THE FEAST. When good King Arthur ruled this land, he ruled it like a King,
He stole three pecks of tarley meal to make a big puiding:
A bag pudding the King did make, and stuffed it well with plum.
And in it put great lumps of fat as big as his own thumbs:
The King and Queen they ate thereof, and noblemen beside.
And what they couldn't eat that night, the Queen next morning fried.

dinner ended, spake the blameless King Unto his knights and unto Guinevere, Who sat as one had dined, yet discontent. Who sat as one had dined, yet discontent, Moulding her napkin into many forms, And scorning at them all: "The truth is this: Our cook, they by very worthy, O my Queen, Hath nought of genius, and we dined to day As yesterday and many ye-terdays, And no new order takes the place of old. Thou dost not make this meal so sweet to me That I the King so greatly care to eat."

Then in her shrewish way muttered the Queen:
"My fault, my fault, and evermore my fault!
That dish is never grudged the Table Round,

I know thy thought, and, humble, though I be, A humble bee my guide you. May I speak?" He cared not much for her companionship, Less for herself, vet gently answered. "Speak!" And Vivien answered, miling wickedly. "Sweet are stolen waters, stolen kisses sweet (If that the blameless King permit the words) And why not stolen meal? Behind yon hedge A hermit dwells, an awfish humbeg too, and in his prayers, but louder in his cups, And prompt to kneel, but never half so prompt As when he cannot stand. By this the cheat Hath drunk his deepest, and sent up his snore: the hath great store of mea, which simple fools Bring to ameliorate his faucied woes:

"Twere very meet that you should steal the same."

And Arthur, making answer, said, "I will." And Arthur, making answer, said, "I will."

Then laughed the wileful Vivien to herself, "Easy to theft is moved the blameless King, But he and all his knights and the sweet Queen thave hollow hearts which were transparent Have hollow hearts which were transparent masks

And then they went, Arthur and Vivien raised the hermit's latch, Entered the cottage where the good old man Lay grunting like a swine, and from his hoards Tney took three preks of choicest barley meal. And proudly bore them to the Table Round. There Guinevere still gazed on Lancelor, But that most noble knight, large Lancelor, Seemed for the time less noble than bimsel; and suffering or from supper or the wine (Brought there from France by one called Gild ed Helm, none.

Justice Jarvis said that it was impossible for an assessor to execute the present law without oppressing the poor laborer

Justice Gardner said five classes were inadequately taxed.—Lawyers, Doctors, Insurance Agents, Public Officers and Clergy-Justice Odell moved an amendment to the effect that rates should be uniform on all incomes whether derived from real es-nitely.

Justice Marshall said reform was ad mitted to be necessary, and that the present committee were quite as competent to arrange an Assessment Bill as any other that might be appointed.

Justice Nowlin, who had seconded the adjournment, said the old law was just as did as the proper presented. He competed the competence of the competence adjournment, said the old law was just as good as the one now presented. He compared the two laws and claimed that the provisions were similar, and that Assessors would fail as much under the new law as under the present. He said the true remedy for discrepencies as regards the several parishes would be to appoint one board of assessors for the whole County. The amendment for indefinite adjournment was lost, and the Sessions then adjourned until to-morrow at 11 o'clock.
