosecute the Grand Bank fishery with a plentiful supply of bait fishes. We shall have two or more steamers with cold storage plants and shall utilize said steamers at the Seal fishery. The by-products of the Seal will be used for fertilizing purposes. I have a trap of my own invention by which fish are taken alive. They will be all blue, which will make them a superior article, both in appearance and from a medical standpoint, and all green livered fish will be scrapped.

Thirty years ago I conveyed a trout alive from one pond to another. Inside of three years I will convey fish alive to Boston, New York, and possibly London. Have we not made a success of our codfishery from a portion of the codfish by handling same in a crude state? Have we not thrown back into the water the best of the codfish, the tongue and also the sound? How can I fall when I will utilize the waste and all kinds of fish in our waters? Under my plan all employees will have a living wage, and the yearly employee will be given a bonus on certain blocks of stock that I will give them from my promoting interest. I will have no strikes from my co-operative or co-partner employees as their future is in the success of the enterprise.

St. John's, Sept. 20, 1923.

Wedding Bells.

PRINCE-FIELD

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized in the C. of E. Cathedral on Thursday, Sept. 20th, the contrasting parties being Miss Bertha Prince, of Princeton, and Mr. Hubert Fifield of Bonaville. At 10.30 a.m. the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of Mr. Heber Harnet of Bowring Bros. Ltd., who acted as father-giver. She looked charming in a fawn costume with lawn and blue hat and white fox fur, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white asters, sweet peas, and maiden hair fern. The bride was attended by Miss Etta Fowling of the Postal Telegraph Staff, who was becomingly attired in silver gray canton crepe with blue and gray hat, and carried a bouquet of pink asters and maiden hair fern. The vows of the bride were capably performed by Mr. H. R. Penner of the Railway Despatching Staff. After the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Nicholls, the wedding party drove to the home of Mrs. Connors, Monroe Street, where a wedding breakfast was partaken of and the usual toast duly honored. The bride was the recipient of many useful and costly presents including a purse of gold from the Postal Telegraph Staff, of which she had for some years been a capable and energetic worker, and the groom a handsome travelling bag from his co-workers of the Railway staff, showing the esteem in which they both were held. The guests present to the bride was a beautiful white fox fur; to the bridesmaid a French ivory dressing set; to the best man a set of gold cuff links; and to the father-giver a gold scarf pin. At 12.45 p.m. amidst showers of confetti and the best wishes of their many friends, the bridal party motored to the station where the happy couple joined the express en route to Boston, their future home.

Thomas Meighan in Screen Version of "Civilian Clothes."

STAR HAS ROLE OF CAPTAIN WHO TURNS BUTLER TO RE-WIN HIS SNOBBISH WIFE.

Thomas Meighan's first Paramount starring vehicle is "Civilian Clothes," produced by Hugh Ford from Thompson Buchanan's popular stage play of the same name. The picture will be shown at the Star Theatre to-day. The story concerns an overseas captain who marries a pretty American society girl in France. She is attracted to him chiefly because he is so handsome in his uniform. Later she returns to America, comes news of his death. She has renewed her acquaintance with another admirer when her husband, very much alive, comes to her home. Disappointed at his unromantic appearance in civilian clothes, which show atrocious taste in their cut and color, she snubs him. The gallant ex-captain thereupon secures a job as butler in his wife's household with the avowed purpose of teaching her a lesson in democracy. The results are amusing in the extreme, and, of course, the story ends happily. Mr. Meighan's supporting company includes Martha Mansfield, the beautiful heroine of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and other screen notables.

Obituary.

Passed away Saturday night after illness of six months, Bridie Miskell, one of this city's most popular and highly esteemed young ladies. She contracted a very severe cold during the winter months and in spite of all kind assistance and most skilled doctors, she passed away. Three months ago she was removed to the Bartlett Bungalow, Cabot Tower, where it was thought sunshine and good fresh air and medical aid would rally her. But alas it has been such a bad summer that the weather failed everything. She saw that it was not use being so bright and good; she knew God wanted her, and returned home, satisfied to die knowing that everybody had done what they could for her. She leaves behind a sorrowing family: her parents, 4 brothers, James and Peter (two of our well known musicians), Pat and Jack, and one sister, Kitty, to whom the sympathy of the whole community will be sent.

Autumn.

Autumn, of all seasons, brings with it the luxury of memory and tears that are not salt. No modern poet has expressed this more beautifully than Alice Meynell in her lines "In Autumn": The leaves are many under my feet, And drift over my way Their scent of death is weary and sweet. A flight of them is in the gay Where love and forest meet.

I walk to joy and life alone Over these mournful spaces, Across the summer overthrown, The dead joys of these silent faces. To claim my own.

O leaves, so quietly ending now, You have heard cuckoo's sing. O tell me, tell me ere you die, Is it worth the pain?

You bloomed so fair, you waved so high; Now that the sad days wane, Are you repenting where you lie? Kiss me again as I kiss you; Kiss me again; For all your sunset nights of dew, Is this your time of rain? For all your kisses when Spring was new?

You will not, broken hearts; let be, I pass across your death. To a golden summer you shall not see, And in your dying breath There is no benison for me.

There is an autumn yet to wane, There are leaves yet to fall, Which, when I kiss, may kiss again, And bid me in mist and rain.

Swimmer on Fire.

ALARMING INCIDENT IN CHANNEL

An alarming accident occurred on board the French trawler which was taking Perreault, the Canadian swimmer, back to Calais after an unsuccessful effort to swim the Channel. Perreault, who finished up three and a half miles off South Foreland, was almost paralyzed by the cold after ten hours in the sea.

He crawled into a small cubby-hole on the trawler to warm himself. A French sailor began to remove the grease from his body with petrol and suddenly the fumes reached a stove, and there was an explosion. The petrol on Perreault caught fire, and, wrapped in a flame, he made a dash for the deck to get into the sea. His wife and Mr. Fisher, a press representative, saw him, however, and, following him, smothered the flames with blankets and mackintoshes.

There was a danger of the fire in the cubby-hole reaching a ten-gallon can of petrol; but a French sailor cried in and rescued this in time. The fire was hesteg out with salt. On arrival at Calais a doctor was called, but Perreault, although burned about the body, was not seriously injured.

The presiding genius of a Scotch house despatched his servant with a note to a neighbor. "Did you take the note, and did you see Mr. Thompson, Jock?" "Yes, sir."

"And how was he?" "Why, he looked pretty well, but he's nearly blind." "Blind? Why, what do you mean?" "Why, while I war in the room he asked me where my hat war, and O'm blest if it wur'n on my head all the while!"

Little Girl Injured.

A little girl named Howell received a nasty gash over the left eye yesterday while playing on the shuttle-shute at Banerman Park. Her injuries were attended to by Dr. Macpherson, and she was later driven to her home Duckworth St. It has been checked up and found that on an average during the fine weather the shuttle-shute had been used no less than 10,000 times per day. Since its erection there have been only two slight accidents.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR DISTEMPER.

For Thrifty Mothers.

When there are several little girls in the family, it is economical to have their coats all alike, so that the garments can be handed down from one girl to the other, without causing the remarks, so dreaded by sensitive children, that they have to wear out their sisters' clothes.

Little vests can be made out of the legs of light-coloured woolen stockings, the feet of which are past darned. Cut open the legs, lay a paper pattern on, and cut the vest from it. In adapting garments to younger wearers, unpick, press, worn from a good pattern, and try to make them look as like new garments as possible. It is bad management if they are so adapted as to be at once recognized as having belonged to someone else.

To destroy moths in wardrobes, sprinkle in a few drops of ammonia. It will also destroy beetles, cockroaches and other insects, and is excellent for removing bad smells.

Never place a mirror where the sun can shine directly on the back, as the light and heat injure the quick-silver, and the glass soon becomes spotted.

The German mark has sunk so low in value that New York brokers are ceasing to handle it. The next thing, the Calgary Albertan says, we shall hear that waste baskets are charging it rent.

A diminutive cockney was deerstalking in the Highlands, where he had engaged the services of a tall and powerful game-keeper.

"The day was particularly warm, and the keeper, irritated at the ways of his little master, gave vent to his ruffled feelings by growling at regular intervals at the "midges" which swarmed around him.

"I cannot understand," said the Cockney, patronizingly, "how the 'midges' bother you so much. I haven't got so much as a single bite yet."

"'Hoots,'" replied the other, contemptuously, "they hlvna noticed ye yet."

"You are now leaving Anyburg. Thank you," the sign says. "Ah," says the scornful motorist, "the pleasure is all mine."

Dr. G. N. Nurphy will resume practice Monday, September 24th. sept20,21

The Development of the West Coast Farm Lands.

In the address of the Hon. J. F. Downey, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, to the Rotary Club, his references to the natural resources of the West Coast, and the need for better transportation facilities are timely, and let us hope, are in the nature of a forecast, since they were uttered by the representative of the greater part of that coast. For the first time in its history the member for St. George's is a Minister of the Crown, and it is particularly fitting that he should be at the head of the Department of Agriculture and Mines. Year by year the people on the West Coast are giving more of their attention to farming, and many of them are confining themselves entirely to the one industry. It is very desirable that our people generally wherever it is possible should cultivate their land, and such thrift deserves encouragement, as it adds to their food supply and considerably reduces their living expenses. It is not, however, by such efforts as these that an agricultural industry will be established. For that we must look to the people who, living in the districts which possess natural advantages for farming, will make it their sole occupation. It is work which demands the whole attention and energy of those engaged in it, and in every month of the year there is some special work to be done.

St. George's District offers greater advantages for such an industry than any other part of the Island in its rich soil, its less variable climate, and what is perhaps more important than anything else,—in the natural inclinations of the people. Since the earliest settlers came there, from the West Country, from the Channel Islands and from Nova Scotia, which was the first landing place of many of these pioneers, they have been engaged in pushing back the forests and draining and cultivating the land.

While that part of the Island has wonderful agricultural possibilities and many natural advantages, it has also many drawbacks which can be removed. The honourable member for St. George's has always been an ardent advocate of agricultural development. During the time when he previously represented the district he did much to encourage the industry, and now that he is the guiding hand in our agricultural policy we anticipate an era of progress.

One of the greatest deterrents to the farmer has been the absence of markets. The establishment of a town at Grand Falls has helped to remedy this to some extent, and the city in the making at Corner Brook will prove a further stimulus. The success of one industry invariably helps to benefit another, and in a like manner the development of one section of the community tends to uplift the whole, provided the policy adopted is not prompted by personal interests. If in his speech the member appeared to make comparisons somewhat detrimental to the eastern side of the Island, without doubt he had in view ideas which, if carried out, would be advantageous to the country generally.

Transportation has retarded farming on a big scale more perhaps than anything. The railway runs through a great part of the farming country, but the land must be linked up to the railway line. New roads, improved roads, and bridges are imperative if the landowners are to succeed. With such formidable rivers intersecting the country as the Codroy, River Brook, Crabb's, Barachois, Robinson's, Fischell's, Flat Bay, Little Barachois, and St. George's—to refer to but one section of the coast—communication other than by railway is impossible between one part and another. Operations in this direction have already begun, and under the able management of our Government Engineer, Mr. T. A. Hall, Little Barachois has been bridged and there is under construction a bridge of giant dimensions in the Codroy Valley.

Not one of these rivers can be bridged except at considerable outlay, but when the advantages of such an expenditure are considered, the wisdom of undertaking the work cannot be questioned. Apart from the interests of the farmer, they would be of great benefit to the community generally, and to the tourist, a continuous road community generally. To be one of the greatest attractions.

One has but to glance at our list of imports to realize in what a great measure the country would benefit as a whole were an active agricultural policy decided upon. It is not an exaggeration to say that practically everything agricultural that we import can be profitably raised in the Island by private enterprise.

It is the duty of a Government to give every encouragement and to offer every facility to such ventures once it has been proved that they are economically sound, that they will provide employment, and that they will flourish without Government subsidies.

Distinguished Scholar and Preacher

COMING TO ST. ANDREWS. In response to the unanimous invitation of the Kirk Session, Dr. Geo. Hanson of Montreal is coming to our city for "A Week's Teaching and Preaching," beginning Sunday, October 14th. Before coming to Canada Dr. Hanson was for 12 years the Minister of Marybone Presbyterian Church, London, and during that time became recognized as one of the outstanding religious leaders in the Metropolitan area. He has published many books, among the best known of which are "A Chain of Graces," a devotional work, and "An Apology for Christianity," dealing specially with the evidence of Christ's Resurrection. In a church noted for its preaching ability, Dr. Hanson is regarded as one of its strongest preachers. There will be nothing denominational about the services, they will be for all and the general public will be invited to share in them. A detailed programme of the services will appear later.

The Feast of Ingathering

The Feast of Ingathering, known also as the Feast of Tabernacles or Succoth, will be observed for one week beginning to-day, September 24th, the concluding day being Tuesday, October 2nd.

Following so close upon the great religious holidays of the Synagogue the harvest feast attracts less attention than it intrinsically merits. For, despite its primitive origin and agricultural setting Succoth is capable of yielding the modern worshipper sober joy and a spiritually enheartening message.

Its Biblical basis is Deuteronomy 16:13-14 where it is said: "Thou shalt keep the Feast of Tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in from thy threshing floor and from thy winneps. And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy maid-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow that are within thy gates." Reference to the Feast of Tabernacles is also made in Leviticus 23:34-42, and in other parts of the Pentateuch.

That our national Thanksgiving day is directly patterned on this ancient harvest festival or Israel admits no longer of dispute or doubt. The Pilgrim Fathers being earnest and devout scripture readers transferred the harvest festival of Israel to our own American environment.

In ancient Israel this harvest feast was of great importance. People in large numbers wended their way to the central sanctuary in Jerusalem bearing palms and fruits. The procession became in course of time a Pilgrimage and was so known in later years. In connection with the celebration of this festival prayers were offered for rain and dew.

There is an obscure reference to this custom in the last chapter of Zechariah. The popular outburst of joy there mentioned is echoed throughout the liturgy of the Harvest Festival.

Both in the synagogue and the home the festival bears a joyous aspect. It is indeed a season of gladness. The worshipper is reminded of and impressed with God's goodness and mercies which endure forever. The beauties of the earth are intended for all mankind. This confidence is voiced with great conviction so that no one may fancy the earth is a vale of tears or the abode of gloom.

According to the preachment of the Synagogue the feast of Succoth is the message of Israel to humanity on the dignity of labor and the value of the soil by which human beings obtain their daily bread. Whatever sustains mankind is precious and dignified in proportion to the amount of toil expended on it.

Particularly stressed on this feast is the notion of God's protection over Israel throughout the centuries. As God protected Israel during the forty years of his wandering in the wilderness, so hath God shielded him during the centuries of his subsequent pilgrimage over the earth.

During Succoth week it is now customary for all American congregations to decorate their places of worship with harvest symbols such as fruits and flowers and grain. Some congregations even erect a booth as the prime symbol of the occasion reminding and exhorting for the larger service of the old and young that Israel was a pilgrim and a laborer in the vineyard of the Lord, preparing in isolation humanity.

McMurdo's Store News.

EVERY MOTOR CAR SHOULD CARRY A TYRE. Every owner of a car has had that annoying experience of a delayed start in cold weather due to his engine being "cold."

Gasoline, Kerosene, and similar products become less volatile in cold weather and in consequence it is more difficult to get an explosive mixture into the engine cylinders.

When Ether, which is far more volatile than gasoline, is mixed with the latter in the proper proportion a readily explosive mixture is formed in the cylinder.

Fire on S.S. Manoa.

Yesterday at 4 a.m. a fire broke out in the quartermaster's quarters on S. S. Manoa, and before it was quenched the room was practically gutted. When the blaze was discovered the ship's fire fighting apparatus was brought into play, but it was nearly a half hour after that all danger had passed. The four officers who occupied the room lost practically all their belongings. The city fire companies were not called out as it was seen that the ship's apparatus was sufficient to cope with the blaze.

Motor Smash Up.

Two motor cars, one of which was owned by Mr. W. E. Burns, and the other by Mr. J. Miller, collided with considerable force at the junction of Circular and Rennie's Mill Roads yesterday afternoon. Fortunately none of the occupants were injured. Mr. Burns' car was proceeding east along Circular Road and Mr. Miller was coming up Rennie's Mill Road from the Bridge. Both cars reached the junction simultaneously, and the impact occurred almost before seen by the drivers. Mr. Miller's car was hurled across the road to the sidewalk and had the dashboards crumpled away, the headlights smashed to pieces and the engine considerably damaged, while the radiator of the other car was crumpled up and the engine put out of action. Both drivers claim that they gave the usual warning on approaching the corner. This is one of the most dangerous junctions in the city as the surrounding property makes it impossible to notice the approach of cars from any other direction.

Henry Peddle, Crane Repairman at Works IS CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Caught in the gears of a crane which he was repairing, Henry Peddle, a crane repairman employed in the open heart department of the steel company, was instantly killed this morning, his body being terribly crushed and mangled by the revolving gear. The tragic accident occurred while Mr. Peddle was repairing a trolley on top of the No. 2 Shaw crane, when the operator ignorant of the fact that the unfortunate man was engaged at work on the crane, started the machinery, with the result that Mr. Peddle was drawn into the gears. Before his position was noticed, life was extinct.

The "Post" was informed this morning that as far as the crane operator is concerned, the tragedy was purely accidental, as he had not been informed of Mr. Peddle's dangerous position, and it is expected that the coroner's jury will exonerate him from all blame.

The late Mr. Peddle was a native of Conception Bay, Nfld., 28 years of age. He has been in the employ of the company for the past five years. A married man, he is survived by his widow and one child residing on Ferris Street, Ward 4.—Sydney Post, Sept. 20th.

Miss Lindsay's Death Accidental.

That Miss Lindsay's tragic death at Cartwright on August 1922, was due either to accident or suicide is the conclusion reached by the Justice Department following the recent investigation of the matter by Head Constable John Byras. The Deputy Minister of Justice informs the Telegram that he is convinced that murder had not taken place and that Miss Lindsay shot herself either by accident or design. The circumstances of the disappearance of the body nearly 4 months afterwards at a place which had been some over by searchers coupled with the fact that no weapon was located, although there was a bullet wound in the body, lead to at least three independent investigations of the reports of which fill some dozens of sheets of type script. It is gleaned that Miss Lindsay's body was discovered by two men, Martin and Coombes, who had noticed dogs digging in the snow. These men had been on a shooting trip up country and were retiring by a Komatik route which crossed a small brook at a point about 1000 yards inland from Cartwright Station. At this point they had previously noticed the dogs and following a slight investigation they located the body under several feet of snow. Four months previously and two days after the girl's disappearance searchers had been within 10 yards of this spot, but then it was covered with Indian tea bushes. The presumption is that Miss Lindsay on her way to take a bath in salt water pond into which the brook flows stopped to shoot some muskrat which abound in the river and that she fell on the streamer which she was supposed to have secretly carried. The body was fully dressed, the unfortunate girl having on a coat, riding breeches and travelling boots. Her hand was on the bank with her legs and body in the water. Beside her was a bathing costume. In the pocket of the coat was found about a dozen bullets that would fit a Browning pistol. The post mortem examination held at Cartwright showed that a bullet had entered the left side, passed through the heart and out on the other side of the body. From this it is concluded that Miss Lindsay must have fallen on the weapon as it was almost impossible to turn it on herself in the direction of a curious fact, however, in connection with the tragedy is that no weapon has been found despite a most diligent search. The post mortem disclosed nothing which would tend to indicate deliberate suicide. Had she other worries there is no doubt but that she would have confided in her friends, particularly Miss Styles, who had been with her for some months at the Cartwright School. An effort was made to get in touch with Miss Styles, and during a trip to the U.S.A. the Inspector General made a visit to Philadelphia for the purpose, but she was travelling on the continent.

NOTE OF THANKS.—George W. Hargrett and family of Grand Falls desire to place on record their very deep gratitude to the numerous friends who by their assistance and sympathy greatly helped them in their bereavement when a devoted wife and affectionate mother was called to rest. The kindness of the Doctor, the kindness of the Holy Trinity Church for providing a beautiful casket, and the willingness of many friends to lighten the burden of sorrow, all this is much appreciated. And when on Sunday the 16th inst. all that was mortal of their loved one was laid to rest in the hallowed acre of the Holy Trinity River valley, the citizens were privileged to witness the most uplifting service that was ever there and in even greater numbers attended at the graveside, by the tributes of their compassion and sympathy for them and beautiful service of the teaching of St. Paul, who wrote: "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."—adv.

ON THE GRACEFUL VISITOR.

The open season on visiting has officially closed. With the opening of school and the closing of the summer home, the three months when more people go a-visiting than during the remaining nine months, leaving many a hostess feeling as if she were about ready for a summer vacation herself. Which sounds cynical. But visiting and being visited is a delicate and intricate relationship to maintain without weariness or enmity on either side, and perhaps the following list of suggestions for guests may not come amiss.

Define Your Stay.

If your hostess asks you for a few days, in your letter of response define your stay, saying that you will come at such and such a time and leave at such and such a time, if convenient for her. We all know the embarrassment of having a guest who does not say just when she is going. All our plans are held up by our inability to ask her when she means to leave us.

If you are coming on a train that arrives near meal time, state whether you will have had your meal or not. And if you are later than your hostess' usual meal hour, see that you have had it.

Never under any circumstances stay longer than you are invited (even if you are a close relative) unless you are asked to do so with unmistakable sincerity.

Don't ask your hostess to make you one of the family. She may not care to do so.

If there are no maids, of course you will place yourself at the hostess' service to assist her in her duties in whatever way will help most.

Men Don't Visit So Much.

If there is a maid, don't conclude that that relieves you of all responsibility. You mean more work, and you should try to make some small contribution to the household labor, again in the way your hostess prefers.

At least make your own bed. (There are last two rules apply to women, but it is they who do most of the visiting.)

Be pleasant to the maid. A courteous word, or two in praise of her cooking is a help to your hostess, since it puts the maid in a good temper. Company does mean extra work, there is no getting around it, and the household will run more smoothly if a guest does not take everything for granted. Some small tip or some small gift to the maid is another bit of oil for the domestic machinery.

Never, even if you are a relative, give an order for special service to a maid, except through the hostess.

Don't be late for meals. If you must do anything that will make you late, have your meal outside.

Neither Ignore or Gush.

Don't take everything your hostess does for granted, but don't overpraise everything. Gushing is bad taste and the constant response required is tiresome.

Don't follow your hostess around when she is busy and keep asking her what she is doing now.

Think of the guests you enjoy the most when they come to your house, analyze what it is you like, and imitate them.

In other words apply the best rule for conduct ever promulgated by any philosopher. You know what that is, don't you?

Water Page's Retort.

"Dr. Page edited the 'World's Work' for some years, and he was a great encourager of literary aspirants. Of course, he had to reject many contributions, but (like the present editor of Punch) he never sent back a manuscript in which he discerned any signs of potential literary capacity without a kindly and stimulating note. Once he returned a worthless story submitted by a lady, and received a sharp complaint from the aspiring authoress. She wrote:

"Sir,—You sent back last week a story of mine. I know you did not read the story, for as a test I pasted together pages 18, 19 and 20, and the manuscript came back with these pages still pasted. So I know that you are a fraud and turn down stories without reading them."

"Though the politest of men, Dr. Page rejoined with a crushing answer. He wrote:

"Madame,—At breakfast, when I open an egg, I don't have to eat the whole egg to discover it bad."

For that empty 'tween-meals feeling, try a Banana Royal at the Blue Puttee. This is the dish which Americans refer to as "New England Boiled Dinner." It is both delicious and satisfying. Try it after the show tonight.—sept21,tt

Connecticut Merchant Left Valuable Violins.

Norwich, Conn., Sept. 18. (A.P.)—Four especially valuable violins are in the collection of the late Archibald Mitchell, dry goods merchant, whose death occurred here recently.

They are the "Bott" Stradivari (1723), the "Earl" Stradivari (1722), the "Jarnowick" (1741), and the "Healy" Stradivari (1711). The "Bott" is regarded as one of the most widely known instruments in the United States. It was at one time owned by the Duke of Cambridge, and afterwards by Louis Spohr, passing later into the hands of the late Prof. John Bott who, as a young man, had been a pupil of Spohr.

The "Earl" is of exceptional size and weight, which distinguishes it from any previous or later work of Stradivari. It was purchased about 1820 by the founder of the London Royal Academy of Music, the Earl of Westmoreland, while he was ambassador at Vienna.

The "Jarnowick" is a splendid specimen of the last type of the maker. It is contemporary with the "Paganini" Guernsey (1743), now preserved in the Municipal Palace at Genoa, which, in the hands of the great Maestro, delighted so many thousands in Europe.

The "Healy" is one of the very few perfect Stradivari violins in existence. Mr. Mitchell was one of the founders of a dry goods concern here which has stores in Portland, Me., and in Grand Rapids, Mich., and which at one time operated stores in Fort Wayne, Ind., Detroit and Saginaw, Mich., and Middletown, Conn.

FORGETTING IT.

"It is a foolish thing, my lad," the wise man said, with kindly tact, "to send good money after bad; when you are stung, forget the fact."

It was long ago he told me this; the wise old man has looped the loops, and in the shifting realms of bliss he capers with the saintly troops. I treasured up his golden words, and they have helped me, day by day; they soothe me when the gold brick birds have clinched me in the good old way. I've wasted every brand of coin, I come along, my roll in hand, when fakirs cry,

"Oh, come and join our get-rich-in-a-hurry husband." But when I find I have been stung, and I am asked to dig again, I make reply, "I'll see you hung before I send more iron men." The fakings gents may sting me once, and make my ardent spirit sad; but only an unsated dunce will send good money after bad. And it is vain to weep and brood because we've fallen for some snare, to sit in gloomy solitude and bite large pieces from a chair. Forget the fakir and his wiles, lift up your chin and go your way all wreathed in nice assorted smiles. Don't let your neighbors see you blue, as you go steaming through the grad; bear this in mind, whatever you do: Don't send good money after bad.

Superior to all others, that's Three Flowers face Powder. A finely prepared toilet necessity combining all the most exacting requirements and magnificently perfumed. You will surely love Three Flowers.—sept23,11

Rough on Reynard.

IN THE HIGHLANDS THEY HAVE NO USE FOR FOXES, HENCE THE FOX-DRIVE.

To shoot a fox is, in the eyes of some people, a crime. But when the nearest pack of hounds is eighty miles away, what is one to do?

The Highland shepherd hates the hill-fox. It kills his lambs. The keeper regards the creature with equal loathing, knowing the toll it takes of young grouse and leverets.

There is a great crag up among the mountains in the heart of Inverness-shire, which for generations has been a headquarters of the hill-foxes, and this is the scene of the annual fox drive.

A day is chosen, and all the keepers for miles around meet early in the morning at a big lodge at the head of a wild glen, some thirty miles from Inverness. The road stops there; beyond is merely a footpath.

Three or four men are selected to go straight to the crag, eight miles away; the rest swing out in a great circle and surround it. Then they walk up towards it, and, with their dogs, hard-bitten, wiry terriers of the real old Scottish breed, working through the heather, drive the foxes inwards.

Cunning to the End.

The distances are enormous, the drive is necessarily slow, and hours elapse before the quarry come slipping in towards their great earths deep in the rocks.

Shots ring out, sometimes only two or three, sometimes a regular volley. But these keepers do not waste cartridges, and it is rare for any fox that has shown itself for even a moment to gain its earth. If such a chance does occur, it goes a terrier, and, as a rule, out comes the fox.

The bag may be only one or two, it may be as high as six or seven, but unless the mist comes down, the day is seldom, if ever, a blank.

Cunning beasts are these mountain-foxes, and very hard to kill. At one of these drives a wounded fox doubled and broke through the ring. A terrier followed. A little later her master found her tearing at the body of a dead hind. Angriily he called her away, but she would not come. As he strode up, he caught sight of a red something projecting from a hole in the carcass.

It was the brush of the fox. Inside, in a cavity which had been eaten out, the wounded animal had hidden itself. It was already dead.

"Handsome is—"

How many times have we turned round in the street to remark: "There goes my idea of beauty!" And how often have we discussed the many different ideas of it! For to each man and to each nation beauty means a different thing.

The other day in Oxford Street there passed Li Chang with his lady. WI See. Her eyes, like polished enamel, were set at a wrong angle, and her plucked eyebrows looked strange to the Westerner. Yet Lu Chang thinks that in her eyes and slender brows lies the true secret of her loveliness.

Then the Hindu girl—you may see her, too, in London. Her liquid dark eyes and amber complexion may seem not unattractive, but most of us would balk at nose hangles, nostril studs, and hair twisted in a roll over one eye. But to the Hindu these things represent beauty.

There is the Greek ideal—Venus Aphrodite. Her long down-cast nose with its straight line from brow to tip is Beauty herself. But some futuristic Arctic hunter would prefer the ample nose, broad cheeks and bird-like eyes of an Eskimo belle.

Now look at the girl from Assam. Her beauty lies in bright animal-like eyes, and she wears a tube and large circles of gold in her ears, and two flat discs in her nose. To us she has no beauty, but when a man of her tribe looks into her small, bright eyes and sees the flashing ornaments in her ears and nose, he is completely dazzled.

Then there is the Persian girl. Her eyes are large and languid, and her heavy black brows are drawn across

Foch's Tribute to the Canadians.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—(By Canadian Press)—"Canadians wrote here their first page of that Book of Glory which is the history of their participation in the Great War." It was a remarkable tribute to Canadian valour which was paid by Marshal Foch at the recent unveiling of the monument erected by the Canadian Battlefields Memorials Commission at St. Julien.

"It is indeed easy for me," said the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies, "at the foot of this Monument, to recall that fatal day when the Germans, in an effort to assure victory, had recourse to a violation of gas, violating once more another treaty, another solemn agreement."

"How can one forget such events? Can you understand the deep anguish of the leaders, who, surprised by new methods of attack against which they had no means of defense, had just the same to face them and send into the furnace men who they knew in advance to be disarmed?"

"It is the glory of those men come from Canada to have held fast, and, miracle of energy, counter-attacked St. Julien, making this village and the little neighboring wood into a redoubt behind which Marshal Foch and I were able to seek and put into effect means which were to prevent the surprise from becoming a serious defeat."

"The Canadians paid heavily for their sacrifice and the corner of earth on which this Monument of gratitude and piety rises has been bathed in their blood. They wrote here their first page of that Book of Glory which is the history of their participation in the war."

"For it is not only here that their steady courage overcame the most desperate efforts of the enemy. We find the Canadians again at the Ridge of Vimy which they capture and widely overrun in a superb assault. When the outlook is dark at the end of March, Canadians are among the first who arrive in the breach before Arras. And when in August the hour of the great offensive has come Canadian troops break through the German lines on the route from Amiens to Roye and the first day advance more than 15 kilometres."

"That is only the preface of that ardent period during which Canadians advance from Arras to Cambrai which they capture, breaking in their passage the famous Queant-Dreuxcourt line reputed to be impregnable; then, tireless, always aggressive, they leave Douai, seize Valenciennes and at length take possession of Mons the day of the Armistice, crowning by the capture of that city a battle of one hundred days in the course of which the Canadians spent themselves without counting the cost and performed the most illustrious exploits."

"In those hundred days they have liberated more than 700 square kilometres of French soil, 228 towns and villages, engaged and definitely broken 47 German divisions who leave in their hands more than 25,000 prisoners, 700 guns, 400 mortars and thousands of machine guns. It is with deep emotion that I recall these memories in front of this monument, simple and strong like the Canadian spirit."

"I recall the days when, moved by the same feelings of justice and burning love of liberty we fought together against the common enemy. This close collaboration gave us victory on the field of battle. Let me believe that the sacrifices mutually suffered by our soldiers have created between our countries imperishable bonds which German intrigue will not be able to weaken."

A Trade Opportunity.

To men engaged in merchandising there are few things more interesting than a new opportunity for trade. Particularly is this true in times that are not what you might call lively. Mr. C. W. Stairs, of Stairs, Son & Morrow, recently back from Newfoundland, told the "Merchant" a few things about such an opportunity, when we saw him at his office the other day.

"Merchant" readers may have heard of the project of the Sir W. G. Armstrong-Whitworth Co. to build an immense pulp and paper plant at a place called Corner Brook on the shore of the Humber River Basin, which is on the South West Coast of Newfoundland. The project is a really truly major operation involving not only the building of a pulp and paper mill and the development of a water power plant, but also the erection in the wilderness of an up-to-date town that will accommodate a population of 5,000. Incidentally, too, it necessitates the digging of a canal 2 miles in length, to draw the water of Grand Lake into Deer Lake, which is the storage basin of the power plant. The power plant, we may say, is to be 60 miles up the river from the pulp and paper mill at Corner Brook.

The interesting thing in the above from a local standpoint, is the Hall-fax prospect for trade. There is a but we suspect from the smile on his countenance that they had had a most successful trip. Millions of money will be spent on the Armstrong-Whitworth undertaking within the next two years, and therefore, that there is in Halifax, there would seem to be every reason which is needed for the Armstrong-Whitworth project has a fair chance to find a market. Halifax, in fact, is better situated in point of making deliveries than is any other place carrying such supplies as are likely to be needed at Corner Brook.

Mr. Stairs was accompanied on his visit to Newfoundland by the firm's eastern Nova Scotia traveller, Mr. Priest. He did not reveal just what business they had done on this visit, but we suspect from the smile on his countenance that they had had a most successful trip. Millions of money will be spent on the Armstrong-Whitworth undertaking within the next two years, and therefore, that there is in Halifax, there would seem to be every reason which is needed for the Armstrong-Whitworth project has a fair chance to find a market. Halifax, in fact, is better situated in point of making deliveries than is any other place carrying such supplies as are likely to be needed at Corner Brook.

Companies' Japanese Offices Destroyed.

Life Insurance Officials Reported Safe; Canadian Fire Companies Not Affected.

No definite information as to the losses of Canadian insurance companies in the Japanese disaster is available, but all opinions agree that it is not likely to be heavy. Most of the insurance carried there by the Manufacturers' Life and the Sun Life is on the lives of foreign residents and the more prominent natives. The heavy loss of life is expected to be among the poorer classes. The insurance on these is largely carried by local companies. Reports indicate that the offices of both the Canadian companies were destroyed. Thos. C. Maitland, manager of the Manufacturers' Life for Japan, has cabled from Kobe that he is in that city and safe, but adds that his wife and child, a boy of nine years, are missing. Mr. and Mrs. Maitland resided in Yokohama and it is feared by their friends that Mrs. Maitland and her son, Robert, have fallen victims in the collapse of that city. Thomas J. O'Brien, the company's cashier, has cabled from Nikko, a summer resort eighty miles north of Tokio, likewise announcing his safety.

The Sun Life Assurance Company has also received information that its offices are safe, but anxiously as to the fate of their families prevails.

The New York Life Insurance Co. has policies of approximately 45,000,000 yen in Japan, but, like the Canadian companies, its losses are estimated at not more than $100,000. The Equitable Life Assurance Society, which until recently retained some business there, has during the past year transferred its policies to the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The fire insurance losses will not be as heavy as was at first expected, since many buildings were unburnable. Only one or two companies operating in Canada will be affected. Most of this insurance was on large buildings, many built and owned by foreign corporations, and the insurance was carried by English or European companies. Although a large number of British companies operate both in Canada and Japan, and the amounts at risk in Japan are very large, it was the custom of the companies to include in all fire insurance policies an earthquake elimination clause which excluded loss or damage resulting directly or indirectly from earthquakes from the hazards insured against by the policies. Inasmuch as the reports of the disaster are definite in attributing the holocaust which followed to the earthquake, there seems no doubt that the companies will not be liable on the ordinary fire policies for the loss or damage experienced.

The largest losses will be in marine insurance, covering not only losses on board ships but also losses of goods in dock warehouses.

Rumor of Strange Insurance Fraud by Substitution.

Allegations that Healthy Man Passed Examination for Another—Body Examined—Local Business Men Said to be Beneficiaries of $20,000 Policy.

Suspecting that a physically perfect individual had been submitted to examination by company doctors in substitution for an elderly Montreal alcoholic and consumptive, who died here not long after becoming insured for $20,000, a local life insurance concern, after having the body of the dead man examined and subjected to autopsy by Montreal morgue surgeons, has withheld payment of the policy. Should two local business men, named as beneficiaries, claim the $20,000, a sensational civil court action is anticipated.

For some time rumors have been current in Montreal insurance circles of what has been branded as an audacious attempt to defraud a company of a $20,000 policy. Here is the story as now reported on the street:

In the fall of last year, two individuals, said to be the two beneficiaries in the $20,000 policy, approached a man of good family who was nearly down and out—artful and disreputable were supposed to have achieved their deadly work. The proposition they put to him was that they would insure him for $5,000, and would give him $600 cash if he would go through with the application and medical examination. To this he agreed.

A little later the man was called before a stranger represented to him as the medical examiner for the insurance company which was investigating him as a risk. To the examiner he gave full name, age, parentage, and the myriad details required customarily by an insurance house. Then he got his $600.

Still a short while later the life insurance company now figuring in reports on the street, got an application from a man in Montreal for $20,000 worth of life insurance. He appeared before company doctors, passed 100 per cent, gave all details regarding himself and his family, and the policy was issued.

In February the company was notified that the man insured for $20,000 had died. "Inflammation of the lungs," said the medical certificate. What caused suspicion in the minds of the company officials is not known.

but they did become suspicious. Eventually they wrote to the Attorney General of the province for permission to have the body of the dead man exhumed and sent to the morgue specialists for autopsy. The request was granted, and the body was brought to Montreal. The autopsy revealed inflammation of the lungs, as the certificate said, but, in addition, tuberculosis in the third degree. Microbes of the disease, it is understood, were found in the lungs, although the autopsy was made some time after death.

Comparison of the autopsy report with the medical certificate of the insured man made by the company led officials to the conclusion that the individual could never have been perfectly healthy last fall and have died with third degree tuberculosis in February. So they reached the decision that an attempt at fraud had been made, and they are standing awaiting developments.

Says Prehistoric "Skull" IS NOTHING BUT SANDSTONE.

BUENOS AIRES.—(A.P.)—The opinion of Argentine scientists that the alleged tertiary human skull discovered by Dr. J. G. Wolfe in Patagonia some months ago is not a fossil, has been confirmed here by Professor Elmer S. Riggs, paleontological explorer for the Field Museum, Chicago.

"That," said Professor Riggs, turning over in his hands the oblong stone object curiously impressed with human-like features, and which for the past two months has served as a paperweight on the desk of Professor de Bonetelli, an archaeologist, "that, as a fossil, is certainly a piece of bunk. As a geological specimen it is a piece of solid sandstone, a natural concretion, queerly shaped, but not so queer at that I've seen others like it. It's only one of nature's little jokes."

Professor Riggs' examination ended two months' pursuit of the "skull" which began during his fossil hunting explorations in Patagonia when he received instructions from the Field Museum to investigate Wolfe's reported discovery, following the receipt by the museum of a letter from Wolfe asking employment in Patagonia as an anthropological researcher. For this, says Prof. Riggs, he gave the scientist credentials which first won credence for his claim, which included letters from American, Canadian and German authorities.

 It is good to be alive
 When the green buds arrive,
 And the tulips come to bloom,
 And the birds return to sing;
 It is good to be on earth
 When the new leaves come to birth,
 And the world takes on the wonder
 And the magic of the spring.

It is good to be alive
 When the bees are in the hive,
 And the skies are blue above us
 And the breeze is clover sweet;
 It is good to be on earth
 For the laughter and the mirth
 Of the lazy, drowsy summer
 With its shining, golden wheat.

It is good to be alive
 Good to walk and good to drive,
 When that Master Painter, Autumn,
 Tints the fields and woods and hills;
 It is good to stand and see
 Colors rich on every tree,
 And to share in all the beauty
 Which so lavishly he spills.

It is good to be alive
 With the bits and pieces to strive,
 And to face the silent winter
 With the snow drifts at your door;
 It is good to be on earth
 So we live and count the seasons,
 Finding charm in all the four.

Change of Bill at the Crescent To-Night.

PAT HARRINGTON IN NEW SONGS AND NOVELTIES.
 A particularly attractive bill has been prepared for the week-opening attraction at the Crescent. Pat Harrington will be heard in all new songs and novelties consisting of the very latest procurable. Bells and effects by Jack Cronan and piano accompaniments by the boy pianist, Al Pittman. The feature picture to-day is "The Veiled Woman" adapted from Myrtle Reed's popular novel, "A Spinner in the Sun." There is easily enough drama with its accompanying love story to keep the spectator firmly interested throughout the progress of this film. It is an excellent story of simple souls told in a manner that will appeal to all.

It has been decided by the management to have another big Amateur Contest on Friday night and names will be received at the box-office during the week. Last week's contest was a wonderful success and it is hoped to make the next even better.

Bebe Daniels and Nita Naldi Royal Garbed

IN "THE GLIMPSES OF THE MOON."
 There are thrills for motion picture patrons, but perhaps the most interesting of these will be the thrills that come in rapid succession in Alan Dwan's production for Paramount, "The Glimpses of the Moon," with Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Romer, David Powell, Maurice Costello and Charles Gerrard in the principal roles.

Rich Gowns Provide Thrills.
 A list of the gowns worn by Miss Naldi, for instance, reads like the wardrobe list for an entire production. Miss Naldi wears a sable wrap and one of summer ermine, as well as several silk capes. Then there are three negligees, five evening gowns, five afternoon gowns and ten hats. There are several other gowns of fashionable design which Miss Naldi wears.

Bebe Daniels, in the role of Susan Branch, wears a marvelous collection of gowns, wraps, negligees, suits, hats, street wraps and furs that are guaranteed to "knock the eye out" of all who see them. There is Rubye de Romer, who has the role of the frivolous Ellie Vanderlyn in Mrs. Wharton's novel and her wardrobe for this picture includes some twenty changes. Among these are five evening gowns, several street dresses, a three-piece suit, about five hats and two wraps.

Besides these principals there are minor feminine parts that call for luxurious costumes, and Director Dwan has seen to it that all of the women who appear in his production are smartly and appropriately gowned. A modiste's shop, with which the story opens, is a fitting background for another display of costly gowns, furs and wraps worn alike by maids and purchasers, the total cost of which is said to equal the cost of an average feature production.

Beautiful Jewelry Worn.
 Of course, with all this gorgeous finery there is correspondingly beautiful jewelry. As an instance, Bebe Daniels' wedding gown is trimmed and edged with real pearls valued at $10,000. A necklace worn by Rubye de Romer in this wedding scene cost $68,000. The gems worn by Nita Naldi throughout the picture, in which she is the wife of a millionaire banker, would put to shame the collection of the average society woman of wealth.

"The Glimpses of the Moon" will be the feature at the Majestic Theatre to-day.

Baldwin Smokes Pipe at Oxford Dinner.

Stanley Baldwin, the British Prime Minister, has an idiosyncrasy—he smokes a big briar pipe not only in the privacy of his Downing Street home, but at public dinners as well.

Hitherto reporters and cartoonists have been able to paint word pictures and make drawings of the new Prime Minister only as an honest man, who, on the day of his selection for the most important post in the government, asked the newspaper men for their congratulations and also as a politician who loves country life better than London and would rather scratch a pig's back with a stick than hang in the House of Commons.

All this is interesting and makes a trymen, but it cannot be used in the touch of the Premier's humanness divulged at the annual Rhodes scholars' dinner at Oxford, which was largely attended.

"After the usual toast: 'Gentlemen, the King," there was the customary flashing of gold and silver cigarette cases and reaching for the long, dry cigars which are the abominations of Americans. The Premier, however, dived into the pocket of his evening clothes and brought out a big, well-worn briar pipe, which he kept glowing the rest of the evening.

There is again the destruction of goods, as in the London fire, while in many ways to adapt themselves to the conditions, cannot be charged with the blame. It is necessary to be as we would.

Fish Tragedies.

A MYSTERY MASSACRE OF THE SEA NEARLY WIPED OUT ONE SPECIES ALTOGETHER.

There is nothing very unusual in the destruction of salmon by sudden floods, as has lately happened in the Fushon River in Scotland. Fish which in many ways marvellously able to adapt themselves to changed conditions, cannot stand sudden changes, and when the water in which they become suddenly and thickly charged with mud, they are deprived of necessary oxygen and suffocate, just as we would in foul air.

I have in mind a case of rapid destruction in a certain South Country fishing stream. It was during that very hot summer, I think, 1911. The water was low and the water was warm, when, for some reason, the sluice of a deep mill dam opened, and a flood of water, many degrees cooler than that of the river suddenly was let loose.

Almost at once scores of trout, some of them great fellows of two and three pounds each, came floating helplessly to the surface. It was not mud that killed them, but the sharp and sudden change in the temperature of the water. Yet, mind you, a fish can be frozen into a solid block of ice, and in the process each way is a gradual one, will come to life again when the ice is melted. Even a solid fish has remained alive under these conditions, and has revived after forty-eight hours.

They Didn't Like Brine.

Some years ago a small reservoir of brine leaked into the canal at Newburgh, and here again there was a fearful destruction of fish. No one ever imagined that there were so many fish in the canal until they saw the poor creatures floating dead, by the hundred, on the surface of the water.

The most amazing massacre of fish on record occurred in the North Atlantic. Fifty years ago, a fish known as the tile-fish was so plentiful off the coast of Maine that it was accounted one of the principal food fishes.

One autumn in the late 'seventies of the last century, fishing-boats came in to report that, for miles and miles, the surface of the sea was covered with millions of dead tile-fish. That had killed them in one hour, they suggested a submarine eruption, but it seems more probable that it was some sort of epidemic disease. From that date onwards, for more than twenty years, no tile-fish were seen, and it was supposed that the species had become extinct. But about the beginning of the present century the tile-fish reappeared, and have been steadily increasing in number.

The Punishment of a Bully.

Shades of "Bully" Hayes and the notorious Yankee mates whose "hazing" propensities helped to make the fortunes of many a San Francisco and New York crimp, and incidentally break the bones and spirit of many a shamed sailor in the bad old days! Our contemporary Nauticus reports the hearing in San Francisco Federal District Court of an action brought by a number of seamen against the owners of the American barquentine Ralph in respect for compensation for personal injuries sustained as a result of ill-treatment by the mate of the vessel. One of the plaintiffs had been blinded, another rendered deaf, and two others had been somewhat less severely handled. The judge held that the employment of what our American contemporary calls "a noted thug" as mate rendered the vessel unseaworthy, and that the injuries received by the seamen were thereafter caused by the unseaworthiness of the ship. He awarded damages to the amount of 10,000 dollars, to the blind sailor, 3,500 dollars, to the one who was deaf, and 500 dollars to each of the other two, stating that he had taken into consideration the implied privity of the master of the vessel, who, instead of laying information against the mate before the U.S. Council at Antofagasta—the first port touched after the "hazing" took place—which would probably have resulted in the mate's being sent to the United States as a prisoner to stand trial for assault, he paid the "gentleman" off without saying anything about it. He forgot, however, that only dead men tell no tales, and that in these enlightened days there is something considerably more tangible and powerful to look after the well-being of seafarers than the traditional "charity" that sits on a shelf. The judge of the San Francisco Federal District Court is to be congratulated on his interpretation of the law in such a way as to punish a bully who is an obvious throw-back to the days of Clarke Russell, and to indemnify the unfortunate seamen who suffered at his hands.—The Syren and Shipping.

THE NEGRO MIMIC.

Many a European would be considerably astonished if he knew the opinion which the Negroes around him have formed concerning his person. One very rarely has the chance to watch natives mimicking, with a perfection which no white comedian could surpass, Europeans of their acquaintance. To do so is a revelation which may completely alter all one's ideas concerning them. The improvised comments on Europeans in their songs, when they do not know that they are being listened to, or when they think that the listener does not understand their language, may have the same effect.—Hana Coudenhove in the "Cornhill Magazine."

The Book World.

(John O'London's Weekly.)

We all know the high price which first editions of Mr. Joseph Conrad's novels have now reached. It is amusing, therefore, to hear that not so long ago a whole lot of copies of a first Conrad edition were found lying in a publisher's warehouse in London. If the story be true, one wonders how they came to be overlooked and what has happened to them now. Probably the publisher may be regretting that he never made a better "deal" than when he, or his people, forgot all about those Conrad first editions, because, like whisky, their value has greatly enhanced in bond.

A NOVELIST-POET.

We know Mr. John Cowunos as a novelist, for he has written three good stories in succession, "The Will," "The Mask," and "Ebbel." He is also, however, a poet, and generally, perhaps, if one knew, every novelist would be found to be a writer of some kind of verse. Mr. Cowunos likes to write verse. His friends say it is an art in which he is rather accomplished, and we shall be able to judge ourselves shortly, because he is bringing out a volume of poetry entitled "In Exile," a title which perhaps has some bearing upon his own life.

TOLSTOY MANUSCRIPTS.

Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, the famous novelist's daughter, writes to a friend in England that she is having trouble about her father's manuscripts. He left a good many that have never been published, and the Soviet Government is anxious that they should first appear in Russian. Probably that course will be followed, though the material which Tolstoy had not published is so great that his daughter scarcely knows how to handle it all. His diary alone will run into many volumes, but there's no doubt that the world will expect to get it in full.

JACK LONDON TALES.

A book of stories for young people by the late Jack London ought to find a large public, and such a book has been chosen from his writings by his wife, Mrs. Charmian London. It is to be published quite soon by the house of Mills and Boon, which now has most of the Jack London publications. It includes the first story that he ever wrote—namely, a tale sent in for a prize offered by a San Francisco newspaper. Jack London's story won the prize.

A CHANGE FROM "TARZAN."

Mr. Edgar Rice Burroughs, the inventor of "Tarzan," sends word that he hopes to be in London in the course of the autumn. He has long contemplated a journey across the Atlantic to see us and to thank us for the kindness with which we have received his books. Hitherto, however, he has been so busy that he has not been able to get away. Now he means to have a little leisure, for he has finished a new story, and it will be out soon. This time it has nothing to do with "Tarzan," with Hollywood, the home of the movies, and it has the title, "A Girl From Hollywood."

A WOMAN WRITER.

One does not seem to have seen a new story by Miss Ella MacMahon for quite a long while. It will, however, be possible to do so shortly, for the author of "John Fitzhenry" has written another entitled "Mercy and Truth."

A CHANGE FROM "TARZAN."

Mr. Edgar Rice Burroughs, the inventor of "Tarzan," sends word that he hopes to be in London in the course of the autumn. He has long contemplated a journey across the Atlantic to see us and to thank us for the kindness with which we have received his books. Hitherto, however, he has been so busy that he has not been able to get away. Now he means to have a little leisure, for he has finished a new story, and it will be out soon. This time it has nothing to do with "Tarzan," with Hollywood, the home of the movies, and it has the title, "A Girl From Hollywood."

A WOMAN WRITER.

One does not seem to have seen a new story by Miss Ella MacMahon for quite a long while. It will, however, be possible to do so shortly, for the author of "John Fitzhenry" has written another entitled "Mercy and Truth."

Fads and Fashions.

For sports wear the hat of velour or scratch felt with a turned-up brim is correct.

A blouse of rich metal brocade adds loveliness to a three-piece costume suit.

The well-dressed woman generally repeats the shade of her stockings in her gloves.

Many Million Dollars Hidden Away in France.

Paris—All over France men and women for years have been hoarding American currency. It became available in large quantities with the coming of American soldiers during the war, and the French were quick to see its value. To-day people are wondering how many dollars are concealed in the "woolen socks" of the republic.

The estimates run from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000. Recently a Frenchman living in Chaumont, who kept a candy store during the war, disclosed to a friend a strong-box containing over $15,500 in American bills of various denominations, which he said he would sell when the franc reached 30 for one dollar. "There are a good many men in this town alone who have more than I," this man declared.

The exact amount of American currency left in France by American soldiers and officers will probably never be known, but many believe that if a thorough canvas of Brest, Saint Nazaire, Bordeaux, Le Mans, Tours, Chaumont, Aix-les-Bains, Vichy, Dijon and the surrounding localities were made, the total would be nearly $5,000,000.

Things to Remember.

A stain can often be removed from light material by laying the stained part on a flat surface, powdering thickly with magnesia or French chalk, covering with a clean cloth, and putting a heavy book on top. Leave for several days, then brush off the powder with a clean brush, and the stain will have gone. If it is too deep-seated, a liquid preparation must be tried, but in ordinary cases the dry-cleaning is effective.

For colouring purposes, in cooking, bake a large beetroot, and when it is soft, slice it, and allow the juice to drain out. Bottle the juice for use when required.

Never apply soap to a fruit-stain, as it will set the colour. If the stain is moist, remove with clean cold water. If it has been allowed to dry, stretch the material over a basin and pour hot water on it from a height. Should any trace of the stain remain, dab it with lemon juice, and expose to the sunshine; rinse thoroughly afterwards, so as to remove the lemon-juice.

Two tablespoonfuls of powdered borax dissolved in a little boiling water added to make three pints provide you with a safe cleanser for white paint. Dust the paint, sponge well with the solution, rinse and dry with a soft cloth.

If not of too long standing the marks of hot plates on a polished table can be removed by rubbing with paraffin.

Always clean a tin-opener immediately after use by putting into boiling water. Wash and polish with bath-brick.

The pain of a burn can be relieved by applying a little bi-carbonate of soda if no oil is at hand.

Ham and bacon rinds can be used to flavour soup and other dishes. They give a nice flavour and prevent burning if put on the top of butter or haricot-beans whilst baking.
