CHAPTER XXXVI.

"Yes, sir. And ever since she's never had a word to say to me that wasn't as sweet and kind as ever," Virtue declared, giving a final sob as she dropped her apron.

"It would have been well if the judgment of all of us, myself included, had been as good as Miss Natalie's. Virtue," madame observed, gently. "There—do not say any more. By and by you must let me know how I can best make up to you for the unjust pain that you have suffered."

And Virtue, thus dismissed, went out of the room, very red-eyed, but looking much less miserable than she had looked of late, poor girl!

The letter had taken so long to read and so long to talk over and wonder at that it was late in the afternoon and nearly dark before the rector remembered that he had promised to be home to luncheon, and that it was now nearly four hours past the orthodox rectory time. He was bidding good-day to my mother and me, and Alice had run down into the hall to give him a farewell kiss and send a message to Major Constable, when Dr. Dizarte came in. That stopped the rector, of course, and he turned back with us into the library, designing, I felt sure, to say a word or two of comfort to his old friend and crony. And indeed the poor old man seemed to need it, so shaky, pale, worn, and tremulous did he look. I even saw tears in my mother's steady bright eyes as she looked at him and heard his weak faltering voice.

We told him about the great surprise of the day, but I do not think he listened much, or cared sufficient, to feel astonished. The old man's heart and thoughts were with his "boy."

He asked me about Natalie's condition, shook his head in response to the statement that she was still just the same, and then turned to the rector:

"I wanted to see you, Deeping," he said, his voice and hands trembling alike as he looked from one to the other of us. "I hear that I can go tomorrow to see my boy. I thought that perhaps you would come to—eh?"

The tremor in the old doctor's usually full voice and the wistful eagerness of the face which had always been so round and jolly would have touched anybody. I know it brought a lump into my throat, and I think I know why the kindly rector suddenly needed his pocket-handkerchief as he replied, heartily, saying that he would go—"of course he would."

As for me, I think I cared more for my mother than ever I had cared in my life, as she said, before I had time to speak—

"If it were not that I can not leave my poor little Natalie, I would say that I might make one of the party," Doctor Dizarte. As it is Ned will only be too glad to be my substitute; and you must please give Doctor Yorke my regards and warmest sympathy. It is a terrible position for him, but it can not be long now be—ore this atrocious charge is entirely withdrawn. You must try to rest assured of that for his sake."

I think that Alice Deeping was born to be a blessing to every one near whom she came. She was emphatically a blessing now, and warded off scene. Whether it was that the gentle womanly kindness of madame's words was unusual with her, or that their hearty substance was too much for him—poor old fellow!—I do not know; but it is my opinion that Dizarte was on the verge of a burst of tears at that critical moment, and that they would have certainly come in another second but for Miss Alice. She threw her arms round his neck and kissed him as she might have kissed her own father.

"And tell Roger from me, Doctor Dizarte," she cried, earnestly, "that I don't believe a word of it, and wouldn't if all Whittleford did—wouldn't even if Ned himself did. And tell him that there isn't a single sensible person who has known and liked him all this time who is not sure of his innocence. I don't care about evidence. No one but idiots would care for evidence in a case like this. I wouldn't believe it if they had found a hundred and fifty pistols, and his name engraved upon every one of them—there!"

For the first time since Roger's arrest I believe old Dizarte absolutely smiled. He patted tenderly her fluffy flaxen hair with his shaking old hand.

"Thank you, my dear," he said gently. "I'll tell my boy. Yes, yes—I'll tell him. You do me good. I should bear up better than I do, I know; but you see, my dear, that he—" And here the old man broke off and wiped his eyes with his handkerchief.

We three went out into the hall together—the rector, Dizarte, and I. I was just helping the old doctor on with his coat, trying to cut a dismal joke meanwhile, and old Styles was standing ready to open the door, when a sound outside startled us—a horse's hoofs rattling on the drive through the rain, which had come on to pour furiously, and then stopping before the door.

"Who can that be?" I said, pausing in my talk.

Styles was opening the door. In the stream of light thrown out upon the steps we saw a drenched man dismounting from a panting horse. He came up the steps, looking about him curiously, and touching his dripping hat-brim. I left the doctor's coat and advanced.

"Beg pardon, sir," he said, "but is this the place they call Mount Chavasse?"

"Yes," I returned, hastily, wondering, for there was an odd sort of excitement about him, "this is Mount Chavasse."

"And is one of you gentlemen Mr. Chavasse, sir?"

"I am. What is it?"

"I've been sent to fetch you, sir, from Bridgely Norton, and was to give you this." He drew from the breast of his soaked jacket an envelope, and held it out to me. "There are two other gentlemen I want to find too, the rector—Mr. Deeping—and Doctor Dizarte."

"These gentlemen are Mr. Deeping and Doctor Dizarte," I said, more astonished still, holding the envelope in my hand unopened, while the others drew a pace nearer. "Do you say you were sent here?"

"Yes, sir—sent from the Miter Arms."

"Who sent you?"

"A gentleman that's been staying here for the last few days, sir. He went out for a ride to-day and had an accident—was thrown, and his horse rolled over him. They say he can't live till morning."

With a rush of blood to my head, and a sensation of singing in my ears which I can feel yet, I tore open the envelope and glanced over its contents. Written in a weak, uncertain hand upon the rough sheet of paper, these were the words I read—

"If you care for the life of your friend, come here to me. Bring the rector—bring Dizarte. No delay. I shall be dead by the morning."

"RABY ST. GEORGE."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Among all the hurried and exciting events of the last few days which it has fallen to my lot to chronicle, that journey through the pelting rain to Bridgely Norton stands out distinctly—the rattle of the horses' hoofs, the moaning of the wind, the patter of the rain upon the carriage roof, the splashing of the wheels through the thick mud and huge puddles, and the pale grave faces of my two companions.

It was still early in the evening when the wet and steaming horses were pulled up before the door of the Mitor Arms, in the High Street of Bridgely Norton, and we got out. Shown by a civil landlord into a parlor to wait, we were joined after a few minutes by a middle-aged, good-humored-looking man who was evidently a doctor. Old Dizarte was trembling so by this time that he was incapable of uttering a word, and I was not much better. We left it to the rector to conduct the conference. He was the only one, in fact, who had the self-possession to address the stranger at all.

"How is Mr. St. George now?" he asked.

The doctor shook his head, and glanced at Dizarte and me.

"May I ask if he is a relative of either you gentlemen?"

"He is not," the rector answered quickly. "You may speak quite freely, sir; and, on behalf of myself and my friends, I beg you to do so. We were given to understand that Mr. St. George was dying. Is that so?"

The doctor gravely bent his head.

"I am sorry to say it is. He can not possibly survive till morning—the nature of his injuries forbids it. We're not told how the accident happened?"

The rector answered in the affirmative. The doctor looked from him to me.

"You are Mr. Chavasse, I think?"

"Yes."

"Then it appears to be you that he most especially wishes to see. His first words on recovering consciousness were to ask if his injuries were serious. I thought it my duty to tell him the truth. He then contrived to write the note which I afterward dispatched to you, saying that it was a matter of life and death that it should reach your hands as soon as possible—in time, in short, for him to be able to speak to you and to these gentlemen. He has been anxiously expecting your arrival."

The doctor—his name was Wade, we found—paused.

"Is it certainly hopeless?" the rector asked.

"Is he conscious?" I asked.

"Quite. Will you come now?"

We followed him in silence, Dizarte holding my arm, out of the room and up a clean narrow winding staircase. Opening a door, he motioned to us to advance, and we entered a room bright with the light of fire and a shade lamp, and with a bed draped with chintz hangings, on which lay, ten dervy covered from sight, a crushed figure.

9519—A Dainty Combination.

Corset Cover and Drawers in Princess Combination. Sheer nainsook, with "val" lace and insertion produce pleasing results in this garment. It may also be made of nainsook with handworked scallops on the ruffle and neck and armeye edges finished in the same way. The model is made on Princess lines, and is comfortable and up-to-date, and is fitted with side front, underarm, side back, and shoulder seams. It is suitable for crepe, China or India silk, nainsook, lawn, crossbar muslin, dimity, or cambric. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes—34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for the 36 inch size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

9521—A PRETTY NIGHTDRESS.

Ladies' Nightdress with Yoke. This charming model is suitable for lawn, nainsook, cambric, dimity, crossbar muslin, or silk. The yoke is cut with deep points, over the fronts, and forms part of the sleeve in kimono style. The skirt portions are full and gathered to the yoke. Crossbar muslin with "val" lace insertion and edging for trimming would be very appropriate for this style. A pretty effect is gained by embroidering the yoke, or it may be of all-over or alternate tucks and insertion. The pattern is cut in 3 sizes—Small, Medium and Large. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for the medium size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Reply to "Interested."

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—We would thank you for the favour of your valuable space to Peter to educational matters, which your correspondent, "Interested," brings before the public in your issue of March 1st.

It would appear that this party writes from Fox Harbour, and whilst making it a ground for complaint that the school has not been open in its vicinity for six months, asks if Fox Harbour comes under the supervision of this Board, and furthermore accuses the Board of a failure in the performance of official work.

For the information of the party interested we would say that Fox Harbour is, as always, under this Board which was legally formed and gazetted in 1911.

Had your correspondent been as fair-minded as he is interested he would have stated that owing to a new school being in course of erection this winter, and the building previously used being unfit to continue operations in, it was impossible to continue school during winter.

We beg to inform "Interested" that he is entirely in error when he states that there has been no school open the past six months in that place, as the register will show that the First Grade Teacher was at work there in October and that the principal teacher did not leave until December.

We would also remind him that it was since the formation of this Board that Fox Harbour was given the High Grade teachers, one of First and one of Associate Grade, instead of the Third Grade teachers which were usually kept there, and that as inducement to keep a male Associate teacher at Fox Harbour, his salary exceeded the usual figure given to the very best outport schools.

In reference to the Ship Harbour school, in which your correspondent is so unnecessarily interested, we may say that the attendance ran so low at this place that it was deemed sufficient to have a six months school there, and the Board were notified by residents of that place that a six months school would best suit their requirements.

We are aware of the disadvantages of having no school at Fox Harbour even for the space of three months but we resent the interference of "Interested" who would throw the blame of existing conditions on this Board as any money given in educational grants since its formation was well and faithfully expended, as receipts will show.

It is to be regretted that your correspondent did not interest himself a little earlier in the matter of educational expenditure.

A glance at the school reports and the late C. H. E. results will leave this Board in little need of any word of praise.

The schools all around are in better standing, the teachers are of higher grading and the buildings generally

At about the age that most girls are working hardest at school studying for examinations there are important physiological changes taking place which are an additional strain on the nervous system.
Mrs. Gallop has had experience in the cases of her daughter and granddaughter, and for this reason her letter is particularly interesting to parents.
Mrs. J. A. Gallop, 135 Victoria street, St. John, N.B., whose husband is a carpenter, states:—"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in our family for nervousness, headaches, dizziness and nervous dyspepsia, and have found them satisfactory in every particular. My daughter, Bessie, was going to school, and became quite run down in health. By the time she had used three boxes of this remedy her nerves were steady, her general health was excellent and she was entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells. We are more than pleased with the results of this treatment."
"More recently we used the Nerve Food for my granddaughter, who was quite exhausted for nearly a year from nervous trouble, and noticed improvement in her condition at once."

As more hygienic and comfortable than at any previous date.
As a proof that we are getting better graded teachers there are three who resigned their schools this season to study for higher grades.

We would remind your correspondent that education is too broad a subject to be dealt with in the light of a pettifogging grievance, and you are aware, Mr. Editor, that all Boards have to contend with people of the stamp of "Interested," who, if they have a cause for complaint will not make a formal statement of the matter and have it settled in a manner that becomes a man; and teachers will always find a few who know no distinction of persons and are excused on account of that ignorance which is more to be pitied than blamed.

In conclusion, whilst apologizing for trespassing on your valuable space, we would add that no further notice will be taken of this Fox Harbour resident unless he writes over his own name, in which case the Board will give him all the consideration and courtesy to which he will then be entitled.

Vaccination.

BY H. L. RANN

whenever it is the closed season for appendicitis.
Vaccination was invented several years ago by a French physician, who discovered that by rubbing the left arm vigorously with a blunt instrument and allowing it to swell to twice its natural size he could make the patient wish he had taken the smallpox instead of the vaccine. It sometimes happens that the vaccine refuses to take hold and leaves nothing in its wake but a pink scar, which proves that the patient need not be afraid of any disease except being run over by a truck.

Most people prefer to be vaccinated on the northeast exposure of the left arm, at the precise point where jovial friends can slip them, on the vaccine before it has quit biting. In order to avoid this calamity, other people are vaccinated in the neighbourhood of the kneecap, which proceeds to inflate rapidly and cause them to walk with a perceptible limp for several days. People who are vaccinated in some locality sport a limp to or about upon the kneecap play golf in a short-sleeved shirt without having their biftmark commented upon by the spectators.
After a person has been vaccinated once in a thorough and finished manner, he is willing to get along without any more for quite a period of time. Vaccination usually lasts, however, until somebody in an adjacent state comes down with smallpox, which is sufficient to set an entire community running around in a state of grouchily perturbation.

It is a great disappointment to a man to be vaccinated with so much earnestness that he can't sleep on his left side for a month, and then immediately afterward come down with the chickenpox. This has caused many a man to lose confidence in medicine and become a sour fatalist.

M.I.A At Home.

The Mutual Improvement Association held a successful "At Home" at the Congregational Lecture Hall last evening, Mr. G. Langmaid presiding. The advertising competition was won by Miss Duley and Mr. B. Martin and Mrs. H. E. Cowan was the winner of the candle contest, lighting over a dozen candles with one match. The prize for the best hat trimming went to Mr. H. Barnes. The smelling and guessing competitions were won by Miss Crowwell and Mr. B. Martin and Miss Hamlin and Mr. B. Butt, respectively. During the evening selections, vocal and instrumental, were given by Mrs. (Rev.) Thomas, Miss Skinner, Miss Cahley and Messrs. Watson and Cowan which added to the enjoyment of the event. Before the close Rev. Mr. Thomas gave a brief address on the work and objects of the Association.

Fashions and Fads.

The tricorne hat returns this spring, more chic and jaunty than ever. Usually it has a vivid brim facing.

Solid brass toilet sets are another new wrinkle. These are absolutely plain or combined with creosian walnut.

For the debutante's evening dresses, mousseline and lace are favored, for evening, satin or flowered silks.

For day wear, the sleeve of the moment is long and rather tight, and it may be loose at both elbow and shoulder.

Coats of brocade, velvet, panne and the new figured raime are worn with any afternoon gown with excellent effect.

Artificial flowers are as much used as ever for dress ornaments and are prettier every day. Violets, especially, are perfect.

Cretonne comes in such charming designs this season that it looks as though it will at last be in favour as a dress material.

A charming restaurant frock is of black and white striped chiffon with a huge pink chrysanthemum tucked into the black girle.

The Greek apertures introduced through the winter are so charming that nobody will relinquish them, at any rate for evening wear.

Some of the new hair ornaments are quite inexpensive, except for the aigrettes, others are simply twisted ribbons and flower sprays.

All clothes, whether tailor-made or soft gowns, must positively look limp and clinging; anything in the least firm or stiff-looking is taboo.

Pretty half-season tailored suits are of white Ottoman silk or silk serge. Even bright reds, greens and blues are used for these suits.

The handiest and most compact vanity bag is made of Dresden ribbon fitted with three pockets to hold mirror, powder, puff and smelling salts.

Now that the effect of dark fur on light materials has been discovered to be so very charming and decorative, fashion is loath to part with it.

One of the prettiest tricks is to outline the girle of an evening gown with chiffon roses front and back and repeat the roses elsewhere on bodice and drapery.

A gown with black satin body has a draped blue serge skirt, carried above the waistline. The black satin opens in front, over a creamy chemise of batiste.

Eponges of every conceivable sort will be the rage this summer—checked and striped and of various finishes. They will be used for the chic little tailor-mades and for trimmings of dresses.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM

Completely Cured by GIN PILLS

Mr. W. G. Reid, of Hamilton, Ont., one of the best known and most highly respected commercial travellers in Canada, was crippled from Rheumatism and suffered terribly. GIN PILLS cured him. Mr. Reid writes as follows:—"I have been for the last two years a cripple with Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism; I tried almost everything known to medical science to relieve me of the intense pain and inflammation. I sought change of climate in Kentucky and other Southern points without relief. Your manager in this city recommended GIN PILLS and I have since taken eight boxes and am now cured. I consider GIN PILLS the conqueror of Rheumatism and Kidney Diseases."

Weariness.

I was tired of all my toiling in the sad and crowded town, and my rich, red blood was boiling, that I had to buckle down. "I must ruin reams of paper, or the wolf, before my door, will cut up a beastly caper—thus, it is, forevermore. Others go agalivanting to the mountains or the sea, but I'll work in this old panting, fried and sizzling town for me. Not for me the fragrant forest frequented by lucky skates; I must work till I've the sorest head in fifty-seven states. Not for me the quiet, winding, flower besprinkled country lanes; I must stay and keep a-grinding till I'm full of convex pains. Not for me the wild, wet ocean, with its leagues of wholesome brine; I must stay and keep in motion this old type machine of mine." Thus I kick about my labor till I chance to glance across to my poor unucky neighbor, Jimpson, who's a total loss. For long months he has been seeking, seeking vainly for a job; he is too worn out for speaking—he can only sigh and sob. When I see him in his utter weariness, so sick and blue, I brace up and gladly mutter: "Thank the Lord, I've work to do!"

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY

Yesterday's Proceedings Married by Scene Between the Premier and Mr. H. Gear.

The usual batch of petitions for Roads, Bridges, was presented. The Speaker read the following message from His Excellency the Governor:

"Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members of the House of Assembly:—I thank you for your address in reply to the speech with which I opened the session of the Legislature for 1913.

Questions.

The Hon. Colonial Secretary informed Mr. Kent that there was no correspondence in relation to the Marconi agreement to be tabled. At the request of the Government, Mr. Reoch, the Secretary of the Marconi Company, paid a visit to St. John's and the negotiations were conducted verbally between the Minister of Justice, on behalf of the Government, and Mr. Reoch, on behalf of the company. The Hon. the Prime Minister tabled a statement showing the mileage of the Branch Railways as asked by Mr. Kent.

The Hon. Minister of Finance told Mr. Cliff that Sugar, Tea, Beef and Pork (salted and barrelled) had been on the free list since 9.30 a.m. Thursday last and that a minute of Council had been passed authorizing the same. The House went into Committee on the Resolutions relating to the extension of the Railway system to Grate's Cove. The Premier explained that it had been found necessary to alter the first determination and have the branch proposed to go on from Broad Cove to Heart's Content, commence at the terminus of the Carbonar Road and go down to Grate's Cove at that side of the Bay, thus serving settlements with a population of over 10,000 and covering 85 miles.

Mr. Kent contended that before discussing the Resolutions, they should have the official reports of the Government Engineer, an official under whose jurisdiction such matters came. This change in the route was an important change in an important contract which must cost the colony several millions. They had had enough of rough estimates of mileage of railway lines. There had been a difference of 100 miles in the estimates given of the five new branch lines and he presumed that before it was decided to make the change now proposed, that the proper surveys would be made and the line gone over by the officers of the Government Engineer's Department. The result of the surveys should be tabled in the House before the matter could be properly discussed, as by the relative advantages of the change in the route it was difficult for members to estimate until the Engineer's report is furnished. Before the Government determined upon it they must certainly have had the reports of the various departments and officials at their command upon the nature and extent of the change and why it should be made. If there was correspondence on the matter that also should be tabled for the information of the House.

The Premier stated that there was no information beyond that which he (Premier) had furnished nor could any other information be furnished because there was no other information on the business. He merely adopted the practice taken when the 650 miles of line was built to Port aux Basques. The Government determined where the line was to be built and the route it should follow and the Government Engineer's province was to advise them as to details not as to policy. There was no correspondence and nothing to correspond about. The surveys only showed the grades and curves.

Mr. Kent thought the Premier had misunderstood him. He did not intend to trespass on the preserves of the Government as regarded their policy. That was properly within the jurisdiction of the Government, but he (Mr. Kent) did not mean by that that the House would abdicate any of its rights or any member forego his rights at the dictation of any policy brought down by the Government. Every member's duty was to enquire into every matter of policy brought down by the Government and that matter of extension was one that deeply concerned every member. They should remember that every extra mile limit would cost $15,000, and besides it would cost many areas of the public lands of the Colony, and before they gave away that large sum and this land they should be given all the necessary information, and when the Government decided to change the branch from one route to another they should be able to say it would take a particular route, not simply say it was going down the North Side of the Bay to Grate's Cove. The difference of agreement held formerly as to mileage only accentuated the necessity for information. If a difference of 100 miles existed in connection with the branch lines, every mile of which cost at least $15,000, then it was all the more reason why members should ask for information and correct information on so important a matter. The Premier spoke of the difference of opinion on railway mileage between Sir Robert Bond and Mr. Anderson. Well, then, this again accentuates the necessity, Mr. Kent held, for accurate information. He thought this "loose way of dealing with such an important matter was highly improper" and the sooner it was changed the better.

Mr. Whiteway, as a member of the District of Bay de Verde, heartily supported the Resolutions, thanked the Premier for having introduced them, disavowed any intention of exploiting this branch line for the sake of an election and dilated on the great good the branch would confer on his constituents.

The Premier thought if Mr. Kent sat on the Government benches he would have little fault to find. As he was not there "nothing good comes out of Nazareth," and he reiterated that he was all the information the Government had and that the cross country line was built by the Executive Government under the direction of the Government Engineer. They did not wish to curtail any information from members of the Opposition. The difference in the estimate of 100 miles alluded to was arrived at when he, the Premier, lacked details. When Sir Robert Bond was out 150 miles in his estimate he had all necessary details.

Mr. Kent thought the Premier was unfair when he averred that the Opposition objected to any measure tending to develop the resources of the country. It was, on the contrary, always the policy of the Liberal Party, led by Sir Robert Bond, to do all they could to develop Newfoundland's resources. His (Mr. Kent's) objection to the railway contract was in itself. He thought the Premier had said the cost of the line was $35,000 per year. Up to the present time the interest charge was $210,000 on those lines, which was a great increase upon $35,000. The figures spoke for themselves and the House and public could judge what they meant. The Act was passed three years ago and the increase was $70,000 per year interest on the public debt or double the increase given by the Premier. That was due solely to the contract under which the branch lines were built and that contract would be a constant source of expense to the country and when the final settlement arrived, the expenses would be far in excess of anything that had been anticipated. He (Mr. Kent) had been in Bay-de-Verde District, and while he believed that it was capable of great development and deserved a railway, he had never suggested that the Hon. member for Bay-de-Verde (Mr. Whiteway), supported the contract for election purposes and he was at a loss to know why such an insinuation should be imparted into the debate by him. He (Mr. Kent) would be the last to suggest that he would do anything of the kind. He regretted they did not know the exact rate, and would like to get the details of the proposed alteration.

Here the Premier stated that the cost of the whole of the branch lines would be about $6,000,000 and adverted to the loud cries and adverse criticism resulting in railway expenditure. The Opposition, he declared, feared to criticize the expenditure of $100,000 per year for education, the $60,000 for old age pensions and $40,000 for the widows and orphans, and if $100,000 more were requisitioned by him for the relief of the poor, there would be nothing about it, but the Opposition thought the railway expenditure would frighten the people. He (the Premier) had made the only substantial advance for education while in the Bond Government, and when it was made they nearly died of heart failure because of it. For 15 years they had not increased the education vote until he suggested it and it was only at his suggestion that duties were taken off. They (the Liberals) took credit for everything good they had done while in power, but everything bad was charged to him, he was branded as "traitor" and " Judas" and ridiculed and denounced. Sir Edward here asked who were the Liberal party anyhow and said that when he joined them in 1889, they were regarded as hide-bound Tories. If there were Liberals they were in the Government benches, the others were Liberal to themselves and he entered their ranks two of the most prominent Tories, George Shea and James Pitts were with them.

Mr. Kent was sorry to see the Premier take his remarks so much to heart as to get out of his usual good humor, but while he accused those who sat recently with him in the Liberal Executive of slinging his good name from him, he appeared to think that while they accused him of doing everything wrong and they did everything right, he, on the other hand, appeared to consider that he did everything right and they everything wrong. He thought the members of the late Government were just as capable of managing the affairs of the colony as the Premier, who in his unfair and unwarranted remarks against his late associates sets himself up against the whole of the late Executive and the men of experience and intelligence.

Mr. Kent again demanded the information he had sought on the altered route for the Bay de Verde line, when a scene occurred which, though of short duration showed that passion had been aroused and that great partisans and renowned leaders were after all like other men and can forget under stress of circumstances that they are regarded by the common herd as examples of dignity and decorum.

Mr. Gear said that he had only a couple of words to say and that these were: "It is a dirty bird that fouls its own nest." He then sat down, and the Premier, who evidently became much excited retorted: "That is what you have been doing all your life." Mr. Gear replied with a laugh, when the Premier said: "I caught you at your dirty work once; you cared little as long as you got your plumbling contracts. I caught you and convicted you. Ask Mr. Knowlton about it. Mr. Gear shortly afterwards retorted, and the Committee rose."

Mr. Kent demanded that the public up with debating the Marine Disasters Resolutions which passed the Committee stage, and Resolutions to the agreement with the Wireless Telegraph Co., in both of which Mr. Kent and Mr. Cliff closely criticized what appeared to them to be irregular and faulty in the Bills.

Mr. Kent demanded that the public accounts be furnished before any further supply votes were passed; nothing was done.
The House adjourned until 3 p.m.

Fire at Theatre.

Last night the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to the Nickel Theatre where a fire was in progress. The blaze originated in the box, containing the moving picture equipment. Operator Dalton had a narrow escape. There were about two hundred people in the hall at the time but there was no commotion caused and they got out without difficulty. The fire was quenched before serious loss was sustained. Some furnishings in the buildings were damaged by smoke and water.

THE BIGGEST MISTAKE.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"If things were to be done twice, we should all be wise."

—Ben Jonson.

There are a lot of people in this world that I am sorry for. There are the poor rich folks, who don't know how to have a real good time, and then there are the poor poor folks who never have a chance to have any; there are the hide-bound people who are so wrapped up in conventions that they don't know what life is, and there are the natural born discontented folks, who chase happiness out of their homes whenever it tries to get in. But I think of them all, there are none any more unfortunate than the folks who get the habit of fretting over mistakes.

So long as we live but one life—that is, so long as we can remember but one life, I'm not so sure that we live only one—mistakes have just got to be made.

So long as we are all doing things for the first time, buying our clothes, building our homes, choosing our vocations, getting married, raising children, etc., etc., we are just naturally bound to think we could do better a second time. But, unfortunately, quite often there is no second time.

And so, when anyone acquires the "if only" habit and gets to brooding over how happy he might be "if only" he had chosen another profession, bought a different house, married the other girl, he's inviting unhappiness to come right into his home and be a regular boarder. And she seems to be a lady who doesn't wait for a second invitation.

One of the happiest women I know is a wife who undoubtedly chose the wrong man for a husband. If she had the "if only" habit she would be the most miserable woman in town. As it was, she resolutely put the mistake behind her as soon as she realized she had made one, and now she puts a good front on everything, enjoys her children, endures her husband, and gets the very best out of her life as it is.

Mistakes have just got to be made by all of us. There's no getting around that. The only way to get ahead of them is to do as this woman did put them behind you.

Make up your mind that you won't make the same mistake twice; that you won't rush to the other extreme and make the opposite mistake; that you won't let any mistake—well, is there any legitimate equivalent for "get your goat," because that's just what I want to say—and you will surely have a head start in the race for happiness.

HAS A WORD TO SAY ABOUT THE "PORK AND SUGAR TAX BAIT."

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir: It is a pleasure to me to hear the Tories about here prating about the promises that Morris and his party are fulfilling. But how many are they not fulfilling, and never intend to fulfill. During the last political campaign, I was a strong supporter of the "People's Party," because I believed they were going to do something good for the country. To-day I am a bitter opponent of that party, as they have accomplished very little, if anything, for the country, only where themselves were concerned. At the time of the election I attended all the meetings, and at St. Paul's Hall, Mr. Parsons, the "People's Party" candidate, holding high the Road Board returns, asked the people how much of this money did you get, and how much did Walker get. He then said with great determination: "Gentlemen put us in power, and we will give you elective Road Boards, and have everything altered." But, Mr. Editor, instead of giving us Elective Road Boards they have given us a Dumb Road Board. Another promise was a steam ferry for the harbor here. That promise, too, has been ignored, and we are only laughed at for being galled by them. Oh, it is a wonderful advantage to take off the duty on sugar and pork. I suppose they were afraid to wait until the berries were ripe, and the dandelion was fit to pick, as that would bring them within six months of the election, and they are not allowed to do anything within six months of an election. But thank goodness, the electors can do something right up to polling day, and the last little act the disgraced "People's Party" supporters can and will do is to put an X opposite the names of the Liberal candidates and send the other grafters and picketers away back to sit down and think over their broken promises, and the good chance they had to assist the people of this Colony but failed.

Three cheers for Sir Robert Bond and three more for Cooper. Yours for the present, HARBOR GRACIAN. Hr. Grace, March 10, 1913.

Never Older Than He Feels.

Don't think because you're "fifty" You've no more work to do; Don't think because you're "sixty" You're pretty nearly through. You're not because you're "seventy" There's no use trying more. Don't think because you're "eighty" Your usefulness is o'er.

Men at his prime at "fifty" If careful he has been; Strong vigorous at "sixty," At least are many men; Men laughs at age at "seventy," Results have often shown He's still in prime condition When four "score" years have flown.

Some of the world's great leaders Are half a century old. At "sixty" many statesmen High office often hold; At "seventy" merchants, bankers, Are safest men we know. Many are hale and hearty At "eighty" years or so.

Blot out the birth date record And five times out of ten Men of "seventy," "eighty," You'd think much younger men. A man is never older Than what he feels he is; With heart kept young, he'll "fool" you, If smiles are on his "phiz."

Straits of Belle Isle.

FIERCE RAGES THE N.E. BLIZZARD OVER THE LOW LANDS WASHED BY THE STRAITS OF BELLE ISLE.

With a vehemence and persistence unknown our hilly country where gust is succeeded by full and respite, the untiring northeaster sweeps into the relentless grasp all lighter material, including the snow of the past week, and flings them forth a sacrifice to the raging waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. With discretion not foreseen to sailors, we stay at home and bathe our shins by the kindly hearth, now and again melting enough froff off the window pane to peer forth and pass comment on the condition of the weather. Yesterday, in the words of Dr. Mosdel, of Bonne Bay, the poor old "Home" sauntered up having been nine days coming a distance that usually takes two. Not less objects of pity are the captain and his crew than the poor impotent brute of a ship of which they are the victims. With every haven of refuge closed and jeering at her with Arctic insolence.

Where she has spent the past twenty-four hours Heaven only knows! We pray, however, that long before these lines have an opportunity of appearing in print, she shall have reached "the haven where she would be." The most pitiable victims of this mockery of a service, however, are the poor people of these sub-Arctic coasts. Yesterday, had the ship been at all suitable for the service, she could have steamed in through the ice, a hundred yards of lolly ice and laid her side against the hard ice of the harbor of Flower's Cove, permitting us to receive her on a few minutes with a minimum of labor. Instead boats had to be hauled a long distance then worked out through thick ice, involving much hard labor, and great loss of time. After going to all this trouble, we reached the "Home," only to be told that no freight was to be taken out as there was not a stick of iron in the hold. Freight for which we had been waiting so long, in the hold of the "Home," Empty boats alongside to take it, hungry children in some cases longing for it.

And now, tantalus like, it is put to the lips only to be rudely snatched away. A strong protest fetches up a portion of our mail, society, we forbar saying what should be done to the August body responsible for such conditions. Enough, however, of this adverse criticism, which is by no means pleasant to us. The question is, if we are to be content with a steamship service, what must be its qualifications?

- 1.—The ship must be able to carry twice as much freight as the "Home," and have accommodation for about four times as many cabin, and twice as many steerage passengers.
2.—She must draw very little more water than the "Home," and her superior carrying capacity must be in breadth, not so much in length.
3.—She must steam ten knots at all times quite easily.
4.—She must be as powerful to withstand Arctic ice as any sailing ship in the fleet.

It is little short of disgusting to see an egg-shell of a boat turn over tail to a few inches of ice and carry off your goods to responsible for the farcical service imposed upon the Straits of Belle Isle. It is a sad thing to realize that if a body or part of it is to retain good health, there must be a vigorous flow of good blood into every part. Let this flow cease in any limb, and the result is death in such limb. A good healthy system is as careful that a small toe shall receive its due, as that the leg or arm shall receive theirs. So far as the Body Politic of Newfoundland is concerned, if it does not mind it will be guilty of wantonly destroying the vitality of the right hand of the Colony,—the British Columbia of Newfoundland.—A congestion of commerce is poured by the many avenues of trade, open all the year round, into the larger centres of the Colony. In the Straits where we have but one means only of procuring our supplies, and where

Several thousand people are cut off from the outside world five or six months of the year, we are supplied with a service that is a standing insult to the people and little short of a disgrace to the country. If the coast has to be content with a steamship service—and a service that depends upon navigation, can never solve the problem in connection with the development of the North of Newfoundland—it must be one that does not grin in our faces with all the insolence of "impotency" as the present does. May we ask the question, Sir, if there is in this self-governing Colony of ours, where noble men lightly pass laws which hinder a poor man from procuring for his children, by his hard honest toil, a pound of fresh meat or a barrel of herring, unless it be done bow and at what time they please,—who even go so far as to invade by their undignified legislation, the right of a man to preserve his venison by thinning, saying in effect, "you must let that quarter of venison rot, if it comes mild, but by no means tin it if you do you pay a fine or go to prison,—may we ask, Sir, considering the capacity of our legislators, for detail, if there is any authority before whose bar

A Passenger Ship may be adjudged seaworthy or otherwise.

If so, and that August body is doing its duty, we must regard the sanitary conditions existing on board the steamer this fall, as reaching the standard required. More need not be said on this subject here than this: The man, who, knowing the sanitary conditions existing on board the steamer, would allow a female relative of his to take passage by her, ought to be banished from society. We forbar saying what should be done to the August body responsible for such conditions. Enough, however, of this adverse criticism, which is by no means pleasant to us. The question is, if we are to be content with a steamship service, what must be its qualifications?

- 1.—The ship must be able to carry twice as much freight as the "Home," and have accommodation for about four times as many cabin, and twice as many steerage passengers.

It is little short of disgusting to see an egg-shell of a boat turn over tail to a few inches of ice and carry off your goods to other seven months. In fact, at the end of that time you may think yourself lucky if after paying a second freight on it you get it at all. Again in the spring, so long as there is an excuse for a pan of ice in the Straits, the boats that ought to be causing new life to pulsate around our shores, are loitering away their own time, and causing us to waste our previous time, by making short trips from Bay of Islands, taking care that so long as a pan of ice can be sighted they will make the most of it as justification for what, in plain English, can only be termed laziness. Perhaps the boats are all to blame, if so give them steamers that can cleave with impunity the heaviest jam that is forced through the Straits of Belle Isle from May to Dec. 31st. Then there will be no excuse.

5.—A fifth qualification for a satisfactory service, is a pursuer who is in all respects a man,—not an ass, or what is worse, a man who makes an ass of himself. I have no doubt our pursuers could be alright. I am sure some of them are because they prove it. But they who would be all right make themselves all wrong by a too frequent and fluent use of something stronger than tea.

Who Signed the Cheque

IS IT FORGERY. What looks like forgery and promises to be an interesting case for the authorities, is in connection with a cheque from the Postal Department to John C. O'Rourke the mail courier between Curling and Lark Harbour. As far as we can gather, Mr. O'Rourke has not received payment for quarter ending last September, though he received his salary for following quarter. Owing to the unusual lapse of time in its non-arrival Mr. O'Rourke communicated with the P. M. G. and received reply that his cheque for September had been sent out and arrived back to the General Post Office in the endorsed in October. At the Bank of Montreal here Mr. O'Rourke learned that the cheque had been presented there and paid. Mr. O'Rourke, however, states he never received the cheque, and consequently never endorsed it. Now the question arises, who received Mr. O'Rourke's cheque and forged his name to it. The bank writing in which the cheque is endorsed is being closely examined by experts and a thorough investigation in the whole affair will be instituted. —Western Star, March 5.

The burden a woman has to carry through life are many but they can be lightened if she will turn to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A soothing and strengthening tonic—subduing nervous excitability, prostration, hysteria, hot flashes and the many symptoms which may be caused by distressing ills peculiar to women. For those "dragging-down" pains or distress and for the derangements and irregularities the "Favorite Prescription" has had many thousands of testimonials from people living in every part of America. Another important thing to every woman is that this medicine is made from efficient medicinal roots, without the use of alcohol, narcotics, or any injurious agents. Full list of ingredients given on bottle-wrapper and sworn to by Dr. R. V. Pierce—who is President of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Every woman is invited to write to this Institute and receive confidential and sound medical advice, entirely without cost from one who makes the diseases of women his speciality.

"I can cheerfully recommend your remedies, especially your 'Favorite Prescription,' for all female disorders," writes Mrs. M. M. MORGAN, of Blue City, Tenn., Route 2. "During the past seven years I suffered from pains in the back and ovaries. Tried many remedies but found only transient relief until I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After giving this remedy a fair trial, I found that it would do just what it is recommended to do. I used in all seven bottles. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Pierce's remedies for all female derangements. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver ills.

Sealers' Meeting.

T. A. Hall Packed With Thousands of Stalwarts--Enthusiasm at Fever Heat--Coaker Acclaimed The Fisherman's Friend, and Receives Great Ovation--Mr. Morine Gave an Address and Was Heartily Cheered.

Some 2,000 electors, seven eighths of whom were sealers, assembled in the T. A. Hall last night and packed the place to the doors, there being not an unoccupied seat and standing room at a premium. It was the largest audience ever assembled there, and it is the largest building of its kind in the city. Many prominent citizens were present. Unbounded enthusiasm prevailed and it will be hard to express in words the feeling which evidently existed in the bosoms of those stalwart fishermen. They cheered, applauded and answered questions as they came to their Union policy propounded by Mr. Coaker. When asked what they thought of Morris's last performance, the men replied as with one voice: "Baird Bluff!" Asked if Morris feared the F. P. U., they answered "Yes." Who they gave credit to for the reduction of duties, "Coaker," Mr. Coaker in the course of a two hours address flayed the Government, showed that with the $350,000 he could have given an old age pension to every man over 70 years of age of $100 and $50 to every widow over the same age. He scored Morris for his attitude in the Morrison deal, exposed last April. He knew the people had watched this dirty transaction and said that Morris should go, when the audience shouted "Yes, he must go!" Any person present last night must have recognized "The wonderful change which has taken place in the fishermen, who are more assertive and independent than ever, and who all said last night our watchword is "Sink or swim with Coaker." Mr. Coaker spoke of the price of seals and held that a fair way to settle it was by a Commission composed of the merchants, two F. P. U. members, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. He also dealt in an able manner with the sealing agreement, the food provided under it, the killing of old seals, the panning of seals and the price of fish. The leading Co. Union stores, the recent reduction of duties, the standardizing of fish, trade agents, free and compulsory education, night schools, reduction of the tariff, utilizing of the Reserve Fund for security to provide fishery supplies and motor boats, agriculture, old age pensions, Elective School Boards, Municipal Boards and changed conditions respecting the fisheries were all considered in an able manner. Mr. Coaker's closing appeal was of a stirring character and fully carried the audience off their feet. It appealed to the fishermen's hearts and they responded as perhaps they never did before to an address from a political platform. One noticeable and most encouraging circumstance was that in the vast assemblage there was not a dissenting voice nor the slightest interruption, and at the close the storm of cheers for Mr. Coaker and the Union, which lasted for several minutes, shook the building.

if so, would they stand. For answer every man present jumped to his feet amidst another hearty outburst of cheering. The chairman, Mr. George Hampton, candidate for Port de Grave, invited Mr. Morine to address the meeting, and in his own eloquent and graceful style, so well known to many present, he held his audience for upwards of an hour. Every word uttered was distinctly heard, and when the speaker ceased he again received an ovation of which he might well be proud. Cheers for the F. P. U. President, Coaker, Mr. Morine and the chairman were given, when the men separated to their ships, and home.

To-night the greatest sealers' demonstration ever held in St. John's will take place under the auspices of the F. P. U. Headed by the bands of the Methodist Guards and the City Musical Corps they will start from the Mechanics' Hall on the historic Beach and will march through the city, calling at Government House and cheering the sealing firms as they deploy along Water Street. All sealers are invited and all should attend this grand parade, thereby showing appreciation of the work of Mr. Coaker on their behalf, of the liberality of the ship owners and to demonstrate to the politicians who hate the F. P. U. what great changes have come over the outport man in the last couple of years. Splendid displays of fireworks will be given during the night.

BERLIN, March 11. The semi-official Cologne Gazette publishes an extraordinary leading article, headed, "The Mischief Makers," in which it declares it will not be difficult for the German Government to justify the necessity of arm increase, if it will only speak out plainly, and without mincing words, indicate the point from which danger is threatened which all the world realizes. In France, "The Journal" does not underestimate the grave and new conditions in the Balkans, but when a country is asked to make such heavy sacrifices, chapters and verse must be given, and the Government finger must point to the precise spot from which there is immediate peril, and that spot is France. Never, the article says, were our relations with our Western neighbors so strained as to-day, and never has the idea of revenge been so openly flaunted. Never has it been so apparent that the French wanted, Russian alliance and British friendship for the sole object of recapturing Alsace and Lorraine. One thing is absolutely certain, that whenever the world catches fire, the Germans will have to cross swords with the French, and when that will happen nobody can tell.

LONDON, Mar. 11. Five snuffragettes were ordered to find sureties for good behaviour or from 21 days to a month in jail. They went to jail. The charge was obstruction of the police, who said they had received orders to prevent any one from attempting to throw letters or petitions to the King while on his way to Parliament. The accused argued that their action was legal, as every British subject had the right of petition. The magistrate pointed out that whilst the right was undeniable, it could be exercised only through a Minister of the Crown. Two more women have been given a month's imprisonment by the Bow Street magistrate for breaking windows in the Home office this morning. The burning of the railway stations by female disorderlies was confirmed to-day.

LONDON, this a.m. European chancelleries and stock markets are being kept in a condition of nervous tension. No sooner does one thorny problem seem in the way of solution, when another crops up. To-night the long expected agreement for Austro-Bosnian demobilization has been published. The Allies have accepted the Powers' offer of mediation under certain conditions. Arrangements have been completed for the settlement of the dispute between Bulgaria and Romania by a conference of Ambassadors in St. Petersburg, presided over by the Russian Foreign Minister. There it would seem a way was prepared for restoration of peace in the Balkans. At the same moment a new difficulty is raised by Austria, who objects to Servia going to the assistance of Montenegro in endeavouring to enlist the Powers on her side. Further, Austria declines to demobilize as far as the Serbian frontier is concerned. The fall of Scutari still menaces the peace of Europe. Austria is determined to make Scutari the capital of autonomous Albania, while Montenegro is determined to retain possession of Scutari. It hardly seems likely that Servia will desist in her effort of going to the assistance of Montenegro at Austria's bidding.

LONDON, Mar. 11. They were educated at Beamount College, held commissions in the Scottish Rifles, served in South Africa, participating in the relief of Ladysmith, and fought at Spion Kop. They assign as their reason, simply a desire to earn their living. Both possess fine tenor voices. Their turn consisted of songs, mainly on Army, military and political subjects.

A UNIFORM SUCCESS.

Under ideal conditions and in the presence of a crowded audience the Newfoundland Highlanders held their annual indoor sports in their Armoury last night. There were also in attendance His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson accompanied by Major Davenport and Capt. Goodridge, A.D.C.'s. His Excellency was met by Lt. Colonel Paterson, whilst the battalion gave the general salute. The entire company was then put through the manual and physical exercises. The various manoeuvres were so perfectly executed that the Governor congratulated the lads on their military progress as well as their excellent appearance.

The programme of Sports was then taken up and ran off as follows:—

1. Buzz Fight—Won by R. Morris and S. Watson.
2. High Jump—1st S. Kendrick, 4 ft. 8 in.
3. Half Mile (srs.)—1st S. Kendrick.
4. Trapeze Exhibition—L. C. Ferguson and Band Sgt. Miller.
5. Roller Wheelbarrow Race—1st R. Morris and F. Watts.
6. Costume Roller Race—1st F. Watts.
7. ¼ Mile (Jrs.)—1st G. Hutchings.
8. Victoria Cross Race—1st S. Kendrick and A. Clouston.
9. Relay Race for Lighthouse Cup. Won by Messrs Oke, Morris and Watts, members of No. 3 section of B. Company.
10. Inter-Brigade Tug of War—N. H. vs. C. L. B. Former won after a hard struggle.

The different events of the evening were interesting and well contested. Lt. C. Miller was the winner of the prize in the sixth event. He interpreted a diver and his costume was the most original. Following the last item of the programme, Mrs. (Col.) Paterson presented the prizes to the lucky winners. During the evening the pipers rendered appropriate airs. The sports were under the auspices of the warrant and non-commissioned officers to whom the success of the event is largely due.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURE DIPHTERIA.

Cleans the Hair and Makes It Beautiful—25c. "Danderine."

IN A FEW MOMENTS YOUR HAIR GROWS SOFT, FLUFFY, LUSTROUS AND ABUNDANT—NO FALLING HAIR OR DANDRUFF.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few moments you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of Dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

The Man Napoleon Remembered

The Remarkable Codicil to Napoleon's Will Added at St. Helena—Napoleon Home on Furlough.

Mr. Desmond MacCarthy tells an extraordinary incident with regard to Napoleon's last days. He tells in the Eye Witness how the great conqueror, as the days of his banishment were ending, thought of the man who saved his life, and so doing set Europe ablaze.

Three Days Before Death.
"Three days before his death Napoleon added a codicil to his will which contained the following legacies:—

"I bequeath," he wrote, "twenty thousand francs to that man, a native of Bocognano, who rescued me from the hands of the brigands who would have assassinated me.

"Ten thousand francs to Md Vizzavona, the only one of that family who belonged to my party.

"One hundred thousand francs to M. Jean-Jerome from Levy.

"One hundred thousand francs to M. Costa de Bastelica.

"Twenty thousand francs to the Abbe Reccho."

"During his last few days of life his mind had gone back to his youth in Corsica; and looking back across so many tumultuous events he remembered vividly the devotion of a man whose name his enfeebled memory could no longer recall. And this is what he remembered:

Home on Furlough.
"It happened soon after Louis XVI had been put to death, when Corsica was under the predominating influence of Paoli, a patriot and a devoted Royalist, who detested the Revolution. Napoleon was then a young artillery officer in the French Army, and home on furlough. He was not on good terms with Paoli, for the ideals of the Revolution were dearer to him than the independence of his native island. Hearing that agents from the French Government had lately landed at Bastia, he made up his mind to see them, and he summoned from Bocognano one Riccio Bonelli, whom he knew as a faithful fellow, to be his guide across country.

The Little Officer on the Stairs.
"The two set off on horseback together, making first, however, for the little town of Corte, where General Paoli was then living. Bonaparte was not at this time sure that Paoli was actually conspiring against the French Government, and he had paid little attention to the rumours that buzzed about the general's name. Dismounting in the courtyard of the house, he was already on the stairs when he was informed that the general was in consultation with some important Corsicans, whose names he recognized at once as those of men most disaffected towards the Republic. His suspicions were instantly aroused, and the next moment the door opened and a man came out from the room where the conspirators were sitting.

"Thinking the little officer on the stairs must surely be of his own party, he exclaimed with enthusiasm: 'It is settled. We shall proclaim the independence of Corsica, and call in the help of England against France.' At these words Bonaparte's fury and dismay got the better of his prudence. He began to stamp and shout: 'Traitors, infamous traitors,' making indeed so much noise that others rushed out to see what was the matter.

"Fortunately for him, those who came out first were his own relations, and hurriedly hustling him downstairs (for Paoli was not a man to defy at such a moment), they got him mounted and away, before the general had grasped the situation.

Napoleon's Flight.
"That night Bonaparte and Riccio slept with the priest of a village far away. He was a cousin, and the whole story was confided to him.

"They started again at daybreak for Bocognano, and there they separated, Bonaparte riding to the house of another cousin, Felix Tusoli, while Riccio received orders to meet him at the cross-roads next morning.

"Meanwhile Paoli, who had heard about the scene on his stairs, had sent a messenger to the Morellis, who lived at Bocognano, to stop Bonaparte by any means from reaching Ajaccio or Bastia. The man entered the village a few hours before the travellers, and the chief of the Morellis undertook to put an end to the young Republican. Before he parted from his host next morning all the roads from the village had been ambushed. He was easily taken.

Napoleon a Prisoner.
"When Riccio, waiting at the cross-roads, heard that his master had been captured, he ran to Vizzavona, a partisan on their side, whose house abutted on Morelli's where Bonaparte was now a prisoner. 'If we do not act at once,' said Riccio, 'he will be dead in two hours.' Vizzavona was clever enough to persuade Morelli (on his side anxious to disguise his sinister intentions), to allow Bonaparte to take some refreshment at his house, on condition that a guard should be set upon it; and Morelli having set the guard, went back to make preparations for leaving with the prisoner. Meanwhile Riccio had concealed two trusty fellows in the garden behind the stable. Then asking permission to say farewell to his master, he told him what he had done, and not a moment must be lost. Accompanied by Vizzavona, they entered the stable together. 'God save you, my poor boy, for He alone can help you,' and kissing Napoleon with these words, Vizzavona hoisted him over the wall.

A Hot Pursuit.
"Riccio followed, and the four men started running for the wood.

"After some exciting incidents Napoleon escaped, and then—

"Next day Napoleon parted from his two courageous companions. He offered to take them to France and to share with them whatever good fortune might befall him there, but they refused to leave their native village. So Riccio and he rode on alone together. At Ucciani they got an escort and at nightfall they reached Ajaccio, where Napoleon took refuge with the mayor. This man, a M. Jean-Jerome Levy, when the police came to search his premises, rolled up the little lieutenant in a municipal poster, and offered the most eager assistance in the search. That night Napoleon crossed to the other side of the bay in a small boat, where he remained in hiding some days under the protection of M. Costa de Bastelica. The independence of Corsica having been proclaimed by Paoli a few days later, the home of the Bonapartes was burnt, and Napoleon's three sisters were forced to take refuge with the Abbe Reccho. At last on a French frigate, which was cruising the shores of Corsica in order to pick up the last remaining partisans of France, Napoleon embarked.

Story of the Story.
"Such was the adventure that rose up in his memory during the last few days of his life.

"It was not until the days of the Second Republic that it occurred to anyone to look into the matter, and to inquire if Napoleon's bequests had been fulfilled," says Mr. Desmond MacCarthy. "The story which is outlined here was communicated to Maupassant by the man who was sent to Corsica to investigate the whole matter, and Maupassant wrote a full account of the results of this agent's researches. His account was not republished in book form until the complete edition of Maupassant's works which has just been concluded, appeared."

NAPOLEON 100 YEARS AGO.

In connection with the above story it is interesting to remember that it is just 100 years ago since the Emperor Napoleon penetrated the heart of Russia with the Grand Army, only to retreat in disastrous confusion.

"When Napoleon's army crossed the Russian frontier in July, 1812, his dominion was, to all appearance, solidly established and the army, so far as possible, combined of force," says the Telegraph. "The best part of this army was destroyed on the Russian plains before the end of the year, and its destruction exposed the empire to external attacks and internal rebellions, against which it was unable to stand, so that 1812 may fairly be fixed as the climax and turning point of Napoleon's career, and the revolutionary struggle."

Napoleon's villa on the Island of Elba was sold last Monday by auction under instructions from the Tribunal of Porto Longone. The bidding started at £5,800. The purchaser is Prince Camillo Ruspoli, of Rome, who offered £12,000.

Political Pointers.

The F.P.U. flag was hoisted Wednesday for the first time.

A big meeting Wednesday night—twenty members were added to the roll.

Three F.P.U. candidates for Harbor Grace District, next fall.

Eight months more and the Tories will sink into oblivion. Morrell's work will be finished!

Eight months more and they will get all the chance they want and their walking ticket, too.

Four years, and the public debt has increased by millions of dollars.

Four years, and the cost of living has increased 40 per cent.

Four years of pickings and pickings for Ministers and boebers.

Four years, and a great change has come over the voters of Harbor Grace District. Our eyes are open. Give us a chance next fall!

Four years promising Spaniard's Bay a public building, and not a stroke struck yet.

A Happy Child in a Few Hours

When cross, sick, feverish, tongue coated or pillows give "Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, Mother! II coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's insides, the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged up with putrefying waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is listless, drooping, pale, doesn't sleep soundly or eat heartily or is cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, or is full of cold, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness and you will have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of licit, safe, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious taste.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed. A little given to-day will save a sick child to-morrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

"Active" After "Smokey Cotton."

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to make a few contradictions concerning an article I saw in the 'Daily News,' signed "Smokey Cotton," about Coaker's reception at Western Bay. I may say, sir, that Coaker did get the biggest reception that ever a man got in this place on the aforesaid occasion. He goes on to say that there were only 62 men in the parade, and that is all they could get from Northern Bay to Western Bay. If he had any understanding or the least bit of common sense, he would have known that those were the Ochre Pit Cove friends coming to the L. O. Lodge to meet the Western Bay Council's (North and South), and Broad Cove Council to arrange to meet the President; and if this worldly-wise man was present when the Union members left the hall to meet the President, he would be able to count more than 62, if his eyes were not filled with the old calender that flies from the "Smokey Cotton," when handling it, as I presume he does in this kind of stuff. He goes on to say that if Mr. Hudson is foolish enough to stand for a candidate for Coaker he would not get any vote but his own. Why, sir, he is getting beside himself. I suppose because he is living to himself and that makes a man a little hysteric sometimes, and he is apt to forget himself. Where does he leave the 62 Union men he counted and the hundreds that he didn't count, that were in the parade? Does he think that they are not all true Union men? If he thinks that he makes a wonderful mistake.

He goes on to make some suggestions about forming a F.P.U. bank. I may say that the President doesn't want any information from Mr. Smokey Cotton. That dusty gentleman is not noticed much around here; people know his old slang too well.

I may say, sir, that the statement made by Crowley and Crumney in the Telegram is truly correct, the writer being an eye-witness of the proceedings.

You may take your ease and roll yourself in your "Smokey Cotton," and sleep like a fly, for Hudson and Barrett are the men of our choice and they are sure of their election in the fall with an overwhelming majority.

Thanking you for space, I remain, Yours truly, ACTIVE.

Woman Accused of Murdering Children

Mme. Kusnezowa, who ran a "Baby Farm" near Archangel, Russia.

The most colossal murder trial in the annals of history will begin at Archangel, Russia, next month, when a woman "philanthropist," Mme. Kusnezowa, will be placed in the dock charged with murdering 1,012 children by poison.

The "ogress," as such she is termed in St. Petersburg, kept a "baby farm" outside the town, where illegitimate children were adopted for $25 and upward. Special prices were made for aristocratic mothers.

The fact that ever since the place was opened five years ago the death-rate among the infants had been tragically high (320 died in the year 1909) did not attract attention, as child mortality in this icy northern region is normally high. Eventually however, the police began to make inquiries. After exhuming a score of bodies in the cemetery adjoining the home they arrested the woman.

A remarkable feature of this wholesale massacre of innocents is that proper death certificates were given in each instance. Several of the children of course had died of natural causes, but the vast majority were found to have been poisoned. At one period there were 450 children in the home.

Search is being made for the doctor, while several of Mme. Kusnezowa's staff are under suspicion. The trial, in which the greatest interest is being taken, is expected to last several months, as each case will be taken more or less separately and the evidence of over 800 mothers will be heard.
