WANTS A PARK.

Editor Athens Reporter:

Since I see by the last issue of your paper that the council is calling a public meeting for next week to decide on some place to build the hall. Would it not be well to locate it in some place where the town could have, say from a quarter to half an acre to build on and the balance of the land for a park by setting out trees and putting some seats there which would make it very attractive and convenient to the village and surrounding country. At present there is no place for the crowds that come in on a warm summer night to spend a few hours except on the streets. Why not have a small park, say 75 or 100 feet, to accommodate the crowd. Then the village might hold their socials there, and in case of bad weather they could use some of the rooms in the new building. All enterprising towns of late think it as necessary to have a park as streets, and this is a step in advance of years gone by. What is life? It is just what we make it. I assure you it is not dollars and cents but making the world better, lifting the mind up to nobler deeds and acts. I think it well to lay a good foundation for our children by providing for their comfort and expansion of thought and usefulness in this life. We are going through this life for the last time; let us make the most of it while we go.

G. N. NASH.

HOT!

Hot weather! Yes; but really not compared with weather twice as hot. Find comfort, then, in arguing thus, And you'll pull through victorious. For instance, while you gasp and pant And try to cool yourself—and can't—With soda, cream and lemonade, The heat at ninety in the shade—Just calmly sit and ponder o'er These same degrees, with ninety more On the top of them, and so concede The weather is now, cool indeed.

THE NEW TOWN HALL

Public Meeting to be Held Next Tuesday Evening to Decide on Location—Sites.

A meeting of the ratepayers of Athens is called for Tuesday evening, 22nd inst., at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of discussing the location of the new town hall site and other matters in connection therewith. This being a question upon which all ratepayers should express an opinion, there ought to be a large attendance. The meeting will be held in Lamb's hall.

The Council have seven sites from which to make a selection, tenders having been submitted by the following property owners:

Mrs. Green, on corner of Main and Elgin streets, sixty foot square, price $800
Mr. I. C. Alguire, corner of Main and Elgin streets, price $1000
Mr. S. A. Taplin, at the rear of Mr. Kendrick's store, Elgin street, price $350
Mrs. Green, lot on Main street, where fire hall stands, price not given.
Mr. F. B. Williams, corner Main and Alma streets, price $500
Mr. Wm. Karley, corner Henry and Wellington streets, price $500
Mrs. (Dr.) Addison, the corner of Henry and Wellington streets, price $500

One of the leading points to be decided is whether provision will be made in the new building for a school room or post office accommodation.

THE LATE MRS. BOULTON.

Highly Respected Christian Lady Passes Beyond the Veil.

In the last issue of the Reporter the death of Mrs. Boulton was briefly referred to. The following report, contributed by a friend of the deceased, was received too late for publication:

The late Mrs. Boulton, who died on Monday at Athens, was the daughter of the late James Elliott, of Chantry. She was born and brought up in the township of Bastard. In the spring of 1881 she was married to Henry Boulton, of Newboro, where she resided until about a month ago, when she came to Athens in order that her adopted daughter, Pearl, could attend the High School. Soon after coming she contracted a cold which developed into typhoid pneumonia and caused her death in about two weeks, in spite of the fact that she had the immediate and constant medical attendance and the loving care of her sisters, Mrs. Dolman, of Prescott, and Emily, as well as her daughter. She bore her suffering with that christian fortitude she was well known to possess.

The deceased was an active worker in the Methodist church, and taught the infant class in the Sunday School, being dearly loved by the little ones she had under her charge. She possessed a bright, happy unselfish disposition, and was one of those beautiful characters always capable of scattering sunshine wherever she went. Being the oldest daughter in the family she endeared herself to all the younger ones, especially the sisters, by her deeds of kindness.

At Chantry on Tuesday the many friends of the departed showed their sympathy and esteem by attending the funeral and contributing many lovely flowers. She was buried in the family plot beside her father and sister.

A HEROIC LIFE

With an Eye Single to the Good of Her Fellow-men She Told.

The Story of Eliza H. Varney, of Bloomfield, Ont.—Spent Many Years in a Service of Salubrious Sacrifice to the Poor and Needy—Minister of Their Physical as Well as Spiritual Wants.

Bloomfield, Ont., June 30.—(Special.)—Our community boasts of having within it one of the most devoted Christian women that ever toiled in the world's vineyard.

Owned and blessed by God, this self-sacrificing heroine and her husband, since deceased, spent many years of fruitful pastoral work in different parts of the continent.

Eliza H. Varney, relict of the late L. H. Varney, is now 73 years of age, and living in quiet retirement here. She is a member of the Society of Old Orthodox Friends and the Ladies Peace-Loving Society.

It is her work among the Donkshobers, her own Canadian Northwest, that she loves most to speak of, and in which she has her recollections of her most peculiar people.

One of the greatest difficulties this devoted woman had to contend with was that of her poor people. But she never flinched herself with a remedy.

Some years ago she had tried and proven the value of this great medicine in a brown case when threatened with Rheumatism. They had completely restored her, and when she found that it was prevailing trouble among the Donkshobers, she knew that DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS would be her most valuable aid in her good work.

She tells of one poor young woman among this people who was suffering so severely with the Dropsy that she was terribly bloated all over and confined to her bed. The Lady Missionary left a few of Dodd's Kidney Pills and immediately sent for three more boxes.

She was rewarded for her efforts by the complete recovery of the young woman.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have received this worthy woman's most emphatic endorsement.

The New York Central a Great Line

There seems to be but one opinion in regard to the New York Central, and that is, that the large number of trains, the fast time, and the fact that the fare is the same as by other lines (except the Empire State Express), should commend it to all.

KISSING THE BOOK.

A Relic of the Time When Kissing Was General in Merry England.

Sir Francis Jeune and Mr. Justice Gorell have had posted outside the two courts of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Divisions notices to witnesses calling their attention to the fact that they may be sworn in the Scotch manner before giving evidence. That is to say, they may be sworn with uplifted hand, repeating a solemn invocation to the Deity, instead of taking a book and kissing it after listening to a form repeated by a minor official of the court.

The notice to which we refer is repeated outside one of the courts of the Chancery Division, and we have every hope that it may become universal.

We have for many years contended that the oath by kissing a book has nothing to commend it, while it is easy and may become a means of propagation of disease; and we have seen with regret that the statutory permission to swear in the Scotch fashion was, as a rule, not known by witnesses, and frequently, also, that judges, coroners and magistrates were ignorant of it.

The form of swearing by kissing a book is purely one of custom. There is no direct authority for it in any act of Parliament, or rule, or book of practice. The date also of its introduction is unknown, but this is not because it has been lost in the mists of antiquity, for it is fairly certain that, so recently as at the end of the seventeenth century, if the form existed it was not in any general use. It has been pointed out that Coke in his institutes makes no mention of kissing the book, but writes of the "corporal oath," but such named because the witness touched with his hand a portion of the Scriptures, and this aspect of the oath no doubt survives in the familiar warning of the usher to witness to remove glove before taking the Testament for the purpose of kissing it. It is also observed that in the "Book of Oaths," of which an edition was published in 1859, there is no mention of kissing a book. How the kissing originated is, we believe, almost as much a matter of speculation as is the date at which it became frequent or universal.

The laying of the hand on the Gospels in swearing is, no doubt, of great antiquity, while the laying of the hand on the altar of a deity in invoking the deity to witness a statement or promise is older than the Gospels. The laying of the hand on the Gospels has its parallel in other countries besides England. In the King of the book is, however, we believe, peculiar to England or to England and Ireland, and it is not quite easy to assign its origin to the country of which we are speaking.

It is worth noting that English people were more addicted to kissing one than they are now. King as a form of salutation was so common among them that it excited the interest and amusement of foreigners. Erasmus refers to it, and a Hungarian gentleman who visited London and moved in good society in 1663 was much struck with the way in which men kissed ladies when they greeted them when Hungarians would have shaken hands. Even Frenchmen in the middle ages held kissing as a peculiarity of the English nation, much as we remark upon it now among the French. It is, therefore, at least possible that the kiss bestowed upon the book in taking an oath may not have been so much a kiss of veneration as a form of salutation or acknowledgment by bodily contact, somewhat more ceremonious than manual contact, but still not associated with any great feeling of solemnity.

Dogs in France.

According to Le Journal, the dog tax has had little effect in reducing the number of dogs in France. There are at present at least 2,000,000 of the canine race in that country, of which 800,000 are pet dogs (chiens de luxe). Last year the tax produced nearly $3,000,000 francs—about three francs per dog. The proportion of dogs to inhabitants varies in different departments. In some the proportion is seven for 100 inhabitants, in others sixteen, and in others only three.

"Have you ever had any experience in handling high grade pottery?" asked the importer of an applicant for a job.

"No, sir," replied the applicant, "but I can do the work all right."

"Suppose," said the merchant, "you should accidentally break a valuable vase; what would you do?"

"I would put it together carefully," replied the job seeker, "and set it where the wealthy customer would be sure to knock it to pieces again."

"Consider yourself engaged," said the merchant. "And now tell me where you got onto that trick of the trades?"

"A few short years ago," answered the other, "I was in the 'wealthy customer' class."—Chicago News.

Minard's Liniment cures La Grippe.

The little daughter of a prominent western Senator has been confined during the past winter and her proud father, mother and a number of friends went there on the day of the closing of school to listen to the examination.

The teacher asked the class if the moon was inhabited. The Senator's little daughter, who was sitting in the front row, wriggled about and raised her hand. The teacher asked her, "Yes, one moon is," answered the child. "I don't know about the other."

"Well, my dear, which one is inhabited?" asked the teacher.

"The honeymoon," answered the child. "It's inhabited by my aunt and my new Uncle John."

"Out in my district," says Representative Bedford of Ohio in the Washington Post, "there is a very clever preacher. One day a man who does not think much of religion thought he would stump the preacher."

"Fardon," he said, "what is the best way to heaven?"

"Turn to the right and then keep straight ahead," replied the preacher, "without an instant's hesitation."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has discovered a constitutional disease and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 2 to 6 times a day. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer testimonials for anyone it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Pays for the Pants.

On Saturday, says the Moose Jaw Times, R. H. W. Holt, of the Ottawa house, appeared before W. C. Sanderson, J. P., charged with assaulting a young man by the name of Tom Higgs, on the Wednesday previous. Evidence was taken which showed that a dog belonging to the defendant, attacked a cow which was being driven by the plaintiff, who attempted to drive the dog off. The dog then attacked the plaintiff, who struck it with a piece of mud. Mr. Holt, the owner of the dog, came upon attacked the young man and cuffed his ears, and his dog came to his assistance and tore a piece out of the young man's pants. The case was adjourned until Monday morning, when Mr. Holt pleaded guilty to the charge and was ordered to pay the following bill, viz.: Fine $5, costs $1.50, pants $2, total $10.50.

Those Abominable Stocks

It is high impossible to enumerate all that Glasgow has done for the workmen here, but it may with-out exaggeration be said that it has done about everything possible. Homes have been erected for them in every part of the city, and these are rented to the poor at an almost nominal rate. Widows and widowers have two well-equipped homes where they are boarded for a trifling sum, and babies are cared for by city nurses while the bread-winners are at work; and, of course, these homes, etc., are not charities. Penny (two cents) baths are provided by the municipality in all parts of the city where workmen reside. Municipal tramways take laborers for their work from one to two cents, and municipal ferries carry them to their shops five miles down the Clyde, if necessary, for two cents. At night the municipality provides free concerts, free lectures, free night schools and free courses in business and technical studies. There is also a free employment bureau. The city has over 100 public baths, and thousands of dollars' worth of rookeries might have play grounds. And the city provides free gas for the alley and even for the hallways of the poor. These may be called special provisions for the workmen, and which they enjoy in addition to the other beneficent blessings provided for all the citizens of this model city.—Scottish-American.

Measrs. C. C. Richards & Co.

Dear Sirs—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes—so badly that I thought I would be disgraced for a couple of weeks, we advised me to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected—a few applications completely curing the irritation, preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also good article to keep off the mosquitoes. Yours truly,

W. A. OKE, Harbor Grace, Nfld., Jan. 8, 1898.

RESETTINGT SOUTH AFRICA

Britons Being Rushed to the New Colonies to Repair War's Ravages.

Even before peace with the Boers was officially announced, Britain had begun to carry out her plans for resettling South Africa with her own people. Months ago, under official prompting, the immigration associations of London set about bearing a hand with the settlement problem.

The Colonial Immigration Society began it by sending out a delegation of several hundred women to Cape Colony for distribution at various points where female help could command high wages, and local English feminine influence would do the most good.

The Scottish Settlers' Association, an organization originally formed in Rhodesia, under the patronage and with the assistance of Cecil Rhodes himself, has taken up the work almost as quickly and on even a greater scale. Four months ago a band of 100 Scotch farmers and laborers was sent out to the Orange River Colony to settle there on the land vacated by burghers.

The association was in such a hurry to get its men on the ground that it sent them a little too soon. When they arrived in the new colony it was found that local conditions were hardly ripe for their reception, and Mr. Rhodes' assistance had to be sought. He solved the problem by providing the Scotchmen with grants of land from his own farms in Cape Colony.

Now that peace has been declared, preparations for extending the scope of the work are being made. The capital of the association has been raised to half a million dollars, and English and Scotch agriculturists are to be rushed to South Africa to people the new colonies, to readjust the balance of population there, and, by outnumbing the Boers, to render impossible even the faintest chance of a rebellion against British authority.

Every Woman Should Know.

That Prof. W. Hodgson Ellis, Official Analyst to the Dominion Government, has recently made a number of analyses of soaps, and reports that "Sunlight Soap contains that high percentage of oils or fats necessary to a good laundry soap."

What every woman does not know is that in common soaps she frequently pays for adulterations at the price of oils and fats. Try Sunlight Soap—Octagon Bar—next wash day, and you will see that Prof. Ellis is right. He should know. 20c.

SUN A FAITHFUL SERVANT.

Glorious Orb of Day Does Man's Bidding in Many Directions.

There have been many attempts to harness old Sol, to make him work at man's bidding so that his rays, trapped and put to new uses, shall take the place of coal or wood as a producer of motive power. Clever minds in all ages have been at work to devise the necessary trap. Several more or less practical machines have resulted, but none so perfect, so full of promise as the great sun motor now engaged in storing up the sun's heat at the well-known Pasadena ostrich farm in California.

By the sun's heat water is boiled, the steam working a powerful engine, capable of boiling some 1,400 gallons of water in a minute.

From a distance the California sun motor looks like a huge open umbrella inverted and with a piece sawn off its top. It is balanced on a high steel framework and is set at such an angle that it will catch the sunbeams on its 1,788 mirrors. Each of these mirrors measures two feet in length and three inches across and reflects the sunshine on to a long cylinder corresponding to the handle of the umbrella, which holds about 100 gallons of water. The boiler is made of steel, covered with a heat-absorbing material.

The hot, persistent California sun that shines almost every day of the year when reflected from the mirrors on the boiler causes such heat that it is possible to obtain 150 pounds of steam pressure in one hour from cold water. When the machine is made ready for work—a task for a boy, who has merely to turn a crank until an indicator shows that the sun is truly focused on the mirrors—it will move around so that its face is kept turned to the sun all day without further manipulation under the force of an automatic engine. The boiler is automatically supplied with water, a safety valve releasing the steam if the pressure should become too great.

All day, every day, from an hour after sunrise to a half hour before sundown, this tireless heat concentrator keeps its shining face turned to the sun, storing up an energy which may be put to almost any use. It works under the powerful California sun as well in winter as in summer.—Parson's Magazine.

BARBER—GRACEY.

A pretty wedding occurred at noon to day, at the residence of the Misses Gracey, when Miss Helena Evelyn Gracey became the wife of Ernest Clifford Barber, of this city.

The parlor was prettily decorated with palms and cut flowers. The bride was dressed in grey silk crepe de per, with real lace, over taffeta silk, and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas.

Charles S. Elliott, of this city, was best man. Miss Etta S. Gracey, a sister of the bride, who was maid of honor, wore a white dainty with lavender trimmings and carried a bouquet of lavender sweet-peas.

The bride's gift to her maid was a pearl brooch, and the groom's gift to the best man was a diamond stick pin.

A wedding luncheon was served; and after congratulations, and showers of rice and good wishes, the newly-married pair left for the 2.07 train.

They will take an extended trip through Canada, stopping at Niagara, Charleston Lake, Thousand Islands, and other points of interest. On their return they will reside at 175 Warburton avenue—Yonkers State-man.

Mr. Barber and his bride are spending this week with Athens friends.

BELL—SHERMAN.

The following, taken from the Deloraine Advertiser, is a report of the marriage of Miss Edith Sherman to Mr. H. Bell. She is a daughter of Mr. A. M. Sherman, a former well known resident of this place.

At Boiesvain, on Wednesday, June 18th, Edith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Sherman, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. H. Bell. Rev. Mr. Matheson performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in cream tulle silk, trimmed with lace and pearls.

Miss L. Gilroy, who acted as bridesmaid, wore white organdie trimmed with lace and ribbon. Mr. L. Bissett supported the groom. The brides travelling dress was of blue velvet trimmed with white silk and braid. A black hat trimmed with feathers and ribbon completed the costume.

The many gifts testified to the esteem in which the young couple were held. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome organ.

MORNING STROLL NO. 6

KITLEY'S BIG FAIR.

Old Sol's rays were beating brightly on Monday as we started out on another trip of observation. This time we were not alone, having as a travelling companion Mr. D. Fisher, who, having a little business out in the direction we were going, was proffered a seat in the rig and his lively, and interesting conversation helped to while away the trip over one of the roughest roads in the county. Our objective point was the village of Frankville, the home of "Kitley's big fair" and the abiding place of its genial president and hard working secretary.

PRESIDENT DOWSLEY.

In driving along the road leading to our destination we were struck by the evidences of prosperity and an abundant harvest on every side now newly ready for the husbandman. Immense fields of grass and grain were everywhere to be seen, in many places the timothy heads reaching over the top rails of the road fence and the clover crops were so heavy that the owners had to go in and draw off portions to other fields to cure. Nearly every farmer had a silo, and several new ones were in course of construction showing conclusively that the farmers and dairymen have not lost faith in corn as a cheap and profitable means of increasing the flow milk and assisting in wintering their stock.

On reaching Frankville we called at the home of Mr. Dowsley and were pleased to learn that he was on his back in bed under the doctor's care. His good wife invited us to his room, where we received a warm hand clasp and a cordial greeting, remarking in so doing that we were in his thoughts only a few moments before we were ushered into his presence. He informed us that the Reporter was to do the work for the society again this year and that the prospects were never better for a large and successful fair as the farmers and exhibitors throughout the country were going to patronize "David's Fair" and keep the exhibition going on lively all the while. He wished us to announce that a very large list of specials had been freely given by friends of the society, for which he wished on behalf of the society to return their sincere thanks, and that the prize list would be ready for distribution just as soon as possible. We learned from other sources that it is the intention of the directors to put a lot of improvements and additions to the buildings, and that stalls for cattle and pens for sheep and swine would be put up this season. The farmer's are going to patronize the "Farmers' Fair," as the Frankville Fair has always been known to cater to that class of the community.

With a parting admonition to take good care of himself and when strong enough to come out and spend a few days on the Lab-neo-tab, at Charles ton, which he promised to do, we bade the aged president goodbye and took our leave. Passing down to the other end of the village we called at the steam mills of S. Running & Sons, where we found everything humming. We made a hasty run through the mill and getting the hands employed out in a group on the outside of the mill, the Reporter's kodak took a snap shot of the mill and surroundings, from which a number of the Reporter we will tell our readers something about the mill, its capacity for turning out work, and any other items connected with the business which we think would be interesting.

The pleasure of a drive home in the cool of the evening was marred by the sudden coming up of a thunder storm, which compelled us to seek the shelter of a farmer's shed for an hour or more, still we were able to reach home in time for tea much pleased with our out-

ANIMAL IMITATIVENESS.

How a Beggar's Dog Grows to Be Like His Master.

"One of the most curious traits to be found in the animal nature," said an observant citizen, "is that which grows out of the unconscious imitativeness of creatures of the lower order. I have observed many instances of where the creatures of a lower order have taken on the characteristics in some noticeable degree of members of the human family. One might know, for instance, the beggar's dog from the look of the dog, from the droop of the eye, the pathetic hang of the lip and a certain general air of despondency and hopelessness which seems to speak in the very nature of the animal. I mention the beggar's dog because it is a familiar example. The beggar's dog never looks cheerful, never smiles, never frolics, but simply sits by his master and broods and begs for whatever charity may give.

"I have seen the dog character moulded under happier influences, and the dog became more cheerful. He was a light hearted, free and easy sort of creature and seemed to get something of the sunnier side of things. I am almost tempted to say that if you will show me a man's dog I will tell you what manner of man the owner is, with particular reference to temperament and his moods. The melancholy man, the man who grovels mentally along the gloomier groves, the pessimistic man who is always looking at the dark side of the picture, all the men who come within these unhappy classifications rarely own a cheerful dog. The dog unconsciously takes to the ways of the master and in his moods imitates the master's way of thinking.

"But turn to the dog of the jolly, cheerful fellow. Watch him show his teeth in laughter when the master approaches. He is darting across the yard and dancing and frisking around the master's feet in the happiest way imaginable, and he is up to all kinds of pranks and does all kinds of little things to indicate the good nature that is in him. He does as his master does and seems to take the same general view of life. These are small things, I guess, but they show just how imperative one's way of thinking may influence one's dog and change his whole

CLASS DISTINCTIONS.

They Go Almost Down to the Very Bottom of Society.

Some sort of class feeling is, we believe, inherent in human nature. People often speak as though these distinctions existed only among the middle and upper classes, but such is not the fact. Indeed it is very far from the fact. No more misleading labels than "the classes" and "the masses" were ever invented. There are no masses, rightly speaking. Class distinctions go almost down to the bottom—not quite, of course, because there is always a residuum who through their fault or their misfortune have neither the pride nor the imagination to sort themselves.

Money is not an absolute criterion of social position. Character, in so far as it is reflected in propriety of behavior, counts for a great deal. A rowdy family sink directly, though they may have money to waste, and a responsible widow may retain her superiority in the face of grinding poverty. The acme of good manners, the very badge of gentility, is to be "quiet," never to let the sound of mirth, quarrelling or lamentation proceed out of your dwelling.

This sign of social distinction is appreciated down to the very bottom. On the upper rungs of the social ladder we should say that those social distinctions which can be defined as all rest upon birth, money and brains. Among the poor they rest upon money and manner, and the latter, alas, below a certain wage, woefully dependent upon the former.

Jonah and the Whale.
There is nothing in the original text of the Bible to show that the creature which we are told swallowed Jonah was really the same animal we call a "whale" in this day and age of the world. The word translated into both the Septuagint and the New Testament was the Greek word "Katos," which means simply a sea monster, and this word was the one used by our Lord in his reference to the account of Jonah's exploit. So far, therefore, as the Hebrew or Greek words are concerned, the monster may have been a shark, a sea serpent or some other uncanny denizen of the deep.

Hence there is nothing incredible in the statement that Jonah, upon being thrown into the sea, was quickly overtaken by some water monster and swallowed without suffering mutilation. To Biblical students it is a well known fact that a vessel sailing from Joppa to any Spanish port must pass through a section swarming with a species of shark called a "sea dog." The sea dog has a throat large enough to swallow fair sized men.

She Pricked Her Finger.

A maid employed by a prominent New York family came to her mistress with tears in her eyes not many days after she had been in the household and said that she had pricked her finger with a table fork.

"I am terribly worried, ma'am," she said, "for fear the fork may have had some brass in it and have poisoned my hand."

"Oh, nonsense, Mary!" replied the lady of the house. "How could the fork poison you when it is made of pure silver? I never allow anything else on my table."

The next day Mary and the fork which had pricked her and all the other forks and, in fact, the whole table service, guaranteed by the mistress to be solid silver, had disappeared for parts unknown.

How Savages Came to Use Knives.

The first men, armed with the simplest weapons or with none at all, pursued in the chase the animals that served them as food and, being generally in a state of starvation, tore them to pieces with their fingers and devoured on the spot the flesh, raw and bloody. In time they domesticated animals that assisted them in hunting and invented the bow and spear that enabled them to kill their prey at a greater distance.

The knife was invented as an instrument of attack or defense or for rough cutting and carving and, being commonly worn on the person, was found convenient in eating and became in time an accessory of the table for reasons so obvious that they require no explanation.

All Souls' College, Oxford.

Perhaps the most expensive education in the world is enjoyed by the undergraduates of All Souls' college, Oxford. There are usually but four of them in residence, all of them on the foundation, with just enough to keep them comfortably in their rooms above the college kitchens. The college revenues approach £15,000 a year, which should give an excellent education to four young men. But All Souls' devotes its money mainly to the support of fellows and the cult of good living, and the undergraduates get their education by arrangement from other colleges.—London Chronicle.

To Be Provided For.

Farmer Mossbacher—Colonel Chinnaway, the politician, declares that he is in the hands of his friends.

Farmer Hornbeak—Yes, I know he does, but it sorter looks to me that his friends have got the colonel on their hands.

The Geological Day.

The 6,000 years of human history form but a portion of the geological day which is passing over us. They do not extend into the yesterday of our globe, far less touch the myriads of ages spread out beyond.

Fashion Hints and Gossip—Reading for the Home and Fireside—Matters of Etiquette Discussed.

BY AUGUSTA FRESCO

The peculiarity of the dress of the up-to-date woman is its fitness. She seems always gowned for the day. If it be cloudy she has her dress of English woolpore made in walking length, dusty, she is dressed in a granite suit, neatly fitted to the hips and calculated to stand a blowing.

On the clouds have burst outright she wears a storm gray or in a brown that will stand the weather, and if the rain and wind is added a disagreeable moisture she is dressed in deep blue brillianter, the material that withstands everything and is good the next day.

In the matter of dressmaking she wears a storm gray or in a brown that will stand the weather, and if the rain and wind is added a disagreeable moisture she is dressed in deep blue brillianter, the material that withstands everything and is good the next day.

In the matter of dressmaking she wears a storm gray or in a brown that will stand the weather, and if the rain and wind is added a disagreeable moisture she is dressed in deep blue brillianter, the material that withstands everything and is good the next day.

All changes are carefully watched by the up-to-date women, and the result of it is that her dress is ever new and varied, always differing in some way from the gown she wore yesterday.

Catching the Styles.
Those charming Viennese notions, those little touches which the Viennese women, and they alone, know how to give, she can pick up and adapt to herself. From the English she also gets a great deal, especially in the matter of finish. All the strappings of the season, the stichings, the new linings and the new ways of cutting the pleats were made in London.

From the French she picks up dainty laces and their delicate uses. From them she learns the trick of tying the choux and posing it upon the gown and also learns how to make the best and most of colors and how to suit her own style with the tones of the season.

From Berlin she obtains her headings and all her intricate fringes. But when it comes to cutting gowns she goes back to London and from the English and the Scotch she picks up those queer mixed Irish suitings with a check or a cross, then a little black to give them background, and her selection, and you see her in these mixed heather colored tweeds out in the golf links or climbing the mountain high in search of flowers and fun.

Skirts to the tops of the shoes were once unpardonable and wholly unmentionable. But now they are not even worthy a blush.

The Outing Skirt.

The walking or the pedestrian skirt is now the favorite skirt for summer excursions of all kinds. It is worn on every occasion when the sweep skirt could not be tolerated and it is the skirt of this particular month.

Modistes will differ as to the proper length of this skirt. Many will declare that it should barely escape the floor, and that it should be cut in what is called the swinging length. It must swing clear of the street, but not be short enough to show the ankles.

To get a skirt to this ideal length requires an ideal cut. The lower edge must be undulating and must curve from front to back and from back to front again. This requires a high waist and to cut the skirt needs a practiced hand.

A skirt properly planned will escape the floor and will set out, swinging clear, while it will by no means touch at any point nor cling to the knees. Hence, this cut, you who want a nice pedestrian skirt, but be very careful of your skirt will fall you. In Gotham they have dressmakers who are specialists in the fitting out of a good skirt, and if you happen to know such a person, by all means cherish her.

It is generally agreed that the skirts in popular vogue may be a little shorter than in one to two of serge and chevrot or the skirts of ladies' cloth and broad-cloth. Skirts of plique and duck, of linen and of cotton, may be nearly ankle length, but, really, there are very few that are built any shorter than this.

The outing girl will find that she can run just as well in a well cut skirt of ankle length as in one to her knees, and she certainly looks prettier and is more comfortable when conventionally attired.

One Summer Girl.

While white leads as a summer color, the little check and the stripe will follow soon after. White canvas dresses are very pretty and they clean cheaply and easily, and if they do not wash. But if you want something in colors, there are lovely plaids in blue and white that are becoming, light and very desirable.

The summer girl who tramps a little, principally in village walks, where she must look pretty, is deep blue and white, with a check or two in light blue. The skirt barely swings clear from the ground, and it is trimmed around the foot with a wide band of blue braid, put on with several rows of white stitching.

The belt is a narrow thing in dark blue leather as light as kid, and to it hangs a little blue leather fob with silver mountings, and an attachment for a handbag. The whole skirt does not weigh two pounds, for there is no lining, and the entire thing could be picked in a very small travelling bag and leave room for more.

The wash gowns of this summer are delightful. They come in the colors, but are dressed in white or cream or lemon color. They are made up with the buttons coming in the back and with tucks trimming the front. The tucks are put on in pointed fashion, just so as to make a pattern, and between the groups of tucks there are rows of hemstitching. Hemstitching can be bought in silk or in cotton, and it is certainly effective in the making of a waist. It is simply set in and fastened in place with needle and thread.

The Outing Sleeve.
The making of the outing sleeve need not dismay any woman. Each week there is a new thing in sleeves. The very last word for them is concerning the ham-shaped sleeve—sleeve like a ham. This is a sleeve that is tight at the shoulder and tight at the elbow. The wrist is a mere band of stiffened silk. But just below the wrist there is a big ham-shaped bag of silk which makes an immense puff, larger at the back than at the front.

There is now the leg-o-mutton sleeve and the ham-shaped sleeve. Both are in. What will come next? The outing girl does not remain affixed all the time and for the hours when she is under the trees she has pretty gowns in linen, with blue linen leading in point of favor. There are the most charming dresses in blue, trimmed with white satin wash ribbon, put on in Grecian design and warranted to wash every time.

The linen gowns of this year are absolutely a lesson to any one desiring to look pretty, so many are the ways of making them. You can tuck them or you can make them plain, or you can trim them with pearl buttons, and the finishing touch to collars, cuffs, revers and strappings on tailored wash dresses. A clever milliner has introduced a new form of buckle, having all the appearance of straw, but actually made in enamel.

For wear with the low cut blouse the black velvet necktie has been revived and likewise wristbands to match to be worn with elbow sleeves. The necktie is embroidered in some simple floral design and fastens in the back with a small bow. The wristbands fasten with small patent clasps.

Black currants are a very popular fruit on corn colored dresses, which have for trimming velvet bows of the hues of the foliage. Chalk-colored cloth which verges on white and pale gray and does not really belong in either class in a fashionable fabric. Putty and cloud gray are among the favored shades of the season.

Thin, transparent enough to show the glimmer of a silken lining, is another great favorite. There is a certain dark blue voile, of a metallic tint, which is worn over green glass cloth blouses.

The Dresden dignity skirt is the newest in petticoats. The ground is plain or colored, with floral decorations in delicate or gay hues. A plisse flounce or double ruffle of the same material finish the skirt.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Dear Father, list to this, my prayer.

He wooed her when they both were poor, 'twas then he won her, too.

She cheered him when the days were drear and tolled to help him through;
She taught him things from books that he had failed to learn in youth,
She got him to avoid the use of words that were uncouth;
She took her jewel in the rough, she polished it by day.

And with a woman's patience ground the worthless parts away,
She cheered him when the days were dark, and when the skies were bright
She saw him rise above the crowd and reach a noble height;
Her brow first and then old, she has a bearing that is fine, a form of noble mould.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON NO. III.
JULY, 20 1902.

The Ten Commandments—Duties of Men.
Ex. 20:1-17.

Commentary.—The fifth commandment. This commandment is a connecting link between the first and second tables of the law, and properly belongs to both. Whedon has put it in the first table.

Honor.—This means more than to obey, it is to treat with reverence and affection. Thy father and thy mother—There is a degree of affectionate respect which is owing to parents, that no person can claim properly. For a consider-able time parents stand as it were in the place of God to their children, and therefore rebellion against their commandments has been considered as rebellion against God. Human life is precious in the sight of God, because he is the author of it. It is precious in the sight of men because God has given them a love for their parents, and he will be coming probation and energies which are of great value to them. This commandment forbids all works carried on in the name of God, which are in violation of his commandments, and all unchaste conversation and all unchaste thoughts and desires, as the theatre and dance hall.

Stealing.—This is the wrongfully taking the property of another. This may be done in various ways: By taking the advantage of the ignorance of another while buying; by using false weights and measures in selling; by overfeeding or overwatering stock; by misrepresenting another; misrepresenting the quality of goods; by charging exorbitant prices; by raising the price of goods when it is possible to pay them holding stolen goods, or failure to return lost goods, or to make an offer to the owner; holding and using railroad tickets or other tickets overlooked by the conductor. No business custom justifies one in stealing.

Being false testimony.—This may be done in a judicial sense. This may be done in a judicial sense. This may be done in a judicial sense.

The seventh commandment.—Thou shalt not commit adultery.—The violation of this commandment means the destruction of the home and family, an institution ordained by God and necessary to the well-being of His kingdom in the earth. This commandment forbids all acts of uncleanness, with all those fleshly lusts which produce those acts and war against the soul, and all those thoughts or practices which cherish and excite those fleshly lusts, as lechery in order to lust, which Christ has expressly forbidden. A body filled with loathsome diseases, and soon reduced to extreme beggary (Prov. vi, 26); a life completely wrecked and ruined; a mind, physically, intellectually; a being burning with the fire of hell, suffering eternally in "the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone"—these are some of the terrible punishments visited upon those who are guilty of this most heinous sin.

The Eighth Commandment.—Thou shalt not steal.—The rights of property are of divine appointment, and we are to refrain from claiming as our own that which now belongs to another.—True, but the rights of property may be violated. By taking property without the knowledge of the owner; or theft. 2. By taking the property of another by consent, when fraudulently obtained. 3. By consent fraudulently obtained, or cheating; either by taking advantage of another's ignorance, or by misrepresentation. 4. By withholding what belongs to another; whether it be the wages of a servant, or the weight or measure, or withholding what is borrowed or found. 5. By paying too small wages, or by not paying the wages we receive. 6. By beating down those who sell, so as not to pay a fair price, or by charging exorbitant prices. 7.—By monopolies and trusts which oppress the rights of individuals and oppress the poor. 8. By socialism and anarchy which directly or indirectly to misappropriate what rightfully belongs to the owner. By gambling, raffling, taking shares in lotteries, or entering into any of the modern speculations whereby something is expected for nothing. 10. By being unkind which injures the life, liberty or property of others, such as selling liquors, obscene pictures, vice books, etc. 11. By indulging in any habit whereby we are unfitted to perform our obligations, or support those who may be dependent upon us.

The Ninth Commandment.—False witness.—This is the worst form of lying and includes all other forms. Truthfulness is the only condition on which human intercourse is possible, and it lies at the foundation of all personal character. Lying is one of the worst sins, because it leads to the commission of other sins, and seeks to cover wrong-doing.

The Tenth Commandment.—Thou shalt not covet.—This is the only sin which is necessary to the commission of all other sins, and it strikes at the very root of all sin, for every sin is born of covetousness. Jas. i, 14-15, and there were no sin committed if this commandment were perfectly kept. Rom. vii, 7.—The word covet occurs some twenty times in the Hebrew scriptures, and is commonly translated desire.

PRACTICAL SURVEY.
The relations we sustain to God as one common family cause us to be related to each other in a peculiar sense. Because of these relations certain duties necessarily devolve upon us toward each other. We have in these six commandments condensed outline of these duties. They amount to a comment on the great commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Parental respect.—Our first duty among men is to our parents. Their claims to our honor and respect are due to the fact that under God they gave us an existence. They were to us for several years in the place of God and assumed our accountability until we came to a knowledge of good and evil. The import of this commandment is seen in the fact that it is the only one in the decalogue attended by a promise. This commandment implies obedience to parents. It is restricted to one exception only. It must be "in the Lord," that is, disobey them only when their requirements are contrary to God's requirements.

Regard for human life.—Human life is precious in the sight of God, because he is the author of it. It is precious in the sight of men because God has given them a love for their parents, and he will be coming probation and energies which are of great value to them. This commandment forbids all works carried on in the name of God, which are in violation of his commandments, and all unchaste conversation and all unchaste thoughts and desires, as the theatre and dance hall.

Bradford-on-Avon Trade.
The more seasonable weather has resulted in a better feeling in whole sale trade circles at Montreal this week. Now that the weather has become reasonably hot, retailers are reporting larger sales and the chances of having to carry over large stocks are smaller.

At Quebec in wholesale trade circles business is reported fairly good and full orders are said to be coming in as well as past seasons. Collectors, as a rule, are reported fair for the season.

At Toronto this week there has been a very fair movement in wholesale trade. The firmness for staple goods is adding to the general confidence felt in wholesale and retail circles.

A good movement for this season of the year is reported, according to Bradstreet's advices, at Hamilton, in seasonable lines as well as in fall goods. The jobbers have already booked large orders for the fall trade, and owing to the good prospects for the crops there is a great deal of confidence manifested in the outlook for the fall and winter trade this year. The wholesaler and trader find it an easy matter to maintain prices and there is little or no cutting in quotations to induce purchases. The outlook for trade is generally considered promising.

Winnipeg trade advices: There is a big demand for labor and the market will apparently have plenty of money to spend the coming season. Trade at the Pacific Coast centres is improving.

At London, as reported by Bradstreet, there is a fair demand for fall goods, the excellent prospects ahead having induced liberal buying.

At Ottawa, there has been an improvement in the demand for hot weather goods this week. The jobbers are busy with the fall trade now, and it appears that in many lines the orders exceed those booked at this time a year ago. The prospects for trade are good.

Nothing Faster.
Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, a young couple recently married, were beginning their housekeeping, and were doing the work of putting the rooms in order themselves.

Mr. Bailey was having some trouble in hanging one of the presents, a fine clock, upon the wall of the dining-room.

"Why is it taking you so long, dear," asked the young wife, "to put up that clock?"

"I can't get it plumb," he replied. "Then why don't you send for the plumber?" she asked in perfect sincerity.—Youths' Companion.

A SUMMER GOWN.

lace, making a rather dressy suit, or you can bind them with braid. The dresses for yachting are in heavier linen and are trimmed with braid, as yachting gowns must always be. But they can be made quite novel by using the braid in fancy fashion. Great squares are followed out in the designs and old fancies in the way of decoration.

Tucked yokes, outlined with bands of white braid, are seen, and sleeve caps are tucked and trimmed with braid. Ruffles are set around the hands and inside the ruffles are stiff little bands of braid to look like cuffs.

The stocks that come with summer dresses are little more than bands of lace or bands of embroidery. They are as simple as they can be and are intended for the foundation for prettier things to come.

At Newport they are wearing the velvet band around the throat and fastening it with a jeweled clasp. This comes inside the simple little stock of lace. Again they take little pieces of lace and fasten them with a big soft bunch of tulle at one side. The tendency in stocks is toward something less elaborate and toward neat and pretty designs rather than sick and velvet.

The extravagance of the season is displayed in the pale colors that are worn. The full, dark tones have all disappeared, and in linen, duck and their kin one sees the pastel colors almost exclusively.

When a cigar is well advertised it is generally puffed up.

CUT-GLASS CAFES.

They Require Special Care During the Season of Laza Teas.

The lawn parties, piazza teas and other outdoor entertaining proves hard on the glassware that must be used frequently in the summer months.

Disobedience to parents leads to other acts of disobedience, and the laws of God and the country are ruthlessly broken; and this, more than all other things, destroys happiness and shortens life. Children should honor their parents, because God has commanded it. Blessings are attached to it. True affection prompts it. Self-respect demands it. In the future they will need a like respect shown them. Jesus has set a noble example in this regard.

BLOOD POISON

If you ever contracted any Blood Disease you are never safe unless the virus of poison has been eradicated from the system. At times you see alarming symptoms, but live in hopes serious results will follow. Have you any of the following symptoms? Some throat, ulcers on the tongue or in the mouth, hair falling out, itching pains, itching of the skin, sores or blotches on the body, eyes red and smart, dyspeptic stomach, sexual weakness—indications of the secondary stage. Don't trust to luck. Don't ruin your system with the old foggy treatment—mercury and potash—which only suppresses the symptoms for a time only to break out again when happy in domestic life. Don't let quacks experiment on you. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure you. Our guarantees are backed by bank boards that the disease will never return. Thousands of patients have been already cured by our NEW METHOD TREATMENT for over 20 years, and no return of the disease. No experiment, no risk—not a "patch up," but a positive cure. The worst cases solicited.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you, and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers disappear; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. THE NEW HALL

MUCH TALKING AT THE PUBLIC MEETING.

RATEPAYERS EXPRESS VIEWS

No Action Will be Taken in the Matter for a While—The Model Schools.

There was a fairly representative gathering of ratepayers at the public meeting in Lamb's hall last evening. The meeting was called by Mayor Knowlton for the purpose of discussing the new town hall site and other matters connected therewith. Several speeches were made and much valuable information secured. In the end, however, it was considered advisable to defer further action for a time at least. The main object in doing this is to await the decision of the government in regard to model schools. It is expected that the number in each county will be reduced to one at least in each county. In this case there would be a possibility of Athens losing the school. School accommodation then would not be a serious matter. Among those present at the meeting were Mayor Knowlton, Councillors Smith and Lamb, Messrs. W. G. Parish, B. Loverin, H. H. Arnold, S. A. Taplin, B. Nash, I. C. Alquire, J. Thompson, J. P. Lamb, G. Judson, G. W. Brown, J. Ackland, H. Booth, F. Fair, B. Holmes, W. Karley and Rev. Mr. Wright.

It was a little after 9 o'clock before a sufficient number were present to make it worth while entering into a discussion. By that time quite a number had arrived and Mayor Knowlton called the meeting to order. He explained the object of the gathering saying that it was for the purpose of giving the ratepayers an opportunity to express their views in regard to site for new town hall, stating that they wanted it to be a credit to the town as well as fill a long felt want. The most important part of the hall accommodation, he thought, was for a fire hall, and possibly a public library and reading room. School accommodation, he said, was also to be considered. He hoped all would be free to discuss the matter.

Mr. S. A. Taplin was the first to express his views. He understood situation of council but considered all equally interested. As it was understood, in his mind, in discussing town hall before by-law was passed, more school accommodation would be provided in connection with new hall, and, as this influenced many to vote for it, the matter having been advocated and agitated among voters, he considered it well to select a site where this could be carried out. He did not favor building town hall on Main St. He had no choice in regard to site; it was in the interests of all to secure site most suitable.

Mr. W. G. Parish said he cared more for the hall than the site, but could not give an opinion on site question. He had not found anyone who was of opinion that both school and hall could be combined legally. If it was understood among voters that school room was to be had in the hall, then that ought to be considered, but he was not aware of that fact. He had not advocated it in working for the by-law. If it could be done permanently and satisfactorily all well and good; but who knows?

Mr. C. L. Lamb was under the impression that some one had said Dr. Kinney did not approve of school being combined with hall. Asked Mr. Thompson if he knew anything about it.

Mr. J. Thompson had not talked with anyone in regard to combining two. The thought, however, that if Dr. Kinney had been spoken to it, he naturally would say it was not a good thing. No building receives more consideration than schools. Ventilation, light and many other things must be considered. Did not think anyone would say school in connection with hall was a good thing. He had no doubt about school being used as an argument at passing of bylaw but had never been sanguine that such would be a success. In regard to sites, he favored ed Mr. Karley's or Mrs. Addison's. Both have good rock bottoms, are centrally located and in every way preferable. He did not favor hurried action for the reason that model schools might at a near date be reduced to one in each county; it was but natural large towns would be favored. In a few months Athens might lose the model school.

Mr. H. H. Arnold expressed himself as being surprised at Mr. Taplin's remarks. Was not aware of agitation re combining school room with new hall, some may have done so. He had heard more about post office and thought from this a greater revenue could be derived. What Mr. Thompson had said about model schools, he thought would be crystallized into law. In conversation with those in position to know he had been informed that it might be brought about at next session of House; if so, we may lose the model school. This being the case, our school accommodation would be sufficient for years to come, unless population increases a great deal, but prospects were not very rosy. If necessary he favored ward school in separate part of town. It was a pity to herd the small children with large boys and girls. If new building is for a town hall only, there is no necessity for having it on Main street, so long as centrally located, but if provision is made for post office, then he thought it ought to be on Main street. But post office accommodation was badly needed. He had no particular site in mind.

Mr. J. P. Lamb had not heard the school argument used. He favored provision being made in the hall for post office and fire hall, and thought it should be located where the most revenue can be derived from it. It should be used as a revenue producer. He considered Mr. Karley's site a little out of the way if this is to be taken into consideration. If used for a fire hall it should be centrally located. Public buildings are usually put in public place. He would like to see it on Main street and in some place where we would be proud of it.

Mr. I. G. Alquire was not particular whether he sold his lot or not, but thought the best site obtainable should be selected, no matter where. We all wanted a good town hall; he was anxious for it to be credit in every way to Athens. He would like to see a creditable post office in town; the present one certainly was not. Remembered school question being discussed at public meeting, but later more attention was paid to post office. He did not consider more school accommodation necessary at present.

Mr. Geo. Judson was surprised to hear the school question discussed in connection with the hall; that was a matter, he thought, that should have been submitted to the School Board for consideration. He was in favor of hall, and if used for post office it should be central—meaning on Main street. As business men we should not insist upon being favored more than citizens in general in its location.

Mr. Rappell had the same impression as Mr. Taplin on school question. Did not consider Main street a good place for the hall. Preferred more central location.

Mr. Kincaid was not here for voting, but thought the school question was considered at the time. He said it was not necessary to have town hall on Main street, and mentioned several neighboring towns where they had their hall on other streets. In answer to a question he said these places did not have fire hall in connection with the building.

Mr. J. P. Lamb here stated if we were looking for revenue from the hall many things in addition to the post office should be considered.

Mr. Nash had been doing some figuring and considered it in the best interests of the ratepayers to have a reading room, lodge rooms, Clerk's office, vault and other things which would be good revenue producers. He thought a place for fire engine and a small room for council meetings and court purposes should also be considered. He favored Mr. Karley's site.

Rev. Mr. Wright thought hall should have a fire hall, court room, rooms for Judge and Clerk, vault, reading room and hall and a place for public records. To have a school room in connection, in his opinion, would not be satisfactory. The building ought to be centrally located, with the offices in the lower story and the hall in the upper. The latter should be suitable in every way for first class entertainments. Athens was badly in need of such a place. He wanted to know what security there was that the postmaster would rent quarters in the new building. There would be more revenue from public halls and offices than schools.

Mr. Holmes said reference had been made to school question by parties canvassing in support of bylaw, but could not say what influence it had on the voters. He thought Mr. Taplin's lot would make a good place for building, being a nice elevation.

Mr. Booth said he had been amused while listening to the speeches. When the question was first mooted, he said, the school question was taken up with it, but the post office was also discussed. He favored Mr. Karley's lot.

Mr. B. Loverin said there was a feeling in both town and township that some arrangement be made to secure the township hall for school purposes. Judging by statistics however, he said there did not appear to be much cause for worry in regard to school accommodation. Last year only six births were registered, and for first six months of this year only two. Did not consider it necessary to have post office on Main street. He would like to see town hall erected on Dr. Cornell's lot.

There was then a short discussion on what the seating capacity of the auditorium should be, running all the way from four to eight hundred.

It was then considered advisable to defer further action until something definite is received on the model school question.

Councillor Smith, in a few pointed remarks, expressed himself as being pleased with the addresses and the interest displayed in this important question by so many of the leading ratepayers. He concluded by moving that a vote of thanks be tendered the ratepayers for coming and discussing the questions so freely and offering suggestions; the Council would undoubtedly act accordingly.

This was seconded by Councillor Lamb, announced carried by Mayor Knowlton, and then the meeting closed.

Extraordinary Unpleasant Symptoms of Kidney Trouble in this Case.

Tortured by all kinds of Pains and Aches he tries Everything, but fails to find Relief Till a Friend Advises Him to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They Have Made a Well Man of Him and he is Grateful.

Ottawa, Ont., July 7.—(Special).—Frank Chartrand, a railway man, whose home is 130 Little Chaudreux street, has acknowledged that Dodd's Kidney Pills have done more for him than anything else in the world has ever done. He says: "I suffered with backache and was always drowsy and had a very heavy feeling in my limbs."

"I had frequent severe headaches and more times very sharp pains in the top of my head, which gave me much annoyance in my work."

"My fingers would cramp and I would have an uneasiness in my legs and occasional pains in the loins."

"I was dizzy in a-p-ls and short of breath. If I ate a hearty meal I would have a pain in my left side. My appetite would sometimes be very good and sometimes I couldn't eat anything."

"I had a constant soreness and tenderness over the spine and a tired feeling in the region of my kidneys."

"I suffered quite a little with a dragging, heavy feeling across the loins."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by a friend of mine who had been cured, and I began to use them."

"Almost from the start I began to feel the wonderful improvement, which continued as the treatment proceeded, till the unpleasant symptoms had one by one entirely disappeared."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have worked a wonderful cure in my case, and I cannot speak too highly of this great and good remedy."

STILTON CHEESE: HOW IT IS MADE.

By an English Authority.

In the equipment of a dairy for making Stilton cheese it is essential (urges Professor James Long), to obtain milk vessels, and those of tinned iron are now generally used, although they do not retain the heat of the milk so well as wooden vessels of a size which is in accordance with the number of cows from which the milk is obtained.

These vessels are narrower at the bottom than at the top. The milk intended, for manufacturing Stilton cheese, is strained and purified as far as possible, and when the temperature, which is regarded as the essential temperature for ripening is reached, the rennet is added. It is usual to dilute the rennet with pure water, and when it is being poured into the milk to stir briskly that the mixture may be complete.

Under some systems the temperature of the milk varies between 80 and 90 F., the curd being sufficiently coagulated to commences work in about fifty minutes. Temperature, however, is a question, which the maker—having learned both practice and principles—will determine for himself when he goes to work with his own milk. It is needless to say that the dairy must be well ventilated, sufficiently cool to prevent too high a temperature in the middle of the summer, but warmer in the winter, so that the temperature the more rapid does the whey or serum leave the curd, with the result that the curd may be too dry. In days gone by a somewhat primitive trough or sink was used for draining the curd, but now a drainage system is used—where all terms are used—were employed for the removal of the whey. Now, under the best equipment, white earthenware sinks or troughs are employed; these are about 21 inches wide, and of a length in proportion to the quantity of milk used. They may have a hole in the bottom for removing the whey, a plug being used, and if it is deemed necessary, a pipe may be screwed on to the bottom to carry the liquid elsewhere.

Across this tank pieces of well-plaited hard wood are placed to hold the sides of the draining cloth into which the curd is placed; the cloth having been spread across its supports, the curd, when fit, is removed, slice by slice, into it, and the whey at once commences to leave the curd. As is found necessary the four corners of the cloth are subsequently tied loosely together to keep the curd from falling into a compact mass, and to slightly encourage continual drainage by the gentle pressure which is thus given. Presently it may be that the corners are tightened, and further pressure given. The object is to obtain curd sufficiently firm to handle without real pressure, or without adopting the process which is common in the manufacture of Cheddar and other hard cheeses. Draining is chiefly caused by the fractures made first by the vessels employed in removing the slices of curd from one place to the other, and next by those which are usually made in the process, the heat of the curd materially assisting. It cannot be too plainly remarked that heat encourages drainage, whereas a low temperature seriously retards it. When, therefore, curd is much below 60 F., and in an apartment of a similar temperature, it becomes most difficult, and sometimes impossible, to separate the curd from the whey. Sometimes the maker draws the plug, and allows the whey to escape, under other conditions he prefers the curd to remain still in the cloth, but soaking in the whey. The success of the cheese in its primary stage depends upon the proper adjustment of acidity and upon temperature, so that neither too much nor too little whey is removed. When the curd is firm enough to handle it is either cut or broken into blocks, and placed in a dry vessel to air, or to ripen by contact with the air. Before the hoop or mould proper is filled with the curd, and the most improved size is 15 lb. by 8 1/2 in. diameter. The curd, ripe and sufficiently firm but not too broken into small pieces, usually by the hands of the maker. It should perhaps be pointed out that the growth of the blue mould or fungus common to Stilton cheese is possible only because it is not pressed. It will be noticed that as the curd is broken into small pieces the complete cheese is crowded with the mould. During the process of manufacture the secret of the blue mould are deposited from the atmosphere upon the curd, and it is a congenial soil upon which the fungus can subsequently feed, and as, too, the interstices provide both space for their expansion during growth, and air, so it is important that the greatest cleanliness should be observed, otherwise destructive germs will also find their way into the interstices and in the end destroy the cheese.

The telegraphone is the invention of a Danish electrical engineer, Valdemar Poulsen, and is as his name implies, a combination of the telegraph, telephone and the graphophone or phonograph. By the use of this device a telephone or telegraph conversation can be recorded on a single steel strip and to reproduce each message without interference from the others. With this improvement the wire or ribbon used in the telegraphone is made of a material which is not magnetized by the current, so that a single wire or tape reproduced at any time and as often as desired without the record deteriorating.

In this apparatus a steel wire or a steel band, is moved at a variable means with considerable velocity between the poles of a small electromagnet. On speaking into a telephone transmitter, joined on the circuit, the undulatory currents set up in the transmitter react upon the electromagnet and cause a continuous vibration in the direction and in the degree of magnetism at the poles of the electromagnet. These variations are permanently recorded on the steel wire as it rushes by, and when the message is complete the steel wire retains a definite record of what has taken place in the shape of a continuous series of transverse magnetized lines varying throughout in their polarity and in their strength. On connecting a telephone receiver to the electromagnet, and again starting the wire on its course, says the Telegraph Age, this magnetized wire generates electric currents in the coils of the superimposed magnet as it passes between its poles, and these electric currents, which are the exact counterpart of those generated by the original voice, cause the telephone to repeat what was said in an almost absolutely perfect manner.

Willing to Oblige. "Yes, I like you very much, George," said the fair girl with the fluffy hair, "but I really couldn't think of marrying you." "Why not, darling?" queried George. "Because we could never be happy together," she replied. "You know I always want my own way in everything."

Go Take a Swim. Secretary of War Root, while on his way to the commencement at Hamilton College, stopped at a hotel in New York hotel where he met a girl who was a very beautiful woman whom he knew as a boy and they asked him if he was comfortable at the hotel. "Oh, yes," he said, "but I would like a bath, and they haven't one." "Go away, sir," said one of the women, "you're patting on style since you got in the cab. You go out to Cedar run and take a swim as you did when a boy."—Chicago Chronicle.

A Discreet Lover. (Detroit Free Press.) "We-I love you, darling, I swear it by those key stones in your park. She—Don't swear by those. Reginald. He—Why not? She—Because those trees are slippery elms."

Minard's Liniment is the best. "Mamma," said Tommy, "does sugar or curge anybody of anything?" "Why do you ask, my boy?" "I thought I'd like to catch it," said Tommy.

Minard's Liniment cures La Grippe. Bengal Tigers. The man-eater is usually an old tiger, whose strength is falling and whose teeth have partly lost their sharpness. Such a beast finds it easier to lurk in the vicinity of settlements and to pick up an occasional man, woman or child than to run down wild cattle.

The largest, fiercest, and most brightly colored tigers are found in the Province of Bengal, near the mouths of the Ganges River, and not far from Calcutta. A full-grown Bengal tiger sometimes measures ten feet from nose to tip of tail. Such a monster makes no more account of springing upon a man than an cat does of seizing a mouse. He surpasses the lion in strength and ferocity, and has no rival among beasts of prey except the grizzly bear and the recently discovered giant bear of Alaska.—St. Nicholas.

Printed words alone may not convince, but ask anybody who has used the D.E. Menthol Balm for a scald, lumbago, pain in the side or pleurisy, and he will think it. The answer will be a safe, genuine.

WRIT IN BLACK AND WHITE. New Telephone That Writes the Messages Sent Over the Wires.

Among the patents recently issued in Denmark is one to Peter Oluf Pedersen, of Copenhagen, who has perfected a method of using the telegraphone in such a way as to record a number of messages on a single steel strip and to reproduce each message without interference from the others. With this improvement the wire or ribbon used in the telegraphone is made of a material which is not magnetized by the current, so that a single wire or tape reproduced at any time and as often as desired without the record deteriorating.

Costly Smoked Meats. The costliest of all the smoked meats, said a dealer in such things, "are the fine hams that come from Limerick, Ireland. The prices of these meats may vary slightly from time to time, the hams being usually, however, at from 33 to 35 cents a pound, and the bacon at 32 or 33 cents a pound.

These costly smoked meats are made from fine hogs that are fed and coddled with scrupulous care. The curing process is a severe one. "The combined result is shown in meats of such quality and flavor as to commend them most highly."

Of course there are fine hams produced here, also, notably those of Virginia, the finest of which bring 24 cents a pound. Included in the price of the Limerick hams and bacon is a duty of 5 cents a pound. If you were to add that to the price of the Virginia hams you would raise the cost of them to 29 cents, and adding further the cost of transportation from Europe, would bring the Virginia hams pretty close to those of Limerick in price; so that in their original cost they are about the same.

As to which is the better ham, that would be largely a matter of taste. The Irish ham is rich and juicy, the Virginia is of a more delicate flavor."

Dr. Chase's Ointment

MODERN SPLENDOR WILL PREDOMINATE

Queen Alexandra insists that the grace and beauty of her coronation robes shall not be sacrificed to historic precedent or to the College of Heraldic. She has no mind to walk to her throne in Westminster Abbey her throat in a picture out of the Middle Ages. Her robes will have a modern style so far as is possible.

The selection of robes for such a historic ceremony involves countless considerations of detail, which do not enter into the choosing of dress for state ceremonial in general. The Queen has her trials, and her bouquet at Marlborough House has had on occasions the appearance of a school of design and a modeste establishment, combined. Shall it be silk or shall it be velvet? Is it to be embroidered with gold or gilded with gems? Shall the heraldic devices be put here or shall they be put there? Are the questions which the Queen and her ladies are even yet discussing.

The Queen will not walk under a canopy, that ancient custom being omitted from the coming ceremony, completely owing to the irritation, preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes. Yours truly W. W. O'KE. Harbor Grace, Nfld., Jan. 8, 1893.

The Masses True to Him. (Toronto Globe.) General Buller has brought down on his head another storm of newspaper censure. A suggestive feature of his case is that he is still the military hero with the London democracy.

Messrs. C. C. Richards & Co. Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes—so badly that I thought I would be disgraced for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected—a few applications completely cured the irritation, preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes. STATISTICS AND COURTSHIP. A person of a statistical turn of mind has been delving into somewhat romantic domain for one of his practical bent. He has compiled statistics that cannot fail to prove interesting. Eighty-one out of 100 men, he says, have obtained the following equally interesting figures: Forty of them rushed in a frenzy out of the room; 21 of them said that life hereafter had no more value in their eyes, and that they would commit suicide; 14 became suddenly tongue-tied and irrational; six calmly resigned themselves to the inevitable; five avowed their intention to immediately emigrate to America; three threw out some of their hair; two bit their lips till blood came, one struck his hands into his trousers' pockets and whistled a popular song, and another looked up and cried "Hallelujah" and began to say the Lord's Prayer.

Of the ladies 87 per cent. knew beforehand that the proposals were about to be made to them. Seventy of them sank as though embarrassed into a state of unconsciousness, and only four fell gently down on a chair or sofa. Fourteen covered their blushing faces with their hands, eight threw their arms passionately around the necks of the men. Two said "Please speak to mamma," and one sneered.

One lady, who was 48 years old, protested vigorously against giving or receiving a kiss. Another who was about the same age, said, "Yes, you may kiss me, but you must do it in a gentlemanly manner." Such then, are some of the ways in which proposals are made and received. The study is an interesting one, and in several ways should prove especially instructive to members of the fair sex.

Little gobs of powder, little specks of paint, make the little freckle look as if it ain't.

Members of the Epworth League will sell ice cream at the old stand on Main street next Saturday night.

The Department of Agriculture has arranged for a refrigerator car service on both the Grand Trunk and C. P. R. for cheese shipments.

Men's Flannel Shirts for 25c at KENDRICK'S.

Tuesday of last week was the hottest day this year, the mercury rising to 87 in the shade. On the same date last year it was 72.

Have you seen the muslin KENDRICK is showing.

Westport now has a war canoe club which was organized a week or so ago. The club has purchased the war canoe, "Major," from the Brockville Y.M.C.A. and has an occasional spin on the lake.

The death of Mr. Lafauer, an aged man of North Augusta, occurred at the House of Industry on Sunday. Old age was chiefly the cause. The remains were taken to his native place for burial.

Never Stick Floor Paint, every can guaranteed, at KENDRICK'S.

C. H. Smith and family are occupying the Bullis cottage at Charlton this week, having as guests Mr. and Mrs. Trimble, of Munster; Miss Neelon, of Ottawa, and Mrs. M. M. Barnes and daughter of Smith's Falls.

Mrs. Chas. Towers, who lives near Charlton, is very ill, faint hopes being entertained for her recovery. She has not been well for many years and it is feared the complication of diseases which set in a few days ago will prove fatal.

At the recent High School Entrance examination Miss Jean Bryson, of Lyn, headed the list with a total of 829 marks, and Miss Ardell Church, of Addison, was the only one to receive the total number of marks in the arithmetic paper.

Divine services will be held in the churches of the parish of Lansdowne Rear on Sunday next as follows: Trinity church, Lansdowne Rear, 10:30 a. m.; St. Paul's church, Delta, at 3 p. m. and Christ church, Athens, at 7 p. m. Rev. C. J. H. Hutton will preach at all the services.

In the case of Sloan vs Walker in the magistrates court on Friday of last week before Magistrate Holmes, decision was reserved until to-day at 3 o'clock. This was a case in which defendant clipped the mane and fore top of defendant's horse without his knowledge or consent.

The big storm of Monday evening played havoc with the local telephone and telegraph service. The fuse wires in the telephone service were all burned and none of the lines in town were in use yesterday. While the storm was at its height Miss Boyce received a shock which she will not soon forget.

Mr. S. L. Kelly, a brother of the Misses Kelly of this place, met with a painful accident at Smith's Falls on Saturday. With others he was doing some work in the Frost foundry when a pulley on the derrick broke. A one hundred pound weight fell on Mr. Kelly's leg, causing painful injuries. Another man had his leg badly crushed at the same time.

At the last meeting of the W.M.S., Miss Lillie Brown, of the Toronto Deaconess Home, gave a very interesting talk on the work carried on by that institution. The ladies of the auxiliary are this week collecting and packing a box of canned fruit to be sent to Whitty for the use of the poor women and children who are taken there during the hot weather. A box of clothing and bedding will also be sent in the fall.

Mr. Harry Taplin, grandson of our esteemed townsman, Mr. S. A. Taplin, has recently received the degree of B. A. from Amherst College, winning a scholarship valued at $500, in competition with a class of one hundred. He also won a thirty-dollar prize for the best latin essay. Harry is well known here, having attended the high school, and his many friends will join with the Reporter in congratulating him on his exceptional success.

The Brockville Recorder of Monday says:—"Mr. W. A. Lewis, of Athens, went to Toronto last night to meet Mrs. Lewis and child, who have been visiting in Sarnia for some weeks. Mr. Lewis will open up his law office in town early next week, or just as soon as Judge Reynolds vacates the premises now occupied by him in the Comstock block so that Mr. Buell can move in. Then Mr. Lewis will take possession of the office now occupied by Mr. Buell. Mr. Lewis will continue his law office in Athens for a time to close up odds and ends of his business there, going out one day each week, but his head office will be in Brockville. He will move his family into town just as soon as he can secure a suitable residence."

Among those present were Miss Patterson, Miss Berney, Miss Arnold, Miss Winnifred Purvis, Miss Elma Witse, Miss Rappell, Miss Washburn.

Very many subscribers of the Reporter are many years in arrears and although we have repeatedly written them asking for a remittance on account they pay no attention to our requests, neither to the frequent dunnings through these columns. A short time ago we placed a lot of these old time subscriptions in the hands of a collecting agency who have exhausted every resource to effect a settlement. This week we have given them instructions to sue in the courts for the amounts, if not paid on final demand. Collection costs from 25 to 40 per cent and this the delinquent who allows their account to go to court will have to pay.

The publisher of the Goderich Star sued a delinquent subscriber for arrears on subscription a few days ago and the judgment of the trial judge will perhaps be interesting to some of our readers. In the words of the Star "the delinquent had been receiving the Star from its present publisher and, when billed with an account for four years subscription, he refused to pay on the grounds that he had never ordered the paper and had notified the management some eight years ago that he did not want it. The paper had not been discontinued then and his name still appeared on the list assumed by the present publisher. The judge held as the defendant had given no notice to the plaintiff, but had still received the paper, he was liable for the four years claimed, and gave judgment accordingly."

LOVE'S EXILE.

I suppose Edgar felt that my attitude was not one of pure resignation. He made no further effort to dissuade me, but went instantly in search of pens and paper. He was so very submissive, however, in taking this step, which I knew to be distasteful to him, that I was quite sure, before the letter was half written, that he was "up to" something. So, when it was finished, I was mean enough to insist on his leaving it with me, together with the directed envelope; and after reading it carefully through myself as soon as I was alone, I made the housekeeper fold it and seal it up in my presence, and directed her to get it posted at once.

My dearest Helen—You have no doubt long ago heard the reason of my silence, and forgive me for it, I am sure. I am sorry to tell you that my head (I felt an odd shyness of saying "my face") has been injured so seriously that it will be a long time before I can return to town; I am going straight to Geneva, and cannot yet tell when I shall be in England again. Under these circumstances, although I know that you would overlook my new little imperfections with the same sweetness with which you have forgiven my older defects, I feel that I cannot therefore again upon your generosity, to do me one last kindness by not returning to me the little souvenirs that you have from time to time been good enough to accept from me. And please don't send me back my letters, if you have ever received them with any pleasure. Burn them if you like. I will send back yours if you wish; but, as my head is so injured, I will love upon my face, and I will only dignify will suffer but little if you let me still keep them. There are only eight of them. And there is a glove, of course, and the little silver match-box. All these I shall insist upon keeping, whether you compromise or not. They could not compromise, the little glove could pass for a child's. You will

A LIFE IN PERIL.

Story of a Girl Saved by a Newspaper Article.

She Suffered from Headaches, Dizziness and Night Sweats—Her Friends Feared She Was Going Into Consumption.

(From L'Avenir, St. Jerome, Que.) Among the thousands of young girls who bless Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for safely carrying them through that most perilous period of their lives when they step from girlhood into the broader realm of womanhood, there is none more enthusiastic than Miss Gabrielle Thomas, a young lady known to most of the residents of St. Jerome, Que., and greatly esteemed by all her acquaintances. To a reporter of L'Avenir du Nord, Miss Thomas said: "From the time I was fourteen until I was eighteen years of age my health was very bad. I was very weak; had no appetite and could do no work. At night I perspired greatly and frequently slept but little. I suffered from headaches, dizziness and could scarcely move about without becoming breathless, and I finally reached a stage when my friends feared I was going into consumption. I was under the care of doctors, but their treatment did not help me. I then tried several advertised medicines, but with the same poor results and I had come to think I could not get better. One day I read in a newspaper the statement of a young girl whose symptoms were almost identical with my own, who was cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I then decided to try this medicine, and have reason to bless the day I did so. I had only used the pills a few weeks when I began to get better, and in a couple of months every symptom of my trouble had disappeared and I was as strong and healthy as any girl of my age. I have since always enjoyed the best of health and I shall be glad indeed if my experience proves helpful to some other suffering girl."

The happiness of health for both men and women lies in the timely use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which act as a nerve tonic and supply new blood to enfeebled systems. They have cured many thousands of cases of anaemia, "decline," consumption, pains in the back, neuralgia, depression of spirits, heart palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, St. Vitus' dance and partial paralysis. But substitutes should be avoided if you value your health; see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is on every box. Sold by all dealers or sent post paid at $2.50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medical Co., Brockville, Ont.

then, I know, but you must permit your objections to be overruled. Accident can be committed with artifice, and so artifice you must resort to until nature does her work and relieves you from the new necessity."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

A Positive Cure for Hot Weather Ailments. In the hot weather the little ones suffer from bowel troubles, are nervous, weak, sleepless and irritable. Their vitality is lower now than at any other season. Prompt action at this time often saves a valuable little life. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world for little ones of all ages. They speedily relieve, promptly cure and give sound, refreshing sleep. The Tablets should be in every home where there are little ones during the hot weather months. Dr. Ferguson, No. 105 Mansfield Street, Montreal, says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine I have ever used for children. My baby was afflicted with dysentery and was hot and feverish. I gave him the tablets and they promptly cured him. Before this he had been rather delicate, but since using these Tablets, he has been much better in all respects. I can sincerely recommend the Tablets to all mothers with ailing children."

In a small sitting-room on the same floor with the room I had been occupying before starting for the station. The blinds were drawn, and I sat with my back to this carefully softened light. I wished now that that I had not been getting so near, that I had not been myself so disengaged from my intention of sneaking quietly away with a showing my disfigured face to anyone. What was the use of my seeing the child again? I did indeed long for a few last words with her since she had shown unexpected signs of feeling towards me in my misfortune; but I did not dare. I felt still obstinately hoped, in renewal of our engagement, which I persisted in regarding as definitely broken. The meeting was only for a

HOME NURSING.

We have before us a copy of a new publication, entitled "Home Nursing." The object of this little volume is to give practical instructions how to take care of the sick by the inexperienced. In training schools for nurses, instructions are of course given in all matters of this kind, but a woman ask herself, "Could I give a bath to a person in bed without wetting the clothing, or change the under sheet while the bed was occupied?" and she will wonder why she did not discover the right way herself. In this little book practical instructions are given for the performance of all necessary offices pertaining to the sick. The knowledge of any of the things mentioned in this book is not to be taken for granted, and the writer has tried to give in a plain, simple manner that no one need mistake the easiest way. A sample copy of this valuable book can be had upon application to the publishers, Davis & Lawrence Co., 64 Grand Street, New York City, enclosing five cents in stamps or coin by the expense of mailing and stating the name of this paper.

farewell. I was ashamed of the artifice I had used to conceal the traces of my accident, and I was feeling half inclined to tear off my false ornaments and present myself in my true hideousness, when the arrival of my visitors luckily stopped me. The room where I sat was at the back of the house, so that I had no warning of the return of the carriage until I heard Edgar's voice. I sprang up with one last look of agony at my reflection in the glass which I had used to me at that moment a ghastly caricature of my old self, and then sat nervously down again, feeling like a doomed wretch with the executioner outside his cell. The door opened, and Edgar bounded up, dragging Helen, who seemed shy and nervous, forward on his arm. "Here he is, Nellie. Getting well, fast, you see. Where is mother? I must fetch her up."

Edgar instead of going abroad to be among strangers," said Edgar, cutting me short. "Helen's getting on well, isn't he, Helen? Come, he's brought to have his hand shaken now."

He drew her forward, to my inexorable pain for I saw the reluctance in her face. Before I could utter a word, she had turned and she had held out her hand, which I timidly took. Then she lifted her eyes to my face for the first time. For the first and last time I saw the expression of her most delicate most emotion on the fairy face. The muscles were contracted, the pupils of the eyes were dilated with intense horror. "I am very glad," she began. Then, before she could finish her sentence, even while I still held her little hand in mine, she fell like a crushed flower unconscious in her brother's arms. Poor fellow! How contrite, how miserably, abjectly humble and despairing he was when he appeared in my room, which I had fled, like a wounded deer, to his room when little Helen's unwilling blow gave me my social death-warrant. I was able to laugh then, and to tell her that my only regret was for the pain the injudicious meeting had caused poor Helen. "It was you who dictated her letter," I said. Edgar did not attempt to deny it. "She ought to be ashamed of herself," said he, reddening with indignation. "We ought to be ashamed of ourselves. I for my vanity in thinking there was any charm in my dull personality to compensate for the loss of the only merit I could have cried down on my head by your general idleness in carrying that mistake further still. Are you gone?" "Yes, my mother wanted to see you, but—"

CHAPTER IV. It was Saturday evening; a week of fog having been succeeded by a week of rain, the pavements were mud, in which I had sunk my feet as best one could, stimulated by plentiful showers of the same substance in a still more fluid state, slung by the wheels of passing vehicles. Oh, wisely-governed city, where there is work for thousands of starving men, while thousands of men are starving for want of work! If a boy can keep a crossing clean in an organized gang of men, he is a numerous and twice as active, as our gentle scavengers, save the sacred boots, skirts and trousers of that respectable abolitionist, London and I respectfully recommend this suggestion to my betters with the assurance that, if it is considered of any value, there are plenty more where that one comes from. Starting from Covent Garden, I made my way through Kiff street, Garrick street, Cranbourne street, Leicester Square, and Coventry Street, and I was struck by a hundred common London sights and incidents which, in the old days, when my own life was so idle and yet so absorbing, had seemed very new and strange. Oxford Street, Bond Street, Piccadilly, St. James' Street, I made the tour of them all; past the clubs, of many of which I was a member, brushing unrecognised by a dozen men who had known me well, into Trafalgar Square, where the gas lamps cast long, glittering lines of light on the wet pavement, and the spire of St. Martin's and the dome of the Na-

A MENACE TO THE LIVE STOCK TRADE.

The attention of live stock exporters, breeders and the press, is called to the case of H. F. Page, of Montreal, B. C., who was compelled to pay $1,000 duty on Canadian horses exported to the United States through the port of Sumas, Washington, in October, 1901. These horses were all accompanied by the proper registration papers of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association, as required by the laws of the United States. The contention of Collector Huestis was that, inasmuch as the animals were imported to be offered for sale, they were subject to the duty. Mr. Page appealed the case, and the testimony was heard by the Board of Appraisers, whose headquarters are in New York. This board have the case under consideration, and will render their decision some time in August. The action of collector Huestis has been rather severely criticized by the ranch, a well-known agricultural paper of Seattle, Wash., to which journal he contributed the following defence of his action: "H. F. Page, the importer you mention, is an alien stock-breeder residing in British Columbia. On October 18th, 1901, he imported at Sumas four stallions and four mares, of that breed, as pure bred stock, and claiming that they were entitled to free entry under the provision of article No. 475 of the existing tariff, which provides that any animals pure bred of a recognized breed, duly registered and certified as required by the regulations of the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, shall be admitted free when imported especially for breeding purposes. Pedigree certificates were presented with the entry, but as the animals were evidently imported for sale, the importer was required to deposit the amount of duty that would accrue in case the animals were found not to be entitled to free entry, and was given an opportunity to produce satisfactory evidence that they were intended especially for breeding purposes, which said evidence was lacking on entry. Neither the deputy collector at Sumas nor this office questioned the genuineness of the registration papers as intimated in your editorial, and as Mr. Page well knows that was not the reason that he was required to deposit the duty. (Note.—Mr. Page says "he never was so informed.") It was purely a question of evidence on the point of the purpose for which the animals were imported, and you are aware that chorons are valuable for draft horses, and, when imported for that purpose, are subject to duty, and a proper enforcement of the tariff, as well as regard for the protection of American stock raisers, alike demand a full investigation of the facts."

national Gallery rose like grey shadow-palaces above in the rainy air. I dined at a restaurant in the Strand, and then, growing very confident in the security of my disguise, I thought I would take a farewell glance at an old chum who had run Edgar pretty close in my esteem. He was an actor, and was fulfilling an engagement at a theatre in the Strand. When I added that he played what are technically called "juvenile" parts—that is to say, those of the stage lovers—my taste may seem strange, until I explain that Fabian Scott was the "very worst of all the fashionable dupes" being addicted to literary and artistic pursuits and other intellectual exercises which, while permissible and innocuous to what are called "character" actors, were required in vigor rather than thought, picturesque rather than plain. So that Fabian, with his thin, keen face, his intensity, and some remnants of North-country stiffness, stood only in the second rank of those whom the ladies delighted to worship; and becoming neither a great artist nor a great popinjay, gave his friends a sense of not having done quite the best with himself, but was a very interesting, if somewhat excitable, companion. For my own part I had then, not knowing how vitally important the question of his character would one day become to me, thought to give for in him save that he were a little less sour and a little more sincere. The stage-door was up a narrow and dirty court leading from the Strand. At the opening of the court stood a fair man, who looked like a German, and whose coarse, swollen face and dull eyes bore witness to a life of low dissipation. He was respectfully, but not well dressed, and he swung the cheap and showy walking-stick in his hand slowly backwards and forwards, in a stolidly swaggering and aggressive manner. I should not have noticed him so particularly, but for the fact that he filled the narrow entrance to the passage so completely that I had to ask him to let me pass. Instead of immediately complying, he looked at me from my feet to my head with surly, half-tipsy insolence, and gave a short, thick laugh. "Oh, so you're one of the swells, I suppose, who come hanging round stage doors to tempt hardworking, respectable women away from their lawful husbands! But it won't do, I tell you, it won't do!" (Do he Continued.)

TWAS COLD IN OPEN WORK.

But the Jersey Girls Found a Way and Kept as Warm as Toast. Some of the young folks of Newark have a way of staying so late at Casey Island on Sunday nights in summer that they have to trolley across the Jersey salt meadows to their homes in the wee sma' hours of Monday morning. Last Sunday was no exception. In the throng that just comfortably filled one of the night cars from Jersey City to Newark were many women who had started out wearing their twelve hours earlier wearing an open car, and the damp breeze that blew in soon made the white arms and shoulders which peeped through the lace and gauze blue and shivery. On the front seat exposed to all the fierceness of the blast, sat a little brunette, the openness of whose waist was proportioned to the pretentiousness of its owner. She was a born leader, and the event soon proved. Rising from her seat and bracing her feet so that no sudden jolt should make her seem infirm of purpose or understanding, she turned and cast a defiant look at the fifty or sixty persons who were watching. "Then she gathered up her skirt with both her hands, raised it to a level with her spreading picture hat, folded it warmly about her neck and sat down. "Well, waddye think o' that?" came in a suppressed murmur from behind her. "It's a good idea," replied one of the girls only less determined than the pioneer skirt-raiser on the front seat. The rest of the women with purple arms and shoulders thought so, too, and for the next five minutes there was a spreading of skirts and a fluttering of petticoats such as even Jersey has seldom witnessed—New York Sun.

Could Scarcely Straighten Up

On Account of Severe Pains in Small of Back—Deranged Kidneys the Cause of Trouble.

KIDNEY LIVER PILLS.

A great many people who suffer from backache, lame back and pains in the limbs think they have rheumatism and that there is no cure for them. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Mrs. Lessard was badly crippled before she began the use of this great kidney medicine. Here is her letter: "Mrs. J. Lessard, 150 Avenue du Parc, Montreal, Que., states: 'My main trouble was with my back, which was very weak, and whenever I stooped I could hardly straighten up again on account of the severe pains which would catch me in the small of the back. Believing that my ailment was caused from deranged kidneys I began a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and to-day I am all right again. This medicine seemed to act directly on the kidneys, and as a result I improved very generally.'"
