Escape from Prison .- On Wednesday afternoon a man named John McCready who was in New York charged with a burglary, effected his escape from the City Prison, by walking out of the door in the open day light. The fellow displayed such cool effrontery in making his way out, that the deputy-keeper of the prison mistook him for one of the visi-tors who had gone into the prison a few It is supposed that the fellow immediately took passage in one of the North River boats, and so left the city.
