WOLFVILLE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION

Successful School Function in Which Teachers and Pupils Participate

The exercises in connection with the High School graduation, held at the Orpheum Theatre last Friday afternoon, were of an exceedingly interesting character. Weather conditions were unfavorable but the large number of parents and friends present indicated the interest which is maintained in this important institution of community life.

At the appointed hour to the music of the Bugle Boy March rendered by the school orchestra under the efficient direction of Miss Newcombe, the pupils marched in and took their places, the members of the graduating class occupying the front seat.

Principal Silver was in the chair and with him on the platform were Miss Langley, of the Seminary staff, who as Mr. Silver explained is conducting a large class in violin at the school, Miss Rosamond Archibald, Miss Grace Porter, Miss Ella Warren, Miss G. MacDonald, Dr. J. H. MacDonald, Dr. Rhodenizer and Mrs. C. A. Patriquin.

The program opened with the class history, cleverly written by Dorothy Dakin and read by Virginia MacLean, which gave an interesting account of the school life of the class of '25. A well executed violin solo by Helen Grant was followed by the reading of Act I, Scene 1, of "Julius Caesar" by Frances Sanford, Jean Shaw, William Gue and Gordon Munro, pupils of Grade XI.

An interesting address was given by Principal Silver, in which he reviewed the school activities and gave the audience a good idea of conditions. H. MacDonald, who was called upon to address the graduates, congratulated the High School upon the completion of another successful year's work. It was most unusual to see so large a proportion of High School graduates continuing their education.

No less than nineteen of the twenty-one pupils, who successfully finished the Provincial Government examinations and secured eleventh grade certificates, were now in college—sixteen at Acadia, two at Dalhousie and one at the Provincial Normal College.

The future success of the graduates will depend upon their conception of education, the purpose of which, he pointed out, was the development of personality. The greatest gift one possesses is himself. His own personality is the best contribution any man can make to his country and to mankind.

One of the criticisms made against modern secondary and higher schools of learning is that they do not develop personality. The students are put into a hopper and in the process of the education, they are made to conform to a standard, but they may not be a fair criticism, but it is certain that one should fashion himself after another, he becomes a mere imitation and has no worthy contribution to make to his fellow men.

Another danger of modern education is that we permit our scientific knowledge to outstrip our moral development. The fact is, we have become possessed of great forces which we are not fit to use. It requires self-control, good will and strong moral fibre to use aught the forces which modern discoveries have brought to us. Educational efficiency alone may become as dangerous to us as TNT and quite as immoral.

The speaker concluded by expressing the hope that in the field of education the Wolfville High School graduates of the Class of 1925 would go far, but urged upon its members to make sure that their moral education keep pace with their intellectual development.

RT. HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN

Who will be the leader of the largest group in the new parliament.

INTERCOLLEGIATE RUGBY

Acadia Put One Over on the Tigers and Win by 9-0

The Acadia-Dalhousie football game, always an important event in the athletic life of the University, was played on Monday and resulted to the entire satisfaction of the local college men. Unfortunately THE ACADIAN was not able to be represented at the game and in the absence of our own report present the following from the Halifax Chronicle, which we believe to be on the whole fairly accurate:

The Acadia University Rugby team sprang a surprise on Dalhousie yesterday and defeated them by the score of 9 to 0 on the Studley campus.

The Acadia fifteen were full of vim, tackled hard, and made the most of their opportunities, whilst Dalhousie played listlessly and made countless bad passes. Although Dalhousie had the better of the territory all through, they were not able to cross their opponents' line.

The field was very slippery and a strong wind blew during the game. Dalhousie had the western end of the field during the first half, with the ball almost continuously in the Red and Blue territory. Many attempts were made to score, and the Tigers carried the ball to the line quite often, but did not have the required punch to penetrate the Dalhousie line.

Quarter line well, and proved themselves good on defensive work. Dalhousie was in position to drop kick several times, but it was never attempted and the period ended with no score.

In the second half Acadia had the wind with them and punted far into Dalhousie territory. After a scrimmage near the Tigers' line McLatchy secured the piskin and broke through the opposing players for a try, which Davidson easily converted.

The Gold and Black warriors endeavored to gain the other end of the field, but it was useless to punt as the high wind would carry the ball in the wrong direction. After several runs by both sides, a scrimmage took place near the 40 yard line, and when Davidson received a pass out he made a neat drop kick which passed cleanly between the bars for four more points.

This startled Dalhousie and they commenced to wake up. By dint of hard work they got the ball up the field in short stages and reached a scoring position, where Acadia were forced to touch for safety twice. The situation was relieved by the 25 yard drop out and play went to centre field. The local's scrum now had complete control of the ball and heeled out nine times out of ten, but it availed little as the Acadia men were fast workers and nailed them before they could get away, or else Dalhousie missed the pass.

The whistle blew for the end of the contest, with the visitors victorious by nine points. Murphy was the best of the Tigers, followed by Moore, Harrington, Baird and Tupper.

Noble, in the backfield, played a splendid game for Acadia. Davidson, McLatchy, Elderkin and Hamilton played well. Norman Ralston refereed.

The line-up: Dalhousie—Fullback—Rockingham; Halves—Langstroth, A. Smith, Wickwire; Three-quarters—Moore, McInnes, Murphy, D. Smith; Forwards—Baird, McLean, Livingstone, Cox, Tupper, Harrington, Sutherland. Acadia—Fullback—Noble; Halves—H. Elderkin, Davidson, McLatchy; Three-quarters—Hamilton, Wilson, Barthe, B. Elderkin; Forwards—Creelman, Miller, A. Noble, Eatey, Shaffner, Kierstead, Lane; Subs.—White, Morse, Crossman.

FEDERAL CONTEST ENDED

Returns Indicate Continued Unstability in Canadian Government Affairs—King Government Defeated with Many Outstanding Casualties.

THE ACADIAN defers publication until today (Friday) in order to give its readers the result so far as is obtainable of the Federal contest.

While as yet the outcome is considered in doubt enough is known to indicate that the Conservatives will have the largest group in the new parliament, and that the Progressives are no longer a force to be seriously considered in Canadian politics.

As we go to press the figures given out by the Canadian Press at 3:30 o'clock this morning are: Conservatives, 118; Liberals, including two Independent Liberals, 89; Progressives, 10; Independents, Mr. Bourassa, 1; Labor, 2; in doubt, 25.

That the King government is defeated is beyond question. Hon. Mr. King, himself, had an adverse majority of 500 and eight cabinet ministers, including Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Hon. G. W. Gordon, Hon. W. E. Foster, Hon. James Murdoch, Hon. T. A. Lowe, Hon. Vincent Massey, Hon. Herbert Marler, Hon. John E. Sinclair, are reported among the defeated.

The Maritimes have spoken with no uncertain sound. Nova Scotia elects 11 Conservatives and 3 Liberals; New Brunswick, 10 Conservatives and 1 Liberal; Prince Edward Island, 2 Conservatives and 2 Liberals. Liberals elected in Nova Scotia are: Hon. E. M. MacDonald in Antigonish-Guysboro; William Duff, in Lunenburg-Quebec; and Paul Hatfield in Yarmouth-Sheburne.

In Kings-Hants, because of unusual conditions owing to the union of the two counties, the outcome of the contest was difficult to estimate from the first. Both parties professed to be confident up to the end and if the counting of the ballot must have been a source of surprise to many. Both counties gave a substantial majority to Foster, who wins by a margin of over a thousand. In Kings the majority was 551 and in Hants 458. These figures are, of course, subject to change, but are approximately correct. The returns for the different polling places, which are given below, indicates that Mr. Foster received a great vote in some of the pools:

Election day in Wolfville saw quiet yet effective work on both sides. Weather conditions might have been worse but were not ideal by any means. The day was cold and windy and the vote was not so large as was expected. Good feeling prevailed on every hand. The poll closed at 6 o'clock but it was well over before the result of the voting was announced. The office of this paper was besieged during the early evening and until a late hour, and our bulletin service was apparently much appreciated. Main street presented a lively appearance, being crowded with interested groups of voters. Information was also given out at the Orpheum Theatre which was well filled.

At about 11 o'clock the arrival of the successful candidate was announced by cheering. He was enthusiastically received and hurried to the theatre, and when admission there was found impossible addressed the gathering from the bandstand. Later at the Orpheum another address was given in which Mr. Foster thanked his friends for their assistance in winning the election and represented the constituency as a whole. He reiterated his affection for Acadia University, where he was a former student, and promised that so far as in his power he would see to it that the interests of his alma mater should be protected.

ACADIA NOTES

The Acadia Dramatic Society met on Tuesday evening in the Club Room of the College Women's residence. The program for the evening was a one-act play written by C. R. Gould, of Aylesford, a Senior at the University; directed by Miss Olive Archibald, of Warren, Pa., the parts taken by Miss Mary Bishop, Miss Ardis Whitman, Lloyd Jenkins and W. K. Elliott. The play, "The Red Shawl", written in the course of the one-act play which is now being published in the April number of the Acadia Athenaeum this spring, but its presentation by the members of the Dramatic Society was its first appearance on the stage.

On Monday evening in Room 4 of the new College building, the Junior class held a very enjoyable class party. The refreshments brought to its close a "real good time".

The S. C. A. of Acadia held its first meeting of the year on Wednesday evening in the College Hall. The meeting took the form of a song service over which Harry Mollins presided. Following the singing Elbert Paul gave a talk on the purpose of the organization. The first-year students had a get-together on last Wednesday evening for the purpose of learning the College yell and songs. The meeting was behind closed doors but the "Freshies" report progress.

The regular weekly meeting of the Student's Union was held Thursday afternoon. The chief matter brought before the meeting was that of the budget for the ensuing year, which had been laid on the table from the last meeting. After some discussion the budget as brought in by the treasurer, Mr. Israel, was adopted.

Tuesday was Nomination Day for the election to fill the vacancy in the Council caused by the resignation of Mr. J. A. Macpherson. There was only one nomination, that of Mr. Royal W. DeWolfe, who is thus elected by acclamation. An effort was made last February to secure the nomination of Mr. DeWolfe, who at that time declined the honor.

MR. A. DEWITT FOSTER

Who won a smashing victory and will be the first representative of the constituency of Kings-Hants, having defeated Mr. E. W. Robinson, ex-M.P., by a majority of over a thousand votes.

NATIONAL APPLE WEEK

An Institution Which Ought to Interest All our Readers

While apparently not engaging the attention of the fruit-growers of this Valley to any great degree, the announcement that the week from Oct. 31st to Nov. 5th has been set apart as National Apple Week in Canada ought to be a matter of public interest. In some parts of the Dominion, particularly in British Columbia, the plan to stimulate the home consumption of Canadian fruit has been for weeks a centre for practical consideration. The Canadian Horticultural Council, under whose auspices the campaign is being waged, has adopted as its slogan "Eat More Fruit". The aim is to induce people to cultivate the habit of eating Canadian grown fruits and vegetables—to persuade them individually to eat more—and to convince housewives of the health value of these products of our orchards and farms.

It can safely be said that practically every man, woman and child in Canada thoroughly enjoys and needs fruit, but they simply have not got the fruit-eating habit. The main policy of the campaign, then, is to take full advantage of this national fondness for fruit, and to persuade them to eat more fruit, and vegetables, to induce everybody to get the habit of eating more.

For the purpose of educating the public, the most effective means known to expert advertisers—newspapers and periodicals—will be used. Throughout the campaign also every opportunity of using other media, such as hotels, clubs, dining cars, organizations, etc., will be seized to increase the selling power of the advertisements and to intensify the cumulative effects of the campaign.

The observance of the National Apple Week in the New England States and in Canada, was started two years ago, the idea being to emphasize in the public mind the superior quality of apples grown in each respective territory, and stimulating the growers to a more general adoption of scientific methods of growing, grading and packing. It is believed that a general adoption of these proper methods will enable orchardists in our vicinity to demand uniform price, and that the merchants will benefit directly by the improved purchasing power which good prices for apples gives throughout the fall months. We all know that there is room for improvement in packing Nova Scotia apples, while it is generally admitted that the methods adopted by our fruit growers as to cultivation, spraying, pruning, etc., leaves little room for improvement.

New England historians claim that apples were grown in that region as early as 1650. Nova Scotia has the record of having apples of delicious kinds in her orchards in 1635. Having been first in introducing apples in this continent, can we not now be in the lead in producing the best fruit on the continent? Our apples have an international name for good flavor, and apparently the most pressing need is that their merits be made better known.

With the increasing production in this Valley it is evident that too much attention cannot be given to the development of the home markets, which may be regarded as including the larger centres in the Maritime Provinces and the province of Quebec, which has always been and still is a large consumer of our fruit.

It is surprising that the various fruit organizations heretofore have not given evidence of a greater interest in the National Apple Week than is yet apparent.

The work along Public Health lines was briefly outlined by the president, and while these activities were not as extensive as might be hoped for, yet the Institutes were ready to carry on work further whenever the opportunity offered.

Miss Annie Stuart spoke on the duties and responsibilities as citizens, as well as members of the Institute.

The financial report showed a good balance in the treasury.

He urged the members of the Women's Institutes to assist them by buying the brooms which are manufactured at the school, and the Institutes are expected to do their share to help this school which does so much for the welfare of many in the Province.

Eight Institutes were represented at this meeting, which was considered one of the most successful yet held.

A tourist sends in a news item for Town Topics under this title. The news item follows:

"While picnicking Saturday, August 29th, our boat was looted and knives and forks thrown overboard. The looters—boys—had been seen sitting on a bank eating one bag of Moirs Chocolates while numerous other good things, while tossed about, had been left unattended."

"I wish to complain," said the bride haughtily, "of the tough flour you sold me."

"Tough flour, Madame?"

"Yes, tough flour! I made a pie with it and my husband couldn't cut it."

Editorial

Our pulpits are our work clothes. Each of us live some kind of a sermon every day.

HONESTY—A GOOD POLICY

WHETHER "Honesty is the best policy" is a question that may ever remain a debatable one. So much depends upon the view one takes of life. Moralists affirm that to degrade it into a question of policy is to take all the merit out of honesty. If the object is simply to get on in life, observation shows that plenty of men get position and wealth and political preferment by not running what is called honesty into the ground. Almost everyone admits that a reputation for honesty is useful, and everybody knows that it is often acquired by a long-headed shrewdness in speech and action.

Legal honesty is tolerably common, for it is not true that the majority of people are kept out of jail owing to the imperfections of courts and the difficulty of conviction. There is great respect for law, and in private life an innate or cultivated sense of justice and fair dealing. We all know honest men, and we speak of them as honest with emphasis, showing that we regard it as a kind of distinction to be simply honest. A man can easily be conspicuous by being pretty honest. We do not necessarily choose such men for office—it has indeed become a sort of mocking proverb that such a man is too honest to go through the necessary steps to commend himself to the suffrages of the majority—but we like to have them in a community for they impart a sort of stability to our shifting affairs. If what a man wants in this world is peace of mind, and if he enjoys having the absolute confidence of those who know him intimately—if, as the slang is, that is his lay in life—why, entire honesty is good policy.

The world has only a qualified admiration for a man who cheats in the sale of a horse, or makes money by selling a bad article branded as good, and we feel a righteous disgust for a fellow who filches a ham out of the smoke-house. There is a common consensus of opinion that honesty should be the policy of those fellows, but do we have the same feeling towards a man who corners wheat on a large scale and makes such a rise in prices that the poor man, who may be pinched for something to eat, thinks himself justified in taking the ham? We have a contempt for the man who sells his vote. If, however, a man buys a great many such votes, or pays for the running of machinery that buys them, and gets himself elected to the Legislature, what distinction is there between him and the man who filches a ham?

"Honesty is the best policy" is maintained by the majority to be a sound maxim, and in line with the teachings of the New Testament, Socrates and Franklin. The difficulty is in getting that view adopted and practised by the rest of the world who hold a different opinion. One who is honest in the ordinary sense acts, or is always disposed to act, with careful regard for the rights of others, especially in matters of business or property. One who is honest in the highest and fullest sense is scrupulously careful to adhere to all known truth and right, even in thought. Finally, summed up, Honesty and Honor are Love's fountainhead—the combined virtues that make the world go round. Honor is the dominating force, which brings to mind that couplet of Lovelace:

"I could not love thee, dear, so much,
Loved I not honor more."

THE HOME PAPER

THE ACADIAN receives frequent commendation from readers for the excellent service it is giving in the matter of district news. It has cost us much effort and no little expense to develop this department, and we are pleased that the results have been such as to win public approval. Our endeavor is to make THE ACADIAN primarily the people's paper, and for the co-operation and assistance which our staff of correspondents has unstintingly given us in the work we desire to tender our best thanks. If the activities of your section are not being reported for our columns we should be pleased to have the work undertaken. We have no room for neighborhood gossip but want all the news while it is news, and are willing to pay for it. Make it snappy and be sure of your facts. That THE ACADIAN is rapidly growing in popularity as a newspaper is amply proven by the new names that are being constantly added to our subscription list, as well as by the flattering references of appreciation which frequently come through the mail. We want to make THE ACADIAN still more interesting and to this end invite contributions on matters of public moment. The long winter evenings are at hand, and may be profitably devoted to a discussion of community interests. The columns of this paper are freely placed at your disposal for such purpose. Make THE ACADIAN your forum.

HALLOWE'EN

TIME-HONORED Hallowe'en is again at hand. It falls on the evening of Oct. 31st, which will be Saturday of the present week. Hallowe'en is so called as being the eve or vigil of All Hallows, or All Saints, which falls on the first day of November. It is associated in the popular imagination with the prevalence of supernatural influences, and in Scotland is frequently celebrated by meetings of young people with the performances of various mystical ceremonies humorously described by Burns in his poem Hallowe'en. In this country it has long been an occasion for youthful pranks of various kinds and sometimes for acts of vandalism that are in no way justified. That the young people should amuse themselves in any legitimate manner at Hallowe'en will not be questioned by any fair-minded person, but when it comes to a wanton destruction of property or rowdy conduct it will be just as readily conceded that the line has been overshot and that the offenders should be promptly dealt with.

ARMISTICE DAY

PERHAPS no other place in Canada has more appropriately made an annual observance of Armistice Day than has this town. While attended by no great ostentation or display the occasion has fittingly taken first place among the events of the year. It is no ordinary anniversary whose recurrence we will again observe on Nov. 11th. Just what form the celebration this year will take we are not yet in a position to say, but it can be counted upon that leaders will be found who will arrange a suitable program, and that they will receive the universal support of the community in honoring the anniversary and the memory of our noble sons who gave their lives in the defence of the Empire and for the upholding of those principles for which it stands.

FLAX PROSPECTS ENCOURAGING

The prospects of flax cultivation are promising. In his report for 1924, recently published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, Mr. R. I. Hutchinson, Chief Officer of the Fibre Division of the Experimental Farms, says that the year was the most encouraging for Canadian flax growers since 1920.

The growing and retting conditions in western Ontario, where practically all the Canadian fibre flax is at present produced, were very favourable, with the result that an exceptionally high yield of fibre and seed were obtained.

Some commercial areas produced as high as 339 pounds of fibre and 16 bushels of mill-run seed per acre. Not only were the yields of fibre and seed higher than usual but the demand for them showed improvement. One grower in western Ontario was offered 30 cents per pound for one lot of fibre. Most of the seed ranging from $2.40 to $2.65 per bushel. Mr. Hutchinson continuing says that the seed was suitable for seedling purposes, and as there is evidence of a good demand there were prospects of a good $3 and $4 per bushel being realized for the remainder in the hands of the growers of approximately 6,000 bushels.

HANTSPORT HAPPENINGS

Rev. Dr. Dickie gave an interesting and inspiring address before the Christian Endeavor Society in the Baptist church on Friday evening, basing his remarks on the subject, "Character Building". Although an octogenarian, Dr. Dickie is full of energy and enthusiasm and in an able manner deals with his subject. Miss Irma Fash presided over the meeting.

Rev. Mr. Prestwood, B.D., was in charge of the service in the United church on Sunday morning.

The annual Roll Call of the United Baptist church took place on Wednesday, afternoon and evening. At the evening service Rev. Mr. Wright, of Falmouth, gave a most interesting and practical address. Mr. C. L. Wood, of Windsor, gave an address on the Annuity Fund. About $250 was received, which will be appropriated for shingling the church.

The Lambda Sigma Society were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Charles Woodman, Falmouth, on Tuesday, it being the "natal day" of the hostess. It was a most enjoyable occasion, dainty refreshments being served.

Messrs. W. Scriven and E. Cameron, of Halifax, spent several days recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Murray.

Mrs. C. G. Yeaton was the hostess at a Bridge party on Thursday evening of last week.

Mr. Frank Lawrence, who was summoned to Hantsport on account of the passing away of his father, the late Capt. Charles Lawrence, returned to his home in Grand Mere, Quebec, on Tuesday.

Mr. Lloyd Flemming, a student at Acadia University, spent Sunday at his home here.

Hantsport was well represented at Kentville on Nomination Day.

Mr. Vaughan Taylor, of the barge "A. W. Coburn", was home for several days recently.

Capt. and Mrs. Laurie Parker were "At Home" at their new bungalow, Newport Corner, on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 22nd. Mrs. Irene Cochrane, of Hantsport, sister of Capt. Parker, received with Mrs. Parker. Mrs. Caldwell presided over the dining table. Miss Nita Parker, Mrs. C. Parker and Mrs. Demons served. Little Miss Doris, Mrs. Gordon Churchill and little daughter Mary, Mrs. Phillips and Geraldine, Mrs. Laura Rice, of Hantsport, were among the out of town guests.

After a number of years spent in the United States, Diana O'Moore Phillips has returned to Vancouver, and will resume teaching. Miss Phillips brings with her the teachings of Henry Stanley, of London, England, who is credited with having rediscovered what has been termed true voice production, an exact art that was developed by an old London professor. It is claimed that even injured voices can be healed and restored by his method. Miss Phillips has had many years professional experience and was invited to sing before the late King Edward. She was also honored by being chosen to sing at the New Arts Club, Glasgow. Miss Phillips is a sister of A. L. O. Phillips, Hantsport.

The Hantsport "Maples" won their third consecutive game of the season when they defeated the fast Windsor team by a score of 62-12. It is interesting to note that they have twice defeated Kentville this season. In their first game at Hantsport the score was 62-14, second game at Kentville 38-21. The Hantsport line-up was as follows: Forwards—F. Beazley, C. Hyson; Guards—A. Smith, C. McDonald; Centre—H. Folker.

RAYMOND—THURBER

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized a few days ago at the home of ex-customs officer, J. W. Lawrence, when Mr. S. M. Raymond and Miss Seraphim Thurber, of Digby, were united in marriage by the Rev. Dr. Dickie. This was Mr. Raymond's first visit to the picturesque town of Hantsport, and he was much impressed by its beauty.

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

March 29, 1851. Fine weather this week, but cold. I went up to mother's last night and stayed all night. I wrote a note to friend Rebecca and received a letter from her this morning. She is going to Horton today to see a sick friend who is not expected to live, and they have sent for her. After school Emily Ann came in and we were home. After she went away I was feeling very lonesome when Ruth Holmes came in to spend the night with me, for which I was very glad. Michael came shortly after, saying Capt. Michener had come home and wished to see me; so I have been over there a while; there were several others in also.

30th. Ruth and I have been to Mrs. Faulkner's and to Mrs. Kendall's to see John Frost; he looks almost like a corpse. I did not expect to see him looking so badly. Dear man, his race is nearly run, yet he will begin a more glorious existence when he shall have put off the clogs of mortality. What a blessed thing to be prepared for death, for only those who are prepared can truly enjoy life. The shades of night have drawn around; another Sabbath has fled. I can truly say I have felt a peace and happiness this day while in the sanctuary, and also when engaged in prayer. Rev. Grant preached a good sermon this morning. He shewed what it was to be a new creature in Jesus Christ and the happy state of such, well agreeing to what I am now reading in "Baxter's Call to the Unconverted". Rev. Wheelock preached this afternoon from "Godliness is profitable unto all things"; it was a good sermon. I desire to have that living principle of vital godliness implanted by the spirit of God. Ann

A KING LEAVES HIS KINGDOM

"King" Love Pritchard and his "subjects" have been forced to leave Bardsey Island, off the coast of North Wales, to live on the mainland because of the inaccessibility of the island. Dame Margaret Lloyd George and Miss Megan Lloyd were on the beach near Aberdaron when the King of Bardsey Island landed and are shown with him. Many years ago a former owner of the island appointed one of his tenants "king" in order to keep peace on the island which, because of the tides and currents, is sometimes cut off for weeks from the mainland.

has been here since meeting but has now gone to Olivia's.

31st. This is the last day of March. The stormy month has flown and soon we will be having April showers and the sweet Mayflowers. I have a very bad cold and did not sleep well. I arose early and took a walk before any were stirring. I would like to be excused from my school today, but must attend to my duty when I can.

April 4th. Friday evening has come and by the grace of God I am well. Brother John is here. We have had fine weather since April came in. I hope it will be fine tomorrow as I am expecting mother down. I got my wash out since school so I will not have it to do tomorrow. My pupils are progressing in their studies and I hope they will continue to do so. They often ask me when they shall sing. I think I must begin to sing soon, for that will be pleasing and amusing to all.

5th. Mother spent the day with me. We called to see John Frost; he is getting nearer home. Ma Faulkner spent the afternoon with us and went home with over, and we found Richard Haley there.

6th. Rev. Hall preached this morning; at the conclusion he talked on benevolence. Said we should pay for preaching and get our meeting house finished. He spoke about holding some protracted meetings; said he had been to Newport and Rawdon and had seen a revival at each place, and felt that we would have one here. He asked if they would hold some meetings, and Capt. Holmes told him it laid with himself. So without any further ceremony he appointed one for Tuesday. He said he would send for one or two ministers and he hoped to do the evening meeting. Rev. Grant preached this afternoon. He said all we heard made some impression on us, and that we either were more hardened or more softened by it. I think I sincerely prayed that I might not be more hardened. Mrs. James has been in since meeting, also grandfather Michener; poor old man, he is very lonesome, but has spent most of the day in his own house.

8th. I spent last evening with Abigail and the night with Maria; had a pleasant walk home before sunrise. The protracted meetings commenced this morning, as given out by Rev. Hall. I went up to the evening meeting. Came home alone; when I looked at my empty house I felt very lonely. I get relief in prayer. I trust I have a friend who is ever watching over me; may I feel sensible of his presence.

FROM AN OLD HANTSPORT RESIDENT

To the Hantsport ACADIAN
Dear Sir,—Kindly pardon my seeming neglect in becoming so delinquent in remitting for my Hantsport "news." I would never have believed that there could be so few of the old names I once was familiar with. Time wrought great and many changes. I doubt very much if I could scrape up enough people who knew me to justify a trip. But as the older generation has more or less been my hobby, I might manage to put in a week reading the head-stones in the cemetery. If I could remember the names of some of them I'd truly be pleased to tune in on my radio, of which I enjoyed a nice sermon preached 75 miles away in Oakland last evening, with no other person nearer than five miles.

ONE STEP AT A TIME

Heaven is not reached by a single bound; But we build the ladder by which we rise. From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies, And we mount to its summit round by round.

I count this thing as grandly true: That a noble deed is a step toward God. Lifting the soul from the common clod To a purer air and a broader view.

We rise by the things that are under our feet; By what we have mastered of good and gain; By the pride deposed and the passion slain. And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

TEMPERANCE REFORM AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

In the matter of temperance reform we require educational work to demonstrate the value of total abstinence from alcoholic drinks. The young and old should be taught that the beverage use of alcohol, whether in wine, beer, or spirits, has an injurious effect upon body, mind and character.

Then we require educational work to teach respect for legislation designed to suppress the drink traffic. All classes of citizens should be impressed with the truth that it is their duty to scrupulously observe the law prohibiting the sale of liquor. The person who purchases liquor from a bootlegger, dive-keeper, or other illegal dealer, is a poor type of character. He has not respect for law.

Education along the lines indicated would bring about such an improved state of affairs that there would be less call in the future for law enforcement. However, under present conditions it is essential that energetic work be carried on simultaneously along both educational and legislative lines.

The law prohibiting the sale of liquor should be strictly enforced. Dives should be suppressed; boot-leggers and moonshiners should be driven out of business; and thus our youth would be safeguarded from the demoralizing effects of the liquor traffic. Whether in accordance with the license and other vice law, the place closed.

The enforcement of our temperance legislation, Dominion and Provincial, has not heretofore been satisfactory.

The Dominion authorities have not taken definite action to prevent the transportation of liquor from Quebec by the Canadian National Railways. Carloads of liquor are being shipped into this province in violation of Dominion law. This could have been prevented if the railway management and the Dominion government had taken steps as outlined in recommendations made to the government, which recommendations were considered favourably by the Minister of Railways.

Again, the Dominion government has given little attention to the question of smuggling and rum-running. The Customs Department cannot adequately deal with this evil because the government has not furnished the necessary outfit. This province, owing to the neglect of the Dominion government, has been too long a base of operations for smugglers and rum-runners.

Provincial Legislation As the Dominion government has failed in its duty to deal with the illegal transportation and importation of liquor into the province, so there has also been failure on the part of provincial authorities. There would be much less rum-running and smuggling if adequate steps were taken of provisions in the Temperance Act empowering Inspectors and Peace Officers to make seizure of liquor found in transit or in course of delivery upon the premises of any carrier, or at any wharf, warehouse or other place.

Wide-awake Inspectors and Police in parts of the province are doing effective work, but there are municipalities in which the officers are incapable or careless and hence quantities of liquor are being transported over the province night and day.

car of C. Meal and Cracked Corn just arrived $2.75 per bag Less by the quantity

Government Enforcement

Where municipalities fail to make adequate provision for enforcement of the Act the Provincial government should do so. It is the duty of the government to enforce, or compel enforcement of all laws as certainly as it is the duty of citizens to obey all laws.

A staff of live provincial officers co-operating with, and if need be directing, local police and inspectors would, in a very short time, put to rout the liquor outlaws who have with impunity been engaged in their infamous trade.

Even with the imperfect enforcement of the Act which has prevailed in some municipalities, prohibition has been productive of a great deal of good. Efficient administration of the law would result in increased moral and economic benefit. The Social Service Council has presented a statement of the case to the present government requesting that action be taken to provide satisfactory enforcement.

H. R. GRANT, General Secretary, New Glasgow, N. S., Oct. 28, 1925.

FINE BARN BURNED

During the storm of last Sunday night the fine new barn on the farm of Mr. Chas. S. Pickford, at Grand Pre, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Pickford was preparing to retire when the barking of a small fox terrier caught his attention and he discovered that the barn was on fire. Sparks were coming out of the ventilator and investigation showed that the interior of the building was in flames. Fire had apparently originated in the east mow, where seventy-five tons of hay was stored. The gale was then blowing and nothing could be done to save the barn as the fire had made such progress. The live stock was removed but the other contents, including hay and grain and farm implements and machinery were destroyed.

The barn was built a year ago last summer to replace the one destroyed by a previous fire. It was one of the finest and best equipped barns in the county, and the loss is a heavy one. Indications point to the likelihood that the fire was of incendiary origin, as the barn-doors, which were securely fastened early in the evening on account of the gale, were found to be open when the fire was discovered.

WELL KNOWN IN WOLFVILLE

The death occurred at her home at Halifax on Thursday last of Mrs. William C. Bauld, a well known resident of that city. She had not been in good health since early in the summer when she suffered a severe accident, but her death came suddenly and unexpectedly. Mr. Bauld left her talking to a friend in good spirits and apparently in her usual health, returning shortly after to find that she had passed away. She was 70 years of age, and before her marriage was well known in Wolfville, where she was formerly a frequent visitor, and where many friends heard with sorrow of her demise. She is survived by her sorrowing husband, three sons and three daughters. The sons are Gerald S. Bauld, of New Glasgow, and William C. L. Bauld, of Somerville, Mass., both former residents of Wolfville; and Stewart S. Bauld, of Upper Grandville, Annapolis county. The daughters are Mrs. W. C. Barrett and Mrs. Geoffrey Stevens, of Dartmouth; and Mrs. Edna Lougheed, of Calgary.

Sell By Telephone And Keep Down Your Overhead Add the value of a lost Business Day to the expense incident to a visit to an out-of-town customer, and you will realize the heavy overhead the prospective sale to him must carry. Why not stay in your office and sell to him over the Long Distance Telephone Lines? It's quite a lot easier than travelling; it puts you in pocket to the amount of expenses saved; and it leaves your Business Day virtually intact to be devoted to money-making activities. Items Of Local Interest

"The shouting and the tumult dies." Hand Tinted Tally Cards, 5 cents each. At Fry's Studio.

The funeral of the late Andrew Horne took place last Thursday at St. John's church. There was a good attendance. A good many wreaths and a large cross from the rector and congregation were sent in. The rector officiated.

We note by the Hants Journal that the Windsor Presbytery is expected to meet in Wolfville at 10.30 this morning, at St. Andrew's church. The business will be the consideration of the spiritual campaign and the Maintenance Fund.

George Pinch, an aged resident of Hants county, died at his home at Windsor Forks on Tuesday of last week. Mr. Pinch was 84 years of age and at the time lived in Lower Wolfville in the house now the home of Mrs. and Miss Martin Cavanaugh. He moved from here to Falmouth and later to Windsor Forks.

Citizens were glad to see Mayor Chambers about town this week, after his recent illness. Mr. Chambers is a great sufferer from asthma and during recent weeks has been undergoing an unusually severe attack. He is now considerably improved and his many friends all join THE ACADIAN in the hope that he may soon enjoy complete recovery.

When the Acadia football team was returning from Halifax on Monday evening a serious motor accident occurred. A Ford truck which the driver allowed to "stall" while on the road forced the car driven by Dr. Wheelock off the road, and a number of the occupants received severe injury. Two members of the team, Estey and Wilson, were badly hurt, the former having his nose broken.

The Executive of the V. O. N. wish to thank all contributors to the fund collected in the special drive last week. The amount taken was $590.27. The members are grateful for the concerted and helpful work of the collectors and to all assisting in any way. They hope to meet all the friends of the V. O. N. socially at the Afternoon Tea on Tuesday at Acadia Villa. If any citizens were unable to contribute because of absence from town or other cause their donation to the work if sent to the secretary, Mrs. W. O. Pulsifer, will be gratefully received.

Like previous contest so far this season the U. N. B.-Acadia football game on Thursday was played under most adverse conditions. The day was cold with a strong wind which made the conditions anything but satisfactory for either players or spectators. In spite of this the game was witnessed by a crowd of onlookers. Aside from the fact that the local college team was outclassed in weight by their opponents the play was much more even than the score, 16-0, would indicate. U. N. B. scored eight points in each half, winning a victory of a pronounced character. There were the usual number of casualties.

A discerning tribute to the British Empire offered editorially by the Chicago Tribune: "For the British Empire and its ways are set for eternity. Days and years are as nothing. They just keep on going and although they ask themselves occasionally when Ramsay MacDonald gives us Singapore, or the coal miners tie up industry, or the oleo increases, or a squadron loses or nearly loses a naval battle, whether the Empire is to survive, down deep they know that questions is not worth asking and does not deserve an answer. They may have to hang on a long time to an enemy who knows they are licked and gets mad because they don't know it. All they know is that time is long and all that's necessary is to keep at it. Not so good today, but tomorrow is another day."

MEDICAL SCIENCE

A cure has been discovered for high blood pressure, according to Dr. W. J. MacDonald, of St. Catharines, Ont., who is attending the convention of physicians at Buffalo, N. Y. The research is being conducted in the Toronto General Hospital; much remains to be learned before the new medicine can be placed on the market, Dr. MacDonald says.

The scourge of humanity, the common cold, is going to be subjected to an exhaustive investigation by the public health laboratory at the University of Amsterdam, with the object of discovering a definite preventive or cure.

THOSE PANTS!

I hate those pants that mother makes, And "leaves me room to grow"; That's why they drag around my legs, That's why they wobble so.

That's why the pockets at the side Are way down by my feet; And the way I know the front from back, Is the patch that's on the seat.

That's why they look so kind of queer; I'm going to tell her so; I hate those pants that mother makes With "lots of room to grow".

THE WAY TO SOME PLACE

"Oh, you turn to your left and you turn to your right, And you turn to your left, said he: Then you turn to your left and you turn to your right, Till you come to a cherry tree; Then you turn to your left and turn to your right, Till you come to the second lane; Then you turn to your left and turn to your right, And you'd better ask again."

In this free country every man can maintain his rights if he doesn't care what happens to his fenders.

TO SAVE THE HANDS ON WASH DAY

Add a large handful of salt to the rinse water and the clothes will not freeze whilst being put on line. When you are ready to go out soak the hands in vinegar. Let it dry on. No cold fingers. Put the clothes pins in a pan, set them in the oven to heat, then just before going out to hang clothes put them in the clothes pin bag. These hints are extremely comfortable when it is zero weather. Do you know that a FINGER cut from an old kid glove placed on the end of a curtain rod makes it run through the hem of a curtain as if by magic? When shaking a FURNACE many people make the mistake of closing the registers. Instead of doing this leave them open and lay wet cloths over them. The ashes and dust will cling to the cloths; but if you shut the register, when you open it the draught will cause the ashes and dust to fly out in the room. To clean ALUMINUM, mix a little whitening with cold water to form a paste. Rub the aluminum well with it and polish with soft cloth. To separate whites from yolks break the eggs into a funnel over a cup. The whites pass through, the yolks remain. If INK in the ink well gets thick, dilute it with strong black coffee. It gives better results than vinegar or water.

A LOST CONTINENT

Does the Atlantic Ocean roll over a lost continent? Le Plongeon, who deciphered the hieroglyphics among the ruins of Yucatan, in Central America, came upon inscriptions describing a catastrophe which submerged the old Atlantean continent, legends of which have survived in literature from the earliest times. It may be that this catastrophe gave rise to the equally widespread belief in the Flood which destroyed the early inhabitants of our planet. Certain it is that the American continent, although called the New World, is geologically the oldest land on the globe, and the monuments found in the jungles of Yucatan were ancient when the Pyramids of Egypt were built.

The catastrophe is supposed to have taken place about 9,000 B. C., and at that time there was a highly-organized civilization in Yucatan, which would seem to be a remnant of the last continent. It is not a very large country, yet, in spite of the great difficulties of exploration, the ruins of 172 cities have been discovered. Some of these are so extensive that they must have contained half a million inhabitants, and it is possible that the pyramids found in the jungle gave the pattern at a much later date to the Pharaohs of Egypt.

The Smoking Flax

By ROBERT STEAD

Author of The Cowpuncher, Neighbors, etc.

The granary which was to be their home was built on two logs or skids, roughly pointed, so that it could be hauled beside the "set" at threshing time and filled direct from the separator. It seemed to have been left just at the spot where the lottering of the horses had overbalanced the persistence of their driver. It pointed nowhere in particular. Nearby, and similarly pointed, was another granary, its exact double. It gave signs of habitation, as over the door, scrawled with brown paint on the side of an apple box, was the gleam, "Dinty Moore's."

Cal absorbed these general facts as he loaded the sacks and harness into the Ford for transportation to the hay shed. When this was done they went up to the house, assuming that Jackson Stake would now have completed his preliminary overtures. The house stood a little to the north of the principal cluster of buildings; it was a four-cornered box with a roof, and a chimney at each end of the roof. The door was in the centre of the eastern side, and in reaching the door from the barnyard one made a detour around a water barrel which had leaked somewhat copiously at the south-eastern corner.

"This detour, however, could not be accomplished in a wide and curving movement; some sharp angles were necessary to avoid collapse over the pile of stove wood which occupied the right front of the prospect. A heavy block of wood served as a doorstep, with a fragment of plough-share nailed to one end as a boot scraper. Dexterous footwork over a wooden table, and sundry minor utensils landed Cal and Reed safely upon the step.

The door was open, and their shadow, falling inward, announced their presence. Jackson Stake was seated in a big chair, prodding his pipe with a straw from the kitchen broom, while Mrs. Stake wrestled an ample armful of dough on the wooden table. "This is the missus," said the farmer, without rising. "She'll be glad to see you."

"I'd be a heap gladder to see a woman," said Mrs. Stake, severely, without looking up from her dough. "You men are all alike; seem to think there's no limit to the mouths a woman can fill. Jackson can always get another man, whether he needs him or not; but I can't get a woman, not for the soul or sake o' me. Come in!"

She was tall and square, big boned and not over fleshed. As she kneaded the dough the muscles of her arms rose and fell like those of a man. With a knife she severed a section, moulded it skillfully into shape, and tucked it into a pan with a twin brother. With all her brusqueness there was a touch of something akin to tenderness as she patted it into place. She crossed the floor with quick, straight strides and set it to rise on a board bridging two chairs beside the oven. Then she looked up. "Hello? Where'd the boy come from?"

"He's mine."

"Yours? Did you hire 'im, too, Jackson?" Apparently Jackson's courage had failed him before he got this far in his revelation. "Yours, did you say?" he asked Cal. "Yours and whose?"

"Mine—adopted. My sister's," Cal explained.

Mrs. Stake looked at Reed and Reed looked at Mrs. Stake, and as they looked all the woman's sternness melted into an expression very human and motherly. "Come on in, Son," she said. "I know you're hungry. Boys o' eight or nine are always hungry. I've raised three, an' I know."

She broke a bun from a fine fresh brown panful just out of the oven and placed it in the boy's hand. Then she turned to her kneading. "It's not that I mind work," she confided in the dough; "what I mind is everlastin' work, mornin', noon an' night; never done. The men can get help, even when they don't particular need it, but the women just have to plug alone. There's Minnie, now; if she'd stuck to the farm— But she bolted. I dunno as I blame her. Some days I'm blame near bolting myself. Well, what d'ye want?" to Cal, who still stood framed in the doorway. "A broom and a mop, if you please," Cal answered.

"For what?"

"To brush up the granary a bit."

Mrs. Stake regarded Cal with some curiosity. "Partic'lar, ain't ye? Well, I dunno, but it's a good idea." She rubbed the dough from her hands and filled a pail with hot water. From behind the door she produced a broom and a mop, and severely handed the lot to Cal, who thanked her and started for the granary. At the corner by the leaky water barrel he was arrested by her sharp voice calling him.

"You'll be sendin' the boy to school," she called, "an' I'll wager his clo'es is more holy than righteous. Bring 'im in tonight an' I'll darn 'em up."

By midday the granary wore a very different appearance. The floor had come through the ordeal of soap and water with mixed emotions, but now, convinced that no harm was intended, and that this was only the strange way of these strange people, it smiled back pleasantly upon Cal and Reed as they sorted their few belongings into position. The cushions from the Ford would continue to be their bed; set on the corner of the floor, and equipped with mattrass, blankets, and pillows, they looked tempting enough for a noon-day nap, not to speak of nights after heavy labor in the fields. The suitcases were open; Cal's mirror and shaving set hung from nails in the wall; the cartridges dangled over the door, and the cartridges sat on a little shelf which Cal had built; even the spare tire with the blow-out, hanging by the window, helped to lend a furnished air to the place. A table and chairs would come in time; they were luxuries, not necessities. Outside, Cal had moved the grindstone so that it stood parallel with the granary, and not in reckless disregard of any definite angle to it; had built little brackets on which he hoisted the binder knives that had been found lying in the grass nearby; had moved four sections of drag harrows from the side around to the back and had stood them up on edge with some show of symmetry, and had carried a log which leaned against the granary for no particular purpose except in fulfillment of fate to the general log pile, where its fate could more conveniently be fulfilled. Inside and out the granary proclaimed that a soul had moved in to possess a body just comfortably started on its way to disintegration.

It was noon before they knew it, filled with that peculiar lightness of heart which has to do with the making of a place in which to live. The jingle of trace chains and the heavy stamping of work horses were their first reminder that the morning was gone. The farmyard shook itself awake, discarded its air of sunny indolence, and suddenly became a scene of bustling activity. Twelve great horses, arranged in three teams of four, each harnessed abreast, sweeping in from the fields, now crowded aggressively about the long wooden water trough in the centre of the yard—(if an area so undefined as Jackson Stake's farm-yard can be said to have a centre. Just where the yard began or ended no one knew or cared). A lanky young man with a gait apparently acquired in the supporting of his overalls moved a lever and presently from overhead came the rush of air in the blades of the windmill and the slow "clank... clank" of the connecting-rod as it operated the pump.

"The old Jim is checked up," said the young man with the gait to a head suddenly thrust through a space in the shoudering mass of horse-flesh. The head was crowned with a straw hat which, either through age or misadventure, had lost the greater part of its brim; underneath the remnant a pair of deep eyes twinkled slowly as though lit by unseen fires of humor far within, and an expanse of cheek and chin gave foothold to a stubby whisker well laden with dust and sand. The head made its way amid the heaving backs to a great bay who, with nostrils high in air, was snorting his protest above the busy drinking of his companions. A hand, no doubt associated with the head, unhooked the check-line, and the bay, feeling release, plunged his eager muzzle into the water.

"Got to check 'im, Gander," said the head. "He won't do nothin' but flirt with this Mollie-mare if he ain't checked up short. Fact. When I think o' him, an' then o' you, I says to myself, 'Old boy, you've almost human.'"

"Come, Dinty, I ain't no flirt," said the man addressed as Gander. "You know that. Ain't in my line." But his voice suggested that the charge was not distasteful.

"Cal, I help?" said Cal, who had approached unheard above the clamor of the horses. "I am the new hired man. My name is Cal Beach."

The two others turned toward him and regarded him for a moment in silence. While they were thus engaged a third figure, a youth of eighteen or thereabout, emerged from the mass. All three regarded him.

"Well, welcome to our city," said the man who answered alternately to the names of Grit and Dinty. "You're the new hired man. I'm the old hired man. It's the business of the old hired man to boss the new hired man, eh, Gander?"

Gander was non-committal. "Didn't know Dad was figurin' on hirin' any more help," he remarked. "However, he's the doctor. What can you do?"

"Not so very much, I am afraid. I can drive a Ford—"

"An' it takes a good man to do that," Grit chanted from a popular song.

"—and horses a little, and I'm middin' strong, and I've been through university."

The words were not out before he realized how inapt they were. "Hang it!" he thought, "that isn't what I meant. I meant to let them know that I wasn't a dabbler, that I had sense, that I could pick up things if they gave me a chance."

"Sounds all right, all but the last," said Gander. "Don't know as what they learn you in the university'll help much. A man on a farm don't need no D.D.s, or whatever it is, after his name. What he wants is horsepower an' savvy. Well, we'll see. Go down to the barn an' throw some hay in the mangers."

"Savvy," thought Cal. "That was the word. Means the same thing—or should."

But does it?

Reed was at his heels as he entered the barn. The building was of poplar logs, with a loft overhead, and gables boarded perpendicularly with shiplap. Mangers ran along each end, and were cross-sectioned by short partitions which divided the space into stalls, each wide enough for two horses. From the ends of these short partitions stout posts supported the loft and gave anchorage for wooden harness pegs. Small stones and gravel to the depth of several inches, impacted under the hoofs of many horses, made a floor almost as hard as rock.

Cal and Reed had barely time to fill the mangers from the hay shed when the horses were down upon them. As each came in, nodding his head and clanking his harness prodigiously, he walked straight to his stall and made an immediate inspection of the oat box nailed to the corner of the manger. Finding it empty his nostrils went up in annoyance, but a moment later, evidently on the theory that half a loaf is better than no bread, he plunged into the fragrant hay.

"Hello, who's the kid?" said Gander, encountering the boy in the doorway. "Another hired man?"

"Yes, sir."

"What's your name?"

"Reed, sir."

"Reed what?"

"Reed Beach."

Gander stroked the back of his long neck meditatively. "You don't mean he's your daddy?" he said, indicating Cal with a jerk of his head.

"He's my Daddy X."

Gander seemed to mouth a remark, but swallowed it. Then:

"An' have you been through university, too?" Cal, from his work between two horses, heard the words, and they struck home nastily. But his heart bounced at the boy's prompt rejoinder: "Not yet, but I'm going to. Have you?"

"Why, no, can't say as I have," said Gander, and his hand dropped from his long neck and gave Reed's hair a not unfriendly tousle. "All the horses got oats?" he demanded, in a voice intended to reach Grit Wilson. "Well, c'mon an' eat. C'mon, Cal."

The youth of eighteen or so had preceded them to the house. Humped over a bench beside the water barrel he was engaged in splashy and noisy ablutions.

"That'll do, Ham," said Wilson, crowding him away from the bench very much as the horses had crowded each other at the water trough. "Go an' titivatin' to go over to Double F's at this time o' day."

Wilson inspected the granite-ware basin, half full of dirty water, as though debating whether the fluid would serve one more turn. Evidently he decided against it. With a sweep of his arm he sprayed the water over the yard.

"You don't need washin'," said Gander to Cal and Reed, who were standing waiting their turn. "Go on in."

"Oh, we'd rather wash, if we may," said Cal.

"Sure, you may. No, law agin it," Gander agreed. "Go ahead."

Cal washed. The coarseness of the basin and of a huge bar of laundry soap was compensated by the fresh rain water and the warm spring sunshine. When he had washed someone shoved the towel into his hand. It was of heavy duck, made down from a grain sack, and showed many evidences of use and abuse. Through eyes smarting with the strong soap he tried to locate a spot less soiled than the average. When he turned to empty his basin he found Gander burrowing in it.

A side of biscuit tin nailed to the wall made a passable mirror, and a wire comb chained nearby completed the toilet equipment.

"C'mon," said Gander again. "Don't keep the ol' lady waitin'. She's a bit skittish."

Inside, a long table, covered with oilcloth that had once been white but through which blacks muddges of wear were now showing at the creases and corners, stood in the middle of the floor. Chairs were set about it and the men moved straight to their places, much as Cal again thought, as did the horses in the stable.

Cal and Reed hung back. "Sit down, anyhow," said Jackson Stake. "No formalities. Now dig in."

They "dug in"—into boiled potatoes and mashed turnips and fried pork and hot, strong tea and bread thick and white and flaky and butter smooth and yellow and delicious. Mrs. Stake had a large family to feed, and she fed them, as her husband said, without formalities, but she fed them well. She herself did not join them, but waited on the table, reloading bread plates, refilling potato bowls and tea-cups as the ravages of the moment demanded. Then, at the first sign of a pause, came great helpings of rice-and-raisin pudding dumped from a mighty spoon into plates just cleared of meat and potatoes.

"We're a bit rough an' ready," she apologized to Cal as she loaded his plate. "Specially since Minnie left. I don't get time to wash any more dishes than I jus' can't help. You're a city man an' I reckon you've been places where they give you a heap more tablecloth an' a heap less to eat. More puddin', Son?" to Reed. "Fill up. It's a long time till supper."

The men consumed amazingly big meals in an amazingly short time; and as each cleared his plate he got up and went out. Presently Cal noted that only he and Reed remained. Mrs. Stake swept the soiled dishes from a corner of the table and sat down with her own well-laden plate.

"Ever worked on a farm?" she demanded, presently.

"No. This will be my first attempt. I expect to find it a great life."

"Don't over-expect yourself. It's a great life, all right, if you don't have to live it. That's why everybody's leavin' the farm for the city."

"But they're not," Cal ventured to correct her. "For example, I've just left the city for the farm."

A FIXED EASTER

First steps toward the reform of the calendar to divide the present year of 12 months into 13 months, have been taken by the League of Nations committee on calendar reform in fixing the date of Easter permanently on the Second Sunday in April beginning in 1928.

Moses B. Cobworth, of Vancouver, director of the international fixed calendar league has announced receipt of news from the committee that the unanimous consent of all the great Christian church authorities had been secured to make the change.

The plan is to make the last day in each year an international "year day".

and dividing the 52 weeks into 13 months.

A new month, "Sol", is proposed to be made from the last two weeks of June and first two in July. Each month would consist of four complete weeks like February, 1925, and all times for earning and spending would be equal or exact multiples of each other.

APPLE TREE FERTILIZING

An experiment has been tried extending over three years at Sydney, B. C., Dominion Experimental Station to determine the effect of various fertilizers upon the growth of apple trees. The following fertilizers were used separately: nitrate of soda, two pounds per tree; muriate of potash, 2 pounds per tree; acid phosphate, 4 pounds per tree; the whole mixed and used at the rate of four pounds per tree. Nitrate of soda gave the greatest amount of growth; but muriate of potash and acid phosphate gave the highest yield of fruit, particularly the latter, although both showed a tendency to check the growth. The varieties of apples used in the test were: King of Tompkins Co., Gravenstein, Red Astrachan, Lowland Raspberry, Grimes Golden, Orange Pippin and Wagener.
