DISFRANCHISEMENT OF ALABAMA NEGROES

Purpose of the New Constitution To Be Submitted for Ratification

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 10 .- Tomorrow (Monday) the citizens of Alabama will vote for the ratification or the rejection on the constitution formed by the late constitutional convention. The calling of the constitutional convention was a measure of the Democratic party. Many prominent Republicans favor the adoption of the new organic law, while many influential Democrats are opposing it. The pro-posed constitution has for its main purpose the disfranchisement of the negro, and at the same time to leave the ballot in the hands of every white man in the state. The best information indicates that the new constitution will carry by a majority exceed-

CORPSE WANTED TO GO TO WORK

Man Pronounced Dead Had a Fit and Scared an Ambulance Driver.

Painesville, Ohio, Nov. 10.-John Sesler gave a Painesville undertaker the scare of his life yesterday by his refusal to consider himself dead. Sesler is subject to fits. He had one on his way to work and fell unconscious to the sidewalk on the main street of the town. A passing physician pronounced the man dead. Someone telephoned an undertaker, and an ambulance was soon on the scene. The body was placed in the ambulance, and the horses were started towards Seasler's home on the outskirts of the town. Half way there the supposed corps sat up and asked where he was going. driver gasped that they were taking him home. Berlin, Nov. 10.—The public mind Hildebrand. The latter considered ras considerably excited last week on himself insulted by the blow received was considerably excited last week on ccount of a duel at Insterburg, East Prussia, in which Lieut. Blaskowitz, of the army, was killed by Lieut.

Hildebrand, also of the army. Lieuts. Hildebrand and Rassmussen met Lieut. Blaskowitz going home one night in a state of intoxication, carried him to a spot near his residence and left him there. They returned to the spot later, however, and found Blaskowitz crouching against a wall, asleep, and tried to arouse him and get him upon his feet. Blaskowitz, being ignorant of the identity of the two men who were endeavoring to as-

and reported the affair to the court of honor, which decided that a duel was unavoidable, whereupon Lieut. Hilde-brand challenged Lieut. Blaskowitz. The latter, unconscious of what had occurred while he was intoxicated, went to the house of a young lady whom he was to marry on the follow-ing day. When a telegram recalling him to meet Hildebrand was received. Blaskowitz wanted to settle the matter with an apology, but the highest officers of brigade and division sanctioned the finding of the court of honor, that a duel was necessary. The whole of European Turkey is seething with disorder. In Armenia, l months, and in the remainder of the empire there is the perennial violence, corruption, waste and lawlessness. From the army down to the magistracy, every part of the machine of government is in a hopeless condition. In the opinion of the diplo-matic body at Constantinople, any attempt at patching things up will be merely futile efforts. The news of the French intervention was suppressed at Constantinople for three days, but the sultan's cabinet being in constant session, showed that a serious crisis had arisen.

ABDUL IN A FURY. The sultan has been in a condition of epileptic fury, and his ministers, who live in perpetual terror of their lives at his hands, were helpless and afraid to do or suggest anything. PRIVY COUNCIL'S DECISION.

London, Nov. 10. - The privy council have rendered judgment in the appeal and cross-appeal of Burland and others vs. Earle and others, from the court of appeal of Ontario. All the parties to the suit are joint shareholders in the British-American Bank Note Company. The action referred to the formation of a reserve fund of £49,200, a large portion of which the Ontario court declared must be divided among the shareholders. Their lordships declared they were not aware of any principle compelling stock companies to divide their whole profits, and held that the lower court had no jurisdiction in this matter. Their lordships also decided that the injunction granted in Ontario against Burland restraining his control of any portion of the earnings of the compay could not be maintained and reversed the order by which Burland was compelled to refund £7,600 profit on the sale of the Burland Lithographic Company. THE MISSING MISSIONARY. Sofia, Nov. 10.-Information has been received here from Doubnitz that the band of brigands holding captive Miss N. Stone, the American missionary, called about a fortnight ago at the village of Smetcheve and subsequently proceeded to the monastery at Rilo, but the movements of the troops compelled the brigands to flee toward the frontier, where they are now in hiding. It is also asserted that the brigands have recently been treating Miss Stone with more severity, in order to exercise pressure and to compel a more ready acceptance of their conditions. Consul-General Dickerson is inflexible. He insists that the surrender of Miss Stone must precede or be simultaneous with the payment of the ransom. His attitude is justified by the known determination of some members of the band, particularly the captain, Yannt Sandansky, to kill Miss Stone and her there he was admitted. When he companion as soon as the ransom is started up the aisle, however, his way received owing to the fact that the captives have now acquired information concerning the secret committees. Competent persons, however, express the opinion that the cupidity of the brigands will overcome their fear of revelations and all such approve the declaration of Mr. Dickinson. Yesterday Mr. Dickinson made energetic representations to the Bulgarian Government against the movements of the Bulgarian troops, reproaching the officials with the fact that notwithstanding their solemn promises to give him all assistance in their power, their action was embarrassing the negotiations; retarding a settlement, and placing in jeopardy the life of Miss Stone. He made a definite declaration that the Bulgarian Government would be held responsible for the death of Miss Stone, and of all the consequences of her death, should it be proved that the attitude of the Bulgarian Government forced the brigands to kill their

Camps Worse Than in Famine-

A "SCORCHER" FROM

Smitten India. London, Nov. 9 .- The Daily News today exhaustively surveys the concentration camps in South Africa, with the following conclusion: "The truth is that the death rate in the camps s incomparably worse than anything Africa or Asia can show. There is nothing to match it even in the mortality figures of the Indian famines. where cholera and other epidemics have to be contended with." Statis-tics are produced in order to prove this assertion. The government's advertisement for teachers to the camp children, setting forth that "the term for teachers will be one year certain," is prominently displayed as evidence that the authorending the ities have no intention of wholesale destruction of human life."

The Daily News urges all humane men not to wait for official reports, but to insist "on the camps broken up and the people distributed among their friends, or removed to districts where a fresh attempt can be made, under competent organization and with due regard to the preservation of life."

Divine Service at Holy Name Cathedral. Chicago, Nov. 10 .- Father Jeremiah Crowley, the Roman Catholic expriest, whose severe criticism of the church authorities of the arch-diocese of Chicago was followed by his excommunication, and whose presence in Holy Name Cathedral was the cause of a dramatic scene there last Sunday, when solemn high mass was stopped and the lights put out, appeared at the cathedral again today at the hour of solemn high mass. He was admitted after some parleying at the door, and in a rear seat he through the service. When Father Crowley appeared at the central entrance to the cathedral he met a number of ushers, who quickly placed two tables across the entrance, barring his way. When he demanded admittance, he was directed to a side entrance and was blocked by another company of ushers and he was forced to accept a pew near the rear. There he sat undisturbed through the same service that was stopped when he entered the Sadie Claffin Loses Mind Brooding Over Spiritualism, Raves and Fights.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Nov. 10.-Struggling with fellow-actors, who endeavored to restrain her, Sadie Claffin, a member of the "Village Parson" Company, was taken from a train in this city on Friday. Her clothing had been torn in the struggle, and while she waited in the station for an ambulance to take her to an hospital it required the efforts of four men to restrain her. Miss Claffin became violent suddenly while on the train. Her insanity is said to be due to a morbid interest in spiritualism. For some time she has suffered from melancholia. She is now under care of physicians, who extend small hope for her recovery.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 10.-The King's birthday was observed in Ottawa by the Dominion Government, banks and the civic offices closing. General business went on as usual. At noon a royal salute was fired. Today in most of the city churches, the national anthem was sung. Last night a dinner was given at Rideau Hall.

Rev. S. G. Bland, in the Easton Methodist Church, today called on the church and press to urge upon the government to send 5,000 Canadians to South Africa to help end the war. He described Britain as being denuded of men, and British statemen as too proud to beg or help, but he said Canada should not go swaggering about her prosperity and giving subsidies to railways while the mother cuntry carrying on a great struggle. DOUBLE AFFLICTION. Dutton, Nov. 8.-The very sad news was received here last Thursday evening of the death of Mrs. Archibald Kerr, of Belgrave, that took place about 4 o'clock p.m. Mrs. Kerr was a daughter of the late Archibald Mc-Alpine, whose sudden death has been reported, and whose funeral place today. A father's and a daughter's death at once seems a very hard stroke to bear. Mrs. James Robertson, who lived east of Dutton, died about 6 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Robertson was around as usual yesterday, and her

RECEPTION IN THE LIBRARY. The banquet was preceded by the customary reception in the Guildhall library, where Sir Joseph Dimsdale, in his quaint official robes, welcomed the ministers and the various officials. Unlike last year's reception, when the war fever was at its height, the military were decidedly a secondary feature. Lord Roberts was conspicuous merely represented by one of the under

Touching upon South African developments in another part of his speech, Lord Salisbury said:

'I strongly deprecate the spirit of pessimism so frequently heard in the utterances of some of our public men as to the war in which we are en-gaged. Unlike the wars of former years, no longer does the capture of the enemy's capital and the dissipation of his field force constitute a conclusive victory. We are now con-fronted by a system of guerrilla war, which must be slowly and effectively stamped out. We are progressing, slowly, perhaps, but steadily.

DIDN'T AROUSE ENTHUSIASM. "I cannot take the public wholly into the confidence of the government It would be most imprudent publicly to state all we are doing weekly and phatically declare is that whatever delays are encountered, these are due neither to a lack of earnestness and ability of our generals in the field, nor to the neglect to comply with all of their demands on the part of the home government.

"We have been subject to much vague and indefinite criticism; but our bitterest opponents have not been able to point out any tangible defect, any definite cause of complaint.

"I deeply regret the ravages of the war in the colonies to which we are anxious to accord the fullest practicable measure of self-government, but we have had neighbors in South Africa whose conduct for years has been menace to the stability of that section of our empire. Now we are engaged in removing this menace and we are determined to do it so effectually it will never require doing

This declaration was received with cordial but by no means enthusiastic

THE PROCESSION.

Today's procession is markedly in contrast with last week's stately re-ception of the heir to the throne. It is a burlesque carnival, with a motley cavalcade and incongruous reproductions in tinsel of the splendors of medievalism. The disturbance of business interests caused by this grotesque and shabby function is minimized

There is no lack The presence of Lord Salisbury af- either of music or of fantastic color, and while the day is murky, the fog has lifted and the show can be seen. The ancient motive for the function is still preserved in the appearance of the lord mayor and the sheriffs at the royal courts to pay a tribute of respect to the crown in the person of the lord chief justice, and the King's judges and invite them to the Guild

Hall banquet. The dim light, streaming from a storied past, transfigures even this holiday burlesque. FRENCH GAIN PRESTIGE. The fog has lifted from continental affairs. Mitylene is no longer the center of disturbance, since the sultan has been coerced, more rapidly than by absence, and the war office was had been considered likely, by a naval demonstration. Now that the affair is virtually ended, the English press preceives the great gain in prestige made by the French Government in the vigorous management of diplomacy and naval armaments, and the importance of the moral support derived from the dual alliance. France has reasserted a protectorate over the sultan's Roman Catholic subjects and strength-ened her position materially in the near east. This is the English view, frankly expressed, and the German emperor is credited with sagacity in offering to interfere. The followers of Gladstone naturally point the moral that the Armenian atrocities would have been punished if not prevented by an energetic demonstration by a British fleet in the Mediterranean. The eastern question involves complex system of checks and balances, which would be disordered by a sudden impingement of any new force. France, in this instance, has received the full approval of the powers in advance. Not only Russia, but all the powers, understand how far France would go, and M. Delcasse was assured that no offense would be taken in any quarter. The equilibrium of the European concert has not been disturbed, and no redistribution of forces has been required. The chief result produced is the increased importance of France in affairs in the near east, in which the German emperor alone has taken any interest in recent years. THE LIBERAL LEADERS. Sir William Vernon Harcourt's plea or peace when there is no peace is bitterly resented by the government's supporters, and they are trying to goad on Lord Rosebery, who has pro-mised to come out of his lonely furrow for a single night and reply to it. Lord Rosebery is not likely to do this, but he can hardly resist the temptaion to scold everybody in the front line of both parties.

Mr. Chamberlain, who was roughly handled by Sir William Vernon Har-court, will be in fighting form when ne next mounts the platform. Mr. Balfour remains in the back-ground, paying visits to country ground, houses, and has nothing to say about South Africa. Silence may be golden. but not even the ministers appear to know what is going on.

The departure of Miss Hobhouse from Cape Town has revived pro-

Boer denunciation of the concentra-tion camps, and the medical journals are urging the immediate organization of sanitary control on a scale sufficient to meet all requirements. The war office having sent a capable commission of women to investigate the camps, has relaxed its effort to secure sanitary reforms, and supplied another proof of the inefficiency of red tape. Otherwise there are no new points in South African discussion,

Germany rang with anti-Chamberlain indignation meetings all this week, and such meetings continue to be held. They have been confined hitherto to students' and veterans' societies, but a conference of the Thuringian Pastors' Societies, has just decided to invite the Protestant clergymen throughout Germany to make a common protest against the utterances of the British colonial secretary at Edinburgh, Oct. 25, when he man troops during the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71. Students' meet-Leipzig, Tuebingen, Jena and other universities. The Leipzig meeting was held in response to a call sent out by the rector of the university. The Jena students voted to petition the imperial chancellor, Count Von Buelow, to instruct the German ambassador at London to demand satis-calls are hotly worded.

The Leipzig Veterans' League has declined to issue a call for a meeting, taking the ground that it is useless to become excited over Mr. Chamberlain, "since he is known to be the commonost kind of a liar."

The Vossische Zeitung regrets that many of the speeches delivered contained violent attacks upon Great Britain, and refers to the tendency which the danger of a resurrection of the eastern question has of drawing Great Britain, Russia and France together, and the consequent necessity of Italy casting her fortunes Great Britain and France, thus leaving Germany in a state of "splendid isolation."

IMPRUDENT. The paper asks if it is prudent, under such circumstances, to follow a course calculated to prove that the German people are imbued with a most profound hatred of Great Britain, and calls attention to the fact that Mr. Chamberlain's obnoxious remark included the troops of France, Russia and other nations, adds that the French and Russians shrug their shoulders, regarding Mr. Chamberlain as a babbler, and says they do not think of crusading against Great think of crusading against Great Britain, with grand orations, as the arch-enemy of the policy of great empires. Such a crusade, according to the Vossische Zeitung, cannot be conducted merely with warm hearts, cool heads being needed, added:

"It is not necessary for Germany to studiously nourish anti-German feelings against Great Britain, and it is a mistake to defend ourselves by exaggerated demonstrations.'

CROKER WILL MAKE ENGLAND

HIS HOME. It is learned from Wantage that Mr. Croker will spend New Year's at Moat House, and preparations are being made for his return. No one in Wantage doubts that Mr. Croker is going to pass the remainder of his life there. Mr. Croker thoroughly enjoys himself in England. A new world has opened to him here, and while he does not, and would not be admitted to the exclusive circle of the gentry, he is welcome among those who indulge in racing. He has important interests in America, which cannot be ignored at present, but when he has those in shape to dispense with personal attention there can be no doubt that England will be his permanent and final home. While the trades people at Wantage and vicinity speak favorably of Croker as one who "brings grist to their mill," some prejudice has been raised against him by the circulation in that neighborhood, and in other parts of Berks and Wilts of a sheet from New York called the Vigilant, giving an account of Mr. Croker's trial on a charge of murder, in which the jury disagreed. The country people were much astonished when they read the case, and when they heard it from those who had read it, and there has since been less praise of Mr. Croker amongst them, while some argue that the event in question is responsible for his choice of a residence abroad. Mr. Croker has taken considerable interest in local

A Scientific Voice Improver. Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or horseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas would not be without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence. Trouble Among Postoffice Clerks in Washington Traced to Verdigris on Door Handles.

[Washington Times.] A peculiar skin disease has made its appearance among the clerks and em-ployes of the postoffice department, and there are quite a number who are afflicted with the very disagreeable eczemalike disfigurement, which, since the last few weeks, has given them considerable annoyance and physical

The disease was first observed on the hands of a messenger, whose duty it is to carry letters, dispatches and books from office to office. He paid little attention to it, thinking it would disappear in due time. Instead the disease spread, and now there are quite a number of employes and clerks who are doctoring their hands and referred to the conduct of the Ger- faces to rid themselves of the strange ailment. The matter has attracted considerable attention, and an investigaings were held this week at Berlin, tion was made to explain the disease and to trace it to its source, with a view to stop its further progress.

Considerable alarm is felt, especially among the women clerks, who con-ceived the idea that the ink or pencils contained poisonous substances. took measures for the protection of their hands, but without avail. The apparent contagion continued to spread among the clerks.

A doctor was finally called into requisition, who carefully analyzed inks, pencils, blotting paper and copying presses for poisonous components. He gave assurances that the disease did not emanate from those sources, as the writing materials used in the department did not contain any matter injurious to the skin. He continued his investigations, however, and finally discovered the source of the trouble.

The knobs on the doors which lead to the various offices are of a metallic BEING OVERDONE. composition resembling brass. It seems that these knobs, which are constantly in use, receive very little attention, as far as the cleaning process is concern ed. It was shown by the doctor that the majority of them were covered with a thick layer of verdigris, which is one of the most vicious and strongest poisons known to materia medica.

The whole mystery was cleared with this discovery, and orders were instantly given to those who have charge of the cleaning of the office co-polish and scour and clean these brass doorknobs every day. It is hoped that this measure will restore the original purity of skin to the fair hands and faces of the afflicted clerks and employes of the postoffice department.

MYSTERY ABOUT MR. ROSENBERG

He has the appearance of a person who is slightly demented and did not answer the questions of the police in a very lucid manner. When Chief Wills announced his intention of communicating with his family in Vienna, Rosenberg turned pale and begged him not to do so. He said that it would injure his business if any telegram was sent, and told the chief that he would leave at once for home if set at liberty. But soon there was consternation on the faces of the president and directors of the agricultural society, for as soon as they saw Zorra's pride, the three men who had agreed to pull against him threw up the sponge and refused to act. Mr. McIntosh took it good-naturedly, as usual, and genially challenged any three men in the county to come

As stated before there was a big crowd present, and it was a pretty good representation of the brawn and muscle of the townships, but they couldn't get three men to pull against Bob McIntosh, of West Zorra. "HELLO. CENTRAL!"

Telephone Girls in Chicago To Be Taught a past 25 years.
"I believe there should be a canteen, Species of Elecution.

Chicago, Nov. 10 .- Chicago has introduced into its telephone exchange a sort of post-graduate course. The operator is expected to pass an examination in the very latest course—telephonic elocution. It is barely possible that it will be introduced in "A soft answer turneth away wrath." Telephonic elecution teaches the soft answer which "central" is instructed to give to the irate subscriber. Considering the rumber of the latter class, there is a wide field for the study among the telephone operators in this city.

The course of instruction is to teach the girls to use evenly modulated tones calculated to have a soothing effect upon those who object to the service. Of course, clearness of enunciation and pleasantness of tone are considered. It is the finishing touch to the education of an efficient operator.

DUNSMORE FAMILY IN LITIGATION!

Premier of British Columbia Sued by Sisterin-Law for Recovery of Portion of the Estate.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 10 .- Mrs. Joan Dunsmuir, widow of the late Robert Dunsmuir, founder of the fortune of British Columbia's wealthiest family, has entered an action against her son, James Dunsmuir, premier of British Columbia, which involves a portion of the estate. Mrs. Dunsmuir asks for the delivery of 4,993 shores in the R. Dunsmuir Company, Limited. She also wants an accounting of all dividends and profits upon these shares from Jan. 31,

The shares mentioned in the action are believed to be those left by the late Alexander Dunsmuir, and the action in no way affects the fortune left by Alexander Dunsmuir to his widow and by her to her daughter, Edna Wallace Hopper, the actress.

THE ARMY CANTEEN

Gen. Miles Says His Opposition to Drinking Places at Army Posts Is of Long Standing.

Boston, Nov. 9.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who was in the city last night, said in an interview that he had not changed his mind in regard to the canteen, as had been reported. He said he was as strong against it as ever, so far as alcoholic drink was concerned. He said that if railroads, banks, and other great establishments could get along without drinking-places the army could. He added:

"The men in the army average along 22 and 23 years of age, a time when they certainly should not be encouraged in drinking. I believe in remov-

TERMS OF THE TREATY. London, Nov. 9 .- The Hankow correspondent of the Times supplies what he alleges is a correct translation of the authentic text of the Manchurian convention proposed by Russia. The convention stipulates for the gradual and Duchess of Cornwall and York in St. Johns last month. Mr. Bond, the withdrawal of the Russian forces within three years, "provided no other re-bellion occurs, and the powers do not looked upon as a special recognition of the loyalty of the Roman Catholics interfere." The number and stations of the Chinese garrisons must be settled in concert with the Russian military authorities, and Russian assent must be obtained for any railway construction in Southern Manchuria. One of Them Bit Mr. Hedler, Who Seeks $50,000,000 Required to Swing New Street Railway Concern.

New York, Nov. 11 .- The arrangements for the organization of a proprietary company to take over the stocks and bonds of the trolley railroad system in Detroit, Mich., and other parts of that state, as well as roads in Ohio and Indiana it was said today, are practically completed. The amount of capital that will be involved in the deal, if it is carried out will, it is said, amount to about $50,000,000 and 1.000 miles of railroad. The syndicate which in promoting the consolidation of the railroads is headed by Henry A. Everett. Edward W. Moore and Ralph A. Sarman. August Belmont, W. C. Oakman, president of the Guaranty Trust Company, and George W. Hough, president of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, will be the trustees for the stockholders under the consolidation plan. One of the principal objects of the promoters of the consolidation is to improve the value of the railroads embraced in the plan by making di-rect connecting lines between Cleveland and Port Huron, with branches extending into Indiana and as far as Wheeling, W. There is a freshness of face, lustrousness of eyes, healthfulness of color and complexion about the Limerick girls, en masse, that carry off the sweepstakes trophy. The girls of Cork and of the lakes— in fact, of the country all the way down from Dublin—are somewhat of the Limerick order. In form they constitute a happy medium between the rotund English maids across one

Hon. David Mills Writes on the Subject of the Monroe Doctrine.

Proposed Inter-Oceanic Canal---The United States Idea of Sovereignty--- Does Not Wish to Share Responsibilities.

We devote the space in this portion of the paper today to the interesting article, by the Hon. David Mills, Minister of Justice, on the Monroe doctrine, and the proposed inter-oceanic canal. This is the article which has attracted so much attention in Great Britain, in the United States, and on the continent of Europe. In his message, early in the third decade of last century, James Monroe stated as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States were involved, that the American continent, by the free and independent condition which they had assumed and maintained, were henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers. During this time all the great continental powers of Europe were joined together for the purpose of subjugating the Spanish colonies of both North and South America through the instrumentality of France, who was to be rewarded by retaining as many of the Spanish possessions as would be a fair reward for her services. The circumstances, then, under such a political principle as the Monroe doctrine was conceived went a long way towards justifying its existence. The doctrine was intended to protect the weak against the wrongful action of the strong. On this assumption, President Monroe declared that the whole continent was then within the boundary of some recognized sovereign state, and therefore not open to acquisition by discovery and settlement. No announcement was made regarding what the United States would do in case the doctrine were violated. The United States has misconstrued the original intent of the Monroe doctrine, so that to them it has come to mean that all other states on this continent are to remain their sole prey, to be absorbed into the Republic of the United States where found convenient. The unfairness of such an attitude is to be seen in the fact that the United States is practically claiming a protectorate over the whole American continent, without assuming any of the responsibilities naturally attached to such a position.

The same policy of exclusiveness is to be seen in connection with the inter-oceanic canal across the Isthmus of Panama. The note sounded by President Hayes in 1880, namely that the policy of the United States is a canal under American control, has found a welcome response with the people of the United States. The governments of the republic have shown a disposition utterly at variance with the principles of international law in claiming the sovereignty of both North and South America. To permit exclusive control of such a gigantic public-international work as a canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, is virtually to transfer the territory of Central America to the United States.

We invite careful attention to Mr. Mills' able and interesting paper from The Empire Review:

entered into a controversy with Rus-sia, in the early part of this century, existence of monarchical institutions respecting the Russian possessions on the northwest coast of North America.

Mr. John Quincy Adams, who was sections of the process of the principle that was made to assert the principle that hat the whole continent was so occuliate and propers that had not the sanction of the sovereign of the state sovereignty of which was still to acquire, but that every part, both of South and North America, had be-Austria, Russia and Prussia, at Tropome, in conformity with the principles of international law, the posseswere the Spanish possessions of Central America and Mexico, the United States possessions, and beyond these, States possessions, and beyond these, that the British Government expressly the British Government sion of some sovereign state. MONROE'S INTENTION.

In taking this position, Mr. Monroe did not intend to establish a new politi-cal system for America, defensive and clusive, agairst European but to apply to the condition of things en existing in America a recognized principle of public law. The juestion with 'him was whether that indition of things did or did not, at hat time, warrant the application of the principle.

The suggestion that it was contrary to the interests and a violation of the sovereign authority of the different American states, that further Euro-pean possessions should be had, were ontentions that came into existence t a subsequent period: but, at that me, no one denied the right of any European state to acquire any terriory not already in the possession of a sovereign state, had there been any such territory. During the general isturbance of the civilized world that rew out of the aggressions of the Imperor Napoleon, Spain had, in a reat measure, lost control over her merican possessions; and after an ttempt was made by the great powers pon the continent of Europe to supress the aspirations of the people for nstitutional referms in different Euopean countries, it was thought desirle, on the part of the great monarchies of the continent of Europe, that steps should be taken to guard against he further disturbance of orderly govnment by the growth of democratic Russia led in this matter. High-counding sentiments that were, n their way, not open to question. were put forward, especially by Alex-ander of Russia, which, though unobectionable in form, necessarily pointin the direction of absolute authorty, and the plan adopted by the great ntinental powers to give effect to heir views, seemed to threaten the ndependence of all constitutional gov-

> ing at variance with the independence international law. STATE INTERFERENCE.

The British Government, in this dispatch, enunciated the right of any state to interfere with the affairs of another state when such interference was required for its own immediate security, maintaining that this interference was a right to be justified only by supreme necessity, and regulated by the same necessity. The Government also maintained that the right of interference was an exception to the general doctrine of sovereignty, which rested upon non-interference, and this right of interference could only be upheld when it could be shown that a ration's own safety was threatened. The principles found in this dispatch furnish, I think, an admirable test for what is called the Monroe doctrine, and for determining how far it is justified in the various instances in which it has been put for-ward by the United States. The burden of proof must always be upon the state that undertakes to set up as a proposition founded upon international law the right of interference. It is necessary to show in what way the acts of a European state towards an American state endanger the independence and security of the United States, before any legal ground is afforded for interfering in a controversy between any European state and any other American republic. For it can scarcely be maintained that where the interests of the United States, its security and its independence are not injuriously affected, the right to the maintenance of a doctrine which is not generally applicable to all Christendom can be claimed as a necessary and well accepted principle of international law, and the maintenence of which is incompatible with the rights of other sovereign states. The Spanish American states regarded the Monroe doctrine as a PLEDGE OF MUTUAL SUPPORT -as establishing an offensive and de fensive alliance for that purpose, but congress besitated to adopt a policy of entangling alliances. Congress, an der the administration of Mr. Adans, looked with disfavor upon the whole scheme. It would become an alliance in favor of republicanism as oppressive, as unjust, as the Hely Alliance It would be a system tending to en-courage the lawlessness of the allied states, and which the United States did not need. When the Monroe doctrine had its birth, all the great continental powers of Europe were joined together for the purpose of reducing to subjection the whole of the Spanish colonies in both and South America. France was to be made the instrument for this purpose, and she was to recoup herself for the expense incurred by re-taining so much of the Spanish posfor the services which she might render. The war that had been waged against Napoleon Bonaparte was a war for regaining the independence, and for securing the liberation of the hority, not only over all the civinzed which he had subjugated. David which had recently come into their union accomplished this object they turned their attention towards they are the statement of a permanent system. thority, not only over all the civilized states upon the continent of Europe, toveraments of Europe, but over all which he had subjugated. they maintained, to the peace and security of the nations.

By the congress of Laybach and Verona, the continental powers matured their plans for putting down conspiracies against, established power, consecrated rights and social order, but as the allies acknowledged no legitimate basis of right and order, and formed a combination against all changes in the direction of liberal institutions not voluntarily made by the stitutions not voluntarily made by the sovereigns, their system was unsupported by any public opinion. France, in 1823, invaded Spain, to suppress reforms secured by the Cortes and restore absolutism in the person of Fer-

The Holy Alliance com-mitted to France the duty of emanci-pating the sovereign of Spain from hose constitutional changes which his subjects insisted upon bringing about. When the Holy Alliance undertook to establish a permanent union for the superintendence of the internal affairs of other sovereign states, and the suppression of democratic principles, as a mischievous and disturbing force, they introduced an element of disturbance as clearly marked as that which had actuated the political doctrinaires of France. The British Government denied that any commotions existing within the Spanish kingdom afforded any adequate plea or excuse for foreign interference. The interference with France at the time of the revoluwas not because France had changed her own constitution, but because she attempted to propagate by the sword her opinions, and to compel all the rest of Europe to accept them, and to govern their conduct in con-formity with them.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE. The friends of the new Spanish constitution were not interfering with the domestic affairs of any other state. The British Government declared their determination to remain strictly neutral; but they made known that if any foreign government joined Spain against the colonies, they would regard it as constituting a new ques-tion of such importance that they would feel it their duty to adopt such a course as the interests of the United Kingdom might call for. Similar views were expressed by the Federal Gov-ernment of the United States. Great Britain protested against French in-terference in the affairs of Spain, and it was then believed that if absolut-ism was there re-established by the aid of French arms, the subjugation of the Spanish colonies would be at once undertaken.

The United States, after a conference between Mr. Canning and Mr. Rush, adopted, in 1823, what was known as the "Menroe doctrine," and which at that time was, "that any at tempt by the great states of Europe to conquer those states in America which had acquired their independence and to reduce them again to a condition of political subjection, would be regarded as an unfriendly act, and as one threatening the sovereignty and irdependence of all other American states." The Spanish American states regarded this declaration of the president as a promise of an offensive and defensive alliance for the purpose of maintaining political independence. Subsequently the Panama Congress met (1825), and the United States was invited to send representatives thither. The Senate of the United States ap pointed two commissioners, and the House of Representatives provided the necessary appropriation for the pay-ment of their expenses. In the House of Representatives a resolution was adopted which declared that:

"The United States ought not to become parties with the Spanish American republics, or either of them, to any joint declaration for the purpose of preventing the interference of any European power with their independence or form of government, or to any compact for the purpose of preventing colonization on the continent of America; but the people of the United States shall be left free to act, in any crisis, in such a manner as their feelings of friendship towards those republics and as their own honor may at the time dictate."

A RESTRICTED INTERPRETA-TION.

The adminstration certainly put a very restricted interpretation upon the doctrine enunciated in Mr. Monroe's message, and they did so because they felt that congress, after a careful consideration of the subject, was in danger, in the interest of republican government, of falling into the same tolerant system in upholding it that the great powers on the continent of Europe had fallen into in seeking to maintain absolute monarchy, and they would, by so doing, make themselves responsible for the mutual protection of the weak and semi-barbarous states of Spanish America, whose continued existence could be really of no consequence to them, and which might involve them in hostilities, and was sure to incur for them the ill-will all great states upon the continent of Europe. Mr. Adams saw the dangers, moral and political, which might come upon the United States in consequence of the course upon which the requblic was invited to enter, and so he de-clared that under the Monroe doctrine each state should guard, by its own means, against the establishment any future European colony within its borders, which, he says, was the principle announced by his predecessor, Mr. Monroe. Mr. Monroe's message assumed that a sovereign state in America would not permit other sovereign states to acquire its territory by col inization. But there was nothing in the Monroe doctrine to restrain any American state from voluntarily ceding any portion of its possessions to a Euro-pean state. It was against the wrongful action of the strong towards the weak that the Monroe doctrine was pointed, and that it was intended to prevent. On that assumption he declared that every part of the continent was then within the boundary of some recognized sovereign state, and for this reason not open to acquisition by discovery and settlement.

Mr. Monroe made no announcement as to what the United States would do if a European power should attempt peacefully to acquire territory on the ontinent that belonged to some sovereign American state. So that, when congress refused to commit the gov-ernment, in advance, by any pledge or understanding, to any system of co-operation, it did not abandon or quali-fy the Monroe doctrine. What was hought desirable at the Panama Congress was that each state should make for itself a declaration of policy similar to that which Mr. Monroe had male on behalf of the United States; but the doctrine that the rights of a sovereign state shall be respected is not more applicable to the relations of two sovereign states, both of which are upon the same continent, than to two sovereign states which are situated on different continents. The doctrine of Mr. Monroe was the doctrine of mutual self-protection, nothing more. It owed its origin to the weakness of the states whose independence might be in danger, and it ceased to have any applicability whatever to a state that was strong and powerful, the sole prey of the United States, to be absorbed at such times as may be found convenient to that republic. Of this there is ABUNDANT EVIDENCE. The authorities of the United States argued that by reason of the disparity in the strength of Great Britain and Venezuela the latter could only hope to succeed through peaceful methods, and so it was to such methods that Great Britain must have recourse to settle her differences with Venezuela, Mr. Secretary Olney said:

"The impracticability of any conventional adjustment has been often and thoroughly depend on the conventional adjustment has been often and thoroughly depend on the conventional adjustment has been often and thoroughly depend on the conventional adjustment has been often and the conventional adjustment has been often adjustment has been thoroughly demonstrated. Even more impossible of consideration is an appeal to arms-a mode of settling national pretensions unhappily not yet wholly obsolete. If, however, it were not condemnable as a relic of barbarism and a crime in itself, so one-sided a contest could not be invited or even accepted by Great Britain without distinct disparagement to her character as a civilized state."

Not long before the United States had a dispute with Peru. There was same disparity between the disputants as in this case. The government of her late Majesty tendered their good offices. Those good offices were declined, and recourse was had to Those magnanimous considerations which the Government of the United States think should be applied in con-troversies between other states, they unwilling to act upon when the United States is a party. Indeed, when the hostilities with Peru are examined in the light of Mr. Olney's dispatch they afford an instructive commentary upon the policy of the great republic. The United States at an earlier period had their difficulties with Venezuela. They were powerful, Venezuela was weak. In 1871 three steamers belonging to citizens of the United States were selzed by Venezuelan belligerents—a claim for damages was made by the owners. Venezuela promised indemnity, but failed to pay. In 1890 congress authorized the president to take whatever measure he deemed necessary to secure indemnity from their sister republic, whose weakness ought, according to Mr. Olney, to be a secure protection against all coercive measures being taken by a powerful state, such as the United States.

POLK'S MESSAGE. In 1845 President Polk, in a message defending the annexation of Texas and protesting against the interposition of any European power to prevent it, says:

"In the existing circumstances of the world, the present is deemed an appropriate occasion to reiter te and re-affirm the principle avowed by Mr. Monroe, and to state my cordial con-currence in its wisdom and sound pol-Existing rights of every European nation shall be respected; but it is due alike to our safety and interest that the efficient protection of our laws shall be extended over our whole territorial limits, and that it shall be distinctly announced to the world, as our settled policy, that no future European colony or dominion shall, with our consent, be planted or established on any of the North American continent." This is a doctrine very different from that of Mr. Monroe, which was intended to protect the weaker states of America against the danger of conquest by the combined action of the absolute monarchies of the continent of Europe, because of principles of government embodied in their political constitutions. Mr. Polk asserts the right of the United States to undertake the conquest of other American states, to acquire their territory, and to do this without any right of inter-ference on the part of any European state. Mr. Monroe had in view the independence of the weaker states; Mr. real the right to undertake this conquest without any right of interference on the part of any European

It was thought the inhabitants might the sovereignty of Great Britain or of Spain for the purpose protection, and he the Monroe doctrine is opposed to the transference of American territory to any European power, and to the extension of their system to the Western Hemisphee. He urges congress to take whatever steps may be necessary to prevent Yucatan becoming a European colony, which he adds "in no event will the United States permit." South America is not included in President Polk's message. His declaration, in effect, looked to the acquisition of Texas, and it affirms that the United States will extend her territory by conquest or by cession without consulting the interests of any European state, and that she will not give her consent to the establishment in North America of any future European colony, which was a notice that she would not assent to the acquisition of Yucatan by Great Britain.

It is not stated that the United States claimed the right to restrain by force the political acquisitions of other states in North America. It may be that President Polk intended to affirm that no European power would be permitted to acquire dominion either by cession or conquest. He does not extend his doctrine to South America. In this he was more modest than some of his successors, and it is difficult to understand upon what ground the United States, without a square mile of South American territory in her possession, can claim any right, legal or moral, to restrain England, France or Holland, that have on that continent extensive possessions, in respect to those rights which international law bestows. Any one of these European states would much stronger ground for excluding the United States from any voice in South American affairs than she can have for excluding any one of them. They have South American possessions. She has none. They are within the family of South American states. She is not, and can assign no ground, recognized by public law, for claiming a voice in South American affairs that might not be claimed by Italy or Aus-The United States, no doubt, is an influential state, but it is not above the law, and is not yet possessed of sufficient authority to enable it to set aside the modern law of nations and to undertake to legislate for the control of all Christendom.

PRESIDENT HAYES' COMMUNICA-

TION. On March 9th, 1880, President Hayes sent a communication to congress in which he said: "The policy of this country is a canal under American control. The United States cannot consent to the surrender of this control to any European power or to any combination of European powers. No European Cleveland, Mr. Blaine and others, under to Canada, and the government of the power can intervene for such protection without adopting measures upon this continent which the United States would deem wholly inadmissible. If the protection of the United States is relied on, the United States must exercise such control as will enable this country to protect its interests and maintain the rights of those whose private capital is embarked in the work. An inter-oceanic canal across the American Isthmus will essentially change the geographical relations between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States, and between the United States and the rest of the world. It will be the great ocean thoroughfare between our Atlantic and our Pacific shores, and virtually a part of the coast-line of the United States. Our merely commercial interest in it is greater than that of all other countries, while its relations to our power and prosperity as a nation, to our means of defense, our unity, peace and safety are matters of para-its interests and welfare." This statement is certainly not supported by the facts. What any other power would have done is shown by the provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and by what Great Britain herself has done in respect to the Suez Canal. A careful examination of the correspondence between the Brit-ish and the United States Government reference to an inter-oceanic canal Central America shows that the nited States, in the first place, aimed at having Great Britain abandon her claims to the Mosquito coast and the Bay Islands rights long previously acquired, and which she had no legal right to question.

would under similar circumstances fail

THE RIGHT QUESTIONED.

Sometimes United States ministers have questioned the right of the United Kingdom to Belize; sometimes they have acquiesced in her right to the country; but when the Clayton-Bul-wer treaty was negotiated, it seems to have been entered into on her part mainly for the purpose of enabling her with a weak pretense of right to protest against British possessions in Central America. Her president declared that all he sought was an equality of rights in that section of the continent The British Government, having been weak enough to abandon her protec-torate over the Mosquito Indians and her possession of Ruatan, the United States then began to make claim to a superiority of right, and to assert that any attempt to give effect to the 8th article of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty would be regarded by her as an unfriendly act.

The course which the United States government pursued subsequent to 1870, was one which they evidently contemplated taking from the beginning; but until the British government had abandoned their territorial rights in Central America, it was not deemed prudent on the part of successive United States ministers to disclose their intentions. The government of the United States are, in fact, claiming the right to a protectorate OVER THE WHOLE CONTINENT of America, without assuming any of called for in her interest, as in that of the responsibilities which attach that position, and without making be content to submit to any other rule themselves in any way responsible to in respect to such a canal than that other civilized states, for the encour- of perfect equality. This is what our

The modern Monroe doctrine had then no place whatever in the policy of the United States as declared by the stipulations of that instrument, any more than it has now a place in international law. The treaty served as a basis, howinterests ever, to attack the existing of Great Britain in Central America. The British government ultimately accepted the United States interpretation of the treaty, although that interpretation is not called for by either the letter or spirit of the instru-

These demands having been acquiesced in, many of the public men of the republic have maintained that there has been such a change of circumstances in the condition of the United States, that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is no longer binding upon her, although it is upon the United Kingdom. It is an obsolete instrument according to 'their contention, wholly unsuited to the circumstances of today. They insist that it shall be binding upon the British people in respect to those possessions which have been abandoned, but it shall not be binding upon the United States. The 8th article of the treaty, which made its provisions appli-cable not only to the canal by way of the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua, but to any canal or railway constructed in any other part of Central America, and which imposes upon both governments the duty of endeavoring to get other civilized countries to become parties to compact, we are told, must not be acted upon, as it would be an unfriendly proceeding towards the United States, if attempts were to be made to give effect to its provisions. THE SOVEREIGNTY OF AMERICA.

The truth is, the public men of the United States are assuming that the sovereignty of both North and South America is in that republic, and that the Spanish American states are not really independent states. I cannot think that the rest of the civilized world will submit to pretensions so arrogant, and so utterly at variance with the settled principles and usages of International law. The United States are unwilling to enter into active competition with the rest of mankind upon equal terms, and so they invoke the Monroe doctrine for the purpose of restricting the commerc of other states, and of securing by these restrictions advantages to themselves. Canada is a great North American state. Her commerce is far greater in proportion to her popula-tion than that of the neighboring republic. The construction of a Cen tral American canal would be as much to the United States, and we shall never agement in wrong-doing with which neighbors asked for at the outset, and this is all they have a right to clair

The British government recognized the sovereignty of the Central American republics, and that sov-ereignty must be upheld. The neutrality of the canal must be guaranteed, as provided by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the United Kingdom must not yield to the demands of an ambitious and not over-scrupulous state, to erect fortifications upon its borders, and practically to take possession under the pretense of making it a secure highway. It is from the United States that the danger proceeds, and the guarantee of neutrality is a guarantee against the danger which she threatens.

To give the United States possession of the canal, is practically to transfer the territory of Central America to that republic, contrary to the terms of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. shall see by a further examination of the diplomatic correspondence upon this subject, how the principles which they then claimed to have been governed in the adoption of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and their adherence to a particular construction of that instrument have been departed from in the bolder pretensions which they have recently put forward. These, I think, upon careful examina-tion, will be found to be of such a character that to recognize them would be a greater menace to our security and future progress than any other matter of controversy that now presents itself for solution.

The United States have taken possession of Dyea and Skagway, within the limits of Canada, and have so far refused to submit the matter to arbitration; and it is worthy of note that those rules of public ethics which Mr. Olney put forward in connection with the disputed Venezuelan boundary, the authorities of the United States are unwilling to recognize for the determination of a dispute between their country and ours.

THE MEXICAN COWBOY

How He Rounds Up the Antelope and Subdues the Wild Bull.

"In traveling over a long strip of prairie where thousands of horses and cattle were feeding on the luxuriant grasses," writes a hunter of long experience, Dr. F. J. Toussaint, from the province of Sonora, Mexico, "we came to a camp where a cattle round-up was in progress. One of the cowboys headed off a flock of twenty-two antelopes and drove them among the herd of 600 cattle that were scattered about feeding. In a few moments every cowboy in camp was in the saddle, and, lasso in hand, began riding in a circle around the cattle, slowly driving them to a center and crowding them around the antelope. Several of my party were stationed at opposite sides of the herd, with instructions not to shoot at the antelope until they had well cleared the whole outfit. Twice a part of the bunch made a break for the open, but returned again to the rest of the flock. The flock moved about among the cattle that gradually closed in around them until the curious little animals could not be seen by any of "Excitement was converted into suspense. Every rider as he passed me was anxiously looking among the cattle, nervously slinging his lasso to and fro at the side of his horse. Sud-denly from the south side of the bunch of cattle two of the boys yelled: 'Here

'At the same time the antelope bounded into the open field. Immediatile astic eye and say: 'Don't they look rather cheap and common? I prefer deep into the flanks of their wiry little horses and gave chase, swinging their lassos in a circle over their heads. Two men came from each side and appeared to be riding to head After running about 400 yards, the foremost rider turned toward the antelope and the next instant it looked as if he was among them. His lasso shot into the air, then dove down. Every man was yelling as only cowboys can. A moment more and the race was over. The loop had fallen short of its mark, and the fleet-footed little animals had bounded beyond the reach of their pursuers.

One of the riflemen, who galloned down the prairie, now stopped his horse, jumped to the ground, and resting one elbow on his knee to steady his gun, fired. It was a long-range shot, but one of the antelope dropped back and soon lay down, and was dead when we reached it."

In his journeyings over the grazing country Dr. Toussaint has had several opportunities to see the Mexican cowboy as he is at home at, his best. 'At riding bucking horses, throwing the lasso and bullfighting," he says, 'they are experts. Pancho, who is recognized as the most expert daring lasso thrower and rider in these parts, is a typical Mexican cowboy. He was dressed a day or two ago, when I saw him on his native heath, in full Mexican style-high-heeled boots, large spurs, spangled and frilled leggins. close-fitting jacket. large, broad-brimmed and Ellyer-braided hat. He made a rather offractive figure as he gracefully rode ancing, fiery little horse adorned sliver-mounted saddle and bridle, up to our dinner camp.

'He told us in the majestic language of Castile-for he seemed to be something of an orator-that he never saw the horse, cow or bull that he dared not ride, and to make good his asserton he rode into a herd of cattle that was feeding close by and singled out a four-year-old bull that had not been handled by man since the time in his canicular days when he was roped and thrown to be branded. Soon they running at full speed, the bull in advance, the horseman close behind After a short run, in which Pancho had an opportunity to display his fine horsemanship, the bull was turned towards our eamp. On they came at full speed, directly toward us, the cowboy a little behind and at the left of the rushing bull, swinging his lasso in a circle over his head. When they were within fifty yards we all jumped to our feet, shouting and waving our hats, hoping to turn the animal and save the tinware and dinner. Our alarm was premature, how-The next moment the lasso shot forward over the bull's shoulders, one part of the loop striking the ground in of the bull and the other part on his breast. Both front feet went into the loop, and a quick jerk threw it around the legs. Giving the lasso two turns around the pommel of the Pancho stopped his welltrained horse, which braced for the jerk which came when the bull had the full length of the lasso. The bull was thrown violently to the ground, Pancho jumped to the ground, ran to the bull and tied the forelegs together. Then, tying a rope around the bull's body, removed the lasso. Up jumped the bull and away he went with Pancho on his back, holding on to the rope. In his frantic efforts to get rid of his rider the infuriated bull ran first in one direction and then in another, bucking, kicking and bellowing, but all in vain, for Pancho stuck like glue. When he slowed down into a trot and headed for the herd the rider slipped to the ground and came back to camp to receive the congratulations of his admirers, who appeared to be as proud of the feat as Pancho was."

ANTE-NUPTIAL ADVICE TO MEN.

Wife's Housekeeping.

Don't Stint Her on Compliments an You May Do What You Please Without Friction.

[By Dorothy Dix.]

Whatever grievances women may have had in the past, it is obvious that they own this century, and that it is run for their exclusive benefit. The whole universe is being over hauled, and cut bias, and frilled in the middle in accordance with feminine tastes, and no one is now so poor and of the bargains: so mean as to do reverence to a mere

Take the newspapers, for instance, with their woman's pages, as if what was good enough reading for a man wasn't good enough reading for a woman, and with their columns of advice to wives about how to manage their husbands, and make over their clothes. and get along with their husband's mothers, but there's never a word of special counsel to man.

No oracle tells him how to deal genty, but firmly, with a woman with the bargain counter habit, or how to circumvent his mother-in-law, or how to add a chiffon ruffle to his last year's trousers, so as to make them long en-ough for this winter's style, though many a poor fellow would be glad enough for a few hints on the subject. It is doubtless to be attributed to woman's superior sympathy that when one finds out how to boss her husband she passes the tip along to her sisters. No man ever does this. If he ascertains the secret of managing a wife he keeps the snap to himself and leaves every other husband to work out his own salvation by himself. When a girl is going to be married her mother and her sisters and her cousins and her aunts have heart-toheart talks with her about striking for a good allowance on the start, and not letting her husband smoke in the parlor, or go out to his club at nights, but you never hear of an old and experienced benedict taking a prospective bridegroom aside and saying:

"My dear boy, you are going to be married, and while I know the young woman is an angel, still angels are er er sometimes a little trying to live with, and so, perhaps, a word or two of advice from one who has been there may not come amiss.

"Suppose, for instance, your wife should develop the marked-down sale mania. Don't argue the matter with her or try to convince her that a thing she doesn't need and doesn't want isn't cheap at any price. "Every woman believes herself an

"Never combat this illusion. Simply

"Or, suppose you find that you have not very old, and had little experience, spoused an animated talking machine. In any conversational match it is folly for a man to pit himself against a woman. He lacks swiftness and staying powers and is an amateur where she is a professional.

"It will not happen again. Women are idealists, and any one of them will break her neck trying to live up to what she thinks a man thinks she is. "If your wife is addicted to clubs, and you object to them, do not make the mistake of ridiculing hen gatherings. Sports of Royal Women.

If hunting is the sport of kings, shooting is the pastime of queens, the Queen of Portugal being perhaps the finest shot of all royal sportswomen. Indeed, Sleeping in the open air has passed the life limit of a "fad" and assumed our queen delights in the quiet hours the proportions of a habit. It is a little difficult to be grateful for what we have, because the mind constantly reaches forward to the things we wish we had but have not. A cheerful thought, born of an unfaltering faith, furnishes the most gracious companionship, while the spirit of the fault finder makes even the sunhine seem gloomy.

And it is possible to maintain this attitude of good cheer when one views life from the right standpoint. If, for example, you say to your soul, with the impulse of avarice, "How many things the Lord has refused to give you so disturb yourself that your health will feel the effect, for health depends more on the way our thoughts run than we imagine. But if, on the contrary, you say, with good and sensible Diogenes, "Ye gods, how many things there are in the world which I do not want!" you will soon learn to be happy and contented with what you have. It is surprising how satisfied you can be with little if you will only put yourself into harmony with your environment, and equally surprising how miserable you can be with pretty nearly everything if you dwell on the few things you do not possess. You are master of yourself, and can think along either line, as you choose and determine. It is a wholesome service you do your when you sit down and seriously make a list of the benefits you enjoy. You will be astonished at its length. Look out on the sunrise in the morning, with the feeling that it is a bless-ed thing to be alive, with work to do in a world where the helping hand never yet failed of an opportunity. Look out at noonday, in the heat and bustle of business, and think that the whole universe is moving steadily toward a higher level, and that your small task, if rightly done, is one of the threads in the great fabric of progress. Look out in the evening, when God kindles the stars, and see beyond the loom of the celestial city of which some time you will be a citizen, with none of the limitations which hamper you now. Look into your narrow household, at the dear ones who climb on your knees for their good-night and a father's blessing, and then up to those half invisible ones who are ever hovering near because unbroken ties of love still bind them to those who

ANIMAL IMPOSTORS

Moths and Other Insects That Imitate Their Environment

The Shakespearean conception of the human world as a stage may be expanded to include the animal world as well. Like ourselves, animals enter on the struggle for existence with a modicum of equipment in figure, complexion, voice, and demeanor, and with the assignment of a definite role to play in the melodrama of life. Hence we are not surprised to find that many of our four, six, and eight-footed competitors have, figuratively speaking, attained to some proficiency in the art of imposition while endeavoring to gain a foothold in the world-i. e., the opportunity of feeding, mating and eaving offspring to repeat the same performance continuously. It must have been some such reflections as this which led Henry Drummond to remark that "Carlyle in his blackest visions of 'shams and humbugs' among humankind never saw anything so finished in hypocrisy as the naturalist now finds in every tropical forest. There are to be seen creatures, not singly, but in tens of thousands, whose every appearance, down to the minutest spot and wrinkl is an affront to truth, whose every attitude is a pose for a purpose, and whose whole life is a sustained lie. Before these masterpieces of deception the most ingenious of human impositons are vulgar and transparent. Fraud is not only the great rule of life in a tropical forest, but the one condition of it." Drummond's statements are perhaps a little misleading without some qualification, for animals are not imposters in the ordinary sense of the term, since they are, of course, perfectly unaware of appearing under a deceptive disguise. Moreover, what is true of animal life in the tropics is also, in great measure, true of animal life in other regions of the globe. In the development of deceptive disguises-disguises which affect the form, attitude and color, but largely the color, of animals-nature appears to have proceeded along two different paths, one of which is direct and relatively easy, the other circuitous and much more difficult. The easy path, which may be considered first, is that of protective resemblance pure and simple-i. e., an approach in the animal's form, color and attitude to some object in the surroundings. Such an approximation can hardly fail to be of the greatest advantage, since the animal thereby merges so completely with its environment as to pass unobserved by its enemies or by its prey. This alternative has led in two directions, to a defensive and an aggressive form of resemblance. Every sportsman has been deceived by the close resemblance of birds and other animals to the soil and vegetation. It would be easy, moreover, to show that many reptiles, frogs and fishes and very many of the lower animals exhibit similar adaptations. It is also well known that some of these creatures, like the chameleons, many tree frogs, cuttlefishes and shrimps can actually change their colors to make them harmonize with the exact tints of the vegetation of soil on which they are living. But no animal can compare with the insects and spiders in the detailed perfection of their protective disguises, or in the frequency of adopting this method of eluding enemies or of stealthily approaching prey. This is true, notwith-standing the fact that active colorchanges like those of the chameleon are scarcely known to occur among insects

Many of the most striking examples of protective resemblance among insects are the result of the very intimate association of these with the flora of our planet. Especially is this true of insects which live exposed on the vegetation. There is really no portion of the plant excepting its roots and fruits which is not copied by some insect, often with the most astonishing faithfulness of details. Hosts of moths copy the rough lichen-mottled bark of trees; the walking sticks and looping caterpillars copy the twigs; the green leaves are imitated by the katydids and the marvelous leaf-insects (Phyllium) of the East Indies, while the dead leaves are portrayed by many moths and butterflies, a form of resemblance culminating in the famous Kallima butterflies of southern Asia. Striking resemblances to thorns and knots are found among spider and leaf-hoppers (Membracidae), while even the flowers may be copied, as in the case of the pink orchid-like mantis (Hymenopus) India, and several other species. roots of plants are not copied because they are not exposed to view, and an attemp to resemble the exposed seed or fruit would be only an invitation to birds to destroy any species that might be so bold as to vary in this direction.

REARING PONDS FOR GAME FISH

Hon. Mr. Latchford Will Ask Government for Appropriation for Purpose.

Globe: In view of the success of the work of restocking the inland waters of the Ontario with parent bass during last season, the work will probably be carried on on a much larger scale next year. Hon. Mr. Latchford will, it is understood, ask the legislature for an increased propriation for that purpose at the coming session. He has also under consideration the establishment of rearing ponds in the province, from supply of fish could readily be obtained at any season of the year. One of the difficulties now is in catching the bass for transplanting in the cool weather of the fall, which is more suitable for transportation, as they then take to deeper water. The rear-ing ponds, it is believed, would overcome this trouble

The result of the season's work has convinced the officials of the department that they are working in the right direction, as the people more directly concerned have manifested a livelier interest in the wellfare of the inland fisheries. AT SOJTON, SAMAR

The 'Pinos Lose Twenty-Six Men Killed-Seventy Houses Destroyed.

Manila, Nov. 9 .- Advices from Cata. balogan, capital of Samar Island, reports that Major Waller attacked a force of insurgents occupying a strong position at Sojton, two 3-inch guns being used to shell the rebel stronghold. Throughout the first day, the insurgents held the place, but yesterday Major Waller renewed the attack and after a desperate engagement, carried the position. Two marines of the attacking force and 26 insurgents were killed. Major Waller destroyed the cuartels and 70 houses.

SHE HAS NO USE FOR A SIDE SADDLE.

A Baltimore Girl Who Takes Her Morning Canter Strictly Man Fashion.

Baltimore has ever been regarded as a city of conservatism, and any digression from the straight and narrow path of conventi Women's Orchestra of 24 artists. The form, especially among that set termed smart, is sufficient to set a thousand tongues wagging and heads shaking in deprecation. Possibly it will be received somewhat in the nature of a shock to those of such straight-laced propensities to that for several weeks past, on each fine, clear morning, a young woman, whose social position is second to none in the city, sallies forth from here louse, just at dawn, to go horseback riding without the use of a side saddle. She is invariably clad in a long, light Raglan, with collar turned up about her little pink ears, her gloved hands thrust deep into the pockets of her coat. Peeping from beneath the skirt of her coat a dainty patent-leather boot, highly polished and adorned wih a silver spur, tells tale of her mission—an early morning canter through the park.

There is little to excite either surprise or wonder in this athletic young woman's course until the outskirts of the park are reached. There, awaiting her, is her groom, with her saddle horse and his own. At a glance it cannot be determined which steed she will select, for both are invariably appointed with a man's saddle. Unbuttoning her long raglan, she stands forward in all the glory of young womanhood, unhampered by trailing skirts, gewgaws or flounces. costume is a complete set of riding togs, designed by a well-known Bond street (London) tailor, who is considered an artist in cutting riding breeches, vests and coats.

The material employed in their make is a neat check or plaid, the breeches cut very large and roomy from the hips to the knee where they are buttoned in tight, just below the knee, disappearing into the patent leather boot. A vest of startling design fits her well-rounded figure to perfection. About her full, round throat is wrapped a white hunting stock, tied as an ascot, with a pin of sporty design holding it in place. The coat is of a cutaway design, the skirts long and full, both fore and aft. A derby hat crowns her glossy chestnut locks coiled tight to the head. Altogether, she makes a charming picture, with the glow of health and happiness blooming upon her cheeks-Assisted by the groom, she springs lightly into the saddle, adjusts her coat, and is off for a rattling canter. while the rest of her fashionable world are either just turning in, or turning over for a second nap. The groom always follows at a respectful listance. Before reaching the city imits she dismounts, dons her raglan, and is at home for breakfast with an appetite whetted by the keen, frosty early morning air.

EXPEL INVADERS!

New Scheme to Drive the Enemy From Cape Colony Likely to Soon Develop.

Oct. 23, the Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail says: Lord Kitchener and Sir John Gordon Spriggs (the Cape premier) have arranged a scheme for the expulsion of the invaders from Cape Colony. NEW CHURCH FOR EKFRID BAPTISTS.

From Log Meeting House to Handsome Edifice.

Rise and Advancement of Worthy Denomination.

Opening of New Church Calls Up Memories of Days and Men That Have Passed Away.

After nigh half a century of dedication to the worship of God, the old church of the Ekfrid connection of old school Covenanted Baptists was found insufficient to meet the demands terday the fine new edifice erected this summer, was opened for worship. The new church, which is one of which any rural congregation might well be proud, is a substantial and handsome structure of red brick, 55 feet deep and 36 feet wide, with a gallery. The interior of the church is finished in white Georgia pine and the windows are of stained glass. The circular seating arrangement is adopted, with pews of white ash. The pulpit and pulpit fur-niture are of antique oak, upholstered in crimson. The church is heated by a basement furnace. The total cost was about $4,200. opening services were marked by the attendance of large congregations from the surrounding district, while adherents of the Covenanted church were present from many parts of the province. The services were conducted by the pastor, Elder Carnell, of Dutton, assisted by Elder H. M. Curry, of Illinois. In the morning, the service opened with the singing of the 20th paraphrase, "How glorious are the courts of Zion." Elder Curry chose for his text, Acts, ii., 41: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. Elder Carnell followed with a short discourse on Matthew, xvi., 17 and 18, in the course of which he gave an interesting sketch of the history of the two churches, which had served the needs of the congregation prior to the erection of the new building. In the afternoon effective sermons were preached by both elders, and so great was the crowd in attendance that congregation that the church starts its career practically free of debt. In the words of a member of the congregation, "The plates were simply stacks of bank bills, with a handful of silver occasionally to hold the bills down. The committee which had in charge the erection of the church was composed of the following gentlemen: George

Scales, chairman; A. McTavish, sen., secretary-treasurer; Alex. McDonald, Philip Corneill, Malcolm Galbraith, A. McTavish, jun., David Cowan and Dan-

The history of the establishment of the Covenanted Baptist Church in Ontario is one which the properly qualified historian could make as interesting reading as a chapter of romance. In the early days of the last century, Daniel McArthur, of Cowal, in the west of Scotland, was converted and baptized in the Baptist faith by an elder in Edinburgh. Young McArthur felt called upon to preach the Word of God, and he did so with such force and power that he called down upon his head the anger of the established clergy, who subjected him to persecution and hardship of many descriptions. At their instance he was seized and carried on a warship to England, where he was kept in dungeons, his captors calling him different cent, and his adversaries were fined £4.000. He then removed to New York State, where he died. Meantime he had inspired others to accept the truth and follow in his footsteps, and one of these was Deacon Dugald Campbell, of North Knapdale, Scotland. Coming to Canada in 1818, he settled in Aldro township, Elgin county. He was ordained a minister of the Church of Canada, but as he found that body had departed from what he GEORGE PETERS, The Richmond St.

it, and founded the Particular Covenanted Baptist Church, which with the exception of the or-dinance of baptism, he classed with the exception of the ordinance of baptism, he claimed to be identice with the faith of the martyred Covenanters of Scotland. Through the ministrations of Elder Campbell, Duncan McCallum, Duncar Lamond, Neil McDonald and Thoma McColl were raised up to be witnessed to the faith. Thus before there was a single dwelling place to mark the site of the city of London, Elder Campbell had implanted in the townships ekfrid, Dunwich, Aldboro, Lobe and Orford the seeds of a faith which has sprung up, and given forth many an hundredfold on the planting.

The first church of the Ekfrid connection was erected only a few rods nection was erected only a few rods from where the new building stands. Before the building of the church the spot was sacred ground, for there, amid the beautiful forest, there had been tenderly laid the loved ashes of those whom death had claimed from the scattered settlement. Here the little log church was built in the thirties and here for twenty years the sturdy pioneers of the district came to praise their Maker. Not with all the comforts and conveniences of modern rural life did they come, but at the expense of bodily fatigue and deprivation. To more than one member of the congregation is the memory handed down as a sacred treasure of the ancestor, male or female, whose zeal reckoned as naught a walk of ten or fifteen miles to church, with only a handful of chestnuts for the day's sustenance. They were none of them over rich, these pioneers, and with the noble pride of their class they would not trespass on the hospitality those they knew to be as little able to render it as they themselves. Many of the older members of the ocngrega-tion remember well when all came afoot to church. One sturdy father in Israel, Robert Burgess, sat year after year in the same seat under the pulpit in the old log church. Feeling his time for departure approaching, he made known his fervent wish that he be buried beneath the seat which had become known as his own. His wish was respected, and he was laid away beneath the old church. Now not a vestige of the old church remains. In 1853 the log church was replaced by a neat frame structure, which was amply sufficient for the needs of the body, as then constituted, but which was of late years found sadly inadequate to meet the requirements of a congregation which grew in proportion to the advancing prosperity and improvement of the district, until it now, numbers between 400 and 500 souls. The roll of sainted pastors who are held in affectionate remembrance by the children and grandchildren those to whom they ministered, as well as the few survivors of the early days, are Elder Campbell, the father of the Covenanted Baptist connexion; Elder McColl, upon whom his mantle fell, and Elder Pollard, who died in Lobo last year after a lifetime of faithful service. Elder Carnell, the present pastor, came from Ohio to take the pastorate, but he was no stranger to the adherents of the faith, as he had visited the church here before.

CHAPTER XXXII. Elsie felt that a gulf yawned now between Rosa Stanly and herself.

"She feels as if she had found me out," said Elsie to herself; "as if I had been a sort of snake in the grass all the time, and yet I have not wiltingly deceived her. I had no reason from the first to boast of Owen's love, or to make a confidant of a single soul. It was, I suppose, a wild, hopeless love from the first, always encompassed with doubts, fears, difficuiof a single soul. It was, I suppose, a wild, hopeless love from the first, always encompassed with doubts, fears, difficulties. It would have been insulting to Miss Stanly to tell her that Owen loved me, and that I loved him. Why do I love him all through the torture and the mystery, and now the horror and the shame, that seem to surround him? Guilty! is he guilty of his cousin's blood?—poor, headstrong, arrogant, handsome, good-natured Lord Hammond! How like a rough schoolboy he always was! how full of schemes and tricks to get his own way! How could Owen? Was he mad with rage? I know what he said to me in the shrubbery; his words will always ring in my ears. 'Driven to do what he would give his life to undodriven by the oppression and the insults of these detested titled Hammonds!' That was what he said; but if I could have thought that anything could have driven him to—to murder!''—she whispered the word to herself, covering her mouth with her hands—'I could not have looked twice at his handsome, sad face! How sad it has always been since I have made his acquaintance! I have never heard him laugh or whistle since that winter night when he rescued me from the tramps in the lane—the dreadful lane, where the trees whisper, and where poor Lord Hammond lay dead that bright spring night when I heard the bell toll, and did not know why! Oh! Owen—Owen—Owen! if they find you—if they hang you—I shall go mad! Please Heaven rather let me die!"

It was the second time in her young life that she had been forced to leave it just on the threshold of the expected pleasure; but this time she felt very thankful to Rosa Stanly for the peremptory manner in which she had sent her away. She could not have taiked, she could not have smiled, she could not have danced that night to save her very life. She felt as if she should never dance or smile again, not if the ghastly tale were true!

"An elderly gentleman, Miss Carew, called to see you about ten minutes after you left. He said he had a message

There were flowers and plants, books, one or two exquisite paintings, everything that taste and money could devise and procure. A bright fire burned in the grate, June though it was, for the night was chilly, and this fire had been provided for E.s.e's comfort.

The game was fast and clean, and the Toronto students were far too fast for their op-ponents. The 'Varsity won the championship in winning this match. They have gone through the season without a single defeat.

ARGONAUTS 19, TIGERS 8. Toronto, Nov. 11 .- With the wind blowing a gale, and under conditions the reverse of pleasant from a spectators' standpoint, the Argonauts de-feated the Hamilton Tigers in decisive fashion on the 'Varsity athletic field Saturday. The score, 19 to 8, indicates fully the relative merits of the teams, although the Tigers put up a surpris-ingly good article of ball, and are not any means the weakest team in the union. There was not much to choose between the wings, but back of the line the Argonauts were superior in every way, the work of Britton and Darling in particular, being of a kind that has never been surpassed in Toronto. The Argonauts were the better balanced aggregation, and were faster around the wings, following up and tackling wonderful Tigers 8, Argonauts 0. Fully 3,000 people witnessed the game.

WHITNEY'S WINNINGS. As it was expected would be the case Mr. W. C. Whitney, who, with for a good gain, and McNee and Hua Derby and a Cambridgeshire to his credit, will also be well up in the list down the field. On a double pass Peel of winning owners in England, is at the head of the table in America, having to his credit, according to the New York Telegraph, $108,440, made by 19 horses, with 26 victories, the imported Meddler colt, Goldsmith, being responsible for $37,850, and the Sir Dixon filly, Bule Girl, for $24,453. John E. Madden comes second with $103,115, made by 22 horses with 32 wins, Blue Girl being credited on his account with $40,130, making her, with the aforementioned $24,453, the richest winning horse of the year. Yankee comes second in Mr. Madden's list with $39,130. A big drop follows, Mr. and Mrs. Farrel being third of the winning owners with but $49,110. Then follow Green with $46,135, Clarence H. Mackay with $40,737, the Pepper stable with $40,600, James R. Keene with $36,-001, J. B. Haggin with $30,405, W. H. Sealey with $28,165, R. T. Daly, who claimed the bad-legged Handicapper out of a selling race for from Messrs. Carruthers &

Shields, and has since run twice last with him and been disqualified once, WONDERLY'S WONDERFUL WORK There has been a great deal of talk about the success of American jockeys in England, but Canadian jockeys cut not a little bit of a figure in the United States, says a writer in the Toronto Sunday World. In the week ending Nov. 5, at the Aqueduct, Wonderly had 8 wins, 4 seconds and 2 thirds in 19 mounts, a record that few American jeckeys can beat in England. Burns and other Canucks, he same time, at the same place, had 6 wins, 4 seconds and 2 thirds in 17 mounts, which is also an exceedingly fair showing. In the week these two Canadian lads won 14 out of the 38 races run. It has happened occasionally that Americans in England have scored more victories in a given time, but it is safe betting that their averages are no better than those of the Canadians on the eastern tracks for the period they have been riding there. There are other Canucks who are do. There was only a minute left and time lionaire, James B. Haggin, has agreed to pay for second call on his services. At Aqueduct yesterday he was the salvation of the men who follow the favorites in the betting. He was also a loyal friend of the bettors who sup-port his mounts. Three favorites won. Each of them was at a good price, and each of them was piloted to victory by Wonderly. His first success of the day was on Senator Tim Sullivan's Trebor, at 8 to 5. Then he won on Dyer & McGuire's Bowen, he was at a good Macbeth.

The men of Wolseley Barracks turned wing, is a member of No. 1 Company, he was at a good macbeth. at 9 to 5, and in the last race of the afternoon he piloted Gus Muller's Marothen to victory, at odds of 21/2 to 1. It was a good day for the followers of favorites, and above all a good day for Wonderly's followers, because, out of five mounts, the boy was unplaced only once, being first three times and second once.

Five dollars placed on each of Wonderly's mounts during the week at the highest price would have netted $84. ATHLETICS. MODERN WRESTLING.

MODERN WRESTLING.

The wrestling match between Dan McLeod and Tom Jenkins at Cleveland, was not much of a pink tea affair, says a writer in the Toronto World. No holds were barred, and the pair did everything but bite. McLeod, who weighed but 160 pounds, threw his 200-pound antagonist around with the greatest ease in the first fall. According to the report he lifted Jenkins up by the legs and dashed his head against the floor several times, and head against the floor several times, and then fell on him, securing the first fall in 36:30. It is not to be wondered at that in 36:30. It is not to be wondered at that Jenkins had to be carried to his corner. The next two falls were won by Jenkins but he punished McLeod terribly, and took a lot of it himself before the battle was decided. Prize fighting may savor greatly of brutality, and Canadian Rugby football sometimes degenerates into a sort of free-for-all scramble, but when all is said and done, they are not in the same class with wrestling, which appears to have become a cross between a dog fight and American college football.

London's scrimmage shoved the Peterboro heavyweights all over the field: the wings broke through at will and protected their quarter-back in masterly style. While the work of the London halves was not as spectacular as some of the stunts put up by the ex-champions, it was vastly more effective, and it was the exception when they did not make a good gain. From the kick-off London adopted a close, running and passing game, and so well did they work it that in the first half, with the strong wind against them, they plowed through the Peterboro center and dodged around the ends for three tries. In the second half the home team eased up a bit, but when McPherson made a spectacular run and scored London took a quick brace-up, and although there were only a few minutes left they tore through their opponents for an-

Referee Griffith blew his whistle at 3 o'clock sharp. Peterboro won the toss and took the wind. London kicked short, the wings fell on the ball and it was scrimmaged on Peterboro's 50-yard line. Peel kicked and Peterboro returned. By fast following up the Peterboro men downed McNee on London's 25-yard mark. Peterboro was awarded a free kick and it looked like a certain score. McWilliams' punt was cleverly blocked by Sal Tayor and London regained the ball. Frank Taylor plunged through center down the field. On a double pass Peel took the ball within five yar

Peterboro's goal line, and the London wings tore through center for the first The goal was a hard one and McNee did not convert. Score 4 to 0. From the kick-off the ball was run back into Peterboro territory, and the red, white and black forwards pressed right through for another touchdown. Peterboro's halves punted when they got the ball, but this did not happen half a dozen times in the first half. By a succession of line-bucking and short end runs, the ball was brought again to Peterboro's line, and Frank Taylor shoved over for a try. At halftime the score was 12-0, and London then had the wind, which had by this time moderated somewhat, in Within five minutes McNee wriggled across for a try, and converted the goal, making a total for London of 18. Peel added a point two minutes later by a long punt behind the dead line. Peterboro braced up, and on a long punt Peel was tackled right on London's line. Peterboro had only six inches to gain, but could not make one. McNee, Hueston and Peel made a tandem play through center, Frank Taylor bucked for five yards, and foot by foot the ball was carried out of danger. A beautiful criss-cross run by London's halves brought the oval to Peterboro's 25-yard line, and by short rushes it was carried across. Mc-Nee failed in his kick. Score 23-0. Shortly after the kick-off McPherson caught a long punt and gained 50 yards on a fine run. On the next play he received a long pass from McWilliams, and galloped around the end across London's line. Burnham had no trouble in converting, and the score showed six points to the ex-champions' credit. Only five minutes were left, but London was determined to

LETTER FROM MR. H. B. ASHPLANT. To the Editor of The Advertiser: As a student of international socialism. that world-famed economic propaganda, and for misconception of the essential principles of the socialist platform noth-ing I have read has surpassed the utter-ances credited to Archbishop Corrigan in your editorial page of Wednesday, the th inst.

It is difficult to realize that a prelate whose opportunities to acquire knowledge are so extensive as those enjoyed by this critic, can be really so ignorant of the economic programme socialism (represented in Canada by the Socialist Labor Party), as the paragraphs you publish would indicate. It is equally difficult to understand the policy prominent teacher of morals, particularly Christian morals, whose knowledge ought to convict his utterances of great error. The references credited to Archbishop Corrigan re "communistic ownership, the destruction of private possession," etc., are so complete a travesty on the position of socialists regarding personal ownership of wealth, that a more extended treat-ment than can be embodied in a short letter is needed to expose their utter teacher of a propaganda with which he is not in accord. The views expressed by a man holding the position of this clerical critic of socialism, are unfortunately indorsed and swallowed as correct by thoughtless citizens, who do not know as well as many of the educated priests in his own Catho ic Church know, that they are wholly incorrect, and it is a fact that a priest of his own church has challenged Archbishop Corrigan to public debate on this very subject, in the United States. Such a statement of the socialist position as is published in your issue of the 6th inst. stamps its author as very ill informed or otherwise too deeply prejudiced agains "innovating doctrines" to be a fair and "innovating doctrines" to be a fair and just critic, and if any local opponent of Socialist Labor Party feels equal to the task of supporting the position credit ed to Archbishop Corrigan, I will be gla to meet him in public or private debate, and endeavor to instruct him on a politico-economic programme much more in accord with Christian morals than is the stupid, blundering and immoral pol-icy of capitalism, which latter is destin-ed to become as thoroughly a "past pol-icy" as feudalism is today.

It is a great pity that so many otherwise able men, who find themselves unable to intelligently defend existing methods and conditions against the in-roads of socialism, should lower their dignity by an appeal to popular ignorance and orthodox prejudice; abusing the con-fidence placed in them by trusting follow-ers by what sometimes appears to be a willful misrepresentation of truth newly discovered and not yet appropriated. Methodist Church.

Yesterday was anniversary Sunday for the Epworth League of the Dun-

the occasion the pastor of the church,

Rev. C. T. Scott, changed pulpits with

Rev. R. Whiting, of Mitchell. If the congregation at Mitchell appreciated the London preacher as much as his people appreciated theirs, they were glad indeed that the anniversary and who have visited here in a long, long time have, if the expression may be adequately, beautifully expressed. The sermon that he preached in the morning was out of the ordinary in more ways than one. His subject, "The Eternal Life," was as old as a subject could be, but he invested it with his own freshness and originality, with peculiar and striking at periods. He preaches in an easy, conversational manner-the parliamentary style, as it is called, that is often so effective, and uses every-day words, terse, and meaningful, not hesitating at times to speak the phrases of modern slang, if they express his thought other times his speech is eloquent, his

If that were not true, he argued, we would have to alter our relations to many things-to literature, music, art and politics among others-because in literature it was the author who got behind the material, and, understand-motives and influences, who was accounted great; and the great musician was he who had ever-living power because of knowledge of things apart from the material world: and the great statesmen of all ages were the men of principle and motive. So in religion, he hoped to see not men who thought of it as "holding a pew at so at so much a word, or hearing an anthem at so much a yard," but men

SUPPLIED LIQUOR TO A MERE YOUTH!

And Paid a Fine of $20 in Consequence of the Action.

Last Sunday night Police Officer Thompson found a boy of immature years helplessly intoxicated on the street, with an almost empty pint flask of whisky in his possession. The lad was taken to the hospital, where the effects of the liquor brought on a serious illness. A sequel to the case was the fining, Saturday, of John Garrison, of the London View Hotel, Wharncliffe road, on the charge of selling liquor during prohibited hours. The evidence showed that Garrison had supplied the lad with the whisky, and Squire Lacey imposed a fine of $20 and costs. The charge was laid by Inspector Bailey.

Some Simple Rules of Life Which Everyone May Apply.

Interesting and Instructive Address Delivered Yesterday by Rev. W. J. Clark.

Rev. W. J. Clark, of the First Presbyterian Church, addressed the men's meeting in the Auditorium yesterday afternoon on the subject, "Self-Knowledge, Self-Reverence, Self-Control." He began by stating that man's personality was a very curious subject of study. In spite of the fact that his life depends to a large extent on his Splendid Sermon Delivered by natural ancestry, he possesses a personality peculiar to himself. One may admire another's ability or cleverness, yet would be unwilling to trade. as it were, his personality for that of Mitchell Minister Attracts Attention as it were, his personality for that of anyone else. Everyone feels that he would rather be himself than anyone else on God's earth. It is of the utmost importance that, considering this fact, each should be acquainted with himself. "Know thyself" is one of the oldest of commands, and each one should know himself so far as his bodily equipment is concerned. There is ily equipment is concerned. There is that individuality in a man's physical constitution that is as marked as the different faces we meet, and it should be the aim of each to understand that individuality, to understand one's weak points, in order to be on guard. There is a saying that when a man is forty he is either his own physician or a fool There is no reason why a person should wait so long before knowing himself. Although these are fundamental principles in regard to health, yet general rules are not specific; the man would dare eat, another would not dare to partake of; or, in other words, one's meat is often another's poison. The question arises, how are we to know ourselves? By observation and stody, by hard, persistent endeavor, and in no other way. The speaker dwelt upon the importance of clear and well-defined ideas regarding the bent of one's mind. Apropos of study, one, after ascertaining his weak point, should not in any achieve the best results if he follow the line of least resistance and thereby aim at excellence in the direction most congenial to his tastes and ability. If there is anything in which one can naturally excel, he should put forth his most strenuous efforts in that direction. The happiest men are these who have found their proper sphere of Important as it is that men should know themselves, this alone is not enough; they must respect them-True, perhaps, one person counts for but little in the world; nev-ertheless, he has a duty to perform that no one else can adequately perform for him.

unison with the nobility of the thoughts that arouse his eloquence. Mr. Clark also emphasized the importance of discipline—the necessity of keeping the passions under control. Self-control is one of the character-istics of noble manhood. "When we ultimately, he might become the pastor of one of London's churches.
Mr. Whiting's sermon was about have learned to control ourselves," said the speaker, "we will be able to control every ounce of muscle." In conclusion the speaker quoted the following: that is life indeed, wholly satisfying and successful, is not the material "I like the man who faces what he must With step triumphant and a heart of

Who fights the daily battle without Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering That God is God, that somehow, true and His plans work out for mortals; not Is shed, when fortune, which the world holds dear, Falls from his grasp-better, with love,

Tails from his grasp—better, with love, a crust,
Than living in dishonor; envies not.
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best.
Nor ever murmurs at his humbler lot;
But with a smile and words of hope,
gives zest
To every toiler. He alone is great
Who by a life heroic conquers fate."

WILLIAM DOXTATER: HIS TRIBULATIONS

From the Shadow of the Grave to the Gloom of the Jail.

Wm. Doxtater, jun., is a young Indian of the Muncey Reserve, who seems to be perpetually on the hunt for trouble. Judging from the evidence extant, William appears to be a brilliant success in his chosen profession. Only a short time ago William was plugged half-full of heavy leaden pills by his irate father-in-law, Chief John Henry. William went away at once and became quite ill, so ill that a local daily printed an account of his death, accompanied by a sympathetic obituary. William, however, had not died, and he very unfeelingly refused to do so, even after shown the account of his lamented demise. He has just given convincing evidence that William "is himself again" by getting himself lodged in the county jail on a charge of stealing a pair of boots, the property of May Parker, from the premises of Mary Parker, they being two Indian ladies of William's acquaintance. He was brought in by Constable Wm. Sadleir and taken before Lacey, who consigned the dusky brave to the jail, there to languish until Nov. 16, when the merits of the case will be investigated.
