CHAPTER XXXI.

"Don't move, please," said Mr. Dockett to the company in general and to the captain in particular. "There are half a dozen men downstairs, and every outlet from the house is watched. Now, Mr. Giles, what do you know of the charge?"

"I hold a warrant here," said Mr. Giles. "For the arrest of Captain Howard Murpoint on several charges, involving conspiracy and forgery. It is no use, captain, the game has been a good one, but it is up. To-morrow the bubble will burst, and all your little dodges will be known. To-morrow the city would tear you to pieces if they had you."

"Stop!" said the consummate villain. "Something has gone wrong in the city, no doubt. There is some mistake, my good fellow. You only do your duty, no doubt. I had better come with you, I suppose? Is that all?"

"No," said Mr. Dockett, "not all—not nearly, Captain Murpoint. There is a charge of forging a codicil to the will of the late John Midmay, whereby you having fraudulently gained the guardianship of Miss Midmay and possession of the estate and the moneys of the same."

The captain's face twitched and worked, and he sank into a seat.

"Let us hear this farce through," he said. "I know who is at the bottom of it. Forgery indeed! Because Lord Lackland is beggared and ruined and I have helped him toward it he must trump up this ridiculous charge. It is preposterous! My dear Violet—"

He was about to continue, but Violet rose and shrank toward the curtain, and Mr. Dockett stepped in between her and the scoundrel.

"You cannot believe this—this idiot!" he exclaimed.

"Silence!" said Mr. Dockett. "I put a question to you, Captain Murpoint. Will you give in, and make a clear confession of all, or shall I carry the matter through? For, mark me, this young lady shall know all, whether I tell her or you do!"

"Tell her what you like!" said the captain, pleasantly. "I have nothing to confess. Now, what is the next charge?"

"The murder of James Starling, whom you are accused of stabbing and throwing over the cliff at Penriddle!"

The captain rose, white and desperate.

"You cannot prove it!" he said. "Where is your witness?"

"Here," said Mr. Dockett, and he beckoned toward the recess.

Out stepped Job, very pale, but very determined.

"I am a witness, captain," he said. "I see you in the master's room, and I see you going up the cliffs. It's all over, captain. For Jamie Sanderson found the knife—your knife—and this gentleman has got it clear and straight."

"It's a false, vile concocted plot!" hissed the captain. "James Starling died by the hand of Leicester Dodson! I saw him do it! If he didn't do the murder, where is he? Why doesn't he come back like a man and prove his innocence? Not he! He's snuggled away somewhere, and he doesn't come back!"

"He does, and he is here!" said a voice, and the curtain was swept away by a strong hand—Leicester's own—as he stepped into the room and caught Violet in his arms.

"Leicester!" she cried, with a voice, whose tones baffle all description. "Leicester! I have been asleep—dreaming. Oh, horrible dreams! Wake me, Leicester, my darling, wake me!"

"There was a rush and confusion as she fainted. The door opened, and Ethel and Bertie came in.

Then there was such a handshaking and kissing, and such terrible excitement, that for the moment the cause of all the terrible crimes and trouble was forgotten.

He saw the moment, and slipped something small and composed of glass from his pocket.

Scarcely had he done so when Mr. Dockett and Mr. Giles had seized his arms.

He struggled for a moment, then, as the group round Leicester and Violet, sobbing and crying and laughing and talking, turned to confront him, he suddenly stood still, and the old daring smile flitted across his livid face.

"You are mad, all of you!" he said. "You think because your idiot is back and the secret is out that you have done for me forever. But you are wrong. I know something of law. I am rich, and I will set you at defiance. You talk of robberies, of smuggling, of forgery, of murder! Bah! where is the motive for it all? Convict me of forgery upon the evidence of one man? You cannot! Convict me of murder upon such evidence as you hold? Impossible! I laugh at you! I am Captain Howard Murpoint, a respectable officer in her majesty's service! Why should I kill my servant, James Starling? Beware! Lay me by the heels, and I can and will give evidence sufficient strong to hang that idiot!"

And he pointed to Leicester, from whom all sense but that of gratitude for the possession of his darling seemed to have passed.

"I can hang him, and I will, for I dare you to show why I should murder my servant, James Starling!"

At that moment the door opened and a short, little man in a costermonger's cap entered.

It was Stumpy.

Very quickly he pushed his way through the throng until he was close beside the captain, then he grasped his arm suddenly, and, ripping up the

JACQUES CARTIER AND ZAM-BUK

In 1534 Jacques Cartier, discoverer of Canada, and his crew, were saved from a terrible and fatal skin disease by an herbal remedy composed of the juices and saps of certain herbs. Mr. J. Cartier, of 2192 Clarke St., Montreal, a descendant of the illustrious discoverer, has just been cured of eczema by Zam-Buk. Mr. Carter is Justice of the Peace and Assistant Clerk of the Circuit Court. He is a member of the family of the late Sir George Cartier, one of the Fathers of Confederation.

Mr. Cartier writes: "Allow me to express my gratitude for the benefit I have derived from Zam-Buk. It is the best remedy for eczema I have found. I always keep it in the house as our family doctor. Its healing and curative power is immense. I wish everybody could know the high quality of Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is the modern scientific representative of the crude essences and saps, which saved the life of Jacques Cartier in 1534. Zam-Buk contains these herbal extracts plus modern antiseptic properties unknown in the 16th century. Zam-Buk cures Ulcers, Fles, Eczema, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Chapped Hands, Cold Sores, and other skin diseases and injuries. All druggists and stores, 50¢ box, 3 boxes $1.25.

sleeve with a knife, pointed with a grin to a red mark.

The thing had been done so suddenly that the detectives even were taken by surprise.

But the captain understood it, and his face underwent a fearful change.

"Who are you?" he breathed, hoarsely.

Then, as he recognized his companion in crime, he shrieked:

"Hold him! hold him! He's an escaped convict! I know him! I can swear to him! I've worked in the same gang! Hah! hah! I've tricked you all at last!"

And, as Mr. Dockett suddenly released his arm, he dashed something in his mouth and fell upon the floor.

There was a slight noise of breaking glass, the blood thickened from some small cuts at his lips, then a cry arose from Mr. Dockett, who had knelt beside him and was staring at his arm.

Fads and Fashions.

White crepe de chine gowns are enriched with little embroidered bodices in color.

There is no doubt about the note of black running strongly through the spring fashions.

Little girls are wearing extremely short empire waists, sleeveless effects and flaring skirts.

The crinoline dress is a fact, and it is made with gathered sections, forming the skirt.

Some of the straw in the new hats shows three colors. Red, yellow and black are often used.

Coats and suit jackets are modeled right on the lines of the real ones worn by the soldiers.

In tailored millinery, hats high at one side and made higher still by quills, are favorites.

Cases for women are coming. Soon it will not shock one to see them carried on the street.

Top-coats ripple at the bottom and are in medium and short effects with narrow shoulders.

New taffeta silk blouses, made of silk very much like the "pussy willow" taffeta, will wash.

Among the tailored suits are soft checks; rose, gray and brown, made with belted coats and pleated skirts.

White petticoats are again to have their place, and there is a rumor that they will even have starch in them.

Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER III.

How many times since that changeful April day had Kelpie lived this one little romance of her life over again?

It was mid-winter now; the spring blossoms had faded, the summer was gone, and the gray old tower was shrouded in icy mist. How the wild winds shrieked and howled down below, and the voice of the sea came up to her like the moaning of a human soul in dire distress.

She sat in the watch room, her hands clasped together, watching the great, glittering lenses sending a golden track across the storm-tossed sea, wondering within herself, as she had wondered scores of times before, if, when the wild, cold winter was over and the summertime came back, the hero of her little romance would make good his promise and return to New Castle Light?

Down below, leaning on the railings of the parapet and listening to the mysterious voices coming up from the black depths below, Tom Holland was thinking of the same thing—not with longing hope, however, but in the bitterness of despair and jealous pain.

"When the winter's over, and the summer is here again, will he come back and win her from me forever? Ah!" he asked himself, with a bitter sigh, "why didn't I let him go down that night? Why did I save him from death?"

A great sea broke against the tower at this instant, sending a shower of spray high overhead, and a wild gust took it up, whirling it hither and thither like a storm of snowflakes. Then came a fluttering sound, and the beat of innumerable wings against the sides of the lantern, and, as Tom looked upward, and listened to the piteous cries and twitterings of the bewildered birds, beating out their lives in a blind attempt to reach the light, something fell with a thud at his feet. He stooped mechanically, and picked it up.

It was a white sea bird, and as it shrieked and fluttered in his grasp, the glitter of a chain, half hidden under its silver-white feathers, caught his eyes.

When he examined the strange mystery he saw that the chain was fastened by means of a clasp, from which a thin, flat locket was suspended.

It was a strange thing to happen, but Tom divined its meaning by a sort of intuition, and his strong hands trembled like a woman's as he unclasped the chain and disengaged it from the bird's neck. He had scarcely done this when there was a stealthy step behind him, and a heavy hand grasped his arm.

The dead bird fell from his hand, and, slipping the chain in his pocket, he wheeled around, to find himself face to face with Tulliver.

Something in the look of the man's face startled Tom, but he controlled himself, and said coolly:

"Well, Tulliver, what do you want?"

The assistant's eyes gleamed, and an ugly smile revealed his strong white teeth, as he answered:

"You're in my way to-night, and I'm going to put you out of it, that's all!"

"The fellow's gone daft," thought Tom; but he demanded, in the same breath: "What do you mean, Tulliver?"

"You'll soon see!"

Tulliver uttered the words in a sort of hissing whisper, and almost before they had left his lips he sprang upon his unsuspecting companion with the fury of a wild beast.

"You're in my way," he panted; "so I'm going to throw you into the sea, then there won't be a soul in the tower but us two."

The horrible suggestion deprived poor Tom of breath for an instant, and in such emergencies every breath of time counts.

are very fond of dress, and they have a popular saying which runs, "the stomach has no mirror." Its meaning is that rather than be shabby a Roumanian should go hungry. The Roumanian is most particular regarding his personal appearance, like thousands of people who patronize our Dry Cleaning establishment.

Holy Name Sunday

AT ST. BRIDE'S, P. R.

Sunday, the 21st February, was a most imposing spectacle in the church practically, not every man, young and old, but men and girls, received Holy Communion. Of course this is no unusual for since our present parish came to us, our very dearly loved Fr. O'Callaghan, it is a daily witness large numbers at Holy Communion. But last Sunday was more remarkable because of the attendance and charm which our parish church lent to the occasion. Assuredly do we owe a debt of gratitude to our good priest. Father O'Callaghan formed widders since coming to our church hitherto unpaired. Our church hitherto beautiful, is now adorned three new altars and all of which, with the church, are richly decorated and ornamented by Mr. Duffy who, as a priest, has brought St. John's, and Mr. Duffy is a true priest. Not only the interior of the exterior has been attended to, but the towers have been added, a charm, hitherto absent, to the church. We are all exceedingly proud of our church now and of the house which, too, has had the thought of good Fr. O'Callaghan lavished upon it, and no finer residence, we venture to say, is found in Newfoundland.

We are proud of our priest, who, in the truths of our religion, and who is always ready to call immediately, and who is most forcibly impressed with his powerful and eloquent sermons. It was said when he left St. John's that "St. John's loss was a gain." May God leave him long to labour for us and comfort our souls. To see the men, young and old, flock around him and giving their time and labour day after day, is a cause of joy to all who are now getting ready to build a beautiful new school hall and to beautify the grounds around the church and prostrate the site of the new hall and school.

We often heard of Fr. O'Callaghan's phenomenal success in St. John's, everything he undertook, and as a sign to St. John's people his sermons were very numerous, but the best with success. How he increased the membership of Societies in the Holy Name at the Cathedral, adding upwards of one hundred members in the one year during which we learn he was Chaplain, and he closed the saloons at St. John's and a multitude of other good deeds. But we question very much, as much as he did in his own mind, and fearlessly, accomplished in St. John's, than he has done in this parish in one year. How, then, no rum or other intoxicating beverages, no beer shops, no saloons, came here just over one year ago, it was not so. The whole atmosphere with the absence of the above mentioned abominations, entirely changed. Daily Masses were largely attended—result—a more intelligent, happier people. May God bless and spare us a good king priest to us in this old, old and young, and this parish but a weak outpouring of what we feel for our highly esteemed priest.

Holy Name Sunday

AT ST. BRIDE'S, P. B.

Sunday, the 21st February, witnessed a most imposing spectacle here. It was Holy Name Sunday and everyone in the church practically, not only every man, young and old, but women and girls, received Holy Communion. Of course this is no unusual thing, for since our present parish priest came to us, our very dearly beloved Fr. O'Callaghan, it is a daily scene to witness large numbers at Holy Communion. But last Sunday was the more remarkable because of the magnificence and charm which our newly embellished and surpassingly beautiful church lent to the impressive scene. Assuredly do we owe a deep debt of gratitude to our good parish priest. Father O'Callaghan has performed wonders since coming to us. Our church hitherto unadorned inside is now uncommonly beautiful. He has added three new altars and a pulpit all of which, with the church has been richly decorated and skillfully ornamented by Mr. Duffy whom our revered priest has brought from St. John's, and Mr. Duffy is an artist indeed. Not only the interior but also the exterior has been attended to as two fine towers have been added and lend a charm, hitherto absent, to the church. We are all exceedingly proud of our church now and of the priest's house which, too, has had the taste and thought of good Fr. O'Callaghan lavished upon it, and no finer priest's residence, we venture to say, can be found in Newfoundland.

We are proud of our esteemed parish priest who never tires instructing us in the truths of our holy religion, and who is always at our call immediately, and who always most forcibly impresses us with his powerful and eloquent sermons. Truly was it said when he left St. John's that "St. John's loss was St. Bride's gain." May God leave him long with us to labour for us and comfort us as he does. To see the men, young and old, flock around him and giving him their time and labour day after day, most eager and anxious to be asked, and we are now getting ready at his call to build a beautiful new school and hall and to beautify the grounds around the church and presbytery and the site of the new hall and school.

We often heard of Fr. O'Callaghan's phenomenal success in St. John's in everything he undertook, and according to St. John's people his undertakings were very numerous, but always blessed with success. How he increased the membership of Societies—notably the Holy Name at the Cathedral by adding upwards of one thousand members in the one year during which we learn he was Chaplain, and of how he closed the saloons at six o'clock and a multitude of other good works. But we question very much, if he, much as he did in his own immitable and fearless way, accomplished more in St. John's than he has done in this parish in one year. Here there is now no run of other intoxicants—no shebeens, no beer shops. When he came here just over one year ago it was not so. The whole spiritual atmosphere with the absence of the above mentioned abominations has entirely changed. Daily Mass is largely attended—result—a better, more intelligent, happier people exist. May God bless and spare our dear good king priest to us is the prayer of all, old and young, and this tribute is but a weak outpouring of what we all feel for our highly esteemed pastor.

Southern Cross Wreckage.

32 William Street, St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 16th, 1915.

To the Board of Trade, London, England.

Gentlemen—You will please find enclosed a scrap from our local papers reporting a chest of life-belts washed ashore on Coll Island, West of Scotland, supposed to be the wreckage of the S. S. Southern Cross.

My son was chief engineer on that ship and is gone down with her ill-fated crew, and with others I would be very thankful for any information concerning the identity of the wreckage.

Believe me, dear sirs, I am, Your faithful servant, A. W. PARSONS.

Board of Trade, (Harbour Department) 7 Whitehall Gardens, London, S.W., 11th February, 1915.

Sir—

I am directed by the Board of Trade to refer to your letter of the 16th January last on the subject of a chest supposed to belong to the S. S. Southern Cross recently washed ashore on the Island of Coll, on the west coast of Scotland.

The Board have caused enquiries to be made in the matter and have been informed that in December last a chest of life-belts was washed ashore on the island in question, but that it was badly damaged and full of barnacles, and only the cork of the life-belts remained. Owing to the damaged state of the chest, and to the expense that would have been necessary to obtain it, the owners of the S. S. Southern Cross declined to claim the chest.

The Board regret that they are not in a position to furnish you with any further particulars of the chest in question, but they desire to add that from the particulars mentioned above the chest does not appear to have been the personal property of any of the officers or crew of the S. S. Southern Cross.

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, ERNEST J. MOGGIDGE.

Mr. A. W. Parsons, 32, William Street, St. John's, Newfoundland.

In Memoriam.

Thomas Penny, an old and respected inhabitant of North Arm, Holyrood died there last week. Deceased was in his seventy-sixth year, was stricken down with sickness all the winter, and was well fortified with the rites of Holy Church when he received the death summons on Thursday last. In his younger days, Mr. Penny was a successful planter at the Labrador fishery and for many years operated a room at Brig Harbour. He had a skilled knowledge of the coast and was sometimes employed as a pilot there. Since 1898 he filled the position of ferryman on the North Arm, satisfactorily, always ready and willing to serve a passenger. He was one of the oldest members of the Star of the Sea Association, which repaired to the home of their deceased brother member and took part in processional order at his funeral obsequies. His funeral took place on Saturday morning from his late home to the Church of Holy Cross where High Mass of Requiem was sung by Rev. W. P. Finn, P.P., for the eternal repose of his soul, thence to the Central Cemetery where his remains were placed beside those of his good wife who predeceased him but a year. The funeral was a large one and was in charge of Undertaker Dunphy and Marshal Penny. To his sorrowing sons and daughters we tender our deep sympathy. Requiescat in pace.—Com.

VERDUN.

By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old Sivas."

Verdun, the greatest fortress in France, is a little city of 13,000 people, surrounded by vine-and-gun clad hills. Verdun is France's reprieve to Metz, which sits across the border, not far away, and is so fiercely fortified that an English sparrow has to imitate a Hartz canary before it can get through the lines. Verdun has sixteen large forts and thirty small ones, each one bristling with guns and armored with steel, concrete, barbed wire and granite. Not a single one of these forts has fallen so far, but this is not because they are stuffed with guns. It is because they have been protected with spades.

War changes all things, and it has done away with the ancient custom of using a fort to protect an army. Nowadays the army goes out in front of a fort, digs trenches and protects the fort, while the garrison plays checkers and dusts off the big guns. The forts of Verdun have done wonders in the last forty years in warding off incursions from the French nation, but their work is over.

The only way to keep a fort in a good state of preservation nowadays is to keep the enemy entirely away from it. If the Germans get within ten miles of Verdun, they will begin building concrete foundations and getting on them guns with mouths like the crater of Vesuvius. A little later the forts of Verdun would rise into the air in a confused manner, and retire from the landscape amid general regret.

Verdun has been in the fort business for almost two thousand years. It belonged to the Belgians 1,900 years ago, and after the Romans had captured it, they admitted that the Belgians were tougher than the Goths and the smallpox combined. Later on, the Austrians, Germans and French took turns in occupying Verdun and darning the world to come on—which it did in each instance.

Peaceful towns like London, which has never had anything worse than a great fire, or a Wat Tyler rebellion, would not be so agitated over airship raids if they had had a little of Verdun's experience. An airship raid would be a pleasant diversion for Verdun, after having entertained its varieties of conquerors in its shell-spangled past.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S BEAUTY.

So many women who keep house, unfortunately forget their personal appearance that won the heart of their husband's when they were young. The housewife should be just as careful of her hair, skin and working clothes, in a neat practical way, as the blushing bride.

Carelessness in donning the morning waist, kimono or coffee jacket should not be tolerated. Use a little judgment in selecting style and color, not only neatness and harmony will be the result, but one's beauty will be greatly enhanced.

No doubt one who has been engaged in cooking or superintending the dinner will have cause to complain of a florid complexion. While this is only a natural result and one not to be ashamed of, still it is necessary to appear so at the table, and does it increase one's charm? Knowing that heat and exercise will bring not only the color to the face, and in many cases grease, it is one's duty to remove both for one's good appearance sake, if for no other reason.

This is best done by wiping the face with a soothing astringent lotion, and then applying an even coat of good face powder; the cheeks will have enough color. Some women object to the use of face powder, but there is no harm done in using it, provided the right sort is used and a good cream used before it is well cleansed before retiring.

Burns on the hands and arms are of frequent occurrence to the housewife; aside from the pain caused, they do not add to one's charms. In case of a burn at once apply lime-juice or sweet oil to the parts affected and then thickly cover with baking soda and bind with a soft cloth; in ordinary cases of burn this will shortly relieve the pain.

Small rents in garments may be quickly mended so that the damage will never be detected, but by continued wear, if not mended, the damage may become irreparable. Wearing a gown that is imperfect only excites adverse comments and detracts from one's general good appearance. So it is better to take the stitch in time.

Recommendations as to Sealing Voyage.

On Tuesday we gave the gist in the words of the reports of certain findings in the majority report of Commissioners, Sir William Horwood, C. J., and Mr. Justice Emerson, and of the minority report of Commissioner, Mr. Justice Johnson.

"It should be made plain to a master to send his crew so far from the ship as to make it impossible for them to do their work and return the same day. A further recommendation is that the work of killing or hauling seals should be limited to the hours between sunrise and sunset, and that within an hour after sunset all sealing should be on board their ships. To put an end to the practice of sending crews hazardous distances it seems to us to be essential that the ship itself, as well as the master and crew should be brought within the scope of the proposed legislation and our recommendation is that a liability should be imposed on the ship to make compensation for the loss of life or limb of crew or suffer injury from exposure through being kept upon the ice at night. It is possible that other precautions may be taken to avoid disasters at the seal fishery in so far as they are due to preventable causes."

"It goes without saying that no officer or master of a vessel engaged in seal hunting should be permitted to leave the ship without carrying a pocket compass. An important suggestion is that care should be taken to select competent and experienced persons as masters of watch and that when appointed they should devote themselves exclusively to the care and supervision of the watch entrusted to them and should not themselves engage in the work of seal killing. The experiences of the Newfoundland crew emphasize the necessity and importance of having as masters of watch men with the qualities of leadership capable of coping with emergencies as they arise."

"Before the men are put on the ice it is evident that those responsible for their safety should fully satisfy themselves as to weather conditions. The observation of the careful mariner is, as has been pointed out in the evidence of Captains Clarke, Dawe and others, a most important factor in determining the probabilities. At the same time, all the aids employed by the deep sea mariner through a comparison of thermometer as well as barometer indications should be available. It should be the duty of an officer holding a master's certificate to see that both these instruments are properly set and placed in the open and to have readings from both regularly entered in the ship's log as is done in the case of foreign-going vessels. Further, the ships, when within range of a wireless station should be supplied with the weather forecast as furnished by the Bureau. It has been suggested by witnesses that the value of this forecast could be heightened if the ships co-operated with the meteorological department by furnishing daily reports of weather conditions in their neighborhoods. We are of opinion that this suggestion is feasible and that effect ought to be given to it in order to serve the high purpose of promoting the safety of those at sea."

"It seems to us that something more is called for than the biscuit and butter which is all that is ordinarily supplied by the ship to men going upon the ice and that those in charge should see that each man before leaving is both as to quality and quantity sufficiently provided in the matter of food with a view to the possibility of his return being delayed by unforeseen contingencies."

The doctors who examined the bodies of the dead of the Newfoundland are agreed in their condemnation of fleecy lined clothing recently placed upon the market as a substitute for flannels or woollen and point out that while this clothing when new suggests warmth to eye and touch it does not contain a particle of wool but is entirely cotton. It is wholly unsuitable for men who have to take violent exercise as, unlike flannel, it fails to absorb perspiration, becomes wet and chills the body. In our opinion the importation or manufacture of this should be prohibited."

Undesirables Caught.

Yesterday afternoon, a ne'er-do-well, who was only released a few days ago from the Penitentiary, where he had served a term for burglary, paid a visit to the rear of C. Eagan's store on Duckworth Street, and lifted an oil can, which he refused to return and attempted to sell it at a waterfront store. In this latter transaction he got nipped by Sergeant Savage and Constable Simmonds. He was arraigned before Judge Knight to-day, convicted and sentenced to thirty days imprisonment with hard labor. Another undesirable, who, as the criminal records show, is one of the worst characters known to the police, he having served two six months periods for atrocious assaults on children, was before court to-day. He was found at 1 o'clock this morning having a quiet siesta in a bale box on a mercantile steamer, and apparently untroubled of atmospheric conditions. In view of the character of the man, His Honor considered it unsafe to have him at large, and gave him thirty days.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, March 5th, 1915. Cantharidine Hair Tonic is popular simply because it is able to do what is claimed for it—and does it, if used according to directions. In combination with our Shampoo Powders it cleanses the scalp and dandruff and grows freely, and strengthening the roots of the hair. The Cantharidine at the same time stimulates its growth, and is also an excellent dressing for occasional use. It is not a dye, and its a restorer of the color of the hair is simply because it promotes hair health generally. If your hair is not as good as you could wish it, by all means try this treatment. The Hair Tonic is sold in bottles at 20s. and 50c. each; the Shampoo Powders at 5s. a pkg.

Capt. Winsor Here.

Capt. William Winsor, who last season commanded the Beothic at the ice-fields, and was the first back with a trip, came to the city last night and will take charge of the same ship again this year. From his home in Westville he proceeded to Gambo where he joined the train. The distance between these places is 42 miles out of which Capt. "Billy" walked 15 through the woods. He was accompanied by Capt. S. B. Winsor, who was in the Sagona last spring, but owing to the latter ship not going out this year, he is taking a berth with Capt. "Billy." Capt. Winsor reports the ice in Bonavista Bay as the worst on record. There is plenty of it in every harbor and very heavy. The Fogota, he says, was three days held up at Westville unable to get to Greenspond. He also reports very little dandruff prevailing north. At Gambo he saw evidences of scarcity of labor as there were scores of men there awaiting to get word from Grand or Bishop Falls to go into the woods to log. We hope "lucky Bill" will load his ships with seals.

The Gulf steamers Terra Nova, Capt. Wm. Bartlett, sr., Viking, Capt. Wm. Bartlett, jr., Erik, Capt. Day, Martin, and Bonaventura, Capt. LATEST From the Front.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SUNK.

PARIS, To-day. The German submarine U 8 has been sunk by destroyers belonging to the Dover flotilla, according to an announcement by the Ministry of Marine to-night. The crew were taken prisoners. Submarine U 8 was built in 1908 and was 300 tons in displacement. She had a speed of 13 knots above water and 8 knots submerged. Her maximum radius of operations was 1,200 miles. The vessel carried three torpedo tubes and her complement was 12 men. U 8 was a sister ship of the famous U 9 which early in the war sank the British cruisers Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy in the North Sea, and in October sent the British cruiser Hawke to the bottom. The wreckage picked up late in February off Christian Sand was said to belong to U 9 and it was said the submarine had been lost.

LITTLE CHANGE IN SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day. There has been very little change in the military and naval situation in the last 24 hours. While the Russians continue their progress against Germans in North Poland, they are according to official reports pursuing and capturing many of the retreating Austrians in Eastern Galicia and are repulsing with heavy losses the persistent day and night attacks of the German allies in the Carpathians. They have not, however, by any means yet disposed of any forces opposed to them. It is the same with the Allied fleets in the Dardanelles in their bombardment. The warships have made greater progress than was anticipated, but they still have the most strongly fortified part of the Straits to get through. Along the western front the French are continuing their attacks in Champagne and Argonne, but beyond there the only movement of any consequence has been made North of Arras, where the Germans succeeded in capturing the newly constructed French trench.

Germans Lose Heavily in Guns.

ALLIES TAKING THE OFFENSIVE. BOULOGNE, To-day. Every German battery in the Lombard side of the district has been completely reduced to silence. In addition the enemy has lost all its batteries standing in the Grand Dune. All this ground, once a German stronghold, now lies between the two armies, forming the neutral zone. Little by little the Allies are repulsing the German steadily. The latter have already been forced to retreat as far as the Lombard side of the farm on the west end of the road. Certain portions of the enemy's lines have been heavily reinforced during the past 24 hours and they seem determined to hold Ostend whatever may be the cost. During the past few days, however, great changes in the nature of the ground has proved of enormous help to the Allies in their advance. The Ostend road recently inundated is now quite dry and the same is true of much of the surrounding country. This allows the Allies to operate a mass movement of their infantry.

SULTAN LEAVES CONSTANTINOPLE—PANIC PREVAILS.

ATHENS, To-day. According to a report which has reached here, the Sultan has already left Constantinople. Panic is reigning among the young Turks, the leaders of whom are preparing to leave the city before it becomes too dangerous to remain. It is generally supposed that the return of Enver Pasha to his command in Caucasus and the departure of Djemal Pasha for Berlin, are both signs intended to cover their timely departure from the coming storm. Great unrest prevails throughout Istanbul, particularly among the lower classes of the population. The ministers of several countries are said to be urgently desirous of concluding peace to save the city from a bombardment by the warships of the allies, which is generally regarded as inevitable.

FAMINE THREATENS GERMANY.

NEW YORK, To-day. A Washington despatch to the Tribune says the threat of famine hangs over Germany like a pall, according to a report received at the Department of Commerce from Vice-Consul Louis G. Dreyfus, jr., in Berlin, which was made public. The report, long delayed in transmission, was sent on January 18th from the Consulate General. The report is dated Jan. 28th and therefore it is felt in Washington that with conditions so serious, more than a month ago, the constant strain of war must by this time have made the situation infinitely worse.

WANT THEM TRIED AS PIRATES.

PARIS, To-day. Demands were served upon the Government to-day by a number of Deputies that all the members of the German submarine U 8 which was sunk by French destroyers in the Channel be tried as pirates before a Naval Court and executed, if found guilty of making attacks without warning upon merchant vessels. Officials of the Ministry of Marine refuse to reveal their plans, as to the prisoners, but stated that they would be confined in a military prison until a decision as to their final disposition had been reached.

TWO GERMAN SUBMARINES SUNK.

LONDON, To-day. Two German submarines have been sunk in British waters according to official announcement given out in London to-day.

The Plight of the Desola

The s.s. Desola, which again took fire at the dock pier last midnight, is now in a serious plight, her bows being almost totally submerged, while amidships the ship is on fire. The firemen and a squad of reservists from the Calypso have been at work since midnight and at three hour were still standing by the controlling streams of water on the smouldering woodwork. The fire broke out shortly before midnight and the reservists and firemen worked on the scene. A column of flame shot up from the ship about 12.30 a.m., but two well directed streams of water soon had the blaze under control. Since then the woodwork in all parts of the ship has been smouldering steadily. The acids which formed the cargo of the ship, having leaked from the ship at a cost of $100,000. Although practically forty years old, the hull of the ship and fittings, exclusive of the refrigerating plant, was valued at $150,000. There is one-third insurance on the total value of the ship and this would figure itself out at approximately $50,000. Regarding the cargo, the loss will be great. At first there were 7,230 drums of sulphuric acid in the ship. When she first put to sea, 320 packages were landed in a damaged condition in addition to 1,995 drums that were landed recently and brought by train to Irvine and stored. The remaining 4,915 packages that are destroyed are valued at about $125,000.

CARNIVAL. The Carnival will take place to-night at the Prince's Rink.

The insurance on the Desola.

The Insurance on the Desola.

The acid steamer Desola, which has been abandoned and is now lying on the bottom at the dry dock pier, is partially covered by insurance. The owners are unable to say at present whether or not the cargo is insured. Last year and before the charter of bringing the acid was procured an elaborate refrigerating plant was installed in the ship at a cost of $100,000. Although practically forty years old, the hull of the ship and fittings, exclusive of the refrigerating plant, was valued at $150,000. There is one-third insurance on the total value of the ship and this would figure itself out at approximately $50,000. Regarding the cargo, the loss will be great. THE CALL TO ARMS! There's a woman sobs her heart out, With her head against the door, For the man that's called to leave her God have pity on the poor! But it's blow, drums, beat, While the lads march down the street. And it's blow, trumpets, blow, Keep your tears until they go.

There's a crowd of little children, That march along and shout, For it's fine to play at soldiers, Now their fathers are called out. So it's beat, drums, beat, But who'll find them food to eat? And it's blow, trumpets, blow, Ah! the children little know.

There's a mother who stands watching For the last look of her son, And a poor widow woman, And he's her only one. But it's beat, drums, beat, Though God knows when we'll meet And it's blow, trumpets, blow, We must smile and cheer them so.

There's a young girl who stands laughing, For she thinks the war is grand, And it's fine to see the lads pass, And it's fine to hear the band. So it's beat, drums, beat, To the fall of many feet. And it's blow, trumpets, blow, God be with you where you go, To the war.

What Twelve Cents Bought.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Never in my life," said Molly, the little stenographer lady, "did I get so much pleasure out of twelve cents as I have these last three weeks."

"The moving pictures and two sticks of gum," guessed the w a n s - t o - b e - c y n i c .

Molly gave the ladylike equivalent of a snort. "You know very well I don't ever chew gum," she answered him indignantly.

"What was it, Molly?" asked the lady-who-always-knows-somehow, patently.

A Bargain in Happiness.

"For narcissus bulbs," responded Molly. "And, Oh Lady, we've had such fun over them. You can't imagine how much. I never happened to have any before for my very own and I didn't know how wonderful it was."

"You know that bronze bowl I had Christmas? Well, it simply had to have some flowers in it so that's how I happened to get the bulbs and I've only had them five weeks and they've blossomed already. I used to think it took them so long that it wasn't interesting, but you could almost see these grow. You know you have to put them down cellar for two weeks and when you take them up I think they're just aching to grow for they begin to sprout the minute they see the sun."

Chasing the Sunlight Round the House.

"We were all so excited over them that we've been chasing the patches of sunlight all over the house with that bowl. Why even the boarder got so interested that I found him moving them from one window sill to another, and you know he's rather a stick. We all had a wager up on what day the first blossom would come and mother won, so we clubbed together and bought her a box of candy.

"Of course that was exciting, but just watching them grow was the best of all. It's so perfectly fascinating, you know, to see them change from day to day. First there's just the little tiny shoots. Then, before you know it, they're growing tall and slender like a young girl growing up all of a sudden. Then someone discovers a sheath of buds. Pretty soon the buds begin to poke out of the sheath and change from green to white, and finally someone calls, 'Oh, look quick, here's a flower.' And sure enough, there it is just like a little star. And then pretty soon the rest come out and there's a whole cluster just as if that bud sheath was one of those lovely rockets that break into a burst of white stars."

Like Seeing the World Created.

Molly paused, drew a long breath and looked into the fire for a moment. "I don't know as I can tell you just how I feel," she began again falteringly, "but down underneath the fun of seeing them grow there's a wonderful solemn part to it. It's kind of like seeing the world created, if you know what I mean."

"I think I do," said the lady softly. The cynic stood with his back to them fumbling in a book case. Molly looked around at him questioningly. "You're laughing at me?" she accused, "and turning your back to hide it."

But the cynic was not laughing. He was looking for a book. He found it and opened it. "Someone else felt the way you do, little girl," he said. And then he read:

Notes on the Patriotic Tour.

St. Jacques and Belleoram.

L. C. M.

CHAPTER XVI.
St. Jacques was our next anchorage, but only a short stay was made after which we went on to Belleoram. In comparing our notes of St. Jacques we were pleased to find many improvements, among which were several substantial residences, and also the Convent buildings and a very beautiful church. These buildings are indicative of the independence and comfort of the people, and they speak well for their enterprise. At the same time we think there is plenty of room for further commercial developments at St. Jacques, as the harbour and its surroundings seem well adapted to the prosecution of our great staple industry.

St. Jacques has long been the home of the Burkes, Clintons, Giovininies, Farrells, Skinners, Youngs and the Dyetts. These names represent the men who pioneered St. Jacques, and who in the dim past settled on its shores and many marks of their industry can be seen on every hand.

The run from St. Jacques to Belleoram was a short one, but it is very picturesque, and the mountains and islands stand out in bold relief in every direction. Belleoram is a very compact harbour and is well built up, and the town is nestled at the base of the hills, and it is one of the busiest centres of trade within the limits of Fortune Bay. The fleet of schooners of the place are of the best type of marine architecture, and they prosecute the voyage for some ten months in the year. Such names as Cluett, Rose, Critchell, Kearley, Fudge, and Brenton, stand foremost in the trade of the place, and represent the brave men who first pitched their tent within the shelter of its hills.

At present Belleoram is the centre of Messrs. Harvey and Co.'s western trade, and judging from the splendid fleet of banking schooners, and the first class condition in which they are kept, it is safe to conclude that their enterprise must be a great benefit to the place in particular, and to Fortune Bay in general. The business is under the entire charge of our popular friend R. G. Pike, Esq., and the developments which have taken place during his charge give plain proof of his ability and his success. We found Mr. Pike a gentleman in every respect, and we wish him well in the enterprise of his firm. The firm of Newman and Co. meant a great deal to Fortune Bay in the nineteenth century, but even at the height of its enterprise there was a strong spirit of conservation which was peculiar to the age, and which suited the purpose of the time very well; but this is a different age and conditions of life have changed the world over, as well as in Newfoundland; and judging from our best observations we think that the enterprise of Messrs. Harvey and Co., in Fortune Bay, as we saw it at Belleoram, should be just as great to the twentieth century as was that of the Messrs. Newman and Co. to the nineteenth century.

It is a great thing for the country to have such business centres around our coast, and we can only hope that the returns will every year justify the outlay. There are so many unforeseen drawbacks in business, and so many unthought of expenses, that one does not wonder why men go down and firms fail. Newfoundland wants more business men; and every encouragement should be given, and every confidence expressed in those who take upon themselves the responsibilities of commercial life, and who carry the burdens of finance and credit. We sometimes talk of men and their thousands and even of their millions, and it seems that there are some few who possess these things, but it is not within the power of dollars and cents, nor pounds, shillings and pence to make up for the strain and responsibility which modern business demands; and it is very certain that a great many men have to pay too big a price for their success, and too big a price for their dollars. But such are the claims of modern business; and though men see it, and though they feel the burden, there seems to be no way out of it, somebody must do it, hence the need of sympathy, and confidence and good will.

The meeting at Belleoram was held in the parish hall and was largely attended and was very enthusiastic. Mr. Curnew of the Customs Department and the Rev. Mr. Templeman and Mr. McQuish, occupied seats on the platform, and everybody was in earnest to do their part. Like many other places, the ladies of Belleoram had already been at work and their contributions to the comforts of the soldiers are well known to the public. Amongst those who had already gone to the front was Mr. Robert Pike's eldest son, and we learn from Mr. Pike that the letters which he had received from him were entirely satisfactory, and that his son is enjoying good health, and that all the lads from Newfoundland and those in the Canadian contingent were well, and were fully determined to maintain the glory of the Empire, and uphold the honour of Newfoundland.

A Child's Laxative Is "Syrup of Figs"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

M.C.L.L. DEBATE.—A very interesting debate was held at the M.C.L.L. rooms last evening. The subject of discussion was "Has the War presented any justification for Britain adopting Conscription?" The leaders for the affirmative were Messrs. H. E. Cowan, C. C. Pratt and W. Joyce, while the negative was supported by Rev. Dr. Fenwick, Messrs. A. E. Parker and W. Scott. The opinion of the debaters was very much divided, and when the vote was taken a majority of one was given for the affirmative.

Obituary.

MR. JOSEPH FRANCIS.

There passed away yesterday, after an illness of a few days' duration, a well known figure in the community in the person of Mr. Joseph Francis. Deceased who was eighty years of age, was a native of this city. About a quarter of a century ago he took a position in H. M. Customs where he worked up to the time of his demise. Though reaching an advanced age, deceased was ever active and looked as young as a man many years his junior. He was out on Saturday last and contracted a heavy cold. A hemorrhage followed and then death. He is survived by a sister and a large circle of friends to whom we extend sincere sympathy.

MR. HENRY CLINTON.

We note with regret the death of Mr. Henry Clinton, which sad event occurred last evening, after a short illness. Deceased was quite a young man and his passing comes as a severe blow to his widow and three children. He was a well known athlete and occupied the position of superintendent of stewards with Messrs. Bowring Bros. Ltd. He was the eldest son of the late Capt. Clinton. To the bereaved ones we offer our sympathy.

The Governor, Newfoundland: The French Government reports progress in Champagne maintained and extended. The French hold German lines six kilometres long and one kilometre deep. The German Guards regiment has sustained enormous losses. Some further prisoners were captured.

The Russian Government reported further progress on the Northern front. The enemy's attempts to approach Osowiec fortress have been repulsed.

In the Carpathians, successes have been obtained against the Austrians and Germans. In Eastern Galicia on the River Lownica, near Stanislaw, the Austrians suffered a very serious reverse, losing six thousand prisoners, guns and transports.

ALLIED SOLDIERS IN TURKEY.

LONDON, March 4.

Britain has landed her first troops for a land attack upon Constantinople. The military expedition not only relieves the sailors and marines who were previously put ashore to aid the warships in their campaign against the Dardanelles forts, but provides a mobile force for actual land operations by which the taking of Turkey in Europe from the Sultan is expected to be accomplished. The new force comprises French troops from Morocco, Canadians, Senegalese, native Egyptian troops in small numbers, and Australians. It is presumed that the major portion of this force was quickly transferred from Egypt, where danger of a Turkish invasion by way of the Suez Canal has practically vanished. General D'Anade is the commander of the Allies' forces. With the arrival of the land forces it is expected that the advance in the Straits will be pushed more rapidly. The military forces are being placed in possession on both sides of the Straits, the first landing having been made on the Asiatic side.

BATTERING TURKISH FORTS.

LONDON, March 4.

According to a despatch received from Athens, the bombardment of the inner forts of the Dardanelles was resumed this morning (Thursday). Ten big warships took part in the operations, and, according to a British officer, only two of the Turkish forts now remain intact.

SIR EDWARD GREY IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, March 4.

Unless neutral nations are prepared to assist in throwing the Germans out of Belgium, no suggestions from them in the matter of preventing the further devastation of that country are wanted, said Sir Edward Grey in the Commons to-day. The statement was made in reply to enquiries whether the Government was willing to invite suggestions from neutrals with a view to avoiding further devastation of Belgium by the Great Powers, which are contending for its mastery. The only solution of the question, Grey continued, is the evacuation of Belgian territory by the German troops, restoration of her independence, and reparation for the wrong done her. Unless the neutral powers are prepared to assist in securing this solution, I don't see what could be gained by the course suggested.

THE BOER REBELS.

NEW YORK, March 4.

A news agency here has received the following despatch from Cape Town, South Africa, to-day: Ten thousand Boer rebels were taken prisoners during the recent rebellion against the authorities of the Colony, and the losses on both sides totalled one thousand. The rebels will be imprisoned until the end of the European war, the Government announced, owing to the impracticability of meting out adequate punishment at this time; 293 ringleaders will be tried at once.

The New "Berlin Decree."

(To the Editor of the Times.)

Sir.—The new "Berlin Decree," which you published on February 5, recalls old times. In November, 1806, little more than a month after Jena and Austerlitz—Napoleon at Berlin issued a decree which declared the British Isles in a state of blockade. On February 4, 1915, the Chief of the Marine Staff at Berlin promulgates another decree, declaring that "the waters round Great Britain and Ireland, including the whole of the English Channel, are hereby proclaimed a war region." On and after February 18, every enemy merchant vessel found in this war region will be destroyed and crew and passengers will not always be saved. Neutral ships also will incur danger if they enter this region.

As history is repeating itself, it will be interesting to look up what it can tell us of the result of the earlier Berlin decree. The object of that, as of the new one was to destroy British maritime trade. When Napoleon issued his decree his powers of injuring our seaborne trade were much greater than those in the hands of the Prussian militarists of our own day. He dominated the coast of Europe, with the exception of that of Portugal, from the Elbe to the Adriatic. From a multitude of ports on that long coast-line commerce, destroyers could emerge to act against our seaborne trade.

This is how it turned out: In 1806 imports into Great Britain were valued at £26,899,658; in 1807 at £26,734,425; in 1808 at £31,750,557 and in 1810 at £39,301,612. In 1811 and 1812 respectively our imports fell to £26,510,186 and £26,163,431; that is to say, to the value at which they stood when Napoleon's Berlin decree was issued. That, however, was not due to the decree, but chiefly to the troubles with the United States which brought about the "War of 1812." Our export trade of the time tells the same tale. In 1806 British exports were valued at £40,874,983; in 1807 and 1808 they fell to £37,245,877 and £37,275,102 respectively, about the figure at which they stood three or four years before. The fall, inconsiderable as it is seen to have been, was in great measure due to the cessation of export from Great Britain to Russia, in consequence of the arrangements come to at Tilsit—a name which can hardly have a pleasant ring in Prussian ears. The exports soon recovered, and in 1809 were valued at £47,371,393, not falling again until our commercial intercourse with the United States was disturbed and then definitely interrupted by the war previously mentioned.

The promulgation of Napoleon's Berlin decree had no more effect on our shipping statistics than it had on those of our imports and exports. In 1806 the tonnage of British shipping was 2,263,714, in 1807 it was 2,281,621, in 1808 it was 2,324,819, in 1809 it was 2,368,468, and in 1810 it stood at 3,426,044. There was an annually repeated increase. Of course there were losses, due to stormy weather, strandings, and the efforts of hostile cruisers, but these were more than counterbalanced by the additions made to our mercantile marine. For instance, there were added to British Registry 377,519 tons in 1807, 448,758 tons in 1808, and 493,327 tons in 1809.

The following are the figures of tonnage "cleared outwards" from the principal United Kingdom ports:

	British.	Foreign.
1806 . . . . .	1,486,302	568,170
1807 . . . . .	1,424,103	631,910
1808 . . . . .	1,372,810	282,145
1809 . . . . .	1,531,154	699,750
1810 . . . . .	1,624,274	1,138,527

It should be remarked that in 1809 a large amount of our tonnage was taken up for the transport of the Army, its "drafts," and its supplies to the Peninsula, and would not appear in the "entered" and "cleared outwards" statistics.

The issue of the new "Berlin Decree" must have been due to one of the following causes. It may have been believed that the operations which it threatens to carry out would prove of military efficiency; to believe this would be to indicate a blundering conception of the principles of naval warfare. It may have been intended, though known to have little or no military justification, to satisfy public opinion; if so, we may ask, how long has public opinion in Germany been allowed to dictate military operations? Again, it may have emanated from brains irritated to the point of lunacy by the conviction of failure. This last is the most probable cause; but, whatever, be the real cause of the issue of the new "Berlin Decree," the opponents of the Austro-German-Turkish Alliance ought to be gratified, for it shows, on the part of our antagonists, incapacity to understand the principles of naval warfare, or weak piliancy in subjecting the management of it to expert public opinion; or, and most probably, something very like insanity in the supreme direction of operations.

Your obedient servant,
CYPRIAN A. G. BRIDGE.

Obituary.
MR. GEORGE BARBER.
There passed peacefully away at Caledonian Mines, Glace Bay, C. B., on Sunday, February 28, George Barber, son of the late George Barber, of this city and brother of Mr. Jonas and James Barber, and Mrs. M. DeWing, of this city, and W. H. Barber, of Dallas County, Texas. Deceased was a plain and fancy bread baker, and worked with the late J. B. Ayre for twenty-two years and left here with his family some twelve years ago to take a good position in Sydney, where over a year ago he got a touch of paralysis and later received a second attack from which he never recovered. Deceased was well known both here and in Sydney as a good practical mechanic; he is survived by a widow and nine children, two sons bakers and one in the employ of the Coal Company and three girls in good positions. To the sorrowing family we tender our sincerest sympathy.

CAPTURE LAST OF DYNAMITE SUSPECTS.
Seattle, Wn., Feb. 29.—David Caplan, last of the men wanted at Los Angeles in connection with the dynamiting of the Times Building in the autumn of 1910, was arrested last night on his chicken ranch, two miles inland from Rolling Bay, Bainbridge Island, twelve miles from Seattle. Caplan, according to Walter R. Thayer, manager of the Seattle branch of the William J. Burns Detective Agency, admitted his identity and expressed a willingness to return to Los Angeles for trial. He was taken to Port Orchard, where he was placed in jail under an armed guard.

Says Kaiser Meant War Years Ago.

London, Feb. 18.—A remarkable speech said to have been made by the Kaiser at a secret council meeting in Potsdam in June, 1908, at which the German Emperor announced his decision to go to war, forms a chapter of William Le Queux's new book, "German Spies in England," published today.

The author says he has obtained the report of the proceedings from a German of high position holding pro-British views, who was present at the meeting.

The Kaiser began by declaring that "After long hours of fervent prayer light has at last come to me. The outlook is, I admit, dark, but we need not despair, for God, our great ally, has given into our hands the means of saving our empire from the dangers which are threatening its happiness and welfare.

"You know what I mean. It is that wonderful invention which his excellency Count Zeppelin was enabled, through the grace of the Lord, to make for the safeguarding and glory of our beloved Fatherland.

"In this invention God has placed the means at my disposal to lead Germany triumphantly out of her present difficulties and to make once and for all good the words of our poet, 'Deutschland, Deutschland uber Alles.'

"Yes, gentlemen, Germany over everything in the world! The first power on earth, both in peace and war! That is, the place which I have been ordered by God to conquer for her, and which I will conquer for her with the help of the Almighty!"

The Emperor, according to this secret report, then went on to unfold a scheme by which this end was to be accomplished. When sufficiently large Zeppelins were built, England's North Sea, Channel and Atlantic fleets would be destroyed, "after which nothing on earth can prevent the landing of our army on British soil and its triumphant march to London." Fast steamers belonging to the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd lines would be relied on for the transport of the invading army.

The war would be against Great Britain and France, said the Kaiser. Russia was suffering too much from the effects of her war with Japan to enter the conflict.

The Emperor went on to speak of the United States as a country "where even now I rule supreme, where almost half the population is either of German birth or German descent, and where 3,000,000 German voters do my bidding at the Presidential elections." That country would next be taught a lesson. German power would be supreme in South America and South Africa, and, among other things, the German flag would "wave over the holy shrines of Jerusalem." The programme ends with the declaration:

"That accomplished, I shall unite all the people of the white race in a powerful alliance for the purpose of coping under German guidance with the yellow peril, which is becoming more formidable with every year."

Mr. Le Queux says he handed this report to the British Government for its consideration, that it was placed before certain members of the Cabinet, and that it is still in the archives of the confidential department.

Planting a Tree.

WALT MASON

To be in line with worthy folk, you soon must plant an elm or oak, a beech or maple fair to see, a single or a double tree. When winter's storms no longer roll, go get a spade and dig a hole, and bring a sapling from the woods, and show your neighbors you're the goods. What though with years you're bowed and bent, and feel your life is nearly spent? The tree you plant will rear its limbs, and there the birds will sing their hymns, and in its cool and grateful shade the girls will sip their lemonade; and lovers there on moonlight nights will get Dan Cupid dead to rights; and fervid oaths and tender vows will go a-zipping through its boughs. And folks will say, with gentle sigh, "Long years ago an ancient guy, whose whiskers brushed against his knee, inserted in the ground this tree. 'Twas but a little sappling then; and he, the kindest of old men, was well aware that he'd be dead, long ere its branches grew and spread, but still he stuck it in the mould, and never did his feet grow cold. Oh, he was wise and kind and brave—let's place a nosegay on his grave!" We don't forget such men as he! Go, then and plant a beerbohm tree.
