ALMOST SAVED, YET LOST

On a cold December morning,
When the western wind did blow,
Two men left their humble dwelling
Caring naught for wind or snow.

'Twas the day preceding Christmas,
And to celebrate the day,
Many things had to be purchased
At the stores, some miles away.

So they started out that morning,
Walking all the distance, too,
Hoping soon to be returning,
As they had some work to do.

Soon they reached the little village,
Just beyond the Gaspe Bay;
Then, when they had bought and battered,

They retraced their homeward way.
But to make the distance shorter,
Just to save a mile or more,
They went straight along the channel,
Where they had not passed before.

On they went for quite a distance,
Having not one thought of fear,
When in heard a cry of terror,
And the two men disappeared.

For a moment hope was vanished,
Then one man appeared again;
To the broken ice he clinging—
Oh, for power to reach him then!

There he wildly cries for rescue;
'Tis not very far from land,
And at once some men are running,
Each to give a helping hand.

Nearer, nearer they approach him,
But his strength is failing fast;
See, he cannot hold much longer,
Oh, must he go down at last?

Hasten! hasten! he is sinking!
Men are shouting from the shore,
God of love, oh, look in pity,
Help him cling one moment more.

But before they reach the victim,
Lo! he sinks beneath the wave,
There to join his helpless comrade
In a cold and watery grave.

In a humble fisher's cottage,
On that cold December day,
Two wives with no thought of snow,
Each had cheering words to say.

For they soon would see their
husbands
Hast'ning homeward on the bay,
Laden with the things they needed
For the coming Christmas day.

As the day was quickly waning,
And the men did not appear,
Then the women grew uneasy,
And were seized with sudden fear.

Night soon spread her sombre mantle,
Stars shone brightly in the sky;
Still they waited for their loved ones
Heaving many a painful sigh.

Suddenly a footstep sounded
Just outside the cottage door,
And the anxious women started,
As they oft had done before.

For they thought it was their
husbands
Feeling sure that they had come;
And they hurried out to greet them,
Glad that they at last were home.

But, alas! they were mistaken;
'Twas a neighbor who was there,
And his face told but too plainly,
Of the news he came to bear.

"I have come to bring sad tidings,"
Said the neighbor, with a sigh,
I must tell you that your husbands
Have this day been called to die.

They were crossing from the village
When the ice at once gave way,
And they sank, and quickly perished
'Neath the waters of the bay.

There was heard a shriek of anguish
At the little cottage door,
And the two heart broken women
Fell unconscious to the floor.

Reader have you found the Saviour?
Has he washed you white as snow?
Should swift death to-day o'ertake you,
Would you be prepared to go?

If unsaved, oh, seek salvation;
Time is passing, don't delay;
Come to Christ in deep contrition,
He will take your quilt away.

Maybe you are half decided
To forsake the way of sin,
And, at times, have almost yielded
To the power of God within.

Saints are striving hard to save you,
Never counting all the cost;
But you may come near the kingdom,
And be almost saved, yet lost.

A SUDDEN DEATH

Recorder: Driving into the yard of Mr. Cavanaugh, at Elgin, after attending the funeral of the late Mrs. J. S. Dargavel, Tuesday afternoon, of last week, Benben Gile, a prominent resident of Smith's Falls, was seen to fall and was at once carried into Mr. Cavanaugh's house in an unconscious condition. He expired within a few minutes of heart disease. Mr. Gile attended the funeral apparently in the full enjoyment of health, and his sudden demise has come as a great shock to his family and many acquaintances. He was twenty-three years of age and leaves a wife and grown-up family. Before removing to Smith's Falls he resided on a farm near Lombardy.

OBITUARY

MORRIS CURVIER ORTON

The late Morris C. Orton, died on January 6th, 1907 at his home Kirkland, Seattle. He was an old resident of Glen Buell and a member of one of the old pioneer families who arrived in this portion of Ontario, when Mr. Orton's grandfather arrived about a hundred years ago, he carried an axe on his shoulder, and a cotton handkerchief in which was tied up a change of underwear. The cash in hand was a British shilling. This stock in trade and a strong vigorous manhood composed the start in life of the pioneer settler. Many years of the prospecting and mining business. He, however, eventually was successful in his dream of life. For a few years he enjoyed a happy easy business life in Juman City, Alaska.

On the night of October 10th, 1899, Alvin Orton, a junior brother, living on the old homestead, suddenly died. His brother Morris in Juman City was stricken with paralysis on the same night but rallied from the effects and removed to Seattle. A year or so later he received a second stroke of paralysis, which left him an almost helpless invalid. In his suffering he manifested great patience and resignation to the Hand which governs all things.

Early in December last a third stroke was received which brought about a dissolution of spirit and body. He left a young wife and two daughters, one brother and two sisters to mourn his departure: Alcis Orton, Langden; Mrs Robeson, Detroit; and Mrs. C. J. Gilroy, Glen Buell.

Hard Colds

People whose blood is pure are not nearly so likely to take hard colds as are others.

Physiology goes into the reason. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure, causing healthy action of the mucous membrane and giving strength and tone to all the organs and functions.

This great medicine recovers the system after a cold, as no other does.

ON A SHIP'S BRIDGE

More modern landmen ever come to know the bridge of an ocean liner well. When you are so fortunate as to be invited to one, you are a writer in St. Nicholas, you are not up a narrow flight of steps from the deck to the bridge and thence to the pilothouse.

The bridge is a structure of steel, built to be a very quiet retreat. At this height you no longer feel the deep throbbing of the engines, while the busy decks seem to have been left far below.

There are seldom more than two persons on duty here, one, an officer, passes quietly back and forth across the bridge, the other, a seaman, stands with his hand on the wheel intently watching the binnacle in which is suspended the compass. No conversation is allowed and scarcely any unnecessary word is spoken.

The bridge may be sixty feet or more in length, probably five feet greater in width at either end is a broad low seat.

The wheelhouse at the center of the bridge is a heavy structure of polished wood, entering it a landman is awed by the complicated machinery on every hand. His attention is first attracted to the wheel, or wheels, for often there are two or more of them, one directly in line with the other.

The first of these is an insignificant-looking affair, perhaps a foot or so in diameter, which seems out of proportion to the work it must accomplish. It is directly in front of it stands the ship's compass, while back of it are massed the levers which operate the slightest motion of the wheel into the force which guides the ship.

All the great engines are steered nowadays by the aid of steam or electricity. In the old days half a dozen men at times would struggle with the wheel in high seas and sailors have been killed by the rapid revolving of the projecting spoke handles.

The rudder, weighing many tons, is perhaps five hundred feet astern, yet with almost the delicacy of a compass needle, the wheel that the steersman operates merely governs the steering engine, which in turn moves the great rudder.

The work of steering a great ship, even with the aid of all this machinery, is much more delicate than one would imagine. The margin for error is so small that the slightest mistake is fatal.

Dear Mother

Your little ones are a constant care in Fall and Winter weather. They will catch cold. Do you know about Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, and what it has done for so many? It is said to be the only reliable remedy for all diseases of the air passages in children.

SHILOH

This remedy should be in every household.

The Roofless Race. The showmen form a class. One is born to the road, as in this old world the peasant is born to his heritage of the fields and the miner to the mine and the bourgeois to a wadded dressing-gown.

Son succeeds to father; the old mother gives way to the daughter; generation follows generation. They are called, in the French tongue, the forains; which means in a contemptuous way, foreigners, aliens, outlaws. They are the roofless race, Outlaws truly enough. They have a better name for themselves. They are the Voyageurs—a good word still common in Canada and the Northwest.

The "voyage" itself is the general migration that all make from fair to fair, according to the seasons. Thus there is a voyage for the north, so arranged that it will swing round to each fair at the appointed date; and so for the other provinces. It would be absurd of course, to find all the wrestlers at Verdun and all the menageries at Cognac. So they divide into little companies, each fairly complete in itself. Without any very definite organization, they agree well enough in dividing the land among them.

You never see two tiger-women at the same fair, though there are, I am told about fifty tiger women in France at this moment.

Down at the foot of the scale you find the dirty fellow with a few frayed mice, or the old juggler with a bit of faded carpet and a few plates and wooden balls. But one and all are voyageurs; the brotherhood of the voyage enfolds them all. They all know each other. The whole power of the clan is united to crush the newcomer who tries to force his way in and take away—for that is what it is—some part of the general receipts.

She nestled her head on his manly breast. "Oh George," she whispered, "how loud your heart beats. And every beat is for your own Angeline, isn't it, dear?" He looked uncomfortable.

"Well, the fact is," he said, "that the engagement ring costs so much that I'm obliged for the present to carry one of those dollar watches. That's what you hear."

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc. Propinquity. In a little canoe, just made for two, there's room for the son of Venus; For Cupid, cut, chap, can sit on a lap or cuddle him down between us.

Now, two's company, and a crowd it is three. Yet without the dear boy it were stupid; He makes melody, singing "Propinquity."

HOW TO CURB THE NOVELIST.

Rules for Restricting the Output Suggested by an Authority. The scheme of legislation suggested is suggested as a means of regulating the enormous output of modern fiction, a problem well-nigh as serious as those arising out of the growth of automobilism.

1. No author or authoress shall be permitted to drive a quill, steel or fountain pen of more than five-paragraph power until he or she be duly licensed and certified as competent to do so without danger to the public.

2. Every authoress and author shall be subjected to an adjective tax.

3. All novels shall be registered (for purposes of identification), with clearly marked letters and numbers, indicating the school or district to which they belong, and no writer shall, to prevent classification, willfully obscure his initials or initials of his publisher.

4. No speed competitions shall be allowed between novelists, except in such areas as may be licensed and set apart for the purpose—e. g., the Dartmouth and the Avon (Warwick) district and the Sahara.

5. Special licenses shall be taken out for italics, autobiographical prefaces and replies to reviewers.

6. Writers of novels shall be responsible for all sudden shocks, nervous breakdowns, heart failures and (in the case of feuilletons) deaths from suspense occasioned to their readers and may be prosecuted therefor.

7. Novels shall be bound and colored according to their contents. Thus, sectional fictions must be issued in red boards, idylls of rural tranquillity in green or tree calf, while brown covers are reserved for essays of the ruminant type, dispatched from study windows and the like.—London Punch.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO. Gents.—After suffering for seven years with inflammatory rheumatism in my right hand, I was eleven months confined to my room, and for two years could not dress myself without help, your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT in May, 1897, and asked me to try it, which I did, and was so well pleased with the results, I procured more, five bottles completely cured me, and I have had no return of the pain for eighteen months. The above facts are well known to everybody in this village and neighborhood.

Yours gratefully, A. DAIRT, St. Timothee, Que., 16th May, '99. "Toffee" as Made in England. It may be possible that there are some persons who grow old so thoroughly that they actually forget that they ever were children, but I can't help wondering if any man or woman ever lived to such an age as to become incapable of remembering the lights of "toffee," or the butter scotch that has made Doncaster a household word to every civilized nation under the sun.

THE RAVAGES OF RHEUMATISM ARE CHECKED BY BILEANS.

A Woman's Sensational Cure. Mrs. Selma Davis, a resident of Abingdon, has proved how wonderfully effective Bileans are in cases of rheumatism and debility. She says: "I had pains in the limbs and across the back, weighing down symptoms and great weariness. In October came a crisis. I was rendered completely helpless by acute rheumatism. By the doctor's advice I went into the hospital, where I remained under treatment for nine weeks. On returning I was confined to my bed again for seven weeks. I read a description of the good work Bileans were doing. This induced me to obtain a supply. By following the directions given for their use I improved in health from day to day. After a little while I regained the use of my limbs, and after that my progress was rapid. For some time now I have been able to resume my ordinary life and work, and am altogether a different person from what I was during the last few years."

Rheumatism is due to the presence of certain poisonous acids in the blood. The "filter beds" for the blood are the liver and the kidneys. Through these organs a different person from what I was during the last few years. Rheumatism is due to the presence of certain poisonous acids in the blood. Saw Nothing Wrong. (Buffalo Commercial.) Little Elmer, a Chicago boy, who had been listening for some time to the conversation between his mother and a woman caller, finally said: "Mamma, are all your neighbors wicked?" "Because you and Mrs. Blank haven't said a word about any of them to-day," answered the little observer.

PILLS AND PILES. A prolific cause of Piles is the use of cathartics and pills of a drastic, violent nature, which is always followed by a reaction. But no matter what the cause or what the kind of Piles, Dr. Leonard's Hem-Roid can be relied upon to cure—to stay cured.

A Bronze Medal Calendar. The 1907 calendar of N. W. Ayer & Son, the Philadelphia advertising agents is just out, and as a matter of fact is one of the season's best office calendars.

Greatest Foe to Physical Beauty. If I were asked what was the greatest foe to beauty in both man and woman, I would say, not errors in diet, not lack of exercise, not overwork, not corsets, not any of these, but bad mental habits.

Unless the beauty seeking young woman is prepared to deliberately cultivate good nature, kindness, calmness, cheerfulness even to hilarity—unless she is prepared to deliberately conquer all tendencies to the bad mental states above mentioned, there will be little or no results from her efforts to develop in herself that most divine gift of beauty.

ANCIENT COAL NEWS. The earliest mention of coal amongst the ancient authors is by Theophrastus, in his "History of Stone," wherein he says: "There is a fossil substance called coal, which is broken for use; it kindles and burns like wood. It is found in Liguria and in Ellis, on the way to Olympia, over the mountains. These coals are used as fuel by the smiths."

Not Arousing Indignation. (Philadelphia Press.) "I told you," said the merchant, "to mark this box 'Handle with care.' What's the nonsense you've painted here?" "That," said the college graduate, "is the Latin for 'Handle with care.'" "How do you expect the baggage-man to understand that?" "He won't, and therefore, he won't get mad and smash the box."

NATURAL PRUNING.

In the orchard or park trees are pruned by the hand of man; in a forest the trees do their own pruning. This is one of the striking differences between the treatment of trees by the fruit farmer and the arboriculturist and the forester's treatment of them. In a forest not very many years pass (especially if the trees are nearly all about the same age; or, in forestry terms, if the stand is an even-aged one) before the light begins to be cut off from the lower branches of the trees. Now, light is essential for the formation of the tree's food and so for its proper nourishment and growth, as is the case also with other plants. So the lower branches of the trees, from which the light has been cut off, die, and the upper branches are left to manufacture the tree's food and so maintain its life. Gradually the dead branch becomes weaker and eventually it is broken off by the wind or some other agency. So the process goes on all through the tree's growth in height, branches growing out and in course of years being discarded as the need for them disappears. Finally, as growth in diameter proceeds, the stub, if any has been left, is surrounded by the new wood and forms a knot in the tree. And so, often, there is found a clear length of fifty, seventy, a hundred or more feet with no such stubs to be seen, the dead stubs having been grown over. The essential point to be noted in this is that, in growing trees under forestry methods, artificial pruning is not done. In the vast majority of cases it would not pay; and the financial aspect of the question is ever before the forester's mind.

How Many Fish to Catch. What has been said naturally leads to the suggestion that consistency requires those of us who are right-minded fishermen to reasonably limit ourselves as to the number of fish we should take on favorable days. On no account should edible fish be caught in such quantities as to be wasted. By restraining ourselves in this matter we discourage in our own nature the growth of greed, we prevent wicked waste, we make it easier for us to bear the fall between decent good luck and bad luck, or no luck, and we make ourselves at all points better men and better fishermen.

NEW RULER OF PERSIA.

His Coronation to Take Place on Feb. 2nd.

Elaborate Preparations for Funeral of Deceased Ruler.

Shah's Third Son Has Raised Army to Try and Capture Throne.

Teheran, Jan. 14.—The enthronement of the new Shah, Mohammed Ali Mirza, has been fixed for the Chadir festival, the Festival of the Lake, which will be celebrated on February 2. This date is regarded as very auspicious, being the anniversary of the day upon which the prophet, standing at the side of the lake, proclaimed that Mahommed Ali Mirza was his own flesh and blood. The Shah's coronation is rendered the more interesting by the peculiar Oriental magnificence of the peacock throne of Persia, which he will occupy. This is fashioned with jewels after the showy tail of the bird, and it has been appraised at from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000.

Another treasure of the royal household is the terrestrial globe which the late Shah had constructed of pure gold with 51,000 precious stones used to indicate the conformations of land and sea. The oceans and seas are of emeralds, Persia is marked with turquoise, India with amethysts, Africa with rubies, England and France with diamonds.

Almost immediately after the official announcement of the death of the Shah this morning Mohammed Ali Mirza proceeded to the palace, where he was formally acknowledged as Shah by the grand vizier and other princes of the royal family, and by a large number of high court and government officials.

Late to-day the body of the dead monarch was removed, with imposing ceremonies, to the "Great Takieh," where it will remain until its actual interment. The dates of these obsequies has not yet been fixed.

The preliminary funeral ceremonies probably will be held at the royal palace, where Muzaffar-Ed-Din died. The body will lie in state for eight or ten days in the splendid hall where the Miracle plays are annually performed. Crowds of priests will surround the catafalque, incessantly chanting prayers from the Koran, and the public will be allowed to file past the coffin.

The body of the Shah will be buried in the Abdul Azim Mosque. The funeral procession will closely follow the lines of similar ceremonies in western countries, with the usual military display.

Third Son Wants Throne. London, Jan. 14.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Teheran says that the dead Shah's third son, Luristan, has raised a force of 10,000 men in Luristan, in the hope of capturing the throne, but he has no prospect of success, although the tribesmen are likely to cause trouble in the south if they don't even advance on Teheran. The new Shah's reputation for severity, which received proof in recent executions, the first in ten years, will not fail, however, to have its effect.

Shah Muzaffar-Ed-Din, who died yesterday, wished to be buried at Kerbala, near the tomb of the martyr Hussein, which is distant forty days' march from the capital. It is doubtful if his wishes can be complied with owing to the hostility of the Turks in consequence of a frontier dispute. Meanwhile the body will be carried to the mosque of Shah Abdul Azim, six miles south of Teheran, a celebrated place of pilgrimage, where the late Shah's father is buried.

Opinion regarding the new Shah's policy is divided. He is undoubtedly a man of strong intelligence. He showed great capacity during the regency in 1905. He is supposed to be under Russian influence.

It is believed in certain quarters that he will follow the example of the Czar and dissolve the Parliament as soon as he is firmly seated on the throne. In such an event serious trouble is to be anticipated. As an act of politeness the banks have advanced the new monarchy a small sum of money.

The Death-Bed Scene. The correspondent of the Daily Mail graphically describes the death-room scene. The Shah died in a chair, and supported by a cushion, the action of his heart building his lying in a recumbent position. The heir-apparent was summoned in the morning. He wept at the sight of his father's death.

The Shah was conscious until noon. When, later, signs of animation ceased, a Moslem priest entered and read prayers from the Koran. The Crown Prince, again wept. When the physicians realized that the dying monarch was beyond their skill they withdrew to an ante-room, leaving the family to their grief. The women began to assemble and raise lamentations, which were checked temporarily lest they might hasten the end.

Night fell, and the chamber was lighted by myriads of electric lamps, reflected by millions of tiny mirrors, of which the wall and ceiling were composed. The dying Shah sat with his face turned toward Mecca. Around were the women in every attitude of grief, with streaming hair, beating their breasts, and raising cries of lamentation that filled the chamber and echoed in the garden like the sighing of the wind. The end came without suffering. So passed from the gaze of their sovereign, who, whatever weakness of character he may have displayed at the last, was distinguished by a kindly nature.

Millions of Gold and a Cheap English Soap Ad.

London, Jan. 14.—There was, I am credibly informed, a very amusing object in the bedchamber of the late Shah of Persia. It was the only thing in the room that lacked beauty and intrinsic worth. The Shah's bed was magnificent with its incrustations of jewels, and the other articles of furniture fitly matched it in splendor. The prayer rug was fringed with gold and precious stones. The clock was of almost fabulous value. The paintings, bric-a-brac and hangings were wonderful. But in the midst of all this grandeur and artistic loveliness there was conspicuously displayed in a magnificent gold frame a cheap print copy of one of those grotesque pictures used in advertising a certain brand of English soap. It is said the Shah was as fond of that picture as of anything in the room.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Guelph Man Missing for Several Months—Foul Play Suspected.

A Guelph, Ont., despatch: A case of mysterious disappearance on the part of a Guelph man is being investigated by the county constabulary. Many months ago a man, whose home was in this city, disappeared completely. No traces of him could be found, though the matter was put in the hands of the authorities once. He had last been seen in this city. It was known that he possessed quite a sum of money.

The authorities kept the matter a profound secret, not a word has been said about it from that day to this. The missing man has not been heard of since that time. Major Meredith stated to-day that there are grave suspicions of foul play in the case.

Brutal Treatment of Natives in Western Australia.

Adelaide, South Australia, Jan. 14.—At the meeting of the Science Congress to-day Prof. Klaatsch, of Heidelberg, related the results of ethnological researches among the negroes of North-west Australia. He confirmed the reports that have been current of ill-treatment of the natives, and compared the relations between whites and blacks there with the state of affairs that prevailed in Tasmania in 1830, which resulted in the extermination of the blacks.

JUSTICE IN KENTUCKY.

Judge Cornes Appeals for Troops to Protect Him.

Jackson, Ky., Jan. 14.—This city is excited over the trial of ex-county Judge Hargis and ex-Sheriff Callaghan on the charge of murdering Dr. B. D. Cox four years ago. Judge Cornes, specially appointed to try the case, has appealed to the Governor for troops to protect him. A jury cannot be selected here, as it seems twelve men cannot be found in the county who will pass judgment on the prisoners. An effort will be made to have the trial held elsewhere. The city is full of armed mountaineers, and attorneys on both sides have been warned to be careful. Armed men through the court-room during the session. The Governor has sent militia officers here to investigate.

GOOD FOR COAST.

GIGANTIC INDUSTRIES FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Plan to Consolidate Several Large Companies—Newcastle and Clyde Shipping Firms May Transport Portion of Their Plant to Coast.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 14.—H. F. Bullen left this morning for England on a mission of the greatest moment to British Columbia, and particularly to the coast and the cities of Vancouver and Victoria. Negotiations have been in progress for over a year, and the option which expressed the plan expired a short time ago, but it is understood that it has been extended for two months. It has been financed by Fowler, Park & Company, one of the biggest firms of brokers in London. Both principals are members of the British House of Commons, Sir Henry Fowler being in the Cabinet. These brokers are interesting some of the biggest shipping firms in Newcastle and on the Clyde, and if successful, a portion of their plant and a large force of workmen will be transported to this coast.

The plan is to consolidate the British Columbia Marine Railway, the Vancouver Engineering Works, the New Westminster Foundry and the big holdings of iron and coal lands on the west coast into one concern. This will include floating dry dock for Vancouver, estimates for which were passed by the Dominion Government some time ago, but which has hung fire. The ultimate intention is to build steel vessels at Esquimalt, in fact, the company, if launched in the form contemplated, could build Empresses, and it is expected that it would start with not less than a thousand British artisans.

Mr. Bullen's mission is given out as for an entirely different purpose, but its real object is as given above.

TAXING THE RICH.

Some Recommendations of New York's Special Commission.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Jan. 14.—The New York State special tax commission will meet in New York city Saturday to complete its report. William H. Sutherland of Rochester, counsel to the commission, will present a bill, calling for the levying of a tax on all incomes above $500 annually. An income up to $500 a year is to be exempt from taxation, but on annual incomes above the first ten thousand dollars above the amount of exemption it is proposed to levy a tax at the rate of one per cent.

On all incomes above $10,000, up to and including $20,000, the rate is proposed is two per cent.; above $25,000, up to and including $50,000, the rate is five per cent.; over $50,000 and up to

BITTEN BY MAD COW; HAVE HYDROPHOBIA.

Connecticut Farmer, Wife, Son and Hired Man Were Bitten.

Former Had Fight With Mad Dog Which Later Bit the Cow.

New York, Jan. 14.—Suffering intense pain, William Cosvertok, a farmer of New Hartford, Conn., his wife and son and a hired man, Carl Lockhardt, are at Pasteur Institute, on Twenty-third street, victims of hydrophobia. They were bitten a week ago by a mad cow.

The farmer, his wife and son are in a critical condition. Lockhardt, who was not so seriously bitten, will recover. One night two weeks ago when Cosvertok went into his stable he found his pet dog snarling and foaming at the mouth. The dog sprang at him, but the farmer seized him by the throat. The dog wriggled loose and Cosvertok fled from the stable. The dog bit one of the five cows and then ran into another stall. The cow tied there gave a hard kick and the dog was knocked unconscious. Cosvertok returned with a revolver and killed the animal.

Cosvertok did not know then that the cow had been bitten. He continued to milk her every day and the milk, mixed with that of the other cows, was sent around to customers in New Hartford.

A week ago Sunday night Cosvertok, going to the cow's stall, found the animal pawing viciously at the floor. Cosvertok stepped up and petted the animal, when she suddenly broke her halter, turned upon the farmer and sank her teeth in his arm.

The cow, foaming and bellowing, then dashed out of the barn and began to run around the yard in a circle. The cries of the farmer and his hired man aroused the entire farmhouse, and Cosvertok's wife and their son, William, aged 21, ran out. The cow lowered her head and made for them.

SHARE WITH POOR.

ANDREW CARNEGIE WRITES OF "MY PARTNERS, THE PEOPLE."

Where the State Comes In—Succession Duties Should Be Graduated, Increasing in Proportion to the Extent of the Estate.

London, Jan. 14.—The Review of Reviews prints a striking article by Andrew Carnegie, entitled, "My Partners, the People." It expresses the belief that a millionaire ought to share his wealth with the poor, but with the limitation that his fortune should not be divided before the millionaire's death. Then the community should exact a large share, graduated in increasing proportion to the extent of the deceased's wealth. After advocating the British graduated death duties as a basis for distribution, Mr. Carnegie says:

"Such contributions from the owners of enormous fortunes, at their death would do much to reconcile dissatisfaction, but fair-minded people to the alarmingly unequal distribution of wealth arising from the new industrial conditions of our day. We shall ultimately have to consider the adoption of some such scheme as a progressive tax on all fortunes beyond a certain amount, either given in life or bequeathed at death, so that it will be possible for the owners of enormous fortunes to hand on more than a certain amount to any individual."

Mr. Carnegie humbly deprecates the claim of the merely wealthy to fame. They have no place with educated men, and they occupy a lower plane intellectually. In the coming day brains will stand above dollars and conduct above both. The making of money as an aim will then be rated as an ignominious ambition.

FATAL GRIEF FOR FATHER.

Miss Anna MacDowell, Losing Her Reason, Hanged Herself.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Grieving over the death of her father, Miss Anna MacDowell, of No. 2144 North Twentieth street, hanged herself in the cellar of her home, yesterday morning. She had been suffering from dementia for several months.

When her father, Samuel B. MacDowell, head of the firm of Samuel B. MacDowell & Son, died in Atlantic City nine months ago, his daughter was inconsolable. Recovering from her first grief, she lapsed into a state of despondency, from which her family was unable to rouse her. For the past month she had been under the constant care of a physician and watched almost hourly by her mother, Mrs. Harriet MacDowell.

Yesterday morning Mrs. MacDowell was compelled to leave the house for a few hours. When she returned at noon she missed her daughter, but on searching the house found the body. During her absence Miss MacDowell had tied a piece of clothes-line to a post in the cellar, slipped the noose around her neck and jumped from a box.

FATHER FOUND HIM PRETTY BRIDE.

Then Gave Him $10,000 and Home for Wedding Present.

Winchester, Ky., Jan. 14.—To have his father select a bride for him, and settle $10,000 upon him and give him a home is the good fortune of Roscoe Catchings, of Washington, D. C., who has become the husband of Miss Cynthia Simpson, 19 years old, formerly pantry girl at the St. George Hotel, this city. Catchings' father has extensive lum-

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN

For it Cares for Every Sick Child in Ontario whose Parents Cannot Afford to Pay for Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto, appeals to fathers and mothers of Ontario for funds to maintain the thousand sick children that it nurses within its walls every year.

The Hospital is not a local institution—but Provincial. The sick child from any place in Ontario who can't afford to pay has the same privileges as the child living in Toronto and is treated free.

The Hospital had last year in its beds and cots 858 patients—331 of these were from 221 places outside of Toronto. The cost is 1.37 cts. per patient per day, and there were 133 sick little ones a day in the hospital.

Since its foundation the Hospital has treated 12,120 children. About 8,600 of these were unable to pay and were treated free.

Your money can put golden hinges on the door of the Hospital's mercy. Every body's dollar may be the friend in need to somebody's child.

Your dollar may be a door of hope to somebody's child. The Hospital pays out dividends of health and happiness to suffering childhood on every dollar that is paid by friends of little children.

If you know of any child in your neighborhood who is sick or crippled or has club feet send the parent's name to the Hospital.

See what can be done for club-foot children. There were 26 like cases last year and hundreds in 31 years.

Please send contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas., of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

THE SHAMROCK

At One Time It Was Used For Food In Ireland.

That the shamrock was used as a diet before it was adopted as the national emblem has been conclusively demonstrated, though in proving the fact one writer borrows from another. Very few drew their information from personal observation. Spenser undoubtedly did, and he is perhaps responsible for the familiarization of this fact to his contemporaries. I quote the passage from "The View of the Present State of Ireland."

"Out of every corner of the woods and glens they came creeping forth upon their hands, for they legges could not bear them. They looked like anatomies of death; they spake like ghosts crying out of their graves; they did eat of the dead carions, and if they found a plott of water crosses or shamrocks there they flocked as to a feast for the time."

This dietary use was known to the Elizabethan dramatists.

I will give thee leave to cram my mouth with shamrocks and butter, and water creeses instead of pears and peepsh.—Ben Jonson's "Irish Masque."

"The shamrock thus used for food," says Mr. Colgan, "was one or other, or perhaps both, of the meadow clover, or trefolis, Trifolium pratense (purple clover) and Trifolium repens (white clover) of modern botanists."—Notes and Queries.

THE OLD FARM.

Thoughts It Brought to One Who Knew It as a Boy.

One morning I was awakened with a strange new joy in my mind. It came to me at that moment with indescribable poignancy, the thought of walking barefoot in cool fresh plow furrows, as I had once done when a boy. So vividly the memory came to me—the high airy world, as it was at that moment, and the boy I was, walking free in the furrows—that the weak tears filled my eyes, the first I had shed in many years. Then I thought of sitting in quiet thickets in old fence corners, the wood behind me rising still, cool, mysterious, and the fields in front stretching away in limitless pleasantness. I thought of the good smell of cows at milking. You do not know if you do not know! I thought of the sights and sounds, the heat and sweat of the hayfields. I thought of a certain brook I knew when a boy that flowed among alders and wild parsnips, where I waded with a three foot rod for trout. I thought of all these things as a man thinks of his first love. Oh, I craved the soil! I hungered and thirsted for the earth. I was greedy for growing things.

You have No Reason for Not Using Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that the drug cures do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo.

Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy. One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach, when they had sick headache. And there is nothing better.

The principal ingredient—the one that treats the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It won't hurt you any more than will the soda.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time.

If you are using a drug remedy, why not discard it?

Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all must sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain.

If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again.

BASKET FISH.

When Dried, the Quercus Arms Closely Resemble Plaster of Paris.

At its marine residence, away down in deep water, the name on the door plate would be "Astrophyton," and it belongs to a species called ophiurans. It has a well marked control disk, not unlike a clam, but has no shell. From this central body radiate arms, five in number, like those of the familiar starfish, and these arms are divided into minute branches, like the twigs on a tree, until they number in some cases a thousand separately defined half-like tendrils. While the body is not large, the branches when extended measure about eighteen inches in diameter. The creature has the power of incurling these branches until it closely resembles a shallow dish. This it does when caught and about to die, remaining in that shape when dried.

It has been given the name of basket fish. It frequently (when caught by a trawl, until they number in some cases a thousand separately defined half-like tendrils. While the body is not large, the branches when extended measure about eighteen inches in diameter. The creature has the power of incurling these branches until it closely resembles a shallow dish. This it does when caught and about to die, remaining in that shape when dried.

These arms and their subdivisions are almost white when dried and closely resemble plaster of paris. They are very brittle, easily broken and cannot be repaired. The fish live among the roots of seaweeds and are supposed to feed upon these, moving about by wriggling and clambering with their arms, or thrusting upon the roots and pulling themselves along.

Most of the knowledge regarding their habits is conjecture, for none have been taken alive and kept for sufficient time to give them proper examination and study.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG.

Be Hopeful, Avoid Worry and See the Amusing Side of Life.

Women more than men are possessed with a dread of growing old, not realizing that maturity has its charms and compensations. We wish young people often had it impressed upon them that they may provide for a happy old age by laying up a reserve of sound health and a store of happy memories as well as by cultivating tastes and resources which will outlast youth. As for those who are already approaching middle age, there is no surer way to grow old prematurely than to dread the future. It is essential, if we wish to keep young, to cultivate that hopeful habit of mind so characteristic of youth—the hope which makes one able to say with Browning, "The best is yet to come," and with Lucy Larcom, "Every year life is larger and deeper and more beautiful in its possibilities." Allied with this attitude of expectancy must be the ability to see the amusing side of life. Worry and vexation over what would better be laughed at result in deepening wrinkles. Above all, if the being us, as they should, a demanding of ourselves, a certain amount of active human sympathy, and faith in Providence, abundantly worth whatever may be the result.

The Heart of a Child.

That which disparages us and quickens our revolt is no less a factor in a child's emotional life. But there is this difference—we have the better opportunity to defend ourselves and to obtain reparation. So there is a certain pathetic pleasure in standing with humanity where its joys, its longings, its embarrassments and its disappointments are simplest and newest, and, perhaps, where impotency is absolute. Give me this most uncommercial, this divine of enterprises for my own life give me a child to be at home with, to be in absolute confidence with! If I cannot refashion my warped, wrinkled and discolored old soul into the unbiased graces and the ethereal purity of the spirit of the child, let me now and again open that little door and shut myself in that little heart, just for the sheer delight of it.—Patterson Du Bois in Success Magazine.

Bad For Tall Hats.

New Year's eve, which is sacred to St. Sylvester, is celebrated in Berlin by the blowing of tin horns, the ringing of bells and all other devices for making a noise. The only horse play indulged in is at the expense of the wearer of the silk tile. Any one on the street is privileged to bring his cane down on the crown of the offending headgear as hard and as often as he can. When the man with the dilapidated hat complains to the police the only consolation he gets is, "It serves you right for wearing it on Sylvester night."

One Kind of Tanning.

"You are anaemic," says the physician after thumping and prodding. "You should practice deep breathing." "Deep breathing?" retorts the patient. "Why, doctor, that is just what I do all the time. I work in a subway cellar sixty feet below the street level."—Judge.

Be honest with yourself, whatever the conditions. Say nothing to others that you do not think and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the things abroad at this hour of the day, insincerity is the most dangerous.—J. A. Froude.
