Legal Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office--whether distinctly to his name or another's or who has subscribed for or not--is responsible for the payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing them, leaving them uncollected for a price, is evidence of intentional fraud.

A Little Daughter

Of a Church of England minister cured of a distressing rash, by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mr. RICHARD BIJKA, the well-known Druggist, 297 performed by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one in particular being that of a little daughter of a Church of England minister. The child was literally covered from head to foot with a red and exceedingly troublesome rash, from which she had suffered for two or three years, in spite of the best medical treatment available. Her father was in great distress about the case, and, at my recommendation, at last began to administer Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which effected a complete cure, much to her relief and her father's delight. I am sure, were he here to-day, he would testify in the strongest terms as to the merits of

POETRY.

Tired Mothers.

A little elbow leans upon your knee-- Your tired knee that has so much to bear;
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly From underneath a tangle of tangled hair.
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch Of warm, moist fingers holding yours so tight;
You do not prize the blessings evermuch You almost are too tired to pray tonight.

But it is blessedness! A year ago I did not see it as I do to-day.
We are so dull and thankless and too slow
To catch the sunshine until it slips away--
And now it seems surprising strange to me That while I bore the badge of motherhood
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly The little child that brought me only grief.

And if one night when you sit down to rest,
You miss the elbow on your tired knee This restless curly head from off your breast,
This lisping tongue that chatters constantly;
If from your own dimpled hands had slipped
And never would nestle in you palm again,
If the white feet into the grave had tripped, I could not blame you for your heartache then.

I wonder that some mothers ever fret At precious darlings, clinging to their gown,
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them frown.
If I could find a little muddy boot Or cap or jacket on my chamber floor;
If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot And hear it patter in my house once more;

If I could mend a broken cart to-day, To-morrow make a kite to reach the sky,
There is no woman in God's world could say
She was more blissfully content than I!
But, ah! the dainty pillow next my own
I've never mended by a shining beam My singing birdling from its nest has flown,
The little boy I used to kiss is--dead.

SELECT STORY.

A Life for a Love.

BY L. F. MEADE.

CHAPTER II.--Continued.
"You little goose," said Gerald. He shook himself as if he were half in a dread, and looked fondly down into Lilias' pretty dimpled, excitable face.
"Well, girls, are the trunks packed, and have you put in plenty of finery?
I promise you Mr. Paget will give a dinner party every night--you'll want heaps of fine clothes while you stay at Queen's Gate."

Marjory began to count on her fingers.
"We arrive on Wednesday," she said. "On Wednesday evening, discuss number one, we wear our white Indian muslins, with the Liberty rashes, and flowers brought up from the dear old garden. Thursday evening, dinner number two, and evening of wedding day, our bridesmaid's torgery must suit; Friday, dinner number three, those blue nun's veiling dresses will appear and charm the eyes. That's all. Three dresses for three dinners.
For it's home, sweet home again on Saturday--isn't it, Lilias?" "Of course," said Lilias. "That is, I suppose so," she added, glancing at her brother.

"Valentine wanted to know if you would stay in town for a week or ten days, and try to cheer up her father," said Gerald. "Mr. Paget and Valentine have scarcely been parted for a single day since she was born. Valentine is quite in a state at having to leave him for a month, and she thinks two bright little girls like you may comfort him somewhat."

"But we have our own father to see to," posted Marjory. "And Sunday school, and their practicing, and the library books--"
"And I don't see how Valentine can mind leaving her father--if he were the very dearest father in the world-- when she goes away with you," interrupted Lilias.
Gerald sighed, just the faintest shadow of an impatient sigh, accompanied by the slightest shrug of his shoulders.
"Augusta can give out the library books," he said. "Miss Queen can manage the choir. I will ask Jones to take your class, Lilias, and Miss Peters can manage yours with her own, Marjory. As to the actor, what is the use of having five young daughters, if they cannot be made available for once in a way? And here they come, and there's the governess in the midst of them. He doesn't look as if he were likely to taste the sweets of solitude, eh, Marjory?"

Not at that moment, certainly, for a girl hung on each arm, and a smaller girl sat on each square shoulder, while a fifth shouted and raced, now in front, now behind, peering this moving pyramid of human beings with flowers, and screaming ever more shrilly than her sisters, with eager exclamation and bubbling laughter.

"There, Gerry," exclaimed Augusta.
She was the tallest of the party with a great stretch of stockings legs, and a decided scarcity of skirts. She flew at her brother, flung her arms around his neck and kissed him rap-tulously.
"You darling old Gerry--don't we all just hate and detest that horrible Valentine Paget?"
"Hush, Gussie," responded Gerald, in his quiet voice. "You don't know Valentine, and you pain me when you talk of her in that senseless fashion.
Here, have a race with your big brother to the other end of the garden. Girls," turning to his elder sisters--"seriously speaking I should like you to spend about a fortnight with the Pagets, and had you not better go and pack, for we must catch the eleven o'clock train to-morrow morning. Now, Gussie--one, two, three, and away!"

Two pairs of long legs, each working hard to come off victorious in the race, flew past the group--the rector and the little girls cheered and shouted--Marjory and Lilias, laughing at the sight, turned slowly and went into the house; Gerald won the race by a foot or two, and Gussie flung herself panting and laughing on the grass at the other end of the long walk.
"Well done, Augusta," said her brother. "You study athletics to a purpose. Now, Gussie, can't you manage to give away the library books on Sunday?"

"I? You don't mean it?" said Augusta. Her black eyes sparkled. she recovered her breath, and the full dignity of her five feet five and a-half of growth on the instant. "Am I to give away the library books, Gerry?"
"Yes, I want Lilias to stay in London for a few days longer than she intended."

"And Marjory too?"
"Of course. The girls would not like to be parted."
"Galupations! Won't I have a time of it all round! Won't I give old Peters a novel instead of his favorite Sunday magazines? And won't I smuggle Pauley's Evidence of Christ, famously into the hand of Alice Jones, the dressmaker. She says the only books she cares for are Wilkie Collins' 'Woman in White' and the 'Dead Secret,' so she'll have a lively time of it with the Evidence. Then there's 'Baker's Analogy,' it isn't in the parish library, but I'll borrow it for once from Rhoda Fleming. Oh, what fun, what fun. I won't take a single story-book with me, except the 'Woman in White', for Peters. He says novels are 'rank poison,' so he shall have his dose."
"Now look here, Gussie," said Gerald, taking his sister's two hands in his, and holding them tight--"you've got to please me about the library books, and not to play pranks, and make things disagreeable for Lilias when she comes back. You're thirteen now, and a big girl, and you ought to act like one. You're to make things comfortable for the dear old peter while we are all away, and you'll do it if you care for me, Gussie."

"Care for you!" echoed Augusta.
"I love you, Gerry. I love you, and I hate--"
"No, don't say that," said Gerald, putting his hand on the girl's mouth.
Gussie looked droll and submissive.
"It is so funny," she exclaimed at length.
"You can explain that as we walk back to the house," responded her brother.
"Why, Gerry, to see you so frightfully in love! You are, aren't you?
You have all the symptoms--oh, before "Love Valentine," responded Gerald.

"That is a subject I cannot discuss with you, Augusta. When you know her you will love her too. I am going to bring her here in the autumn, and then I shall want you all to be good to her, and to let her feel that she has a great number of real sisters at Jewsbury-on-the-Wold, who will be good to her if she needs them, by-and-bye."

"As if she ever could need us," responded Gussie. "Shall I have you?
Yes, I'll do my best about the books-- good-night, Gerald. Good-night, dear old darling king. Good-night, dear Miss Queen. Coming, Miss Queen, coming!
Good-night, old Gerry. My love to that Val of yours. Oh, what a nuisance it is to have ever to go to bed."

Gussie's long legs soon bore her out of sight, and Gerald stepped into the silent and now empty study. To an initiated eye this room bore one or two marks of having lately witnessed a mental storm. Close to the rector's leather armchair lay a pile of carefully torn-up papers--the family Bible, which usually occupied a place of honor on his desk, had been pushed ruthlessly on one side, and a valuable work on theology lay wide open and face down wards on the floor. Otherwise the room was in perfect order--the only absolutely neat apartment in the large old house. Not the most daring of all the young Wyndhams would disturb a volume here, or play any wild pranks in the sacred precincts of the rector's study. As Gerald now entered the room and saw these signs of mental disquiet round Mr. Wyndham's chair, the pleasant and somewhat cheerful look left his face, his eyes grew dark, earnest and full of trouble, and flinging himself on the sofa, he shaded them with his white long fingers. There was an old painting of a lady over the mantel-piece, and this lady had Gerald's face. From her he inherited those peculiar and sensitive eyes, those somewhat hollow cheeks, and that noble and broad white brow. From her, too, came the lips which were curved and beautiful, and yet a little, a little wanting in firmness. In Mrs. Wyndham the expressive mouth only added the floral touch of womanliness to a beautiful face. In her son it would have revealed, could it have been seen, a nature which might be led astray from the strictest paths of honor.

Wyndham sat motionless for a few moments, then springing to his feet, he paced restlessly up and down the empty study.
"Everything is fixed and settled now," he said, under his breath. "I'm not the first fellow who has sold himself for the sake of a year's happiness. If my mother were alive, though, I couldn't have done it, no, not even for Valentine. Poor mother! She felt sure I'd have taken Holy Orders, and worked on here with the governor in this sleepy little corner of the world.
It's a blessing she can't be hurt by anything now, and as to the governor, he has seven girls to comfort him. No if I'm sorry for anyone it's Lilias, but the thing's done now. The day after to-morrow Val will be mine. A whole year! My God, how short it is. My God, save and pity me, for afterwards comes hell."

CHAPTER III.

The human face has been often spoken of as an index of the mind.
There are people who boldly declare that they know a man by the height of his forehead, by the set of his eyes, by the shape of his head, and by the general expression of his countenance.
Whether this rule is true or not, it certainly has its exceptions. As far as outward expression goes some minds are outward expression goes some minds remain locked, and Satan himself can now and then appear transformed as an angel of light.

Mortimer Paget, Esq., the head and now sole representative of the once great ship-breaking firm of Paget Brothers, was one of the handsomest and most striking-looking men in the city.
On more than one occasion sculptors of renown had asked to be permitted to take a cast of his head to represent Humility, Benevolence, Integrity, or some other cardinal virtue. He had a high forehead, calm velvety brown eyes, perfectly even and classical features, and firm lips with a sweet expression. His lips were perfectly hidden by his silvery moustache, and the shape of his chin was not discernible, owing to his long flowing beard. But had the beard and moustache both been removed, no fault could have been found with the features now hidden-- they were firmly and well-moulded.

On this beautiful face no trace of a sinister cast lurked.

Mortimer Paget in his business transactions was the soul of honor.
No man in the city was more looked up to than he. He was very shrewd with regard to all money matters, but he was also generous and kind. The old servants belonging to the firm never failed to leave him; when they died off he pensioned their widows and provided for their orphan's. He was a religious man, of the evangelical type, and he conducted his household in every way from a religious point of view. Family prayers were held night and morning in the great house in Queen's Gate, and all the servants were expected each and all to attend church twice on Sundays. Mr. Paget had found a church where the ritual was sufficiently low to please his religious views. To this church he went himself twice on Sundays, invariably accompanied by a tall girl, richly dressed, who clung to his side and read out of the same book with him, singing when he sang, and very often slipping her little hand into his, and closing her bright eyes which he napped unconsciously during the prayer sermons.

This girl was his only child, and while he professed to be actuated by the purest love for both God and his fellow creatures, the one being for whom his heart really beat warmly, the one being for whom he could gladly have sacrificed himself was this solitary girl.

Valentine's mother had died at her birth, and since that day Valentine, and her father had literally never been parted. She was his shadow, like him in appearance, and as far as those who knew her could guess like him in character.

The house in Queen's Gate was full of all the accompaniments of wealth.
It was richly and splendidly furnished; the drawing-rooms were spacious, the reception-rooms were all large. Valentine had her own boudoir, her own special school room, her own bedroom and dressing-room. Her father had provided a suite of rooms for her, each communicating with the other, but except that she tossed off her handsome dresses in the dressing room, and submitted at intervals during the day with an unwilling grace to the services of her maid, and except that she laid her bright little curling head each evening on the softest of down-pillows, Valentine's suite of rooms saw very little of their young mistress.

There was an old library in the back part of the house--an essentially dull room, with windows fitted with painted glass, and shelves lined with books, most of them in tarnished and worn-out bindings, where Mr. Paget sat whenever he was at home, and where in consequence Valentine was to be found. Her sunny head, with its golden wavy hair, made a bright spot in the old room. She was fond of perching herself on the top of the stepladder, and so seated burrowing eagerly into the contents of some dusty old volume. She devoured the novels of Smollett and Fielding, and many other books which were supposed not to be at all good for her, in this fashion-- they did her no harm, the bad part falling away, and not touching her, for her nature was very pure and bright, and although she saw many shades of life in one way or another, and with all her expensive education, was allowed to grow up in a somewhat wild fashion, and according to her own sweet will, yet she was a perfectly innocent and unsuspecting creature.

When she was seventeen, Mr. Paget told her that he was going to inaugurate a new state of things.

"You must go into society, Val," he said. "In these days the daughters of city men of old standing like myself are received everywhere. I will get your mother's third cousin, Lady Prince, to present you at the next Drawing-room, and then you must go the usual round, I suppose. We must get some lady to come here to chaperon you, and you will go out to balls and assemblies, and during the London season turn night into day."

Val was seated on the third rung of the step-ladder when her father made this announcement. She sprang lightly from her perch now, and ran to his side.

"I won't go anywhere without you, dad; so that's settled. Poor old man!
--dear old man!"
She put her arms round his neck, and his white moustache and beard swept across her soft, peach-like cheek.

"But I hate going out in the evening, Val. I'm getting an old man--sixty next birthday, my dear--and I work hard all day. There's no place so sweet to me in the evening as this warm, eaten, old armchair--I should find myself lost in a crowd. Time was when I was the gayest of the gay.
People used to speak of me as the life and soul of every party I went to, but that time is over for me, Val; for you it is beginning."

"You are mistaken, father. I perch myself on the arm of this wretched, worm-eaten, old chair, and stay here with you, or I go into society with you. It's all the same to me--you can please yourself."

"Don't you know that you are a very saucy lass, miss?"
"Am I? I really don't care--I go with you, or I stay with you--that's always been the way, you understand.
You and I are to be always together-- all our lives. You quite see what I mean?"
"Yes, my darling. But some day you will have a husband, Val. I want you to marry, and have a good husband, child; and then we'll see if your old father still comes first."

Typhoid Fever.

The After Effects of the Disease often More Serious and Fatal than Typhoid itself.

HEMORRHOIC, Ont., Feb. 4--Typhoid fever is a disease to be dreaded because of its dangerous nature as well as for the fact that some disreputable results usually supervene when the patient has escaped from the clutches of the disease.
Harvey H. Nef, of this place, was convalescing after an attack of typhoid when he was prostrated by a severe form of kidney disease. He was bedridden for weeks, and no medicine that he took was of any avail. But like a light in the darkness, came the news of what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for other victims of kidney disease. Five boxes of the pills put Mr. Nef on his feet again, thoroughly cured.

Girl--I told Jack we must be strangers henceforth.

Another Girl--Did he fall on his knees and implore forgiveness?

Girl--Not he. He said 'very well,' and then tried to flirt with me.

Don't let a cold 'take its course.'
Hurry it out of your system by the aid of Hawker's Balsam.

Anæmic Women

with pale or sallow complexion or suffering from skin eruption or scrofulous blood, will find quick relief in Scott's Emulsion. All of the stages of Emaciation, and general decline of health, are speedily cured.

Scott's Emulsion

takes away the pale, haggard look that comes with General Debility.
It enriches the blood, stimulates

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 8, 1895.

Provincial Parliament.
The Local Legislature of Nova Scotia met on Thursday last week. The Lieutenant Governor's speech refers to the visit of the Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen—speaks of the comparative prosperity of our people—of the increased activity in the coal industry—of railway construction in Cape Breton and on the South Shore—of improvement in road-making through the use of machinery. The Plebiscite is referred to in connection with the fact that the decision of the Supreme Court takes the prohibition of the traffic in intoxicants out of the hands of provincial governments. A bill to deal with coroners and inquests is promised. Mr. F. A. Lawrence, of Colchester, was elected speaker. The address in reply to the speech was moved by Mr. Sinclair, of Guysboro, and seconded by Mr. H. S. Wickwire. Both speeches are highly spoken of.

The Star Course.
The lecture committee of the Acadia Athenaeum Society desire to announce that they have secured J. Florin Bland for the second lecture in the Star Course. The committee have been disappointed in their efforts to get a Liberal politician but at present have a practical promise from one of the most noted men of the party to lecture at Wolfville at no very distant date.
Owing to the extension of the vacation the lecture by Mr. Robinson was necessarily postponed and since that time they have been unable to secure a new date from him.
In securing the services of Mr. Bland the committee feel assured that the popularity and excellence of the course will be maintained.
J. P. Bland is a graduate of Harvard University with distinguished and exceptional honors. Two years ago he completed a brilliantly successful lecture tour throughout England and since his return to America has been successful wherever he appears.
During his English tour he received many flattering testimonials from the press, a few of which we append.
"Mr Bland's work is simply marvellous."—Loughborough Herald, Eng.
"Pleasing and popular."—London Engineer, Eng.
"Very able and entertaining."—Dublin Express, Ire.
He has also been well and favorably received on this side.
"One of the most popular orators on the platform."—Framingham Tribune, Mass.
"A rare oratorical treat."—Boston Globe.
The subject chosen for the evening here will be "Happy Homes" which is one of Mr. Bland's best.
The date of the lecture is February nineteenth.

Mayor Bigelow's Manifesto.
To the Ratepayers of the Town of Wolfville, Ladies and Gentlemen,—While thanking you for the unanimous election to the office of Mayor, I wish to say that if I were seeking honors, there is none I would more highly value than this tribute from my native town, and if I can advance your public interests I shall endeavor to do so.
Wolfville is a progressive town and possesses advantages superior to any other for a residence, particularly for families of moderate income; and if the public affairs are judiciously managed should double in population and taxable value within the next ten years. While we have most of the public requirements for a thriving town, all will admit that our roads are the worst in the County and a disgrace to us, and must be immediately improved. How to do this without materially increasing our taxation is a problem which I ask you to help me solve. As you are aware the small amount at the disposal of the council for road improvement is barely sufficient for ordinary repairs and can not be increased without making our annual tax too severe; and as much as I am opposed to any increase of our bonded indebtedness I see no other way of getting a suitable road. I have carefully considered the subject and conclude that for $1,000 judiciously expended, we can have a good main road the whole length of the town and improve the other roads. Four thousand tons of the gravel deposit at Greenwich, which has been proved as good as broken stone, can be put on the road by tender at 25 cents per ton and with suitable drainage will make a good road. Or if the more expensive and tedious method of haying a stone crusher and using broken stone is preferred let that be adopted at once. But we must have a good road immediately, and by calling a public meeting and acting promptly we can get an Act during this session of the Assembly to issue bonds for $1,000, and have a good road within six months. This will cost less than $50 per year or less than 20 cents average for each ratepayer and surely a good road is cheap at that price. This is the business of the ratepayers and if you neglect to act you must not blame your Council for bad roads.
I hope you will see the necessity for prompt action and call a meeting at once.
Yours sincerely,
J. W. BIGELOW,
Wolfville, Feb. 1895.

How to Educate the Farmer's Boy.

PAPER READ BEFORE THE N. S. F. G. A. AT THE ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT WOLFVILLE, JAN. 28, 29, AND 30, BY W. C. ARCHIBALD.
I was never more conscious of my inability to write a paper of value with so little time at my disposal. I ask your kind indulgence to-night. In talks with representative men in the professions, mechanical and commercial trades, I gather that the vacancies are promptly filled—often times to an over-crowding—while few of these or their sons ever become Agriculturists. The question then comes with weighty import to us, Amid what surroundings and material inducements shall we lead our boys? The period of rapid development and well rounding of knowledge is probably during the first seven years of his existence. With a lively interest born of native freedom with absorbing delight, a box of blocks is arranged, disarranged and rearranged with a facility and growth in knowledge, in his ever enlarging wonderland.
"They built their castles of dissolving sand To watch them overflowed. Or following up And flying the white breaker: Daily left their little footprints daily Washed away." Here there is no division of energy. The rounding out of accurate and careful knowledge is best obtained when objects awaken thought, quicken the perceptions and accelerate the movements. Seeing, hearing, tasting, touching, smelling, perceiving, comparing, reasoning, remembering, should be co-educative qualities to produce the ideal utilitarian man. Could our boys be taken to the soils, the grasses, the plants, and the each process of change in their whole life pointed out and observed in close connection with the theories explained;—the enlarging wonderland would be continued and preserved into manhood years. The essential qualities of sturdy growth with pleasant memories are found in successful efforts with new and enlarging powers. The fruit grower or farmer has among all men the opportunities for assisting the schools in the unfoldment of these nature hidden wonders.
Knowledge of soils with their strata depths and uses—the helpers in ice, frost and snow, rains, springs and moisture. The effects of heat and shade on and in the earth, the capacity of soil for products under different methods of culture are easy of illustration on the farm, if we but resolutely expose the work. Suppose we set apart a small plot of ground after consulting with the boy as to the best crops for us to grow in connection with his studies of the year. Deepen his interest by adding practical suggestions and give up share with him the profits of the crop. Encourage economy in work, skill in application, correct grading of crops and their sales on the crops of the market according to grade.
Agriculture as a profession comprises a range of studies relating to itself sufficiently broad and deep to replenish and rest on the highest rounds the men and women in the various trades and professions. The trade relations of each are of the closest kind. It is greatly to be desired, when the topmost rounds are reached by our sons, the pleasant memories of the home and of the farmers life are still present and an eager willingness found remaining, to assist in removing the disabilities of our class in regard to taxation, revenue tariff or other questions affecting our business standing. We can afford to give the boys a free choice of life's work reared in the pleasant activities of farm life. The brainy boy farmers will seek the higher education for its own sake to be obtained in the technical schools and colleges where wisdom, skill and strength will be stored to gather wealth. Money, inclination or taste and respectability with money again added determines largely the boy's vocation. The farmers must receive larger profits from the farm. This will be brought about by applied economy in its management, prevention of waste, skillful labor, and unity in regulation of market prices.
There is money in fruit growing as most of us well know,—but the profits will be increased by applied knowledge gained by intimate acquaintance with the nature and habits of the trees; as well as how, when and where to sell our fruits as business men. We cannot get too close to the lives of our trees. The trees are individual, no two of them alike although the resemblance is close. Yet their marked individualities supply us with reasons for understanding the laws of their being and practical usefulness to ourselves. Let love, justice, and equality supremely govern our boys on the farm. Annihilate drudgery in work, and weave in the rich delights to be found in honest toil with business profits. Visit with your sons the best farms and orchards and minutely enquire how success has been reached. Use team work always whenever possible.
Let the areas set apart be sufficiently large to ensure returns fairly commensurate with the hopes and ambitions and cheerfully accord the profits to him—Shorten the hours of the day's work and give room for rest and recreation. Again I repeat make business men of your boys on the farm in a wide knowledge of every market available and expert method in reaching it. While you may have excellent land, use good varieties and care for the orchard in a proper manner, giving utmost care to its sorting and packing and always use neat and clean packages. The effect of your reputation and demand for you fruit will influence the boys. Education should be well laid in a full and extensive knowledge of all that relates to Agriculture. How plants live and grow or the Evolution of plants with the origin of varieties or the History of Soils; the Theory of Tillage and yield of crops, etc. Youth is the time to acquire familiar knowledge of details near and remote. A minute learning of that nearest in nature is potent for a broad usefulness whether he remains on the farm or enters the trades or professions. Further teaching they nothing valuable is ever obtained but by honest labor. Education on the farm out of the school is equally important and potential in the work of after life. The farmer is daily brought in contact with nature everywhere and that "nature has her power, her beauty, her spring in God." "The drip of the rain and the hum of the bee have music for you, for they are working for you. The lowing of the herd and the neighing of the steed have charms for you." Look outward and upward with the best powers of your being and raise to a higher level with promise of greater wealth a noble work for unrighteous men. I cannot close this paper without giving significance to the work of the Horticultural School now in the second year of its existence—under a progressive competent teacher. Prof. Faville is blending theory with practice. Send your sons and daughters to the school. It offers a good all-round practical education, Unshakable prejudices and treat the farm and farmer as their true worth demands.

Mrs. Kinsman, wife of Samuel Kinsman, Esq., of Canada, died very suddenly on Saturday night last. She awoke feeling unwell, her husband arose, made a fire and administered remedies which it was hoped would bring relief. She continued to grow weaker, he ran to the residence of the nearest neighbor. She died before his return. Mrs. Kinsman was about 70 years of age.

The D. A. Ry. has placed an order with Rhoads, Curry & Co., of Amherst, for thirteen latest pattern box cars.

All the members of the W. C. T. U. are particularly requested to be present at their annual business meeting on Thursday, Feb. 14th.

Farmer owning hoghouse have been taking advantage of the cold snap this week to fill them up, and teams may be seen every day actively engaged in this service.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. J. P. Bigelow in this issue. Mr. Bigelow has the County agency for three articles which farmers will find to their advantage to have a look at.

The grocers of the town have decided to join in the early closing movement and beginning next week their stores will be closed on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings at 6 o'clock.

We understand that the Wolfville hockey team have been made an advantageous offer to go to St. John, and play two matches with teams in the foggy city. They will probably accept.

Among the knights of the grip who have been in Wolfville this week were Messrs. Jas. R. Boardman, Toronto, F. S. Parles, Moncton, A. W. Whitney, Berlin, Ont., and H. H. Sutherland, St. John, N. B.

The residents of Western Kings and Eastern Annapolis, are petitioning the Dominion Atlantic railway asking for an early morning train to leave Middleton for Halifax in the morning and returning in the evening.

Miss Dennis Abbott entertained about twenty of her friends on Saturday evening last. Music, games and refreshments were provided, and the party, which broke up shortly before midnight, was in every way a very pleasant affair.

Mr. Wesley Jacques, brakeman on the west-bound freight train, met with a painful accident at this station yesterday. He was on top of a car and in some manner tripped and fell heavily on the platform, injuring his arm badly and giving him a general shaking up.

Beef Iron and Wine at 50c. and 75c. per bottle. Drugstore.

The hockey match on Saturday evening last between the Hantsport team and a mixed team from the town and college resulted in a victory for the home team, the score standing 7 to 3. Owing to the very disagreeable state of the weather and the small attendance of spectators was small. Some parts of the game was quite exciting and at times the play was good. The visitors were evidently out-matched, however, from the start.

The carnival which was to have taken place in Aberdeen Rink on Wednesday evening was postponed until Wednesday of next week on account of the stormy condition of the weather. Extensive preparations are being made and a good time will be doubt be had. The medals which are to be given for the best gentleman's and lady's costumes have been on exhibition in the window at Mr. J. F. Herbin's store, and have been much admired.

Local and Provincial.

Dr. Jones led the missionary meeting at the Baptist church Sunday evening. Papers were read by Messrs. S. R. McCurdy, M. A. McLean, and J. L. Miner.

Prof. Tufts is to lecture in the Baptist church next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the R. Y. P. U., on "The Revelation, or the Struggle for Civil Freedom."

The annual roll-call of the Baptist church of this town, which was to have been held on last evening, has been postponed indefinitely, on account of the bad storm and other circumstances.

Rev. W. B. Hinson, who when pastor at Moncton, lectured at Acadia, has received a call from British Columbia which he is considering. His present charge is in Olivet Baptist church, Moncton.

On Sunday, Feb. 10th, educational services will be held in the Methodist church. In the evening Rev. J. L. Dawson, B. A., of Windsor, will preach. The choir will be assisted by an orchestra at both the morning and evening services.

The town council met on Tuesday evening, when the new Mayor and Councilors were sworn into office. The council then adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening next. To-night Mayor Bigelow entertains the council at his residence.

Mr. Chas. Eastwood, proprietor of the Wolfville Hotel, died at his home on Saturday morning last, the result of a strain received while loading ice on the previous Thursday. He leaves a widow and a large family. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, the remains being interred in the Church of England cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. K. C. Hind.

Mr. J. S. Heals met with a severe accident in the rink last Friday evening. After the skaters were rang off he and a number of others were racing, when, either by colliding with another skater or being unable to turn the corner, he was thrown with great force against the railing and rendered insensible, in which condition he remained for half an hour. He was carried home and Dr. DeWitt attended to the injuries. We are glad to know that he is now able to be around again.

Miss Annie Johnson, daughter of Mrs. G. L. Johnson, of this town, died on Tuesday night, after a short illness. A week ago she was well as usual. The funeral takes place to-day.

The following is the result of the election for councillors on Tuesday. The vote was smaller than it would have been had the day been fine.

F. J. Foster, 77; R. E. Harris, 61; E. L. Collins, 56; Prof. Wortman, 49; B. H. Armstrong, 44; J. F. Herbin, 35.

We regret to be called upon to record this week the death of Mr. Leonard Johnson, of this place, which occurred on Sunday evening. Mr. Johnson was one of our most respected citizens and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He had been in failing health for some time. The funeral, delayed on account of the storm, took place yesterday.

Mrs. Mary L. T. Witter, of Berwick, died a few days ago at the residence of her son-in-law, Rev. F. D. Crawley, White Plains, New York. She was a lady highly esteemed wherever known. She wrote a number of books and had another, on The Angels, about ready for the press. Mrs. Witter visited Wolfville about a year ago, when she was the guest of Mr. Burpee Witter.

Miss May Chipman, daughter of William A. Chipman, of Bridgetown, died at Wolfville, where the family is residing for the winter, on Sunday last. The funeral took place at Bridgetown on Tuesday. A short service was held at Mr. Chipman's residence, in Wolfville, conducted by Rev. Dr. Higgins, who spoke very fittingly of the estimable character of the deceased, of the high regard in which she was held at the Seminary and in the Baptist church in Wolfville. The family of Mr. Chipman will have the sympathy of very many friends in their affliction.

Sheffield's Mills.

A little stir is created in our quiet village by the preparation to start the saw-mill, and if it appears count for anything Mr. Sandford will have a good spring work sawing. Every day logs are being drawn in quantities to be sawn into staves and heading.

There was a very heavy hail here Sunday night and Monday, and Saturday afternoon was very rough indeed. The snow blew terribly for a while.

The Division had Miss Steadman to give a public lecture here. Although the night was rainy there was a good attendance who enjoyed the lecture very much.

The Sunday school is well sustained this winter. The influences of the meetings that have been held extended to the Sunday school.

The Methodists of Canning enjoyed meeting in their own church on Sunday morning. The vestry stone is ready for use. It has been cold overhead, some slight changes have been made and the whole very neatly painted. The general effect is very pleasing. They have not decided when the audience room will be repaired. The church feel very grateful to the Baptist brethren who so kindly offered their building during the time of repairing.

Rev. J. M. Fisher will give his lecture on J. Greenleaf Whittier on Tuesday evening, 6th inst.

PAIN'S CELERY COMPOUND USED IN THE FROZEN REGIONS.

Mr James W. Davidson, who went with Lieut. Peary to the Arctic regions...

"Yes, indeed, I have not only heard of Peary's Celery Compound, but have used it, and have every reason to remember it.

"When the ship Falcon left New York on her trip northward it had, among the stores, several cases of Peary's Celery Compound.

"The record of our perilous trip to Camp Anniversary is too well known to need repetition.

"When the long night of six months came on and we were in darkness, we found that the Celery Compound was really the life-saver.

"I have used Peary's Celery Compound for a dozen years as a person is liable to have at any time, and especially in this desolate country.

Motherhood—Its Responsibilities.

The trite and familiar quotation "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world," contains a truth far-reaching and significant.

In the earliest years of the child's life, the mother stands in God's place, receiving from it the love and reverence that in later years are the soul's tribute.

Wherein does the strength of our baby religion consist? Is it that God commands men to be true, pure, loving, good?

But beside the first duty of the mother to let her own life speak to the child of all that is true and good, there are other responsibilities that she well may ponder.

At what time does the mother begin to influence her child? Of hereditary and prenatal influences we cannot here speak for a subject so broad, and so clearly understood.
