A PACKING COMBINE

Chicago, July 6.—The Inter-Ocean says: A combination of the gigantic companies controlling the packing industry of the United States has finally been consummated, with John D. Rockefeller as the central figure in the financial part of the negotiations. Final arrangements have been made for the consolidation of the Swift and Armour interests, which have recently gained control of the other packing concerns throughout the country. The final step, which was taken today, requires merely the merging of the Swift and Armour interests. There are, it is said, one or two companies not yet under this control, but negotiations are pending with a favorable outlook.

KING EDWARD OUT OF DANGER

Happy Announcement Made by his Physicians—No More Evening Bulletins.

Many Messages of Congratulation Received at Buckingham Palace.

London, July 5, 10.12 a. m.—The following bulletin regarding King Edward's condition was posted at Buckingham Palace at 10 o'clock this morning:

"His Majesty had another excellent night. He is cheerful and feels much stronger. We are glad to be able to consider the danger of the King now out of danger. The evening bulletins will, therefore, be discontinued. (Signed) Treves, Barlow, Laking."

MADE GOOD PROGRESS

Although no more evening bulletins regarding the condition of King Edward are to be issued it was announced at Buckingham Palace this evening that His Majesty had made good progress since morning, and that he was much gratified with the accounts he received of the successful carrying out of the plans for the dinner for the poor in London. The King received many telegrams of thanks and congratulations from the scenes of these festivities, declaring that the pleasure of the occasion was vastly enhanced by the tidings that His Majesty was out of danger.

SUNDAY'S BULLETIN.

London, July 7.—The following bulletin was posted at 9 o'clock this morning at Buckingham Palace:

"The King's progress continues to be in every way satisfactory. (Signed) Treves, Laking, Barlow."

KING EDWARD'S PROGRESS

to-night continues to be good. It is said that if his improvement proceeds at the present rate he will probably by the end of the month be well enough to be transferred to the royal yacht in Southampton water. After the morning bulletin was issued today Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria visited Marlborough House, where they attended divine service with the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Queen stayed within Buckingham Palace for the rest of the day.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

Most of the churches in the United Kingdom celebrated the announcement that King Edward was out of danger with informal thanksgiving services, special music and the singing of the national anthem.

THE QUEEN TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Washington, July 5.—The President has received the following telegram from Queen Alexandra:

"London, July 4.—The President, Washington.—The King is most grateful for kind sympathy. He is, thank God, getting on very favorably now. (Signed) Alexandra."

CHEERS FOR THE KING.

Travemunde, Germany, July 5.—After awarding the prizes to the winners in the North German Association Yacht races here today, Emperor William read a telegram from King Edward's physicians announcing that His Majesty was out of danger, and called for three cheers for the King, which was heartily given.

TRACEY ESCAPES.

Seattle, July 6.—Harry Tracey, the Oregon convict, has escaped from the vicinity of Seattle and crossed the Sound to Fort Madison, where he bound and gagged four people, cooked and ate a meal, shaved, changed his head-dress and impressed a man to row a boat. He departed in the direction of the Hood's Canal country.

BARN BURNED

Anthony Faubert's barn and cattle sheds on the Dover-Chatham Township town line was burned to the ground Saturday night. Neighbors succeeded in saving the surrounding buildings. The barn and sheds were out clean but the other buildings were untouched. The hard work of the neighbors was responsible for the buildings being saved. It is thought spontaneous combustion was the cause. Mr. Faubert carried very little insurance and will sustain quite a loss. The place is about three miles out and the sky was brightly lit up between ten and eleven o'clock Saturday night.

NEW PASTOR ASSUMES CHARGE AT PARK STREET CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Cobblestick Preached an Able Gospel Discourse—A Short Sketch of His Busy Life—An Earnest and Eloquent Speaker.

Rev. G. H. Cobblestick, M. A., B. D., who preached his introductory sermon in Park St. Methodist Church yesterday, is a man of medium stature and middle life and has an easy platform style of delivery, making clear his points and exhibiting a sequence of thought easy to follow. He is well known throughout Ontario as one of the leaders in young people's work, having been President of the London Conference Epworth League the last two years. At the International Epworth League Convention in San Francisco last summer he was the Canadian speaker in the mass meeting for civic righteousness.

The Sabbath School and Bible Class assembled in the church yesterday afternoon to greet their new pastor, and addresses of welcome were given by the assistant superintendent, Mr. Austin, and the teacher of the Bible Class, Dr. Thornton, to which Mr. Cobblestick replied, giving them as a motto, "The whole Church in the Church and the whole Church in the School."

The morning sermon was on Joshua vi. 13-14, on the subject, "The Light and pointing to this new era in our world's history as a crisis hour says: 'Now shall the kingdoms of this world be made the kingdoms of your Lord.'"

Too many people, I am afraid, are like the gentleman who, at the close of a service, approached Dr. John Hall, of the Fifth Ave. Presbyterian Church in New York and expressed his desire to unite with the church. Upon Dr. Hall's explaining to him that theirs was a working church and asking him in what department of its activities he wished to be placed, he was quite embarrassed and said in a half hesitant way, "I can't say I care for any special sort of work. I just wanted to join to attend the services and hear you preach."

"Well," replied the Doctor, "you have struck the wrong church; the one you are looking for is a little further up Fifth Ave. It is the Church of Heavenly Rest."

Before the last hymn Mr. Cobblestick said a few words of greeting. He said it was always an important day when a new minister came, for the people were naturally anxious to know what sort of pastor they were to have. They had lost, he believed, one of the best men in the conference. He did not expect to fill his place, but would just try to fill his own. He would ask their forbearance in his learning to associate several thousands of names and faces while they learned one. The affection and co-operation of his people.

that comes to a good man on the path of duty," and was heard with deep interest by the congregation. At the close a large number welcomed their new pastor, expressing their pleasure in securing him, which at one time appeared doubtful. Following is an outline of the sermon:

Rev. Mr. Cobblestick divided his first sermon into three parts yesterday morning at Park St. Church.

While Joshua was out making a reconnaissance of the fortress, and brooding over his plans for taking it, his attention was suddenly attracted to a large, armed figure, which towered above him, in fighting attitude. It matters not whether we consider the vision to have been an actual appearance in physical form of a heavenly visitant, or a mental conception visible only to the eye of the mind. It is agreed that it was one of those divine manifestations of light and leading, which occur at intervals through Old Testament times, and are commonly supposed to have been anticipatory appearances of that later perfect manifestation in Christ. As Christ was not a man until born in Bethlehem there would seem good reason for thinking it was not a man, but the appearance of a man which Joshua saw. If God did condescend to use the physical, it was only as a means to reach the higher part of him to whom he spoke, and if he chose to approach direct to the part of man most akin to himself, there would seem no reason to regard it as any less real. One thing is clear, that we are not limited to our physical vision. The blind poet, Milton, saw more than other men with their sight.

It has often happened that the vision has not been understood at first. That which in Angelo's great painting, The Sistine Madonna, when seen from a distance appears to be clouds, proves upon nearer view to be angel faces. But whatever the appearance of the vision faith recognizes it as at least divine significance and seeks to understand it.

This was what Joshua did of the overshadowing figure. He asks, "Art thou for us or for our adversaries?" The most he hoped for was to find his visitor a powerful ally. Imagine his surprise and joy to hear the reply, "Nay, but as Captain of the Host of the Lord am I now come."

This takes the great responsibility of leadership off Joshua's shoulders, and pointing to this new era in our world's history as a crisis hour says: "Now shall the kingdoms of this world be made the kingdoms of your Lord."

MONDAY, JULY 7.

SOME LESSONS.

King Edward has shown remarkable vitality and successfully passed the time limit of danger—eight days—set by Prof. von Bergmann, the great German specialist, and will, it is now generally believed, recover. This is gratifying news to the British public and to all English-speaking peoples, as not only the sparing of the life of the King at this crisis but revealing his possession of a constitution capable of enduring severe strain and encouraging the hope that in the ordinary course of events his life will be spared for many years to come. Nor is there any reason to fear that there lives an enemy of His Gracious Majesty who could find it in his heart to cut short a life that is so precious to all people. Commenting upon the King's convalescence, the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser says with much force: "Certainly the manner in which he bore the shock of the operation and the vigor with which his physical constitution has since helped the healing process have heavily discounted the persistent rumors of his undermined health. It is not too much to say that, should the King recover, that fact would discredit an immense and age-long mass of accusing gossip as no other fact could possibly do. They who live in the fierce light of a throne are inevitably prime objects of prurient curiosity, and the King, when Prince of Wales, had to bear more than his share of this sort of annoyance. He had his faults, but they were never weighed in the balance of a golden mean. They were magnified beyond all reason. At sixty-one it was said he would surely pay the penalty of his awful and systematic violation of nature's laws. Thus far at least he has shown a power of recovery that a man of thirty might envy."

THE GLOBE'S APPEAL.

A great change has come over our esteemed friend the Toronto Globe. A few days ago it was quite sure that the Ross Government was safe. It was sure that Ross had a majority of four, and that that would grow. It told the Tories, in effect, to run away and sit down, and quit bothering about the election which was over, and was altogether cocky. But the majority did not grow. It decreased to what the Globe calls "a clear majority of one." It is possibly thus described to distinguish it from another celebrated majority of one, which, it seems, was not clear. From something very like defiance the Globe has come down to smooth persuasion, and talks to the childlike Tories very sweetly and persuasively. It is on its metaphorical knees and makes strong appeal to the Tories to spare the political life of good Mr. Ross. It repeats and repeats its eulogy of that great and good man and demands to be shown another in all the province who is qualified to take his place. Listen to the innocent prattle of the now gentle Globe:

"Premier Ross should resign" has become a popular phrase with the opposition press. That is to say, a tried political leader with a clear majority of the House as at present constituted should give way to an untried leader who has not a majority of the House.

The Globe defines well: that is what means. Ross has a "clear" majority of the House; but Whitney has a clear majority of the people. The fact that Ross is tried and Whitney is not is no reason that Ross should keep trying and Whitney remain tried. The Globe doctrine would have Rose a prominent premier—a noble Paul Kruger of Ontario. Over, the people are not satisfied with the outcome of the trial of Ross, they want to try Whitney.

Globe says:
The opposition press would stop long enough to consider the man with some calmness it would me of the confidence in North. As a result of the inquiries courts by-elections may be in some other constituencies. It will be a strong predisposition precipitating another general election. The shortest way to avoid that will be to strengthen the hands of the party that already holds the lead. It is surely not a bold thing to suppose that the Government will retain North Renfrew. The late Mr. Munro's majority was nearly 500. He was a most popular gentleman, but there is considerable margin in 500 for a less perfect candidate. The winning in the bye-election of two or three constituencies now held by Conservatives would give the Government a sufficient majority to meet the House and carry on the business. The whole political history of the province shows that the Government is likely to make such gains. We make no prophecies. We merely point out what is a most reasonable view for the electors to take—namely, to take sides with the party that is in the best position to carry on the King's Government, and which has demonstrated in the past its strength and usefulness in administration.

It is quite true that it may happen as the Globe outlines it. But, on the other hand, it is quite true that something else may happen. It may be that North Renfrew will come our way. Taking the history of the riding into consideration there would be nothing surprising about that. And it may be—we can almost say must be—that North Grey will come our way. And there are other spots in Ontario where things may happen—indeed, are very likely to happen, which will utterly destroy the Globe's "clear majority of one."

The chances that the Tory party will make further gains are good. One such gain would reverse the position of the parties, and turn the Globe's whole argument over to the Tory side, and give that side all the advantages the Globe now claims for the Ross party. Even as it is the Government has not strength enough to influence bye-elections as they may be influenced in favor of a Government strongly entrenched in power behind a big majority. The hold that Ross has upon office—depending upon four switched ballots, is not sufficient to influence any Tory riding to decide that there was no use in opposing the Government.

The fact is that Whitney's chances are now better than Ross's chances.—Hamilton Spectator.

UNIQUE MARRIAGE NOTICE.

Trenton, (Mo.) News.

Married—Miss Sylvia Rhodes, to James Carman, last Saturday afternoon. The bride is an ordinary town girl who doesn't know any more than a rabbit about cooking and never helped her poor mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means, and has a gait like a fat duck. The groom is well known here as an up-to-date loafer, has been living off the old folks all his life, and don't amount to anything now. They will have a hard life while they live together, and the News hastens to extend absolutely no congratulations, for we don't believe any good can come from such a union.

BACHELOR AT 114.

Detroit News.

James Manning, of Clayton township, Arenac county, was 114 years old yesterday. He was born in Antrim county, Ireland, June 26, 1788. He served in the war of 1812 in the British army. In 1854 he came to New York state, where he worked at the blacksmithing trade until 1864, when he removed to Bay City, subsequently emigrating to Arenac county, where he still resides and earns a livelihood by keeping poultry and raising roots and vegetables. The centenarian has been a consistent bachelor all his life and since coming to Michigan has been living a hermit life. He was the first white man who settled in Arenac county. He still reads without glasses, his hearing is good, and he is in excellent health.

MONDAY, JULY 7.

SOME LESSONS.

King Edward has shown remarkable vitality and successfully passed the time limit of danger—eight days—set by Prof. von Bergmann, the great German specialist, and will, it is now generally believed, recover. This is gratifying news to the British public and to all English-speaking peoples, as not only the sparing of the life of the King at this crisis but revealing his possession of a constitution capable of enduring severe strain and encouraging the hope that in the ordinary course of events his life will be spared for many years to come. Nor is there any reason to fear that there lives an enemy of His Gracious Majesty who could find it in his heart to cut short a life that is so precious to all people. Commenting upon the King's convalescence, the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser says with much force: "Certainly the manner in which he bore the shock of the operation and the vigor with which his physical constitution has since helped the healing process have heavily discounted the persistent rumors of his undermined health. It is not too much to say that, should the King recover, that fact would discredit an immense and age-long mass of accusing gossip as no other fact could possibly do. They who live in the fierce light of a throne are inevitably prime objects of prurient curiosity, and the King, when Prince of Wales, had to bear more than his share of this sort of annoyance. He had his faults, but they were never weighed in the balance of a golden mean. They were magnified beyond all reason. At sixty-one it was said he would surely pay the penalty of his awful and systematic violation of nature's laws. Thus far at least he has shown a power of recovery that a man of thirty might envy."

THE GLOBE'S APPEAL.

A great change has come over our esteemed friend the Toronto Globe. A few days ago it was quite sure that the Ross Government was safe. It was sure that Ross had a majority of four, and that that would grow. It told the Tories, in effect, to run away and sit down, and quit bothering about the election which was over, and was altogether cocky. But the majority did not grow. It decreased to what the Globe calls "a clear majority of one." It is possibly thus described to distinguish it from another celebrated majority of one, which, it seems, was not clear. From something very like defiance the Globe has come down to smooth persuasion, and talks to the childlike Tories very sweetly and persuasively. It is on its metaphorical knees and makes strong appeal to the Tories to spare the political life of good Mr. Ross. It repeats and repeats its eulogy of that great and good man and demands to be shown another in all the province who is qualified to take his place. Listen to the innocent prattle of the now gentle Globe:

"Premier Ross should resign" has become a popular phrase with the opposition press. That is to say, a tried political leader with a clear majority of the House as at present constituted should give way to an untied leader who has not a majority of the House.

The Globe defines well: that is what it means. Ross has a "clear" majority of the House; but Whitney has a clearer majority of the people. The fact that Ross is tried and Whitney untied is no reason that Ross should be kept trying and Whitney remain untied. The Globe doctrine would make Ross a permanent premier—a veritable Paul Kruger of Ontario. Moreover, the people are not satisfied with the outcome of the trial of Ross, and they want to try Whitney.

The Globe says:
If the opposition press would stop shouting long enough to consider the situation with some calmness it would lose some of the confidence in North Renfrew. As a result of the inquiries of the courts by-elections may be needed in some other constituencies. There will be a strong predisposition against precipitating another general

Rheumatism

What is the use of telling the rheumatism that he feels as if his joints were being dislocated?

That, according to thousands of grateful testimonials, is

election. The shortest way to avoid that will be to strengthen the hands of the party that already holds the lead. It is surely not a bold thing to suppose that the Government will retain North Renfrew. The late Mr. Munro's majority was nearly 500. He was a most popular gentleman, but there is considerable margin in 500 for a less perfect candidate. The winning in the bye-election of two of three constituencies now held by Conservatives would give the Government a sufficient majority to meet the House and carry on the business. The whole political history of the province shows that the Government is likely to make such gains. We make no prophecies. We merely point out what is a most reasonable view for the electors to take—namely, to take sides with the party that is in the best position to carry on the King's Government, and which has demonstrated in the past its strength and usefulness in administration.

It is quite true that it may happen as the Globe outlines it. But, on the other hand, it is quite true that something else may happen. It may be that North Renfrew will come our way. Taking the history of the riding into consideration there would be nothing surprising about that. And it may be—we can almost say must be—that North Grey will come our way. And there are other spots in Ontario where things may happen—indeed, are very likely to happen, which will utterly destroy the Globe's "clear majority of one."

The chances that the Tory party will make further gains are good. One such gain would reverse the position of the parties, and turn the Globe's whole argument over to the Tory side, and give that side all the advantages the Globe now claims for the Ross party. Even as it is the Government has not strength enough to influence by-elections as they may be influenced in favor of a Government strongly entrenched in power behind a big majority. The hold that Ross has upon office—depending upon four switched ballots, is not sufficient to influence any Tory riding to decide that there was no use in opposing the Government.

The fact is that Whitney's chances are now better than Ross' chances.—Hamilton Spectator.

IT'S UNANIMOUS.

Kingston Whig.
The demand grows that Mr. Gardiner, of the Hamilton Times, be appointed the Dominion archivist. Conservative and Liberal papers join in giving expression to it. In union there is strength, and the union of the press in this matter ought to make it go.

UNIQUE MARRIAGE NOTICE.

Trenton, (Mo.) News.

Married—Miss Sylvia Rhades, to James Carman, last Saturday afternoon. The bride is an ordinary town girl who doesn't know any more than a rabbit about cooking and never helped her poor mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means, and has a gait like a fat duck. The groom is well known here as an up-to-date loafer, has lived off the old folks all his life, and don't amount to anything. They will live together, and the News hastens to extend absolutely no congratulations, for we don't believe any good can come from such a union.

BACHELOB AT 14.

Detroit News.

James Manning, of Clayton township, Arenac county, was 14 years old yesterday. He was born in Antrim county, Ireland, June 28, 1788. He served in the war of 1812 in New York state, where he worked at the blacksmithing trade until 1844, when he removed to Bay City, subsequently emigrating to Arenac county, where he still resides and earns a livelihood by keeping poultry and raising roots and vegetables. The centenarian has been a consistent bachelor all his life and since coming to Michigan has been living a hermit life. He was the first white man who settled in Arenac county. He still reads without glasses, his hearing is good, and he is in excellent health.

Preponderance of School Ma-ams Regarded as Dangerous by Educationists.

The striking difference between the number of male and female teachers in attendance at the teachers' summer session in this city, caused the Mail and Empire to look into this most important matter and to secure the views of educationists upon it. Those interviewed look upon this disproportion as an evil, some as a serious one, and all give the same cause, the small rewards obtainable in the profession, and the consequent refusal of men to enter it, and their endeavor to get out of it as soon as they can, if they do become teachers. Since 1887 salaries have been going down, while the cost of living has been increasing, and along with the decrease of salaries has gone the steady increase in the number of female teachers in the province, until now they are three times as numerous as the men. All interviewed expressed the desirability of having men to teach the older boys, but while some advocated direct action to remedy the evil, others thought it should be left to work out its own cure.

DEPUTY MINISTER MILLAR.

Mr. John Millar, Deputy Minister of Education, looked upon the movement as an economic one, and to be counteracted by higher standards for teachers and by plans for better remuneration. In rural schools the children were mostly small, and therefore female teachers were not undesirable, but in cities and towns the proportion of men should be increased.

Mr. Millar's views, as stated by himself, are: "The increase of female teachers is largely due to economic causes, which have affected labor in a variety of departments. In modern times women are much better educated than they were years ago, and they are therefore in a position to take up many callings that were formerly closed to them. In teaching there are not many lucrative positions open, even for those who follow it as a profession, and that, of course, has its effect upon young men of ability who are looking forward to making a competence. This trend on the part of women to teaching is not exceptional. We find it in stores, factories, and offices. Women can afford to do some kinds of work at a less remuneration, ordinarily, than men, and therefore have an advantage in getting positions. The situation is not at all any worse in Ontario than it is in the United States. England, and especially Germany, however, have not felt the tendency so strongly."

"Is this in the interest of education?" That brings up another question upon which I can only give my own opinion, which is that in elementary schools a woman has qualifications that usually make her better fitted for the work than a man. For the higher positions, where discipline and the development of character are important considerations, I do not think female teachers, as a rule, are as well qualified as men. The public, however, is too ready to regard the imparting of knowledge as the chief object of the teacher, and, while this mistaken idea prevails, the question of character building or true education will not receive that attention to which it is justly entitled. I should think it a misfortune if a majority of our teachers in high schools should be females, as is the case in the United States. At the same time it is an advantage, even in high schools, to have a certain proportion of the staff ladies."

DEPUTY MINISTER SUGGESTS A REMEDY.

"What suggestions would you make as to remedying this state of affairs?" "I think the proper step is to raise the standard of qualification, which would give us fewer teachers, and I think a larger proportion of men, as the rewards would increase. Besides this, the legislative grant might be wisely distributed, but on the average attendance, but upon the qualifications of teachers. There would then be an inducement for the student to engage a teacher with a higher certificate, with the expectation of obtaining a larger government grant. If the rural schools were consolidated there would also be an opportunity of placing the advanced pupils under a man teacher. "I don't look upon this large proportion of female teachers as being so serious as some think. Take the rural schools, and here it will be found that there will be three or four men in the fourth book five or six in the third book and twenty or thirty in the lower classes. The great bulk of children in the rural schools are in children, and for this reason a female teacher is desirable."

SECONDHAND STORES.

Modern Houses Vastly Different
From the Old Time Junkshops.

"One of the curious aspects of modern business conditions," said a philosophic business man, "is the growth of what we call the secondhand business. There are more secondhand houses now than ever before, and I attribute it to the changes in style which are constantly taking place in all things which enter into the social life. When one speaks of a secondhand store, there are many persons who will think simply of secondhand furniture, bureau, wardrobes, tables, beds and things of that sort. But the business has become so extensive that one may find almost anything in either the useful or the ornamental line in these places."

"I am not speaking of the curio shops either, where you can find anything from an antiquated penny to the rarest and most elaborate thing in an artistic way, old pictures and new ones, old books, old anything you may call for. I have in mind the regular secondhand houses which do a complete and up to date secondhand business. Go into one of these places and see for yourself the changes which have been wrought in the business."

"Time was when one of these places was a junkshop merely, a sort of old furniture hospital or almshouse, a place for chairs with broken arms and tables with broken legs and beds with scoured heads and old clocks with broken faces and missing hands and all that sort of thing. But the conditions are different now. You see, people want to keep up with the procession. Styles are always changing. A new kind of furniture comes in. The furniture on hand is good as new, but one must have the new thing, this new, magnificent kind of sideboard or this new colored bedroom suit or this latest thing in something else. The old stuff is sold and the new kind bought."

"This is one reason, and the main reason, for the growth of the secondhand business. Of course the change has not affected merely furniture and household goods. It has applied to all the utilities and all the ornaments, and hence a vast variety of things may be found in the secondhand store."

Frank Stockton and Poetry.

Frank Stockton never could write a successful poem. In this connection the novelist frequently told a good story on himself. In his youth in conjunction with his brother John he wrote many poems with which he afflicted the editors of various Canadian periodicals. The effusions always came back. The editor of one magazine was an especial target of the Stocktons, but none of their poems was ever accepted the brothers came to the conclusion that the editor had no conception of good poetry.

To prove their belief they hunted up and dispatched to him an ode, little known, by Milton. Within two days they received a check and a letter of thanks. "I came to the conclusion that that editor knew poetry when he saw it after all," Mr. Stockton used to say, "and gave up trying to write it."

One Woman's Way of Painting.

The bright wife of a bright Philadelphia newspaper man has to do some of the housework herself, as her husband's income does not justify the luxury of employing help. The other day, finding out that the floor needed painting, she procured the necessary materials and early in the afternoon set to work.

When her husband returned in the early evening, he found her in tears in the center of the room. She had painted the door all around herself, and there she was, on a little dry island in the middle, afraid of crossing the wet paint for fear of spoiling her work. Her husband, instead of imitating Sir Walter Raleigh, procured a board and released her from durance vile. Then he meekly told the story.

A Former Predicament.

The cook in a solemn family was fat, black and sixty and a devoted churchwoman. A "laboring brother" in the game church, a widower with a dozen children, was so assiduous in his attentions that he could be seen haunting the kitchen at all hours. The mistress of the house finally said to the cook:

"I do hope you don't mean to marry that old man, with all those children."
"No, ma'am," was the reply. "I done been kotched in dat predicament once already," which was the first intimation that had been given in a long service that she was entitled to wear the weeds of widowhood.

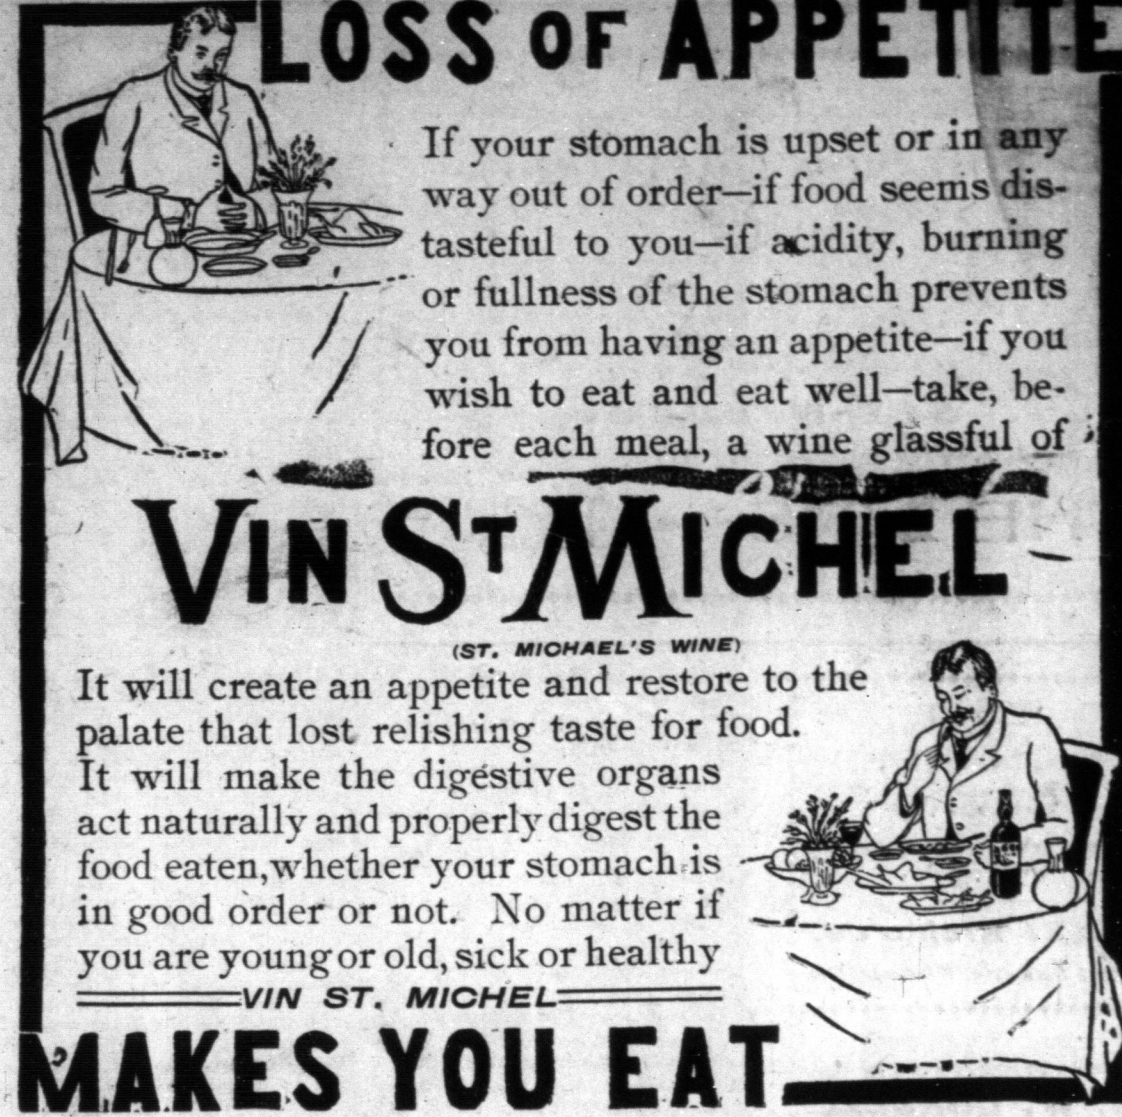

Hugo's Ecstasies.

Victor Hugo had a very exalted opinion of himself. One of his intimates called on him once and found him walking in his garden, apparently thinking deeply. The visitor asked the great French poet what he was meditating upon, "I was wondering," replied the poet, "what I should say to the Creator when I meet him. Can you imagine what I would say?" "Yes," answered the poet's friend, "You would say, 'My dear confere!'"

P. J. McGee was in Detroit on Thursday on a business trip. Miss Alice Estabrook is spending her holidays at her home.

Miss Sophia Brown, of Detroit, spent Sunday and Monday at her home here. James Bishop visited friends in Dover this week.

Mrs. A. Bishop, of Dover, is visiting at her daughter's, Mrs. W. Blake. Miss Eva Ryan, of Chatham, visited at J. Bishop's this week.

John Charlton, of Lakeview Farm, pleasantly entertained a number of young people last Monday evening.

"Charlie, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "do hear the baby crying!" "I haven't heard anything else for the last twenty minutes," was the not very amiable answer.

"Isn't it lovely?" "What do you mean?" "The way the baby shouts. I can shut my eyes and imagine that we are at a ball game when our side has just scored a home run."

SECONDHAND STORES.

Modern Houses Vastly Different From the Old Time Junkshops.

"One of the curious aspects of modern business conditions," said a philosophic business man, "is the growth of what we call the secondhand business. There are more secondhand houses now than ever before, and I attribute it to the changes in style in all things which enter into the social life. When one speaks of a secondhand store, there are many persons who will think simply of secondhand furniture, bureaux, wardrobes, tables, beds and things of that sort. But the business has become so extensive that one may find almost anything in either the useful or the ornamental line in these places."

"I am not speaking of the curio shops either, where you can find anything from an antiquated penny to the rarest and most elaborate thing in an artistic way, old pictures and new ones, old books, old anything you may call for. I have in mind the regular secondhand houses which do a complete and up to date secondhand business. Go into one of these places and see for yourself the changes which have been wrought in the business."

"Time was when one of these places was a junkshop merely, a sort of old place for chairs with broken arms and tables with broken legs and beds with scuffed heads and old clocks with broken faces and missing hands and all that sort of thing. But the conditions are different now. You see, people want to keep up with the procession. Styles are always changing. A new kind of furniture comes in. The furniture on hand is good as new, but one must have the new thing; this new, magnificent kind of sideboard or this new colored bedroom suit or this latest thing in something else. The old stuff is sold and the new is bought."

"This is one reason, and the main reason, for the growth of the secondhand business. Of course the change has not affected merely furniture and household goods. It has applied to all the utilities and all the ornaments, and hence a vast variety of things may be found in the secondhand stores."

Frank Stockton and Poetry.

Frank Stockton never could write a successful poem. In this connection the novelist frequently told a good story on himself. In his youth in conjunction with his brother John he wrote many poems with which he afflicted the editors of various Canadian periodicals. The effusions always came back. The editor of one magazine was an especial target of the Stocktons, but as none of their poems were accepted the brothers came to the conclusion that the editor had no conception of good poetry.

To prove their belief they hunted up and dispatched to him an ode, little known, by Milton. Within two days they received a check and a letter of thanks. "It came to the conclusion that that editor knew poetry when he saw it after all," Mr. Stockton used to say, "and gave up trying to write it."

One Woman's Way of Painting.

The bright way of a bright Philadelphia newspaper man has to do some of the housework herself, as her husband's income does not justify the luxury of employing help. The other day, finding out that the floor needed painting, she procured the necessary materials and early in the afternoon set to work.

When her husband returned in the early evening, he found her in tears in the center of the room. She had painted the floor all around herself, and there she was, on a little dry island in the middle, afraid of crossing the paint for fear of spoiling all her work. Her husband, instead of imitating Sir Walter Raleigh, procured a board and released her from her predicament. Then he meantly told the story.

A Former Predicament.

The cook in a southern family was fat, black and sixty and a devoted churchwoman. A "laboring brother" in the same church, a widower with a dozen children, was so assiduous in his attentions that he could be seen haunting the kitchen at the hours. The mistress of the house finally said to the cook: "I do hope you don't mean to marry that old man, with all those children." "No, ma'am," was the reply. "I done been kitched in dat predicament once already," which was the first intimation that had been given in a long service that she was entitled to wear the weeds of widowhood.

Hugo's Egotism.

Victor Hugo had a well-crafted opinion of himself. One of his intimates called on him once and found him walking in his garden, apparently thinking deeply. The visitor asked the great French poet what he was meditating upon, "I was wondering," replied the poet, "what I should say to the Creator when I meet him. Can you imagine what I would say?" "Yes," answered the poet's friend. "You would say, 'My dear confrere.'"

Her Generosity.

The body of William Whalen, the young man who was drowned in the river near Huff's a few days ago, was found yesterday afternoon and the remains were afterwards shipped to deceased's home in Wheatley. "The berries and weeds are all out Queen street," said a Richmond street resident to The Planet this morning. "The City Engineer should bring down his army of weed cutters and clear the place out. As it is, it is a disgrace to our city."

WORLD OF SPORT

BASEBALL

On Saturday evening the Grays scored their second victory, this time against the Park House nine, by a score of 10 to 2. The game was slow from start to finish and had no exciting features. The heavy hitting of McNaughton and Morgan for the Grays was very noticeable. The first ball Robert pitched was a clean home run by McNaughton.

THE TURF

The big race between Harold H. and Dan Patch comes off to-morrow afternoon at Windsor.

Not the Usual Way.
"Yes, he's going to marry the girl who used to work for him. Think of it!"
"Well, what of it? Most men marry a girl and let her work for them afterwards."

The View.
Little maid harridan's home was near the edge of a precipice and sheer.
"But I don't like it," she said, "would I'm so afraid I'll fall into the view!"

Confidant Fill the Bill.
"You know, Johnnie," said the mother, "the child is father of the man."
Then said Johnnie, surveying his father from head to foot:
"But he ain't big enough to whip him!"

AT ANCHOR IN THE BAY.

What cares the ship how blows the winds
That lash the sea to foam,
When with furled sails she lies at rest
Safe in the bay at home!
For blow them fair or blow them foul,
They cannot harm the ship that lies
At anchor in the bay.
Outside the bay the wrathful waves
Swift charge the rugged shore,
And like fierce baffled beast of prey
In sullen anger roar.
But cross their path the harbor bar
Like a strong guard the ships that lie
At anchor in the bay.
Ye mariners who on life's sea
With storms and tempests meet,
Keep strong your hearts, all in good time
The harbor lights you'll greet.
And all your fears and all your cares
Will swiftly pass away
When safe at last you find yourselves
At anchor in the bay.

STRANGE YARN

A Young Man Told to Escape Detection from Theft—Confessed Later.

William Siddals, ex-night porter, is genius from an imaginative standpoint. And he owes it all to his vivid imagination that he now lingers behind the barriers that shut off Castle Mercer from the outside world.

Friday night, P. C. Darr was walking leisurely down King street, thinking of nothing particular and feeling the warmth of the night. He had left the C. P. R. corner a few minutes before and had reached the Rankin hotel when he received a hurry call to return to the C. P. R. corner.

When he reached the C. P. R. hotel William, the night porter, pointed to the uplifted grating leading to the cellar and said that he had seen a husky colored man of large proportions issue from the cavity and disappear in the direction of the park.

P. C. Darr wandered over to the park to look for the man, but could see nothing. When he returned he found that the porter had Macdonald up. The officer and the proprietor searched the cellar but could find nothing.

Saturday evening Officer Darr saw D. J. Macdonald and D. J. showed that he was well onto his job as proprietor of the C. P. R. When the bartender came down Saturday morning he said that $9 was missing from the till. Mr. Macdonald at once went to the man with the tale of the mysterious colored man. Siddals confessed and refunded. He was arrested on an information sworn out by Officer Darr. Siddals pleaded guilty and was remanded in jail in order to enable the father to get a certificate of character for the lad. Siddals didn't take all the money in the till. There was $30, but he only took $9.

NEW PASTOR ASSUMES CHARGE

people are a pastor's meat and drink. He wished to thank the ladies for their kindness in fixing up the parsonage so comfortably, and hoped it would not be very long before Mrs. Cobbledick, who was now ill in Toronto would be able to enjoy it, too.

In the evening the sermon was a character study on "The Wise Man's Folly," revealing the strength and weakness of Solomon, as seen in his choice of wisdom and knowledge for his kingly profession rather than a clean heart for his individual life.

Speaking of how to choose the highest good, the reverend gentleman said there were three ways of looking at life, viz., the fatalistic, which takes things as they come, schooling oneself to grim resignation to the resistless and inevitable sweep of events. Again, we may confine ourselves to a selfish-practical view of life, believing that our future is wholly dependent on our own exertions and that if we are to gain what we long for it must be by our self-reliant and self-persistent efforts. Yet another view of life is that which sees that the control of all events is in the hand of a loving and all-powerful Father, who wants his children to tell him freely of their wishes and cravings and who will then decide for them according to his knowledge of their true interests. This third view is the only really Christian view of life.

"Choose for us, Lord! nor let our weak preferring."

Cheat our poor souls of good that hast designed;

Choose for us, Lord! thy wisdom is unerring,

And we are fools and blind."

The service was short, concluding within the hour, because of the intense heat, and the new pastor stated that during the hot months they would aim at short, bright and interesting services.

The music, both morning and evening, was of a high order, the choir acquitting themselves well under the able leadership of Miss Webster. Miss Bogart, the assistant organist, took her part effectively.

LETTER BOX

MR. SMITH'S STATEMENT.

Editor of The Planet:

It would be difficult to imagine anything more malicious than Mr. J. B. Rankin's statements, as reported in Saturday's Planet in reference to duplicate stock certificates sent out to shareholders of The Chatham Binder Twine Co.

The intention, of course, was to cast reflections on my work as secretary-treasurer of the company; but he has missed his mark, for in trying to injure me he has made "a serious charge" against his own client.

As a matter of fact, a large percentage of the stock certificates were issued between the 17th February and the 14th of March, during which time Mr. J. J. Ross was "managing" the office. About all the "business" he did during those four weeks was writing out stock certificates, as some hundreds of shareholders had paid their last call on stock just previous to the annual meeting. It is a pity Mr. Ross was not more careful to find out from the books who of the shareholders had already received certificates, or to properly check off those he did write, so that subsequent ones might not be duplicated. I submit that the proper persons to find out any possible errors in the company's books are the auditors, Messrs. Calhoun and Murphy, who were appointed by the shareholders at the annual meeting.

As to the company losing money through a mistake in issuing duplicate certificates, I have much higher authority than Mr. Rankin for saying there is no danger of that, even if any shareholder could be found who would be unprincipled enough to make use of one.

THE FAST TRAINS TO CHICAGO.

New York Central's Express Service Added to.

George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent of the New York Central Road, talking yesterday of the company's fast train service, said that, in addition to the new twenty-hour train, there are now four twenty-four-hour trains to Chicago, and two Empire State expresses daily.

The Twentieth Century Limited, twenty-hour train, leaves New York every day at 2.45 p. m. and arrives at Chicago the next morning at 9.45.

The Lake Shore Limited leaves New York at 5.30 every afternoon, arriving in Chicago the next afternoon at 4.30. The Fast Mail, a fine twenty-four-hour train, leaves New York at 8.45 a. m. every day, reaching Chicago the next morning at 7.45.

By both the Lake Shore and the Michigan Central. The Monday Chicago Limited leaves New York at 1 p. m., reaching Chicago by the Lake Shore the next morning at 11.50; a twenty-four-hour train, really twenty-three hours and fifty minutes. The Detroit and Chicago Limited leaves New York at 4 p. m., reaching Chicago the next afternoon, a fourth twenty-four-hour train.

ROLF HOUSE

G. H. BENEDICT.

"I hardly feel capable of advising," replied Rolf. "Our own experience in the house hasn't been such as to encourage us to attempt a new investigation."

"That is the way I feel," replied the elder plotter; "but still something must be done and it seems as if there was no means but for us to attempt it ourselves. Let us be practical, Rolf. Of course, there are no ghosts in that old house. Somebody is causing these disturbances. They will probably not remain in the house now that the work has been stopped. We can go over, well provided with lights, and armed, if necessary, and make an investigation that will probably result in discovering some clue to the means by which the noises and other ghostly tricks have been produced. We must go. Our success depends upon it. What do you say?"

"Well, if we must, we must," replied Rolf; "but I had rather it were somebody beside me."

"Of course," replied the elder plotter, "and so would I. But go we must. Perhaps we can get some hardy fellow to accompany us. I'll see in the morning. But to-morrow afternoon I propose to make an investigation that will unravel this mystery."

CHAPTER XXVI.

Although, in the war that had ensued between the British government and the young American republic, the British naval commanders had promptly declared a blockade of the entire American coast, and great fleets had been sent to enforce the blockade, yet, such was the adventurous and hardy character of our seamen of the day, that the efforts to shut up our ports were very far from successful. Not only did the vessels of our infant navy put to sea, and, under daring and skillful commanders, gain a series of brilliant victories, that compensated largely for the early military disasters on land, but within a few weeks after the declaration of war, the seas were fairly swarming with American privateers. The most prominent and wealthy merchants of the country engaged in this sort of business venture, and light, swift schooners, heavily armed, and capable of outlasting any other vessels known, were sent to sea by the hundreds from every port almost, and inflicted immense damage on the enemy's commerce. The furthest seas that were whittened by Britain's commercial fleets were not safe from the depredations of these daring cruisers. They even invaded the British channel, and watched like hawks about the English coasts, while it is related that one daring privateer commander, while cruising off the mouth of the Thames, sent a cartel to London proclaiming a blockade of the entire British islands, in ridicule of the blockade of the American coast so loftily proclaimed by the British naval commanders.

The Chesapeake Bay became the great rendezvous of these privateering craft, owing to the difficulty of blockading it, and the city of Baltimore gained its early commercial supremacy and laid the foundation of its future prosperity by the ventures of its merchants in this sort of speculation.

Early in December, 1812, the privateer schooner Harpy, on one dark, stormy night, ran into the harbor of Baltimore, having successfully avoided the blockading vessels. She had been gone on a six months' cruise, having sailed from the port of New York; but, on her return, finding it closely blockaded she had sought the safer waters of the Chesapeake to make port. While on her homeward voyage, the Harpy, during a heavy fog, had got into close proximity to an enemy's brig, without being aware of it. The fog suddenly lifting, she had found herself lying directly under the guns of a ship carrying double her weight of metal, flying the British flag. Her own character was well enough told in her tall masts and low, sharp lines, and the enemy had at once opened on her with a broadside. The wind favoring, the commander of the Harpy resolved on a daring manoeuvre to escape capture or destruction. Bearing directly down on the enemy, he exchanged broadsides, then turning away, got considerably to the windward before the latter could tack and again bring her guns to bear. The Harpy, being very swift, had now no difficulty in drawing away from the pursuing enemy, annoying her in the meantime as much as possible with her long swivel gun.

In this little affair, two of the Harpy's crew had been killed and several wounded; and the first duty the commander, after casting anchor, was to get the latter ashore.

Among the wounded crew, was a handsome young man, who could scarcely have much passed the period that marks the arrival of manhood, and who seemed of more gentle birth and bearing than his sailor's garb would warrant.

Placed in the hospital with the rest of the wounded sailors, he became an object of special interest to the surgeon in charge. During the conflict with the enemy's brig, while helping to man one of the guns, he had been struck in the side by a flying bolt from the gun-carriage of the gun he was helping to work, which had been hit by one of the enemy's shot, and, besides the breaking of three or four ribs, had received severe internal injuries.

He was not yet out of danger—indeed, the shock to his system from effects of his removal to the hospital had aggravated his symptoms, and caused the surgeon considerable anxiety. His first words, on reaching the hospital, had been the inquiry:

"Doctor, how soon can I get out of this?"

The surgeon did not reply, but proceeded to examine into his injuries, and then to recommend to his assistant such measures as he thought necessary to better his condition. But see the surgeon, drawing away, the young patient repeated his question:

"Doctor, won't you tell me how soon I can get out of this?"

"Why, my dear sir," replied the kind surgeon, "judging from your present condition, you may have to remain with us several months."

Lumbago

is Rheumatism of the back. The cause is Uric Acid in the blood. If the kidneys did their work there would be no Uric Acid and no Lumbago. Make the kidneys do their work. The sure, positive and only cure for Lumbago is

Dodd's Kidney Pills

"Oh, no, no, no," almost moaned the young man; "it cannot be. Don't deceive me, doctor. Can't you put me on my feet in a week?"

"Nonsense," replied the surgeon. "If you are out in eight weeks, you may consider yourself lucky. Now, no more talking. The less you talk and worry the sooner you will get well."

"But I must have the assurance that I can leave this place soon—very soon," continued the young man. "You do not know what depends upon it, doctor. I had rather die than stay here a month. You must do your best for me, doctor."

The surgeon glanced again at the white, sunken face, that showed plainly the traces of deep suffering, and the large, brilliant eyes, and replied, with a grave shake of the head:

"I can make no promises, my dear young sir. You are very badly hurt, and it will need a good long rest and plenty of care to cure you. Of course, I will do my best for you; but you must not worry or fret. It will only delay your cure. If you have friends who wish to inform the attendants will write for you. But now, no more words. I strictly forbid you saying 'anything more.'"

The young man turned his head away with an expression of pain and despair, and the surgeon passed on in his rounds of the hospital.

A week passed by, and every day the "interesting young patient," as the surgeon termed the wounded young sailor from the Harpy, renewed his pleadings with the surgeon to secure an early discharge from the hospital. With good care, rest and nourishing food, he was slowly gaining strength, and asserted that he felt well enough to leave; but the surgeon was afraid that the internal injuries were of too grave a character to allow an early discharge from his care, and denied every appeal allowed to leave.

One morning, on his rounds of the hospital, the surgeon came to the ward that contained the wounded sailors—most of whom were now convalescent. On approaching the cot that had contained the young man, he was greatly surprised to find it vacant. He had just been considering, as he came along, the advisability of informing his very anxious patient that he could be discharged in a week or two. But he was gone. Inquiry gave no clue to the secret of his departure, nor were any of the hospital attendants aware of it. He had evidently got worried of waiting a cure, and securing the help probably of some of his sailor comrades, had been assisted to dress and make his way from the hospital without attracting the attention of anybody.

The surgeon was very much chagrined and indignant. He berated his assistants roundly for their want of watchfulness. "It's a pity," he said, as he moved on. "That boy will probably sacrifice his life to his zeal to return to his friends, in a couple of weeks he might have gone safely, too. It's a shame. If I find out he was allowed to go with the connivance of anybody here, it will go hard with him."

For many weeks, the disappearance of the young sailor was the subject of curiosity and speculation in the hospital.

proposed visit of himself and Ralph to the house to investigate the matter. The truth was, that the lawyer, like many men who are intellectually very daring, was physically a coward, and, though he was no believer whatever in ghosts, he had an undefinable dread of again entering the old mansion while in its present state. He could not forget the strange and terrible death of Leeb Sackett, nor the fright he had had at the time of the discovery of the corpse of the would-be robber of the strong vault built by Magnus Rolf. While inwardly sneering at his own cowardice, he made an effort to secure the services of some resolute man to accompany him on the proposed investigation; but without success. There were but few men in the little community whom he would have trusted for such a purpose, and not much to his surprise, all whom he approached on the subject had business on hand that prevented their acceptance of his offer, or else they honestly confessed that they had no wish to enter the old house after all the strange occurrences there.

"It is just as I feared, Ralph," said the lawyer to his son, after returning from his unsuccessful mission. "This infernal trickery has so imposed upon the community that it is practically impossible to get anybody to go within gunshot of the old house. There is no other way for it—we must go alone. And why shouldn't we? I confess I feel somewhat nervous; but, pshaw! what is there to be afraid of? Suppose we should run across old Crum or some other mischievous fellow there? We shall go well armed and prepared, and have really nothing to fear. Get your pistols ready, and I will see to mine, and to having the lanterns prepared; and, after a good dinner, and a bottle of wine to warm our courage, I think we will be ready for the trip."

"Well, I am not disposed to back out," said Ralph. "My pistols are good ones; and if, as you say, we should meet any fellow there, we ought to be able to give a good account of ourselves. But I have no idea we shall meet anybody; and, of course, the idea of our encountering ghosts is preposterous."

"Exactly, Ralph—perfectly silly," "Strange people should be so superstitious," remarked Ralph, with an air intended to indicate his own entire superiority to such a feeling.

"Well, I don't know," was the reply, "considering the popular ignorance. There are very few who have any real knowledge of philosophy and science, and it is perfectly natural that an uneducated mind should refer the phenomena of Nature, and even the most simple occurrences out of the usual order, to supernatural causes. It is only the highly intelligent, Ralph, who are superior to the weakness of superstition. Had your own education been different, you might have been more susceptible to ordinary delusions. But I flatter myself that I have pursued such a system and afforded such an example in your education that you are far above any such unmanly weakness as

The following spent Sunday at the Eau: N. H. Stevens and son, S. O. L. Lewis and wife, Messrs. Cornell and Kent, of Standard Bank, Mr. G. and Mrs. E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. Taylor, Geo. Gray, Art. Richards, J. C. Kerr, C. E. Beeson, Mr. Paul, of Dowsley Works, D. Glass and wife, W. W. Scane and family, M. Houston and family, W. J. Taylor and family, John Small and family, S. M. Glenn and family, J. Oldershaw and family, E. A. Mounter and family, W. H. Harper and family.

The Bungalow was full of guests Sunday. A number left on the Urania Sunday night for Cleveland. Carpenters commenced work on a building at the Eau for Geo. A. Taylor, who will use it for his barber shop. George intends giving a better service this season than has ever before been given at the Eau, and he should be patronized by residents and visitors.

The Merritt new cottage near Outlaw's Inn is nearly completed.

Mr. Laird's cottage has been very much improved by a verandah on the west side.

The Eau is well populated now, nearly every cottage is occupied.

Mrs. (Dr.) McKeough moves out for the season on Tuesday.

Mr. Paul caught a fine string of fish Saturday night, including a large pike. He was fishing with Archie Paik, who would not have allowed anyone but one of his guests to beat him fishing.

G. G. Taylor and W. E. Campbell had good success fishing.

Tom Jarvis is enjoying the Eau on a visit to his schoolmate, Sydney Falls.

Fred Larkin is visiting with Mrs. S. M. Glenn.

Mr. Mallory has no reason to complain at the business he is doing in his new hotel.

Sunday was an ideal day at the Eau, a pleasant breeze blowing all day and it looks fine to see all the sailboats out. The sailing season is now in full swing and many are enjoying the pleasure to be derived from that line of sport.

It will soon be time for to get up a regatta.

JEALOUSY AMONG THE PREMIERS

Mr. Seddon Treated with more Deference Than the Other Colonials.

Which is Far From Pleasing to the Lat- The Question of Imperial Defence.

London, July 5.—After two meetings, the colonial premiers did not get "much forerider" (to quote one member) nor does there seem to be a prospect of reaching any conclusions in the immediate future.

The question of Imperial defence was put up first as being the least argumentative, but even here difficulties have arisen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier of Canada, and Sir John Gordon Spragg, the prime minister of Cape Colony, appear to differ materially from Edmund Barton, the premier of Australia, and Richard J. Seddon, prime minister of New Zealand, as to what the colonies ought to do.

Mr. Seddon is constantly employed as spokesman both in and out of the councils and this has given rise to no little jealousy among his brother premiers. Canadian circles openly express dissatisfaction and declare that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not being treated with the deference due to a man whose imperial status-ship is so universally admitted. The elaborate manner in which Sir Wilfrid's forthcoming reception in Paris has been heralded in the English press was to no little extent due to a desire to emphasize Canadian disengagement.

At the Imperial conference yesterday in the Colonial Secretary's office, the Earl of Selborne, first Lord of the Admiralty, stated the views of his department with regard to Imperial defence.

The five colonial premiers present spoke giving the views of their respective governments.

The proceedings were confidential, but the belief is that Lord Selborne suggested that each colony should contribute to the defence of the Empire.

MUCH LOSS OF LIFE.

KING TREATS MANY POOR

500,000 of the London People are the Guests of His Majesty.

Message From Edward Read and His Health Very Heartily Drunk.

London, July 5.—Half a million of London's poor were King Edward's guests this afternoon. They were scattered in about 400 halls, schools and parks, in various numbers, the greatest of the royal beneficiaries being at Stepney, where no less than 45,000 enjoyed a dinner as they seldom partake of. At every gathering was read a message from the king to the poor, sent through the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, as follows:—

"Buckingham Palace, 11.20 a. m.—I am commanded by the King to inform your Lordship that His Majesty and the Queen had intended visiting some of his coronation dinners to-day, and he deeply regrets that his illness prevents their doing so. The King deputed members of his family to represent him at as many of these dinners as possible. I am further commanded by the King to express his hope that his guests are enjoying themselves and are passing a happy day. (Signed) Knollys."

This morning's bulletin announcing that King Edward is out of danger was also circulated, so that the half million poor folk drank His Majesty's health in no restrained enjoyment out of the coronation cup presented to each of them as a souvenir of the occasion. The Prince and Princess of Wales traversed the metropolis from end to end in semi-state, the carriages being escorted by a detachment of the Horse Guards, and appeared at central gatherings in several districts. The principal dinner was at Fulham, where Sir Thomas Lipton, who organized the whole feast, did the honors of the day to 14,000 of the poor, aided by a host of titled and untitled volunteers, including several Americans, who handed around plates of beef or pudding or filled beer mugs with an enthusiasm emblematic of the whole spirit of the occasion. The Prince and Princess of Wales paid their first visit to Fulham. They entered the park of the Bishop's Palace through a triumphal arch, and were received by the Mayor of Fulham, Sir Thomas Lipton and others. Their Royal Highnesses were enthusiastically greeted by an immense band of scholars, who sang "God Save the King." The Prince and Princess aligned, and walked among the marquees, where the guests were assembled around two and one-half miles of tables, evincing the utmost interest in everything. At the head of the table in the central marquee the royal party stopped and the Prince of Wales read this morning's bulletin regarding the King's health. This was the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheering. Before leaving the Prince of Wales expressed to the Bishop of London, the Right Rev. Arthur Foley Ingram, and Sir Thomas Lipton, his great satisfaction at the completeness of the arrangements, and emphasized his regret at the fact that the King was unable to be present.

This was a sample of all the other dinners, which were followed in every case by variety shows, upwards of 1,500 operatic, theatrical and music hall artists, and 418 pianists giving their services for the occasion.

During the course of the afternoon a second message from the King was read at the various gatherings, saying His Majesty was very glad to hear that they were his guests, and hoped they would all be happy and comfortable, and spend a pleasant afternoon.

The Prince and Princess of Wales were accorded a particularly warm reception in the east end streets, which were gaily decorated. In speaking to the gatherings the Prince said: "The Prince and Princess are 'My friends.'"

On his arrival at York House this evening after a long tour of the many dining rendezvous, the Prince of Wales telegraphed to the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, that the program was everywhere carried out without a hitch. The Prince, in his despatch commended all the mayors and all others concerned for the excellency of the arrangements for the dinners, and thanked the people for the hearty welcomes accorded himself and the Princess. Sir Thomas Lipton, the general chairman of the dinners, has transmitted his thanks to all responsible for organizing the feasts for their painstaking devotion in carrying out the wishes of the King.

The appearance of Queen Alexandra as she drove out in an open carriage for an hour this evening, accompanied by some of the royal guests at the palace, occasioned enthusiasm in the park, and in the streets which Her Majesty traversed.

London, July 6.—The Lord Mayor of London, Sir Jos. C. Dimsdale, received a letter to-night from Sir Francis Knollys, private secretary to the King, to the effect that His Majesty had commanded him to convey to all concerned his gratification and warm thanks for the energy and foresight which made the King's dinner to the poor Saturday such a great success, and to repeat how sincerely His Majesty regretted his inability to be present and how touched he was by the loyal and kindly feelings so universally displayed.

"IT'S GOOD TEA."

This is what the proprietor of Red Rose Tea claims for it. Some say the claim is too modest, but you may notice that a grocer is very often asked,—"Have you any good tea?" The word "good" in this sense is probably intended to mean "best." So perhaps Red Rose Tea is The Best Tea.

REDMOND'S ADVICE.

Dublin, July 5.—Addressing a meeting of the United Irish League at Limerick to-day, John Redmond, chairman of the league, called on the Irish to unite for one great effort. Coercion, he said, should meet coercion, and the land scheme of Mr. Wyndham, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, should be defeated. It rested with the Irish to win their liberty.
