"When a Child Droops"

Hurry, mother! Relieve the little stomach, liver and bowels of souring food, bile and poisons. Look at the tongue! Children love to take harmless "Cascarets" because Cascarets taste like candy—only 10 cents too!

Children droop and wither like tender flowers if you permit bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison to be absorbed into the system. When a child's tongue is white, breath feverish, stomach sour, you can always depend upon good, safe "Cascarets" to gently but thoroughly clean the clogged-up places. Children love to take Cascarets, the candy cathartic which never grieves, never injures, never disappoints. Each 10 cent box contains directions and dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

The Heir of Rosedene

AND
The Game-Keeper's Hut

CHAPTER I.
PROVIDENCE AND MAN.

"He has ruined one of the finest estates in England," he would say, "and made his name a byword for every fool in the country. It is very well to call it thoughtlessness—I give such conduct a sterner and more proper name: it is shameful, shameful! He is no use to himself or to the world—"to me," that meant, no doubt—"and it would be better if he were dead!"

When this—or something like it, toned down a little—was repeated by some candid friend to Sir Cyril, he would look up with a rather puzzled and almost sad smile, and remark:

"Poor old Edward! been abusing me again? Hem! Perhaps he's right, you know; clever fellow, Edward! I'll bet anything he's right."

Be sure that the popular Sir Cyril had not come across the Channel without many remonstrances; there were men with yachts and moors who were only too anxious for his company on the deck or across the heather, and there had been invitations both numerous and eloquent. But Sir Cyril had stood firm; he had made up his mind, he said, to take rest and go in for solitude and meditation.

"Too many B. and S.'s. under the canvas, old boy; and I don't forget the whisky nights on your moor last year. No, I'll go and roam about the Swiss lakes and be good."

"Be bored, you mean," they had retorted; and he had responded with a little nod:

"Very likely; one generally gets that anywhere."

And the Worst is Yet to Come

to say, they were learning arithmetic by the simple and pleasing method of singing in a kind of chanting chorus the multiplication table. Most of the children were pretty, were cruelly clean, and their voices rose in such a sweet piping conglomeration of childish treble and alto, that Sir Cyril found the effect, taken upon the whole, irresistible.

The wall was not very high, and it was the most natural thing in the world for him to clamber up. There the wild scapegrace sat, gravely lit another cigar, and enjoyed himself.

For a minute the teacher, a neat little Swiss girl, to say nothing of the children, was slightly disconcerted; but discipline and routine are great things, and after a few minutes Sir Cyril's presence was forgotten, and the multiplication table was completed, and another branch of study attacked.

This went on for ten minutes, perhaps, when at a clap of the teacher's hands the circle broke up, and the tiny mites scattered themselves about like ants or bees.

Now was Sir Cyril's time. With the old enchanting smile and gesture he coaxed two or three of the mites toward him. It was a slow and elaborate process, for six feet Sir Cyril looked a giant, and very formidable, for all his handsome face—and the few, soft, coaxing words were English, and lost much of their persuasiveness; but at last, much to his delight, one little atom of a child—a little girl, of course—boldly approached near enough, and in five minutes Sir Cyril had three boys and a girl on the wall beside him, and a swarm around his feet below him.

Then he got out his watch—one of Dent's gold repeaters—and lured a brown-haired little girl to listen to the tick, and spy into the inside; he found a handful of coins and disposed of them, and was just in the middle of a hearty laugh at the audacity of a busy little fellow of six, who was attempting to pull himself up by the aid of his pants—trousers—when the little girl who was examining the mechanism of the watch, much to its improvement and her own delight, suddenly uttered a cry of joy, and clasped her hands, dropping the watch with sublime indifference.

Sir Cyril pocketed his shattered repeater, and then looked up to ascertain the cause of the child's sudden hilarity, and, following the direction of her eyes, saw—well, what he had seen a thousand times before—a girl in a balcony!

Yes, many a time had he played the part of Romeo to various Julietts, and survived the passion and the poetry of that sublime balcony scene; but he had never seen a face like this, and he recognized the novelty and the power of it at the first upward glance.

Then it rested or shone upon two small, white hands, the dark brown eyes looking down upon him and the children with a grave, pleasant regard, the sweet, ripe lips parted with a smile, the head slanted sideways a little, to avoid the downpour of the sun.

Sir Cyril looked again quickly, lest the eyes should turn aside, then glanced up again, and took a long look of unalloyed enjoyment.

What a face it was!—not so beautiful as many he had seen, but how sweet, how pure, how childlike, and yet how womanly! It seemed to him, sitting there, that one of the pure, lily-faced children had suddenly grown up into a woman, retaining all its childlike innocence and trustful dignity with the gain of a woman's soul and a woman's intelligence.

For a moment, Sir Cyril, the scapegrace, forgot everything, the children, even himself, and sat looking abstractedly upward, with his hand in the tiny paws of a child who was intently examining his rings, with two boys dragging at his legs and another trying on his hat.

Then he recovered himself, regained his hat, drew his jewelry out of danger, and with a benedictory pat on the head to the nearest mite, dropped from the wall—with what intention he scarcely knew, excepting perhaps that of getting a nearer view of the sweet, charming vision.

But by the time he had brushed the dust from his clothes, and made a step toward the house, the balcony was empty—the girl had vanished.

Sir Cyril pulled his great mustache with so palpable an expression of disappointment, that the little school-mistress smiled, and by that smile gave Sir Cyril an idea.

He returned to the wall in the ex-

WHERE COLDS STRIKE

The throat, breathing passages and lungs are the weak spots at which colds strike. And these are the very organs most difficult to treat, because only a breathable remedy is capable of reaching the trouble lodged there. Peps provides a breathable remedy, and their superiority over remedies which are swallowed into the stomach is therefore obvious. For convenience, this breathable remedy is condensed into tablet form. To take the treatment, merely dissolve Peps in your mouth, and the medicinal vapor that is released is carried by the breath to the remotest parts of the breathing passages and lungs, healing, soothing and strengthening every part with which it comes in contact. At the same time, by destroying all disease germs, these medicinal fumes prevent the development of colds, coughs and serious chest trouble.

Carry Peps with you, and when you go from an overheated building to the bitter cold of outdoors, put a pastille in your mouth. Also as a protection against germs, keep a Peps in your mouth, when breathing the impure air of a crowded theatre or store.

For colds, asthma, or chest troubles, which have already developed, Peps are equally invaluable, also for bronchitis, sore throat, laryngitis, etc. All dealers, etc. box.

test of leaning on it, and, in execrable French, complimented the teacher upon the appearance and manner of her charges, then said it was a fine and warm day; and then, in worse French still, requested to be informed who the young lady on the balcony might be.

The schoolmistress smiled and shrugged her shoulders. She was sorry she could not inform the gentleman; the young lady was a young English demoiselle staying at the house—had been staying there for a week—she was very fond of children, as monsieur seemed to be; and often stood upon the balcony to watch them; sometimes made them little presents, and—

At that moment the young lady appeared again, this time with a small basket in her hand.

Sir Cyril stood quite still, almost hidden by the wall, and waited in silent curiosity.

The girl bent over the balcony, thereby displaying, unconsciously, her neck and golden-bued head to the most graceful advantage, and a short colloquy with the school-mistress ensued; then she stretched over one arm and lowered the basket, the schoolmistress running out of the gate, standing on tiptoe to reach it, and falling back unsuccessful with much pleasanter laughter.

"Stop," said the girl on the balcony, with a low, musical laugh, which moved Sir Cyril as her face had done; "I'll get a piece of string and let it down."

But here Sir Cyril saw his golden opportunity, and seized it.

With two strides he stood under the balcony, and looked up, bare-headed.

"Will you allow me to help you? I can reach it easily."

The clear, dark eyes looked down upon him with a serene, if slightly surprised gaze, as if weighing the question of his capability of doing what he had offered, and then, with a quiet, simple "Thank you," the white hand was downreached with the basket.

Sir Cyril secured it, handed it over to the schoolmistress, and then looked up again.

"You are very fond of children, I see," he said.

ON GUARD!

Within a week, the inaugural sitting of the Peace Conference will be held to be precise on Saturday next, January 18th. It is not made clear in the despatch, announcing the German representatives present at this session or not, whether there will be any subsequent dispatch announce the personnel of the late enemy's delegation. Nothing has been cabled from across to show that a Constitutional form of Government exists in Germany, or that the Ebert administration has been placed in power by the exercise of the people's franchise. In fact we are kept very much in the dark concerning many things, which in the public interest should be made known. This is not due, however, to any disinclination on the part of the home authorities to permit the passage of news over the cables to America, but it is doubtless because of a reluctance on the part of those endeavoring to control the situation in Germany to let the real truth be known.

However enough has come through to show that the last state of our late enemy is worse than her first. Socialists, Bolsheviks and Spartacans are at each other throats, each faction struggling for the mastery, and the country is in the throes of revolution, which is rapidly communicating itself to the main centres of industry and paralyzing the efforts of those who are willing to begin the process of industrial reconstruction.

What is the real object of the present revolutionary movement in Germany, is a question frequently asked, but not readily answered. It is impossible to answer it offhandedly. Since the very day of the signing of the armistice, there has been an evident intention on the part of the German form of government to embark on the carrying out of the conditions, the delays which have occurred being to their advantage. Unusual procrastination has marked their conformity to the terms, and having secured one prolongation, they have applied for and been granted another. What their purpose is in this, it should not be difficult to perceive. They are stalling off the Allies with some deep scheme in view. In peace as in war the Hun is tricky and utterly unscrupulous, and if his object is to sow dissension, at the Peace Conference, against Britain, regarded by all Germans as their arch enemy, and doubly hated because of her part in the war, and the checkmating of Germany's world game, he is not likely to be over squeamish about the course to pursue in this respect. There is plot and counterplot in Berlin, where to all appearances everything is confusion, but underlying the chaos there is a significant something. In proof of this comes a cable from London via Rotterdam, stating that the organizers of the Berlin coup so arranged their plans that in the armistice demobilization, the troops who were released from service, consisted only of those who were not affected by any revolutionary spirit. The soldiers remaining with the colors, be it noted, are in perfect sympathy with either one or the other group of factionaries. The consequence is that the German Army not yet demobilized is largely a Red army, which has announced its intention to ignore any national assembly, and as it holds the reins of power, and has arms in its hands, it is in a position to enforce its usurpation. Against this armed force there is the Ebert group, which at present appears to control the National Government, and with which party, the Allies are apparently dealing, so far as we know. Ebert himself has great influence among the organized workers of Germany, and may possibly be animated by the best of intentions now, but it must not be forgotten that when Bethman-Hollweg in 1914 proclaimed that "necessity knows no law," and that Germany was "backing her way through Belgium," Herr Ebert was one of the Socialist majority in the Reichstag which cheered itself hoarse over these statements.

Considering the sorts and conditions of Germans with which the Allies have to deal in finalizing Peace terms, and especially the British, will have to be continually "On Guard!"

The Evangelists

The evangelistic services now being conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Demarest, were continued at Gowanus Church last night, where a large and devout congregation of worshippers assembled to hear Mrs. Demarest's discourse on Prayer. The Song Service which lasts from 7.45 until 8.15 is enjoyed to the full, and is a very real source of blessing, as is demonstrated by the deep interest shown and the whole-souled participation in the inspiring hymns which are sung at those services. Last night Mrs. Demarest very beautifully rendered a verse of "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," while Mr. Demarest, with much expression, sang "Have you Heard the Glorious Tidings Jesus Saves from Doubt and Fear," a hymn which was written by Mrs. Catherine Booth Clibborn, mother of Mrs. Demarest, after the death of her husband. She proceeded to address the congregation on the subject chosen for the evening, namely, "Prayer," taking as the basis of her sermon the command "Pray without ceasing." It is impossible to do anything approaching justice in this article to the able and impressive manner in which the evangelist dealt with this all important theme. Prayer was shown to be the "breathing of the spirit," the mighty prayer is a power of unlimited influence, and that it is indispensable to the soul. Prayer may be divided into three classes; first, supplication; second, communion; third, praise.

The first is essential. The prayer of the transgressor, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Supplication is also the prayer of the Christian, for we are not told to "ask and we shall receive," and "eye hath not seen nor heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for those who love him." Some Christians never get beyond the prayer of supplication to God, and are content to beg for me, me, me, from beginning to the end; such prayers do not get beyond the ceiling, and are an offence unto God who is so unselfish as to lay down the life of His only begotten Son for the salvation and redemption of the world.

The second class—communion—is a prayer of exchange, an exchange of thought, an exchange of love and service, a reasoning with God, having an audience with the King of Kings, to be in constant fellowship with Him. God needs our fellowship, for during the terrible agonies of Gethsemane, He said, "could ye not watch with me one hour?" God's ways are higher than our ways, and His thoughts higher than our thoughts; we need to be in constant communion with Him in order that our lives may be lived in harmony with the perfect pattern, Christ.

The third kind of prayer, namely, praise, was shown to be the most perfect form of worship, while supplication is the lowest type. No prayer is possible in a soul that is in rebellion against God. The first condition of prayer is repentance, and humility. We must approach God with clean hearts, and take the name of God on pure lips. Communion with God is only possible through consecration, and praise can only follow open and free communion with Him, for in order to praise God we must know how praiseworthy He is.

The discourse from beginning to the ending was highly profitable and deeply impressive, and those whose hearts were opened to listen to the cultured and eloquent evangelist could not but be convinced of the tremendous importance of prayer, the utter indispensability to the soul of the worthy Christian, and the constant communion with the Father through the hallowed fellowship of the Son.

Flour Dealers

With the chairman of the Food Control Board presiding, the flour dealers, wholesalers and retail, met at 4 o'clock in the Board of Trade Rooms, yesterday afternoon. On behalf of the committee of flour importers, Mr. Joe Peters reported that after holding many meetings, they had found the disposal of substitutes being with many difficulties. The F. C. B. had help in the matter. Clear heads are necessary to extricate us from the mess into which the war has left us. The chairman then spoke to some length, referring to the institution of substitutes at the command of Canadian authorities. Changes in the present situation did not call for substitutes were preferred against the Board. He went to some pains to dispense with the Board of Trade from our neighbours. Two-thirds of our coastline is blocked with ice during a portion of the year and the majority of our people have to get their supplies in the Fall, necessitating dealers to have in big supplies, which are still on hand. The U. S. A. has one and a half million bushels of substitutes now on hand, and is vainly trying to find a market, therefore, if substitutes are "hog food" then they were hog food for the past year. Board had no desire to make people use them any longer than necessary, but had to be fair to those who had large stocks on hand through no fault of theirs.

At the conclusion, Mr. John Brown, enquired as to how the regulations regarding substitutes had been carried out here, and was informed that "as well as the machinery permitted." Mr. Browning wanted to know if a certain bakery, going to start shortly would be allowed to manufacture without substitutes, when he had bought up a large quantity. The reply was that the new concern will be dealt with when it comes. Other speakers were Mr. J. Maher, on behalf of A. Harvey and Co.'s bakery; Mr. W. Campbell, Mr. Peters, Mr. G. R. Williams, Hon. M. G. Winter, Hon. P. McNamara and Mr. Moore.

At present the F. C. Board is trying to get rid of the substitutes with a minimum of loss. It is proposed to the Government that the regulations be lifted after Feb. 1st.

The Old "Ding Dong"

We are tired of the same old talking, We are sick of the same old song, Our eyes are weak and weary, From reading those letters long, All telling the same old story, Of the housing schemes glooms hoary, They have promised for several springs, Oh quit the writing and talking, At take up the shovel and pick, Let us hear the sound of a hammer, A making a sill from a stick, Let us see one upright-erected, 'Twill banish our trouble and care, Do something, for the truth I will tell you, We are sick of this blooming hot air. SALLY TWIG. Jan. 14, 1919.

Association Meets

The Nfld. Poultry Association held its eighth annual meeting last night in the Board of Trade building. H. W. LeMessurier, Esq., C.M.G., President of the Association, was in the chair, and Mr. J. Calver was present as Secretary. The President submitted the annual report for the past year. It showed how influenza and other causes had prevented the annual exhibition last fall. Those interested in poultry met the president's association at Bell Island. President LeMessurier and his committee on their visit to the Island on Empire Day were entertained by the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. The financial report showed a sound balance. Christmas Tree

The first Christmas Tree held at the new parish of St. Francis (Logy Bay, Outer Cove and Middle Cove) was a striking success. The sum of $2,000.00 was netted. This result is a tribute to the generosity and enthusiasm of the people of the parish, and the pronounced harmony and tranquility evident upon all sides. It is a strength and peace inspiring; hence the unprecedented success, which, for a Christmas Tree, would appear to constitute a record. The tree was decorated with the most beautiful and expensive decorations, and the church was driven into Wales and Cornwall. Later the Anglo-Saxons were converted to Christianity. The speaker referred to St. Aidan, St. Augustine, Wilfrid, Chad and others who had played an important part in the Christianizing campaign. In the time of Theodore, the first Archbishop of Canterbury, the English Church was amalgamated under one head, the work of Bede as an historian could not be over-estimated. Scenes of church and state at this period were shown. Rev. Canon Bayley and Smart were present, and the former proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer which was given. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Peter's River a large number accompanied him. He was met half way by other friends; when he reached home a right royal reception was given him. Later the Anglo-Saxons were converted to Christianity. The speaker referred to St. Aidan, St. Augustine, Wilfrid, Chad and others who had played an important part in the Christianizing campaign. In the time of Theodore, the first Archbishop of Canterbury, the English Church was amalgamated under one head, the work of Bede as an historian could not be over-estimated. # German Bad Faith.

Allies Will Demand Further Guarantees, and May Occupy German Ports.

9.00 A. M.
GERMAN DIPLIOMATY.
LONDON, Jan. 13.—The day's session of the Allied military advisers in Paris, presided over by Marshal Foch, the suggestion made that the Allies occupy some of the German ports. According to the Exchange Telegraph Company despatch from Paris, the occupation may be undertaken as a guarantee for the carrying out of some of the armistice conditions, and as punishment for Germany's dilatory method in complying with some of the terms.

OTHER GUARANTEES DEMANDED.
PARIS, Jan. 13.—The armistice question, as taken up by the Supreme Council yesterday, was a more difficult one than was expected, and as this was the president, the armistice delegates had been summoned to meet at 9.00 a.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday. It was not until 11.30 a.m. that the question was not only one of the methods of the Germans in carrying out the conditions relative to handing over of material, etc., but also their considerations of a more general character. The attention of the Council was particularly held by reports of internal conditions in Germany, and the Revolutionary situation, which had developed in Bremen, this connected with the Council's view of the Polish situation. The Council was particularly held by reports of internal conditions in Germany, and the Revolutionary situation, which had developed in Bremen, this connected with the Council's view of the Polish situation.

PARIS, Jan. 13.—The Supreme War Council resumed at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon. President Wilson, and French, British, Italian and Japanese delegates, were present. It was the first time that Japanese delegates had attended. The first business before the Supreme Council was the new terms for the extension of the German armistice. The terms had been formally drawn up at a meeting this morning of military, naval, economic and financial experts of the Allies and the United States. The morning meeting which was presided over by Marshal Foch, reached a complete agreement on the new armistice terms. Those present included Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour, for Great Britain; President Wilson, Secretary Lansing, General Bliss and Herbert C. Hoover, for the United States; Premier Clemenceau, Foreign Minister Pichon, Finance Minister Klotz, Minister of Commerce Clementel, Minister of Reconstruction Loucheur, Marshal Foch, Major General Weymgand, and Admiral Detsion, for France; Foreign Minister Giannini for Italy; and Viscount Chinda and Ambassador Matsui for Japan. All the members of the Versailles War Council also attended, including General Sir Henry Wilson, the British member.

SUGAR STEAMER WRECKED.

The vessel sank in deep water, and two members of the crew and five laborers, who were on board, are missing. The captain and part of the crew landed here in a boat this morning, shortly before the second mate and eight laborers reached here on rafts. The steamer Yuna measured 1414 tons, and was owned by the Clyde Steamship Company of New York. She left New York on Dec. 28th.

Lost By Thirst.

Mr. Winston Churchill was perfectly correct, says the 'Merchant Service Review' when he declared that "We were within an ace of the greatest victory the world had ever seen." "We were, but it was prevented by a cargo steamer named Freshfield." This vessel, carrying many thousands of gallons of water, was sent to supply the troops with water at Suvia Bay landing. She accompanied the troops to Suvia Bay from Malbroos. When she arrived someone told the captain to clear out, he was not wanted. The captain of the Freshfield obeyed orders and returned to Mudros.

As the world knows, the troops landed—they were between the Turks and Constantinople. In the blazing hot sun they wandered over the Peninsula, and saw the Dardanelles. They could not advance and make a surprise attack on Constantinople—they had no water. Exhausted and parched with thirst they were obliged to withdraw.

German Trickery.

(From the New York World.) When it is "officially announced" that 64,000 Germans have been killed in the war, we must wonder what "official" means in Germany now, and may believe or not, as we prefer. Stephen Laurance has stated French death at more than 1,700,000. It is hardly likely that Germans slain, on all fronts from Palestine to Belgium, have been more than half the fallen Frenchmen. Is this another attempt at national self-deception?

(From the New York World.) There are reasons why Field Marshal Haig's little talk to the newspaper correspondents in Cologne was an impressive utterance. As soldiers' lives depend upon clear orders, Army commanders use words to express, not Haig says, "Do not let us get swelled heads over our victory, the same as other persons did after 1870," he puts forth a thought which will repay pondering. The Germans had been riding for a fall ever since 1871. Victory stole away their old fashioned German morality and set them daft with wicked plans for world conquest. No one knows better than General Haig how near they came to success, but they failed and an anguished Europe is to bear for years the burden of their havoc. ### Britain to Have Supreme Navy.

London, Jan. 7. (Reuters)—Great Britain must get back to the fundamental principle of the defence of an island state which is the centre of a Maritime Empire, says Archibald Hurd, the naval writer, in an article in the Daily Telegraph concerning the peace treaty.

"Seapower has been shown to provide adequate safeguards against invasion and starvation and to constitute our first line of defence. The military problem has been simplified, for we pursue neither by sea or by land an aggressive policy.

"Associated with the two fleets an expeditionary force will be necessary after peace has been signed, and provision must also be made for reestablishment of the seas.

"Complementary to the Royal Navy must be a supreme British merchant navy and it must be one of the first talks of reconstruction to establish the essential element of our seapower.

We Know Not Why.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"As through the land at eve we went
And plucked the ripening ears
Oh we fell out, my wife and I,
Oh we fell out I know not why,
And kissed again with tears."

RUTH CAMERON

I once heard a happily married couple admit the fact that congenial as they were, they did have very violent quarrels now and then.

In illustration, they mentioned one or two miserable occasions such as the one when he had gone off to the theatre alone, and the time she had gone to her chum's and spent the night.

"What did you quarrel about that time?" asked one of the young people whose benefit the tale was being told.

"They Couldn't Remember." They looked at each other blankly. "What was it, Caroline?" said he. "I can't seem to remember," said she.

"And yet it was one of the worst quarrels we ever had," said he. "And I can plainly remember feeling that I couldn't give in much as I wanted to, because it was a matter of principle."

"So can I," said she, "I wanted to get up in the middle of the night and come home, but I wouldn't partly because I didn't want Gretchen to know, and partly because I felt it was my duty to stick it out."

"Think of it!" Almost Twenty-Four Hours. Of course it was funny, but it was illuminating as well. A matter of principle, a question of duty, so serious that it spoiled a twenty-four hours that they will never get back and doubtless (if I know anything about such matters and I have a feeling I do) made them say many cruel things to each other at a time when each tried to wound with words and looks the one he loved best in the world; and yet neither can remember what the principle or the question of duty was!

They Quarreled About An Ill Dressed Diner. I know another very high strung couple who love each other most dearly and yet sometimes get terribly out of harmony. The man was speaking of these occasions to me once and he said, "I have come to believe that most of our quarrels are just physical. One or both of us get over tired and mole hills become mountains, and we get started and can't seem to stop. And we think we are quarrelling over an injustice or a fundamental difference in viewpoint when all the time we are only quarrelling over an improperly digested dinner or a few nights' sleep that we didn't get."

"Now you realize that, I don't suppose you'll quarrel any more," I suggested. He gave me an eloquent look. "I don't realize it at the time. If I did I'd expect to be elected successor to Solomon." "But," he added seriously, "I'll tell you what I do when things are getting too bad, I go off by myself and take a long walk, and by the time I get back I've begun to get a glimmer of the right perspective."

Milady's Boudoir.

TRIMNESS AT BREAKFAST.

Are you an early morning groucher? Or do you open your sleepy eyes to the sun, and smile a good natured welcome? It seems as if a smiling woman in a trim morning gown sitting behind the coffee urn, would be enough to start the whole family on their busy way with a feeling that all the world was bright.

A successful business man once remarked that he owed his success to the trimness of his wife's breakfast caps. Her crisp, dainty freshness sped him on to his daily way through life with a heart full of cheer and courage.

A soiled negligee, no matter how beautiful embroidered, is as depressing in the early morning hours as the slow drizzle of the rain.

If your hair is of that stubborn brand, and requires the nightly visit of the kid curlers, don one of the fascinating little boudoir caps which are so generous in their desire to cover all unsightly tumbled heads. If you are a negligee woman, be careful in the selection of the colors and the daintiness of your lounging robes. The early dawn is not as lenient as the soft rays of the evening lights. Harsh colors and bad neck lines will add years to your appearance. Start the day right for your family as well as for yourself.

THE COMMON JOYS.

These joys for all who live—
The rich and poor, the great and low:
The charms which kindness has to give,
The smiles which friendship may bestow,
The honor of a well-spent life,
The glory of a purpose true,
The high courage in the stress of strife,
And peace when every task is through.
Nor class nor caste nor race nor creed,
Nor greater might, can take away
The splendor of an honest deed.
Who nobly serves from day to day,
Shall walk the road of life with pride,
With friends who recognize his worth.
For never are these joys denied
Unto the humblest man on earth.
Not all may rise to world-wide fame,
Not all may gather fortune's gold,
Not all life's luxuries may claim;
In differing ways success is told,
But all may know the peace of mind
Which comes from service brave, and true.
The poorest man can still be kind
And nobly live till life is through.

Like Men From Grave.

15,000 Unreported Prisoners Will Come From Germany.
London, January 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—There are 15,000 more British prisoners in Germany than the British records show, so that a number of men previously given up as dead or missing, will return to their homes, it was stated here today.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Silk skirts, when worn too much for any other use, make excellent dustpan.
Fastening clothes on the line by the corners is the surest way of tearing them.
In washing real lace, rinse finally in skim milk, which gives it a soft creamy tone.
Old and new milk should never be mixed, if one wishes the new milk to keep well.
A pinch of salt put into the whites of eggs will lessen the time for whipping.

An American Queen.

(Toronto Globe.)

The London Daily Express Lord Beaverbrook's paper, says there is a keen desire that the Prince of Wales "shall be allowed to choose for himself a British wife—if not an American." The biggest merger Lord Beaverbrook has ever had anything to do with is hinted at in these words: "If he should choose an American bride the enthusiasm on both sides of the Atlantic would be unbounded and dramatic possibilities would be opened up."

The reunion of the Anglo-Saxon peoples under a common form of government is the idea behind this statement. That reunion would not be promoted by raising an American girl to the Throne of the British Empire as Queen-consort. There is much sturdy republican sentiment in the United States particularly in New England and the South, where the original Anglo-Saxon stock still has a firm lodgment. An American Queen would not bring the American people round to the idea of reunion under a monarchy. The effect of so obvious a bit of stage play would rather be to widen the gap between Imperial Britain and the great Republic and postpone reunion indefinitely.

There is but one possible way by which Britain, the United States, and the British Dominions overseas could be brought once more under a common supreme government. That way should be opened. Were the British sovereign to renounce his throne and the empire to become a republic reunion would be a comparatively easy thing to arrange, and would bring with it for the Anglo-Saxon world centuries of peace and security. There is no possible combination of powers in the old world or the new that would seek to wage aggressive warfare against the united Anglo-Saxon peoples.

King George could be the first President of an Anglo-Saxon republic embracing all the British and American territories. He would probably run far ahead of the ticket on this side of the Atlantic, and might even hope for a second or a third term. Nor is it worth while trying to draw Britain and America together by raising an American girl to the British throne. There are something like two million more women than men to-day in the British Isles. There are several hundred thousand Canadian, Australian, South African, and other overseas girls who could quickly learn to be efficient Queens and have been provided by Nature with far more than the average Queen's good looks. If the Prince of Wales wants a really democratic wife he has a fairly wide choice within the Empire. Our girls would not take too kindly to an American Queen at a time when there are so few vacancies on worth-while thrones.

BRACED UP.

WALT MASON

Once more I've had my trousers pressed, on a more polished bright; I feel quite fifty for me as well as any gent in sight. When war was on the people looked with scorn on those who wore good rags; they durned, dodgasted and gadzooked, and talked of treason to our flags. And so I wore a seedy coat and pants that wrinkled at the knees; I hoped to get the Prussian goat by wearing mildewed duds like these. I bought cheap gingham at the store, with other patriotic men; the seewoyle had my father wore was put in service once again. And when I squinted in the glass, I was a wondrous sight to see; I often wept and said, "Alas! No wonder horses shy at me!" But while I thought I'd whip the Teuts by cutting down the wardrobe bills, I gladly wore my cowhide boots, my gighams, corduroys and twills. But when the armistice was signed, I hustled to the clothing store, and said, "The nations will not mind, if I wear real clothes once more. The shadow's gone from stricken France, once more the war worn Belgians grin; so I will buy some decent pants, and wear a shirt that isn't tin." Oh, James, it is a pleasant thing to wear a white man's clothes again, nor fear the bitter taunt and fling of ultra-patriotic men!

Household Notes.

An ordinary tapioca pudding can be made very rich with the addition of dates and raisins.
Apples cut in rings, fried in a very little fat and sprinkled with brown sugar are delicious.
If a ribbon is wrinkled, dampen the wrinkled spot and wrap around a clean, lighted electric bulb.
Men's common shirts, when past their regular service, make good common aprons for the kitchen.
While rising, bread dough should always be carefully covered, otherwise the surface will be hard.
Save the fat from chicken, render it, and you have a good substitute for butter when making cake.
Sprinkle a little water over the ashes when removing from the stove to prevent their blowing about.
Perspiration stains may be removed from a garment by soaking in strong salt water before washing.
In making tomato soup with milk the tomato should have a little soda put into it before being added to the milk.
Excellent shortcake with biscuit crust can be made with dried raspberries made into jam and used for filling.
A good salad is made of canned peaches, chopped nuts, cottage cheese and mayonnaise.

land, not merely to save France from the invasion, as your writer states, but with the intent that they were fighting for the liberties which are the aims of every man with democratic ideas and free themselves from the band of slavery which Germany, if victorious, had promised the world, and from that moment we have ex- tended to Newfoundland our heartfelt sympathy, ready to tender to the in- habitants all the services that we pos- sibly can.

The article signed by Mr. Munn is, to say the least, simply surprising. His antagonism, which burst forth so suddenly, shows that he has not been fighting on the front, where nothing but generous ideas have been exchanged. He was simply prepar- ing his weapons for a ridiculous at- tack, without noticing that they are worn out and out of date. However, Mr. Munn's insults about St. Pierre being the grog shop of the North Atlantic, and his Hunnish declaration of the necessity of hoisting up the war flag against France, should we refuse to give up to this Nabob the bit coveted by him, have been already properly answered by his own indig- nant countrymen, in two articles published in the Evening Telegram, so that there is no need to insist. I only wish to say how glad we are, though not surprised, to see that the type of men of which Mr. Munn's ar- ticles is representative, are very few indeed in your gallant Colony.

Bounties are paid by Newfoundland on shipbuilding, fishing vessels in- cluded, and even on some of the ex- ported frozen fish, still a great cry is periodically put out that the French fisheries would not live only for the enormous bounty awarded by France. Your readers would be sur- prised if they knew that this bounty has not given twenty thousand dol- lars per year, since the war, for the simple reason that the price of cod- fish is higher in France than any- where else, and the consequence is, that fish buyers ship to France, where they get no bounty, not only all the production of this colony, but all that they can buy through some French firms, who have, actually some branch offices in Newfoundland. These corporations do not rely on any protection to make profits on this speculation. Let me suggest that this bounty question is only an old scare- crow readers who are not competent on the question.

The statement that St. Pierre et Miquelon must go over to Newfound- land on account of their proximity to the larger colony, is amazing. Would England take that point of view by giving over to France Jersey and Guernsey, lying on the coast of France? By the same reason, Gib- raltar, being on the mainland should be turned over to Spain, and why should I not ask my neighbor's house, because it touches my own? A demand based on such reasons has no signification.

No, St. Pierre et Miquelon will never be severed from France and, al- though, we are considered by some of your writers not important enough to be taken into account, we are in the question, and we have the right to know the most important was the certainly this Bait Bill was blow on our fisheries and we immensely on its account, number of years our vessel own- with serious losses by not the bait necessary for the re- of the fishermen. By the same reason, Gib- raltar, being on the mainland should be turned over to Spain, and why should I not ask my neighbor's house, because it touches my own? A demand based on such reasons has no signification.

Mr. Wilson's hearers may instantly have thought of his own role in the war, and perhaps some of them may have suspected that he was thinking of it, too. But there were other words than his that cut deep. The German propagandists was so skilful with words that it did the work of armies. They were lying words, and the words with which the spokesmen of the Allies confronted them had to be words of truth. The lying words did immense damage; they destroyed Russia, for instance, which could hardly have been done by swords. Not swords, but words, lying words defeated the Italian Army at Caporetto and drove it far back over the mountains and into the plains of its own country. The army was reinforced by brave words, but it had to be strengthened by true words, too, before the danger of another Caporetto could pass away.

Without doubt Mr. Wilson is the man whose words were most effective. They brought disaster to Ger- many and Austria-Hungary. But Clemenceau stands hardly second to him in this respect. The freezing animosity with which he charged upon the enemy painted on the German mind—since no matter how sad- it was the defeatists could never tidge frighten, or check Lim—the picture of an undefeatable France and the picture of a lost Lorraine. Lloyd George's words were swords, over and over again. And back of these three great figures there was an innumerable host of lesser men, using the weapon of truth not less effectively than the editors used the weapons of war. As for the great artillery of words which the German propagandists so effectively em- ployed, it was fired first, not by himself but the rest of it was used by men whose names are large- ly unknown. Americans remember I forget their city, but there were Dethmeres in every country.

say something about it. Let me dis- close that we have sent over to France, quite a number of delegates, long before ever the same idea struck your writers. These delegates were our brave boys who, gallantly, went, either called or voluntarily, to shed their blood for the freedom of the native land of our forefathers. Forty per cent. of them have been either killed, wounded or made pris- oners. They all have done their duty so bravely that numerous are those who are coming back with promo- tions, crosses and decorations, in memory of their deeds, and certainly, after such a manifestation of our patriotism, nobody in any French Government could possibly have the idea or think to thank us in such a way, by handing our beloved, rock over to the first bidder, just because he thinks that it is valuable. We are on it and we mean to stand by it as ours.

Yours truly, A FRENCHMAN. St. Pierre et Miquelon, Dec. 26th, 1918.

Few Cents Destroys Your Dandruff and Stops Fallig Hair.

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy and beautiful—Try This!

Thin, brittle, colorless and scrappy hair is sure evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its vir- tues; eventually producing a feverish- ness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—any time—will sure- ly save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toll- et counter, and after the first applica- tion your hair will take on that beautiful, life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Wedding Bells.

On the 12th inst. a very quiet wedding took place at the B. C. Ca- thedral, when Mr. Patrick Murphy of Caplin Bay, led to the altar Miss Annie Molloy, of Cape Broyle. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Eadcock, of Cape Broyle. The bride was attired in a costume of biscuit colored silk with white beaver hat. Miss Molloy, sister of the bride, wore a lawn suit. Mr. William Boone was best man. The wedding supper took place at Terra Nova House. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy leave for their fu- ture home, Caplin Bay, by this even- ing's train.

Words in the War.

(From the New York Times.) In President Wilson's speech at Carlsale he said that "it is moral force as much as physical force that has defeated the effort to subdue the world. Words have cut as deep as swords." Not only is this true but the words have been wielded as vig- orously on one side as the other. Mr. Wilson's hearers may instantly have thought of his own role in the war, and perhaps some of them may have suspected that he was thinking of it, too. But there were other words than his that cut deep.

The German propagandists was so skilful with words that it did the work of armies. New Nobility and New Royalty.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

An incident of the process which was reflected in President Wilson's words to King George, "I greet the head of the British democracy," is the announcement of the forthcoming marriage of the Princess Patricia of Connaught to Commander Alexander Ramsay, of the Royal Navy. The "Princess Pat" is the most popular of English princesses, especially in Canada, where she may be said to have begun her career as a royal democrat by her bright personal independence and her popularity there will not be lessened by her marriage to a hero of the war. The Princess Patricia is not the first English princess to marry out of the royal caste, but we believe that she is the first to marry a man who has no direct prospect of a title. Commander Ramsay is indeed the son of the thirteenth Earl Dalhousie, and consequently belongs to the most an- cient Scottish nobility; but his elder brother is the Earl, and his nephew, not he, the heir to the earldom. His branch is destined, therefore, unless he should be raised to the peerage in his own person (as un- doubtedly he will be), to return to the ranks of the commoners. Com- mander Ramsay, indeed may be said to belong to the new nobility, for he wears the insignia of the Disting- uished Service Order as a reward for brave and brilliant service in the Dardanelles campaign, and by this token belongs to a company of war heroes whose fame will quite out- shine that of the mere possessors of inherited coronets. The Princess Pat has her own share in the credit of the war, for besides the personal work which she has done for the relief of suffering, she has been hon- ored by having a Canadian regiment named after her—a regiment which left the great majority of its original membership dead on the fields of Flanders. By this connection and by her marriage to Commander Ram- say, the daughter of the Duke of Connaught becomes in a manner a royal representative of the new and forward looking career of the house which is no longer that of Hanover, but that of Windsor.

Historic Phrases.

Admiral Menyas's retort to the German delegates who protested against the surrender of the Hun feet because it had not been beaten—"It has only to come out"—must be added to the world's historic phrases.

A phrase used by the late Mr. Joseph Chamberlain in a reference to President Eruger in 1899—"The sands are running down in the glass"—is rather apropos just now when ap- plied to the Germans, while we seem to have taken to heart King George's "Wake Up, England!" a phrase he used on his return from Canada a few years ago when there seemed a danger of us becoming a secondary Power.

Mr. Asquith's "Wait and See" will be readily recalled, as well as his "Ploughing the sands." The latter reminds one of Lord Rosebery's "Ploughing his lonely furrow," which he used in the speech announc- ing his break away from political life.

"Peace with honour," was invented by Disraeli at a banquet speech at the Mansion House after the Berlin Conference of the "seventies," while perhaps the most famous phrase of Gladstone's was "The flowing tide is with us," which he used in a speech during the great Midlothian cam- paign.

"Middle and muddle" was used by a former Lord Derby to describe the foreign policy of Lord John Russell, while "Defence, not defiance," was suggested by a journalist of the Manchester volunteers. "One man one vote" was invented by Major Cart- wright, a Radical of the last century. "Peace and reform" was the old Rad- ical watchword while to the late Col- onel Sanderson, M.P., is due the phrase "To die to the last ditch," which he used when speaking of the anticipated resistance of Ulster to Home Rule in 1886. "We shall resist to the end; we shall die in the last ditch ere we give in," he said. And Ulster still resists.

Democracy's Growth.

(From the Moncton Transcript.) Great changes have taken place in the government of the United King- dom since the days of George III. Overseas too, nations have grown up to full constitutional liberty under the British flag, until to-day the world is engirdled by a league of British nations, practically indepen- dent but allied by the closest ties of kinship and common citizenship. George Washington has been ac- claimed in the British Parliament as the "founder of the British Empire." Certain it is that the stand for dem- ocracy taken by George Washington has been an inspiration to liberal thinking British statesmen, in the Homeland and overseas as well as to Great Britain's kinsmen in the great Republic of the United States. The British people took the occasion dur- ing President Wilson's visit last week to make this fact clear for all time.

BRISCOE-The Family Car.

A real family car ought to be one that pleases the whole family and that is just what the BRISCOE does.

The half-million dollar motor will appeal to Dad.

FATHER-It is economical; it gives from twenty-five to thirty miles per gallon of gasoline; it is simple and accessible in its construction; it can be throttled down to low speed instantly and it carries its load smoothly at lowest speed. It responds to the accelerator promptly.

MOTHER-Its neat and classy appearance combined with comfort will assuredly appeal to mother. The upholstery is deep and comfortable inducing, the back of the seat coming right up to your shoulder blades. There is plenty of leg room and the doors are exceptionally wide, making entrance or exit easy.

SISTER-The ease with which she can start, drive and control the car will make instant appeal to her. The gear shift acts so smoothly that difficulty in changing speeds is absolutely unknown. The clutch also responds easily and a woman can hold the pedal down without exertion with the car in gear, when stopping for a few moments. The brake pedal requires such a slight pressure to clamp the brake that lady can drive for hours without the slightest fatigue. THE OIL INDICATOR, INSTEAD OF BEING MOUNTED ON THE INSTRUMENT BOARD, WHERE LEAKAGE OF OIL MAY SOIL A LADY'S COSTUME, IS MOUNTED ON THE TOE BOARD IN EASY SIGHT OF THE DRIVER. If necessary you can change a tire in a few moments, thanks to the demountable rims.

BROTHER-Riding in a BRISCOE gives you that cheery "good as the next man" feeling that adds a whole lot to the pleasure of motoring. It puts you in the envied class, instead of the other side of the fence.

FRIENDS will be comfortable, for riding in a BRISCOE is real comfort. Four full elliptic springs (the father of all springs), supplemented by deep upholstery, cradle the car and passengers against all road shocks.

Order early and avoid disappointment. An extra large supply of parts always on hand, backed by twelve years' experience, and a first-class repair department, will assure good service. Catalogues and specifications upon request.

PROTECT YOURSELF

when visiting theatres, churches or other congested places. See that you carry a bottle of PARAFORMIC THROAT LOZENGES.

These Lozenges are a powerful antiseptic and germicide. By allowing one to slowly dissolve in the mouth they will protect you against influenza and other contagious diseases. Used in this manner they form a pleasant and efficient substitute for gargling. 35c the bottle.
