CHAPTER XXII
 DAYS OF ANGUISH.

"And you did not breathe the subject to him?" asked Mr. Reeves.
 "No," said Reginald Dartmouth. "I hoped to find him better in the morning; for, although I knew he was ill, I had no idea the end was so near at hand."

The lawyer nodded.
 "I sent for the doctor at once—once," continued the captain, repeating the last words as though he was anxious to impress them upon the lawyer's mind. "I sent for Mr. Toddy at once, and I can not be too thankful that I did so."

"Just so," said Mr. Reeves. "I believe you were in the room at the time he died?"

"I was," replied the captain, with a sigh. "But I regret I was quite unconscious of his last moments—I was asleep; yes, asleep," as the lawyer half raised his eyebrows. "No one can blame me half as much as I blame myself; but I was worn out. I had scarcely been out of the saddle for the last three days. The room was hot, the light low, and unconsciously I dropped off."

He used almost the same words, the same tone of self-reproach also, that he had done in telling the doctor, and like him, the lawyer, instead of blame, felt inclined to bestow some pity upon the man who had ridden for three days in search of a runaway girl, and returned in time only for his uncle's death.

"You are not to blame, not in the slightest," said the lawyer. "How did you awake?"

"I awoke with his last scream ringing in my ears, and, startled by the cry, jumped up so hurriedly as to knock over the candle—the only light burning in the room. By the time I had reached the door Mrs. Lucas and Mr. Toddy were outside with a candle. It was not until the doctor went up to the bed and examined him that I knew that my uncle was dead."

"Ay, ay!" said the lawyer, as he finished.

And Reginald Dartmouth knew by the tone of the monosyllables that the man of law had swallowed his plausible story as readily and as

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

"You are aware that the Dale is not content?"

"No," said the captain, looking rather surprised. "To tell you the truth, I never felt interest enough to inquire or think about it. You see, there was always my cousin between me and it, and lately Miss Darrell added to the barrier."

The lawyer nodded.
 "Just so," he said. "I understand. Well, Captain Dartmouth, the Dale is not content. The squire was perfectly free to will it to whom he would."

"Indeed!" said the captain, as if the news were startlingly strange to him.

"Yes," said Mr. Reeves. "And I think I have Squire Darrell's last will here, beneath my hand."

And he tapped the packet of papers with his long, claw-like forefinger.

"You mean the paper that was found under the pillow?" said the captain.

"I do," said the lawyer. "I have ascertained from Mrs. Lucas that two days before his death, he had ink, pen, and paper taken to his room and spent the whole day in writing. In the evening Mrs. Lucas and Simmons, the butler, signed some paper—the will, no doubt. What its contents are we shall learn shortly. I presume you will have it read on the day of the funeral."

Reginald Dartmouth shrugged his shoulders languidly, almost indifferently.

"That rests with you entirely," he replied. "The legal matters are in your hands; and, for my own peace of mind, I wish I could decline all the other matters as decisively; not that I would be remiss in anything due to my poor uncle, for we were once dear, good friends, but—you understand me, Mr. Reeves?—when the heir returns he may think I have sinned either in omission or commission."

The lawyer did not reply for an instant; then, suddenly, he said:

"You have no idea what the purport of this document is?"

He lifted the will again, looking sharply from the corners of his eyes.

Reginald Dartmouth shook his head.

"I may have an idea," he said; "but as to knowledge, absolute knowledge, I have none."

"Ahem!" said the lawyer. "And may I ask what your idea may be?"

"My idea is that the whole of the property is left to my cousin, Hugh Darrell; or—but the chance is very slight—that it is willed to Miss Grace Darrell."

"Ah!" said Mr. Reeves; "then we must go to work at once—that is, if your idea is likely to be the right one."

"I fully believe it to be," said the captain, wearily, and with his most truthful air. "What do you mean to do?"

"Advertise in some of the foreign newspapers for Mr. Hugh Darrell and Miss Grace Darrell, with full descriptions of their appearance, and offering a large reward for information."

"Captain Dartmouth lowered his eyes and a shade, too slight to be seen even by the quick eyes of the legal practitioner crossed his brow."

"The very thing I was going to propose," he said. "It ought to be done at once."

"Certainly," said the lawyer. "I was just considering whom I could fix on to insert the advertisements."

Reginald Dartmouth thought a moment.

"I am going up to town," he said. "I must go to see about the funeral and my own affairs. Perhaps I could do that."

"If you could it would be as well," said the unsuspecting Mr. Reeves. "It should be done at once."

"I am going up by the afternoon coach," said Reginald Dartmouth.

"Then I will draw up the advertisements now," and he walked to the bureau. "Perhaps you will correct me if I err in the descriptions."

The captain stood by and helped the lawyer to draw up the advertisements, then placed them in his pocket-book.

"I will see to these immediately I reach London," he said, and Mr. Reeves left the room.

Had he looked back as he passed through the doorway he would have seen the scornful smile upon the handsome captain's face, and felt rather inclined to undertake the in-

THIS WOMAN'S MISERY

Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Remarkable Recovery of Mrs. Church.

Smiths Falls, Ont.—"I suffered with falling of my organs, pains around my heart and in bowels and down my legs, neuralgia in my face and head, and that terrible sinking feeling. I felt that I could not live and would fix my home in order every night so there would be no trouble if I dropped off in the night. My husband went to the druggist to get the best remedy he had and he gave him Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and felt a lot better. I will always recommend the Vegetable Compound, and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. O. CHURCH, Box 845, Smiths Falls, Ont.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, lacerations, inflammation, ulcerations, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ailments.

If there are any complications about which you need advice write in confidence to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

CHAPTER XXV.
 "A COOL HAND."

"For who can know that chances, soon or late, are drifting onward, slowly, surely, to his gate?"

The season was reaching its climax, and London was crowded.

The theaters were in full swing, with fresh novelties and fresh stars, the shop-keepers were at the zenith of their glory and profit, and the fashionable parts of the metropolis, night and day, presented one complete picture of luxury and extravagance.

Fullest of all—fuller even than the theaters and the fashionable churches—was the Row.

Strings of splendid cattle, fretted and fumed on the soft tarroad, strings of exquisitely dressed loungers walked on the foot-paths and leaned languidly on the rails.

Every now and then some celebrity, either of the church, state, or bar passed by the knot of gossiping spectators. Hats would fly off and comments would fall thick and fast.

"There goes Claytons, the premier. Looks well and not overtagged with all his hard work. Ah, here's my lady again! Who's that with her? Not Willie Taunton, surely? Poor fellow, she'll ruin him in a month! And here comes Bortoley, the head of the Opposition. Looks younger than ever. What a speech that was of his the other night! I always wonder that the other fellows who are being sacrificed don't get up and knock him down. Who's this—this tall fellow mounted on that thorough-bred chestnut? Captain Dartmouth? Don't know him. Oh, yes, I remember! Member of the Hermit, isn't he? Just come in for a haul of money from his uncle, a country squire down Midlands somewhere. Oh, yes; I remember! Well, he looks harder and more marbly than ever. What a face it is! Handsomer than the Sphinx, perhaps, but not a bit easier to read. That's Charlie Anderson with him. Looks half dead, and no wonder; there isn't a faster-going man in town. This is the second fortune he has run through—if he lives to finish it up, that is. He and the captain are fast friends. Hush; here they come!"

And the longer nodded cordially to the two men he had been criticizing so candidly.

As the idler had said, the captain looked more impenetrable and immovable than ever; and his companion, Charlie Anderson, looked haggard and weary. The calm face of the captain was in marked contrast to the pale, anxious, half-excited one of the other; and the two did not pass unnoticed even by those who did not know them.

"This is very slow," said the young baronet. "That chest-nut of yours is fretting himself to death, Dartmouth. Let us out of here," and he turned his horse toward the gate.

"Very well," replied the captain's smooth, well-regulated tones. "I am as tired of it as yourself, mon bon ami. And now," as the horses broke into a trot, "tell me the news. I am very nearly in the position of the savage chief who arrived this morning—I know nothing and nobody."

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I rise to support the measure for Woman Suffrage. From the cradle to the grave they exercise the most beneficent influence on our lives. In our childhood they take the place of Divine Providence. In our manhood, as sweethearts and wives, they sweeten life and give us a foretaste of heaven. Always they exert a purifying and refining influence on coarser-fibred man.

In the domestic realm for centuries their power has been supreme. Their influence in the home has made all men better, and made others almost superman in the best sense. We could not have carried the great war to a successful issue without them. In substituting for men in offices and public utilities they did wonders. In supplying comforts to our harried soldiers they worked miracles. In the hospitals, at the relieving stations, and on the battlefield, they did the work of angels from Heaven. In soothing the wounds of a war-weary bleeding world their services, now and in the future, are indispensable. Man alone, unaided by woman, can never accomplish the task. They have worked miracles with their present limitations. Who can gauge their infinite power for good when they get equality? Their introduction to the broader sphere of political life will exert untold good. Our public life will be cleansed and the standard of public as well as private morality will be raised to the masthead. On its spotless sheen, as it is flung to the breeze, will be inscribed on letters of gold, so that all who run may read, the mystic word "Excellence." It will mark the dawn of the new era when woman comes into her own. And from that day onward this world will be a better place to live in. Therefore, Mr. Editor, as I said before, I rise to record my vote for a full measure of Woman Suffrage.
Yours truly,
A MERE MAN.

Woman Suffrage.

To judge by the advocacy of the franchise for women in this country, there is every evidence that votes for the fair sex will shortly be an accomplished fact. The exponents of the right of women to be placed on an equal basis with man in the use of the ballot in all elections have gone about their work in a manner that leaves no room to doubt their ultimate success. They have approached this important subject from the correct viewpoint and have impressed their determination to carry it through to victory upon all who read and study the literature contributed to the local press. Their claim is a just and valid one. It is reasonable and it is equitable. The appearance of women in the municipal and national political arenas has not detracted anything from their sex; has not lessened them in the eyes of intelligent students of the trend of universal events; has not tainted them with any of the moral impurities, which some say are inseparable from politics; has not made them less womanly or less able to control their domestic affairs that some of their detractors declare.

On the contrary, there is every reason to hope that the entrance of women into political life in Newfoundland will have an uplifting effect on the subjects that enter into discussion during elections. That her presence at meetings will help to create a more pure atmosphere of address. That her influence will prevent the introduction of purulent and extraneous comment on candidates by the press. That in effect the whole aspect of elections and the methods adopted during campaigns will undergo a complete change for the better, to the satisfaction of all concerned. By her activities in politics it is extremely unlikely that the home life will be endangered. Rather will her interest be consolidated, for it is in the home and through home influence that the greatest battles are won. Woman has been man's helpmeet since the days of creation, but she has never been permitted any say in the running of the scheme of government. No matter how seriously her sex interests were affected, man took it upon himself to make laws and prescribe regulations for their enforcement. Such ancient ideas have to be exploded. They do not belong to the twentieth century. Apart from any sentiment that the demand of the women for the vote may create, the time has now arrived when their rights have to be respected, their position in political life guaranteed, and their help as a factor in directing the destinies of this dominion recognized and accepted. Their claims are many; their abilities undoubted and unquestioned. They have been proven in the hours of stress and trouble, and woman has shown that she possesses all the organizing skill that man has hitherto arrogated to himself.

The Fire of 1846.

During the Governorship of Sir John Harvey, St. John's was devastated by the "Great Fire," and June 9th of the year 1846 was a date constantly referred to in years after. The following description of the destruction wrought, taken from the "Newfoundlander" of June 18th, of that disastrous year, will be interesting. The complete article is in the form of a foot note to Chapter XV, of Prowse's History:

"The fire broke out at 8.30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 9th, 1846, in the shop of Hamlin, the cabinet maker, in George Street, off Queen Street, and was caused by the overboiling of a pot of inflammable liquid. The fire immediately communicated to Queen Street and in a short time the whole collection of stone and wooden houses in the locality were on fire. It was hoped that a stand might be made at the corner of Queen and Water Streets, but the fire spread on, consuming Messrs. Rogerson's, Stewart's and C. F. Bennett's premises: it was stopped by an heroic effort at Newman's, Riverhead. The wind began to blow from the westward. The terrified cry now arose that Bennett's and Stewart's oil vats were on fire: at that sound despair seized on every mind and paralyzed every nerve: it was then seen that the total annihilation of the town was inevitable, and the scene of consternation that arose defies description. Sir John Harvey ordered Mr. Stabb's house, (O'Dwyer's Corner) to be blown up. The break, however, was not of sufficient extent, and the wind, which was strong at first, seemed to act here with redoubled violence, hurrying on the flames with fearful rapidity to the back of Stone Buildings, commencing with Mr. Pierce Grace's house and ending with Messrs. McBride and Kerr's, and the entire range of wooden dwellings at the opposite side. The next suites of buildings at both sides were soon enveloped, and the fire, now rendered all powerful by the immense quantities of oil and combustible materials of every description, which it had consumed, and with which it had been fed, hastened on the work of destruction with inconceivable speed, laying waste completely every erection at both sides—stone and wood without distinction—as far as the break at Messrs. Douglas and Company's. The Custom House next took fire and lured the flames forward to the premises of Messrs. Gill: hence they extended rapidly along, consuming everything intermediate to the premises of Messrs. Robinson, Brooking & Company. These fine buildings were soon involved, and the ravages continued with unabated violence even to the premises of Messrs. Parker and Gleeson, at the extreme end of Magdalen Cove, after the consumption of which it might with truth be said, the fire died out from the utterness of exhaustion, having left nothing to sustain it, and having left the effire way for more than a mile in extent a barren waste of its two principal streets. The loss of life, if the extent of the havoc be remembered, is inconceivable: we believe there were but three—one artilleryman and two civilians—who met death on this occasion. The public buildings consumed were, besides the Custom House above mentioned, the Convent of the Presentation Nuns, the Schoolroom opposite, St. John's Church, the Court House and Gaol, the Theatre, Commercial Building, Bank of British North America, Colonial Treasurer's Office and Savings Bank. The public monies fortunately were all saved and deposited in Government House. The Roman Catholic Chapel, Orphan Asylum, Native Hall and Factory were immediately thrown open for the shelter of the many houseless and destitute creatures, who had been in the short space of a few hours deprived of their homes and means of subsistence."

Along the waterfront, out of sixty large mercantile warehouses, Newman's old premises at Riverhead alone remained.

Obituary.

HENRY F. REEVE, C.M.G.

In the death of Henry Fenwick Reeve, C.M.G., Honorary Secretary of the Newfoundland War Contingent Association, Newfoundland has lost a true friend. His work in behalf of Terra Nova's sons will in years to come have made him known and respected to an extent not always the case. Already chairman of the Executive of the Queen Alexandra Field Force Fund, he nevertheless accepted nomination as Honorary Secretary at the instigation of Sir William MacGregor, a personal friend of his. He has gone but his work will remain as a monument to his patriotism and energy.

Henry Frederick Reeve, C.M.G., M.I.C.E., F.R.G.S., F.S.A., was born in Kent 86 years ago. He was educated at St. Peter's College and at Melbourne University. Later he entered the Imperial Service, and served in the Governments of New South Wales, Victoria, Fiji, the Windward Islands, Gambia and Lagos. He was the Chief Commissioner of the Anglo-French Boundary Commission 1895-1896, and was Acting Governor at Lagos in 1902. In 1912 he published a useful and informative work entitled "The Gambia." His was a life of faithful and zealous service for the Empire; crowned by the services rendered to the Empire's sons and mothers in the great time of testing.

Amateurish Safe Cracker Used Sledge Hammer.

Report that some burglar had entered his office on Monday night and attempted to break open the safe was made the police last night by a business man of New Gower St. Entrance was made through the back. That the crackman was not a professional is proven by the fact that he tried to open the safe by striking it with a sledge-hammer. This latter he left behind him—possibly out of disgust. The police say that his leaving the hammer behind points to his being disturbed in some way. Probably he was disturbed by the thought of carrying it with him—such hammers hamper a man making a quick get-away.

Talented Young Music Student.

Congratulations to Miss Margaret M. Meaney, L.T.C.L., A.T.C.L., of the Presentation Convent, Cathedral Square, on winning honors in the Licentiate Grade Trinity College of Music Examinations. This is the first time that honors in this grade have been won by a Newfoundland student, and it reflects much credit to Miss Meaney, who is still under nineteen. Miss Meaney is a daughter of Mr. J. T. Meaney.

More Men Leaving.

S.S. Meigle, which was to sail for Sydney early yesterday, did not get away until late last night, having been delayed to accommodate some 70 men who were on the incoming North Shore train. These men were bound to North Sydney to seek work, seeing such poor prospects in their own country.

POLICE COURT.—A laborer was fined $1.

That Abattoir.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I wish to give the public in general a few facts about Slaughter Houses and they can then judge for themselves if it is right to build an abattoir or slaughter house in the city of St. John's.

In New York some of the finest abattoirs are to be found on First Avenue in the vicinity of 42nd Street; these are carried on under the strict supervision of government inspectors, and are the last word in cleanliness. Even with conditions so scrupulously clean one always gets the odour of dead blood from one to two blocks from the slaughter house; it is a sickly sort of smell and, unless one is accustomed to it, is very nauseating.

I have gone through a number of slaughter houses in the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, and although they are kept the same as the New York slaughter houses, no one could say there is no smell. Personally I compare Water Street with Broadway, New York, as being the principal street in the city, and one might just as well try to play marbles on Broadway as to erect a slaughter house there.

The East End of St. John's is one of the finest residential sections in the city comprising Forest Road, King's Bridge Road, Ordinance Street, Signal Hill Road, Temperance St., Duckworth Street and Plymouth Road. If the citizens of this section are not sufficiently strong to prevent this outrage, then there will only have to be a demonstration from the city as a whole. If this slaughter house is to be erected in the city, why not have it in a more central place, and erect it on the vacant piece of ground between the Museum and the next block east, where it would then be under the personal supervision of the organizer of the company, and also under the eyes of some of the best doctors in the city?

It is of little use for people to improve their property, if the Council allows enterprises of this sort to be carried on, regardless of the comfort and health of those who are compelled to live in the neighborhood.

If protesting is of no avail then other methods will have to be employed.

The taxpayers and voters of the East End have decided that the building is not going there.

Yours truly,
HAROLD MITCHELL.
June 8th, 1920.

Vandalism in Park.

The attention of the authorities is called to the vandalism of some young men in Bannerman Park. Recently the guns (war trophies) have been "assaulted" and parts removed and destroyed. It is impossible for the caretaker, Mr. Spurrill to watch all that is going on, and it is necessary that Inspector Sparrow be again stationed there.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

Republican National Convention at Chicago.

German Reichstag to Open Shortly--Hungarians Slaughter Jews--Trail Yachts Drift Over Course--Explosive Hun Fishing Rod.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT TENDERS RESIGNATION.

BERLIN, June 9. The Government to-day tendered resignation to President Ebert who requested it to remain in office provisionally. The President also asked Chancellor Mueller to take steps so the results of Sunday's parliamentary election can be established as soon as possible in order that the Reichstag may be summoned at the earliest possible date.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION OPENS

CHICAGO, June 8. The Republican National Convention was called to order at 11.30 a.m. after Chairman Hays appeared on the platform and was greeted with words of applause and shouts.

DR. RICHTHOFFEN DEFEATED.

BERLIN, June 8. Baron Von Richthofen, former Secretary of the German Embassy in Washington, at one time German Minister to Mexico, and former leader of the National Party was defeated at the polls in Sunday's Elections. He is a candidate on the Democratic ticket.

RENDER OF GERMAN FREIGHT-FULLNESS.

SYDNEY, N.S., June 8. When Charles McKinnon of the 5th Nova Scotia Highlanders came home from France he brought with him as a souvenir a fishing rod which he found in a German dugout. It has never been used and it has been about the house ever since. Yesterday a fourteen year old boy, Mel Brennan, borrowed it of McKinnon to go fishing near Port Morien. Brennan attempted to put it together and the rod exploded cutting his hand and inflicting other injuries as a result of which he is in a serious condition at Grace Bay Hospital. Examination after the accident showed that a portion of the rod was filled with high explosives.

MEXICAN FINANCE MINISTER RESIGNS.

MEXICO CITY, June 8. General Alvarado confirmed to-day that he had resigned as Minister of Finance in the Cabinet of Provisional President Adolfo de la Huerta. He was stated unofficially that General Adinterim, Minister of Communications and former Governor of Mexico would succeed General Alvarado. General Trevino took the oath of office as Minister of Industry, Commerce and Labor yesterday.

DE VALERA IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 8. Raymond de Valera self-styled "President of the Irish Republic" and Frank P. Walsh, yesterday finished a tentative draft of the Irish Plank they will ask the Committee of Resolution to incorporate in the Republican platform. It was recognized by Irish sympathizers that anything approximating an attempt to force favorable action by the Resolution Committee would be bad tactics and it was decided to abandon along with picketing the plan to canvass all the delegates in the Convention. In the event of the Committee and Convention refusing to "go the full distance" it was considered by leaders including De Valera that a Plank expressing sympathy with the aspirations of the Irish people and expressing a hope that those who will be gratified by the English people would be better than no recognition at all. For such a plank there is precedent, the Convention of 1890 having declared its sympathy with the Home Rule Movement.

EXPLOSION IN PRINTING OFFICE.

TORONTO, June 9. At least one man was killed and several injured by an explosion in the Linotype room of the Toronto Telegram office this afternoon. The report of the explosion was heard several blocks away. Considerable damage was done to the building and plant.

STEAMER AGAIN FLOATED.

QUEBEC, June 9. The steamer Manchester Division of the Furness line which has been ashore at the mouth of the St. Charles River since yesterday was successfully floated to-day and is reported to be slightly damaged.

HAIG'S PLAIN WORDS TO THE UNIONISTS.

LONDON, June 8. Marshal Haig made another outspoken address concerning the attitude of trades unions towards ex-soldiers at to-day's meeting of the National Association for the employment of ex-soldiers, declaring that through the selfish obstinacy of some of the unions, thousands of those men who fought for the principles and the very existence of trade unionism were denied work. The Marshal added that nobody asked the trade unions to abandon their principles, but he did ask the unions and employers to endeavor even at risk of some sacrifice to meet exceptional circumstances by exceptional action.

RESOLUTE OUTDRIFTS VANITIE.

NEWPORT, R.I., June 8. The Resolute outdrifted the Vanitie in an uncertain and fluky breeze in to-day's race in the Americas cup defense trials covering thirty miles to leeward and returned in only a few seconds less than six hours required to make the race.

JEW BAITING IN BUDAPEST.

PARIS, June 8. According to information received at Foreign Office to-day, anti-semitic outbreaks occurred in Budapest around June 4th, on which date advances stated one man saw twelve Jews killed. Rioting continued for several days during which many Jews were killed the despatch says.

Woman Suffrage.

Men tell women very often that her sphere is the home, that so long as she remains within that special sphere and does her duty in it, they will love, honour and cherish her; but that they cannot respect her, or take her seriously, if she ventures to outstep or move beyond the narrow scope of her utility. One would imagine, to hear the talk of "woman's incapacity for politics," that man had a natural inborn genius for mastering the intricacies of public questions. Hardly a city clerk, or an agricultural laborer in all England, escaped being asked to record his opinion of Tariff Reform, though perhaps scarcely five men in the House of Commons itself were really competent to deal with so complex a problem, whether pro or contra the measure!

House of Assembly.

Petitions were presented by Messrs. Small and Jones on local matters. Bill respecting election of members of the House of Assembly, Commemoration Day, and elections in the present year were introduced and read a first time.

The Minister of Justice asked to have the question of the Leader of the Opposition concerning the appointment of a commission to enquire into matters relating to the Woodford Affidavit deferred till to-day.

The reply to Mr. Bennett's question relating to the Board of Review of Separation Allowances, stated that Mr. Squires had taken the place of the Minister of Militia on the Board, the members of which were drawing $50.00 per month for their work.

The second reading of the Council's amendments to the Income War Tax Act, and the third reading of the Pilotage Act Amendment Bill were given these bills.

The House then went into committee on the Sealfishery Bill, and passed same with some amendments.

A brief discussion occurred over the section relating to the imposition of a fine, half of which was to be paid the Inspector, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Higgins objected to it on the principle that it was a mistake to give an informer part of the fine. Mr. Fox, who is piloting the Bill through the House, agreed with the objection, and the section was deleted.

The Local Affairs Act was then taken up in committee, and after some discussion, particularly over the section compelling magistrates and others to hold meetings for election of Boards under a penalty of a fine, it was referred, on the suggestion of Mr. Higgins, to a select committee. Mr. Higgins pointed out that the amendments did not go nearly far enough to make sense out of the original act, and thought that more care and attention should be given it, a position which was also supported by Mr. Hallyard.

Two Bills: (1) to amend the Society for Protection of Animals Act, and (2) An Act respecting the maintenance of Certain Public Roads were read a second time.

The House then adjourned until 3 p.m. to-day.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SICK BENEFITS.

Did you have a sick benefits when you were a child? When we were going over the things in an old chest the other day, I came upon a wonderful silk patchwork quilt that my grandmother made. It has scraps of all the silk dresses she ever had, from her wedding gown to her last black silk. It is also a silken chronicle of the sartorial events that have happened to all her relatives and close friends. Moreover, here and there, with an irregularity that made it even more fascinating, grandmother had embroidered figures upon some of the patches. Here was a raspberry cored elephant, and there a purple anchor; here a stilted spray of forget-me-nots, and there a strange crimson flower that never was on land or sea.

When the Patch-Work Quilt Was Put Over Us.

As I pored over this quaint work of love and patience (if not of art) I suddenly had a vision of myself lying ill in the little black walnut bed I had as a child. I wondered what made that come into my mind—and then I knew. The patchwork quilt was one of the household treasures and we children were not allowed to touch it as a rule; but when we had been ill, it was brought out from the cedar chest and put over as a special favor—in other words, a sick benefit.

From that, my mind travelled swiftly to other sick benefits. There was the old box made of inlaid bits of ivory and ebony and lined with sandalwood, that stood on the what-not. There was nothing in the box, but it came from some far-off land, brought by some sea-going great uncle, and just to hold it in my hand linked me with his great adventures and filled my mind with misty dreams of the day when I, too, might sail the seven seas.

The Glass Ball With the Snow Storm in It.

Another sick benefit from the same whatnot was a round glass ball, inside which was depicted a country scene. When the ball lay quiet, fair weather reigned over the country side, but when you shook it snow immediately began to fall in tremendous quantities.

From the china closet came one sick benefit which, alas, had a drawback attached to it. I have always had a lively detestation for anything in the line of gruel—horrid stuff, nothing more than a first cousin to paste—I thought then, and still think. But to get well without plenty of gruel was considered an impossibility in those days. Therefore, to sweeten the dose, I was allowed to take it out of a marvelous gruel set which consisted of a little platter into which fitted a covered gruel bowl and a salt and pepper, all on the quaint willow pattern. The charm of the little set and the tale of the feeling lovers in the picture helped favor an otherwise detestable food.

A Sick Benefit of the Palate.

"Sick toast," as we always called it, was a food which we never seemed to have except when convalescent after some childish illness. It consisted of hard toast buttered, salted and peppered to a nicety, and with clear hot milk (instead of the flour thickened milk which made the "dip toast" of our ordinary fare) poured over it. I have eaten many an elaborate dinner and tasted nothing half so delicious. I wonder, if by any chance, part of the relish of "sick toast" lay in the zest of the convalescent. Or, rather, I do not wonder—I know.

Did you, too, have sick benefits when you were a child?

COMFORTING THOUGHTS.

The wind is tempered to the sheep whose coat of wool is shorn; and there's a balm for those who weep, for those who sigh and mourn. I've never seen so dark a day, so full of grief and care, I couldn't find a little ray of comfort anywhere. Thus, when my aunt came here to spend six months or more with us, I thought my joy must have an end; like Job I stooped to cuss. Then I recalled the solemn fact that seven aunts are mine; if they all to my wigwam tracked, I well might shed the brine. But only one of them had come to linger in my lair, and it were folly to be glum and say that life's a snare. Whatever evil comes along, your passing days to curse, whatever ill, whatever wrong, be sure it might be worse. And if you bear that truth in mind, and paste it in your tile, 'twill ease the sad and painful grind, and help you sing and smile.

Fashions and Fads.

The beach suit of tricolette and foulard is a late fad. An organdie overblouse has cascaded side panels which fall over an accordion-pleated organdie skirt. Gingham, organdies and silks are used for sports wear. Bathing caps are much adorned with bright-colored flowers. Soft hats of taffeta, bordered with tulle, are worn for afternoon. Taffeta in polka-dot design is being used for simple bathing suits. Narrow leather belts are worn with sports coats, suits and sweaters. Many gingham frocks have plain bound necks instead of using collars. Hats for evening wear are large and, filmy but are devoid of trimming. The light colored silk suit decorates itself with a charming Roman sash. Red-dotted white mull makes charming dresses embroidered in black. The blanket stitch offers a dainty way of trimming small folks' clothes. Heavy white silk embroidered in colored flowers makes charming long overblouses. Quaint Japanese lacquered fans are going to out-rival the fans of ostrich feathers. A French idea is to carry the spirit of the sweater-biouse throughout the costume. The latest parasol has an ivory ring in its tip and is carried upside down on the arm. Some evening gowns have a strap over one shoulder and a wreath of flowers over the other.

DECISION.
There's no limit placed on you. Save what's right and wrong to do; No one here has power to say That you may not work or play, None may order you to stop, None may keep you from the top; Life will cheerfully return All that you are pleased to earn.

You are master of your strength And your fortune's breadth and length; You decide which road you'll take, How much money you will make; You determine when you're hit Whether you'll fight back or quit; Here on earth you stand alone Making your decisions known.

All your whole life's story through Centers on the thing that's your; Swayed perhaps at times you are, By life's currents carried far, Tempted sorely now and then, Striving with your fellow men; But when all is said and done, You have lost or you have won.

How much money do you need? What shall be your golden creed? How high do you care to climb? How shall you divide your time? How much will you do and dare? For the crown you hope to wear? These life asks, and it is true None can answer them but you.

You alone have power to say, In your hours of work and play, Whether you prefer to stand Pure of heart and clean of hand, Rather than to stain your soul For some temporary goal; In this world of place you fill, You are master of your will.

Resolute Beat Vanitie.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 3.—The Resolute defeated the Vanitie in the first of the trial races to determine which yacht shall defend the America's Cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger Shamrock IV. The race was sailed over a 28 mile windward, and leeward course in a moderate breeze, the Resolute crossing the finish line the victor by four minutes, 7 seconds elapsed time, and five five minutes 3-9 seconds corrected time.

Both yachts had slight accidents during the race. Vanitie's mainsheet bridle, which delayed her for a few seconds, while on the Resolute the jaws on the gaff jumped from the mast as she was turning the outer mark. Both boats made repairs in the harbor to-night, and will meet again to-morrow over a triangular course.

Skipper Chas. F. Adams, of the Resolute, won the honors at the start, when he berthed his yacht on the weather side of the Vanitie and obtained a commanding lead in the first five minutes. Vanitie was handicapped seven seconds at the start.

On the beat along the Narragansett shore Vanitie drew up on Resolute when they were half way to the outer mark, and at one time the two were almost on even terms.

Manager Emmons of the Resolute, said afterward that this gain was due to short hitches along the out-of-bounds line which the two managers had arranged along this part of the course. During the trial races the yachts will keep outside a line drawn from Beaver Tail Light to Point Judith. The Resolute was three minutes and 40 seconds ahead of her rival at the turn. Manager Hoyt of the Vanitie, explained this gain by stating that his boat ran into a soft air pocket off Point Judith.

After the Resolute's accident, as she was wearing around the outer mark, Mr. Adams was compelled to keep her off course so that she would not jibe.

In the run into the finish before the wind with spinnakers set, the distance between the two yachts varied, but the Resolute had a lead of nearly a mile at the finish.

The official time was: First trial race—

Resolute, (Emmons)—Start, 11-01.42; finish, 2-20.49; elapsed time, 3-19.57; corrected time, 3-17.32.

Vanitie, (C. Sherman-Hoyt)—Start, 11-02.00; finish, 2-25.11; elapsed time, 3-23.11; corrected time, 3-23.11.

The times at the outer mark were: Resolute—1-03.10. Vanitie—1-06.05.

Fads and Fashions.

Silk and organdies make a very fashionable combination. A white ratine skirt worn with a sweater was worked in darning stitches with the sweater color.

Use the juice of one lemon, instead of soap, for shampooing oily hair.

Run lard through the meat grinder instead of cutting up by hand.

Lord Eversley, of England, who entered his eighty-eighth year recently, is a wonderful old parliamentarian. He first entered the House of Commons in 1863, quite a considerable time before the large majority of the present members were born. His Lordship, who is still hale and hearty and may often be seen in the lobbies of the House, has had a remarkably productive career, and Londoners especially owe him a debt of gratitude for the legislation which he placed on the statute book relating to tramways and the equalization of rates. He also was instrumental in passing the Act which established the six-penny telegram.

Infant Welfare Centre.
 Thursday, June 10th, Lady Harris will open the Centre at 3 p.m. at the Public Health Department, North Street. All those mothers who are anxious to have a record of their babies' weight are cordially invited. Weight cards are provided, and are taken home and experience other countries has taught us that the fathers eagerly watch for the weekly gain which is so important an indication of the baby's progress. A spirit of healthy competition is aroused among the mothers and the directions of the doctor and nurses are followed faithfully as a result of the gain in weight and progress of those babies whose mothers are determined that physical condition shall be the first consideration. We have been fortunate enough to secure the voluntary services of Dr. Fallon who has had considerable experience in clinic work of this kind. The mothers of those children whom the nurses find suffering from minor ailments are either advised to see their family doctor without delay or they will be able to consult Dr. Fallon. By this means prompt treatment is afforded and the development of many children's ailments is arrested and often prevented. The cases are followed up by the nurses who instruct the mothers how to carry out the treatment. Simple remedies are sold at cost price at the Centre. A friendly atmosphere prevails and a cup of tea for which the mothers pay five cents. The members of those centres which the writer worked at were very proud of maintaining their own "canteens" and, since nothing, excepting the services of the nurses and doctor is free, we feel sure those mothers in St. John's who are able to attend regularly will find an afternoon spent at the Centre a thing to look forward to—and will be proud of this independent, helpful, and encouraging addition to the valuable work which the Community Nurses have been carrying on with such splendid courage and in spite of the lack of recognition of that part of their work which is not recorded in the Vital Statistics, the daily visits, the prevention of more serious developments in the many baby troubles which occur in every city, and the help and advice given so cheerfully and in all weathers. A clothing stall will be a prominent feature and suitable garments will be on sale at cost price and instructions for making gladly given.

PERSONAL.—His Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris will be "At Home" to receive callers to-morrow afternoon between 4.30 and 6 o'clock. As Lady Harris, accompanied by Miss Harris, will leave for England by the Digby, this will be the last reception at Government House for the season.—jnc9.11

On the High Cost of Shaves.
 The barbers throughout the continent having caught the high cost of shaving and hair cutting epidemic, are out after all the loose change in sight. Fifty-cent shaves and dollar hair cuts are not unknown. We would advise these barber gentlemen to tread softly, else there will be a whole lot more people will get the habit of shaving themselves, not a difficult matter in these days of good safety razors. And once a man has acquired the habit of taking ten minutes off in the morning, safety razor in hand, he is not likely to revert back to the tedious, time-wasting process of a daily visit to a barber. As for hair cuts one might adopt the Psyche knot, or cultivate a queue, Chinese old style. Buffalo Bill was a stunning looking man, and never had a hair cut in his life. Let the barbers beware how they tread further upon the sensibilities of their customers' pocket books.

A BIG ATTRACTION.

Johnny Wilson who won the middleweight championship from Mike O'Dowd in Boston recently, should lose no time in signing for a return match with the man from St. Paul. It seems to be the general opinion that O'Dowd is the better fighter of the two and that Wilson was decidedly lucky to get the decision over him. Wilson should do his best to remove that impression.

In view of the fact that O'Dowd was the only ring champion to enlist and cross to France he deserves every consideration in his present trouble. Paddy Mullins insists that the decision that deprived Mike of his honors was a most unjust one, and judging by the way the fight fans greet O'Dowd wherever he is introduced they are of the same opinion.

Mullins says that if Mike does not stop Wilson in four or five rounds the next time they meet he will take a back seat and have no more to say.

In the meantime Mullins has set up the claim that O'Dowd did not lose the title because the decision was obviously unjust. That is a ridiculous stand to take. To consider it for even a moment would set a most harmful precedent. It is bad enough to have no-decision bouts that permit a champion to be beaten without losing the title. If it ever comes about that champions are permitted to ignore referees' decisions, ring titles will cease to have any meaning.

O'Dowd is one of the very few champions to lose the honors while still young and improving. Even Al McCoy, the poorest excuse for a champion the ring ever saw, hung on to the title until he had gone away back.

That O'Dowd is getting better all the time was shown by the way he handled Jackie Clark recently. Clark, who claimed a victory over O'Dowd while the two were wearing the uniform in France, appeared to be his only serious rival. Mike beat him handily, and if it had not been for the Wilson affair the man from St. Paul would now stand further in his class than any other champion of the day.

O'Dowd Stands Out.

Even Jack Dempsey has Fred Fulton and Georges Carpentier on his trail for a match. Jack Britton has plenty of challengers and there are three or four crack lightweights who would like to meet Leonard if the champion would only agree to make the weight limit of his class. At least a score of featherweights think they can beat Johnny Kilbane, and Peter Herman is by no means invincible in the bantam class. But aside from Wilson, O'Dowd is without a rival.

The fact that there are so few middleweights is still another reason why Wilson should agree to a return match without delay. There is no interest in any other middleweight, and if Wilson wants to obtain a big purse he must fight O'Dowd.

The return match, when it does take place, promises to be a great attraction, provided that Wilson does not get himself beaten by some second-rater in the meantime. Should he lose one or two popular decisions Wilson's drawing power would be cut to nothing. Al McCoy never was a card in New York and was forced to do all his boxing in Brooklyn, where he came from and enjoyed a purely local following.

But if Wilson fights O'Dowd right back without delay the battle might break all attendance records. It is seldom that such a situation as the present one is created. Here is O'Dowd, a defeated champion, intensely popular with the fans, who believe that he did not receive a fair deal. They want him to win the title back, and they firmly believe he can do it. Then there is Wilson, an unknown quantity. There always is a great deal of interest in a new champion's first match, especially when he happens to be a stranger. Every fan who takes the least interest in boxing will have some strong reason for wanting to see the two in action, so that there appears to be no limit to what they will draw if Wilson does not spill the beans in the meantime.

BIG CANADIAN PURSE OFFERED WILDE.

Toronto, May 28.—Freeman Bernstein, who is handling the boxing carnival here, under the auspices of which Jimmy Wilde, of England, and Fatsy Wallace, of Philadelphia, boxed on Monday night, has offered Wilde a purse of $25,000 and Wallace $15,000 for a return engagement in this city. Wilde would not give the promoters a definite reply as he is under the necessity of cabling to England in the matter. He has engagement there that would be interfered with should he consent to remain here for another bout with Wallace. The flyweight champion some weeks ago booked passage on a ship leaving New York on Saturday next. Should Wilde find it possible to secure a cancellation of his English engagements it is proposed to box here again within two weeks.

Wallace is eager for another chance at the champion, who has now beaten him twice. "Any terms at all will suit me," says the little champion. "I will meet him for a twenty-five cent piece.

WILSON AND O'DOWD AGAIN.

Boston, May 29.—George Mulligan, of Waterbury, has commissioned Benny Murphy to try to sign champion Johnny Wilson for a return match to be arranged for Labor Day, the distance to be 12 rounds to a referee's decision.

Peeress Born in America

Lady Geddes, wife of the new British ambassador, is the charming chateau of the British embassy, an American, as well. She is a New Yorker, having been born Dobbs Ferry, the daughter of Mr. Mrs. W. A. Ross. Perhaps the fact that both her father and mother Irish is responsible for the delightful wit and graciousness which distinguish her.

She was educated in Nova Scotia and though she confesses to a far greater interest in domestic affairs than society, she is a charming hostess nevertheless, and has wide knowledge of American affairs.
