NOVA SCOTIA WON RIFLE SHOOT MATCH

Prince Edward Island Was Second and New Brunswick Third.

Halifax, June 14.—Nova Scotia won the intermaritime rifle match shoot on Bedford range today by fifteen points. The total scores were: Nova Scotia, 655; P. E. Island, 670; New Brunswick, 660. The day was not an ideal one for shooting, a heavy wind blowing across the range. There were a number of spectators present, some of them spending the day on the range, and great interest was manifested in the match. Sergt. Crooks, Ist C. A. of Halifax, made the highest individual score. He not only made a bull's eye in his sighting shots, but made the possible 33, making nine successive bull's eyes. Lieut. Freeman led the scoring with ninety-four points. Individual scores were:

At one time Nova Scotia had quite a lead in the general result of these matches, but New Brunswick has gradually crawled upon them and they went into the contest today but one match behind the Nova Scotians. The visiting marksmen were entertained at dinner at the King Edward hotel and tonight were guests of the marksmen at the Academy when Roselle Knott presented "When Knighthood was in Flower."

Bialystok Hebrews Avenging Massacre

Shooting Their Oppressors From Roofs of Houses and From Behind Fences and Other Barriers.

Bialystok, via Warsaw, June 18.—In order to revenge the victims of the massacre, Jewish revolutionists hidden on the roofs of houses and behind fences and the draperies of windows have fired the whole day long with revolvers and rifles at the government buildings and workmen and persons passing in the streets. One hand which was hidden in a factory tried to make it appear that William is the evil genius of Nicholas.

The exact number of victims is unknown, but it is estimated that a hundred persons have been killed. Two hundred persons are being wounded in two hospitals of the city. Martial law has been proclaimed and troops are arriving constantly.

CZAR "TEMPTING FATE."

St. Petersburg, June 18.—The Associated Press is reliably informed that Emperor Nicholas has definitely decided to declare a recess of Parliament June 28, and his Majesty and the royal family will immediately thereafter leave on a cruise of the Finnish Fiords on board the imperial yacht Standard, which is being fitted out for that purpose. Such a decision seems to tempt fate, for it is expected it will be almost certain to be the signal for an immediate and bloody struggle.

There are two gymnasia or high schools supported by the city, one for girls and one for boys. Besides there is a commercial school for the town. The inhabitants are by no means ignorant, which, is to me, is

MANY VESSELS LOST ON NEWFOUNDLAND COAST

Fearful That Some of Them Went Down With All Hands.

(Special despatch to the Monitor.)
St. Johns, Nfld., June 20.—Several shipwrecks occurred during the recent storms. The Commanche with forty-five fishermen, and the Ocean Queen, with thirteen aboard, went ashore on the North coast. Wreckage from the schooner Dauntless has been found. It is feared that she sank with all hands. Two schooners, which were driven seaward and not yet reported, it is feared that they have been lost.

REMARKABLE COINCIDENCE IN A 'CIDENTAL DEATHS

(Special despatch to the Monitor.)
Geneva, June 20.—A woodman named Nigrette, fell over a precipice above the village of Semla in the Canton of Geneva, Switzerland, the other day and was killed. His grandfather, father and brother lost their lives in the same way near the same spot.

PERSONAL

Mrs. T. H. Bird, of Charlottetown, Mass., is visiting her son, Thomas Bird.
Mrs. E. G. Smith, of Halifax, is the guest of Rev. W. A. and Mrs. Langille.
J. M. Geldert, the court reporter, is a guest at the Grand Central hotel.
Rev. E. E. England, of Lawrenceville, has been transferred to Bermuda.
Miss Bessie Hall returned home on Saturday after a three weeks visit with friends in Digby county.
Mrs. J. H. Charlton and Miss Hazel Chute, of Middleton, are the guests of Mrs. L. H. Colton.
W. E. Roscoe, after the adjournment of the court yesterday, drove to Kentville in order to vote today. He will drive back this afternoon.
Dr. Anderson and W. A. Warren, who attended the Masonic Grand Lodge at Halifax, have returned again. The former was made a District Deputy Grand Master.
Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jordan, of Boston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Fay from Saturday to Monday. They were in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake.
Another case in which the Union bank of Halifax is concerned will be taken up on Thursday evening at the court, before Judge Harris, of St. John, arrived here last Friday and remained over Sunday. The matter went to the range both Friday and Saturday afternoons and thoroughly enjoyed himself.

The case of the King vs. Enos Taylor, which was tried yesterday was the first case with which John Irvin, the crown prosecutor, has been concerned since his appointment to the office. He was warmly congratulated on his address to the jury, most certain to be the signal for an immediate and bloody struggle. The Conservative-Liberal newspaper Strana prints a story to the effect that Emperor William has promised his support to Emperor Nicholas if the Russian ruler adopts a firm policy, but this report is clearly traceable to sources hostile to Germany and which throughout the crisis have tried to make it appear that William is the evil genius of Nicholas.

Max Pady, 79 Allen street, one of the leading certain manufacturers of Boston, has two brothers and other relatives in Bialystok. Of the massacre he is greatly distressed.

Another indication that forces outside were responsible for the outbreaks. AN INDUSTRIAL CITY.
The workmen in the city are skilled artisans. There are nearly one hundred woollen mills in Bialystok, some employing from 2,000 to 3,000 persons. In addition there is an iron works and a couple of hat factories.

"All this goes to show that the city was not one in which such massacres would be likely to occur from causes within. It is a fairly modern, clean city.
"Never before was there any trouble of the kind. The Hebrews are in the majority and there was apparently no ill-will against them existing there."
"Four railroad lines meet in Bialystok and a garrison of four cavalry regiments, four infantry regiments and usually a Cossack regiment, is quartered there. The soldiers would be the best means at hand for stirring up trouble if such a thing was desired."
"I sent a telegram to one of my brothers in Bialystok on Friday, but the telegram could not be delivered. I shall have to wait now until I hear from him. I have two brothers and other relatives there. I fear for their safety."

TRUE BILLS AGAINST LUCAW AND WILSON

ENOS TAYLOR WAS FOUND GUILTY OF THE CHARGE OF STABBING WALLACE NORMAN

The annual term of the Supreme Court opened yesterday. Mr. Justice Russell presiding. This being his lordship's first visit to this town since his elevation to the bench, the occasion was taken advantage of by the members of the bar to present the following address:

To the Hon. Mr. Justice Russell:
We, the sheriff and members of the bar of the County of Annapolis, avail ourselves of this your lordship's visit to the county in your official capacity to congratulate you on your elevation to the supreme court bench. We feel assured that your lordship will ever faithfully and efficiently discharge the onerous duties incident thereto, which your lordship's high attainment as a jurist and scholar, so eminently fit you.

Another case in which the Union bank of Halifax is concerned will be taken up on Thursday evening at the court, before Judge Harris, of St. John, arrived here last Friday and remained over Sunday. The matter went to the range both Friday and Saturday afternoons and thoroughly enjoyed himself.

Belief in Egypt That Innocent Can Touch Fire With Impunity

WEALTH MADE OPINIONS CHANGE

Noted Anarchist Forsook Followers When Fortune Came.

London, June 18.—Lord Cromer's annual report on the finances, administration and condition of Egypt and the Sudan has just been issued. As usual, it is full of interesting facts, dealing with every aspect of Egyptian life. Much that is curious and interesting regarding the customs and conditions of the people of Egypt is to be found in the report. The peninsula of Sinai which figures so prominently in Bible history, is one of the wildest portions of the Egyptian dominions. Among the Bedouin tribes which inhabit it the system of taking blood money and hereditary "vendetta" is still in full force.

AFTER REVENGE

"If a man kills another in time of peace," says the report, "the relations of the murdered man, beginning from the father to the fifth generation, have the right to revenge or pardon against the receipt of blood money from the murderer or from his near relatives to the fifth generation."
"Should any one of the near relations of the murdered man accept the blood money, all the other relations are obliged to accept, and revenge by shedding of blood becomes illegal. Blood money, according to Sinai laws, is fixed at fifty-one camels."

NO BIRDS ON WOMEN'S HATS

Sioux City, Iowa, June 18.—Last year's birds on the hats of last year must take to the woods. A State law against the practice of trimming women's hats with bird's wings or feathers will go into effect July 1, and thereafter any milliner trimming hats with feathers or wings of game birds will be punished with a heavy fine.

MORE FIGHTING IN CENTRAL AMERICA

(Special despatch to the Monitor.)
Mexico City, June 20.—Revolutionists deny that Guatemala has won any decisive victory as reported in the Panaman despatch of Sunday. General Toledo is about eight leagues from Northern Guatemala territory waiting a favorable opportunity for a forward movement. It is stated also that Pineda at any time may emerge from the forests of Peten with his force and make a dash for Quetzaltenango where the president has a large force. The government at Salvador advises that the government will declare an open war on Guatemala, in which case the disciplined army of that country will be placed back of the revolution.

HEBREW MASSACRES CREATE HORROR THROUGHOUT RUSSIA

(Special despatch to the Monitor.)
St. Petersburg, June 20.—The massacre of Jews at Bialystok has shocked the country and added to the general excitement and the revolutionists, which a commission of the Lower House of Parliament was sent to investigate. Strikes are reported at Kaluga, Krimentchus Valsk, Ushing, Velikobit, Velike, but the success of the attempt to precipitate a general strike is by no means assured.

DEATH OF PROMINENT THEATRICAL MAN

(Special despatch to the Monitor.)
Chicago, Ill., June 20.—Frederick L. Hower, stage director of the Bush Temple theatre, forty years old, whose tongue was cut last December in order to check a cancerous growth, died yesterday at his old home in Dowagiac, Mich., the operation having failed to check the progress of the disease.

Baby Always Well.

"I have nothing but good words to say for Baby's Own Tablets," says Mrs. A. Dupuis, of Comber, Ont., and she adds: "Since I began using the Tablets my little boy has not had an hour of sickness, and now at the age of eight months he weighs twenty-three pounds. I feel safe now with Baby's Own Tablets in the house, for I know that I have a medicine that will promptly cure the minor ailments from which babies suffer. I would advise all mothers and nurses to use Baby's Own Tablets for their little ones. These are strong words, but thousands of other mothers speak just as strongly in favor of this medicine. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

It is not the price you pay for a furnace that makes it cheap or expensive, but the fuel it afterwards consumes.

A common furnace may cost you $5 or $10 less than a "Sunshine," but if it eats this up the first winter in extra fuel, what do you gain? Nothing, but all the annoyance and extra work that go with a poor furnace.

Canada captures industry
Wrests England's Trade in Butter, Cheese and Lard from U. S.

London, June 16.—The business of supplying Great Britain with farm products, which for many years was entirely in American hands, has been captured almost completely by the agriculturists of the Dominion.

"Not so long ago," said one of the Canadian officials, "the bulk of the butter, cheese and lard shipped to England came from the United States. Recently, however, this trade has passed to Canada."

"And the reason?"

"Well, the chief Canadian steamship line has equipped its ships with special facilities for carrying these perishable goods."

"American farmers, in fact, have a serious grievance against the American shipping lines."

"What are you writing about, Hawley?"

"A story, I'm going in for fiction."

"Really? For a magazine?"

"No; for my tailor. He wants his money, and I'm telling him I'll send him a cheque next week."

She (still blushing)—Am I the first girl you ever kissed, John?

He—Well, no, darling, but you are the last.

She—Am I really? Oh, John, it makes me so happy to think that.

London, June 15.—A paragraph in the financial News says an attempt is to be made by an Italian syndicate to found on Vancouver Island an Italian agricultural colony for the purpose of vine culture and fruit farming, mulberry growing and silk-worm breeding.

Ottawa, June 15.—A case that resembles in some respect the Martineau case of three years ago has come to light in the Marine and Fisheries Department. Three cheques for sixty dollars each, drawn on May 23, are declared to be forged, and the police are now on the lookout for Thomas Corcoran, one of the departmental messengers, in whose favor they are drawn. The cheques were paid by local banks.

London, June 15.—The Canadian Associated Press understands that the scheme for the establishment of a floating exhibition of British manufactures, mooted two years ago, has been remodelled and reconstructed. Provided the steamer sails early in the autumn, the first call will be made at Canadian ports.

Maricetta, Ohio, June 15.—A south-bound passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railway, jumped the track at Elba, while going forty miles an hour. The locomotive, baggage car and tender went over an embankment and the rest of the train ran on the edge of the bank. Engineer Vaughan was seriously scalded and fireman Shaekles was internally injured and may die. The smoking car, containing sixty passengers was overturned, but no one was seriously injured. An investigation shows that a spike had been driven between two rails.

MINARD'S LIME-TUMBER-MAN'S FRIEND.

Wit & Humor

"Both of my grandparents on my mother's side were nonagenarians," said Mrs. Okesdale.

"Really?" replied her hostess. "My folk were all Baptist, but Josiah comes from a Methodist family!"

"Hallow, old chap, I hear you've lost your job?"

"Well, I wouldn't put it like that exactly, but the firm has been foolish enough to sever its connection with me."

Her Father—You are going to marry that insignificant little cad, Percy Millvans? Why you once said you would never marry a man less than six feet high.

Edith—Oh, I know, papa; but I decided to take off twenty per cent. for cash.

"May I ask what is going on in the village?" inquired the observant stranger.

"We're celebrating the birthday of the oldest inhabitant, sir," replied the native. "She's 101 today, sir."

"And tell me, pray, who is that little man with the dreadfully sad countenance who walks by the old lady's side?"

"That's her son-in-law, sir. He's been keeping up her life insurance for the last thirty years."

Guest (suspectingly eyeing the flattened pillows and the crumpled sheets)—Look here, landlord, this bed has been slept in!

Landlord (triumphantly)—That's what it's for!

"Now, boys," said a Sunday school teacher, addressing the juvenile class, "can either of you tell me anything about Good Friday?"

"Yes, ma'am, I can," replied the boy at the foot of the class. "He was the fellow that done the housework for Robinson Crusoe!"

Customer (after ten minutes' chewing in vain)—Water, what's this?

Waiter—Beef, sir.

Customer—Well, I'm blowed! I've heard of the iron horse and the brass calf, but I never came across the indiarubber cow before."

Mr. Wholesale—Your former employer tells me you were the quickest bookkeeper in the place.

Young Applicant, (dubiously)—Does he?

Mr. Wholesale—Yes. He says you could throw the books in the safe, lock up, and get ready to go home in just one minute and ten seconds."

"Of course, in the theatrical profession it doesn't matter how often lovers quarrel."

"Why so?"

"Because they make up every night, and twice on matinee days."

"This glog, ma'am, would be cheap at twenty pounds."

"I would take him, but I am afraid my husband might object."

"Madam, you can get another husband much cheaper than a dog like that."

One day four-year-old Fred climbed upon a chair to reach something he wanted.

"You must not get on that chair with your feet, dear," said his mother.

Fred looked down at his feet, evidently puzzled. "Why, mamma," he said, "I can't take 'em off."

Mr. Sharp, the provision dealer—so, by the way, is regarded as a smart business man—looked distinctly annoyed. Glaring savagely across at Henry, the new assistant, he said, sternly: "Come here, sir!"

Henry came.

"That lady who has just went out—didn't I hear her ask for fresh-laid eggs?"

"Yes, sir," Henry answered.

"And you said we hadn't any?"

"Yes, sir; that is quite true."

"True, you juggins, you! Didn't you see me lay those eggs myself on the counter ten minutes ago? You untrustful scoundrel! Take a month's notice, to quit, and, mind you, don't look to me for a reference. We must have no prevarication in this establishment."

Patience—That long-haired man with the diamonds, at the piano, I just heard started life as a poor musician.

Patience—Well he's that yet.

Fellow Passenger—Pardon me, your necktie has been sticking out for some time. I refrained from telling you sooner because those young ladies seemed so much amused.

Farmer—Thanker; an' the oil from that lamp has been droppin' on that light overcoat o' yours for the last ten minutes, but everyone seemed so tickled that I hated to spoil the fun.

He—Before you married me you used to say there wasn't another man like me in the world.

She—Yes; and now I shouldn't like to think there was.

Sore Muscles

Prominent athletes throughout the country find that the best treatment for sore muscles after severe exercise or hard work of any kind, is a hot bath at bed time, which opens the pores. This should immediately be followed with an application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm vigorously rubbed into the skin. This Balm removes all stiffness and soreness, and has become a favorite rub down, as it acts promptly and keeps the muscles in excellent condition. For sale by S. N. Ware.

LIVING VS. MAKING A LIVING

(By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory.)

To be so busy "making a living" as to have no time left in which to live is surely to be in a most deplorable condition.

Whatever else may be said of the modern civilized man, and the American above all others, it cannot be said of him that he leads an indolent life.

On the other hand, the American, especially in the cities, is far too busy for his own good.

The storm and stress, and the hurry and worry, are seen on every hand—and its effects are painfully visible in more ways than one.

In the great business centres, in the mighty varieties of modern industrial competition, humanity is thoroughly tired out and exhausted.

To the question: "Is life worth living?" the overwhelming majority of the toiling millions would, if sincere, be obliged to answer "No!"

With lightning-like rapidity they would reply that there was a harder, more a thing that has for them few attractions, but many tribulations.

In the great storm centres of our modern activities life is a ceaseless round of struggle and worry.

There is no time for pleasure. There is no time for self-improvement. There is no time for the proper enjoyment of the life that God has given us.

Every hour and minute, except the time that is devoted to sleep, is spent in toil; too often times under conditions which are anything but conducive to health and cheerfulness.

Early in the morning the twentieth century slave rises from his bed, swallows his breakfast as though he were going to catch a train, and before the sleep is fairly out of his eyes hustles away to his work.

Arriving at his place of work, he throws off his coat, rolls up his sleeves, knits his brow, grits his teeth, and, like a gladiator, pitches into his day's task.

At noon a few minutes are given him in which to bolt his cold lunch, and then he is being driven by the spiritual instincts, reaching out and bringing in unto themselves a rich harvest of thought, of love and of hope.

Heretofore, with few exceptions, we have had dwells; before the twentieth century passes we will begin to have laborers.

Heretofore we have lived to labor; now we will be laboring to live.

Emancipated from his dray-horse existence the man of the future is going to enjoy himself. His life will be to him a joy, something to be proud of something to be thankful for.

Instead of spending all of his energies trying to keep "soul and body together," the coming man will find time in which to let his soul rejoice and be glad.

What Women Suffer

At All Ages They Need the Rich, Red Blood That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

A woman needs medicine more than a man. Her organism is more complex, her system more delicate. Her health is disturbed regularly in the course of nature. If anything happens to interfere with that natural course she goes through unspoken suffering. In fact the health of every function in her body depends upon the richness and regularity of her blood supply. That is the simplest scientific reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth their weight in gold to women of all ages from early girlhood to old age. They actually make the rich red blood all women need.

Mrs. Edwin Ward, Brookside, Ont., says: "For years I suffered from those ailments that make the lives of so many of my sex miserable. I would break spells and become so nervous that I could not go about. My stomach was out of order, and I frequently vomited. My food I could not eat. Headaches and backaches afflicted me nearly all the time. Then I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs and went to a hospital for treatment. I had the best of care, but the doctors gave me little hope of recovery. My face and limbs became swollen and my system racked with a harsh dry cough. As the doctors did not look hopefully upon my case, I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the time I had taken half a dozen boxes there was a great change for the better. I still continued to take the pills until I had used thirteen boxes, and I am now enjoying perfect health. I have no hesitation in saying that I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. I would like to see the doctor who cured Mrs. Ward by actually making the new blood her system needed. That is all Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do, but they do it well. They don't act on the bowels. They don't bother with men's symptoms. They go straight to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why they cure all blood and nerve troubles like anemia, female irregularities, indigestion, rheumatism, headaches and backaches, sea-sickness, nervous prostration and St. Vitus dance. Substitutes and imitations won't cure, purging medicines only make you worse, therefore you must get the genuine pills with the full name 'Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People' on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Teacher—And why are you so late Tommy?

Tommy—If you please, teacher, it is mother's washing day; she lost the lid of the copper, so I have been sitting on the top to keep the steam in.

A milkman, while serving a customer the other morning, was asked if he could guarantee the milk was pure.

"Oh, yes," he replied, "it has been paralyzed by the public anarchist."

How to Break Up a Cold

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. To do this, however, prompt action is necessary. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. NEW INDUSTRY.

Making Milk Powder—Recent Factor in Dairy Business.

Important changes in the dairy business may be brought about by the extension of the new process of making milk powder. In brief, the method is to pass the milk over hot rollers, from which it is scraped as a thin dry sheet, then sifted into powder and put up in cans, bags or boxes. The method is adapted to skim milk or whole milk, and also, it is claimed, to eggs. Several hundred of the machines for this purpose have been set in operation in various parts of Europe and America. Probably there is no reason to expect that the growth of this industry will interfere much with the shipment of fresh milk. More likely it will be an entirely new source of income in the dairy business.

The manufacture of skim milk into powder would furnish a good market for the skim milk byproduct of large creameries, and the use of whole milk would be practical in sections where milk can be produced cheaply and abundantly and where there is no other market at present. Both milk and skim milk would have to be sold at low prices to make the industry profitable, as the cost of machines and their operation would make the product quite expensive. The powder has about seven times the strength of milk and has to be diluted with that proportion of water to equal ordinary milk of average quality.

Milk powder might be manufactured for provision on shipboard, in tropical countries and wherever a compact long keeping product is necessary. It parts of Europe it is used quite extensively by bakers and confectioners as a cheap form of milk. In some cities of Europe the milk powder is used for feeding infants—American Cultivator.

Most housewives judge the purity of a flour by its whiteness. White somehow signifies purity. But while pure flours are always white, white flours are not always pure.

Royal Household Flour is the whitest flour that is milled. It is also the purest. You may think the flour you are using is about as white as flour can be. Yet if you place it beside Royal Household Flour it will look yellow by comparison. Ask your grocer for Royal Household, and make sure that he understands that you mean it.

Among Our Neighbors.

PHINNEY COVE.

Mr. and Mrs. Cam Willett, of Granville were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Watson Bent last week. Mr. and Mrs. Lou Chute has returned home after spending a few weeks in St. John, at the home of Rev. Mr. Coman. Mr. Coman spent a few days in this place.

Edith Gordon, of Young's Cove, is staying with Mrs. Joseph Banks. The high wind on the afternoon of the 12th inst., caught some of our fishermen at some distance from land; one boat in charge of Herbert Chute and Victor Bent and another in charge of Robert Young and Minard White, of Young's Cove. Considerable water was shipped, the boat in charge of Chute and Bent taking in about two barrels of water at one time. They were able, however, to bail out fast enough to prevent swamping. Both boats reached home without injury and both brought in a good catch of fish.

Our fishermen are getting good catches of herring now. This supplies plenty of bait. Lobsters are less plentiful than they were earlier in the season.

Lillie Bent is home, probably for the summer.

Fred McCarthy is spending the summer at Mrs. Farnsworth's.

James Howard Young has been visiting his sisters, Mrs. Watson Bent and Mrs. Edward White.

Some improvements have been made on the Baptist church.

Isaiah Brown has been able to travel around considerable for the last two weeks.

The fine weather of last week was a great boon to our farmers. It is wonderful how fast the water dries up.

BRIDE'S NAME A YARD LONG

London, June 18.—All records were broken in brides' names at the Ham Common Church last week, when the daughter of the Earl of Dysart was married to Mr. Frederick Nymerly. It is supposed that royalties are the only people who count their baptismal names by the dozen, but Miss Tollenbach must now be classed with royalties in this respect.

The marriage ceremony had a critical moment in it and that was when the officiating clergyman had to repeat the bride's names, she in turn repeating them and then the bridegroom having his turn at them. Here are the names: Lyonnella Fredeyunda Cuthberta Edelwysytha Ysabelle Grace Monica de Ovelina Plantagenet Tollemauche-Tolmache. The bride's father, who died some years ago, had five Christian names. He was a Devonshire clergyman and a Saxon antiquarian.

PORT WADE.

The mild cases of diphtheria reported last week at the home of Mr. Norman McGrath, are rapidly convalescing.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Mr. J. W. Snow and Miss Elva J. Hayden, which will take place at the home of Miss Hayden on the 20th inst.

In about three weeks time the new pier will be completed and given over to the public.

Fish are quite plentiful, with low prices. Captain D. Hayden went out with a boat on the 10th and caught thirty large pollock with a gaff one day last week.

A light hay crop is the outlook here. Apples are setting well.

A. B. Kennell has been drawn for Petit Jury and will be in Bridgetown during court.

Rev. Mr. Kenny, Methodist, preached his farewell sermon here last Sunday.

The local election is not causing any unusual stir here except that the "big four" candidates met here on Tuesday and Wednesday night, and made some very clever speeches. We were also honored with a visit from our M. P., Mr. S. W. W. Pickup.

The gasoline fishing schooner Wilfrid L., Capt. Keams, will take a fishing trip up the bay, probably as far as Harborville this week.

Mrs. Joseph Anthony is slowly convalescing.

Wallace Nelson has taken a trip up the bay to Windsor, where the schooner Mercedes, Captain Holmes will load and thence to Boston.

HATS OFF TO THIS MAN.

In every newspaper we pick up we are sure to find a lot of gush about the man behind the counter and the man behind the gun; the man behind the buzz saw and the man behind the son of the man behind the times and the man behind his rents; the man behind the plowshare and the man behind the fence; the man behind the whistle and the man behind the cart; the man behind the kodak and the man behind the news; the man behind his whiskers and the man behind his face; and everything behind has entered on the list. But they've skipped another fellow of whom nothing has been said—the fellow who is even, or a little way ahead; who pays for what he gets, whose bills are always signed—his a blamed sight more important than the man who is behind. All we editors and merchants and the whole commercial clan are indebted for existence to this honest fellow man. He keeps us all in business and his town is never dead; and so we take our hats off to the man who is ahead.—Independent.

When the Liver is out of Order

calomel, cascara, salts, strong liver pills and purging mineral waters won't do any permanent good.

When a person is bilious, the liver is not giving up enough bile to move the bowels regularly—and some of the bile is being absorbed by the blood. In other words, the liver is in a weakened, unhealthy condition.

Now, purgatives don't act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels, and afford only temporary relief. But FRUIT-A-TIVES are the one true LIVER TONIC. They act directly on the liver—strengthen and invigorate this vital organ—and put it in a normal, healthy condition.

FRUIT-A-TIVES also stimulate the glands of the skin—and regulate the kidneys and sweeten the stomach. When skin, liver and kidneys are normally healthy, there can be no biliousness, no constipation, no kidney trouble, no impure blood, no headaches.

No other medicine known to science is so reliable and so effective in curing Biliousness as these fruit liver pills.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are fruit juices with tonics added—and are free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. 50c a box or 6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price. If your druggist does not handle them.

LONGWORTHS KEPT BUSY BY SOCIETY

London, June 20.—After a busy week, almost every hour of which was taken up with some social engagement, Congresswoman Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth left London this morning for West Park, the country seat of Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, riding there in an automobile with Mr. and Mrs. Reid.

The weather, which had been unsettled, cleared and the party enjoyed the trip through the pretty country dividing the Reid's country home from London.

The Longworths will spend all their spare time in motoring, for which the roads in the vicinity of West Park are well adapted.

REID'S GIVING HOUSE PARTY.

In honor of their visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Reid are giving one of their popular house parties. Among the guests are Prince and Princess Leitch, Lord and Lady Leitch of Lennox, Lord and Lady Leitch of Fyvie, Lord Elphinstone, Lord Hastings, Neil Campbell, Godfrey Mundy, Rupert Higgins, Misses Kate and Helen Bryce, of New York, Ogden Mills, Mrs. Mills and the Misses Mills, and Delaney Jay.

WILL BE KING'S GUESTS.

They will go to Ascot in an automobile and will be among the King's guests in the royal enclosure.

The Longworths have made several engagements in London for the first week in July. Mrs. Longworth hopes to be present at the American Society's dinner on the Fourth of July. Mr. and Mrs. Longworth still contemplate going to Constantinople after their visit to France, but this depends on the time at their disposal, as they are adhering to their original intention to sail for America August 4th.

TEBTON HATES SAXON

Feeling Between England and Germany Growing Acute.

London, June 18.—In the political world matters were never more interesting. A recent visit of German burgo-masters has left the people quite cool, Emperor William's effort to imitate the French course of action toward the country has not resulted in like effects, for conditions are quite dissimilar. As a highly intelligent diplomatist said recently: "The bitter Anglophobia existing in Germany is confined to the court and its surroundings, but is not seconded by the more solid part of the country, whereas in England, from King to postboy, Teutonophobia has become a perfect epidemic from which none has escaped."

WAITING THE OPPORTUNITY.

This diplomat's opinion must be fully confirmed from what one hears on all sides. Highly or wrongly—presumably the latter—the entire British nation today is convinced that Germany is only waiting a propitious moment to strike a death blow to England's trade, even if war is necessary.

Your correspondent has taken some pains to ascertain the reason for this. One of the main causes is the brazen publicistic of the notorious German Naval League, which openly declares that Germany must strain every effort to build warships in order to annihilate the British fleet.

Driving For A Wife Or Husband.

In many of the Greek islands diving for sponges forms a considerable part of the occupation of the inhabitants. In one of the islands a girl is not permitted to marry until she has brought up a certain number of sponges, and given proof of her skill by taking them from the depths. The sponge is a valuable commodity and is reversed. The father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the driver among her suitors. He who can stay longest in the water and bring up the biggest cargo of sponges marries the maid.

Our Weekly Sermon

Abstract of Sermon in Baptist Church, Bear River, N. S., Sunday Morning, June 17th. Inst., by Rev. E. O. Read.

"Unto I went into the sanctuary of God." Psalms 73: 17.

I have chosen this text, not because it expresses all I want to say, but because it is, so to speak, a central truth—other truths cluster around it. It may be regarded as the key that unlocks the precious closets of truth in this psalm. Many years have passed away since these words were penned by Asaph, the man of God—a man who by times was filled with doubts, and yet he passed through these trying periods and came forth into the sunlight of perfect trust in God, but not until as he says himself, "I went into the sanctuary of God." How many of us, have the same experiences as Asaph, the Thomas of the old Testament! The lessons that Asaph learned may profitably be learned by us. The text presents the proper place for standing if we would understand many of the hard lessons of life. The "sanctuary" is where God reveals, whose views of life, and whose correct views of life, and whose dealings with his people may be found. No other place so good to see our true relation to God.

Let us view our subject under three topics.

1. The Christian in the storm, or in the conflict.

2. The Christian in the sanctuary.

3. The Christian in God's hand.

No-doubt it has appeared strange to some that God did not make our path from conversion to the end of the journey, a smooth one, but (read from thence and elsewhere) that God in his wisdom has ordained otherwise. The servant of God in the olden days passed through trials and tribulations that led to doubts. He looked at the world about him, he saw the wicked in prosperity, saw those who were in the death throes, and he wondered how it could be that the other hand he saw God's saints suffering, "waters of a full cup wrung out to them." Why does God permit such things? These and many other such queries were demanding answers and apparently there was no answer, while those who remain faithful to the dealings of Providence. And the same difficulties present themselves to the children of God today. Wicked men prosper, they grow rich, they seem to have the best things in this life, and the saints who are faithful to the dealings of Providence, they are in the land of dreams, with all the peace prevailing which was superinduced by his life of good habits and good works. At peace with the world, coming no man as his enemy, my friend did not suppose that his peaceful abode would be the object of the midnight marauder. But hark! There is a light noise or the window. It could not be mice or rats gnawing, because they would be more likely to be on the inside between the partitions. It might be a wood pecker, but the noise of this industrious but destructive little bird is steady but monotonous, while this sound was at irregular intervals and variable.

The suspicions of my friend were aroused. Rising cautiously on his elbow in bed, he glanced toward the window, and gazed with keen interest into the face of some unknown ruffian framed in the window casing. This did not disturb my friend in the least. With a steady Steady movement and a Sherlock Holmes instinct, he decided to let that burglar go just so far and then rout him "foot and horse" so to speak, but practically "foot and ladder."

My friend waited and watched with all the caution of his nature. Finally he considered that the proper moment had arrived. The window was being opened cautiously. The man of the house slipped from the bed with the stealth and skill of a trained detective. Fortunately there were no tracks on the carpeted floor, and he made his way to the window without the slightest noise. It must have been worth the price of admission to see the way that that evening night-robed figure approached the window for the annihilation of that unsuspecting burglar.

Reaching the window my friend drew back his powerful right arm. It was now or never. The burglar might be killed in the descent, but what of that. "A man's house is his castle," and should be free from intrusion of midnight prowlers. Carefully judging his distance, my friend sent forth his good right arm and his fist went true to its mark. There was no awful cry of horror resounding on the midnight air. There was no dull thud as the senseless body struck the ground below, there was no clatter of ladder as it slipped from the window sill but instead there was a disgusted householder nursing a bruised and bloody hand. The whole thing had been a most realistic dream played to the limit, and the householder did not "wake up" until his hand clenched fist shattered the pane of glass.

The story is told that a certain woman was reading the matrimonial columns of a paper and remarked to her husband: "Here's a strange coincidence—a William Strange married a Martha Strange." "Strange, indeed," remarked her husband, "but I expect the next news will be a little stranger."

This is the way one of our contemporaries puts it: "Little beds of flowers, Little curls of paint, Make a pleasant cottage Out of one that ain't."

THE STROLLER

Comments on Things Seen and Heard in Meanderings About Town.

The second story burglar has made his appearance in a neighboring town, and on several occasions has made desperate efforts to enter the premises of peaceful and law-abiding citizens, to their great annoyance, and in many instances to the great alarm of the female inmates. Fortunately none of them have been very successful in their efforts, as they have been discovered in time and frightened away before they had opportunity to enter upon the premises and secure any booty.

One of the most daring of these attempts (?) was made recently, the man whose house was the object of attention being rather modest and not saying much about it, preferring not to have the affair made public on account of the notoriety which would attach to him because of the affair and his heroism, as he has no desire to appear as a candidate for one of the Carnegie hero medals.

It was in the dead of night. Stygian darkness prevailed. Not a single light shone in the house. An ideal night indeed for a burglar. Following his usual habit, my friend had retired early, and was in the land of dreams, with all the peace prevailing which was superinduced by his life of good habits and good works. At peace with the world, coming no man as his enemy, my friend did not suppose that his peaceful abode would be the object of the midnight marauder. But hark! There is a light noise or the window. THE HOUSEHOLD

DISCOURAGEMENT A LARGE FACTOR IN EVENTUAL FAILURE.

Have you ever weighed a few words of praise against many of reproach, in the discipline and development of your children and servants? Have you ever realized the effect upon yourself, after a season of self-disapprobation, of a sincere compliment from your husband or a bantering tribute of praise from your eldest son?

When the human spirit gets down to its full ebb-tide of self-depreciation and becomes submerged in that tenacious, muddy ooze compounded of our supposed shortcomings and failures, it is apt to settle sullenly in this unpleasant resting place, and while waiting for the flood to return and float it again, to be much poisoned by the microbes of the place.

There is not in the whole category of deprecative agencies anything more actively injurious to mental vitality and more dangerous to good judgment than a sense that we are weaker than we are, and unable to struggle against circumstances. To have the bacillus of failure latent in the mind, and our thinking power is weakened, our energies dulled, our vitality lowered, and the whole system out of tune.

These are almost unsuitably trivial and frivolous illustrations of a great and most important influence upon our lives, but when once you can say to the dull child: "You have made an excellent recitation," there is an infusion of actual mental power into the slow mind. The tomorrow he will come to his class smiling, and with hope in his eyes. As long as his daily meat was condemnation of his stupid work he saw no light upon his task. "Crooked eyes" that you are so delighted with her accurate setting of the dinner table, and praise the beauty of the well set board, and she will strive to really get the glory in the centre of the cloth and the sides parallel with the walls, and succeed, too! In some subtle way she has received an illumination as to the relation of things to each other, which has hitherto been lacking to her adjustment.

In the great crisis of our struggling endeavor it is harder to find the opportunity so kindly a spark of encouragement. Women grieving over defective household government, or feeling that their economic administration is unsound, or that home is unattractive to husband and sons, or that their own life seems nothing in the face of temptation, can by an unexpected hearing of a word of admiration, or a trifling concession make their tasks.

I knew a woman sent by a tutor of fortune's wealth from a noble estate to a very unprosperous home, who in the midst of regrets and overwhelming doubts of ever being able to rehabilitate herself and her belongings, was suddenly inspired to a brilliant success by hearing that her son had said: "Oh, it will come out all right; my mother could make a delightful home out of an empty barn. Before a week is over you will hear father saying that he thinks a small house for preferable to a large one." The tired little woman actually had the joy of hearing this prophecy fulfilled, and through all her weary body felt a thrill of delight as her lately distressed husband took his dinner, and she noticed the charm and "coziness" of each room.

Neither man nor woman can commend themselves or their plans to others when they are without confidence in either. Take the measure of the whole world's achievement, and you will never find a doubting mind among the victorious.

So many men lose their grasp, so many good things are strangled, and the reason for this is almost, presumptuously to say, "I will succeed." But this is as it may, it yet remains an unvarying truth that only those who have so said have accomplished anything great. To believe one cannot do one's duty is an insupportable barrier to success. Destruction is immovable; we have no other way to progress than to be faint-hearted indeed.

The brooks which we so dearly love to watch are such charming teachers of the value of finding a new way. Around how many a stern, forbidding boulder has a laughing stream found its bright way toward the sea? The formidable proposition of the huge stone to the rippling water which is barred from proceeding, would seem but a repetition of the contest of the ruddy youth with his sling, against the giant. In a day or two we shall find that with gentle perseverance and obedience to the law of its being it has subdued its enemy in encircling eggs, and it swiftly and joyously keeping on its way beyond his resistance. Always the current is strong, or deeper, more full of life and music after its struggle has been, and even the hindering rock has put on soft greenness of moss to hide its sternness.

Two things we know about temporary defeat: "The greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising with every failure to use a fresh energy toward success"—always, in everything, we have to fight for victory "as if we were not wounded."

There is a tragic failure which humiliates many a mother's heart when she has brought every loving wish, every intelligent force, every subtle and open influence, to guard and keep her sons from the pitfalls of the world, she sees no fruit of her labor, no token of resistance in either word or conduct. Usually, this form of apparent defeat is hidden from the world, and the wound bleeds in a secret place, without a moan to betray its existence. But if the mother heart gives us hope, and lets her efforts die out into a passive endurance of what she has ceased to try to help, she may have given up just at the moment when she had begun, unknown to herself, to move the indifferent and stubborn nature of her child. If she has the loving art never to disclose her fears, but ever keep the smile of hope before her boy's eyes, she may even win her battle after she has ceased to be able to fight. On her grave her son may lay the laurel of a victory that she had ceased to believe possible.

In our youth, especially in the youth of clever men conscious of power, discouragement is apt to come in the form of real denial of recognition, and reward in their chosen fields of labor. Just so surely as this insidious foe gets serious possession of the forces of brain and heart, the best work of either is impossible. They retreat and though they retire in good order, they are yet succumbing to the opposing power.

The brook's only real danger from the fallen boulder lay in the exposure of its waters if it should be inactive and lifeless, exposed to the greedy influences of the sun and air. It might seem a weary bit of toil to encircle the formidable stone, but "heart within and God abroad," its joyous, vigorous, hopeful perseverance.

We all expect too much of life. We are not children let loose in a play ground, and we must contend with small attainments, if indeed, we attain at all, until we have gathered force for a forward movement. Even with things toward which patience seems necessary, we must wait, and we do best by calmly waiting opportunity with our minds unimpaired by the worry which disables a thousandfold more rapidly than the most strenuous labor.

We hurt ourselves, too, by using strong and vigorous faculties to no end. We fight, but we beat the air. The enemy is not in position, and we are not in a place where we can strike. We must be patient with the present, and vigilant to find a vantage ground, in to gain, not lose strength. To struggle with intangible and insupportable things which we cannot control, is to waste our strength as we are deprived of every weapon of defence.

Fate, as we profanely call the controlling circumstances which encompass us, is but a figment of the imagination. A brave man fighting for a man's moderate share of this world's harvest of love and life will "win out" in the end, if he is reasonable in his desires, honest in his dealings, and never daunted by what men call ill-luck. But he must remember that he cannot be the boulder, which he must cheerfully circumvent. Today, this year, this hour, are not fair specimens of our destiny.

When we see how many lives are blighted, what wrecks are stranded on every dangerous reef within our knowledge, it is natural for a man or woman not inclined to overrate his or her ability to quail and be afraid. If we must be allowed to stray from the reason for these disasters which so daunt our courage, it would, I am confident, be found to lie in their too quick despair, and the waste of power in half-angry, half-defiant discouragement.

To the women of this world the treasures of Hope belong; to them is fittingly entrusted the duty of looking with good cheer on that future which is as likely to hide a joy as a sorrow, and of imparting the buoyancy of possible relief to anxious hearts. It is their special prerogative to inspire their husbands and sons and "rouse them to the race and make them strong."—New York Evening Post.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A narrow strip of muslin pinned across a cake will prevent the icing from dripping down the sides, as it too often does. After the icing hardens the muslin may be removed without injury to the appearance of the cake.

To prevent cake from sticking to tins when baked, first grease tins, then flour them, lightly beating out the sides, and leaving only what clings to the grease, thus doing away with the old form of lining with paper.

Do not spoil the effect of daffodils, tulips, narcissi, and other spring blossoms by arranging them in glass vases. These flowers show to better advantage when in lovely greenery, and look more like the flowers of earth when they stand in straight earthenware jars. Take the hint and provide the simplest of flower jars, cylindrical in shape and quiet in color. A great many American potteries are to be had in lovely green, and some in brown. They are dull in finish and very good in design. The best of these depend on color for their attractiveness and are here of ornament or decoration.

The "House Beautiful" once published a list of things nobody ought to buy for the house. It is good enough to reprint. What we do not want: Parlor furniture, carpets, lace curtains, ready-made curtains, hat rack, umbrella holder, small draperies, gilt picture frames, small gilt chairs, grille work, ornaments, colored lamp shades, book-cases, gas-lights, sofas, upholstered chairs, jardiniere of glazed china. Built-in china closets and book shelves were preferred to ready-made pieces, and a piano was wanted only if the family was musically inclined.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Of all the words in the English language "don't tell" are paid the least attention.

The only trouble with experience as a teacher is that the knowledge she gives comes too late.

The trouble with the average father being prepared for a rainy day is that his daughter's wedding day gets him first.

Don't cultivate that habit of looking for something to worry about. You may some day have your search rewarded.

Sometimes people complain of their individuality being crushed out when it would really be the best thing that could happen to them.

Gratitude is a strange thing. You never find it where it should be found, but in cases where there is seemingly little or nothing to be grateful for it abounds.

Alleviating Circumstances.

It distressed Miss Willing to find how much the little girls in her Sunday school class thought about dress and outward adornment. She never lost an opportunity to tell them how light was the importance of such things.

"The reason I didn't come last Sunday was because my coat wasn't finished," said small Mary Potter one day when questioned as to her non-appearance the week before. "My old one had spots on it that wouldn't come out, and in cases where there is seemingly little or nothing to be grateful for it abounds."

"But, Mary, dear," said the teacher gently, "you know it's not the outside that really matters."

"Yes'm, I know," said little Mary, "but Miss Willing, mother had ripped the lining out, so there wasn't any inside to look at!"—Youth's Companion.

which can easily be manufactured at home.

The new French sailors, with their exaggerated forward "tilt," require a high upward bow at the side, the loops being well wired, so that the bow may assume the correct shape. This bow is usually made solely of loops emerging from a tight twist of ribbon, somewhat after the style of a growing lettuce, each loop being given a turn—inside out—after the bow is made.

In sewing the bow to the hat, double cotton and a long thick darning needle should be used, the latter in preference to the ordinary needle. The cotton should always be used double and when necessary, the best plan is to cut it about two inches from the material, and with the two ends tie a double knot before cutting them off close to the stitching.

Delicately feathered mats seem very securely, in the first place round the quilt at the point where the feathers terminate, and a dozen turns of cotton, at least, being necessary. When it is wished to keep the plumes in the required position round the crown or allow them to droop over the side, four strands of cotton should be passed and knotted over the quilt about the middle of the plume where the feathers are closest. Instead of pulling the cotton taut it should be left loose, so that the plume is not dragged or bent in any way, but, all the same, is prevented from becoming untidy on a windy day or when driving. After trimming a hat—whether with feathers or flowers—it is often recommended to try the effect of the wind by holding out of the window. Amateur millinery triumphs should not be fine weather trophies, but should be sewn sufficient to secure to stand any strength of wind or weather.

How Red Rose Tea is Grown

TEA is a native plant of Northern India. Transplanted to Ceylon it lost much of its strength and richness, but gained in fragrance and delicacy. That is why Ceylon tea is not a strong tea. That is why I blend Indian and Ceylon teas together—that is how the strength and richness, fragrance and delicacy of Red Rose Tea are secured—that is why Red Rose Tea has that "rich fruity flavor."

SCHEMES OF THIEVES

TRICKS OF THOSE WHO OPERATE IN JEWELRY STORES.

The Way One Place Was Completely Cleaned Out—How Windows Are Broken—Getting a Safe That Was Botted to the Flooring.

A number of jewelers were dining together and with the cigars the talk turned on jewelry thieves and their methods.

The first story was told of an individual who was seen looting about the plate front window of a jewelry store. No particular attention was paid to the man at the time, but the clerks recalled the incident after the robbery. In this instance the man appeared a number of times in front of the store. One evening soon after dark there was a sudden crash, and a robbery was actively engaged in scooping in jewels with a hooked stick. In thirty seconds he was done and away. Bystanders stood as if petrified until the man struck out at a run. Then the store people and the bystanders realized what had occurred and shouting "Thief!" started after the man.

The man dropped his bag. The pursuers stopped and seized the bag. They returned to the store with the bag in high glee, remarking incidentally that there was no need in chasing the thief because here were the goods. The proprietor of the store and all the clerks had followed, but having Decker to go than the crowd, were behind and were met by the people with the bag. Proudly the bag was opened. It contained a brick. The thief had dropped it to check the pursuit. Realizing the trick had succeeded, the crowd, headed by the salesmen and proprietor, went back to the store only to discover that the window had been cleaned of stock and the counters were bare of a number of costly articles.

A policeman on duty said that after the proprietor and clerks of the store ran for the departing thief a neatly dressed gentleman, with all the airs of a member of the firm, gave directions to two other men to get the stuff out of the windows and told him the officer that this was being done as a precaution against theft while the window was broken. In some first class stores there is a regular danger signal arranged, and the men are drilled each week. When the danger gong sounds one man takes his place at the door, another at the telephone to send word to the police, another with running qualities makes for the door in readiness to pursue, and so on.

Among other stories told were some relating to the tricks and devices of the jewelry thieves. The robber often works at night or sometimes during a crowd by cutting out a disk of glass near where some costly goods are shown. He may reach in and secure something and be off before detected if he is quick. Sometimes he has a long instrument hidden under his coat, so that he can reach in and pick up a watch. Often again he uses a simple stick with a slightly turned end, looking into a ring.

The process of crushing in a plate front during the intervals of the patrol of the police, at the same time making no noise, is done by pasting cloth or heavy paper on the glass. A wood mallet is used, the hammer ends being securedly bound up in a heavy wadded fabric stuffed with excelsior or kindred material. With this soft headed mallet it is possible to bang away noiselessly at the glass until the pane begins to crumble. Unless the plate is usually thick an opening can be made without much trouble.

In recent years jewelry thieves, like bank robbers, have rented quarters near the place they intended to rob and lived there long enough to study the situation. In one case a room was hired over a jewelry store and entrance effected to the store by means of a rope ladder dropped from the window of the room to a window leading to a hall in the store portion. In another case the bar spreader was used to open the bars of a window. This device consists of a spirally threaded shaft fitted into two blocks, with a central piece with a bar for turning. The blocks are adjusted between two bars, the central piece turned, whereupon the spiral shaft causes the blocks to expand sideways, forcing the bars open. Then the intruder can pass in.

A story was told of the removal of a safe in which the proprietor of a jewelry store was accustomed to put his costly stock each night. It was not a large safe, but exceedingly strong, and because of its light weight a number of bolts were put through the floor and connected with the safe bottom. The proprietor often said that thieves could not take the safe unless they took floor and all. Not long after the store was entered, and, behold, the thieves had saved out the section of the floor to which the safe was fixed. The safe was found in with four men.

They passed under the separated section of flooring, and, when the boards were saved through, safe, floor and all were lowered into the basement and readily moved out through the basement door, put into an express wagon and carted off.

Taking No Chances.

A Glasgow steamer was laboring in a heavy sea, the waves sometimes sweeping her decks, but the officers had assured the passengers that there was no danger, and all seemed reasonably calm with the exception of one meek appearing little man, who every few minutes would approach an officer and anxiously inquire if he thought the ship would founder.

"No, I tell you" one of them finally exclaimed, with impatience. "What is the matter with you? Look at those other people—they are not scared to death."

"Oh, I'm not scared," the man replied. "But if the ship was going to founder, I wanted to know a little ahead of time."

"Oh! Wanted to tell your friends goodly and all that?"

"Well, not exactly," the man said hesitatingly. "The fact is, my mother-in-law is along with me, and if the ship was quite sure to sink I wanted to say a few things to her."

The Ancients and Medicine.

A roll of papyrus acquired by Dr. Ebers in the vicinity of Thebes, Egypt, in the winter of 1872, from an Arab who made ancient grave robbing a business, after investigation and translation was deposited in the library of the University of Leipzig. The script of this papyrus is hieratic. The date of it is said to be over 7,000 years ago. It is a comprehensive treatise on medicine. Diseases of the abdomen, the chest, the heart, the eyes, the ears, and so on, are carefully arranged and described in a manner that would command respect at the present day. For instance, of the heart the papyrus classifies the troubles as fatty degeneration, dilation, cardiac, angina, or spasm; hypertrophy (enlargement), thrombosis (plugging) and dropsy. Of medicines over 750 different substances are enumerated, and they are prescribed in pills, in tablets, in capsules, in decoctions, powders, in ointments, lotions, cataplasms and plasters.

When Lowell Was Suspended.

A biography of James Russell Lowell says of a famous incident of the poet's college life: "Throughout his senior year his unexcused absences from recitations and chapel exercises increased in number until they reached a total that even now is startling to an academically trained reader. Finally, as the story runs, there came a characteristic ebullition during one of his infrequent appearances at evening prayers that brought matters to a head. Having been elected in the morning poet of his class, Lowell had spent the day in ambrosial jubilation. At prayers that evening, being still jubilant, he arose in his seat and bowed low to the right and to the left. Coming at the end of a long career of consistent negligence, this breach of decorum was not to be passed in silence." Lowell was as a consequence suspended.

Plaster Casts.

Those who have plaster casts that they wish to preserve may protect them from dust by brushing them with a preparation of white wax and white soap, half a teaspoonful of each held with a quart of rain or other soft water. Use when cold, and when they are dried the casts may be wiped with a damp cloth without injury. To harden casts brush with a strong solution of alum water and brush with white wax dissolved in turpentine. Put the cast in a warm place to dry after using the latter, and it will have a look not unlike that of old ivory.

The Perfect Exercise.

The game of golf fulfills the axioms laid down for a perfect exercise—a walk with an object. When it is considered that the limbs and the trunk are exercised golf may be classified as one of the few games, if not the only game, which affords a complete exercise in itself.—Professor Cautley's "Physical Efficiency."

Not Worrying.

Young Wife—I want you to promise me one thing. If we would avoid trouble we must live within our means, and to help me in doing this I want your promise that you will never run in debt. Young Husband—I will promise, my love. If I ever get in debt I'll let the other fellows do the running.

The Supply Held Out.

Tommy (at the supper table)—Now, ma, may I have a piece of chocolate cake? You said I might after the minister had taken three pieces, 'cos that was enough for any man, saint or sinner.

His One Error.

Benham—I can't let you have any money. I paid a bill today. Mrs. Benham—I thought you said you never made mistakes.

Two Much Levity.

Kilduff—For a bill collector young Dunn displays considerable ill timed levity. Skidmore—In what way? Kilduff—When he comes after an account he says cheerfully, "Did you want to see me today?"

Of course there is no future for stale
breasts or for a man who stands still and ceases to grow. He is old who thinks he is old and useless who thinks he is useless. When a man has ceased to grow he begins to die, and many people are half dead at fifty, not because of their age, but because of their mental attitude, because of the way
they face life.

There are many excited hearts in the world at this moment. This is the month of weddings.

The fathers and mothers, tearful
but hopeful, see their children go out into the world to carry on its most important work, the continuation of the human race.

The young brides, full of happiness,
ignorant of the world and of that deeply important work which develops upon them, are filled with the beautiful, childish excitement of young girlhood. Their dresses, their bridesmaids, their young man's wonderful moustache or herculean proportions
delight and entrance them.

The young men, soon to join the ranks of useful citizens and fathers,
are nervous, excited—strange mixtures
of modesty and boasting.
Little girls whose time has not yet
come are twittering and fluttering.
The unmarried young men at large
look grand and haughty—their time
is not far off. Every good example
does good work—every marriage
means other marriages.

After the rice-throwing and the laughing and the weeping, today's bridesmaid talks for a few minutes
and suddenly finds herself the engaged
young girl with next June staring
her in the face.

The human race does not appreciate the full meaning of marriage,
its preliminaries in which Nature,
with wonderful wisdom, selects the
best samples for survival.

All over the country you hear of
wise people—usually old—with plans
for bettering the race and bringing about wiser marriages. They call it "Stirpiculture." And the solemn United States Government has recently seen submitted to its lawmakers
some scheme for bettering marriages,
improving conditions, etc.

But Nature knows more about stirpiculture, more about marriage
and happy homes, and good babies,
than all the stirpiculturists and
scientists in the world.

The short little girl, nervous and timid, looks out of her pretty brown eyes at the big man with the wide shoulders, big muscles and self-confidence. Art might say to you, "The woman is too little and the man is too big." Nature says to the little girl, "Marry that big man." She does
it, much to the big man's delight,
and the next generation is of the average size once more.

The short little man, with the big head but thin legs, looks at the statuesque tall girl, gasps, mutters
to himself, "June—how lovely!" and

soon he is buying furniture, starting
a savings bank account, reading books on infants—again Nature keeps up the average.

The good quality in a man is discovered with unerring accuracy by a young girl who knows nothing of the world. She can pick out sincerity in a human being, as no stirpiculturist can do. And, what is more, she can hand that sincerity down to the next generation.

Wonderful is marriage. And wise are the laws that make it binding, that recognize man's inferiority in morals
and in faithfulness to woman.

Dear readers, do you realize why
we have slowly progressed until from men that cracked each other's bones
to get out of the marrow, that murdered their old mothers and fathers to get them out of the way, and killed their children, we have developed into beings almost civilized,
almost worthy of the beautiful earth,
of the marvelous future that cosmic
wisdom gives to us?

We owe this progress—almost all of
it—to the selection of mates, to the development of affection that precedes
this wedding month of June, and that leads up to the happy marriages.

Why have men become gentler, more loyal? Because gentleness and loyalty

are beautiful in the eyes of the best
women. And savage men have gradually eliminated the worst traits in their character to obtain the greatest reward—the affection of the gentlest
women.

Woman in turn has been elevated
by her affection for her husband, and
her love for her children.

The son of the fiercest man passes
his infancy in the arms of a gentle mother. Kindness is taught him by example before he can speak. And it is whispered into his ear when first
his little brain begins to learn of the world about him.

Inevitably the race has improved,
since the instincts of the roughest
men have made them subdue themselves to please the gentle women,
and since the intense mother love for children, with its mercy and self-denial, has been reflected upon every little growing child.

Young men and young women, read
all that you can about the happy marriages of this month. Look at the pictures of the brides, radiant and stately, of the bridegrooms, looking foolish but earnest, and realizing
how unimportant they are.

Remember that during hundreds of centuries past men have lived and struggled and endured, crudely improving the world, gradually making

possible the comforts, the freedom,
the possibilities that you enjoy.
Realize that your highest duty is to hand on to the future generations
that which has been given to you.
You will find true happiness only in marriage, in children, in the knowledge that you have not broken the chain which connects you with the dark past of your race and all its glorious achievements.

Don't worry too much about money. A good wife will multiply an ordinary man's powers by five or by ten, often making a success of mediocrity.
Don't worry too much about beauty. Character, spirit, earnestness above all, are the qualities that the human race needs.

Young women, don't be too hard to persuade. Don't wait too long.
Look for honesty, look for simplicity,
earnestness, in young men.
All hail the beautiful month of June, its happy weddings—the hope
of this world in the future.—Boston
American Editorial.

gains you advertised?

dish for nothing.

WHEN BRACE WAS CONVETED.

- By Joe Raymond

Brace glanced dimly over the
drear landscape and contrasted the reality with the bright dreams that had been his when he had first graduated.

Then his mind had been filled with visions of Cavalry Barracks, the distinguished civil engineer, modestly accepting the plaudits of the world as
the creator of the great railway
across South America, or disclaiming
credit for the building of the Isthmian canal; a disclaimer not allowed
even by his enemies.

But these golden dreams had quickly faded. The reality was the bossing of a construction gang over a particularly nasty bit of the projected Southwestern.

"I know that you are an engineer
not a gang foreman," the chief of construction informed him, "but this stretch of track is going to give us
more trouble than the rest of the road put together. We need an engineer on the ground constantly and we cannot afford both him and a foreman. It will give you experience that will fit you for the main office after
the road is constructed," he had added
significantly, and Brace had gone off with his crew cheered by the promise. The Southwestern would amount to something when it was built even though they were signally
in its construction. It was to tap three new gold fields and vast stretches of desert reclaimed by irrigation dams.

His section included the divide,
where the barrier between east and west was surmounted, and Brace at least escaped the monotony of the plains.

Along the track the fires blazed as
the Italians cooked their evening meal, lighting up the dense green of
the undergrowth beside the track.
Perossa, his assistant foreman, walked up and down beside the camp
train seeing that the men were content, and as he passed the engineer's car he looked up with a smile and a courteous gesture toward his cap.
Brace smiled in return and tossed
down one of his precious cigars.
"Everything all right, Perry?" he asked, employing the nickname he used to "humanize" the foreigner as he expressed it.

"Everything, Signor," was the response, "except that we may expect a delay shortly. It is a saint's day."
"Tell them to forget it," he advised. "We had three last month. We've got to get this stretch built in a hurry and we can't if they will insist
on laying off every other day."

Perossa passed on down the track
shaking his head. Brace watched him go, then, with a gesture of irritation
he dropped from the car to the track
and made off up a gulch that ran at angles to the right of way.

Presently he gave a start. There,
ahead, was a tiny tent gleaming
white in the fading light, with a little fire in front of the entrance. It would be a good thing to be able to sit down and smoke a pipe with a white man once more. This was probably some prospecter. He pushed ahead with a cheery shout.

He was answered by a frightened
cry as he broke through the brush,
and from the fire, where she had been stooping, a girl looked up.

"With stammering lips Brace made
apology for the fright he had caused.
"I wanted to talk to some one," he explained, wondering how it was that these Mexican girls could look so refined. This one had the grace of a princess.
"Now that you are here," smiled
the girl, "will you not have a cup of coffee?"
His smile was answer enough as he made himself comfortable on one of the boxes that served as furniture.

"Are you not afraid?" he asked
curiously. "There is a railroad camp nearby."
For answer she drew out a revolver,
no pearl-handled affair, but a short 38. "I can take care of myself," she said significantly.
"Prospecting?" he asked, his glance

roving in search of tools. The girl shook her head.
"You are Mr. Brace?" she asked. He nodded. "I am Nini Perossa," she explained. "I cannot travel with the plains, but it is nice to be here in the mountains; it is not hard to move
and I have kept pace with you
through the time you have been here.
I would be lonesome in some big city
for I do not understand your American ways. Now we can see each other frequently."

"It's about time he was along
now, isn't it?" he asked.
"Not this evening," she explained.
"He says that the men are uneasy,
and that it is best he should be there
to watch. Are you not a little hard on them?"
"I think they are hard on me," he said, savorily. "We have lost about a dozen mechanics constituted the American element and they, marshaled
by Perossa, came running toward them."

At their approach the pursuers
halted for a moment and enabled Brace to join the party. Together they made their way back to the camp.

Brace's car stood a little apart
from the others, and this was turned into a fort. Nini seized a gun, in spite of Brace's expostulation, and took her place at one of the windows.

For a time they held the mob at bay and even gained a little for they withdrew into the shelter of the nearest car, some thirty feet away.

With a gasping cry Nini darted toward the platform. Brace and Perossa followed to bring her back, but already her ringing cry had attracted the attention of the mob.

In Italian she called to them that at the first sign of movement she would shoot into the car. There was a momentary stir, but no one moved away from the group. In an instant
they had realized what the threat meant. The car was the one in which was stored the dynamite to be used in blasting out the cut ahead of them. It had been brought up by the supply train that afternoon and had been shunted to a siding until a work
engine could run it to the cut beyond.

The concussion of a shot might or might not explode the contents, but there was danger in taking chances.
The mob covered at the thought of
what might happen and waited.

How to Arrange Filmy Lace Neckwear

The soft lace collars and stocks and
the airy neckties ofingerie blouses,
which will be more in evidence in the next few months, must be held up trim and tight around the neck if they are not to look hopelessly untidy.

How to secure this effect is always a problem.

The transparent lace collars is always a problem.

The transparent lace collars, which cannot be stretched, yet which are such bed stings when allowed to drop
into a tight strangle around the throat
are particularly hard to manage.

For neckties, an unobtrusive habit
of pushing through their neck covering to directly scratch the neck.

The little gold and silver collar
supporters—some of them jeweled—
and their many cheap imitations, are

well liked by those who use them,
but are by no means generally adopted.

For stocks that are transparent,
yet not sufficiently starched to stay
up without some aid, one young woman inverted the scheme of slipping
inside her collar just against the chin
a stiff calling card. This kept the collar from getting that ugly sag in front which always detracts from a neat, well-groomed appearance.

Since lacing is about the only
practical method to keep up a collar,
the new sets of bones covered and
warranted not to push through,
should prove a great convenience.

These sets consist of four bones
graduated in size, with usually two sets on a card. They come just ready to be sewed on. This does away with the necessity of measuring, cutting off
the bone and fastening the silk over

the rough end, which has hitherto been the somewhat laborious method
of boning a collar.

The sets, besides being graduated,
come in different heights to fit long,
short and medium necks.

Besides being easy to adjust and non-scratchable, this new boning has the merit of washing perfectly. It never rusts or warps.

Some women like extremely the
stiffness made in the form of a separate collar to be worn under any gown. They certainly have the merit of convenience, also keep the outer collar very neat and smooth, but
many object to the extra thickness
they give around the neck. For more than ever now, the really classic throat is the one that is long and very slender though well rounded.
Therefore, all bunchiness in collar effects is to be rigorously avoided.

Bachelors to Get the Skiddoo

Ninety-seven marriageable spinsters
in the village of Ecausaines, Belgium,
have completed arrangements for the next bachelor party, which will be held this month.

The spinsters held a meeting recently at which the program was arranged. Letters were read from late members of the spinsters' executive committee, who have recently resigned on account of their having found husbands at the last bachelors' party.

The executive committee authorities
recommended the town of Ecausaines
as the place of the principal streets be changed to Place de Finances, Place
Congue and Place de la Concordie.

The bachelors will be received at the gates of the town by a reception committee composed of the prettiest
marriageable spinsters.

The new president of the spinsters'
association—the late president having been married two months ago—will deliver an address of welcome, which will be responded to by a bachelor.
The bachelors will then be escorted

around the town by the reception committee. After the "promenade," during which the visitors will be given a fair opportunity to inspect the charms of the spinsters, a concert will be given in the public park.
The band will play nothing but nuptial marches and love songs.

At sunset dinner will be served in the Town Hall, the bachelors and spinsters occupying alternate seats.
Any bachelor who wishes to sit beside
a particular spinster may do so.

A grand ball will follow, and it is expected that a number of engagements will be announced before the evening is over.

At the meeting of the executive committee held last evening, the spinsters listened attentively to a lecture by one of the unmarried ladies on "the art of finding husbands."

Mr. Humley is becoming quite attentive to you," remarked Miss Cutting.
"Yes," replied Miss Hauty, "but really you don't suppose that I'd consent to or accept a proposal from him, do you?"
"Oh, no! Of course, I know you wouldn't take that long."

SEND EXHIBIT TO THE DOMINION EXHIBITION

One of the fine exhibits at the Dominion Exhibition in Halifax this year will be that of the Province of Saskatchewan. President Longley is in receipt of a communication from the government of the new provinces
announcing their intention to send an exhibit to include a display of the products of their far western provinces, pictures of ranching scenes and
specimens of the forestry of the province.

With the notice of this intention
to send an exhibit came also a request that it be given a location on the spacious grounds where it may be seen to a better advantage. This will be attended to by the commission.

At the last meeting of the Exhibition commission it was decided to prepare specifications for painting all
the buildings on the exhibition grounds in a uniform color with that on the three new buildings. A tender
was also awarded for the construction of the new grand entrance and administration building. Work on this structure will begin at once, thus giving four new buildings along the Windsor street front.

The manufacturers building is to be increased in size by the addition of sixty feet on the whole of its eastern side. The Canadian Pacific Railway will have their standard exhibit at the Dominion fair, a splendid collection, artistically arranged, of the products of Canada's great west.

The amusement feature of the forthcoming exhibition will be on a scale
of grandeur and to secure this result Manager Hall will have no stone unturned.

The nine days racing on the half-
mile track will be for purses of $9,000.
Besides this, two days will be devoted to a Horse Show, which will be given on a grand scale and in which the Halifax Riding Club will take an active and prominent part. Vaudiville
attractions will be seen both night
and day in front of the grand stand.
