

FAS leaflets late; info blitz planned

Posters and leaflets concerning the U of A's membership in the Federation of Alberta Students (FAS), intended for distribution last week, will not be available to students until sometime today.

Students' Union president Len Zoeteman says a combination of design and printing complications have delayed the distribution until now, only six days before the Oct. 6 referendum concerning FAS membership.

And he says he's worried students will not have the information necessary to make an intelligent vote on the FAS issue on Wed.

"My concern now is that people may cast uninformed votes," says Zoeteman, "but I'm hoping they'll look carefully at the material now being distributed and reach an informed decision before Oct. 6."

FAS is a collective body, representing the students union of post-secondary institutions across Alberta, and has three aims as outlined in its constitutions:

- "to provide a unified voice for Alberta students,"
- "to lobby the provincial government concerning issues facing Alberta students,"
- "to conduct research on problems that face students in the province."

FAS was begun in the summer of 1975, at an organizational conference held here at the U of A. The U of A joined at a cost of 25 cents per student on a temporary basis and, if membership is approved Oct. 6, would join the federation at an annual cost of 50 cents per student, added to their normal Students' Union dues of $34.

FAS work during the first year of its existence was mainly in regards to student aid, employment and housing, international student fee hikes, accessibility to post-secondary education in the province and student loan verification.

Research files have been maintained on all these matters and FAS has made a number of direct representations - in writing and in person - to the provincial government.

GFC election response poor

No students have been nominated for the three Education seats and the two Science seats open on General Faculties Council (GFC), to be contested in an Oct. 6 by-election.

But Students' Union returning officer Michael Amerongen says there has been good response for the Arts and Science seats on Students' Council which will be contested in the same election.

And he adds that any students wishing to run for the GFC positions or any of the five seats open on Students' Council - Arts, Science, Law and two Education positions - may still pick up nominations forms from the SU general office (Room 258 SUB) or the returning officer's office (Room 271 SUB).

Nominations close today (Thurs.) at 6:30 p.m.

Moon boon buys buildings

NEW YORK (ENS-CUP) - The controversial, self-ordained Korean evangelist Sun Myung Moon is planning to add the Empire State Building to his growing list of American real estate holdings.

According to the Christian Science Monitor, Moon's Unification Church hopes to buy the New York skyscraper — once the world's tallest building — by next year. The Moonies, who already own about $20-million worth of property in the U.S., also plan to start a daily newspaper in New York City sometime next year, the Monitor reports.

But, despite Moon's financial rise in this country, his followers were terming his scheduled appearance at a Washington rally two weeks ago as his final public appearance in the U.S. — at least for quite awhile. Facing growing opposition in this country, Moon plans to begin concentrating his efforts on a new drive to spread his movement through Europe.

Part of the reason behind Moon's decision to concentrate on Europe apparently stems from the U.S. Immigration Service's current campaign to deport about 600 of his Asian followers. Immigration officials recently ruled that Moon has been bringing Asian followers into the U.S. not for religious training, but to sell goods and make money for his organization. Most of those scheduled to be deported are expected to move to Europe for Moon's new recruitment drive there.

As for Moon's weekend appearance in Washington, the U.S. government has estimated that it will cost American taxpayers about $120,000 to provide

Now that's foresight...

The university is busy planting saplings beside its older trees in an effort to maintain the aesthetic beauty of the ever-decreasing green space on campus. But perhaps it's too late... Last week the Board of Governor's Building Committee recommended that the playing fields south of Corbett Hall be replaced with the shiny black asphalt of parking lots that we all love and yearn for. And if plans for construction of the new Building Administration and Commerce (BAC) building go through, half of the Arts Quad will be replaced by a shiny new edifice to clutter the campus skyline.

Nova Scotia fights foreign fee hike

HALIFAX (CUP) - Both students and the president of the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design (NSCAD) have changed their minds about differential fees for international students.

Last March students were calling for a reduced fee for Canadian students while the college president Gary Kennedy said he wouldn't consider it.

Early this month Kennedy announced he wanted to double fees for international students to $1,560 in January. Now student leaders say they will fight any differential fee proposal.

Fine arts representative Don Soucy said Sept. 27 that "unless you equate creativity with wealth," the fee increase will "set very strict limitations on the type of people who will be able to contribute to the Halifax art community."

He pointed out, "it is necessary for a flourishing art community to have different geographical and cultural influences."

Kennedy believes the fee hike is justified because the large number of Americans who attend the college have come to get a cheap education.

He said there is not problem for third world and other international students whose fees would also double.

Student president Brian Perkins said Kennedy's assertions are "based on half-truths, total misinformation and illogic. The administration has made absolutely no attempt to solicit student opinion on the matter."

Kennedy claims "student fee income has not been increasing at the same rate as has the cost of operating the college, or at the same rate of increase as other revenues... and added income

Bookstore complaints

by David Oke

Complaints about the operation of the university's bookstore have dominated the list of grievances submitted by students to Students' Council in the last two weeks.

Four hour line-ups snaking up and down bookstore aisles, confusion as to which line was "cash" and which was "cheque" and people butting into line were the basic sources of irritation mentioned.

One first year student found waiting two hours to pay for his books "undignified," "a terrible initiation" to the U of A and left with "a feeling of disgust." Another student thought a wait of 2½ hours was "frustrating." One individual got though to the cash register after four hours of muscle cramps and excess adrenalin declaring, "this is the most ridiculous thing I have ever seen!"

However, changes in bookstore operations will be forthcoming. In an interview Howard Hoggins (SU vp executive) named a number of reforms.

Next year, book purchases will be recorded by computers. Cashiers will be issued electric "wands", which read the price of the book from magnetic tape and total the cost automatically.

Signs will be posted throughout the book store encouraging students to add up the price of their books themselves and to have the proper amount of cash ready.

Although no commitments have been made, an alternative facility, perhaps in the arena, is being considered.

Apparently, the high cost of books cannot be changed by the bookstore. According to Hoggins, the bookstore sells at a 5 percent discount. The villains here, he says, are the publishers.

Canadian publishers have kept their prices stable but the prices of books from the U.S. and Great Britain have sky-rocketed. Hoggins gave an example of one book selling for $2.95 last year which is now selling for $4.79. He feels that pressure on publishers from the Students' Council, the Federation of Alberta Students and the National Union of Students would have an effect. "After all, we're the ones who are buying the books," said Hoggins.

Three commonly voiced solutions to students' chronic "textbook neurosis" have been: The standardization of texts for courses to increase the number of second hand textbooks available; Pressure on professors to take book costs into account; Increased use of the library facilities.

None of the above approaches have been considered said Hoggins.

If a student has any bile regarding this issue, it can be spilled to Howard Hoggins in his office, room 258, SUB, or through written submissions to the grievance boxes on campus.

CEGEP agreement signed

MONTREAL (CUP) - The first collective agreement in seven years between the CEGEP teachers union and the Quebec government was signed Sept. 21.

The new four-year contract, ratified by each CEGEP local, follows almost a year and a half of attempts by Le Federation Nationale des Enseignants de Quebec (FNEQ) to negotiate higher salaries, job security and "equitable" workloads.

FNEQ initiated negotiations in April 1975, but by July 1976 the government had made only one salary offer which was overwhelmingly rejected.

Last spring, the college teachers conducted a series of work stoppages to pressure the provincial government into negotiating. The result — Bill 20 — banned walkouts and lockouts in schools for 80 days. Student teacher protest against the bill led to a shutdown of almost all CEGEPs.

Negotiations finally speeded up after a series of one-day work stoppages by the 180,000 member common front of public sector employees in support of the teachers and against bill 20.

The government's salary offer was accepted July 21. Most disagreements on workload and job security were resolved earlier.

"This contract agreement finally brings us up to more or less the average salary in Canada," said David Payne, Vanier CEGEP Union President.

The new agreement provides for pay increases ranging between 30 and 50 per cent over four years with the larger increases for lower levels of scholastic experience.

The agreement also provides immediate reclassification for some teachers into higher pay categories.

from increased fees to out-of-country students is substantial."

But Soucy counters that, even if fees were tripled, the increase in money would be less than half a percentage point.

Students are pointing to a recent decision by the University of Manitoba Senate to reject differential fees, adding that decisions to hike fees for internationals in Ontario this year and Alberta next year have come from government initiative — not administrations.

SUB Art Gallery

The Students' Union Building Art Gallery is the best Students' Union Art Gallery in Canada and the only Gallery of its kind to achieve national recognition. In 1976 the Gallery program will contain twenty-one shows, nine of which will be student shows. The objectives of the Gallery are:

1. Through a total arts program to stimulate and initiate interest in the arts, particularly in young people, upon whom the responsibility of support and interpretation of cultural activities of this country will rest in the future.

2. a) To present a program illustrative of the talents of University of Alberta Students in academic programs.

b) To present a program illustrative of significant developments in art within Alberta.

c) And, through bringing in shows from outside the Province, to provide opportunity for the public to see local art in context of developments in Canada as a whole.

3. Through disregard for perimeters traditionally dividing the arts, to present a total arts program incorporating drama, music and dance as well as the exhibition program and/or any combination of these.

The Students' Union Art Gallery will operate on a budget of $16,575 this year, part of which is a $4,000 annual grant from the University for its use of the Gallery.

This year as well Arts and Crafts Supervisor, Janet Moore, is looking for assistance in the form of an Art Gallery Committee, so that students can take part in the process of choosing the shows which will be part of this year's Gallery Program.

Students support protest

VICTORIA (CUP) - British Columbia's student leaders have voted their support for the Canadian labor Congress' Day of Protest and committed themselves to a national student day.

Delegates to the B.C. Student Federation conference September 18-19 agreed unanimously to organize their campuses for National Student Day November 9, although some abstained from supporting the CLC general strike October 14.

Most representatives admitted they had not planned specific activities for November 9, but said they were considering teach-ins, forums and workshops.

An open forum with provincial attorney-general Garde Gardom and education minister Pat McGeer will be held at the University of British Columbia, according to UBC delegate Moe Sihota.

Delegates voted their opposition to the federal Wage and Price Controls Program following a long debate, after hearing CLC education director Art Kube say the government should control rising prices in housing, food, and energy to remove upward pressure on wage demands.

Labor reacts to SU Exec

"They're all young Tories. I wonder if we should be surprised," remarked a spokesperson for the Alberta Federation of Labour (AFL).

This comment was provoked by the U of A SU executive's recent announcement refusing support for the Oct. 14 protest because of its "questionable legality" and "detrimental effect on the Canadian economy."

The AFL spokesperson stated that the SU Executive seemed to have forgotten that students also need jobs and housing and are fighting higher tuition fees created by cutbacks in government spending.

"The students' union has obviously forgotten that students are going to be workers and that some students are probably part-time workers," continued the AFL representative.

John McInnis, executive-assistant to Grant Notley, (Alta.'s NDP party leader) greeted SU executive's decision with a similar amount of disbelief.

"Well, of course we're disappointed," McInnis said. "Students have suffered as much as anyone from the anti-inflation program."

"I think it's rather short-sighted of them to view Oct. 14 strictly in terms of labour's fight against wage controls," he said.

In reaction to the "questionable legality" of the Oct. 14 protest, McInnis said "The CLC (Canadian Labour Congress) says the anti-inflation board has been running around breaking contracts left and right

"It seems to me that when the law's an ass, there's a need for disobedience," he commented.

The Federation of Alberta Students (FAS) had a "no comment" to the executive's announcement. "I've asked each campus to take a vote on the issue and the majority will decide," FAS executive-secretary Brian Mason said.

SEMINAR: Housing and senior citizens

Humane alternatives in housing for senior citizens will be explored in a two-day conference arranged by The University of Calgary on Oct. 12-13 at the Kerby Centre.

The conference, entitled Choice: Yours/Theirs, is designed to create awareness of the problem of housing for senior citizens.

Conference speakers will be Mr Waugh and Professors Walter Jamieson and James McKellar, also of the U of C faculty of environmental design.

According to conference chairman James Waugh, this year the emphasis will be on assessing several forms of housing.

"After the last conference, some groups got together to work out solutions of their own, such as co-operative housing and home-care services. This year we will be evaluating those and other alternatives to the forced move to the senior citizens' lodge after retirement," says Waugh.

The conference fee, which includes materials, lunches, coffee breaks and a reception on October 12, is $5 for those over 60 and $20 for all others. For further details contact Sharron Smyth at the U of C, by phoning 284-5431.

editorial

There is a certain brand of discrimination which no one seems to be concerned with these days - discrimination based on age. The Traffic Injury Research Foundation of Canada has recommended young drivers - between 16 and 19 - be banned from highways between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. Provincial authorities, notably Solicitor-General Roy Farran, are not worried about the discriminatory aspect of such a recommendation but say it won't be implemented "because it's a very difficult thing ... to enforce." Likewise with the idea one woman in Sherwood Park had about imposing a curfew for teenage people - there was no reaction to the idea based on human rights violation, only because (again) it would be impossible to enforce.

Young people are discriminated against by auto insurance companies every day - charged higher premiums whether or not they have accidents because the companies' premise is that you're guilty even if proven innocent. Young people looking for accommodation are not protected from discriminatory landlords under the Alberta Human Rights Commission. And actually, the same can be applied to most age groups; although the human rights commission placed job discrimination for people 45 to 65 years of age under its jurisdiction in 1972 - there are still no clauses to protect other age groups from tenancy discrimination, job discrimination, etc.

Senior citizens began to realize the extent to which they were discriminated against when government subsidized housing began running out a couple of years ago and they found they were refused accommodation because landlords would not have "old folks" in their housing units.

Senior citizens have, at least, begun to do something and have lobbied to have their status recognized legally. Other age groups - other than the 45 to 65 executive middle-age category - have not done so.

Although the provincial government is beginning to recognize age discrimination - it is expected that new human rights legislation this fall will include a provision concerning tenancy discrimination against those under 25, not enough indication has been given to the government about the severity of age discrimination. Although most people recognize a line must be drawn somewhere - a 10 year-old should not be allowed to drive a car, or a 5 year-old walk into a pub and be served - the issue of discrimination against people who are recognized to have legal adult rights i.e. the right to drive a car after age 16, must not be allowed to continue.

It is, in fact, just as bigoted, unethical and unjust as any other form of discrimination. Age groups must make the government 1) recognize such discrimination and 2) follow through with legislation against it.

Course Guide: the defence rests

I feel compelled to answer Mr. Jung's letter printed in the Sept. 28 edition of Gateway with the purpose of explaining why there will be no Course Guide this year.

Mr. Jung makes the assumption that the primary reason that the Guide will not be published is simply that Students' Union finances are critically low. I'm afraid that this is simply not true and it is unfortunate that he was led to believe the contrary.

There are two equally important reasons for publishing a Course Guide. One is to help students to better chart the course of their Academic careers and the other is to provide feedback to professors in the hopes that improvements in weak areas will be forthcoming. Both students and staff members have in the past doubted the ability of the Guide to carry out either of these roles properly. The stigma of the "anti-calendar" from the late 1960's still sticks with the present version of the guide.

Despite the fact that the evaluations have been vastly improved by the present Course Guide Co-ordinator many problems concerning the validity and reliability of the results still have to be ironed out. Technical and statistical validity were two things that the past Guide sadly lacked. Why use a Course Guide if you can't trust the results? The literature in the field suggests that Guides can be most useful if handled in the proper manner.

Then too, many professors still feel somewhat adverse to acting on the results, because of memories of several past Course Guides that were, in some cases, nothing short of slanderous or unuseful disasters. I have to wonder what is the sense of channeling all of our students to what are presently considered "good" professors and courses, when the very good possibility exists (as documented at other Universities) that credible, constructive criticism can improve even the "bad" professors.

The Students' Union Executive has taken the stand that a short-term loss of a not quite perfect Guide is well worth the long-term gain of putting out a Guide that is both credible and useful in the eyes of students and staff.

This November students will again fill out course evaluation forms, but the results will only be used as private feedback to professors. Many instructors have already commented that the questionnaire has much more merit than in past years. We feel that a one year wait will regain the confidence of all sections of the University community. The present questionnaire will be used as a "dry run" so to speak and students and staff will be asked to suggest improvements. Additions will be made (particularly concerning course content, curriculum and more importantly how much is being learned from each professor) and the questions re-worded so as to prompt more reliable responses. With this carefully refined data as a base to work from a published Course guide will come out in 1977-78.

At the same time as we are improving our own product, the Students' Union is discussing with the University the possibility of publishing the Guide as a joint effort in the future. The project would be strictly a 50-50 proposition and each group would have its interests represented so that no one party would dominate. If this joint effort is approved then the Guide would enjoy the added credibility of being sanctioned by the University.

I might also say that it is most unfortunate that the Gateway article of Sept. 14th played up the financial saving on not publishing a Guide this year (which, by the way, is closer to $15,000 than the $11,000 stated). Sure we can use that money elsewhere, because the fact remains the Students' Union financial situation is not the rosey. But that's not why the Course Guide was dropped for this year (relatively speaking $15,000 is a drop in the bucket) and the financial situation of the Students' Union is not the result of some mythical "bust" that has occurred over the past four months. The good effects of being out of HUB will not be felt for at least several years until reserves that were eaten away over the years can be replenished and new priorities set. The present Executive is trying to start the economic rebuilding process, at the same time as protecting the students' academic interests by pushing for many things that often do not cost a cent, but are nonetheless vitally important. (i.e. Ombudsman, extended library hours, more study time in the First Term, an Exam Registry, changes to the Student Loan Plan, etc.).

As for pre-registration this Spring and being able to choose courses more carefully, hopefully Mr. Jung and others will be able to take advantage of Student-run counselling services that the Students' Union is attempting to institute in each Faculty this Fall.

Had I enough brains

As much as I enjoyed reading the letter "Had I no brains..." in Tuesday's Gateway, I still feel obliged to point out that it does not provide a totally accurate account of what happened that infamous Friday afternoon in RATT. Yes Manfred, I am a "he-type", a "big man", or, as the less athletically inclined are wont to say, a JOCK. Up to now, however, my friends had tended to think of me as a kind of GENTLE GIANT rather than the aggressive bully you portray me as. In defence of my character, then, I must point out that I am basically an innocent figure in a admittedly sordid affair. The real culprit is my fellow jock, Ron Stewart.

If you recall it was another very busy Friday afternoon at RATT in which every seat was taken, except for the two you had stashed upside down against the window behind your table. Now I've been working at RATT for four years and I have seen such things done many times and rarely have I interfered. As a matter of fact I would not have become involved on this occasion if Ron Stewart had not already informed you that you must give the chairs up to some of the many people who were looking for a place to sit.

In fact, Ron picked up (hefted) one of the chairs and holding it aloft asked all those within earshot of they needed a chair. Having two friends who were about to leave because they could not find seats, I took the chair from Ron and after depositing it with my friends, I returned for the second one. Apparently you did not find me as physically imposing as Ron because you attempted (albeit somewhat feebly) to hold on to the chair and as a result I had to yank it out of your hands. You then called me a number of very nasty names Manfred, and had no sense of humor, well... who knows what might have happened.

Anyway, Manfred, thanks for the free publicity. I'd love to tell you how grateful I really am, but I've got to go now and meet Ron in the weight room for our daily work-out.

Bacus backs us up

You may not realize this, as you are still a rookie on campus as well as in life but your first responsibility as editor of Gateway on this campus is to the students. I know that both the Engineers and the Commerce Undergraduates' Societies attempted to unearth you or one of your photographers, writers etc. for days prior to last Friday's "War Against the Engineers" (By the Commerce students) to give some preliminary coverage and help get student apathy squashed early in the year. Your obnoxious comment by phone to our president that you make the policy decision on the Gateway — without real investigation yet — leaves much to be desired in the way of real concern for campus affairs.

Perhaps if you paid more attention to your position and not your place (ego-trip) you could accomplish a more legitimate and ethical job.

Ferris Trots out fears

I'd like to comment upon the recent furor (in The Gateway, if nowhere else) regarding the "waffling" of the SU executive and council on the issue of the "Edmonton 61." (Dear me, does "the Edmonton 61" have the same ring as "the Chicago 7"? Or "the Catonsville 21"? Or was that "the Catonsville 9"? Ah, well...)

It seems to me that when the student electorate exercised their franchise last election (in most cases, by totally ignoring it) and elected Len & Eliane (sic) and the boys, they knew that they weren't exactly placing political activists in the hallowed halls of SUB. We got what we wanted.

Therefore, I see no reason why they should take any political stands (radical or reactionary) on matters over which the SU has neither influence or (sic) concern, and which effectively are out of its responsibility. To do otherwise is to waste their time and hours.

If the SU wishes to take moral stands on international issues, fine, I've got my list (starting from Angola & ending in Zaire) and I'll be glad to present it before Council if they have a couple of months to spare. I see no reason why a vocal group of CPC-ML hoods and Trot budding heroes should waste our SU's time so that they have another headline to put on "People's Canada Daily News" next to the fact that they sold 3 subscriptions in Edmonton last year (up 2 from the year before).

Perhaps The Gateway has time to waste on things like this (call me a fascist for not wanting to "educate the masses about the racist capitalist vultures in South Africa"); perhaps not. I agree with you about the "waffle" — I think that Zoeteman should have said right out that he didn't want anything to do with it — but I think you are ignoring the real problem revealed by this schmozzle.

If the SU lacks the courage to state its principles — that is, disinterest in larger political issues — and continues to bring out ridiculous statements such as that no actions which break the law are ever justified, we're in trouble.

I don't care about the SU stand on nuclear weapons in the hands of penguins, but I don't know how far I can trust people who are unable to face embarrassing problems without relying on a somewhat cowardly cop-out.

Racists reside in closet

The Free Southern Africa Committee (FSAC) and the Edmonton '61' would like to express our appreciation for your Sept. 23 editorial and articles defending and supporting our protest against racist sport as a reflection of the apartheid system of South Africa. We also were pleased to see the article by Blanchet and LeRougetel which begins to expose the crucial links between exploitation of black labour in South Africa and the international capitalist community that supports and greatly profits from that exploitation.

FSAC's corporate research sub-committee will soon provide you with some of our findings on corporate connections. We are enclosing a copy of our newsletter article listing South African commodities that are very visible in Canadian markets. Hopefully such information will educate more and more Canadians on the political economy of apartheid and the role they play as consumers to support it.

There are many issues raised in the past two weeks that require comment, but we would like to focus on only one of those issues in this letter.

FSAC unequivocally condemns Student Council's decision to refuse support of our actions and, more importantly, to define apartheid as outside the "terms of reference" of that body. Decisions not to take decisions are decisions — there can be no question on this. What hides behind the mask of neutrality is in reality a decision to condone apartheid in all its subtle manifestations.

The neutrality position is further contradicted when it is pointed out that Carling O'Keefe is controlled by the Rothmans empire based in South Africa. On every occasion that Carling O'Keefe products are sold at campus functions, over which Student Council has jurisdiction, that Council is directly supporting apartheid. On every occasion that the Carling O'Keefe van parks on campus, Council again expresses its partisan — not neutral — position. Indeed, we have been told that the presence of this van on campus violates ALCB regulations.

In sum, Students' Council has taken a position that can only be described as deplorable. Furthermore, like most supporters of apartheid, they tried to conceal their position by discussing it behind closed doors, in the closet where most racists reside.

Photog/activist flashes back

Mr. Neiman, may I redirect you to the opening sentence of my article. I quote, "I arrived at the Victoria Park cricket grounds with intentions of both protesting apartheid as represented by the Robbins II team, and reporting the demonstration." I wondered about some of the editorials last year, Mr. Neiman.

As to my getting arrested while reporting I will agree with you that I could have changed to a mere reporter in order to escape. I also could have asked an MLA I know well to come down and put lots of pressure on to try to spring me — but I did neither.

I am glad that you loved the story, however, will we do anything about the questions it raises?

Fenna defends those caught in crossfire

Last Tuesday's brutal front-page photographs of our champions of social justice being hauled away by police, stirred, I am sure, all sorts of self-righteous indignation in the hearts of all your readers. While this might have been just a legitimate piece of sensationalism, only the editorial of the subsequent edition rescued any credibility this paper might have as representing a view independent of bandwagon student radicalism.

Not only was the proverbial "dead horse" flogged, in the abusive right-ups of the "Edmonton 61" affair, as the police (and all they stand for I suppose) were criticised by the authors' ready wit, but the issue managed to black-and-white (so to speak) the issues as only a propaganda rag could.

Now, while I would be the last person to condone the social system prevalent in South Africa, I feel that someone must come out and defend those, largely innocent, parties caught in the crossfire between well-meaning protestors, and the ultimate object of their actions.

As indicated in the edition, there is a larger issue looming on the horizon, which is of direct relevance. This is the threatening Black African boycott of the Edmonton Commonwealth Games. As in the recent cricket incident, the Olympic boycott was grossly unfair, to in that case, New Zealand, and an incredibly indirect manner in which to attack South Africa.

New Zealand's offence, in harbouring a team, that, acting independently of governmental, or public direction, visited South Africa, becomes little more than a feeble pretext when one compares it with the many blatant interactions through trade carried on by many nations, including Black African ones.

And, mentioning hypocrisy; where would one see racialism and general injustice, more pronounced than in the country of the President of the Organization of African Unity! The persecution of NZ is also sadly ironic when one considers their international reputation in the field of social and interracial justice.

So much is similar in the "Edmonton 61" incident; here, the party under attack had not only never been to South Africa, but was also funded with moneys of British origin and sponsored by a man of non-South African origin. And as for the criticism of Students' Union, how could they join the bandwagon by extending their interference beyond their mandate, and hope to retain their credibility in the eyes of rational people?

The crowning thing was that these protesters then expect us to shed tears for their subsequent treatment (details of which The Gateway was obviously quite ready to publicize at length). Perhaps we could let some Indians off their reservations here, to protest Apartheid.

Frank Mutton

Premier Peter Lougheed announced today that his Press Secretary, Joe Hutton, will be stepping down at the end of the month. Joe has been offered a lucrative position with Pravda in the U.S.S.R., and will soon be off to Moscow to take over as Chief Person Who Tells Reporters What News Today is Going To Be.

He says he'll miss the camaraderie he had with the media in Alberta — especially the secret contests where the winner got an interview with Lougheed, and the loser got cement overshoes.

Joe's replacement looks like a real winner — Colonel Wilhelm Wormsbacker, formerly of Buenos Aires and currently under contract to the U.S. Marines, has agreed to take over as press secretary.

I managed to reach Willy by phone, and asked him what would be done about complaints by reporters of unfair practices.

"There will be no complaints" was all I got out of him before the line went dead.

Why doesn't Edmonton

Telephones do something to improve service?

A reader at the University wants to know why George Ford stepped down as Dean of Engineering.

I talked to Dean Adams, his replacement, and he had a very sad tale to relate.

It seems that Dean Ford had been found one morning in his office with a pocket radio turned to CFCW. He was also found to have in his possession a copy of the Camrose Canadian, a dirty black velvet cowboy hat, and a spitoon full of used chewing tobacco (at least it resembled chewing tobacco).

Ford tried to deny that any of the incriminating evidence was his, but later that morning he was caught installing a Radio Shack 23 Channel CB Unit in his Chrysler.

Dean Adams went on to say that Mr. Ford has found a very satisfying job running the Massey-Ferguson franchise in Mannville.

For what it's worth there's going to be a real whiz-bang concert at the Coliseum on October 23. It seems that Frank Sinatra, John Denver, Ella Fitzgerald, Count Basie, Louis Armstrong, The Beatles and Loretta Haegers will be appearing together in a 4 hour tribute to Bobby Vinton.

There's still lots of tickets available at $35, $40, and $75 from the guy in the raincoat and dark glasses in front of Mike's.

Here's one for the books. I was walking along the city street the other day when I noticed one of our canine Edmontonians taking an ahem on the city sidewalk. I noticed there was no policeman around to note the occurrence and fine the dog's owner as the city by-law stipulates. Guess the boys in blue are too busy out catching bank robbers and murderers to worry about the things that affect us common folks, eh?

In closing, remember that "Whatever the weather, you'll weather it better if you wear a smile."

Simon Fraser TAs make plans to unionize

BURNABY (CUP) - It took the reality of a strike and a repressive administration strike policy to do it, but Simon Fraser University teaching assistants are attempting to unionize.

14 to announce they had obtained a union charter from the Association of University and College Employees (AUCE). They also adopted a position paper which supports the campus' 71 striking mechanical trades workers and denounces President Pauline Jewett's strike policy.

The workers struck on September 8 after summer-long negotiations for a shorter work week and parity with workers at the University of British Columbia failed. In the midst of these negotiations Jewett announced a policy which in part threatens SFU's non-unionized faculty "or other members of instructional staff" with disciplinary action if they fail to cross picket lines.

Resolving not to "find ourselves in an unprotected position with respect to future labor disputes with the university," the teaching assistants embarked on a two month membership drive in a certification bid as Local 6 of AUCE.

If 35 percent of the approximate 400 teaching assistants sign, a vote in favor of certification is needed. If 50 percent sign up no vote is necessary.

U of T may unionize

TORONTO (CUP) - Professors at the University of Toronto may follow the lead of their teaching assistants by forming a collective bargaining unit for salary and benefits negotiations this fall.

The U of T Faculty Association (UTFA) will decide soon whether they want the benefits won by the Graduate Assistants Association (GAA) in their recent contract with the university.

AUTFA committee is preparing a collective bargaining document with "modest and reasonable" demands for a "iron-clad grievance procedure and final choice arbitration according to committee head Jean Smith.

Currently 16 Canadian university faculty associations are unionized.

Student aid stays static

HALIFAX (CUP) - Canada provincial education ministers will make recommendations on student aid changes to the federal government soon, but these won't include a proposal to increase that aid.

At the close of the Council of Ministers of Education of Canada (CMEC) meeting in Halifax, September 21-22, Manitoba education minister Bennett Hanuschak said, "The federal government has not been approached to increase its funding of the student aid program."

The meeting was called to discuss the federal government plans for increased involvement in post-secondary education policy, according to CMEC chair and PEI education minister Bennett Campbell.

The ministers had nothing to say on the effects expected changes in federal/provincial cost sharing would have on post-secondary education, despite a report from informed sources that the Fiscal Arrangements Act (FAA) was to be on the agenda.

Under the FAA, due to expire in April 1977, the federal government matches dollar for dollar what the provinces spend of their respective post-secondary education systems.

Recent FAA negotiations however, reveal the federal government will abolish the system and replace it with a transfer of tax points to the provinces.

The smaller and poorer provinces have said their smaller tax bases will mean decreased financing for education when the new system comes into effect next year.

Unemployment no show in B.C.

VICTORIA (CUP) - High student summer unemployment may be the reason for decreased enrolment at the University of Victoria according to president Howard Petch.

Students just didn't have the money to come, he said. But the university is going to do a survey to pinpoint the reasons why 34 first year applicants decided not to attend.

The enrolment shortfall will have "significant financial implications" on the university, the president said.

"Our net income will be down something in the order of $240,000."

Petch said budgetary projections were based on 1,700 new students attending and that the 340 who didn't "is a significant number."

"Scientific Atheism" clouds Ukrainian landscape

by John Kenney

"There is no concept of religious freedom as a whole in the Soviet Union - there is only religious worship," claimed a visiting speaker at a university lecture Tues. night.

The speaker, Reverend Michael Bourdeaux, is director of the Centre for the Study of Religion and Communism at Keston College, England and a recognized authority on religion in the Soviet Union.

He spoke to about 150 people gathered in Tory TL-II on the topic "Religion and Human Rights: The Case of the Soviet Ukraine."

According to Bourdeaux, the legal status of religious worship in the Soviet Union was established by Stalin with Law Under Religious Associations (1929).

The Ukrainian Orthodox Church was then completely abolished and left with no legal status from a law passed in 1946.

"The Ukraine, despite the extreme restrictions on religion imposed by Soviet laws has, through the centuries, maintained an intense religious life," said Bourdeaux.

Half of the remaining Orthodox churches were closed down under Krushchev and only nine of 38 Ukrainian monasteries survive. "There hasn't been a recognizable part of the Ukrainian Orthodox (Autocephalous) Church since the end of WW II," he said.

Apparently, those persons who try to arrange religious education or publish a religious tract are arrested and jailed for breaking religious laws.

"There are persons in the Ukraine, not less than 82, on whom we have extensive files who are in Soviet prison for breaking religious laws," Bourdeaux said. "These are not just ordinary men - these are 82 leaders."

Reverend Michael Bourdeaux.

None of these activities are ever described as an anti-religious attack, continued Bourdeaux, but as breaking the law.

All citizens are issued a passport with the place or origin written into it with the provision that the citizen is to stay in the area designated.

Bourdeaux testified that some monks were imprisoned for the reason that they couldn't move (all the while restricted by the law) and so were sent to prison or committed as mental patients.

Bourdeaux told the audience that anti-religious museums travel the country to spread "scientific atheism." It is a compulsory course in all colleges in the Ukraine and there is a scientific atheism club with 575,000 members in the Ukraine.

"Trends would seem to be that faith of these Ukrainian Catholics is strengthening. I don't believe the Soviet Union would spend the money if there wasn't something there" commented Bourdeaux.

In response to an audience member question Bourdeaux outlined the links between state and church. "I'm not suggesting that all priests are communist plants," he said, "but at the highest levels where the appointments of a diocese or an international position come up... people in this position are every bit as responsible to the state as they are to the church and perhaps even a bit more so (responsible to the state)." The lecture will be broadcast on QCTV on Oct. 10 at 4 p.m.

Hohol has made up his mind-foreign students should pay more

Dr. Bert Hohol, advanced education minister.

by Kevin Gillese

In an effort to understand the government's decision to institute foreign student differential tuition fees in Alberta, The Gateway conducted a tape-recorded interview last week with Dr. Bert Hohol, provincial minister of advanced education, and asked him for the specifics behind the policy decision he announced over the summer.

GATEWAY — Why were foreign students chosen for higher tuition fee increases than anyone else in Alberta?
HOHOL — Well, I feel that several generations of Canadians and Albertans have invested heavily to build and put together institutes of higher learning here in Alberta. It is through their sweat and suffering our universities have been built. To ask foreign students to pay more than Alberta students is responsible and fair.

GATEWAY — Is it a move to reduce the number of foreign students in Alberta?

HOHOL — No, it does not take away assistance to foreign students. I think if you move away from the emotionalism of the argument, a lot remains to substantiate the government's position. The $500 in tuition fees out of the $4,000 or $5,000 it costs a foreign student is not too great a percentage. Foreign students right now are getting a bargain rate on a premium education. Our increase will be, as I told the House, "significant but not punitive."

(Ed. Note — it will be between 300 and 400 percent)

GATEWAY — How much added revenue will be generated by such increases?

HOHOL — Well, I don't have the exact figures with me right now.

GATEWAY — Can you get them?

HOHOL — Well, they're only estimates anyway and they vary from year to year.

GATEWAY — Can you give me a ballpark figure?

HOHOL — In Ontario it would mean millions of dollars.

GATEWAY — How much would it mean in Alberta?

HOHOL — Well, it would not be as significant as that, here.

GATEWAY — Do you know how much it would be?

HOHOL — Just let me say that every undergraduate student in Alberta is subsidized between $4,000 and $4,500 each year by the government and that's the subsidy we're paying to each foreign student in the province.

GATEWAY — Well, correct me if I'm wrong, but isn't it true that large faculties such as Science and Arts are relatively low subsidy faculties, somewhere around $1,200 to $1,500 per student per year?

HOHOL — Yes, it's something like that.

GATEWAY — And isn't it true that the quota faculties — Medicine, Law and Engineering — are relatively high-cost faculties, with subsidies of $6,000 or more per student per year?

HOHOL — Yes, I believe that's close enough.

GATEWAY — But isn't it also true that each quota faculty has an additional quota on foreign students? And in medicine it runs about 1 or 1½ percent and is something similar with the others?

HOHOL — Yes, that's true.

GATEWAY — Well, how can you say the government is subsidizing each foreign student between $4,000 and $4,500 when most foreign students are not allowed to study in high-cost quota faculties and are instead in low-cost faculties?

HOHOL — This is a specious argument and you are not using logic. The institutions are there and the government provides money to the institutions, not to the different faculties. How the university decides to apportion the money to its own faculties is left to its discretion, we don't do that. Students can choose any faculty they want to when they go to university.

GATEWAY — But didn't you just agree that quota faculties restrict foreign student enrolment severely?

HOHOL — Yes.

GATEWAY — And yet you said students can go into any faculty they want to?

HOHOL — Yes.

GATEWAY — Don't you see a contradiction there?

HOHOL — Let me say that we give $4,000 each year to pay for the education of each undergraduate. It's totally academic to suggest that standards should not be and cannot be lived with at universities. Are you suggesting the government should intrude into affairs of the university and ask that they charge differential fees for the different faculties? If you start to assess low fees for foreign students in Arts than foreign students in Medicine, then you're really in the jungle.

GATEWAY — But don't you agree that significantly different if the provincial government subsidizes most foreign students only $1,500 per year, rather than $4,500 per year?

HOHOL — Yes... But we're not going to tell the universities what to do. On the foreign student fee issue, I've made my mind and people will just have to live with that.

GATEWAY — What will happen if a university's Board of Governors does not recommend differential fees for foreign students? How would you react to that?

HOHOL — Well, as we say in the House, Mr. Gillese, that is a hypothetical situation and I don't think I have to answer that question.

National Student Day

of protest or education?

by Gary Watson

National Student Day (NSD) this Nov. 9 may be an important event for all students: the first time in nine years such an event has been organized on a national scale.

NSD was conceived at the fourth annual convention of the National Union of Students (NUS) last year in an attempt to highlight problems faced by post-secondary students across Canada.

Alberta NSD co-ordinator Noel Jantzie outlined NSD objectives while he was on campus last week.

"We want to get students concerned about what is happening to post-secondary education all across the country," said Jantzie, adding "the question at hand is just who will be able to attend universities in the future."

Four main areas will be featured on Nov. 9 — cutbacks in education accompanied by tuition fee increases; employment prospects before and after graduation; student aid and housing.

Let's take an area by area look at why these issues have become important.

Cutbacks

In the past year most provincial governments have placed spending ceilings on education. The Alberta government has restricted spending this year to an 11 percent increase. According to Jantzie, this 11 percent figure is actually misleading.

"The bulk of funds are going to special projects. The actual increase is only 6 to 7 percent. Inflation costs for post-secondary institutions are approximately 15 percent. Universities and Colleges in Alberta are therefore falling 8 percent short."

As a result, the quality of facilities has deteriorated and the costs to students have increased. Courses and sections are being dropped. Class sizes are getting larger. Libraries are purchasing fewer books and library hours have been shortened. Residence and cafeteria costs have increased. Funds for new research equipment are drying up. And, of course, tuition fees have been hiked.

Fees are from 10 to 25 percent higher this year than last at many Canadian universities and colleges. A recent study estimates that every $100 tuition fee increase results in a drop-out rate of 2½ percent! Critics have called fee increases for international students "a pathetic attempt to blame 5 percent of the entire student population for the problems facing the other 95 percent."

Jantzie described a result of the impending increases at the U of Calgary: "There are fewer than 100 new foreign students at the U of C this year. That represents a drop of more than 50 percent. In addition, foreign students are admitted on a last priority basis."

Universities and Colleges are moving in the direction suggested by the federal Peitchinis Report of 1972. It recommended shifting the entire burden of post-secondary education onto the students. At today's prices, including living expenses, it would cost as much as $7000 to attend university for one year. That's $28,000 for a four year degree. At those prices, it is not difficult to speculate who can afford to attend university in the future.

Employment

Federal government estimates put student unemployment this past summer at 15 percent. This is 3 to 4 per cent higher than 1975. The elimination of Local Initiative Program and Opportunity for Youth grants have had a substantial effect on student employment. As well, with the imposition of anti-inflation controls, student earnings have not kept pace with the rate of inflation. Many students are entering this university year with smaller savings than in the past.

Employment after graduation is also a major problem. According to Jantzie, the unemployment rate for recent graduates is at least twice the national average. National unemployment figures do not repr-sent much underemployment because part-time workers are excluded. "Masters degree holders are being forced to take jobs which don't nearly relate to their fields of study. The B.A. degree is not worth a great deal anymore."

Student Aid

Student aid programmes are at best inadequate. Nearly everyone on student aid has their own horror story. Restrictions are placed on those eligible for financial assistance. For example, an individual student's parents are expected to contribute a proportion of their child's total annual expenses. Students who have lived independent of their families for as much as a year are still required to divulge their family's yearly income.

Existing aid programs are also being changed. In Ontario, which has a loan/grant program, the first $1000 is now considered to be a loan. This is an increase of 25 percent over 1975/76. Alberta does not offer any grants in its student aid program. Every dollar received by an Alberta student through student aid must be repaid with interest after graduation. Remember the Peitchinis Report? Imagine attending graduation ceremonies with a $28000 debt hanging over your head!

Housing

Housing for students in Alberta is a disaster. Jantzie cited the situation at the U of C. "Students are dropping out because they can't find places to live." The vacancy rate around the U of A is less than one tenth of one percent. Instances of discrimination against non-white students are commonplace. Furthermore, many students are forced to sacrifice personal privacy in choosing accommodation. It would be interesting to find out how many U of A students sleep in someone's living room. When the Alberta rent control legislation terminates in June 1977 students may very well be forced out of rental units because of prohibitive prices.

Students are confronting these problems throughout Canada and in Alberta, where almost two billion dollars sits in the Heritage Trust Fund. NSD has received an enthusiastic response in Alberta, Jantzie said. Committees are actively building Nov. 9 in many universities and colleges. Work is well under way at Grant MacEwan Community College, Red Deer College, Mount Royal College, SAIT, the U of Lethbridge, and the U of Calgary. The U of A is somewhat behind other campuses but support is building. The Students' Union has in principle unanimously endorsed NSD. Local organizers are now hoping for active support from U of A students. Jantzie summed up his remarks optimistically. "After all, the situation here is just as critical as elsewhere. And as the largest campus in the province NSD at the U of A has great potential."

Rent hike for residences

TORONTO (CUP) - The Ontario government's solution to a bureaucratic paper problem has deprived residence students across the province of the right to appeal rent increases to the provincial rent review board.

From July, 1975 until May, 1976, all universities in Ontario were classified as landlords who were expected to justify every rent increase exceeding eight percent.

"The way it was set up, we would have had to file a separate form for every student," University of Toronto administrative director E. McDermid said. He said they would have needed two or three more "girls" in just to handle the paperwork.

According to McDermid, one university had gone through 70,000 pieces of paper to plead its case. Not wishing to deplete Canada's forests, universities across Ontario notified the government that the rent review, as it existed, simply could not be applied to university residences.

At this point, the government had two options, said David Warner, provincial New Democratic party education critic.

Universities could remain under the rent review by using a form of "class action," allowing the universities to fill only one form for each residence or type of student. Warner said this would have simplified the procedure for the universities and students would still feel protected.

Instead, the government chose the second option. Sid Handleman, Ontario's minister of consumer and commercial relations, announced that university students did not require the protection which the rental act provided, and proposed that universities be exempted from the eight percent ceiling.

The only right which students retain is that recognized student councils or associations must be "consulted" before any residence budgets are passed.

Report documents university enrolment

OTTAWA (CUP) - University enrolment is up and will continue to rise, according to a report from Statistics Canada.

But over-all enrolment in the education system declined, mainly due to the falling birth rate during the 1962-73 period, the Stats Can report says.

During this period education spending rose to $9.6 billion from $2.3 billion, almost twice the rate of growth in the Gross National Product (GNP), the report says.

Meanwhile, the federal share of education expenditures dropped to 10.2 percent from 14.9 percent while provincial spending rose 60.7 percent from 43.6 percent, according to Stats Can.

Federal proposals for future cost-sharing with the provinces when the Fiscal Arrangements Act expires next year include tying the federal contribution to the rise in the GNP and transferring tax powers to the provinces replacing the current system whereby the federal government funds account for 50 percent of provincial expenditures.

The report also notes that while workers in the Atlantic provinces absorbed a greater percent of education expenditures than their counterparts in Ontario and the West, less was spent on students in that region.

BURSARIES

The University Women's Club is offering bursaries to $250 to $300 to aid mature students who require financial assistance to continue their education. Bursaries are given on the basis of need.

A keen sense of the obvious is an asset in university, of course, but so is a carefully cultivated sense of the ridiculous, because such a sense lends much added zest and gusto to one's university years.

One watches the venerable emeritus recite from memory, almost, a lecture that was new when the century was new; one observes that he turns the brown and mouldering leaves of his class notes, slowly, and with utmost care, lest one of his pages break; one quakes with inward merriment.

Or, on the other hand, one watches the terrified teaching assistant, whose voice is changing, as he clings white-knuckled to his lectern and delivers — without once looking up — a lecture which he had meant to be a series of lectures; because terror is infectious, however, his class is loathe to stem the tide of his words with question or comment, even though they understand little of what he is saying, the upshot being that the T.A. uses up his entire stock of Summer-gathered wisdom in about forty-seven minutes.

But he need not worry. Soon, unless he succumbs to various nervous disorders, he will learn teaching's chief rule: Speak slowly. By speaking slowly, by repeating himself, by various professional throat-clearings and calculated ditherings, he will easily spread his lectures over the entire year.

For example, there is Dr. X. Now, Dr. X has just spent all of Sunday evening and a large portion of Monday morning hanging ten, as it were, riding the beery surf of his own eloquence and wiping out only occasionally. But there is a giant difference between four a.m. and ten a.m. It is now ten a.m. and, crapulent almost beyond belief, hung-over to the point of cataonia, Dr. X must meet his class. Does he cancel? Hardly. Although he does not feel good, although, as Kingsley Amis has put it, Dr. X's mouth feels like some small creature of the night has used it for first a urinal and then a mausoleum, Dr. X does not cancel out. He does not cancel out, and the thought of doing so does not cross his mind. He is tough.

He is also wily, but not very. Instead of cancelling out he simply falls back on that oldest of stratagems, the pop quiz. This is of course just fine with his class, since they know the chances of these little quizzes' ever being marked, and so feel free to set down fifty minutes' worth of lunacy, scribbling away earnestly like crazed monks, darting furtive and tricky glances up at Dr. X as he sits massaging his temples. The humor reaches a high point when some of the more gifted students beg for more time, just a little more time, just a little more.

There is no need for either Dr. X or his students to worry; he or she can draw his pay, his or her students can collect their grades and eventually their degrees, without either of them coming within hailing distance of a concept or a fact. Has Dr. X "initiated class discussion?" Very well, then, his class should and probably will counter with the simple expedient of asking "for clarification." Has Dr. X gone even further and segregated them of excruciatingly into little discussion grouplets? Well, there is nothing to stop these embarrassed students from speaking softly and groping their swift way back to sex and cars, solid conversational ground.

Several times a year Dr. X will be goaded into goading his T.A.(s) to invent, administer, and mark some big tests; the testees quite naturally temper the force of such a drastic move by using ingenious crib sheets or magnifying spectacles, or by getting a more knowledgeable friend to take the test for them — drastic measures call for drastic countermeasures.

(In large classes, this friendly custom of reciprocal test-taking is easy. Indeed, a well-organized fraternity can by this means graduate a nonexistent person — occasioning much hilarity at convocation. There is a Chimpanzee at Brown with a B.Sc.; Berkeley boasts a very large bullfrog laden with academic honors, among them the Master of Arts; U.B.C. once graduated, magna cum laude, a Doctor of Philosophy who failed fully to grasp the magnitude of his or her triumph because he or she also had the ill-fortune (if it was ill-fortune) to be a garden slug.)

Or these young people, old in chicane and with guile enough to rule an empire, being temporarily out of clever ploys, simply murder their grandmothers for the twelfth time that semester and use the extension occasioned by this tragedy to come up with some ruse having at least a colorable fiction of validity, or to simply sit tight and hope the whole unpleasant business will resolve itself. The whole unpleasant business usually does resolve itself. If worst comes to worst they can corner Dr. X in his or her office and, in the course of an all-out bid for mercy, make it abundantly clear that they are "troubled." Or, "deeply troubled." Never fails.

The point to this business is that, for the observer, with a keen or even moderately keen sense of the ridiculous, this more or less dismal charade is shot through with flashes of superb comedy. Where in all literature can we view such a rich and lasting gleam of lunacy as is daily lambent in the ordinary classroom in the ordinary university, wherein both student and teacher congratulate themselves at having once again escaped (having perhaps gingerly prodded their fearful subject matter with a wary forefinger) alive, unscathed, untouched?

NAIROBI (ENS-CUP) - Foreign technicians working at a giant power station on the River Nile in Uganda have been quitting their jobs because President Idi Amin's troops keep dumping their murder victims into the river.

According to diplomats in Nairobi, Kenya, the bodies have caused major mechanical problems at the Own Falls Power Station, resulting in serious electricity shortages both in Uganda and Kenya. About 30 technicians, most of them Italians, have quit their jobs in recent weeks, disgusted over the number of bodies found floating in the river and the technical problems the bodies present.

The Nile and its source at Lake Victoria have been the favorite dumping grounds for the bodies of Amin's political enemies since Idi first came to power in 1971.

Will writer weather the winter?

The following article deals with an informal interview that Gateway had with poet Gary Geddes, the U of A's Writer-in-Residence for the coming year. The article deals with Mr. Geddes' impressions of the position he has just taken, in addition to his appraisal of the present Canadian literary scene, and the general direction it's moving in. The article is accompanied by a review of his latest work: War & other measures.

by Brian Bergman

For the second consecutive year the U of A English department has engaged a young Canadian writer to be its 'writer-in-residence'. Last year Ontario-born novelist Matt Cohen filled the position. This year Gary Geddes, a West coast poet, editor and anthologist, has accepted the one-year "assignment." I had a chance recently to chat informally with Mr. Geddes and learn a little about his background, his present interests, and his ambitions for the immediate future.

Geddes comes to Edmonton from Victoria where he has lived for the last few years as a freelance writer. Geddes was born and raised in Vancouver and studied at UBC and Reading University in England before completing his doctorate at the University of Toronto. He has taught at various colleges and universities across Canada.

Geddes is a well-known anthologist, editor of 20th Century Poetry and Poetics, 5 Canadian poets and Skookum Wawa: Writings of the Canadian Northwest. But he is also a poet of some repute, author of Rivers Inlet, Snakeroot, and his most recent War and Other Measures. Besides all this, the versatile Geddes reviewed regularly for the Globe and Mail.

Asked if his more academic endeavors interfere with his poetry, Geddes replies matter-of-factly that "you have to survive in this country. 'Free-lance writer' is a nice term; it implies a real sense of freedom to create and do what you want. But if you don't have an income base, then it becomes pretty scary, and you find that insecurity can really hamper your more creative ambitions."

As a critic of Canadian writing Geddes has some definite views on the state of Canadian literature and the need for exposing this literature to a greater number of Canadians. In this latter vein he claims that "Our departments of education need shaking up. We have tried guiding and encouraging them; perhaps the time has come to turn the political screws."

Recognizing that Canadian literature must be able to compete in the international market, Geddes insists, however, that until recently it was not even allowed to compete nationally: "When I was growing up we weren't exposed to Canadian authors at all. At many schools today it's the same thing. Even at the university level they often only pay lip service to the need for Canadian lit courses."

Geddes himself has been working hard at popularizing the literature of this country. Last year he travelled across Canada doing readings of his own work and conducting seminars with teachers and students on Canadian and regional studies.

Recently, the life and work of an obscure West coast writer, Howard O'Hagen, sparked his interest and an upcoming article by Geddes in Saturday Night, should help increase, if somewhat belatedly, O'Hagen's recognition factor amongst Canadians as a whole. "Now here's an example of a brilliant writer of the last generation who was completely ignored by his contemporaries," Geddes said to me with some emotion. "He had to popularize all his stories into articles suitable for the magazines of his day. With each of those articles he lost a potential novel."

Geddes, admitting that there is something quasi-mystical about the position of writer-in-residence, hopes nevertheless to be able to put it to positive and productive use. He is grateful for the chance to dedicate himself to his craft and is hoping that during his stay he'll be able to re-acquaint himself with the Alberta community and its particular culture.

Geddes is happy enough to be stationed in Edmonton. "Edmonton," he says, "is like Paris after a city like Victoria. There everything is zippered up at 10 p.m. And I'm looking forward to the winter here too. Of course, I'm probably the only one who is."

Blast changes history

by Beno John

Geddes, Gary. ...War & Other Measures House of Anansi Press Ltd. 75 pp.

On May 18, 1976, the men's washroom in the Canadian House of Commons was the scene of an explosion - the explosion of Paul Joseph Chartier when the six sticks of dynamite that he was carrying went off. Gary Geddes has rescued this incident from its relative obscurity, and fashioned a series of poems ...War & other measures around the act.

With a sharp, uncluttered style, Geddes delineates the psychological milieu prefacing this strange act. He delves into the troubled psychology of a nation which Chartier mirrors. Chartier embodies the crisis of identity Canada has always suffered in its search for a form - an expression, somewhat summarized by the following lines: Beauty ... is a matter of form, a/composed intricacy of form/ which leads the eye/ and mind a kind of chase. It is this search for an expression that consumes Chartier in Geddes' fictionalized account.

One gets the impression that Geddes believes that the assertion of the real Canadian cultural identity is a recent phenomena. This identity lies in the various cultures that have been transplanted to Canadian soil, as well as the strong tradition of regionalism. The result of course is a culture unique for its diversity. But it is a diversity that has to be recognized, which ...immigrants... wrapped in old nationalities have to discover among their own rocks and billboards.

Chartier of course has made this discovery, and it is this truth he wishes to impart to the politicians who have sacrificed diversity, for an arbitrary sort of nationalism.

Chartier's apparent suicide is a revolt against this self denial. For him, ...The masquerade of personality is over. The masquerade of personality had been the political game played by the rulers of this country - playing to the tune of other, external interests, ie. American business interests. Or as Chartier thinks of himself - My face peers from window/ ...Amazed there is still beauty/ in the world, but worried the politicians will still find out.

Chartier's ultimate self sacrifice is revealed as the expression of truth so long submerged. And Out of this blood another rose/will burst, its fragrance/ confound the universe./ History is being made, I am the materials.

Geddes' imagery is of an intense nature, leaping out of the arrangement of words to saturate you. They affect you on different levels in a jarring instant. For example: Time's a fiction, its units/ collect unemployment insurance. or Truth is a snowflake on the naked eye./ I am a blindman/ trying to discern the shape and texture/ of its dissolving.

War & other measures is a powerful, immediate work. It is engrossing and rich in detail plus striking in its clarity. It is also a total experience.

Hot potato at Hovel

by Francis X

You know the Hovel?...Thru that long blue and cool hallway, with the happy babies painted on it, is just the best coffee house in Edmonton. Since its beginning, it has regularly hosted North America's finest musicians! It's still presenting Edmonton's best on a regular basis, every Tuesday night in conjunction with the Edmonton Jazz Society.

For those of you who didn't know it, Edmonton is the nesting home of some very fine professional musicians. Last Tuesday over ten musicians, from the CBC studios, from Tommy Banks' Orchestra now in Vancouver and from the school hallways of Grant McEwan Community College, played together before an alert crowd of over one hundred people. Earl Seymour, billed as the lead of the entourage, displayed his versatility by soloing on tenor-sax, baritone-sax, and bass clarinet.

As usual the jazz concert opens with a warm up. Each musician is featured for a 5 to 10 minute solo and loosens up, familiarizing himself with the climate of the night, and the tensions and relaxations of the group and audience. Then, the second number concentration on rhythm allows the musicians shorter second solos in rapid succession and is like playing hot potato, each player tossing the lead quickly to another and working back into rhythm.

Earl Seymour soloing on sax at the Hovel.

The third and fourth numbers, finishing the first set and traditionally slowed down, were Beautiful People and Love Supreme by John Coltrane and featured Earl on a very soulful baritone sax.

The second set was a tasteful grouping of sophisticated bossa nova sounds with a syncopated rhythm and was flavored by the lightness of jazz of the 70's.

The very transporting quality that everyone experienced was the purity of a changing music. The slowdown came with a Thad Jones tune - Child Reborn and finished with a big electric funk, Beauty and the Beast by Wayne Shorter. Later a jam till early in the morning for all who stayed. The Hovel, Tuesday nights, remains an alternative to the usual.

Bears and Dinos grappled for ball Wed. night in Calgary
The Golden Bears tussled with U of C and lost, keeping their poor season record to only one win in four games. But they have a chance at revenge Sat. afternoon when the Dinos will be in town for a re-match, 2 p.m. in Varsity Stadium.

Bears tried to tackle the Dinos, but couldn't hold them Wed.
Bears started Wed. night's game in Calgary by scoring two field goals on the U of C Dinos but couldn't contain their offence and Dinos wound up the night taking the game 24-6.

Dinos halt Bears

by Darrell Semenuk

The U of A Golden Bears saw their slim playoff hopes take a nosedive Wed. night, dropping a game with the U of C Dinos by a 24-6 score.

The Bears, now one in three for the season, face the Dinos (3-1) Sat. afternoon at Varsity Stadium in a re-match between the two clubs.

Bears led the Dinos 6-0 at one point in Wednesday's game, thanks to two 32-yard field goals by Joe Poplawski.

But Calgary marched downfield on the strength of quarterbacks Don Siler and Darrell Moir, who Dinosaur coach Mike Lashuk alternated on every other play.

Moir took the ball in from the one-yard line and Jim Hartley converted to suddenly put the Dinos in the lead 7-6 after Alberta had dominated most of the first half.

With nine seconds remaining on the clock, and the ball on the Alberta 33, quarterback Brian Larsen decided to put the ball in the air; the result was an interception by Doyle Matheson and it set up a 24-yard field goal by Hartley to give the Dinos a 16-6 halftime lead.

Costly fumbles in the second half thwarted any chance of an Alberta comeback.

A fumble by Terry O'Connell on a punt return set up Calgary for the decisive score - an eight-yard run by Moir for his second touchdown of the night. Hartley again converted.

The final Calgary touchdown came on a two-yard pass from Moir to Larry Leather to put Bears back in the loser spot once again.

Bears face Dinos Sat. afternoon

The University of Alberta Golden Bears football team will face the U of Calgary Dinos, at home, Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p.m.

Golden Bears are faced with a situation that they must win all their remaining games, just to have a chance to make one of the two playoff spots. All students with proper ID cards are admitted free to all Golden Bear and Panda regular season games. Proper ID cards are those that certify that the student has paid his UAB fees. Dinos were conference champs last year with a 6-2 mark. They defeated Acadia University, 38-13, for the right to compete in the College Bowl. The Dinos, however, were upended by the University of Ottawa Gee Gees, 14-9.

Bears should have two of their regulars back in the lineup for Saturday's game. Defensive tackle Lorne DeGroot and linebacker Dennis Blond will likely see action on Saturday.

Rugby Bears work-out

by Bohdan Hrynshyn

Under the tutelage of coach Tony Bauer, nightly workouts of the Golden Bears' Rugby team have been held for the past two weeks at Lister Field.

Bauer hopes his team will be a major contender at the coming Western Canada Inter-Collegiate Rugby Tournament to be held in Edmonton at the end of October.

To the layman, rugby is defined as a game of brute strength versus brawn. But to rugby players regard it as a spirited sport where two teams of fifteen grown men try to score many points as possible by carrying, passing and kicking the football. Rugby is a 15-man sport - team work is essential for success.

And contrary to popular belief, a large size is not mandatory to play the game. Physical fitness, ability and spirit (on and off the field) are the only requirements. (Because of the rugged nature of the sport, rugby players are somewhat renowned for their exuberant social, beer-served functions.)

Practices for the team are held Tues. and Thurs. at 6:30 p.m. In addition, scrimmage games with local city teams are scheduled to prepare the team for the October tournament. There are still positions open for anyone still interested in trying out for the team.
