The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED.

CHAPTER IX.

"Not the least in the world," Ralph assured her, "especially as it is no business of mine, and I've a habit of forgetting anything that doesn't concern or interest me."

"I hope that doesn't apply to your friends," she murmured, shyly, with a sudden flush.

"Why, of course not," responded Ralph, laughing; "one's friends are always interesting, Miss Fanny, and one's gratitude for their kindness keeps them in remembrance."

"Then I mustn't forget you, Mr. Ralph," she said, with a laugh, but with a tender emphasis on the "you."

"The kindness is on your side," he said. "You're the first friend I've made in Lynne, you know."

Her face, all aglow with pleasure, was turned to him.

"Oh, how nicely you said that!" she breathed. "And I know you won't forget us, or—leave us for any new ones."

"Well, I've got to leave you now," said Ralph, lightly. "I have to keep a sharp look out in the western wood, for I suspect it has had some undesirable visitors lately."

She rose and went with him to the door and down the garden path.

"How sweet the stocks smell," said Ralph.

"Don't they! They always smell sweeter at night," she said. "Wait a minute." She ran across to a border and picked a fine blossom, and came back to him. "There is one for you." She raised the flower to her lips—there is only a little distance between the nose and the lips, you see—and held it up to him. "Let me put it in your coat for you—may I?" she asked, in a low voice.

"Thank you," said Ralph, with too calm a gratitude, for she sighed faintly as her hand went up to the lapel of his coat. She was very close to him, so close that he could feel her warm, sweet breath upon his cheek, and as she put the flower in its place and raised her face, with a murmured, "There!" its dainty firmness was so near to his lips that it would almost have been pardonable if they had traversed the few inches and met her half-parted ones upturned so invitingly to him.

But Ralph was not a susceptible man and—rara avis!—not one given to flirting, and it did not occur to him to kiss her.

"Thanks very much!" he said, with exasperating cheerfulness. "Jove! how sweet it smells! Good-night, Miss Fanny!"

She stood and watched him, all her heart in her eyes, as he strode away with his pipe in his mouth and his gun on his shoulder; then biting the lips which he had so coldly ignored she sighed heavily and went indoors.

It was nearly dawn before Ralph returned to the hut and to bed, but tired as he was he was not too tired to dream; and he dreamt that he was standing by the stream, that Mr. Talbot was thrashing him with a broken stick, and that Miss Veronica was looking on and laughing! It was no pleasant dream by any means, and Ralph awoke with a cry of rage and humiliation and in a wringing perspiration.

That night at dinner Veronica wore a heavy gold bracelet which covered the spot on her wrist, and she kept the old-fashioned ornament on until her maid had left her for the night. Then she took it off slowly and looked long and musingly at the little red spot on her slender, white wrist.

"Blood-poisoning is very bad, I imagine," she thought, dreamily. "It is fatal sometimes, very often, I think. I suppose he knew that or he wouldn't have presumed, wouldn't have dared to—to do what he did." Her face flushed with sudden shame. "It is very humiliating. A gamekeeper! He is the first man who has kissed—no, no, no!—whose lips have touched me!" Her eyes glowed angrily then suddenly anger died out. "I wonder whether there was any danger for him? If there was poison in the wound—to call so small a pinprick a wound: it is too ridiculous!—but if there was, and he happened to have a scratch on his lips: gamekeepers often get scratched by the briars and—and—and things—Oh, how idiotic I am! What has come to me! How angry he looked when I as good as ordered him out of the hall. His eyes blazed; he was going to say something. I was afraid, yes, I was actually trembling inside. Did he see it? No, no; I am too clever, too artful. I wonder what he thinks of me? Not difficult to guess. What could he think but that I am so foolishly proud and heartless a woman as to be incapable of gratitude, incapable of feeling anything but offended by a man for attempting to save my life. I suppose he did save me, or did he take advantage of—of the accident! Ah, no, that's unjust! I'm old enough to know an honest man when I see him, and this man is honest and genuine, I'll stake my life, the life he saved—Oh, what nonsense! there was no danger—but there might have been—Oh, Veronica, my dear Veronica, are you out of your senses, that you cannot forget the whole thing, that you must dwell upon your adventure—hateful word!—with a young gamekeeper as if it were of any consequence! Young; that's it. He is young and ridiculously good-looking; that's the reason—" Her face flushed with the shame that ran through her like a fire. "I wish Lord Lynborough had let him go! But even he, so rarely moved one way or the other, seemed impressed by the man, seemed to feel his influence. A gamekeeper with influence!" She laughed impatiently. "It is too absurd! I am growing morbid and—and sentimental. This life of slothful ease and luxury is sapping my usually strong and healthy mind. I'll take Sally for a thirty-mile spin to-morrow."

Sally was brought round soon after breakfast the next morning, and set off on a thirty-mile run which was to dispel the "morbid" vapours which possessed her mistress. The mare was young and fresh, and in the exuberance of her spirits, rose two or three times at starting; but Veronica's seat was well-nigh a perfect one, and she only laughed at Sally's preliminary antics, which subsided after her mistress had let her have her head across the park. When she had quite settled down for the time being, Veronica turned her into the wood. She had not gone very far through it before Sally pricked up her ears and started, and a moment afterwards Ralph came from amongst the trees to the edge of the narrow path.

He raised his cap, but Veronica, though—indeed, because—her heart gave a sudden bound at sight of him, kept her eyes fixed on Sally's ears

"I was a cow-boy once," he said, simply. "And you've only one rein, I see," he added, going up to the mare and patting her. Sally, who had been fidgeting, sniffed at the hand which he slid over her nose—an old cow-boy trick, one Ralph had practised on Burchett's dog—and then, apparently satisfied, stood still and nibbled contentedly at his sleeve. "Now, that's rather risky, and if I were your groom I wouldn't allow it."

"I always ride her on the snaffle," she said, curtly. "It is easier than a curb, and really more effective. If you knew anything about horses—" A smile which displayed itself for an instant in his eyes nettled her. "But I suppose, like most men, you think you do."

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

and ignored Ralph's salutation. But the moment she had passed him she felt annoyed with herself.

"Now, why couldn't I have just bowed!" she thought, irritably. "The man will think I am attaching importance to his—presumption!"

Ralph shrugged his shoulders as he looked after her, then went his way. Fate chose to amuse herself with them that day as it had done on the previous one; for as, an hour later he crossed the top of a spinney, he heard the thud of hoofs behind him and, looking round, saw the mare tearing along the meadow at a break-neck pace. If she had not actually bolted she had very nearly done so, and Ralph, as he glanced at the wood towards which the mare was making, could not help thinking of the peril that awaited her rider from overhanging boughs, and treacherous undergrowth. He stood, leaning on his gun, and waited.

Veronica had got all her weight on the bit, and succeeded in pulling up the mare on the edge of the wood, and so close to Ralph that he saw she was riding on a snaffle. The significant fact dispelled his reluctance to address her; indeed, he would have done so if she had been his mortal foe. He went up to her and said, respectfully but with the unembarrassed frankness which Veronica had found so trying:

"Forgive me, Miss Gresham, but is it wise to ride your horse on a snaffle? She's young and fresh, I see."

Veronica was hot with the struggle and not in the sweetest of tempers.

"I always ride her on the snaffle," she said, curtly. "It is easier than a curb, and really more effective. If you knew anything about horses—" A smile which displayed itself for an instant in his eyes nettled her.

"But I suppose, like most men, you think you do."

"You wouldn't allow—" repeated Veronica with a fine smile.

"No, I suppose he's responsible," said Ralph. "Two reins to a snaffle; but you'd better have a curb—you needn't use it—for a young and hot-headed mare like this: she's a beauty, oh, yes!—I admired her the other day—but she's a mare, and they're not always reliable. If she had bolted—she looked precious near it—and had carried you into the woods—Well, it would have been awkward."

"But I can pull her up; I did," said Veronica.

"This time, yes," he said, coolly; "but you might not always be able to do so; and your life is too precious—The blood rose to Veronica's face.

"Will you please let go of my rein?" she said, coolly.

"I beg your pardon," said Ralph, he colour coming into his tanned face, his eyes flashing with something like anger. "I meant any life was too precious to take such chances." His hand fell from the rein, and raising his cap he turned and struck into the wood.

He reached the hut, and was removing the cartridges from his gun—a precaution he always took—when he heard something rushing and tearing through the brake and was just in time to spring upon the mare, which was thundering affrightedly through the clearing, and catch her by the—of course, broken—rein.

"Just what I thought!" he said to himself. He tied the mare up to a tree, then, with a sinking heart, he followed her tracks, and presently came upon Veronica. She was seated on a mossy bank, with her head in her hand.

She had lost her hat and her glorious hair had come partly undone, one dark, glossy strand falling over her cheek. She started at the sound of his footsteps and tried to rise, but sank down again and looked up at him with a mixture of helplessness, displeasure, and defiance.

celebrated Norwegian Jigger

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jiggling they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

Kitchener Plans Egyptian Works.

New Dam on Blue Nile to be Beginning of Industrial Revival.
Cairo, June 2.—While waiting for the House of Commons to pass the Sudanian bill, further details have transpired as to what Lord Kitchener intends to do with the money thus raised. It seems that the Blue Nile dam contemplated is only the beginning of a vast scheme for the irrigation of the entire Nile Valley. Although Lord Kitchener's successors in office, Lord Cromer and the late Sir Eldon Gorst, did much for Egypt in the first in maintaining British authority and the second by pacifying the natives, it is believed that the present British plenipotentiary is the real constructive genius of the country.
Even without the loan Lord Kitchener has already begun work on the dam in the way of collecting material and preparing it for expert workmen. The site of the new dam is said to be excellently chosen, for although it is only proposed to construct a dam for the moment, it will always be possible to build a reservoir at a later date, should the amount of water—and there is the difficulty—be obtainable.

The Blue Nile draws its water from Lake Tsana, in Abyssinia, and to secure a full supply, and to carry out the necessary works at the lake itself, an understanding with Abyssinia would be vital, and this might naturally, as entering into the sphere of politics, not easily obtainable. At present the actual water supply is probably not more than sufficient, with the erection of a dam, such as suggested, to irrigate more than 650,000 to 750,000 acres. A start of the work will only be made with half a million acres, but should later on the need arise the same dam will suffice—or should suffice—to irrigate the extra amount.

There will still remain much land which could profitably be brought under cultivation, and on which excellent cotton crops should be grown. The amount is estimated at 2,500,000 to 4,500,000 acres more. If it were ever desirable to build this, it would be vital to build a reservoir, and while the configuration of the country lends itself to this, there is certainly not enough water to fill it, unless the whole question of the supply were taken in hand. Such a scheme would involve the outlay of millions, and take years to carry out. But it may well come about.
The present scheme should be finished in about three to four years. It will consist of a dam capable of holding up all the necessary water, and of the construction of a canal as a take-off. The "spoil" from this will be thrown well back on both sides, so that it will be possible at a later date to widen the canal should this be thought desirable.

The chief material used will be, of course, stone, of which there is an ample supply in the country, and the workmen, apart from the skilled labor, which will be Italian, will be all procured locally. At present Lord Kitchener is employing a good deal of convict labor, not because it is cheap but because the work affords an opportunity of establishing a useful convict settlement.

Under the present plan the government should make about 20 per cent. of their capital expenditure by their annual water charges, though it is a mistake to suppose as many do, that the land thus irrigated will all belong to the state. As a matter of fact much is owned by the natives, some of whom have tilled deeds going back hundreds of years, while there also exist tribal rights which have to be taken into consideration. It is well known that Lancashire is taking the keenest interest in this land development, but Lancashire may as well recollect that it does not follow because more cotton will be grown that therefore the County Palatine supply will be increased. There is no doubt but that it has been established in the Egyptian cotton market, and in recent time the Japanese have appeared and are buying for export to the Far East, and while for the moment their aggregate purchases may not be very large, they are growing steadily every year and sooner or later will prove a factor which must be taken into account.

The next great scheme to be undertaken will be in Egypt, where a dam is to be built on the White Nile, about sixty miles above Khartoum.

on, so it is understood, a rock bottom. The scheme is now being worked out by the Egyptian authorities, but all depends on finance, and there having been a very low Nile this year, with an obvious effect on revenue, it is impossible to expect that any more will be made for some little time, the more so as Egypt has to construct out of revenue and has no assistance from the British government.
In the meantime the work of draining the area in the Delta is continuing with much success, and this should be finished in two or three years, well in time for the start of the operations on the White Nile. The cost of the draining is being defrayed out of revenue. It should not be supposed that this is all—or even for the most part—reclaimed land; it is practically more or less swamp, only fit for rice-growing, whereas when the scheme is complete it will be able to raise cotton. Directly and indirectly about 1,000,000 acres will be affected by this improvement.

According to a cable received in the city yesterday Mr. John Fox, of this city, a student at Oriel College, Oxford, has passed his examination satisfactorily, and will be "capped" tomorrow. Mr. Fox after a brilliant career at St. Bonaventure's during which term he won the Jubilee Scholarship in 1910, and was awarded the Rhodes Scholarship in 1911, began his course at Oxford in the Law Schools, but feeling that his inclinations did not lie in that channel he took up Economics with a view to enter the journalistic field. OLD AT TWENTY

Return of Youth with Proper Food.
Many persons who eat plenty never seem to be properly nourished. That's because the food is not digested and absorbed. Much that is eaten is never taken up by the system as real food, and so the tissues simply starve and the individual may, as in a recent case, look and feel old in what should be the bloom of life.

"At twenty I was prematurely old. The health and vigor and brightness of youth had been, as it seemed, stolen from me. I went to work in the morning with slow steps and a dull head.

"My work through the day was unsatisfactory for my breakfast lay in my stomach like a hard lump. I was peevish and the gas in my stomach was very annoying. After supper I usually went to bed to toss half the night from sheer nervousness.

"This was all from indigestion—caused by wrong eating.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts and I cannot describe the full benefits received from the food. It gave me back my health. It had completely restored good digestion and my ailments have disappeared. I steadily improved and am now strong and in perfect health.

Diocesan Synod.

The Twenty-first Session of the Diocesan Synod of Newfoundland met last night in the Synod Hall, the Rt. Rev. Llewellyn Jones, the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, being President.

The session opened as usual with the singing of the Veni Creator, the recitation of the Apostles' Creed and the Prayers.
The first business of the session was the election of Secretaries. On motion of Rev. Canon Smith, seconded by Rev. Canon Noel, the Rev. Canon Bolt was re-elected Clerical Secretary. Sir W. H. Horwood moved and Mr. H. W. LeMessurier seconded, that the Hon. Robert Watson be elected Lay Secretary. This motion was carried.

The auditors, Rev. J. Brinton and Mr. H. W. LeMessurier were then re-elected.

The Bishop nominated to act as reporters during this session, Rev. T. W. Upward, Rev. G. H. Maidment, Mr. W. R. Stirling and Mr. R. Dowden. The Lord Bishop then delivered his Charge. In dignified and impressively sympathetic language, he referred to the various recent "Marine Disasters." No synopsis could do it justice; we therefore quote it in full:—

"The thought which has been uppermost in our minds during the past spring, the sadly familiar phrase on every lip, has been 'Marine Disasters,' and of these our Colony has surely borne a heavy share. Newfoundland has been visited with the greatest calamity as regards loss of life, that it has ever known within the memory of man, and for the sacrifice of between two and three hundred of our brave seafarers we are mourning to-day. The appeal which has gone forth on behalf of the bereaved ones—parents, wives, little children, whose breadwinners have been so suddenly snatched from them, has evoked a wonderful outburst of sympathy, and has met with a generous, I might almost say, a super-abundant response. Let us take comfort in the thought that the very greatness of the grief which gathers the sympathy of so many, has in itself an exalting, elevating, transfiguring consequence. The grief of our whole people will invest the names of those who have gone down to their death with a tragic solemnity which, if not the best balm to the broken heart, yet has, in spite of ourselves, a healing, soothing, invigorating effect. In view of the fact that in our Colonial history we are only too familiar with ocean tragedies of all kinds, great and small, that year by year too many of our hardy fishermen 'go down to the sea in ships,' but return to their homes no more, it was wisely resolved at the recent public meeting to establish a 'Permanent Fund for the relief of sufferers from Marine Disasters in Newfoundland, and to organize branch committees throughout the island, to collect funds from year to year with this object in view, and to seek such charter from the Legislature of the Colony as may be deemed necessary or advisable."
His Lordship next proceeded to inform the Synod of the history and nature of former and more recent overtures from the Church of England in Canada to our own Diocese. He reviewed the history of the events in Canadian Church history from 1890 to 1912, which resulted in the appointment of the committee to consider the advisability of the formation of a "Maritime Province." It was then decided to send a delegation to the Synod of Newfoundland in order to place the matter before that body. Owing to unforeseen circumstances that delegation will not now visit the Synod, and discussion upon the question will be postponed. It is expected that further steps in the matter will be taken when the General Synod of the Canadian Church meets in September. The Bishop then reviewed the Episcopal work for the past two years, dwelling especially upon the Rite of Confirmation.
A very touching part of the Charge was that in which the losses by death to the Synod and Church were referred. In eloquent and sympathetic language, His Lordship dealt with the lives and work of each of the following who had died during the last two years:
George Henry Bishop, Priest, Canon of the Cathedral;
William Pilot, Priest, Canon of the Cathedral, Superintendent of Education for the Church of England;
Willis Guman Mosdell, Priest;
Charles Stewart Pinsent, Lay Secretary of the Diocesan Synod.
After reviewing the further work of the Diocese during the past two years, the Bishop referred to the Kykuyu incident. "That," he said, "was subjective, and he would not give an opinion thereon," but with the larger question of Re-union, he dealt at some length. Here, again, a full quotation will only do justice to the subject:—
"My brothers, there is no doubt a larger question and a grander hope which is present to many of our minds, and very dear to our hearts—I mean the re-union of Christendom. It is the hope of bringing together under the banner of 'one common Lord, the divided forces which in more than 200 religious communities are fighting independently against the powers of evil, apart from our own branch of the Holy Catholic Church. There is no hope or desire in this lower world that is nearer to my own heart than that of Home Re-union, but it is a matter requiring the utmost caution, for it is one in which the best of us may be misled by the generous impulses of the heart. There are certain conditions which, to my mind, are essential in dealing with this question. First of all, and above all, we must be absolutely loyal to our common Lord and His Truth. He is the Head, even Christ, from whom the whole body fitsly joined together, and we may not renounce His Divine order for any other organization nor break down the battlements of the City of God, of which He has laid the foundation by the hands of the wise master builders of the Apostolic Church. It would not be large hearted charity, but culpable disloyalty, if we were to surrender or even to extenuate lightly the Apostolic Order of the Catholic Church, the quod semper, quod ubique, quod ab omnibus, of the first fifteen centuries of the Church of Christ. But further, we must take our stand upon the great creeds of the undivided church without addition, and without diminution. On these terms and with these concessions we may go forth with loving hearts and open arms to meet those who are divided from us, to remove, if possible, any needless stumbling blocks which may lie in their way; to amend and purify whatever is amiss in ourselves; and then to leave the issue in the hands of Him who prayed that His Church might be one."

Bread Cake AND Pastry

The Bishop then concluded his Charge.
Ordinary business being proceeded with, His Lordship read an invitation from His Excellency the Governor, Sir Walter Davidson, and Lady Davidson, to an "At Home" at Government House. This was accepted for Monday, June 29th.

Rev. Canon White, on behalf of the Synod, moved His Lordship's permission, to have the Charge printed and incorporated with the Journal of the Session. The permission was given. Canon Bolt gave notice of a Bill to amend Chapter XVIII of the Constitution and Rules of the Synod, and explained the new procedure in regard to the Synod's Committees' reports.

The Rev. Frank Smart gave notice of a Bill to amend Chapter XVII of the Constitution and Rules of the Synod. The Synod then adjourned and the Bishop pronounced the Benediction.

The Bishop's Address.

In his opening address to the Diocesan Synod last night, the Bishop of Newfoundland paid an eloquent tribute to those who had responded to the call for help of the dependents of the brave seafarers who had met misfortune or death on the icefields. His Lordship also endorsed the determination of the public meeting held after news of the sealing disaster had been received that there should be established a Permanent Marine Fund and that arrangements should be made to collect subscriptions every year. Besides telling the story in clear language of the efforts to bring the diocese of Newfoundland within the body of the Canadian Church His Lordship dwelt thoughtfully on the problems of the Missionary field, and made reference to the changes which had come over the spirit of the times. He told of the desire for concerted action among the sister churches, commended the movement which is to be inaugurated next month, and emphasized the value of the counsel of a worker like Dr. Mott, who has had abundant opportunity of examining missionary effort from the whole world point of view. The Bishop also dwelt on the Re-union of Christendom in a thoughtful and sympathetic vein. The lines he laid down may be followed in the more extended report of his address. In brief, he laid down the principles of fidelity in matters essential, conciliation in matters doubtful, and charitable consideration in all matters.

This morning the Methodist Conference opened in the city, and among the first business taken up was the election of the President for the ensuing year.
The Rev. F. R. Matthews, B.A., son of the late Rev. S. Matthews, was elected. He has been Secretary of the Conference for several years and is probably one of the youngest Presidents ever elected by the Conference. He has won golden opinions while in charge of Wesley Church and proceeds shortly to Carbonear to take charge of the Circuit there. We con-

A little patted on the face, hands and lips at night will take away all soreness, roughness, and redness, and go far to prevent or correct tan and sunburn. Every year a larger number of people use this remarkable emollient, and always with the same success in relieving the unpleasant effects on the skin of summer suns. Price 25 cents a pot.

Quebec, June 23.
The result of the investigations of Edward Cossboom, the New York diver, who sacrificed his life to determine the present position and condition of the Empress of Ireland, at the bottom of the St. Lawrence River, were laid before the Dominion Wreck Commission this morning by Mr. Weatherspoon, who was dressed in deep mourning, out of respect to his comrade, who died after a fall from the slippery side of the Empress, while attempting to attach a mooring chain to her. He told of the diver's exploits with simple but dramatic cheerfulness. His evidence establishes for the first time the exact position of the wreck, that is lying pointing northeast, with her rigging toward the shore. Mr. Haight, of counsel for the Stordard, claimed that this heading agrees substantially with the evidence of the collier's officers as to the pointing of the ship when she ran across her bows. As small, K.C., for the C.P.R., drew out answers from Weatherspoon, that the current under the surface, which was not the same as on the top of the river, at the point where the vessel went down, may have changed her direction. Haight asked Capt. Walsh, Marine Superintendent of the C.P.R., a number of questions as to the chief qualifications an officer must possess to secure promotion in the marine service of the Company, and seemed to hint that ability to make rapid voyages was the chief test. Captain Walsh denied this, and pointed out that most careful instructions are given to captains not to take risks.

LONDON, June 23.
In introducing the amending bill, the Marquis of Creve dwelt much on the religious difficulties surrounding the question in Ulster, but while he admitted the necessity of some form of exclusion for those who deemed themselves affected by the Home Rule Bill, he contended that exclusion of the entire Province of Ulster would involve great injustice. The Government, consequently, he said, had reiterated in the Amending Bill Premier Asquith's proposal of exclusion by counties from the operation of the Home Rule measure. The Marquis of Lansdowne said he was profoundly disappointed at the fact that the Bill merely embodied proposals which had already been rejected. He asserted that it was shameful and undignified for the Government to present an unaccepted Bill, with an open invitation, to the Opposition to give its assistance in correcting it into a workable measure that would avoid civil war. The Government, he declared, was perfectly aware that the Amending Bill was not sufficient for that purpose. He expressed relief that the Government had at least realized the necessity of making some effort to avert the imminent danger. He wished he could add that its contribution today had met the need for fundamental changes in the Irish Home Rule Bill which alone could make it workable. The bill was then read for a first time, but it is understood that extensive changes are to be made by the Unionist majority in the Lords, when it reaches the Committee stage, and that afterwards there will be an opportunity for compromise and reconciliation.

HAMBURG, June 23.
The North German Lloyd liner Konigin Louise, and the German steamer Cobra were in collision today. The Konigin Louise had her bow smashed and began shipping water so rapidly that her passengers were taken off and landed. The prow of the liner caught the Cobra amidships. She was badly damaged above and below the low water line. The Konigin Louise hailed from Bremen, and her tonnage is 6,790.

NEW YORK, June 23.
Fifty men were buried alive today when planking over the top of an excavation near Fourth Avenue. The subway between 7th and 4th Avenue, Brooklyn, collapsed. Within half an hour after rescue work commenced, three bodies were taken out mortally injured. The cave-in extended for half a block, and was the worst in the history of subway construction in Greater New York.

HONG KONG, June 23.
Extensive areas in the provinces of Kwangsi and Kantonang, have been inundated as a result of the flooding of the West River, which has risen seventy feet beyond its banks. The devastation by the floods has involved thousands of lives and the damage to property and crops is estimated at more than $5,000,000.

WASHINGTON, June 23.
Hope for the restoration of peace in Mexico, through diplomacy, was rekindled in administration circles today by the outlook that the Constitutionalists would send delegates to confer with members of the Huertista mission, from whom they have long held aloof.

C. E. I. Defeat Feildans in Fast And Exciting Game.

The C. E. I. defeated the Feildans in last night's football match by a score of 3 goals to 1, after one of the finest exhibitions witnessed on St. George's Field for some time past.

The game opened at 7.05 p.m. with the Feildans defending the western goal. From the start both teams put on a spurt which called forth their mettle. After five minutes of exciting play, during which laurels were evenly divided, C. Rendell, of the Feildans, notched up No. 1 for his team.

Upon the ball being again brought into play enthusiasm ran high, and for a time the excitement was intense. Repeated attempts at scoring were made by the C. E. I., but the Feildans put up a strong defence, and many opportunities were lost by wide and erratic shooting. About ten minutes before half time Max Churchill, of the C. E. I., drew first blood for his team, and during the remainder of the first half, play seemed in favor of the C. E. I., though when the whistle sounded the teams stood with equal honours.

SECOND HALF.
Following the breathing space a good exhibition of football was put up, both teams fighting hard to turn the tables, but fate seemed to be in favor of the C. E. I. as the Feildans failed to get past centre field, while the C. E. I. kept the ball within the danger zone, and Lush was called upon many times to save. After ten minutes play Bartlett sent in No. 2 for the C. E. I. which caused wildest enthusiasm amongst the fans. Several corners were given by the Feildans, but their excellent defence kept the leather from the twines.

Shortly before full time Nix Hunt, of the C. E. I., landed No. 3 for his team, with one of the prettiest drop shots seen for the season.

Play was for the most part pretty evenly divided during the remainder of the game, and no further scoring was done. When the final whistle blew the score stood 3 to 1 in favour of the C. E. I.

The game was witnessed by a large number of spectators, and the evening was all that could be desired.

Mr. W. J. Higgins acted as referee, and the personnel of the teams was as follows:—

C. E. I.—Marshall goal; Hussey, Ellis, backs; L. Stick, Drover, Fox, halves; Bartlett, Jup, R. Stick, Hunt and Evans, forwards.

FEILDANS—Lush, goal; F. Rendell, Strang, backs; Strong, Tait, Ryall, halves; Winter, C. Rendell, Pinsent, E. Rendell, Trebble, forwards.

Amendments to B. N. A. Act.

An address will be presented to the Imperial Parliament praying that it give consent to amendments to the British North America Act which will provide for a new western senatorial division, having twenty-four members for the four western provinces.

By the B.N.A. Act of 1867 three senatorial divisions were formed, the maritime group with twenty-four members, Quebec with twenty-four, and Ontario with twenty-four. When the western provinces were formed they were given senatorial representation but no new group was formed. It is now proposed to amend the B.N.A. Act so as to create this new division, making four groups in all, each with 24 members, or a total of ninety-six.

An amendment is also asked to the B.N.A. Act increasing the number of senators the governor-general may add to the senate as provided by section twenty-six of the B.N.A. Act from three or six to four or eight, representing equally the four divisions of Canada. The total number of senators is limited to 104. This increase is one for emergency as already provided by the Act.

It is proposed to still leave room for the possible entrance of Newfoundland as provided by a section in the B.N.A. Act, but there is an amendment to increase its representation in case of its admission, from four members as would now be possible, to six.

There is a further amendment asked for which provides that the minimum number of members of Commons province in the House of Commons shall be the same as the senatorial representation. This will be to meet the case of Prince Edward Island which at present has four senators but under the new redistribution bill is entitled to only three members. If this amendment is passed, Prince Edward Island will be entitled to an increase to four representatives.

Yale Beats Harvard by Narrow Margin.

New London, Conn., June 19.—By the narrow margin of four inches, Yale won the varsity four mile crew race on the James river, from Harvard, here late this afternoon after a struggle which will stand out as one of the greatest in the rowing history of the two universities.

Yale led from the start, though there was never more than three quarters of a boat's length between the two crews.

Towards the end, the crimson pulled up on even terms with the Blues, and it was impossible for spectators to tell which crew had won, so close was the contest at the finish.

The time was: Yale, 21-8; Harvard, 21-6-5.

Sleeves are to be of the bishop, dolman and puffed varieties.

A Wonderful Drama

In Three Reels at the Crescent.

By special request the management of the Crescent Picture Palace will present to-day and to-morrow the historic southern drama, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" one of the greatest three reel films of the day. Uncle Tom's Cabin was the story that filled the hearts of Americans and was the principal cause of the civil war. The scenes showing the flight across the drift ice; the rescue of Eva by Uncle Tom and the tricks of Topsy are cleverly acted and well illustrated. A new comedy for the holiday bill: "His Royal Pants," a Nestor triumph, with Ramona Langley, Miss Louise Arkandy is winning the crowd by her violin selections and appropriate songs.

On Friday and Saturday the stirring two reel feature: "Red Margaret, Moonshiner."

Cod Plentiful at Grey Islands.

From messages received in the city from Grey Islands yesterday we learn that codfish is plentiful in that locality, and that the fishermen were doing good work.

F. B. Tuff, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney, Capt. Percy, E. Cohen, W. Way, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton and child, A. F. Saunders, R. R. Bowring, S. Robins, Miss Cluett and several in steerage.

During a thunder and lightning storm the other day, a golfer was playing at Somerville, N. J., with one of the new steel-handled clubs in his hand. The man was L. L. Miller, and he was about to address his ball when he felt a tingling sensation all over, and he suddenly realized that he was lying on his back gazing skyward with his club some distance away. The caddy, Joseph Clarke, was badly stunned, as well as the companions of the golfer, and the bag full of clubs seemed to have been jerked violently from the shoulder of the caddy and the implements scattered in all directions. The players were none the worse for their experience.

An Enthralling Drama.

AT THE NICKEL.
Nickel patrons should not fail to see to-day's entertainment, for a most attractive holiday programme has been arranged. The feature film is a wonderful piece of photography entitled "The Secret Formula." It is different to all other subjects presented in St. John's before. There are no impossible situations in it, but it is full of exciting episodes, while the scenes are enthralling. It is certain to afford the greatest interest to all who see it. The other pictures are "Love that Turned," "Sightseeing in Japan," and "Rings at the Cabaret." Friday "The Power of Conscience" will be presented. The Nickel Theatre is the popular resort on half-holidays, and there promises to be a large attendance to-day.

Last Night's Concert

The concert held at the Presbyterian Hall last night, under the auspices of the ladies of the S.P.A., was fairly attended. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, piano-forte and violin solos. The whistling solo by Mrs. Stranger, and the ventriloquism by Mr. Wheeler were particularly features of the evening's entertainment, and were thoroughly enjoyed. The following ladies and gentlemen took part: Misses Russell, Gosling (2), Job, Johnson, Keegan, Colton; Mesdames Grieve and Stranger; Messrs. R. Steele, W. D. Watson and F. R. Emerson. The proceeds of the entertainment will be used in connection with the Work Horse Parade to be held shortly.

Highlanders' Ball.

The Newfoundland Highlanders' annual ball will take place in the British Hall, on Wednesday next, July 1st. The committee in charge have spared no pains to make this popular event a success. An excellent programme of dance music is being prepared by the C. L. B. Band, and it is expected that the affair will far surpass anything of its kind ever held in the city. The Highlanders will hold their annual "At Home" on Friday, July 3rd.

The Regatta.

There will be a meeting of the Regatta Committee at Wood's West End Restaurant on Friday next at 8 p.m. The work of the collectors will be arranged, and other matters will be finalized.

The C.C.C. practice boats will likely be placed on the Lake to-day, when some of the intending crews will try a spin.

King of the Maoris Visit King George.

London, June 17.—Te Rata, King of the Maoris, aboriginals of New Zealand, has arrived in England to lay before King George, the grievance of his people who is known among the natives as the "Great White Father."

Some 75 years ago the Maoris under the treaty of Waitangi, which was granted by over 500 chiefs, ceded sovereignty to Queen Victoria, but reserved to themselves and their tribes territorial rights. The treaty, the natives declare, has been broken, especially in regard to Maori lands.

The king, Te Rata, and two chiefs in their native costumes first laid the matter before Lewis Harcourt, Colonial Secretary, who in turn introduced them to the King. Of course His Majesty, who the natives believe to be all powerful, can do nothing. The Government of the Dominion of New Zealand is supreme in the matter, and for either the King or the Imperial Government to interfere, would raise in the Dominion one of those incidents which are already too frequent between the Home authorities and the self-governing Dominions.

Parnell as a Cambridge Undergraduate.

STORIES OF THE GREAT IRISH LEADER—RELATED BY ONE WHO KNEW HIM.

No more complex character has ever played a part in the political life of this country than Charles Stewart Parnell, the Great Irish Leader, the story of whose romantic love and tragic downfall is so sensationally revealed in the book which is the talk of the hour.

That the greatest bond of love, sympathy, and understanding existed between Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea, who became his wife after her divorce, no one who reads her Reminiscences can doubt. And yet to his friends and followers, who regarded him as the mercurial King of Ireland, and who were ready to do anything and everything at his bidding, he was a puzzle, and at times their despair. He fascinated them with his fiery eloquence and enthusiasm while repelling them with his arrogant and haughty manners.

A Piquant Revelation.

Even Mrs. Parnell herself admits that the Irish leader treated his followers at times in the most contemptuous manner. One of the most poignant passages in her book relates how more than once, when he was due to attend a meeting in Ireland, he missed his train and his meeting to sit with her, but he never apologized for his non-attendance, saying:

"You do not learn the ethics of knighthood, Queenie" (his pet name for his wife). "Never explain, never apologize," adding, with his rare laugh, "I could never have kept my rattle together if I were not above the human weakness of apology. It is a strange thing I found out early in political life. They think I am much more wonderful when I do nothing than when I am working hard."

Parnell a Lazy Man.

Not very pleasant reading, perhaps, for the men who fought so strenuously under his banner; but his remarks on that occasion simply bear out the statement that at times Parnell was really lazy, although when the fit seized him he could work as no man worked.

His tutor, Mr. Patrick, at Magdalene College, Cambridge, where Parnell went after being educated at Yeovil under private masters, has left it on record that Parnell was one of the ablest men at Cambridge in his time, but, alas! one of the laziest. It is said that he never passed nor tried to pass an examination.

Further amazing revelations regarding Parnell's early life are made in an article which reaches us from one who knew him and his associates intimately when he entered Magdalene College in 1865. This writer relates that six members of the college, including Parnell, formed themselves into a sporting club. They pledged themselves not to attend a single lecture, not to keep chapel except on Sundays, and during matins they frequently played pitch and toss for sovereigns.

This club was mainly instrumental in the attack on the mayor's house when a band of undergraduates pulled down the railings and broke nearly every pane of glass in the windows in consequence of a speech against the Varsity made by the mayor at the opening of the New Corn Exchange.

From which it will be gathered that

Parnell was a bit of a pickle. He was asked to leave the Varsity for knocking down a farmer and dislodging five of his teeth, because the farmer had accused him of being drunk.

As An Auctioneer.

The college authorities took notice of this officially, according to our informant, and Parnell was requested to take his name off the books. He was told by his tutor, however, that he might come up again next term, an invitation which Parnell did not accept. On going down he sold his wine and other effects, and was his own auctioneer.

It would seem, however, that it was with considerable misgiving that Parnell's mother, who was a daughter of Admiral Charles Stewart, of the United States Navy, allowed her son to go to Cambridge; for when he entered the college she came up with him and warned the then master, the Hon. L. Neville, that "Charlie was subject to somnambulism." The consequence was that the courts of Magdalene were carefully watched at night by the porters during Parnell's first term.

At Magdalene, however, the future Irish leader indulged in no sleep-walking feats, and while he certainly did not distinguish himself in the scholastic sense, he carried quite a reputation among the "sports" of the college.

Such little use did Parnell make of his educational opportunities that his knowledge of literature practically amounted to nothing, while at the beginning of his career he could scarcely make a speech. The Right Hon. Robert Furuharson, talking of Parnell in his reminiscences, says: "He was no orator in the ordinary sense of the term, and when he came into the House, I am told that he could hardly frame twenty consecutive words. But by dint of increasing practice he at last gained a power of expressing his ideas in a very clear and even forcible form."

His Engineering Tastes.

As a matter of fact, Parnell spent most of his time at Cambridge among the stables in the "Pickering Yard," where at one time a Magdalene aristocrat stabled as many as fifteen horses. So whenever Parnell was not on the river, or in the cricket fields, or riding with the drag, he was to be found in the hotel-yard.

Parnell had very few friends at Cambridge, for he could be distinctly unsocial at times, and when in one of his melancholy frames of mind he appears to have shut himself away in his rooms and devoted himself chiefly to mechanics and engineering.

The famous Irish leader was an able metallurgist and assayer. A story told by Mr. Henniker-Heaton not only illustrates Parnell's knowledge in this direction, but provides an example of his amazing power of being able, during the most exciting and strenuous political times, to detach his mind absolutely from the momentous questions which were exciting the House.

Mr. Henniker-Heaton's Story.

It was at the time when, accused of writing the famous Pigott letters, Parnell with fury and indignation had denounced them in the House of Commons as "An infamous forgery." Afterwards he walked into the lobby and engaged Mr. Heaton in earnest conversation. Everybody thought he was talking of the actual political event then stirring men's minds.

"This," says Mr. Heaton, "is what he said to me:

"I have just read in the afternoon paper that a mountain of gold has been discovered in Western Australia, and that some tons of the specimens have been sent home to you."

"I replied that it was true, and that I had in my locker in the House some of the crushed specimens. We proceeded to get them, and I gave him about a wineglassful of the crushing."

"He took it away with him, and to the bewilderment of his party, no one saw him for a week, and very few indeed knew his address. On that day week, almost at the same hour, he again appeared in the lobby. Walking up to me, he said, smilingly:

"I have analyzed the specimens, and they go thirty-two ounces of gold to the ton."

"I said he was wrong. He then took from his pocket a scrap of paper and read:

"Twenty-seven ounces of gold and five ounces of silver."

"I replied that it was indeed remarkable, for it exactly coincided with the analysis of Messrs. Johnson, Matthey and Co., the famous metallurgists. Parnell then showed me the small pin's point of gold he had obtained. I expressed surprise at his work. He said:

"The fact is, I take an interest in the matter. I have a small workshop to test the minerals in the mountains of Wicklow, some portion of which I own."

"The astonishing thing is that while his hundreds of thousands of adherents were fulminating against the 'Times,' he was quietly working away testing minerals in his laboratory."

Why He Became a Nationalist.

Referring again to Parnell and Cambridge, it is a fact not generally known that it was while an undergraduate that Parnell changed from an aristocratic Tory to an ardent Nationalist. Parnell belonged to an old Cheshire family of great Tory traditions, but when the three Irishmen Allen, Gould and Larkin, were executed in Manchester for the murder of Police-Sergeant Brett, on the occasion of the rescue of the two Fenians, Kelly and Deasy, the affair made such an impression upon his mind that he decided to devote whatever abilities he had to the Nationalist cause.

Parnell, of course, was not the only one whose views and opinions were affected by this terrible episode, for thousands of people regarded the three men as martyrs, the execution and funeral being followed by memorial services which attracted people from all over the country, and the historical phrase, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church," has never received a more striking fulfillment than in this dramatic change in the career of Charles Stewart Parnell.

Many women are choosing crepe de chine, instead of fine cottons, for their underclothes; it is said to be very durable.

Time and Worry.

Time and Worry met one day Travelling along the way. "I said Time, 'am greater far With my people than you are.' Worry smiled and said 'it's true You get blamed for much I do.'"

"You go lightly on your way, Gently brushing hair with gray, Wrinkles now and then you place In some sweet and loving face, But you're blamed for many a line And a furrow that are mine."

"You," said Time, "make people old Long before my years are told; I would keep folks young but you Withering youth in such a way, They could quickly bid you go. I take years to furrow cheeks, You accomplish it in weeks."

"Yes," said Worry, that is true, Rapidly my work I do; You are patient, kind and slow, Quickly to my work I go; Many a sturdy back I've bent Long before its strength was spent."

"Why," asked Father Time, "do men Let you keep them company then? Why are you allowed to stay Withering youth in such a way, They could quickly bid you go." Worry answered: "I don't know."

Great Cases of Great Detectives.

This is a story which is the very melodrama of tragedy, a story from which there is scarcely any element of horror, bloodiness, and brutality lacking. It is, in fact, the story of a crime, for one can hardly call the leading actor in the crime related below a human being.

The story begins with the insertion of the following advertisement in several morning newspapers, dated November 7th, 1902:

"Grocery—General and Provision; genuine business for disposal; doing £5 to £10 weekly; has done £16; price £50, all at or close offer.—22, Wyndham Road, Camberwell."

The advertiser was a man named Darby, but it was not until over three weeks later that the shop changed hands.

On the afternoon of December 1st, a woman called at the shop in Wyndham Road to see about some Christmas gifts she had ordered. She knew Mr. and Mrs. Darby very well, so she was surprised to see a hump-backed man and his wife behind the counter in their place, for she had not heard the shop had been definitely sold.

"Where is Mr. Darby?" she asked. "Oh, they've gone, and we are managing the business for a Mr. Edwards, who has bought the shop," replied the woman behind the counter.

The man Edwards seemed to be very enterprising or very foolish, for though business at Camberwell did not go on as satisfactorily as he could have wished, he found him shortly afterwards answering another advertisement of a business for sale.

Looked Like a Roll of Music. On the 15th of the month he arranged to conclude the purchase of a grocery business from a Mr. Garland, a grocer who had a shop at Victoria Park.

"Does anyone help you?" asked Edwards of the grocer, as he was looking through the latter's books in the back room.

"Only my wife. We don't keep an assistant of any sort," replied Garland.

A sudden fierce gleam of satisfaction lighted up Edward's eyes, to die away almost immediately as he asked what Mr. Garland wanted for his business.

"Eighty pounds," replied the grocer.

asking Garland to call at 89 Church Road, Leyton, where he lived, and complete the deal.

The grocer called there about noon on the appointed day. Edwards opened the door, and asked him to step in the front room, where they could talk things over quietly. In his hand he carried all the time the two were discussing the price of the shop, what appeared to be a roll of music done up in a newspaper.

"Well," said Garland, finally, as the other at last agreed upon the purchase money, "let's go along to the estate agents and settle it."

The two men were in the hall when Edwards suddenly raised the "music roll" and struck Garland a terrific blow on the head with it, felling him to the ground.

"I felt I was being murdered," said the grocer in his evidence at the trial of Edwards, "and though he continued to aim bows at my head I managed to struggle to the door and smash one of the glass panels, shouting all the time for help."

A Carman Came to the Rescue. Luckily, a passing carman overheard Garland's cries, and raised the alarm. In a few minutes the police were on the scene, and Edwards was formally charged with assault. No one at the moment dreamt of the horrifying revelations which were shortly to be made, and that the charge of assault was quickly to be changed into one of murder.

Here it may be mentioned that it is extraordinary that Garland escaped with his life. There was one great wound in his head, six inches in length and six other smaller wounds, and all inflicted from behind.

When the roll of paper with which the unfortunate man had been attacked, and now all stained with his blood, came to be unrolled, it was found to contain a window sash weight. That sash weight was destined to play a leading part in bringing one of the most callous murderers of modern times to his well-deserved fate on the scaffold.

When Garland's assailant was searched a number of papers on him led the police to believe that his real name was Darby. Several of the letters found in his pockets gave the address of the grocer's shop at Camberwell, and there a policeman was sent to make a few further inquiries.

The result of these was the calling in of Detective Inspector Collins, of Scotland Yard, for it transpired that

Mr. and Mrs. Darby and their little baby had been missing since December 1st, nearly a month.

A search of the grocer's shop left little doubt that the happy little family had been brutally murdered, though their bodies were missing.

Bloodstains on the Ceiling. One of the first things discovered by the detective was a sash weight, weighing about five pounds, and covered with blood and hair. This sash weight was found in the first floor room over the shop, the living room. This was significant, for it was with a similar sash weight that Garland had been nearly murdered.

Detective Collins soon had further evidence in his hands as to the fate of the Darbys, for the two rooms above the little grocer's shop almost told their own story, a story written large in letters of red.

From the bloodstains in one of these rooms he and Dr. Luff, the Home Office expert, were able to reconstruct the dreadful crime almost as though they had been present when it happened.

It was probable that at the time Mrs. Darby was sitting near the fire when the murderer first struck her, the terrific force of the blow was shown by the fact that there were bloodstains not only on the hearth, but on the ceiling above.

Evidently then she staggered to the window to call for help, and in doing so passed a book-case, and there the murderer must have struck her again, for the book-case was splattered with blood.

As she reached the window he must have hit her for a third time, for two panes of glass in the window were blood-stained. It was then Mrs. Darby dropped to the floor, dying. The floor there was stained with blood, which had soaked through to the ceiling below.

Bloodstains on the landing told the medical expert and the detective where the grocer himself had been first attacked, while probably coming upstairs to protect his wife, who had without a doubt screamed for help. The murderer had tried hard to obliterate all traces of his work, for many of the bloodstains had been covered with ink, while in one of the rooms was a scrubbing brush which had been used to wash away traces of blood.

Bodies Buried in the Garden. But though the evidences of the crime were there, the victims of the tragedy were missing. Inspector Collins made inquiries and quickly discovered, from the hunchback and his wife, who had been engaged by Edwards to look after the shop, that some of the furniture and a number of boxes had been taken away by the murderer. This furniture was found at the house in Leyton where Garland had been attacked, and identified by a sister of Mr. Darby.

The detective felt quite certain that the boxes taken away by Edwards contained the bodies of the victims, for he could recall many instances of murderers who had tried to dispose of their victims in a similar way. No trace, however, was found of them at the house at Leyton but a neighbor reported that he had seen the accused man digging late at night a deep hole in the garden, and this gave Inspector Collins the clue he wanted.

He had the whole of the garden dug up, and there, a few feet below the surface, were found the dismembered bodies of William Darby, his wife and little child. The bodies, together with a quantity of blood-stained clothing, had been placed in sacks.

After that Inspector Collins rapidly built up his case, tracing the murderer's movements down to the very hour of his ghastly crime. First of all he ascertained that the hunchback, whose name was Goodwin, and whom Edwards had known for some years, had been told by the murderer that he had come into some money and had taken two shops, one in Camberwell and one in Battersea.

"I want you to manage the Camberwell shop for me," he said to Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin. "I'll look after the one in Battersea."

He added that he wanted a heavy sash weight to fix on the door of the Battersea shop, and asked Goodwin to buy it for him. This sash weight was the one with which Mr. and Mrs. Darby were killed.

come back again this afternoon and I'll be ready for you."

The Goodwins went away and returned at 2.15.

Inspector Collins learnt that while the hunchback and his wife were away the murderer pawned a gold watch, and this watch was identified as having belonged to William Darby. The Goodwins told the detective that on their return Edwards forbade them to go into the upstairs room, an order which they obeyed. He had good reason for not wishing them to go upstairs, for there was still lying the three bodies of his victims waiting till he had an opportunity to take them away.

It was not until two days later, indeed, that Edwards took the house at Leyton, where he buried the family he had so foully slain. And when the landlord asked for a reference, the murderer calmly replied, "Mr. William Darby of Wyndham Road, Camberwell, knows me well," and returning to the shop wrote from there a letter to the Leyton landlord stating that Mr. Edgar Edwards was a responsible man and likely to make a good tenant. The letter was signed "William Darby."

Sneered and Jeered in the Dock. After his arrest the murderer's finger prints were taken, and from them Inspector Collins learnt that Edwards was an old convict, having been sentenced as far back as August, 1888, under the name of Edward Owen, for stealing watches. Two years later he received seven years' for burglary, followed on his release by twelve months' hard labor for the same offence.

Inspector Collins' greatest case was complete, and on March 3rd, 1903, the man who had wiped out a whole family for the sake of a few pounds, was executed in Wandsworth Gaol.

No more savage or desperate prisoner was ever in charge of wardens than Edwards. While awaiting his trial he twice barricaded himself in his cell, and the cell door had to be forced off its fastenings.

His trial was remarkable in many ways, apart from the extraordinary nature of his crime. First of all he was surrounded in the dock by no fewer than seven warders to guard against a violent outbreak. Time and again he interrupted counsel, the judge, and witnesses with sneering and caustic remarks, filling with disgust and horror even those who were looking after his interests. Here is a short account of the closing scenes of the trial.

The jury returned after being out exactly half an hour.

"Guilty," said the foreman in reply to the question put to him.

"Simply rot!" shouted Edwards. "Have you anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed?" asked the clerk.

"Right you are! Get on with it as quick as you like!" sneered Edwards, and then, as the black cap was placed on the judge's head, he added, "Why, it's like being on the stage."

He spent that night cursing and raving up and down his cell, and as a result he was guarded by double the usual number of warders until the time came when the last act of all was to be played, and the world was made cleaner by his exit.

Gained in Weight, Digestion Restored, Health Renewed. Here is More Proof of Quick Cure for All Folks That are Weak, Ailing, Nervous.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills. "For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessong Fuessle

Wild, enchanting dreams of New York glimmered persistently through Marian's mind. Already, before retiring, she had begun packing her trunk. The money which had been telegraphed her would take her to the City of Cities, provide her with a few new clothes, and leave her a little to go on.

The thought of New York stirred her with a subtle, magnetic appeal. It drew forth from her subconsciousness her almost forgotten memories of vivid hopes of travel, social conquest, fine feathers, gallant friends, and luxuries. The money-need of the past months and the desperation of her plight since securing her divorce, had made sordid thoughts command her attention almost entirely. But now the extravagant dreams and visions of earlier days were brought trooping back by the thought of going to New York.

Her day was loaded down with packing, with preparations for the journey. Late in the afternoon she boarded a street car. Her heart bounded. Without a single misgiving she took a last look at the familiar streets and houses past, which the car was hurrying. Downtown, the roar of traffic gave her a hint of the big, sonorous chant of the many-voiced city toward which the train would soon be bearing her. Ahead she saw life, excitement, change, romance.

Out through the tangle of switches the train was soon picking its way, and on through the city's grimy outskirts. The quiet hum of the steel Pullman stirred and stimulated her spirits. She had never felt more free, more completely through with the domestic strife into which marriage had plunged her. The world was swiftly widening between her and all that was past. Her heart beat faster and freer. Life and freedom like a gleaming bounding sea, beckoned with open arms.

Later, when Marian started for the diner, she was conscious that more than one of the passengers lifted their eyes to look at her as she passed them. She recalled how she had met the Van Dines on the train at the time of her last journey. She wondered what would befall her now. She was eager for a chat with a stranger. A year ago the mere thought would have shocked her.

The diner was crowded. Rather than wait, she allowed herself to be shown to a seat opposite an interesting looking man of perhaps thirty.

Mrs. Bleeker: "Jane, have you turned the gas on in the parlor, as I told you?" Jane (recently engaged): "Yes, mum; can't ye smell it?"

She found herself looking at his careless, rippling hair, his dark eyes, his rugged nose and sensitive mouth. Several times his dreamy eyes dwelt upon her and she was flattered.

"Will you forgive me if I talk to you?" he said with pleasant frankness.

"Why should you want to?" she asked naively. "Because I am unmercifully lonely," he answered with a boyish, fetching shrug of his shoulders. "I am neither a masochist bent on telling you that I have fallen in love with you at first sight, nor a confidence man with spurious jewels to sell. I'm just lonely for a few pleasant words with someone, preferably with a beautiful lady."

With candid ease the man talked engagingly about himself. He was an artist, he said, had returned but recently from Paris, was toiling like a Trojan at his easel for a public, alas, which preferred chromos to approximations of real art. He berated the provinciality of American cities, and raved about Vienna, glorified Rome and Venice and Paris. He sent Marian's thoughts flying overseas, made her see things, widened her horizon with his flow of words.

"I belong over there," he said. "Things are so different here, except perhaps New York. I am out of place. America is cold, it does not understand. But America is young yet," he smiled indulgently.

Marian was enchanted. An artist! Her heart went out to him in his loneliness. To-morrow--A New Kind of Artistic Temperament.

"Jim" Larkin to Leave The City of Dublin.

London, Eng., June 20 -- "Jim" Larkin, the Irish strike agitator who failed in his attempt to raise the "fiery cross" in England, has resigned the leadership of the Irish Transport workers and it is reported that he will leave Dublin. The Irish Union has not prospered since Larkin led it to defeat. It's members have summoned a special meeting for next Sunday to "consider a very grave crisis."

Only "Climbers" Dress Loudly.

London, June 19.--That the English aristocracy and American women identified with it do not follow the extravagant fashions which the national convention of women's clubs, in Chicago characterized as impudent, uncomfortable and unattractive is the emphatic assertion of leading dressmakers, including Miss Enos, who dresses Mrs. Walter Hines Page, the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Roxborough and other American women prominent in society.

"It is only the women who are unknown socially who aim to attract attention by extravagant dress," said Miss Enos. "Those who are known invariably seek to avoid anything unduly conspicuous in their dress."

"While my customers generally demand the very best materials, there is a tendency toward simplicity, and the ultra extravagant styles of which the women of Chicago complain are not taken into consideration at all by the best dressed women."

Trying to Understand.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"O ne ought neither to laugh nor carp at, exalt nor curse, a human being's actions, but only to try to understand them." -- Spinoza.

We were talking about a very nervous, exasperating woman the other day. We had been comparing notes on her maddening little ways which made her as difficult to live with as if she had been possessed of actual vices,--as the world usually employs that word.

We had waxed quite indignant over the matter, when the woman who is the worst sufferer from the annoying one brought us to a standstill by saying, "Oh, well, I guess we ought to be sorry for her instead of scolding about her. She must suffer, herself, and besides I don't know but what I would have been worse if I had been born with her disposition."

That is a thought worth pausing over, isn't it? I believe I have said something along the same line more than once before, but I can't make it too emphatic. I can't try too hard to make you take it into your life as a practical, working conviction, that we have no right to judge the actions of others because we cannot tell what we might have been or done if we had been handicapped as they were.

The most ludicrous, the most exasperating, the most degraded actions of every human being have definite causes. To criticize these actions, to be angry at their authors, without fully understanding these causes is absurd. Suppose your washerwoman fails to bring back your clean clothes on time and you suspect that she has been using your last week's pay to get drunk upon, what is your feeling? Probably that of annoyance at the inconvenience, and hot indignation at her. But what right have you to be indignant?

What do you do understand of the deadly monotony of her life, the cravings of her ill fed body, and the weakness of her enfeebled mind? If you could realize what these things mean you might be indignant, if you still wanted to be. But would you? Probably not.

Suppose the woman next door childishly resigns from the missionary society because her meeting was not well attended. Have you a right to laugh at her? Not unless you can thoroughly enter into the conditions which caused such an act, the narrowness of outlook, the pettiness of soul, the lack of better standards of conduct; and can still want to laugh.

Of course no one can say absolutely that another human being is or is not making the best he possibly could out of his equipment. That must be left to the Infinite Intelligence.

The part of the finite intelligence is to return to Spinoza, "not to laugh or carp at, exalt nor curse, but only to try to understand."

And with that effort will surely come the divine gift of sympathy and we shall no longer be eager to judge.

Yard Companion

Fads and Fashions.

Rose coloring are seen everywhere. Checked parasols are among the newest. The separate blouse is immensely popular. Yolk-of-egg yellow is one of the new shades. Stockings must match the color of the frock. In plain colored dresses the sash is very important. The more extreme new bathing suits have paniers. Tub dresses are made with straight gored skirts. Colored handkerchief linen dresses are in great demand. Heavier textured satins are coming in for evening wear. The latest fashions for dresses are simpler than hitherto. Burnt banana and green apple are among the new colors. Parasols to match ones costumes are a feature of the season. Tarpaulin is one of the most striking things seen on hats. Taffeta suits are wonderfully convenient for semi-dress affairs. Imported golfine is very much used for women's sports coats. With the tailored suit the waist is almost always a simple blouse. Young girls' white linen frocks are sometimes scalloped in color. The way it is cut--in points. New automobile veils have one edge lighter coloured than the other. To harmonize with summer frocks. White organdies are trimmed with ruchings of dark blue taffeta. Many of the summer silks are actually lighter than cotton materials.

Dresses for the street are most useful when made with coatee waists. An ugly dress is the most extravagant thing a woman can indulge in. Fashionable white shoes are of white duck, and made in Colonial style. The prettiest afternoon dresses are almost as simple as those for morning. We know who he will buy it for? But who will he buy it from? Hundreds of Engagements and Weddings are sealed yearly in Newfoundland with Trappell's Solid Gold Rings. Hundreds of friendships and tokens of affection to sweetheart, wife, mother, sister and friend are embodied in lasting embrace with Trappell's Rings, the popularity of which is based upon their quality, finish and variety and beauty of design. Rings for men, women, baby and mistle for every occasion. Gem Rings, Chained Rings, Signet Rings, Birthday Rings. Should you have a desire to get a ring of such design as you may create yourself, or that you had seen somebody else wear, just take your design to Trappell; there is nothing impossible along these lines for his talented workmen. A splendid assortment of unset stones can be seen if your design calls for a Gem Ring. Ask to be shown the new White Sapphires. They are hard and brilliant like diamonds, so much so that they puzzle experts.

A Tell-Tale Sentry.

The new recruit was on sentry-go. Up came the officer and demanded his orders. "Orders," said the lad from the country, "give up my orders."

"You certainly. What are you here for?" demanded the officer sharply. "Oh, I'm here to walk up and down stand at attention, wink at the girls, look after Sergeant Murphy's bit of garden, and see that nobody steals his spades; to see you ain't about when they fetch the beer for the guardroom prisoners, and--"

But that was as far as he got.

Quebec Man is Held For Sister's Death.

Richmond, Que., June 16. -- The coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. J. B. Viger, who died after partaking of what she thought was gin but proved to be carbolic acid, ordered the arrest of the victim's brother, Narcisse Pétignat, in order that he may be examined as to his sanity.

The belief is that Pétignat, who is not over bright, was responsible for placing poison in the bottle of gin. No motive was revealed in the evidence. In examination Labadie, the brother-in-law, admitted having had trouble with Pétignat, but declared that it was not of the slightest consequence. In view of the feeble mind of Pétignat, however, this grievance may have been magnified.

Detective Sanson, of Montreal, worked on the case and it was largely on information that he was able to place before the jury that the order for Pétignat's arrest was issued.

For some time the accused lived with his sister, the victim of the tragedy, and appeared to be attached to her.

The crime for which he is held took place on Sunday afternoon, May 31st, when after Pétignat, Mrs. Viger and Labadie each drank a glass of gin. Mrs. Viger fell over unconscious and died in half an hour.

Labadie detected a peculiar taste to the gin and did not drink it. The autopsy showed that Mrs. Viger's death was caused by carbolic acid poisoning.

Little Boy Given New Pair of Feet.

Washington, June 19.--With feet that were formerly "clubbed" and turned under, and which are now quite normal, little William Averill, a five-year-old boy, whose home is near Oxford, N.C., has left the emergency hospital after having undergone an operation, which has proved one of the greatest triumphs of modern surgery ever won in Washington.

Some nine weeks ago, Billy came to the hospital with his feet pathetically deformed and nearly useless as to locomotion. Despite this sad condition the lad bore the bloom of perfect health on his cheeks and was bubbling with high spirits. For several days he was given the freedom of the hospital before he was put to bed and prepared for the operation.

Finally, everything ready, he was taken to the operating room and put under anaesthetics. Then began one of the most delicate, though heroic operations ever performed with a surgeon's knife.

Swiftly and surely Dr. Sands went to work on one foot and then the other, cutting ligaments here, separating tendons and readjusting little bones there, and all but amputating the unconscious little child's feet. Then both members were readjusted, given the necessary antiseptic treatment and then carefully wrapped in great plaster casts which extended to the knees.

Again the limp little form was put to bed, and it was not many hours before the lad recovered from the anaesthetic. The patient resumed his cheerfulness in time and the process of healing was rapid. Finally, he was allowed to move about in bed, and each day he became more active and desirous to get beyond the narrow environs to which he was restricted.

A little less than five weeks after the operation had been performed the plaster casts had been removed and lo! something akin to a miracle had been wrought! Two little feet, once considered hopelessly deformed, had been transformed into normal organs.

Sexes are Equal in Divorce Court.

London, June 18.--The findings of the recent Royal Commission on Divorce, so far as both majority and minority reports agreed, have been incorporated in a bill introduced into parliament by Lord Gorell, former president of the divorce court. The most radical departure is a provision that the sexes shall be on an equality before the divorce court.

Under the existing law a wife must prove both misconduct and cruelty on the part of her husband, while a husband need only prove misconduct in order to get a divorce. The new clause provides that any married person may dissolve marriage upon proving that the other party there-to has committed adultery.

The bill also provides that a judicial separation may be granted on the ground of habitual drunkenness which includes intoxication by drugs.

Announcement.

D. J. Furlong wishes to announce to his friends and the public generally that he has opened a custom establishment in connection with the Cleaning and Pressing in the store lately occupied by N. W. Chown, 7 New Gower Street, and is now prepared to receive orders for any garment in the tailoring line; also wishes his friends to notice that he is giving a very special offer to anyone having suit length to be made up. Every garment will receive the best of attention. Call now and see our goods and select your pattern. Workmanship guaranteed. All goods well shrunk before making.

D. J. FURLONG, 7 New Gower Street, may24.

Big Feeling.

How trying is that naughty girl who's all swollen up with self content each blessed minute; whip arrogantly stares you down, and d seems to say: "I own the town, and all that's in it!" Hestrusulating the village streets and doubtless thinking the folks he meets are him adoring; he might come down two pegs or three if he could hear them bitterly his folly scoring. No man should swagger till he's shown he occupies a place alone, won by his labours; till he has gained such great renown he has excuse for looking down upon his neighbours. And men who win that sort of thing have too much sense to strut, by jing, they're meek and humble; they know that those who swell around with eyes too high to see the ground will some day stumble. Not wealth or fame or boundless power should swell our bosoms for an hour--we are but mortals; the sexton sets us all at last, and when our little jaunt is past, the gray world chortles. One stiff that's buried in the mold is just as stark and just as cold as any other; the big man, planted, has no edge upon the pauper by the hedge, his little brother.

New Coal Mining Machine.

To Take the Place of Men—Owners Wonder if New Epoch in the Industry Has at Last Arrived.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 17.—Has a new epoch come to the coal mining industry? This was the question in the minds of numerous coal operators and others interested in coal mining as a day or two since they watched the operation of the first practical coal mining machine—a machine that stood the test of months, being quietly operated in one of the large mines of the Pittsburg district, turning out thousands of tons of commercial coal direct from the face of the coal seam, placing all the coal in pile cars and keeping men on the jump to get the loaded cars out of the way, when loaded.

For years such a machine has been the dream of coal mining companies. It has been desired to solve the increasing problem of coal mining—such as mine disasters, increasing cost of labor, the growing expenditures for mine equipment, miners' homes at the mines, and countless other outlays, of which the average citizen has little realization.

The new mining machine is the development of entirely new principles in mechanical mining. It is the product of H. A. Kuhn of Pittsburg, one of the foremost mining and mechanical engineers of the Pittsburg district, who has spent more than ten years in close application to the task which he has at last completed, and in the perfection of which he has expended a fortune in development work. In the early years of his experiments he spent his time discovering fundamentals. He sought a principle upon which a machine would work. He made this a success, and from it built an "economical, practical, cheap and foolproof" machine, that does all the work of the human miner—only it does it twenty times as fast and 50 per cent. cheaper.

As the machine stands, it is a structural steel frame, oblong in form which rests on a steering truck which rides on the floor of the mine. It carries motors for operating the cutting tools and the tools themselves, and it attacks the coal seam in any position, moving up and down, sideways or in any direction the coal seam leads. Electricity or compressed air can be used in operating the motors, and so little power is required that the cost for this item alone is less than one per cent. per ton of coal mined. One peculiar feature of the machine that impresses the spectator is that it seems to be fully as flexible as the human coal miner. It is estimated that the machine will cut the cost of coal mining in half.

From the time that the machine takes the coal from the seam, cuts it, places it on a conveyor and loads it in a pit car, no human hand touches it. With twenty ordinary laborers ten of the machines will produce one thousand tons of coal a day, as but two men are needed to operate a machine.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effect fully you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKI CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.

Upside Down.

The school concert had begun. Four little girls were dressed to represent the word "Star," and each had one letter of that word pinned on to her snowy white dress. Each letter began the verse of a touching little song.

"Now," said the teacher, "form yourselves in position, and wait until the curtain goes up."

The little girls did as they were told, and while the piano played the accompaniment the curtains went up instead of applause to greet the little girls, howls from the audience met them. The word they spelled was "Rats."

Everything Blooming in The Paper City.

From passengers who recently arrived in the city from Grand Falls, we learn that everything is flourishing in the inland city.

The A. N. D. Company have already started on their first drive of logs, which was taken down the river a few days ago. Sixty million feet of timber was cut during the past winter, and the company expect to grind up fifty millions of this during the coming season.

Preparations are now being made for the visit of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught. Electricians are already busy at the illuminations, which will, we are told, be something unique and original. A special electrical display, which will span the river in preparation, and promises to be an artistic triumph.

Great enthusiasm is being displayed in the old game of cricket, though baseball is gradually trying to usurp its place. The paper city can boast of some ardent cricketers, whose interest in the old game will not flag despite the innovations of the more modern sports.

Parachute Trials Unsatisfactory.

North Sydney, June 19.—Yesterday in Paris the world wide competition for a prize of $50,000 for the best life saving device in aviation, too place and resulted in something of a disappointment to the competitors. In a cable received by R. Blaine from W. A. McKay whose parachute was looked upon by many as the best of the three comes the news that the contest really did not take place. The first man to go up was La Prince, who met his fate before he made a trial of the life-saving device. His balloon caught in a tree and exploded, killing the aviator. After this the others declined to make an ascent.

Rifles Landed for Irish Volunteers

Are for the Nationalists and are of Latest American Pattern.

Dublin, June 18.—Large quantities of rifles and ammunition were landed during the night on the Connemara coast for Nationalist Volunteers. The consignments are supposed to have been brought by a mysterious vessel which had been sighted cruising along the coast for a week past, but had refused to reply to any signals.

Torpedo boats have been ordered to patrol the coasts to prevent further gun running. The rifles are said to be of latest American pattern.

LOADING FOR BRAZIL.—The barqt. Rosina, Capt. Sinclair is now loading codfish at Alan Goodridge and Sons. She will sail for the Brazilian market towards the end of the week.
