A sharp electrical storm passed over this section on Saturday about 1 o'clock doing some damage by water and lightning. One of the Hydro poles on Main street, near Huron, was struck and the transformer split, causing the interruption of power in that circuit, and it was not until late at night that the lights were reliable, power being off until late at night. Trees were broken and standing corn lodged in some places.

Many customers of the local branch of the Sterling Bank will regret to hear that the services of the teller, Miss Craig, have been dispensed with by the management on the ground that none but male clerks will be employed in future. In two years from now, in 1923, the Village of Watford will have been incorporated 50 years, the first council being elected December 1873. Is it not time that preliminary proceedings were commenced to celebrate the town's jubilee? Who will take hold of the matter and set the ball rolling? It has been suggested that the Daughters of the Empire take the matter in hand, and with the assistance of the leading business men of the town plan a celebration that will be remembered by the present young people fifty years hence. It is none too soon to consider a celebration on a large scale during the summer or fall of 1923. What do the ladies say?

When the Post Office Department of Canada undertook rural mail delivery and distributed metal boxes on routes, all nicely galvanized and having names stenciled on them, they overlooked one important detail, the replacement of the name on the boxes when time had effaced them. If there's one thing more than another that lends pleasure to a country motorist, it's being able to read the names of one's friends on their mail boxes along the route. But that's a thing of the past, the names are obliterated and even the boxes are in many places going to seed, and hang listless, often with doors agape and arms across the road, really showing that they want straightening up and restenciling. The department ought in all seriousness to make this a part of their regulations.

Forms for the administration of the Adolescent Act which came into force on September 1st, have been received and the chief inspector's department is completing arrangements for the issuing of home and employment permits. Under the Act the parent or guardian of a child between the ages of 14 and 16 who desire that child to discontinue attending school must make application to the chief attendance officer for a permit. The application requires a statement from the parent of the reasons why it is made. If the child is needed to work at home, a home permit is issued. If, on the other hand the child is to enter regular employment away from home, the application for his release from school must be accompanied by a promise of employment from the prospective employer. This latter must give the nature of the work the child will be doing, the number of hours of work per day and must contain a bona fide assurance that the child will actually secure a position. If the attendance officer is satisfied, he then issues employment certificate. J. F. Elliot is the attendance officer for the municipality of Watford.

THE LATE W. J. THOMPSON

He was born in Adelaide Township and was the youngest son of the late Robert and Martha Thompson, who came from Ireland in 1836 and took up 300 acres of farm land there. In 1879 he moved to Watford where he has lived in the same house on Ontario street ever since. The year following he was married to Mrs. Thompson—formerly Miss Mary Edgar of Galt. He was an honorable Christian gentleman, noted for his upright dealings and especially for his unostentatious hospitality. Besides his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Connolly of Watford, two brothers and one sister survive—Robert of Warwick; John and Mrs. Adams of Adelaide.

NOTE AND COMMENT

An Iowa mother has named her twin daughters, Gasoline and Kerosine. Lets hope they grow up to be a paraffine girls.

It is proposed to tax fat men in Germany for excessive waist measurement. There is an anti-waste party in England, too.

We'd have more sympathy for the Irish "cause" if it were led by real Irishmen, not imported Spaniards like De Valera.—St. Marys Argus-Journal.

Some men are so busy telling the ladies what they should do and what they shouldn't do, that they haven't time to wipe the tobacco off their own chins.

Burglar proof beds have been invented. They have an electric light affixed to the leg of the bed so that its rays will dispel any shadows of doubt as to the presence of an intruder.

Although less than one-sixth of the world's population speak English, over two-thirds of the world's correspondence is in the language. English is becoming more and more the language of commerce.

Col. Harry Cockshutt, Brantford, president of the Cockshutt Plow Co. has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Lieutenant-Governor Lionel Clark.

At the opening session of the 38th annual convention of the Canadian Embalmers' Association at Toronto on Tuesday, it was decided to drop the name "undertaker" and adopt instead the designation of "director of funeral service," as being more appropriate.

The Ontario dollar is still a little over 10 per cent. below par. You can now buy 30 Russian roubles, that before the war were worth $10.10 for 5 cents. How's that for shrinkage? That would make 1 dollar bills worth less than half a cent each.

Speaking of dancing, would it not really have been better for mankind if the man who first started substituting these animal gallops and other modern antics for the graceful and modest dances of the good old days, had been taken out and shot in the cold, gray dawn?—Renfrew Mercury.

"One of the peculiarities of the newspaper business," remarks the Ridgetown Dominion, "is the fact that delinquent subscribers appear to regard the sending out of subscription accounts as simply a mild form of recreation in which the printer indulges when he has nothing else to do."

British women are not satisfied with cigarettes and are taking to the pipe and the cigar. Twenty thousand special Cuban cigars are on the way to London for the women. This is equality with a vengeance. In Toronto special pipes for women are now on sale and are said to find ready buyers.

How the Farmers see it.—The pessimist—No hay or oat crops, pastures all burned up, cattle down in price, blue ruin stares us in the face, don't know how we'll live this winter. The Optimist—look what the recent rains have done to our corn and roots; one of the best crops we've ever had. Things are not as bad as they might be so I guess we'll worry through to spring alright.

The M. C. R. is about to suppress the whistling of their trains inside the municipality of St. Thomas. This nuisance is one that could be to a great extent done away with in other places. The long and continued whistling of engines during the night is annoying to persons in good health. What must it be to those on a sick bed? A signal of one-quarter the duration would answer the purpose as well.

Vancouver Province.—"Rainmaker" Fitzfield plans shifting his cloud-producing plant to a more strategic location next season. Saskatchewan farmers fear that he may intercept the moisture-charged clouds drifting in their direction and extract the precious liquid before it reaches them. This may raise a question of Provincial rights that will cause as much contention as the three-mile limit in marine law.

Guelph Herald.—It will be noted that England and Wales still continue to be the dominant partners of the United Kingdom in the matter of numerical strength. The growth has been phenomenal. In 1811 the two combined had a total of 10,164,000 people. By 1861 the figures had reached 20,066,000, and this year the record stands at 37,885,000. Meanwhile (Scotland and Ireland included), millions have migrated to the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Africa and other lands so that the vigor of the race may be safely described as unimpaired. Not only has its own household been maintained, but, to an extent not paralleled by any existing nations countless citizens have also been given to other lands.

Young women to-day, according to Bishop Farthing, of Montreal, are spending as much on personal dress and decorations as their grandmothers spent upon the household, and are setting a standard of living which is driving the thought of marriage out of the heads of young men. This is a matter to which the young women should give serious thought. Why are they spending so much on personal adornment? If it is for the purpose of attracting the young men, then, apparently they are defeating their own object. But the young women may protest that fashion demands the expenditure and that they are not thinking so much about the young men as might be supposed. It may be that they are simply enjoying, in their own way the independence that has come to them. A good many of them are earning the money they are spending, and they feel they have a right to spend it in their own way. Still it would be well to give some thought to Bishop Farthing's words. It is nice to be independent, of course, while the independence lasts; but in every woman's heart must be the desire to become the head of a home.

The Pasteur Institute in Paris has just handed a stiff blow to the anti-tobacco enthusiasts. In the last issue of the Institute's official magazine appears a long discussion on the merits of tobacco—with no mention of any demerits—the writer authoritatively closing the case with a clean verdict of acquittal for the plant that made Virginia famous. Not only he says, does the inhaling of tobacco smoke kill all manner of dangerous germs, but it is a sure preventative against cholera, diphtheria, cerebrospinal meningitis, and is known to have been effective in warding off impending attacks of sleeping sickness. Rough old Kentucky Burley has special powers when matched against such maladies as weak stomach, according to Pasteur experts, although anyone who has smoked his first pipeful probably will doubt that the results are beneficial. As for women who smoke, if considered from the medicinal standpoint, even the finest stout Virginia with Turkish, Egyptian or Russian blends becomes an instrument for human welfare, and millady can reflect that her after dinner cigarette is curing all the ill the flesh is heir to, and a few picked up from neighbors who do not smoke.

In these days when so much is being talked about Church Union and its possibilities, a real example of the working-out of the most practical kind of this union is rather interesting. For the last few months, members of the Sunday School Boards of the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian churches, representing over eighty per cent of the Sunday Schools in Canada, have been working together with a view to making Rally Day, to be held on September 25th, a notable and striking day in Canadian Sunday School History. The unanimity among the members of the committee has been so remarkable that they have been able to agree upon a special Rally Day Service of which 1,000,000 copies have been printed and circulated, so that on Rally Day the scholars of practically all the Sunday Schools of these denominations in Canada, will be worshipping in the same way and enjoying the same service. The same hymns will be sung, the same Scripture readings utilized and identically the same order of service followed. It is anticipated that not only will this Fall's Rally Day be the biggest ever held in Canada, but that it will have a very considerable influence in bringing the important place the Sunday School holds before all the people of Canada as a means of promoting practical religious education and educational democracy.

THEIR LIFE WORK

The most important question that parents can ask themselves about their children is: "For what vocation in life are they best suited?" It is not a matter of what you would like to have them do, but of what they really can do and want to do. There is no greater mistake made in the world than to force a young person into a professional career when he prefers to follow farming or some other line of work.

"What society needs is to discard the assumption that there necessarily is something very distinctive in a man's being 'boss'. The misdirected ambition thus ventured has resulted in producing employers who might have been quite happy and efficient as employees.

To be capable of working efficiently for other men is just as necessary in a well balanced system of society as to be capable of managing other men.—Port Colborne Citizen.

CATARRH

Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic and Blood Purifier. By cleansing the blood and building up the system, HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE restores normal condition and allows Nature to do its work. All Druggists. Circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

BETTER MORALE IS NEEDED

One thing that agriculture needs right now is more boosting and better morale. A bad state of affairs exists, the result of after the war re-adjustments, and we may as well look these facts in the face, but with out losing courage. We are not facing bankruptcy but we cannot help matters by running around and telling one another tales of trouble. We must and will work out our own salvation. It is useless to "pass the hat" and expect the public or the government to make good our losses or insure our future profits. The nation cannot underwrite every man who goes farming and protect him from loss. It cannot boost prices against world conditions. The nation cannot extend credit where credit is not due, or lend money where there is no hope of re-payment. A large per cent. of our farmers are weathering the storm and the bankers are in sympathy with them, still it is absurd to say that agriculture is flat on its back in the gutter.—The Banker-Farmer.

Cause of Asthma. No one can say with certainty exactly what causes the establishing of asthmatic conditions. Dust from the street, from flowers, from grain and various other irritants may set up a trouble impossible to be relieved except through a sure preparation such as Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Uncertainty may exist as to cause, but there can be no uncertainty regarding a remedy which has given relief to a generation of asthmatic victims of this scourge of the bronchial tubes. It is sold everywhere.

YOU CAN'T GET AHEAD GOING BACK

There is too much whimpering these days about "this long, hard pull back to normal." What is normal? Who cares what normal is? After all, "Back to Normal" is only another one of those catch phrases that set the ear tingling and find no response whatever in a man's brain.

Personally, if getting back to normal is going to mean going back to 1914, I never want to get back to normal again. If we got all the way back to normal we'd probably revert into monkeys and lose all we've fought for.

Normal men are average men. Normal moments are average moments, and average men in average moments never wrote any history. What this country has to do, or muffle its chance, is to climb ahead to abnormal—to super-normal.

This period calls for tenseness, for supreme exertion. Nobody in his right mind ever wants to see this country again on a flabby, peaceful relaxed 1914 basis, because that would mean going back.

There is nothing discouraging about the outlook. This country never bit off more than it could chew nor ran up against a hurdle it could not clear. Business is up against its supreme test now but this country has been made out of supreme tests. The quickest way to get acquainted with these new conditions is to have them slap you in the face. Wait till we all catch step again and watch this country.

The only ones who are going to suffer irrevocably are the slackers and the quitters. He-men are all coming out of this thing strong and better than ever before.

Jobless men were placed on the auction block on Boston Common. Stripped to the waist, after the custom of the old slave auctions, they declared their willingness to work by standing before a crowd of thousands, offering their services to the highest bidder. Of the three who stood up for bids none accepted a job, although pledges were given from the crowd to help them tide over their difficulties. Like a good many other men they did not want work. On the following day twelve were bid in and went to work.

A POPULAR TONIC

One That Enriches the Blood and Strengthens the Nerves.

Proper food, fresh air and a good tonic will keep most people in good health. Hurried meals, indoor confinement in badly ventilated rooms and lack of exercise causes anaemia. In this condition Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a popular tonic. They contain no habit forming drugs, and always have a beneficial effect through enriching the blood and strengthening the nerves. For growing girls, who become thin and pale, for pale tired women and for old people who fail in strength, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic. Their benefit in anaemic conditions is shown by the case of Miss Lucy Steeves, Hillsboro, N.B., who says: "Last spring I was in very poor health, and completely run down. I had severe headaches, the least exertion would cause my heart to palpitate violently, my appetite was poor, and at times I had fainting spells. This went on for some months, and although I was taking medicine I seemed to be growing weaker, and the least exertion would leave me worn out. Then on the advice of a friend I changed the treatment to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have great cause to be thankful that I did so, as they have made a wonderful improvement in my condition. I can now work without fatigue, go upstairs without becoming breathless, and have gained in weight. I think these pills are an ideal medicine in cases like mine. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A MILLION AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

In all probability, Sunday, September 25th, will see the largest Sunday School attendance there has ever been in Canada. Plans and propaganda have been under way for some months with a view to making Rally

Day which falls on this date not only an inaugural day for the beginning of the season's work, but also a real, big day in all Canadian Sunday Schools. A program including a special service for the day has been prepared by a joint committee of the Sunday School Boards of the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian churches, and one million copies of this have been distributed to Canadian Sunday Schools of these denominations. If present prospects are in any way realized there should be well over a million babies, boys and girls and grownups in the various Canadian Sunday Schools, on Rally Day.

THE WEEKLY HALF HOLIDAY

For some years now inconvenience has been caused to commercial travellers, loss to the houses they represent, and annoyance to the merchants of the country, through the hit-and-miss weekly half-holiday practice of the summer months. Travellers drop off a train to find that the half holiday falls on that particular day. Perhaps there is not a train for hours. The tendency then, is, if the traveller knows the merchants well, to call them on phone and try to discuss purchases in spite of the holiday, and the merchant either has to seem to be courteous to a man who, probably on many occasions has proved a true friend, or lose his holiday. Because of these inconveniences, this waste of time and money—there is growing up a feeling that something should be done to standardize the summer half holiday. If all places decided on Friday afternoon, say some, the travellers would be able to get home earlier and would not have their week unnecessarily broken up. There may be reasons against Friday. These are much to be said, however, for a generally accepted day. It would seem a matter which the United Boards of Trade might well consider.—Exchange.

DAY'S NEWS OVER THE RADIO

U. S. Postmaster-General Hays announces the embarkation of the Government on the development of a stupendous undertaking in radio telephony.

The project is the dissemination of weather and market reports and other Government information, news of the day and other matters of interest to offices and homes throughout the country, by the radio telephone. Involved in the undertaking is the big question of the control of radio telegraphy and telephony by the government.

With the system planned by Mr. Hays in operation, the farmer who installed the requisite receiving apparatus, now costing about $100, would receive on his farm the market, live stock, weather and other Government information disseminated from Washington at fixed times during the day. It is planned to have the country dotted with transmitting stations having a radius of transmission of 200 miles, from which the business man at his office, the farmer on his farm, and the urbanite in his home would receive the messages. The transmitting stations would receive the information broadcast by wireless from Washington. This radio service Mr. Hays plans to place under the direction of a new Bureau of Communications soon to be created in the Postal Department for the purpose of systematizing Government telegraphy. Mr. Hays says that by the use of leased wires and through other economies, the telegraphing bill of the Government can be reduced $250,000 a year.

Rub it in for Lame Back.—A brisk rubbing with Dr. Thomas Electric Oil will relieve lame back. The skin will immediately absorb the oil and it will penetrate the tissues and bring speedy relief. Try it and be convinced. As the liniment sinks in the pain comes out and there are ample grounds for saying that it is an excellent article.

WHEN BABY IS ILL

When the baby is ill; when he cries a great deal and no amount of attention or petting makes him happy, Baby's Own Tablets should be given him without delay. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus drive out indigestion and constipation; break up colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Desire Theberge, Trois Pistols, Que., writes: "I am well satisfied with my use of Baby's Own Tablets. I have found them of great benefit to my baby when he was suffering from constipation and I can strongly recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A workman at Thamesville was perhaps fatally crushed while helping to move a building. He crawled underneath the building to make an adjustment when the timbers gave way.

"THE CATS AT LAW"

Because the cats could not decide the proper method to divide a piece of cheese, they rushed apace to have the monkey judge their case. The monkey broke the cheese in two. Then nibbled at each piece in turn until the cheese was gone from view! From which amusing tale we learn the Moral that a legal row is Monkey business anyhow!

BATTLE OF WITS—BANKS AND CROOKS

That safe-makers and safe breakers carry on a continual struggle for supremacy, like the makers of shells and the makers shell-proof steel, is well known, and in the same way the banks and the cheque-swindlers are engaged in a contest of wits, with the swindlers usually about one jump to the good. Not long ago a crook took a large sum of money from a Toronto bank by means, not of a forged signature of the drawer of a cheque, but the forged initials of the clerk whose business it was to certify that there were sufficient funds to meet the check, and the stamp of certification. He presented the uncertified check for payment, and was told by the teller, to whom the man and signature were unknown that he would have to get the check marked. He turned toward the wicket of the accountant, and in a few minutes came back with the check apparently certified. It then was cashed. This swindler, no doubt, appeared at the bank with two checks, one already forged with the initial and the stamp, and the other requiring certification. The assumption of the paying teller that the customer had had the cheque initialed almost under his own eyes led him to pay the money.

About twenty years ago, or a little more, three or four Toronto banks were the victims of one of the neatest swindles ever put across. A man opened up an account of several hundred dollars in two or three banks. He drew on them frequently for small amounts, always presenting the checks in person, so that his face became familiar to the tellers. One day he went the rounds of the banks, with checks which he had the accountant initial. Instead of immediately presenting them for payment, he went home and raised the checks. On the following Saturday, shortly before the time the banks closed, he appeared with the forged checks bearing the accountants certification, and they were cashed. He chose Saturday, just before closing time, because the tellers would be busy, and also because before the swindle could be discovered he would have two days' start. One teller, as he paid the money out, seemed slightly dubious, and counted very deliberately. To him the swindler remarked "You'll have those bills all worn out by the time I get them." He smiled genially and the money was handed over. He was never caught. To prevent swindles of this kind the banks adopted the perforation system, which announces that the check is for not more than a certain amount. A check thus stamped could not be raised. In the case of the latest swindle, apparently the check was not perforated, and though the swindler had no account in the bank, the teller, seeing the apparent initials of the accountant, did not hesitate to surrender the money.

In Canada and the United States when there is a forgery the bank is the loser. If a swindler is clever enough to imitate the signature of a depositor who has an account so that the bank will be deceived, then the loss falls on the bank and not on the depositor. In England it is different. The loser is the depositor whose signature has been forged. To protect themselves against this, English check makers cross their checks, which means that they will be paid only through the clearing house. In this case the endorsements will usually be verified by the collecting bank. The difficulty of the banks is that, while they are familiar with the signatures of their depositors, they are not, as a rule, familiar with the signatures of those who endorse checks, and unless they make a thorough identification of unfamiliar payees, or until depositors describe them in detail, the banks are likely to be defrauded.

In some cases the courts find it difficult to discover whether the bank or the depositor should be held responsible for a loss. In one well-known American case the employe of a firm rented a post office box in the name of James Wilson, printed letter heads, and opened an account as Wilson with his employer's bank. Then he made out a bill to the company, as if goods had been sold by Wilson, and got the proper official to sign a check payable to Wilson, which was mailed to the address given on the bill. There the clerk received the check, endorsed and cashed it. The court in this case held that the firm was liable, since the case was one of impersonation, and that the bank had, in fact, paid the money to the person whom the company intended, namely, the person from whom it thought it had bought goods.

EDITOR GETS INTO TROUBLE

They tell lots of tales on the editors, but this is a new one: The editor of a Kansas paper went to attend a party given by one of his neighbors, where just a few weeks before, the home had been blessed with a new baby. The hostess met him at the door, and, after the usual salutation, he asked after the baby's health. The lady was hard of hearing, had a bad cold, and thinking he was asking about herself, answered that although she usually had one every winter, this was the worst one she ever had. It kept her awake at night a great deal, and at first confined her to her bed. Then noticing that the editor was acting very strangely, she said she could tell by his looks and actions that he was going to have one just like hers, and she asked him to come in out of the draft and sit down.

MISNOMERS

Articles in common use that have misleading names are responsible for many mistaken notions. Nothing is more natural than to assume that India ink comes from India, but it does not, any more than does India rubber. The former comes from China, and should be called Chinese ink, as it is in France, while India rubber comes from Central and South America. Camel hair brushes are not made from the hair of camels, but from the tails of Russian and Siberian squirrels. Genuine French brier root pipes are not made from the roots of brier, but from the root of a white heath, which reaches a considerable size, and is cultivated in the south of France. Silkworms are not worms, but caterpillars; sealing wax contains no wax; heartburn has nothing to do with the heart and sweet spirits of nitre contain no nitre. Finally, a centipede hasn't one hundred feet. The largest of them has only thirty feet.

AFRAID OF DOING TOO MUCH

There are some young people who live in the constant terror that they will do too much and earn more than their salary. And for this reason they never do anything without positive orders, and sometimes have to be told several times to do a piece of work. But it will be noticed that advancement comes very slowly to all such. Salaries are not increased to stimulate employees to do better work, but as a recognition that they earn more than they are getting. The business man may not say much when he sees that certain boys and girls in his employ are on the lookout to fill in their chinks of spare time. But the boy who empties the wastebasket without being told, the stenographer who dusts her desk while waiting to take dictation, and does not trouble herself to ask whether this is her rightful task, are on the way to make themselves necessary to the firm which employs them. There are numerous people to do as they are told, but the services of those who can act without orders are always at a premium.

THE WHISPERING TREES

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.) Trees whisper in the summer breezes. We have all heard them do it. Different kinds of trees have different and characteristic voices. There is a muffled plaint of the oak in a wintry blast, unlike the sibilant sigh of the pine. Pine trees are especially vocal, thanks to their myriads of "needles", which produce eolian notes when a breeze sweeps through them. Similar notes are sounded in the winter time by bare twigs and even branches. Naturally the pine needles give a smaller range of high-pitched notes than do the twigs and branches of oaks.

Prof. W. J. Humphreys of the United States Weather Bureau, says that as the eolian whispers of pine needles or the numerous twigs of the oak blend into a sound of considerable volume, so do the whispers of many trees blend into the well-known murmur of the forest. Often, particularly in a pine forest, in a leeward valley, one hears a low-sighing or moaning noise, which, as the wind over the crest grows to a gale, swells to a cataract roar that is awe-inspiring. It is an instance of the combined effect of multitudes of eolian whispers. The storm wind in winter, when one is glad to be safe indoors, has many voices and some musical notes. At the height of its fury it seems actually to howl about the chimneys and rooftops. These sounds are due to eddies in the moving air, attributable to interruptions of the air currents by the edges of the roof and other obstacles.

Petrolia Decoration Day was well observed, many hundred people going to the cemetery to care for the graves of their dear departed.

THE APPLE CROP

Present apple prospects are that Nova Scotia will have a commercial crop about 10 per cent. in excess of last year, while New Brunswick expects about 60 per cent.; Quebec not more than 35 to 40 per cent. and Ontario about 60 per cent. of 1920. In British Columbia the prospects are for a crop approximately twice that of last year, although the very dry weather which has prevailed for some time may lower this estimate, according to Fruit Bulletin No. 4. In England the long spell of unusually hot weather has seriously affected the crop. In the Northwest States the prospects are for a corresponding increase with that of British Columbia, but in the Middle West States the crop is very light.

Some States are practically a failure. New York State, one of Canada's greatest competitors, expects a crop of 2,988,000 barrels, while last year's production was 5,600,000 barrels. In fact, with the exception of Maine, no important barrel-apple State reports a crop above 60 per cent. of that of 1920. Virginia, one of our strongest competitors in the markets of the United Kingdom, will not have over 7 per cent. of a crop. Many inquiries have been received from buyers in the Middle West States, where barreled apples are popular, and several sales have been made at prices which in some instances, are higher than last year. The commercial crop in Canada, therefore, will be less than last year and in the United States 21,327,000 barrels as compared with 36,272,000 barrels last year and 26,223,000 in 1919.

In considering apple values we must not forget that the purchasing power in America and the United Kingdom has been considerably reduced since last year and, as the great mass of apple consumers in ordinary times are among what we are pleased to call the "middle or laboring class," this reduction in purchasing power will undoubtedly be reflected in the values of the culinary and less desirable varieties, and in the lower cost of packages and labor.

Another important factor affecting the apple market is the depletion of home supplies of canned fruit and jams, due to the high price of small fruits and sugar during the three years prior to 1921. During the present season the values of small fruits have been fairly well maintained, although the price of sugar has been greatly reduced. However, only a comparatively small quantity has been canned or preserved. The prospects for the tender fruits still to be marketed are not great and many will be dependent to a large extent on apples during the coming winter.

Apple buyers are active throughout the Newcastle district, according to F. C. Patterson, Agricultural Representative for Durham county. On account of the peculiar season and the state of the fruit-growing industry in that part of the Province prospects vary considerably from a good, clean crop in the large commercial orchards to a small dirty yield in the plantations of smaller size. Buyers are offering from a dollar to three dollars per barrel for orchards in a lump, depending on the state of the crop. Barrels are being easily obtained at eighty to ninety cents.

A PARODY OF 1921

Drink to me only with thine eyes, And I will toast with mine; For all the land is dry as dust, And we can't ask for wine. Don't leave a kiss within the cup— A kiss intoxicates. Inebriation is a crime In these United States. Drink to me only with thine eyes; And don't use them too much, Or you would make me drunk with bliss, And I would know the clutch Of legal hands upon my sleeve And languish in a cell. Because I drank your loving glance Not wisely but too well. Drink to me only with thine eyes, And do that on the sly. Lest those who guard our morals note You have a liquid eye. Let not your smile be one to make My spirits rise at all, For those who make the laws might think That spirit Alcohol! —Berton Braley, in Life.

It will Prevent Ulcerated Throat. —At the first symptoms of sore throat, which presages ulceration and inflammation, take a spoonful of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Add a little sugar to it to make it palatable. It will allay the irritation and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so painful. Those who were periodically subject to quinsy have thus made themselves immune to attack.

There is nothing repulsive in Miller's Worm Powders, and they are as pleasant to take as sugar, so that few children will refuse them. "THE GENTLEMAN RIDER"

A BRITISH MASTERCRAFT FILM

Competition is the hub around which the Wheel of Life revolves. It was a primitive instinct which manifested itself in various forms of savagery. With the growth of civilization this instinct, strong as ever, diverted to new channels less ferocious, so that among the most civilized peoples we find competition necessary to the success of any enterprise. The love of racing is thus an instinct inherent in every normal person because there is man's natural love of a horse and because the competition of a horse race is the most exciting of all trials of skill. This explains why pictures featuring a horse-race meet with so much popularity.

The big British Mastercraft Production "A Gentleman Rider" to be shown at Lyceum Theatre next Thursday is beyond doubt one of the best yarns of the turf ever put on the silver sheet. Coming direct from England, the cradle and home of horse racing where it is a tremendous hit, there is an atmosphere about the picture which at once excites and sustains that exaltation to its final thrilling climax.

No one bored by the humdrum of the workaday world and desirous of placing himself in a different environment should miss seeing this great exhibition of skill, matching of wits and thrilling situations. It is one of these rare things, a big, clean, absorbing entertainment to which you may take your parents or children. London went wild over it and Canada is bound to do the same.

BASEBALL

A fast and exciting ball game was played at the Waterworks park at 4.30 Wednesday afternoon, when Forest H. S. met Watford H. S. Splendid pitching by Smith, who struck out ten men, and brilliant support by the infield won the game for the local High School by the score of 9-4. Ross, pitching for Forest, was accorded poor support in the pinch. Crowe finished the game with better success. The line-up:

500 DEAD IN TEXAS FLOOD. $100,000 DAMAGE

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 11.—This city's list of known dead from the flood which swept over it early Saturday morning, to-day jumped to 45, with the finding of ten additional bodies under piles of debris in the heart of the business section.

City officials and several Mexican societies that are co-operating with civil authorities in the succoring of thousands of homeless, gave out statements estimating that the total death toll will range between 400 and 500 persons.

A re-survey of the flooded business district of the city and of the Alazan creek district, which was stripped of a thousand or more homes, resulted in the earlier estimates of loss from the flood being cut from $15,000,000 to $10,000,000.

With sunrise this morning and after the sun had spent a night in darkness, and with the streets patrolled by detachments of troops from nearby army posts, hundreds of business men, who were the victims of the flood plunged bravely, but with sober faces into the work of rehabilitation.

"Open for business Monday", is the sign which has appeared in front of almost every business establishment that was wrecked by the rush of water, that reached a depth of 12 feet on the downtown street—but in displaying such placards there is more optimism and never-say-die spirit than there is serious intent of really re-opening their shops tomorrow.

LETTER FROM MRS. WAKELIN

Tells Remarkable Story of Sickness and Recovery.

Toronto, Ont.—"I suffered greatly from weakness, seemed to be tired all the time, and had no ambition to do anything or go any place. My nerves were in bad shape, I could not sleep at night, and then came a breakdown. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and several of my friends advised me to use it, and it surely put new life into me. Now I am quite able to do all my own work, and I would strongly advise every suffering woman to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial."

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for more than forty years.

Anna's Merciless Critic

By CORONE REMINGTON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was not surprising that Anna Terhune should try writing for the movies. Everybody but the entirely illiterate and the abjectly lazy has tried it, is trying it or is going to try it tomorrow. Most folks experiment in film fiction because they fancy themselves a bit clever.

Anna, however, was prompted to that endeavor only because she was sure she was a little less stupid and a good deal less badly educated than Hazel Hazelhurst; and Hazel, so all Hillsburg was one morning informed by the Herald, had written and sold to the Imperial Films company a scenario called "Flaming Swords and Bleeding Hearts." Afterward Anna had seen the film herself, with the subtitle, "Story by Hazel Hazelhurst," as big as life.

It was an amazing thing to Anna, because Hazel, a spinner girl in the silk mill where Anna was a stenographer, had left school of her own volition at thirteen and was the kind of girl who talks slang exclusively, chews gum on the streets and goes to 10-cent dances.

If it were really true that inarticulate people like that could get hundreds and hundreds of dollars for just tacking together a few ideas and sending them to a film company, then Anna felt she was doing herself an absolute injustice by not trying her hand at this fairy game of chance. She would do it.

Wherefore, within the next six weeks, Anna by dint of much mental toil evolved three stories. Each was neatly typed and dispatched to the Colossal Photoplays company, at New York. And each, about a week after its departure, came back as unerringly as a homing pigeon. With each was enclosed the same printed form, stating that the Colossal company "regrets that the material submitted is not exactly suited to its present needs."

It was just at this time that the National Fabrics company decided to close down its Hillsburg plant for two weeks for "readjustment purposes." Anna, receiving assurance from the manager that she would not be affected by the readjustment proceedings, found herself with a fortnight's vacation on her hands.

She determined that the way to discover something about this scenario game, meantime, was to go to the place where it is played. So she made the first trip of her life to the metropolis, procured as comfortable a furnished room as New York's fantastic prices made possible to her limited purse, and set out next day to "learn the game."

Anna expected to get speech with a couple of scenario editors, at least, and to obtain from them some words of advice and suggestion; also, probably, to secure permission to visit a studio or two and witness screen drama in the making. She went to the Colossal's establishment first.

From a red-headed typist at the portal of the scenario department Anna received disillusionment. The scenario editor wasn't to be seen. Nobody was to be seen, except by appointment. A million people a day wanted to see somebody about scenarios. Anyhow, Mr. Highland was out. The associate editor was out, too.

Anna was on the point of beating a discomfited retreat when Ted Maltby, under inspiration to have an early lunch, emerged from an inner room. Ted, one of the Colossal's keenest scenario readers, nevertheless was a departmental joke for his softness of heart toward the genus "writing nut." He stopped, looking inquiringly at the red-headed girl and toward Anna.

"Perhaps I can be of service," offered Tom. The proffer was made in sacrificial kindness, but as Anna Terhune's face lighted in acknowledgment Ted whistled, mentally, in delighted surprise. "A regular girl!" he inwardly congratulated himself—"after, oh, Lord, these many hundreds!" Then, to Anna, "I am one of the readers—Maltby."

Anna told him her name. "Of Hillsburg?" Ted asked. "I have read several of your scripts lately."

"Oh, I'm so glad!" exclaimed the girl. "Then you will be the very person to advise me. That's what I have come for, you know."

Maltby experienced the sudden sense of depression that comes to him who is unexpectedly called on to break the news to the family of the victim. "I shall be delighted," he managed to say, however. "I was just going over to Forty-fourth street for much coffee and little food. Would you care to come? It's a wonderful place to talk."

New York is not Missouri, even on one's first day. Anna, quite to her own astonishment, accepted the invitation with no more ceremony than had accompanied its extension. Ten minutes later they were sitting, in the camaraderie of old acquaintanceship, at a little undraped table in the presence of a negligible luncheon and miraculous Brazilian brew.

"Now," said Ted, "I'm going to play the heavy—just mere plain brute. You've come to New York to get set right in this stunt of screen writing. You've had your scripts sent back and you've made up your mind to find the reason why and how to correct your faults. That's it, isn't it?"

"Why, yes. And I'm glad you—" "Wait," interrupted Ted. "You're not going to thank me; in a minute you're going to throw that coffee cup at my head, Miss Terhune"—Maltby's expression showed that he hated the task ahead of him—"I ask you to believe that I am animated by the sincerest, if quite sudden, friendship. There is only one thing for you to do about this work."

"I think I know what you are going to say," Anna interjected. "You're going to tell me I must start all over—begin at a beginning, somewhere—and learn the craft, just as any other must be learned."

"Wrong. Quite wrong. The only thing for you to do is to drop it. Quit it. Forget it. You'd never make a screen writer in a thousand years. There! I've said it—and mighty hard it was to say. I've read all the stories you've sent in. There's nothing the matter with them—except that they are hopeless. You're not a writer—I think you're a doer. You're not an imaginer of make-believe romances. If you'll pardon me, I think you're a million times more surely intended to live a real one. I don't believe you ever had any actual conviction that you could write—I can tell that from your stuff. I wish you would tell me just how you came to undertake it."

So kindly, so admiring, so ardently friendly and concerned were the big brown eyes of her merciless critic that Anna could feel no resentment. The only surprise she experienced was in not being surprised at all. And she told him, plump, about the Hazel Hazelhurst episode.

"My better judgment tells me you are wholly right, Mr. Maltby," she went on. "And yet how do you explain the success of that illiterate girl? If it were not for that one thing I could laugh at the whole idea—and devote the rest of my vacation to 'seeing New York' and having a good, wholesome time."

At the mention of the name Hazelhurst, Maltby had started imperceptibly. Now he looked at his companion for half a dozen long seconds before he answered. "I hate to spoil your Hillsburg celebrity's small glory," he said at length, "but in the person before you see the original and only Hazelhurst, author of 'Flaming Swords.' I stone an guilty of that atrocity—and my only excuse is that I needed the money. And you, Miss Terhune, aside from the lunatic who bought and produced it, alone know the shameful truth."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Anna, "do you mean that that girl at home merely lied—claimed the picture when she saw the name in a movie magazine or somewhere?"

"Your imagination improves, Miss Terhune," grinned Ted.

"Do you know how I feel?" demanded Anna suddenly. "Well, I feel as though some one had lifted a ton weight off my shoulders. I'm going straight home and tear up those foolish manuscripts and give three cheers and go to a perfectly good show!"

"Why not make it the shops this afternoon and the show tonight?" supplemented Ted eagerly. "I—I'd mighty well like to take you."

As they parted at the Broadway corner it wasn't disappointment that went along with Anna—disappointment doesn't sting in your heart. And Ted Maltby, looking after her, said to himself: "Two weeks. Well, many a pip-pin of a story has been built in less than that."

Three Big Questions Answered for Milk Dealers.

Shall I Sell Milk or Cream?—Should Cows Be Fed on Turnips?—How to Pack Butter for Keeping.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Shall I sell milk or cream? This will be determined to a large extent by the character of the farming operations. If the need for direct, quick cash in largest amount is great, then selling milk will best "fill the bill." On the other hand, if the dairy farmer can afford to wait for the slower returns from cream and live stock, and particularly if he desires to improve or maintain soil fertility, then selling cream is to be recommended.

Nearness to market is another factor. Where the dairyman is a small town and has the time to "milk" milk, he can make more money out of his cows than by any other system. At ten to twelve cents a quart, a good cow will return from $250 to $300 per year for her milk. When this is compared with $100 to $150 per cow, where cream is sold, or milk sent to a cheese factory or condensery, we see what a decided money advantage there is in selling milk to customers direct.

But this plan robs the young things on the farm—often the farmer's own children—of needed milk supply, hence many farmers are content with less ready cash in order to have better and more live stock, and consequently richer soil, which, after all, is the basis of good farming.—H. H. D.

Should Cows Be Fed Turnips?

This is an old question about which considerable difference of opinion exists. If my reader is Scotch, he or she will likely answer the question by saying, "Yes," as Scotchmen, turnips, and good farming are three things usually found together on farms in Ontario.

There was a time when butter buyers were not so particular about the flavor of butter as they are at present. It is common to hear women purchasers on city markets, say to farm butter-makers, "Your butter is turnipy and it is sufficient to cause a loss of the sale. Cream-erymen object very strongly to "turnipy cream." While it is doubtless true that some careful feeders are able to feed quite large quantities of turnips to cows giving milk, without causing any serious trouble, there is always a danger, which can best be avoided by not feeding these to milking cows. If they are grown on the dairy farm they are best fed to dry cows, fattening cattle, young stock, pigs, etc. However, if they are fed in the stable where cows are milking, and more especially where there is always danger, which can best be avoided by not feeding these to milking cows. If they are grown on the dairy farm they are best fed to dry cows, fattening cattle, young stock, pigs, etc. However, if they are fed in the stable where cows are milking, and more especially where there is always danger, which can best be avoided by not feeding these to milking cows. If they are grown on the dairy farm they are best fed to dry cows, fattening cattle, young stock, pigs, etc. However, if they are fed in the stable where cows are milking, and more especially where there is always danger, which can best be avoided by not feeding these to milking cows.

How to Pack Butter for Keeping.

The first point to observe in the packing of butter, in order to keep it well for winter use, is to have good butter. The best butter for packing is usually made in the months of June and September. It is preferably made from comparatively sweet cream which has been pasteurized. However, on the farm pasteurization is not commonly followed, hence the butter should be made when the weather is comparatively cool, and the cream should be churned before it becomes very sour. In fact, the sweeter the cream the more likely it is to produce good keeping quality in the butter, so long as there is sufficient acid on the cream to give good churning results.

The cream should be churned in the usual way, except that the butter may be washed once with brine, which is made by dissolving salt in water, instead of using water at both washings. Salt at the usual rate, but not over one ounce of salt per pound of butter, because salt does not preserve butter, as is commonly supposed, except in a minor degree for unpasteurized cream butter. It is a mistake, however, to add so much salt that the one layer of the butter is covered up.

Having worked the butter as usual, pack it in any tin crocks, boxes or boxes. If unpasteurized wood packages are used, these should be soaked several days in salt water to prevent "woody" flavor in the butter. A better plan is to coat the inside of the tin or box with hot wax, then line with neat, parchment paper, before packing the butter. Glazed crocks which are clean and

When the package is full, preferably all from one churning, smooth the top of the butter cover with parchment paper or a clean, oiled cloth, then the heavy, brown paper over the top and place in a cool cellar, or in cool storage, such as a salt paste is put on top of the cloth or paper, and this is kept moist by sprinkling on water from time to time. This excludes the air and helps to keep the butter.

FEEDING OF NEW GRAIN

Is Apt to Cause Trouble to Live Stock.

Horses More Susceptible Than Cattle —Pigs Do Better on It Than the Other Stock—Best Methods in Preservation of Hay.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Each year brings a certain amount of trouble through the feeding of new grain to live stock, and consequently greater care should be exercised to avoid digestive derangements.

The horse is generally considered a little more susceptible to digestive troubles following changes in feeding practice than are other classes of farm live stock. It is always well to make changes very gradually and carefully. The main grain feed of the horse in this country is oats, and new oats should always be fed with great care. Hard-worked horses should, if it is at all possible, be fed old oats, and the new grain left to dry and cure for a few weeks after threshing. At any rate to avoid colic, acute indigestion and inflammation of the bowels, a heavy concentrate ration. There is, of course, a difference due to the time of threshing. Grain which remains in stacks or mow for several weeks and then becomes dry and cured is not so dangerous as that threshed directly from the field or immediately after harvesting.

As a rule heavy feeding of grain is not practiced with cattle and sheep on pasture. Where such is the case, however, changing from old to new grain should be done with care and the substitution should be, if possible, gradual. If the ration must, of necessity, be composed entirely of newly-threshed grain it should at first be comparatively light and increased very gradually.

Pigs usually handle newly-threshed grain without much trouble, although if on very heavy rations when finishing for market a little care should be taken that they be not thrown off their feed. Newly-threshed grain is difficult to grind and is not easily stored, and large quantities of the ground grain may not be stored in bulk as heating and musting will result, lowering the feeding value of the grain by rendering it unpalatable and less digestible. Musty grain is more dangerous than clean, new grain.

These points should be kept in mind. First make all changes from old to new grain gradually. Secondly, if no old grain is fed as part of the ration start the new grain in small quantities, gradually increasing until the desired quantity is reached. Feed no heated or musty grain. —Vade Toole, O. A. College, Guelph.

Best Methods in Preservation of Hay.

In a season of labor scarcity hay-making is a problem on the average farm. It is necessary to make use of all the modern machinery available in order to expedite the saving of this important crop. First, then, we must emphasize the use of machinery in curing and storing. Hay is not to be had in plentiful supply, but in most cases some form of co-operation may be resorted to in order to obtain the use of tedders, hay loaders and horse forks to handle the bulk of the crop. By all means plan to use machinery in place of men this year or otherwise, as the volume of the crop will not be harvested in the best possible condition.

It is usually safe to cut after a rain when the weather appears to have cleared. Red clover should be cut when about one-third of the heads have turned brown. The tedder should then be used and the crop is dry enough to rake—a period which will vary according to the weather and the amount of sap in the stems. Water with a side-delivery rake if possible, or in small windrows with an ordinary dump rake. The hay loader works best with a small windrow. By all means use a loader if possible and to facilitate matters a SHING RACK may be used so that when one-half the rack is loaded it may be pulled ahead and the remainder loaded. In a pinch this will save a man. The horse fork and slings save much time in unloading.

We mention red clover because it is the commonest and most satisfactory hay crop, and is used in all general farming hay mixtures.

Timothy should be cut either after it is out of the first blossom or after the second blossom has fallen—generally the latter. It will require less tending than clover, is more easily cured, and may be drawn in sooner after cutting. Do not let it get too ripe and woody.

Alfalfa should be cut when the young shoots are noticed starting out from the axils of the lower leaves on the stalks, and should be handled much like red clover, only greater care is necessary to preserve the leaves, a very valuable portion of the plants.—Wade Toole, O. A. College, Guelph.

Good seeds are uniformly bright colored, whereas seeds that have been exposed to moisture, or that are dead, are duller and darker in color.

Some good disinfectant such as creoline, zenoleum, or carbolic acid solution applied to the navel of foals immediately they are born and each day for a week or more will often save the colt from navel ill.

Shepherd's Excuse.

Although shepherds have always been held to be poetical and reasonably righteous persons, they never have much opportunity to go to church and so when a shepherd in Sussex, England, a lock of wool is put into the coffin, so that when their record is looked up on the judgment day they may present this supreme excuse, writes a correspondent. Sussex is rich in quaint superstitions. If there are any "wild feathers"—feathers from game birds—in a pillow one cannot "die easy" on it, but lingers on in pain. It is unlucky to sell bees, but if a price be paid it must be in gold or hay. When the head of the house dies the bees are "told" and a piece of orange hung on the hive.—Montreal Family Herald.

Seventy Pounds of Meteor a Minute.

Our planet is getting heavier and heavier! How does that happen? Because of the meteors that are constantly falling on it. You may not have seen any of them fall, but the earth is a large place. In a year eleven thousand four hundred and thirty-five tons of meteors fall! This gives an average of seventy pounds per minute.

Much of this tonnage comes in the form of fine meteoric dust that settles all over the earth. However, a large meteor—too big to burn on entering our atmosphere—falls occasionally. Several years ago one of them fell in Iowa and exploded on hitting the earth. Over five thousand pieces were picked up and some weighed over four hundred pounds.—Popular Science Monthly.

Limited Time.

Isn't ever get the idea that Catalina Island is a slow place. Had you been close to the rock where Big Ben hangs out, on a certain recent Sunday evening you would have overheard the following:
"Mary, if I were to speak to you of marriage in spite of the fact that I only met you on the way over from San Pedro, what would you say to it?"

"Well, I might say never put off till the return trip what you might have said on the way over," answered Mary.—Los Angeles Times.

Del Malott and his brother Roy of Kingsville were leading a colt behind a buggy when the colt became frightened and jumped onto the buggy, smashing it down. This frightened the horse drawing the buggy and it ran away, dragging the two men along the road a considerable distance before they managed to free themselves from the rig. The hands of both were badly bruised and torn. The horses were not seriously hurt.

At a picnic held at Oakdale in the township of Dawn recently a farmer tied his horse to a tree with a stout rope about the neck. When the picnic was over the farmer went to get his horse and found the animal making frantic efforts to free itself and swollen in every part from the stings of yellowjackets. The horse had disturbed a nest of the insects near the tree to which it was tied. A vet was called and said the horse could not live.

Ronald Wilson, 11-year old son of F. W. Wilson, painter, who attends the Essex Public School, secured a cap that is used in setting off glycerine, and at recess on Wednesday afternoon, tried to find out what was in it by striking it with a stone, with the result that an explosion followed. The lad's left hand was injured, the thumb and middle finger being badly lacerated, while the other fingers were also cut and bruised. His right leg below the knee was also lacerated.

F. Strangway, a young 10th line, Enniskillen farmer was arrested early on Wednesday morning on a charge of seducing Edith Pearl Stark of Enniskillen, a young girl under eighteen years of age. Mr. McEachern, of Bridgen. About 45 guests were present. The bride wore a gown of white embroidered crepe de chine, with tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shaver bouquet of pink roses. The happy couple took a camping trip up the lake and returned here Tuesday evening. They are residing with their parents.

A demonstration of the latest development in farm machinery, as applied to the harvesting end of it, was given at Downview on Wednesday of last week, when there was shown at work, in a field of barley, a Massey-Harris machine that cuts and threshes the grain in one operation. The machine, drawn by a tractor and operated by a 27-horsepower motor cuts a 12-foot swath, forces the cut grain into a miniature threshing outfit, and pours the cleaned, threshed grain into one bag and the screenings into another.

A SMILE OR TWO

"Hello, Sam! Got cut again, I see?" "Yes, sah! I done got carved up with a razor, Doc."

"Why don't you keep out of bad company?" said the physician, after he had dressed the wound.

"Deed I'd like to, Doc, but I ain't got 'nuff money to git a divorce."

The story is told that in General Butler's early days a Yankee obtained his legal opinion how to recover the value of a ham which a neighbor's dog came along and ate. He was advised to prosecute and recover for damages. "But the dog was yours," said the sharp Yankee. Butler opened his eyes a little, asked him what the ham was worth, was told five dollars, and then said: "Fortunately that is exactly the price of the legal advice I have just given you."

Willie's birthday presents included a compass. Not quite understanding what it was, he handed it to his teacher, who explained the cardinal points.

"Now, Willie," she began, "you have north on your left. What have you behind?"

Willie looked very thoughtful for a moment, then suddenly scowled.

"I knew you'd see it, teacher," he exclaimed angrily. "I told mother when she sewed it on that everybody would see it, but she wouldn't take no notice."

Just as two Irishmen were in the middle of a large field, one of them turned and saw an angry bull making for them.

With a yell of warning he bolted, and just managed to clear the hedge. His companion less nimble ran wildly round the hedge to find an opening.

Twice he went round without escaping. Then as he passed his anxious friend for the third time he shouted: "Tell my missus my insurance policy is in the bottom drawer. This is my last time round."

Among the regular visitants to the consulting room of a Philadelphia physician is an elderly extremely garrulous lady. On one occasion the doctor had patiently endured a lengthy recital of her troubles and had written out a new prescription. She got up to leave and was about to pass the threshold when suddenly she turned and said:

"But, doctor, you haven't looked to see whether my tongue is coated." "My dear lady," wearily replied the physician, "one doesn't look for grass on a racetrack."

A Negro employed at one of the movie studios in Los Angeles was drafted by a director to do a novel comedy scene with a lion.

"You get into this bed," ordered the director, "and we'll bring in the lion and put him in bed with you. It will be a scream."

"But," protested the director, this lion won't hurt you. This lion was brought up on milk."

"So was I brought up on milk," wailed the Negro, "but I eats meat now."

Mabel was telling Isabel of the shy young man that had been for some months "gone" on her, but whose suit had languished because he simply hadn't the courage to speak out. Finally, Mabel said, she decided that it was "up to her" to take decisive measures. Accordingly the next time he called she pointed to the carnation in his buttonhole and said: "I'll give you a kiss for that carnation." Whereupon the bashful suitor's color outdid the carnation in brilliancy, but the exchange was effected. Then the young man grabbed his hat and started to leave the room. "Where are you going?" demanded Mabel, surprised. "To the florists for more carnations." He called out as he shot through the doorway.
