He would welcome a solid sixty-five seats from that province, and he has built around himself an organization to get as much Quebec support as he can. He has Armand Lavergne as one of his chief workers, and this fiery Frenchman is pointing to Mr. Meighen as the chief hope for bringing the French language into general use

Montreal Gazette: "Mr. Lavergne charged the Frenchspeaking Liberals in the house of commons with having failed to uphold the rights of the French language throughout the country In this respect Mr. Lavergne stated that Hon. Mr. Meighen has the Toronto Telegram in Ontario picturing him as the one man to save Canada from Quebec domination, and in Quebec he has Armand Lavergne pointing to him as the one man to "make the teaching of French obligatory in all the provinces." It is the finest Janus-faced exhibition of the whole campaign.

"We need men today of the type of Macdonald and Laurier. It seems strange that these two great leaders should have been born in almost the same year. Of the two I prefer Macdonald, a man who knew enough to make up his mind, decide a question for himself and then fight it through, refusing to be swayed from his purpose.

The only thing wrong with this eulogy is that it is not correct. Sir John A. Macdonald was born in 1815, and Sir Wilfrid in November said the government had no immigration policy. of 1841. After construction was well under way in the west the builders of the C. P. R. came upon evil days. Work on the prairies had been easy, but when the engineers came to look for a roadbed through the hopeless tangle of mountain peaks in the Rockies, and build a way around the north shore of Lake Superior, they found construction costs mounting at a pace that was ruinous. Homestead entries in the west, which reached 7,500 in 1882, fell to 3,000 in 1883 and 1,500 in 1885. The government had put up a clear gift of 700 miles of road; granted a cash subsidy of $25,000,000, and a land grant of all its own. It dusts it off for every contest, and 25,000,000 acres in selected territory. In spite this one is no exception. But the sequel must be told to get the view clear. Leaving Earnscliffe, the deputation went to the old Bank of Montreal cottage, where they found John Henry Pope, acting minister of railways during the absence of Sir Charles Tupper in England. Pope heard their story of defeat, put on his old otter cap and shaggy coat, called a carriage and left with the words "Wait till I get back." He returned at half-past two in the morning and his answer to the expectant deputation was "Well, boys, he'll do it. Stay

Mr. Meighen, in one of his maritime speeches,

Those Big Pants

Before you criticize the style and name it as a useless fad, just read what good this one pair did in clothin'

I read of where a man had said that styles of clothes the young men wore, they made him mad as he could get and left his temper raw and sore. And from that point he went along to lecture at us through and through, about the garments we should wear, includin' of the women too.

He held the way the ladies dressed was nothing short of flagrant sin, what right have they paradin' out, exposin' both their neck and shin? He'd take them one by one away, accusin' them of wanton shame, he'd carve from sackcloth web a garb and drape it lengthwise on their frame. He raided youths of nowadays who wear their pants cut big and wide, and said it was a sin to take big swaths of cloth to deck their hide.

For there was folks in winter time, or in the shiverin' days of fall, who hardly had a rag to wear, and some they had no pants at all. So these young men should look around and see as how the pants they buy don't spoil the chances that would make some britches for another guy, Perhaps he's right, most like he's wrong. I heard about a case today, where one young chap he shed such pants and tossed them heedlessly away. His mother cut them square in two and then she started in to sew, she made a suit of clothes for Tim, another one for little Joe. And then she had so much more stuff she made an overcoat for Jane, to shelter her in winter days and keep the sleet from off her frame. So there's a case that shows to me some virtue in these styles what's new, and illustratin' all the good a pair of brother's pants can do.-ARK.

A whole day will go by without a single murder. Then the Chicago papers have a peculiar bare, dumb look. Everybody sits around in a sort of hush.

But all is well. The following morning, the usual cheery world is rackety once more with news of murder.

Chicago is proud of its murder. Of course, there are those amongst the three and a half million people in greater Chicago who protest that they are pained by the city's crime record. But you will find all sorts of people in a city of that size.

You take the average taxi driver or young business man or the lady who sits at a desk on each floor of the hotel, and they will tell you first about the murder record and second about the Boulevarde.

"Chicago, you know," says any one of them, "has a murder a day. Oh, yes! That's more record?" than the whole of Britain put together. Have you been on Michigan Boulevarde yet? No? Well, to-day ain't so windy, but you take a walk along there on a windy day! My....!"

Here are the figures afmounced by the Chicago police for the three most popular forms of crime for the past few years. The figures are stated to be absolutely accurate. As a matter of fact, in order to get the figures right, the police hadn't the time to capture even half the criminals involved. But the figures are right, you understand. Ab-so-lute-ly.

1919 1920 1921 1922 1923 1924 330 194 190 228 270 347 Burglary 6,108 5,495 4,774 4,301 3,019 2,155 Robbery 2,912 2,782 2,558 2,007 1,402 1,799

This year, so far, there have been 262 murders to date, which brings it out exactly right, a murder a day, including Sundays and holi-

Now, you will observe from the above table that while burglary has fallen fearfully, from 6.000 to only 2,000 in six years, and robberywhich means hold-up-has been appreciably reduced, murder, on the contrary, has showed a steady increase. Murder is obviously Chicago's pet crime. Take away their burglaries. They can do without their hold-ups. But spare them heir murders. Woodman, woodman!

There is rarely anything poetical or mysous about Chicago murders. They are what police call open-and-shut. A husband tires s wife. What will he do with her? Why. her. A wife grows weary of her husband, such a mutt. What will she do? Why,

There is the case of a man who shot his the police had been hunting for him for two weeks, he came back from his honeymoon and gave himself up. The trial lasted fifteen months, owing to the fact that he was a traveler and MURDER a day keeps the angels away. had to be on the road a great deal of the time. There are no angels in Chicago. For A lot of the witnesses went away, and those that were left had forgotten most of the facts, Of course, it doesn't run on a daily schedule. having got them mixed up with other murder cases they had witnessed or read of. So that finally, the judges who were trying the case failed to get re-elected in the big elections, and the new judges, not knowing the first year of the case, dismissed the matter from their minds, as they wished to begin their careers with a clean sheet.

The Reward of Faith

T HINK of that second wife, receiving her husband back to her arms freed of all stain! Her heroism rewarded. And it was really clever of her to have gone on all that time without shooting him, until he was cleared.

Now she is free to do as she likes, of course. Jesting about murder is unseemly. But Chicago and her crime situation has reached the jesting stage. It is hard not to be jocular about Chicago's police and judges, her crime and criminals, her social condition as a whole. To a high police official, we put this ques-

"What is the explanation of Chicago's crime

His answer:

"Politics." The police are appointed and controlled by the elected city officials. The judges are elected for a short term of six years. The prosecuting attorney, the clerk of the court, everybody, is support of the bosses. Countless hundreds of good men have run for all these offices on a ticket of reform, refusing the support of the bosses. None of them ever won. The men who chase the criminals, who catch them; the men who try the criminals, who

Nobody can hope to be elected without the prosecute them; all are elected. To keep their jobs, they have to pay attention to the requirements of the bosses who virtually elected them. What this leads to, you are not asked to guess. In 1923, there were 270 murders in Chicago. There were 135 persons tried for murder, of which 56 were sentenced to the penitentiary and 9 were sentenced to death. Of the nine, one was hanged! Seventy of those tried were acquitted. Life, you might say, is sacred in Chicago.

One life paid for 270 lives! If this extraordinary ratio holds good in murder, what must the harvest be in mere property crime such as burglary and hold-up? Chicago, however, seems to care more for property than for life. Because, it has been the stricter application of the law in cases of burglary and hold-up that has caused the decrease in these crimes in the past five years.

The real trouble for criminals started in Chicago in 1917. One day an express company's truck, with two armed guards aboard besides the driver, pulled up at a big munitions plant there are about ten thousand with the payroll of $9,000. A touring car was halted at the entrance. As the express motor paused at the door, bandits in the other car fired sawed-off shot guns, killing the guards and driver, and decamped with the cash payroll. There was no hold-up. Just a flat

Chicago went up in the air. This was too much. At the Chicago Association of Commerce, the big business men of the city got mad. If nobody else would look out for the life and property of the city, they would. So they formed a committee of their wwn members to see what could be done.

The first president of this committee was Edwin W. Sims, Canadian born, a prominent lawyer and ex-judge.

In 1920, after a couple of years of discussion, this body took a charter in the state as the Chicago Crime Commission, with Colonel Henry Barrett Chamberlin, one of the original promoters of the idea, as its operating director. He was a former newspaper editor and owner, a lawyer, soldier and what not. He had a thorough knowledge of Chicago's problem.

The first year the crime commission got busy there were eighteen hangings in Chicago. The murder rate fell from 330 in 1919 to 194 in 1920 and 190 in 1921.

10,000 Professional Criminals

HE crime commission's method was very simple. They simply made an independent investigation of every case, of each adjournment, and, with the power of the Association of Commerce back of them, brought the facts to notice. In the offices of the commission are files covering every crime committed in Chicago since 1920. with a record of every criminal, and of the disposition of every case. There are upward of 200,000 files in this collection.

Colonel Chamberlin, the director, says that

criminals of all serts in Chicago. "That is less than a third of one per cent. of the population. Yet the crime which they commit is out of every proportion with the population. In my opinion, Chicago's unenviable crime record is due entirely to public indifference. Chicago is a careless city, not a wicked city. The problem is further complicated by the fact that there are twenty-seven nationalities making up the city, most of them creating a large enough colony to make a separate problem in itself. There are more Poles, for example, in Chicago than in any city in Poland.

"Each of these groups has brought its own social customs, its passions and habits with it. What means their police in Europe had of dealing with them the Chicago police do not know, and in any case would not likely be free to employ. They are a free people here, and freedom has its price.

"The cure of the evil," says Colonel Chamberlin, "lies in the administration of justice. Justice is a simple thing, intelligible to all races. But the laws of this state are in a sad state of antiquation. They need to be rewritten and revised. As they stand now, there is a loophole in every paragraph, every phrase. The law of precedent has piled up mountain high. In the state of Illinois we are using English law, for example, that has been rejected in England for hundreds of years."

The comical plight of the States, naving got rid of the King of England but bound in a hundred ways by the will of remote kings and barons, is one that amuses Colonel Chamberlin.

"We put a bill for the revision of our criminal laws before our legislators last year, but it was thrown out by the people."

The absurdity of the situation is shown by the bail bond system. Murderers can get bail. Louis Bernstein, whose business was professional bondsmen for criminals, owned a buildturn its head to look at its neighbors. Chicago has roughly six thousand men on

In the downtown district and in those regions where crime flourishes, detectives in large automobiles patrol small areas constantly day and night. They are called say he is poor who has a friend, and the richest man is poor if he lacks

This being the case, we are foolish indeed if we miss any opportunity of making friends, and to make friends we must make as conscious an effort as we do to achieve any other end. There must, of course, be the first natural attraction of two congenial souls to each other, but beyond that we must do something to bind our friends

We must show them little attentions. We must help them in trouble. We must rejoice in their triumphs. We must give continued evidence that they are in our hearts and our thoughts. Small gifts, a telegram of con-gratulation, a letter of condolence, remembering anniversaries, remembering their likes and dislikes and prejudices, hospitality, all of these are the links in the chain of friendship that we forge that binds people to us.

You say you can't make the first advance toward people, Kate. That month. Why should you not seek them out, as well as expect them to seek you? DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-Last summer I made the acquaintance of a very charming and beautiful girl who, I am sorry to say, is engaged to another man. The girl also fell in love with me. But her fiance refuses to break the engagement, and we do not know what to do. What is the right and honorable course to take? MISERABLE.

Answer: If the girl loves you more than she does the other man, she should break her engagement to him and marry you. Often a mistaken sense of honor makes a man or woman marry one for whom he or she has lost all affection. But in reality there could be no more dastardly deed, for, while they keep the letter of their engagement, they break the spirit.

No man wants to marry a woman whose love for him is dead and who, groom. perhaps, has given her heart to an-No man desires to drag an unwilling bride to the altar. And so if a man's or woman's sentiments have changed toward the one to whom he or she is betrothed, the least he or she can do is to tell his or her flance in time.

For after marriage you cannot keep up the ghastly pretence of a love you do not feel. It is only in romance that a man can play a part DOROTHY DIX.

TOLMIE MADE A BREAK AND LADIES LAUGHED

But Conservative Organizer's Nimble Wit Soon Pulled Him Out of Bad Hole

By P. W. LUCE

· HE HON. DR. S. F. TOLMIE, minister of agriculture in the Meighen cabinet, and new federal organizer for the Conservative party, has a fine, resonant voice and a nimble wit. The former got him into an awkward corner in Montreal recently; the latter extricated him from the difficulty as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Some time ago the Jewish workers of the big Quebec city began to show unmistakable signs of political restlessness. Quick to seize such advantage as might accrue to his party, Dr. Tolmie hurried from Ottawa and proceeded to spread the Conservative gospel where it would do most good.

One of Dr. Tolmie's public appearances was at the organization meeting of the Jewish Women Workers' Conservative Association, where he was billed as the chief speaker. It fell to his lot to explain to the ladies something of the manner in which women's Conservative organizations were helping the cause in other parts of Canada, and in the course of this he touched on the matter of finances.

Speaking in loud, clear tones, and pronouncing every word most distinctly, Dr. Tolmie

"Most women's organizations prefer to be self-supporting. They raise the money they need they go along, and I would suggest that you Jewish ladies do the same. One of the most popular methods is the holding of whist drives where every player is charged a small fee and prizes are awarded the winners of the tournament. These prizes may be vases, books, cut glass, or other ornaments, or, if you prefer, such useful things as a sack of flour, a ton of coal, a large ham-

The hilarious uproar that followed the suggestion that Jews would welcome a gift of ham puzzled the worthy doctor for a moment, but he soon recovered his mental poise and five minutes later, when the hubbub had somewhat subsided, he was able to make himself heard by a tremendous effort.

"What I was about to say," he roared, "was that you might offer a prize of a hamper of provisions, but I would not venture to suggest what kind of provisions."

A VERBOSE MAN!

M. BRIAND, the French foreign minister, who has been visiting London recently, has a turn for epigram almost as biting as that of M. Clemenceau. Recently a senator in criticizing a bill in the chamber declared, "When I first read the text of the measure I thought I was becoming crazy." "Becoming," murmured M. Briand, audibly. "How fond M-- is of unnecessary words."

Baldwin's Gift to Britain is Hidden

VERY interesting story about Mr. Stan-A ley Baldwin, the present premier of Great Britain, a story that presents his patriotism and generosity in a most attractive light, has just got into print in London.

Six years ago a letter appeared in the London Times over the signature of F.S.T. The writer spoke of the difficulties of the post-war situation, the terrible burden of debt under which the nation must bend, the necessity of making people understand that the love of country was a thing that demanded sacrifice. He said that his personal fortune was about £590,000. He would put one-fifth of that sum into government bonds, which he would turn in to be cancelled. He hoped that his gift of one-fifth of his fortune to the country would encourage other men of means to do the same.

F. S. T. was Stanley Baldwin; the initials stood for Financial Secretary of the Treasury, ne office he then held. He was as good as word. He bought bonds worth some threerters of a million dollars and gave them to the treasury. A few other patriotic followed his example, but only a few. In bout $2,500,000 was thus donated to the . Only a handful of men knew at the who F.S.T. was, but the story was too arkable to remain a secret forever.

Lean Days of Youth Stay With Statler

Famous Hotel Man Has Great Sympathy -Eats Little and Dresses Very Poorly

M. STATLER, the famous hotel builder, is a self-made man, having climbed to millionairedom from the lowliest beginnings. He is said to be a man of great human sympathy and has adopted four children, two boys and two girls, and is taking as keen a personal interest in their welfare as though they were of his own flesh and blood.

He has not forgotten what he missed as a boy. At the age of nine he was firing the "glory hole" in a glass furnace and had to support nine other members of the family. For three years he came regularly each day to that fiery hole and knew nothing of schooling or play.

It was probably these lean days that made him a man of simple tastes, especially as regards his food and wearing apparel.

"Mr. Statler probably spends less for the food he eats and the clothes he wears than many 25dollar-a-week clerks," said one of his close really hungry he has a small portion of fish. "When he gets a new suit he wears it continually until his wife or someone else tells his tailor to grab him and measure him for a new one, and he usually has but one pair of shoes.

IT WASN'T LUMBER THEY WERE SEEKING

Scientists Wanted Different Kind of Logs

is a well-known fact that the 1925 eclipse put Long's Corners, Ont., on the map, not to mention on the front page wherever newspapers are printed; and at the same time it shed a new light on what should not have been a dark spot even in Hamilton. It chanced that during the days of preparation for observing the natural phenomenon, Professor C. A. Chant and Dr. R. K. Young of Toronto University had occasion to require certain mathematical tables, and enquired for same at several of the Ambitious City's bookstores. In response to a demand for log. tables, a small "ready reckoner" was displayed, which, upon examination, proved to contain tables for computing the lumber in logs!

It was then explained that tables of logarithms, or mathematical tables, were the object of the search, but this did not seem to make matters any plainer to those in charge of the book shelves. At last a stock-soiled copy of Salmon's "Conic Sections" was unearthed, also one of Cherriman and Baker's "Trigonometry," published in 1888, the latter containing the necessary information. This was purchased for 25 and perhaps taught someone a needed lesson in the gentle art of selling books.

SUZANNE OF SEVENTY WINS TENNIS PRIZE

Remarkable Examples of Elderly Athletic Skill

CHESHIRE woman, Mrs. William Jones, who is seventy-four years of age, recently won a prize in a tennis tournament in which she played forty games.

Statistics prove that the average length of life has increased by ten years in the past two generations, and not only is the length of life increasing, but the old standards of age are disappearing. People who have led healthy lives are young at fifty, and merely middle-aged at seventy. One morning recently a clergyman, the Rev. A. Sheal, aged seventy-two, left Northrop, Flintshire, on a bicycle, and arrived in Londonafter covering 198 miles—the same evening.

Major Shackle, Master of the Bucks and Berks Staghounds, is now sixty-four. He not only hunts, swims, and boxes, but last year was in the final of a tennis tourament at Eastbourne in which he met Mr. M. J. G. Ritchie. THE SIMPLE LIFE AT KING'S CASTLE

Movie Shows Three Nights Each Week

THE royal circle at Balmoral Castle is a small one this fall. Only Prince Henry is there to accompany the King on his shooting and deer stalking expeditions. Life at the castle is far different from that of Queen Victoria's day, when the servants dreaded the twice yearly expeditions northward.

Now about three nights a week there is movie show in the ballroom. The King and Queen attend with any guests they have and the royal servants sit around them.

Although they naturally favor British films the King has a decided weakness for American comic and athletic pictures. When the movies are over and the servants want to dance the chairs are piled up and the gramophone is turn-

During the race a sudden squall blew up and became alarming. On the King's yacht the crew were seen shortening the sail, and the skipper of the Shamrock was giving the same order to his men when Bernays Johnson, a radio engineer, who was a guest of Sir Thomas, intervened.

The signals from a broadcasting station were coming in quite clearly, evidence that no static existed, and because of this Mr. Johnson turned to Sir Thomas and said:

Just after the war, feeling in the House was very tense, and many exchanges of words passed across the floor as to the participation or nonparticipation of members and their relatives in the great conflict. Unfortunately for Him He's King of Bulgaria

So Certain People Feel Called Upon to Attempt Assassination-Personally He's All Right

N attempt was recently made by wouldbe assassins on the life of King Boris of Bulgaria. A few years ago this would have been a matter of less than no account. Attempted assassinations in the Balkans seemed to be sort of a spare time amusement and one simply said, "Oh another" and yawned.

But eleven years or so ago one of these affairs was brought to a successful conclusion in those same Balkans and was followed by the nearest thing to a world war the earth has Since that date, near-killings in all parts of Europe are viewed with general interest. When the object of attention is a ruling monarch, the case becomes one for everybody to discuss, for ruling monarchs are rare these days.

What kind of a man, therefore, is this King Boris. It may be remembered that the cables recently carried a great deal about him announcing that he intended to start a crusade for a suitable wife. Dozens of guesses were made as to his possible choice. Then came the attempt on his life.

But Boris has no ambition to be a benedict. He is happily unmarried according to his own confession. "I am too poor," he declares, "and my country is too troubled for me to contemplate such

One of the reasons given for the proposed financee-hunt was the fact that Boris was the loneliest man in Europe. This allegation he also denies. He explains that one of the things which a Balkan king does not have, is spare time in which to be lonely.

Whenever he does have an hour or so to spare, his love of all varieties of mechanism comes into play. He has few peers as a motorist and there are few things he does not know about the car he drives.

After motor cars, come locomotives. He likes their intricacy and has never ceased to marvel at the accurate way in which a locomotive will respond to the controlling hand

Then he hunts, climbs and botanizes, all hobbies in which his all-round knowledge places him well above the average amateur. When he becomes interested in anything, his researches are many and long.

He is a very human sort of person, very likeable, very conscientious about his duties as the ruler of a country and very accurate in his judgments. Unfortunately for him, he is a king and there are people who feel it their duty to attempt an assassination no matter what the man's personal characteristics.

Were they kings themselves, these people would probably try to commit suicide. And probably not.

B.C. MINISTER'S HOURS OF FAME

Hon. Wm. Sloan Looked Like President Harding

HE publishers of the Vancouver Sun have I just issued a small book as a souvenir of the exchange of fraternal greetings which took place between Canada and the United States when the late President Harding visited British Columbia in July, 1923. It will be remembered that the late president delivered an address in Stanley Park and the Sun publishers had a large picture depicting that historic occasion, painted by John Innes, the Canadian painter. This picture now bangs in the National Press Gallery at Washington, having ben formally presented to the American people by Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, and accepted by President Coolidge.

But not all of the occurrences of that memorable occasion are set forth in the booklet recently published, as the Hon. William Sloan, minister of mines for B.C., can testify. The close resemblance of Mr. Sloan to the late president gave the secret service men many anxious moments, trying to solve how Mr. Harding could be in two places at once. "Here he comes!" was heard more than once from groups through which Mr. Sloan wandered, who mistook the handsome looking provincial minister for the chief executive of the United State. The minister enjoyed the situation and did not hesitate to say that he felt flattered on several occasions during the day.

JOHN D.'S ADVICE IS ADDED TO SMALL TIP

"When I emerged from the club house after depositing Mr. Rockefeller's club bag with the custodian of those things, the great oil magnate was standing on the steps with one hand in his pocket. He favored me with a weary smile and bcekoned me to his side. I felt that this was to be an important moment in my life. 'What do you do with the money you earn?'

'I've never earned very much,' I answered.

'This is one of the first jobs I ever had.' 'Every boy should save,' he said gravely. 'If you start saving when you are young you won't have to worry when you are old. Save part of everything you make.'

"Then he gave me a dime. "That was twenty-five years ago. "Did I take it and follow it? "Shamelessly, I confess I did not.

"I still maintain, however, that it was the soundest advice I ever disregarded."

WALKER OF NEW YORK LIKE "TOMMY CHURCH"

Tammany's Mayoralty Candidate is a Typically Native Product-A Lawyer For Actors

C TATE SENATOR "JIMMY" WALKER, who is going to try and oust John F. Hylan from the New York mayoralty in the coming election, is the most typical New Yorker who has ever run for office. He has New York stamped all over him, according to reports. His accent, with just a suspicion of "thoid" and "foist," would betray him anywhere. He belongs on Broadway-nowhere else.

In making a political speech Walker has all distinct earmarks of a Broadwayite. He talks through the corner of his mouth, he slips in a few grammatical errors and is careful to include the very latest in slang when speaking to the multitude. He is a perfect master of the New York crowd.

In many respects this Tammany candidate seems to resemble the famous "Tommy" Church, who was mayor of Toronto for seven years and is now a member of parliament. Jimmy Walker knows everybody in New York worth knowing The stars of sport, the theatre, the movies, all hail Jimmy Walker. His life has been spent in making friends. It is his boast that he knows personally more people than any other man in New York. From morning until midnight and after, Jimmy Walker is a real part of New York life. No big sporting event is complete without him, he is present at the "first nights" at the shows, he is a welcome guest at the dancing cabarets as well as the fashionable hotels. He seems to be everywhere.

Early in life he had an ambition to be a song writer and to go on the stage. He still dresses like an actor. He has a weakness for velvet figured vests, tight coats with a long split up the back and vivid shirts. He wears the typical fur collared actor's overcoat in the

But Walker is no dilettante. He has a perfect mastery of city and state finance. Where he ever got the time to equip himself so theroughly is a mystery.

Walker is a lawyer by profession but not one of the leaders of the bar. His practice is closely allied with the theatrical and movie business and has been very profitable. Nevertheless, he has no money. He spends it or gives it away as fast as he makes it. He is as generous as if he had millions.

Although Walker is a college product he confesses to not having read a dozen books since he left college. He has a curious way of gaining information. He finds he can best retain facts by having things read to him. He spends a couple of hours a day listening while some friend reads to him from newspapers, particularly the political news.

tell that the participants were the best players in the province, and I was glad to see our fellow townsman, Mister Sims, come through with high score. It was quite an honor, when we consider that cream of the golf world was there. I do not understand the terms of golf, but I heard someone mention tee, but that is not what some of the spectators carried on their hips. There were three rounds, one in the morning, another in the afternoon, and I understand another round was served in liable to lose their amateur standing for competing with pros. They tell me as funny, being a baseball fan, was that the players did not attempt to run after hitting the ball. They walked along quite leisurely and no attempt was made to tag them. Mister Carroll's ball players would steal a lot of bases if they ever took up golf. However, it appears to be a great game for the man who can keep his eye on the ball, a difficult

Louis Guisto is through with baseball, it is said. He goes out a martyr, though there is not a drum beat for him that we have heard. Guisto did more than forty Ruths when the time came that a country needed something.

Guisto learned to play ball in California, and one day he left California to play ball in the east with the reputation of being one of the best "native sons" who had graduated from coast baseball.

A later day he went to war.

He was gassed, outrageously gassed by the most dastardly method of warfare to which a so-called civilized nation ever resorted.

He came home and when he thought he had recovered he tried to play ball again for Cleveland. But the hurt was too deep, too lasting for athletic work. He thought that a return to California might help him and he went back to his native state to play.

But he was burned out. His fight had been valiant and his courage beyond price. He batted a two-bagger ope afternoon in Sacramento and when he had reached second base he fell down. His team mates picked him up and carried him to the bench, but he has not played ball since.

He gave all he had, first to his game and then to his country, and then tried again for his game. A player gets two columns of flapdoodle daily because he was fined $5,000 for violating the rules of his life.

London. MEANS REAL TEAM

With four stars of the famous Hamilton collegiate track squad in camp, as well as all the members of last year's team, Western University bids well to clean up in the intercollegiate meet to be held in Montreal on Oct. 16.

The quartet that hails from the Ambitious City is well known to track fans throughout the country, as they hung up several precious records last season, and kept most of the other athletes on their toes. The newcomers are Ted Mepham, who specializes in the quarter mile, and who was the main stand-by of Capt. Cornelius, well-known Hamilton C. I, and Canadian Olympic coach, after the famous Christie had passed on to a university career: Don Budge, who has been under the captain's care for three years, and who really started out last season to bud into a sprinter of the mean reputation: Jack Davenport, hailed as the coming champion pole-vaulter of Canada, and runner-up to Francis and Pickard, who have gone to Penn University, leaving the long-covered pole-vaulting field open to all comers, and, last, but not least, is Bill Kanawin, another pole-vaulter, who, along with Davenport, promises to bring about another Francis-Pickard rivalry. and kept most of the other athletes on

This is the bunch, and then the local boys who upheld Western's hopes so well last year. Ken McFarlane is all set for another try at the field events: Cam Wilson is back in the running again for the sprint competitions; Ken Hunter will be there for his specialized race, the half mile; Jerry Jordan is aiming to repeat in the quarter mile, and Basil Flood has the mile grind well imprinted on his mind again.

The team has been on the oval at the Western campus all this week, smoothing out the kinks brought about by long inactivity, but the first real day of training starts sext Monday, when Coach Dr. Smith aims to put the boys through their first real tests of the season.

The main aim of Western this year is the intercollegiate championship, but, added to that, they have several other important meets on their list. One of these is a three-cornered meet with McMaster and O. A. C., and will be known as a sort of western intercollegiate affair. The first event of the season is the school meet, which falls on Oct. 9, and this will act as a trying out process for the athletes who have out process for the athletes who he aspirations to become members Western's first team.

Associated Press Despatch. New York, Sept. 18.—Withdrawals of money from Wall street by out-of-town banks followed by a sudden stiffening banks, followed by a sudden stiffening of the call loan rate turned the course of bond prices downward today after an early advance. The Florida land boom continued to show its effects in excited bidding for the Florida Western and Northern 7% bonds, which carry warrants for stock of the Land Company of Florida. The rise in the company's shares on the curb market brought a corresponding advance in the bonds, lifting them to a new record at 197 before they eased off at the close to 192, a net gain of ten points. Highgrade railroad bonds as a group lost ground, but some of the semi-speculative issues readily attracted a following. trade as bearish, wheat prices here today underwent a setback ranging from 1%c to 1%c. Limited export demand and a heavy forward movement of the Western Canada crop imparted early weakness to the market. Despite periodic actions, prices closed around the low levels for the day, with October 1%c down at $1.32% and November 1%c lower at $1.32%. Trade volume war light.
The question of the Russian crop continued to command attention by the trade. Advices were sharply conflicting, with Broomhall's indicating that Russia was offering wheat for export below parity, while another report tended to discount the claim of that country's wheat surplus. Speculative offerings of new Argentina wheat was also a bear factor, and Liverpool cables opened and closed down.
Exporting firms on this side reported a lull in trade, and reiterated the statement that wheat was being sold in Britain under any price which could be met on this side.

In sympathy with wheat, all the coarse grain commodities lost ground, barley declining 2½c. Trade volume generally was light.

The cash wheat market showed signs of lapsing into inactivity. Very little export business was worked, with demand noticeably weak. Barley was the weakest of the cash grain commodities.
Heavy pressure was in evidence as a result of this year's heavy barley crop.

The other markets were inactive.

CHICAGO

Associated Press Despatch.
Chicago, Sept. 18.—With news at hand that five vessels are under charter to bring wheat to Chicago from Duluth, and with talk also current that wheat is being imported from Canada, the wheat market here had a downward trend today. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, \(\frac{1}{2}\) to 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) net lower. to 2%c decline, and oats ½c to 5kc down.

Aside from the disturbing effect today of progressive liberal marine shipments of wheat to Chicago from Duluth, gossip about imports from Canada was emphasized by reports that the new crop in Alberta, Canada, is turning out to be the largest the province has ever had. It was asserted by some trade authorities that wheat imports into the United States from Canada are feasible on account of big premiums prevailing for high protein spring wheat at Minneapolis and at some eastern milling centers as well. Reports of rain in Argentina and Australia increasing the chances of enlarged yields in the southern hemisphere tended further to depress the market, the probable Australian exportable surplus being estimated at 100,000,000 bushels.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—There was some inquiry from United Kingdom buyers for Manitoba shipping wheat on the Montreal market today, and sales of Montreal market today, and sales of odd loads in nearby positions were made, and, in addition to this, a little business was also transacted in oats. Stratford Convention Places Farmer Forces at Disposal of Brown.

Special to The Advertiser. Stratford, Sept. 18 .- The Progressives of North Perth have decided not to enter a candidate in the field for the next federal elections, and will place their force at the disposal of the Liberal nominee, Mayor Tom Brown, of Stratford.

The Tide of Politics

Nominations Pouring in From All Parts of Country, Although Nomination Day Is Still More Than Month Away-King Advances Date For Campaign in West.

Pressure of business affairs, due in part to the death of Sir Adam Beck, who held a large interest in the London Rolling Mills Co., Ltd., may result in the retirement from political life of J. Frank White, Conservative member for London, before the coming federal contest. Although he has as yet made no definite decision in the matter, leading Conservatives are already surveying the situation which would arise should Mr. White not be a candidate for renomination at the local Conser. vative convention, and there is a fairly well-defined movement on foot to offer the nomination to S. Fred Lawrason, of S. F. Lawrason & Co., chairman of the London board of advention of the Consequential with education, and a Conservative with a long record of public service.

education, and a Conservative with a long record of public service.

One or two other possible candidates are said to be under consider ation, but Mr. Lawrason is regarded as the logical choice for standard-bearer in the event that Mr. White finds it impossible to run again.

The present member stated at the time of Sir Adam's death that passing of London's M.L.A., would resuit in greatly increasing his responsibilities in connection with the Rolling Mills Company of which he is superintendent. The plant is at present being enlarged to a considerable extent and these two factors are said to be giving the present London member cause to consider whether or not he can devote further time to political life.

The date of the Conservative convention has not yet been settled, but local Conservatives in close touch.

servative cause in this city, mark him out as particularly fitted to lead the Conservative forces.
