BRIGHTER PROSPECTS

The reports submitted at last night's meeting of the Commercial Club showed that matters of great importance are the subject of inquiry.

In a circular just issued the Guaranty Trust Company of New York makes the following optimistic forecast for the year in the United States: "The purpose of the reviews and forecasts customarily made at this season of the year is that the last twelve months may well be described as 'hctic,' and that the year now beginning should be one of the best in our history."

OUR WATER POWERS

Referring to a project to develop great water powers on the Colorado River the Christian Science Monitor says: "More and more the world finds itself turning to water power as a source of coal and oil."

DRIVE TO THE RIGHT

In British Columbia as in this province they still drive to the left, but there as here they are considering a change, to conform with the rule in most provinces and in the States.

FUR-FARMING CONFERENCE

A conference of fur farmers, fur dealers and trappers has been called by the Commission of Conservation to meet in Montreal on the 19th and 20th February.

Weight of An Opinion

A man went into a jeweller's shop one day, "I wish you would fix this watch for me," he said, "something's the matter with it." The jeweller examined it carefully.

An Anti-Climax

Uncle (telling tall yarn to a young nephew): "We had more than a mile to go to get out of the forest when we heard the howl of a pack of wolves behind us. I strained every nerve, but all in vain. Now I could hear their panting breaths; at last I felt their paws touching me when—"

BETTER DAYS

A better time is coming—I am quite sure of this—when you will see me thrumming my lyre in perfect bliss; the Reds, who claim attention will be too scarce to mention, the serpent of dissension will be too weak to hiss.

ORDER FROM BELGIUM

$10,000,000 Worth of Railway Equipment From Canada. Ottawa, Jan. 23—An order for $10,000,000 worth of railway equipment has been received by Canada from Belgium.

The order, which comes from the Belgian minister of war to the Canadian Trade Commission, is for fifteen locomotives and 3000 cars. It is expected to be distributed among Montreal Locomotive Works, Kingston Locomotive Works, National Steel Car Company, Canadian Allis Chalmers and other concerns which have been negotiating with the Belgian authorities for some time.

A LABOR PLATFORM

The Independent Labor Party of Halifax has adopted the following platform: 1. Public ownership of all utilities and natural sources of wealth. Public ownership of banking and credit systems, life, health and fire insurance companies, and government ownership and operation of cold storage systems.

4. A guarantee of every child from birth to maturity of the material necessities of life and an unlimited education, the educational system to be changed to conform with the ideal of co-operation. 5. No standing army or military competition. Pensions to mothers with dependent children and old age pensions to all.

6. Abolition of election deposits and of property qualifications for voting and the holding of public office. 7. Reduction of the tariff to reduce the cost of living and to increase the revenue of the community.

8. Abolition of the Canadian senate and the Nova Scotia legislative council. 9. Abolition of the British North America act, so that the decisions of the highest court of appeal in Canada shall be final in all matters, civil and political.

10. Reduction of the tariff to reduce the cost of living and to increase the revenue of the community. 11. Abolition of the Canadian senate and the Nova Scotia legislative council. 12. Abolition of the British North America act, so that the decisions of the highest court of appeal in Canada shall be final in all matters, civil and political.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

(Moncton Transcript.) In St. John the enrollment for the vocational course opened there this week was nearly 800, and the vocational training committee finds that its facilities are inadequate for the accommodation.

"When the Foster government adopted legislation providing for the inauguration of vocational training courses the chief officer of the province showed little interest and only after prolonged agitation was the committee to make a start. The demand for evening technical instruction in St. John shows that young people are keenly interested in acquiring greater proficiency for their work in life."

New Brunswick is backward in the matter of technical education, compared with Nova Scotia, but the legal machinery for providing such education is now available, and should be utilized by every industrial community in the province.

AT THE Y. W. C. A. More than 300 girls from the C. G. I. T. groups of the city churches last evening gathered in the Y. W. C. A. recreation centre and had a very pleasant time. Mrs. J. D. Hunter presided and songs of the C. G. I. T. were practiced, while there was much enjoyment taken from the general chorus singing. Short addresses were given by Mrs. John A. McAvity, who was cheered as "the one who got the building for us" by the girls, and Miss Allison, who was made the recipient of a beautiful bouquet as appreciation of her work of organization during the last few months.

POINCARÉ AND THE NEW FRANCE

(Christian Science Monitor.) Something over eight years ago, to be exact, in the autumn of 1911 a curious change was wrought in the world's concept of France. The world, however, cannot be said to have been hasty in forming that concept. Looking back over the previous hundred years of history, it saw France trying one experiment in government after another, and Europe became aware of the change.

The Seven Months' War was indeed a veritable picture of the old France, it was all really over, of course, within a month, one incident following another with startling rapidity. First came the excited multitudes thronging the streets of Paris, filling the air with shouts of "A Berlin!" then the setting out of the great army on what was heralded as its triumphant journey to the frontier and beyond, the grand send-off, followed by an inexplicable silence, the French army "stuck as if in mud."

France recovered, of course, recovered marvelously. The third republic took root downward and sprang upward, Europe again formed its concept of France, stuck to it doggedly. French politics became almost a byword, and when confronted with an Affaire Dreyfus, with all the corruption and injustice it disclosed, the world shrugged its shoulders, as who would say "It is France," and what more was to be said?

Then, suddenly, in the autumn of 1911, came the change, or rather Europe became aware of the change. The Panther had anchored in Agadir Bay, and a grand dispute was, at once, precipitated between Paris and Berlin, the outcome of which no one could foretell. It was a critical time, how critical was only realized in later years. All Europe was busying with discussions on the tip of expectation, not to say apprehension. Only in Paris, contrary to all precedent, was there a great calm. Paris remained calm and all France with it, imperturbably calm, and when the Franco-German treaty in regard to Morocco was finally signed, in the November of 1911, Europe realized that it had in its midst a new power, and the one topic of conversation was the new France.

Of this new France, the premier, Raymond Poincaré, orator, lawyer, litterateur, and statesman, quickly came to be recognized as the expression of the new France. For many years, Mr. Poincaré, as he counted rung by rung the political ladder, had been famous for his breadth of view. It was not only a great France that he preached, but a great France playing a great part in the highest sense of that word, the world's affairs. And so when the outbreak of the Balkan War in 1912 threatened, as it did for many anxious weeks to precipitate a European war, it was Raymond Poincaré who, with the able help of Sir Edward Grey in England, again and again interposed successfully to prevent a break and keep the powers together. Before hostilities actually commenced, he proposed a conference of the powers, if only for the purpose of keeping them in touch with one another. And even when war was actually precipitated, he utterly scandalized the punctilious diplomacy of several other nations by still advocating the calling of a conference for the same purpose.

It is true that the council never was held, but the calm and courageous stand of the French premier on that occasion, supported, as it was, by all the prestige of the new France, contributed to the maintenance of peace amongst the powers to an extent which cannot well be exaggerated. A year later Mr. Poincaré was president of France, and France, no longer distrustful, as she had undoubtedly been in the past, of able presidents, looked forward to a great and distinguished term of office, during which the country, as never before, would find itself interpreted by its president. France was not disappointed. The latter part of 1913 and the first part of 1914 witnessed an interchange of brilliant state visits with Spain, England and with Russia. But then came the war, and the work of developing a true internationalism, for which Mr. Poincaré is so eminently fitted, had to be given up.

There is no blame to the Jews for trying to get out of those countries where they have been so cruelly persecuted by the ignorant and the savage, but my idea of Palestine is "far from friends and all alone," and, although there now seems to be very few places except the graveyard for man to rest his head in security, I would advise all the Jewish people to seriously consider the world situation before deciding to carry their wealth into Palestine with the intention of building a nation.

War has no consideration for happy homes and has lured and forced millions from comfort to distress; and the "Go back to Palestine" idea was created by a man, naturally the Jews would be eager to reclaim their ancient home, and there is no happiness too great for me to wish them; but I cannot put faith in any of the guarantees I see for this new undertaking.

In a nation there would be many things to be envied by the Jews; in the first place they are by nature a business people and would be sure to accumulate great national wealth and become a star of great magnitude in the commercial world, a position which would be looked upon by many as very meaning and which has always been an invitation to war.

The coming of Christ is near according to the estimation of some preachers, and the invitation to the Jews to return to Jerusalem is considered a great sign; but it is yet only an invitation which is given by war in an effort to win some extra support.

THE EVENING TIMES AND STAR, ST. JOHN, N. B. SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1920

London's First Peace Christmas Since The World Turmoil Began

A Jolly and Successful Celebration; Chiefly in Homes

Election Talk—The War Office — Splendid Pantomime at Drury Lane—London's First Woman Barrister—Trade and Other Matters.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) London, Jan. 1.—By all the tokens it has been a very jolly and successful Christmas, for two days London ceased to exist in any public corporate capacity. The first real peace Christmas was celebrated enthusiastically, lavishly, whole-heartedly, but domestically. Each household was a self-contained social vacuum, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot," with its own universe centred round the turkey or the mistletoe, according to the age and sentiment of the various members. And almost anything up to the end of the world might have happened without Londoners being any the wiser. As a matter of fact, practically nothing occurred in the large cosmos, and it really looked as though the suspension of the daily newspapers would mean the cessation of anything like news. It is said that in certain circles the homekeeping Christmas is an obsolete festival. This is true of only a very small and social ephemeral section. One hears from various quarters that all the seaside boarding houses and hotels near and around London were absolutely crowded out. And the same is true of the big West End hotels and restaurants. But the people who spent Christmas in this manner were quite exceptional. The vast majority of Londoners at any rate kept to their own hearths and their own armchairs. By Their Own Fireside. It was an impressive testimony to the domestic side of London's Christmas to journey half-way across the metropolis to reach Fleet street. Through miles upon miles of varying suburbs, rich and poor, one found always the same outward and visible signs of inward and invisible justification. Lights gleamed through windows, one caught the echo of laughter and of music, but every house was a castle with a social moat round it, and it was pleasant to think in how many of these homes, patrician or plebeian, there were those of the company who during the years that have passed recently have earned in the rough school of active service in the fields to appreciate the real charms of an old-fashioned Christmas. The memory of absent friends, also, must have been very tenderly recalled then by the men who shared their perils and privations with greater fortune. That such feelings were deeply entertained is shown by the very exceptional congregations this year for almost all the special Christmas services, and especially by the very remarkable proportion of men among them. In any case this would have been a home-keeping Christmas, for the fondest dream of every man in khaki during the last five years was always "Christmas at home." And the weather conspired to accentuate the fashion, because it was one of the most moist, unpleasant Christmases within recollection, culminating in a regular persistent deluge.

Cabinet Reconstruction Talk. Another topic now being revived among the politicians is that of cabinet reconstruction. This is a favorite one with the lobby gossips on all occasions, and now more so than ever, because of the statement made by the prime minister before the new parliament assembled that his present ministry was merely a temporary and makeshift one. At least that is the sense in which Lloyd George's words were interpreted. But a great deal has happened since then, and it is difficult to see any rearrangement entailing drastic changes of personnel is greater every week that passes. The belief is growing in well-informed circles that we shall see any day radical changes in the present cabinet while the present coalition regime lasts. The appropriate time for any such changes will be when the next general election draws near and the new fusion of parties becomes an fait accompli.

Churchill are the other distinguished men who have played the part of secretary for war during the European struggle; nor should Lord Haldane, who held an unofficial appointment, be overlooked.

Drury Lane Pantomime. The Drury Lane Pantomime is a national institution. Arthur Collins has achieved a fresh triumph with "Cinderella," played by such unquestionable public favorites as Miss Florence Smithson, a coy, sweet singing little Cinderella, whose chief song, "In Fairyland," will soon be whistled throughout the land; by Stanley Lupino as Pochin, a mischievous boy who lives in a tree and keeps the house roaring with laughter from start to finish; and Will Evans as a kind-hearted old baroness, who is not half so brutal to Cinderella as the original story suggests. Miss Marie Blanche makes a delightful love-love Princess Charming, and Harry Claff a much ill-used baron, with Miss Lily Long and Denier Warren as the ugly sisters. Of the two great scenes in "Cinderella," the first, at any rate, surpasses in sheer exquisite beauty even the records of Drury Lane. Cinderella is taken by her fairy godmother to Fairyland where, in the guise of flowers of the most artistic and delicate hues, the corps de ballet present bands of superb coloring, continually changing into some yet more beautiful form until the climax is reached. At the back is Cinderella's gilded coach drawn by six little Shelton ponies (rather frightened by the excitement), and Miss Florence Smithson in a shimmering dress is worthy queen of all the assemblage. The second transformation scene follows the trial of the slipper, and culminates in a glittering spectacle. To see Mr. Lupino trying to learn to lay a table cloth in the baron's house or the baroness buying a horse—a triplet animal which backs, says down, and finally jumps through a window—and all the other fun is to enjoy a merry evening.

M. Clemenceau. M. Clemenceau is the embodiment of the rejuvenated spirit of France, self-confident, determined, and democratic. Seventy-one years of age, he spent the greater part of his public life as the wrecking of impotent and ineffective ministries. Indeed, his terrible powers of invective created the impression that, though destructive, he could not be constructive, yet he remedied the hope of the radicals, and amply has justified this confidence. He more than any other man in Paris save Zola, secured the great act of reparation to Dreyfus. M. Clemenceau's power at the peace conference may be attributed in part to the fact that he lived in the United States for five years and married an American woman. His knowledge of the Anglo-Saxon temperament has stood him in good stead. During the war his spirit never quailed.

Portia Returns. Mrs. Gwyneth Marjory Thomson, who is likely to be the first woman called to the bar, has fully earned her title as a pioneer. She fought for the right of women to play the part of Portia long before the women's cause seemed likely to triumph. Many people will remember the action she brought against the Law Society before her marriage to establish the right of women to become barristers. Her claim was dismissed, but parliament has now legitimized her contentions.

Mrs. Thomson is a woman of exceptional power, learning, and intellect. The judge who tried the case admitted she was probably superior in these qualities to many candidates who would go up for the Law Society's examination. And now she has vindicated her position. Just as Lady Astor forced the doors of parliament against popular prejudice, so Mrs. Thomson, a native of gallant little Wales, will be the first to cross the threshold of an even more conservative institution—the law courts. It is to be hoped she will practice in order to show what a woman can do.

Chauffeurs in New Role. There is a new venture quite in the spirit of the times launched by some demobilized women motor drivers of the Wrens and other service organizations. Many of them not only became very expert drivers, but learned how to look after and clean their machines. So some of these ladies are now applying for licenses for motors. They have purchased and are hiring the vehicles out with themselves as drivers. Ladies for themselves are numerous in London. Several women are already well-established in this specialty, and doing remarkably well.

There are many advantages from the point of view of ladies who want to go on a shopping round in securing the services of a woman driver. There is naturally a more understanding spirit, more patience under the ordeal of waiting outside shops, a real knowledge of the best places to shop, and, above all, no terrors about the final reckoning. He Hadn't Shaken It. A solution of the servant problem which is gaining in popularity is the employment of ex-service men. Advertisements by old army and navy men offering to do sorts of domestic work for a shilling an hour are now becoming quite a feature. And the supply surely proves the demand. A well known but naturally a more domestic work for a shilling an hour tells a good story about him. He took to housework as he had never done anything else, and was a good deal quicker than the average maid in discharging duties hitherto supposed to be woman's work. One evening his friend was entertaining a rather fastidious uncle to dinner, and brought out a very old port with which to propitiate him. "Now, John," he said to his handy man, "whatever you do, do not shake this bottle." John assured him that he would not dream of doing anything so terrible. After dinner the old port was produced, and as John removed the stopper from the decanter his master asked, "You haven't shaken it, have you, John?" John's face fell. Full of contrite apologies, he replaced the stopper, and whispered hoarsely, "No, sir, but I will." And he did. A New Terror. It is common knowledge that there has been an immense boom in motoring. The ownership of a private car is no longer the hall-mark of social prestige. Frankly middle-class people are now driving their own cars, and the cheapening of motors, considered in relation to the cheapening of money, is tending to spread the motoring habit among all classes. And already in London we are experiencing some of the distressing results. Not all the new motorists are either very competent or quite experienced drivers. And their code of conduct is not always the highest. Street accidents are becoming shockingly common in the London suburbs, and road-hogism is rampant. There have been many recent cases of pedestrians knocked down, and either killed or seriously hurt, by motor-drivers who dashed off as fast as possible to escape identification. In one recent case the occupants of a small car that ran down a woman abandoned their vehicle and bolted, and they took their tail-board with them. Some J-Hand, But Dearest. Several very curious anomalies crop up as the result of the entirely exotic conditions now obtaining in many industrial and commercial lines. A city man of my acquaintance was recently in sudden and urgent need of another typewriter for his office. He went to the head office, or shop, of a firm of makers, and asked what they could do for him. They were sympathetic, but uncertain. They had 4,000 orders in hand, to be supplied in order of application, but hoped they might be able to let him have a typewriter of their latest model in three or four weeks. The city man knew what that probably meant, and, being in urgent need of the machine, went to a second-hand dealer. There he was shown reconstructed models of the same machine. He asked the price of these second-hand machines, and found they were from three to four pounds dearer than the first-hand new article. When he demanded an explanation, he was calmly assured that the extra money was asked because they knew the firm concerned could not guarantee immediate supply.

Joanna Southcott. The following mysterious advertisement appears on all the underground stations—"The bishops must open Joanna Southcott's box and save Britain from ruin." Joanna Southcott was born at Dittisham, in Devonshire, in April, 1750, and was the daughter of a farmer. After several affairs of the heart she turned devoutly to religion, and said she was able to forecast the future. In 1792 at the age of forty-two she experienced "powers of darkness," and forecasted the death that actually followed in 1793 and 1794, although at the time the best wheat was selling at 48. 6d. a bushel. She was not, however, well received, and then began to seal her prophecies yearly until she could obtain "any twelve ministers" to try her contentions.

Two clergymen took her up, and she began to travel the country making converts, visiting Bristol in 1798, and moving to Paddington in 1802. She there began the practice of "sealing the faithful," who were certificated for the millennium on half-sheets of paper signed by Joanna and backed with the red seal. But one of these faithfuls was executed for murder in 1809, and the sealing ceased.

She was associated with several minor prophets, including Joseph Prescott, an eighteen-year-old dreamer, whose revelations she interpreted. In 1813, when sixty-three years old, she said she was going to give birth to a Shiloh, and six doctors said that in their opinion a birth was indicated. She died in London in 1814, and a post-mortem examination proved the doctors wrong. She was buried in St. John's Wood, and her followers, who believed that she would return, were convinced when her tombstone was shattered by the Regent's Park explosion in 1847. The box in question contains the sealed writings which it is said complete the revelations.

Another topic now being revived among the politicians is that of cabinet reconstruction. This is a favorite one with the lobby gossips on all occasions, and now more so than ever, because of the statement made by the prime minister before the new parliament assembled that his present ministry was merely a temporary and makeshift one. At least that is the sense in which Lloyd George's words were interpreted. But a great deal has happened since then, and it is difficult to see any rearrangement entailing drastic changes of personnel is greater every week that passes. The belief is growing in well-informed circles that we shall see any day radical changes in the present cabinet while the present coalition regime lasts. The appropriate time for any such changes will be when the next general election draws near and the new fusion of parties becomes an fait accompli. The "power behind the throne" in the war office is in the hands of the permanent secretary. This is the case in all government offices, but above all in the military department, where routine and red tape attain their maximum development. Sir H. J. Creedy, who is about to succeed Sir Reginald Brade as permanent secretary at the war office, will be virtually in control of the administrative part of work at the war office, and will exercise a profound influence also over policy. He is the civilian head of the war office, and seeing that the experience of the last war has been summed up in these words, "Everything which the civilian departments organized at the front was exceedingly well done, but everything organized by the military was rotten," we should be glad to have a civilian in charge there and wish more power to his elbow. One would like to get Sir H. J. Creedy's candid view of the various chiefs to whom he has been private secretary during their tenure as secretary for war. There was Colonel Seely, who mishandled the Curragh "mutiny" when Mr. Asquith's home rule bill was about to become law; Mr. Asquith, who pulled things together when the war became imminent; and Lord Kitchener, whose masterful personality had enormous advantages as well as disadvantages for the country. Lloyd George, Lord Derby, Lord Milner and Winston

CHINESE IDOLATRY BEING SWEEP AWAY

Christianity Making Sure Progress in Great Eastern Republic.

(Toronto Globe)
Chinese customs and religious and the gradual but certain conversion of the people of the Orient from paganism to Christianity formed the background of a sermon delivered last night in Westmoreland Methodist church by Rev. Samuel Soper of Newfoundland, who has recently returned from China. While the substance of his address was an exhortation to his hearers to follow more closely the principles of Christianity, he gave many incidents of the idolatry of the Chinese and appealed to the congregation to help the extension of the vast work which the Christian church had undertaken in China.
In a manner that enabled his audience to visualize the scene he described, the vast plains of the Yangtze River, a population of 60,000 people. The district, he said, was the most thickly populated in the world, but Christianity was steadily advancing with the progress of industry.
Referring again to the temples he told of a temple thousands of feet above the level of the Yangtze up to which the people climbed to worship their idols. Typical of these gods was the god of light, whose mystic powers were believed by their worshippers to be capable of healing all ills. On all parts of the image, Rev. Mr. Soper said, were lamp sockets, and when a worshipper was sick he stuck a candle or a lamp into a socket on that part of the body of the idol which corresponded with the section of his own anatomy that was ailing him. Boy Scout Leaders See Time of Great Development Ahead

New Era in Life of Movement in New Brunswick

Provincial Council Meeting Here Marked by Optimism and Additions to Board — Mr. Eaman's Excellent Report — Work of the City Troops.

An atmosphere of optimism pervaded the gathering of the members of the New Brunswick Council of the Boy Scouts Association around the supper table at Bond's on Thursday evening. It is not too much to expect that a new era of development in the great work of the Boy Scout movement in New Brunswick is about to dawn.

The Times here gives in full the report presented at the Thursday meeting by H. O. Eaman, assistant provincial commissioner, as follows:—

To the President and Members New Brunswick Council, Boy Scouts Association, St. John, N. B., Gentlemen:—

Since our last annual meeting the Boy Scouts Association in the Province of New Brunswick has shown a marked increase in efficiency and while the growth of the movement in the province has not been phenomenal, there has been a steady increase in both troops and the number of scouts enrolled.

The last year has seen changes in the conditions surrounding the Boy Scouts Association in Canada which, I believe will result in a forward step for the movement throughout the land.

There has been a general feeling for some years that there was great need for strengthening of the headquarters organization at Ottawa, and with this in mind, His Excellency, the Duke of Devonshire, Chief Scout for Canada, convened a conference in Ottawa of the leading representatives of the Boy Scouts Association in the different provinces.

The Province of New Brunswick was represented by the provincial commissioner who was at that time, the early part of the past year, Professor John A. Stiles of Fredericton. As a result of this gathering, it was decided to appoint an assistant to the Dominion Commissioner, who would give his whole time to the development of the Boy Scout movement throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

Great honor was done the Province of New Brunswick, as Professor Stiles was tendered the appointment. He resigned as Dean of Applied Science at the University of New Brunswick, and took up his duties on June 1st last as assistant to the Dominion Commissioner, Dr. Jas. W. Robertson, and has therefore entire charge of the work of the Canadian general council throughout the Dominion.

Shortly after Mr. Stiles took charge of the Canadian general council decided that it was very necessary that a regular Boy Scout periodical be published, and they turned to the Province of New Brunswick. Canadian Boy, a monthly boys' magazine, published by Percy Gibson in this city, was secured. Mr. Gibson, who was then secretary of the New Brunswick Boy Scout Council, was also added to the staff of the council at Ottawa, and in addition to his duties as editor of the magazine, Canadian Boy, he is also publicly secretary of the Canadian General Council.

The attention given to promoting greater efficiency has been productive of good results as shown by the fact that 634 badges denoting increased proficiency in scouting were issued to the end of the year 1919 as compared with 197 issued to the end of the year 1918.

There are thirty-two troops reported in 1919 with 803 scouts enrolled as compared with twenty-nine reported in 1918 with 713 scouts enrolled. This compares favorably with the organized local associations now compared with only one known organized local association in 1918.

THE BOY SCOUT.

hands of H. R. H. the Prince. Throughout the whole of his tour of Canada the Prince of Wales took a deep interest in the Boy Scouts and on leaving the shores of Canada sent a special message to the Boy Scouts of Canada.

The activities of the movement in the province have been carried on through the maritime office at Truro, N. S., during the last year. It was demonstrated early in the year past that the details of the headquarters required so much of the time of the maritime secretary that sufficient attention was not being given to the work in the field.

The stock carried of books and other small supplies has been a help to the scoutmasters, as previous to the opening of the maritime headquarters it was next to impossible to secure anything along this line. All kinds of literature relating to scouting, as well as the smaller supplies such as shoulder knots, garter tabs, etc., are carried in stock and the amount turned over during the year has well warranted the attention given to the department of supplies.

Many hundreds of letters have been written to the men who are actively engaged, as well as to those who are interested, but not actively engaged as scoutmasters or other officers. All the above, in addition to the registration of troops and individual scouts, applications for war service badges and innumerable other details have made the maritime office a very busy place during the past twelve months.

A great deal of emphasis has been placed on the development of leaders and general all round efficient scouts. A leaders' camp was held on the Boy Scout camp grounds at Chipman on the Salmon River in August last. There was an attendance of fifty-one, which was more than 100 per cent larger than the year 1918.

Boy Scout troops from St. John, Sussex, Rothesay, Petticoil, Fredericton, Woodstock and Doaktown were represented. A very successful conference for leaders was held at St. John during the winter of 1918-19. This conference will be repeated this winter on a much larger scale. Last year the only troops represented were from St. John, while it is expected that this year there will be boys present from a number of outside points. It is hoped also that it will be possible to conduct another such conference at possibly Woodstock to take in the troops in the northern part of the province.

That the attention given to promoting greater efficiency has been productive of good results is shown by the fact that 634 badges denoting increased proficiency in scouting were issued to the end of the year 1919 as compared with 197 issued to the end of the year 1918.

Everywhere in the province the Boy Scouts have taken a very active part in connection with the Victory Loan and the Thrift Stamp campaigns, co-operating in every way possible with the local committees in the different communities.

During the year the St. John Ambulance Association conducted a competition in first aid, known as the Wallace Nesbitt Junior first aid competition, for Boy Scouts and Cadets. Practically all of the teams entered were from Boy Scout troops, and after a very thorough test given by Dr. Skinner, the first place was awarded to the 5th St. John (St. Jude's) troop of Boy Scouts.

A statement of the New Brunswick Provincial Council in account with the maritime headquarters is as follows:

Financial statement table with columns for Receipts and Expenditures, listing items like Salaries, Office expenses, and various camp costs.

Audited and found correct, E. H. ABBOTT, C. A., Auditor. A statement of the New Brunswick Provincial Council in account with the maritime headquarters is as follows:

Financial statement table with columns for Receipts and Expenditures, listing items like Salaries, Office expenses, and various camp costs.

Before closing my report there are some questions that must be given attention by our council for the year that lies before us.

For some time there has been a feeling that the best interests of the Boy Scout movement in the province could be served in a more efficient manner if the council established a provincial headquarters at St. John, instead of assuming a proportion of the expenses of a maritime office at Truro.

Several of the other provinces have also adopted a provincial emblem, and as the same request has come from several of the troops in this province, it is suggested that such an emblem be authorized for the province of New Brunswick.

In view of the prominence that is being given to Sea Scouting in the Empire, it is suggested that the provincial council appoint a permanent Sea Scout committee to encourage the organization and promotion of Sea Scouts in the province.

Stockings for cold weather

Buster Brown Stockings will lighten the clothing bill this winter. They are sensible, closely-knit stockings, that will amply protect your boy against the cold, yet can be bought much more reasonably than other winter stockings.

Buster Brown Stockings wear longer—require less mending, too. They're knitted with three-ply heels and toes, and double-ply legs and feet. They give extra wear—they're shaped to fit—and they hold their color.

that this plan be put into effect at once, and that a permanent finance committee be appointed to co-operate with the committee of the Commercial Club, which organization has so heartily endorsed the Boy Scout movement and promised their practical support to this scheme by appointing a special committee to give it their attention.

The severe winter weather during the months between October and April inclusive, make it imperative that attention be given to the adoption of a winter uniform more suitable than the regular uniform, which is most practical and serviceable for the other months of the year.

Several of the other provinces have also adopted a provincial emblem, and as the same request has come from several of the troops in this province, it is suggested that such an emblem be authorized for the province of New Brunswick.

In view of the prominence that is being given to Sea Scouting in the Empire, it is suggested that the provincial council appoint a permanent Sea Scout committee to encourage the organization and promotion of Sea Scouts in the province.

With a continuance of the splendid operation which has existed during the past year, and the added interest of many new men, the future of the movement in the province is assured, and the results will without doubt justify the time and effort spent by the members of the provincial council and others in this work.

H. O. EAMAN, Assistant Provincial Commissioner. The Coburg street troop, No. 18, opened its meeting at 7:30 on Wednesday evening under its leading officers, Scoutmasters W. Dunlop and E. Douglall. The programme carried out was as follows: 7:30 to 7:40, roll call; 7:40 to 8:10, games; 8:10 to 8:30, drill; 8:30 till 8:45, patrol duties; 8:45 to 9 o'clock, scout instruction. This afternoon the troop is planning to take a hike so as to pass the boys on their cooking test.

The Mission Troop held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening. The first half hour the boys spent in signalling practice, after which the maritime secretary, Mr. Eaman, spoke to the boys for a few minutes. The boys then played several games under the able leadership of Mr. Eaman, and they were enjoyed by all. The boys were then put through some very instructive work which was done in good shape, after which the troop gave the scout yell and were dismissed.

Changes in Life and Habits of English People Are Taking Place

The New-Rich and the New Poor Furnish Conspicuous Examples—Changes in Domestic Habits—Women's Work Outside the Home.

Foreign Correspondent of New York Evening Post.
London, Jan. 1.—New Year's Day is a natural time for stock taking, and the occasion seems appropriate for an attempt to set down in black and white some of the more obvious changes that have passed over the daily life and habits of the English people. It is as Burke maintained, you cannot bring an indictment against a whole nation, neither can you without risk make any kind of generalization on so large a scale. Let there be some things that may be said with confidence than others, and one is much more familiar to everybody in it than five years ago. The antecedent presumption against the unknown is the unaccustomed has lost much of its force. The challenge brought against existing order or the traditional custom by any kind of innovation has few obstacles of inveterate prejudice to it against. We have all been doing things that we never thought of before, and the taste for experiment has more or less taken possession of the most conservative in temperament. It is true that there are many who as yet realize only imperfectly what a radical difference the great must make to the whole fabric of civilization, and who are expecting to turn presently to old ways and systems that we shall certainly never see in. But in the main the compulsory evolutions of the war period have induced a much greater receptivity to new ideas, with the result that the former, whether in big matters or in little, has a far better chance of securing a hearing than ever before.

Changes in Domestic Habits.
There are other signs of change in domestic habits even where drastic economies are not necessary. The shortening of the Continental practice of eating the principal meals of the day in more and more lunching and dining at hotels and restaurants, whether themselves or when they are entertaining. Not many of the changes introduced by rationing restrictions are likely to be permanent. A few people who gave up sugar in their tea when it was not to be had, continue to do without it now, because they have come to like tea better without it, but very few of the limitations that had to be endured for a time willy-nilly have been voluntarily imposed when the Food Controller removed his ban. Vegetarianism has not made as many converts for life as the advocates of that diet hoped. One cannot help noticing that a good many people who were becoming quite slim during the period of strict rationing are filling out again in a time of greater plenty.

An interesting point is the effect produced upon English dietetic habits and culinary methods by the sojourn of so many Belgian and French refugees in our cities and villages. It is said that in stockpots are today to be found in many kitchens where they were unknown before the war. One reason why school children are better nourished now than in pre-war days is that soups have taken a regular place in the home cooking. Many varieties of fancy confectionery, first introduced to the British public by the grandes patisseries belges that sprang up in the refugee quarters, have "caught on" to so great an extent that they now form part of the regular stock in trade of our native pastry cooks. The restaurants report, too, a big increase in the demand for hot chocolate, attributable partly to the refugee settlements and partly to the soldiers returning from war service abroad.

In some other matters the example of the Belgians has made an impression upon the English domestic ways. It has led to an increased interest in fine needlework and embroidery, and, indeed, to the greater popularity of hand-made garments generally. A buyer for a big store is quoted as saying that whereas people did not care twopence for hand-sewn or hand-worked garments before the war, now they have learned to appreciate the better all-round quality of such things. It is now quite an ordinary thing for an English woman to make her own clothes by hand, and the Continental practice of a girl starting to make a trousseau of fine stitchery and embroidery has also gained considerable ground.

Women's Work Outside the Home.
As to women's work outside the home, the changes of the last few years are innumerable and it would be rash to predict where they will end. A woman M. P. has taken her seat in Parliament for the bar. In certain occupations the employment of women will doubtless turn out to have been only provisional. Many of the girls who took the places of men as letter carriers or bus conductors are already dropping out. It is in the financial and commercial world that the invaders seem most likely to hold their ground. There is no appreciable decline to be observed in the proportion of women clerks at work in business offices in the city.

It would perhaps be unjust to attribute to this incursion of women a change which is unfortunately only too evident in the business ways of the English people. It cannot be denied that there crept during the war a widespread habit of slovenliness. During that period any criticism of carelessness or indifference was met with the ready answer: "Don't you know there's a war on?" This plea was thought sufficient to excuse a slipshod fashion of doing things, which had its root in sheer laziness. The habit once acquired is not easily shaken off, and it remains today to handicap any movement for increased efficiency. It is fostered by the general feeling of tiredness which has followed the exertions of the war, and by the reaction from the excitement of those stirring days. One has grown accustomed to lower standards in most things, from inattention and impoliteness in the stores to dirt and disrepair in the streets. Hardly anything, nowadays, is as spick and span as it used to be, and it is the exception to get any job neatly and promptly done. Mrs. Grundy must certainly be counted among the potentates whom the war has debased. Her edicts are now ignored in circles where a fortnight ago they were rigidly observed. A visitor to these shores arriving after a five years' interval would be astonished to notice the extent to which smoking, for instance, is practiced by women of all classes, both privately and publicly. In a restaurant or tea-shop or at a social gathering it is now as much of a matter of course to offer cigarettes to women as to men.

The dissolution of customary restraints is manifest in much more serious matters than this. Gambling, which had already attained the proportions of a national curse before the war, has tightened its hold upon the community to an alarming degree. There were never such huge attendances at race meetings as during last year, and on these occasions women were present in unprecedented numbers—not as mere spectators but taking a keen interest in the betting. Women have been conspicuous also in Stock Exchange speculation, which has lately been of a quite unusual magnitude. This passion for gambling is commonly explained as due to a craving for excitement which was aroused by the war and is now seeking other sources of satisfaction. Superstition is rife. The wearing of mascots and charms has become extraordinarily prevalent. Occultism has won thousands of adherents. Books on this subject and on allied topics find large sales at high prices. The vague of spiritualism has increased to such a degree as to arouse the grave concern of church leaders. Crimes of violence are reported in the press day by day as occurring in all parts of the country to an unprecedented extent. Never was there a greater delusion than the belief, so commonly held and expressed five years ago, that the national enthusiasm for the war would result in a noble moral and religious uplift.

N. Y. INSPECTOR CHARGED WITH BRUTAL TREATMENT
(N. Y. Times.)
Alleging that Inspector William P. Boettler of the First Inspection District had beaten him on the head with a blackjack until he was unconscious, in which condition he remained for three hours, Jacob Molaga, a restaurant keeper of 229 East Twelfth street, yesterday procured a summons charging the officer with assault. The summons was issued by Magistrate Sweetser.

Molaga, with thirteen other men, was arrested Tuesday night when detectives under Inspector Boettler raided a restaurant in Clinton street. On Wednesday the men were arraigned before Magistrate Joseph S. Schwab in Essex Market Court on a charge of disorderly conduct and discharged. At that time Molaga sought to make a charge of assault against the inspector, but Magistrate Schwab declined to consider it as the man had no witnesses.

Molaga, limping with the aid of a cane, and with his face swollen and disfigured, went to Essex Market Court yesterday afternoon accompanied by his attorney, Henry Kahana, of 360 Broadway, and asked for the summons. The lawyer said that after his client had been arrested Tuesday night a keeper went to his cell at two o'clock the following morning and advised him that "the boss" wished to see him. He was then taken to an anteroom of the Clinton Street Station, the lawyer continued, where Inspector Boettler, according to the charge, beat him on the head with a blackjack. At the same time a lieutenant, whose name was not learned, beat the prisoner on the legs with his club until he could no longer stand. Kahana told the Magistrate.

Molaga did not give any motive for the alleged assault by the inspector. He did not remember how he got back to the cell, but said that about five o'clock the same morning Inspector Boettler took him from the cell again and washed blood stains from his face and head and prepared him for court. Molaga sought a warrant for the arrest of Boettler, but Magistrate Sweetser refused to grant this, contending that a summons would be sufficient.

FROST MAKES TROUBLE FOR CITY

Down Deep and Water Pipes Are Found Broken Across.

St. John is in the clutch of a new epidemic which has been diagnosed as hydrantitis and which affects the lead connecting the water mains with the fire hydrants. The members of the water department are busy today applying the remedial measures. In such cases, the most recent of which is located at the corner of Wentworth and Broad streets, and which was responsible for the flood which poured down Garmathen street and along Britain to Sydney street last evening. The other cases are in Westmorland road, Cleasly street, Harrison street and Short street, near the Marsh bridge.

The superintendent of the water department said this morning that the trouble developed in a peculiar way. Although the pipe was not frozen, it is supposed that the frost has something to do with the matter, breaking the pipe right across.

The frost is said to be six feet into the ground this year, due to the lack of early snow, and the commissioner of water and sewerage is looking for some trouble this spring by the bursting of service pipes. The city engineer said today that although the frost is in some places down to the water mains, there is not much danger of their being affected and the flow, coupled with the pressure behind it, will not permit of freezing.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.
To the Editor of The Times:
Sir,—In the very kindly notices of my paper before the Engineers' Society in the morning and evening papers the idea which I intended to convey, through no fault of the reporters, if not quite clearly set out.

My suggestion as to the Courtenay Bay development was to form a wharf in harbor 200 feet or more in width at or near the Marsh bridge and 350 feet or more at the basin end to continue this wharfage on the city side of the basin to the entrance channel and along this channel as far toward the main harbor as is advisable, then up the harbor along the four found to Ballast wharf below the sugar refinery. On the east side to extend wharfing to the dry docks companies property. To fill in behind this wharfage and use these areas for warehouses and factories. This will give berths three or four miles in length with storage warehouses, back of them and factory space also.

From the inside of Courtenay Bay breakwater will be berths for any sized steamers desired and place to receive and store miscellaneous cargoes and to sort and make up for the different ports to which regular lines that is a kind of tramps home to which they can bring a full cargo from one port for all over the world warehouses here and have it transhipped to the several lines for those ports. In this way a Toronto or other capitalist can do a world business in St. John and at home also.

As to the breakwater, if Courtenay Bay is used as I suggest there will eventually be crowding on the west side. If the Negro Point breakwater is extended to the island it will have to be broken out again when the harbor will again have to be enlarged and a breakwater built to extend Partridge Island westward. By building now and build it right the same object can be accomplished at a little more expense than for closing the gap, but as a good investment. The first section would only be long enough to throw the direct swell against the present breakwater, but not in the channel. All back of the island would be used as an anchorage ground for vessels of light draft until dredged for deeper draft.

One favorite argument with which changes are opposed is that they are theoretical and not to be considered by practical men when sometimes these self-styled practical men have not yet thought the idea out fully.

It certainly would seem very theoretical to establish a string of banks along the Carribean Sea but no one will call the men who establish banks impracticable. St. John is the best situated of any city in Canada or elsewhere to do this West India and South America business. The banks have supplied the tools of trade and a place to keep them, why not get the Canadian people to use them and transport via St. John?

Every Sign of Care—Officers and Men Lie Together with Names on the Marking Crosses.

Rev. Arthur French writes the following interesting and gratifying account of a pilgrimage to a British cemetery on the Somme:

With a view to comfort and satisfy any that have what is dear to them laid to rest in France, let one first say that the impression in one's mind is very clear that the British government has acted wisely in deciding not to allow the removal to England, or elsewhere, the remains of our soldier dead. When one sees things as they are, it is obvious that it is better and more fitting.

In the permanent British cemetery, of which one saw several, the voice seems to be sounding of true comradeship and unity of idea: The glorious dead placed as in battalions, looking the same way, facing the foe, and, as far as one could tell, towards the rising sun, "in full and certain hope of the Resurrection."

There is also true comradeship, unity of service, and equal sacrifice, in the absence of signs of "rank"; for a uniform memorial stone (at present only the temporary wooden cross) at the head of each grave, impresses one very much with the fact of equality.

The permanent cemetery is divided into "plots," consisting of forty graves each, ten in a row, and "four deep." All seem buried irrespective of "rank" as it fitting. Take, for example, one instance: In the centre of three lies at rest an officer, on his right the inscription reads "An Unknown British Soldier"; on his left "Pte. G." This sign of comradeship, lack of "class distinction" would be lost were removal allowed to those who had incurred money for the necessary expense. The "poor," and the overwhelmingly large number of the "unknown" British soldiers would be sadly discriminated against. For sentimental as well as practical reasons, the government seems to be acting wisely.

The government seems to be doing its best, and that best seems to be decidedly good. The permanent cemeteries are well arranged. One visited several, and examined many graves closely. Each cemetery is marked by a large white painted cross (presumably of a temporary character). On this is painted the words, "British Cemetery, Number 1, 2, or 3, as the case may be, and the name of the cemetery as "Surrey" or "Ancre," "Hawthorne," etc. The graves, wisely, have not separate mounds, but are in level "plots" containing, as has been said, forty each. The name, rank and battalion of each is stamped on the aluminum band; this is well secured to the transverse of the temporary cross at each grave. The graves are six feet deep, including the depth of the levelled mound, and so are not likely to be disturbed, under any circumstances, as years roll on. The cemeteries seem well fenced and protected.

The records are well kept, and are readily referred to by the officer in charge, and the locality at once determined as inquiries are made. The existence of the "disc," found with the remains, is rightly regarded as the first and surest evidence of identity; the inscription on the cross is based on the reliable wording of the "disc." As these words on the "disc" may not have been changed by the wearer, as the successive steps of "promotion" were reached, it is possible that the inscription on the cross may not seem to state the "rank," etc., accurately to one unaided of the reliability of the "disc."

The spirit of tenderness and reverence, shown by all ranks, e. g., at the officers' quarters, in the Labor Battalion, by the non-commissioned officers and privates, and all concerned, is what may be reasonably expected in a churchyard at all times, and it is equally present in connection with the British cemeteries in France. It does not seem to disappear with the enormous number of cases dealt with. This spirit of reverence seems to mark the sense of comradeship felt by those who survive, as they reverently lay to rest the bodies of those who have courageously died. I understand that it is customary for a padre to be present at the "re-committals" and reburials. Our little party came away

How Lack of Iron In The Blood May Change A Woman's Appearance And Break Down Her Physical Strength While Plenty Of Iron Makes Rich Red Blood Corpuscles That Give Health, Vitality and Beauty

Every Woman Who Looks Pale, Haggard and Worn Should Have Her Blood Examined For Iron Deficiency—Administration of Simple Nuxated Iron Will Often Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Care-Worn Women in Two Weeks' Time and Make Them Look Years Younger.

Longing for the keen activity, the youthful step, the fresh rosy cheeks and the sunny disposition or buoyant health is making many a woman unhappy, discontented, wrinkled and old before her time. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee do not help the real cause of their trouble, which may be nothing more than lack of iron in the blood. For want of iron a woman may look and feel old at thirty, pale, haggard, and all run-down—while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in the blood she may still be young in feeling, and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age.

confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results.

Among other physicians asked for an opinion was Dr. Ferdinand Kings New York Physician and Medical Author. Dr. King says: "By enriching the blood and increasing its oxygen carrying power Nuxated Iron will often transform the flabby, fish, unless tissues, and pallid cheeks of nervous, run-down women into a glow of health and make them look years younger within a surprisingly short time."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is one of the greatest of all strength builders. I have prescribed Nuxated Iron—organic iron—many, many times, and I have seen frequent instances where it gave renewed strength and energy, increased power and endurance, steady nerves, and the rosy bloom of health in about ten days or two weeks' time. I consider Nuxated Iron one of the foremost blood and body builders—the best to which I have ever had recourse."

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Ross Drug Co., S. McDermid, E. Clinton Brown, Wassons Drug Store and all good druggists.

The trees, but not herbless, stretch of land reminds, one of the expanse of the sea, perhaps more of the Canadian prairie. In the sea and the prairie there may be nothing to break the uniformly level view, but in France and on the Somme, the skyline seems often only broken by the conspicuous cross, which marks, as one turns round, British cemeteries in many directions.

Those who go to visit their grave-spots should get the fact of final burial confirmed at the office of the "Director of Grave Registration," Winchester House, St. James Square, also the name and address of the local office of the directors in the district they wish to visit. This will save much loss of time, and unless journeying, it will probably ensure going direct to the desired grave, as surely as in a churchyard or cemetery in England.

For a first visit it will be wise to have all arrangements made beforehand in England, through a tourist agency, for travelling ("reservations" on trains), hotels and motors. Though this will apparently tend to increase the cost, it may prove in reality an economy. In our case, it proved in all particulars reliable and satisfactory; it excluded possible extortion; it has great advantages for those going on their first pilgrimage to the graves.

At Albert one saw the result of destroying a town by shelling it, where few stones are "left one upon another." It was pathetic to see, but very human, the signs of revival. Most noticeable were two shacks, each with a sign denoting the reason for its existence. One sign reads "Modes et Lingerie," the other marked a barber shop. Elsewhere we stood on the sites of what once were considerable villages, large enough to be marked on a fair sized map as Beaumont Hamel. Not even wreck marks these sites now, so completely have they been overwhelmed and covered by tons of earth poured upon their demolished ruins by successive shellings. In the temporary railway stations, and shacks here and there, there is much to remind one of Canada in the middle west, and of the United States in the earlier days.

An immense amount of labor seems to have been expended in the straightening out of things; in the removal of wire entanglements, munitions and wreckage. What remains are but traces enabling one to understand a little of what has been.

One returned from the pilgrimage with respect for the "powers that be," by no means inclined to "knock," but rather to support. From time to time one hears criticism, and in the concert halls in official and the government. This may be, and is often, ill-considered and hasty. It may be helpful to remember the "notice," to be set in in the concert halls in primitive days, in the "wild and woolly west." It read: "Don't shout the musicians; they are doing their best."

BLACKSMITHS' WAGE SCALE

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Blacksmiths' and Helpers' Union was held last evening in the Painters' Hall, Charlotte street, with the president, George Murphy, in the chair. Y.M.C.A. Secretary Recommends Hall's Wine

The Supreme Tonic Restorative

Read this Striking Testimony recently received:

"An attack of Influenza followed by Pleurisy and internal trouble left me weak and depressed, as I had previously always enjoyed very good health.

"My friends advised me to see the Doctor again, and he ordered me Hall's Wine. He said Hall's Wine contained the properties that would cure me. To my great surprise, I felt better after only one dose. At the end of a week, friends remarked, 'You are just like your old self again.'

"A Tonic that lifts depression from one's mind like this deserves recommendation, and I heartily commend it to anyone who needs toning up." (Original letter on file for reference)

Hall's Wine is prepared from a prescription of a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, England. It has been very widely used in the motherland for over a quarter of a century, and upwards of a thousand doctors have recommended it. Hall's Wine is being imported again, and a plentiful stock is now on hand. You can get an extra large size bottle from your Druggist.

CAPTAIN OF BIG BUSINESS GOES TO THE SENATE

Picture of Lorne C. Webster, as He Appears Before and Behind the Scenes of Montreal's Financial Stage.

BY H. H. BLACK. Resident Representative The Financial Post, Montreal.

Probably no business or financial man in Montreal has conferred upon him so many responsible positions in the last two or three years as Lorne Webster. And he accepts them as a part of the day's work and the next month or week, his name figures as one of the "leading" men connected with this organization, or that. It is less than a year since the death of Sir Joseph Forget, president of the Quebec Railway, Light, Heat & Power Company, found the only man suggested as a successor was Lorne Webster; the Merchants Bank of Canada, added him to the board; he became a director of the Montreal Tramway Company; he was chosen as president of an entirely new line of activity—Holt, Renfrew &

Lightning, however, plays many strange tricks. A girl was once crossing a meadow during a thunder storm when she was struck by lightning. Although every shred of clothing was torn from her, she herself merely experienced slight giddiness.

In another extraordinary case a man was killed by lightning while riding a horse through a storm, but the animal was untouched and unalarmed and carried his dead master home at a gentle trot.

Thames about midnight on Saturday, Lieut. C. C. Wood, of the Royal Air Force, made a dive from the parapet of Hammersmith Bridge.

Although succeeding in getting the woman safely to the bank, the officer himself sustained severe injuries to the head, and an operation was necessary. He is now on the danger list at West London Hospital.

It is not clear whether his injuries were due to his head striking the bridge pier or the bed of the river. The height of the bridge is about forty feet, but at the time of the dive the water was at low tide.

Lieut. Wood was walking across the bridge when he heard a woman screaming for help. She shouted to him: "My mother is in the water, will you save her?"

Without hesitating he tore off hat and jacket, and dived into the river. He had an exhausting swim to reach the woman and bring her to the shore.

As she was hauled on to the bank by men who had rushed down to the river-side, she said to them: "Never mind about me. Take charge of the brave boy." She was taken to Fulham Infirmary and detained.

"I was walking over Hammersmith Bridge with my brother about a quarter past twelve," Mr. Bertram Seabrook, publicity manager to Charles Gulliver, told the Daily Sketch, "when a young woman, with a baby in her arms, and carrying a man's jacket, hat and walking stick, dashed past."

"She told us that her mother was in the river and 'a man has gone over the top' after her."

"My brother and I helped to get Lieut. Wood out of the water. He was in a distressing condition. It was an astounding act for the man to jump from the bridge into the river in the darkness."

"Just the Kind of Thing He Would Do."

Lieut. Wood, who belongs to South Africa, came over to this country two days after the war broke out and joined the Royal Air Force. Subsequently he was attached to a South African unit, and saw service in German East and West Africa.

A friend told the Daily Sketch that his Saturday night's exploit was "just the kind of action he would do. He would never hesitate when he saw a person's life in danger."

A doctor who examined Lieut. Wood said he could not understand how he was able to retain his senses and swim ashore with the woman, as he collapsed almost immediately afterwards.

Lieut. Wood, who is twenty-eight years of age, was spending Christmas at the home of a friend at Barnes. He declined to sleep there, as his friends desired, and was on the way to his club in Grosvenor Square when he obeyed the summons for help.

The rescued woman is Mrs. Margaret Paxton, of Montgomery street, Hammersmith.

Not when there happens to be milk to spare—But WHENEVER THEY NEED IT

Before Milk was distributed the Carnation way, what a problem that used to be!

What used to be left in the bottle after the "top" was taken off never seemed quite rich enough. Sometimes it was just a little "off." Sometimes you used it for a pudding and then there was not enough for the kiddies.

But with Carnation Milk these troubles disappear. For you can keep Carnation Milk on hand—in the pantry.

You buy it with your groceries.

Opening a can of Carnation Milk is like having a special delivery of fresh "whole" milk. Always the same—good, wholesome and pure. Ready when you need it. Yet sweet and fresh as new whole milk.

Add water to it of course, for the children to drink. For, water has been taken from Carnation Milk leaving it almost like cream. So you can have it as rich as you desire, depending on the water you add. Double the quantity of water is about right for a rich, nourishing drink for the children.

Paper-Makers Blamed Advance on the Pulp Producers

Lower Prices—Instead They Were Advanced $16 When Commissioner Pringle Forced Pulp Makers to Reduce Pulp $40.

(Financial Post)

While no actual progress was made at the sitting of the Book Paper Commission last week, two startling facts were brought out: The complaints—publishers of agricultural, business, religious and other newspapers and periodicals generally—have always contended that when the Canadian book paper manufacturers had entered into an agreement to boost prices, they also agreed not to interfere with each other's customers, that is, it was decided that one publisher should be supplied by the Toronto Paper Company, while the Provincial and other paper companies would refuse to sell that publisher, except at a very much higher price.

The publishers this week submitted actual letters which proved this. A difficulty has now arisen. The Toronto Paper Company has been absorbed by Howard Smith and he refuses to sell any more paper to publishers who had been allotted to it by secret agreement among the manufacturers. All the other paper makers who are left in the field now refuse to supply the Toronto Paper Company's customers. These customers appealed to Mr. Pringle as controller for assistance. They point out that they are in a very serious position, that this action is most unfair on the part of the other paper makers, that for years they have cheerfully paid hundreds of thousands of dollars' duty to enable Canadian book paper makers to build up the industry in Canada. During all this time their American competitors were buying paper from 25 per cent to 50 per cent less money and shipping their publications by the millions into Canada without paying any duty whatever, and holding back the development of the Canadian publishing industry. Mr. Pringle, as controller, undertook to see what could be done. Publishers say that after all these years of loyalty to Canadian manufacturers, their action at the present time is outrageous. The suggestion has been made that they buy in the States and that the duty be refunded, but it is pointed out that all the mills in the States have now made their annual contracts with their regular customers at about 7½c a pound average, while a stranger or the occasional buyer would have to pay ten cents and would not then be sure of his supply.

The most important announcement made by the commissioner was that in response to his repeated demands upon the paper makers for reduction in price to the publishers, the former repeatedly told him that if he would force the pulp manufacturers to reduce prices, they, the book paper makers, could then give the Canadian publishers a material reduction in the price of paper. The commissioner's statement took the publishers by surprise, because instead of a reduction in price to the principal buyers, the leading book paper mills at once advanced prices equivalent to $16 a ton instead of giving the reduction that the $40 per ton reduction in the cost of their pulp permitted them to do, the publishers, again made formal demand upon the commissioner to carry out the instructions given him by the order-in-council to investigate the enormous increase in costs, to give them the statement the government accountants had prepared at great cost to the country to enable them to complete the case. The government accountants' investigation of the Provincial Mills showed that they had increased their profits per pound of paper 400 per cent, up to the middle of 1918, and since then there had been a further great advance. The commissioner refused to take any action, but instead contended that the publishers had no grounds for complaint, that they were buying paper at less than the U. S. competitors were paying. He called a salesman of the Provincial Paper Mills, who had been in New York, to make inquiries as to values. This witness, Mr. Wainwright, contended that Canadian papers could be sold in New York at prices varying from ten cents to two cents in the open market. He admitted these were prices charged wholesalers and job printers, and he had not the figures which newspaper and periodical publishers were paying. The Canadian newspaper publishers replied that an inquiry made by one of their members last week in New York showed that prices in Canada were $10 a ton higher than in the United States; that the business newspapers and periodical publishers there were buying regularly at 7½c according to quantity, for No. 1 book paper, but others would have to pay about ten cents for odd lots for use in catalogues, books, etc. The book paper manufacturers in the States regard the newspaper and periodical publishers as being by far their most profitable customers, hence the lower prices they are given and the great care they take to keep them regularly supplied. These publishers always use the same size and the same weight of paper, and take a definite quantity each month. This enables the mills to make annual contracts for pulp, coal and other supplies; to keep their machines running regularly and in case of periods of sickness on other machines they can turn them on paper for the newspaper publishers and pile up stock, knowing that they have a sure sale at a profit for it. It is their only certain regular business. In case of a slump in trade the publisher's business would go on, but the demand for other papers always drops off. The commissioner once more adjourned without having done anything—not even a promise was made this time. The attorney-general and two officials watched the proceedings on behalf of the Ontario government.

Should women be put on trial for their faults?

Should women be put on trial for their faults? And should they be tried by men? Are their so-called weaknesses due to the mediocre demands of men? Do women know how to stick to ideals that are not social assets? What is the type of girl that invariably becomes an old maid? Do men put a premium on virtue?

These are a few of the questions that are discussed and answered in a tremendously stimulating article called "Supply and Demand." Every woman in America owes it to herself to read it.

Miliken, compelling him to issue a proclamation for a day on which the people of Maine can vote upon the national prohibition law.

The petitioner, Thomas Curran, of Bangor, is one of 10,000 as stated in the petition, who signed a petition some time ago for a referendum on the question. The petition was filed by James D. Rice, who together with Meyer Epstein, appears as counsel for all parties.

The petition was filed in the office of Clerk of Court Sweet to be attested and served upon the governor, the date of the hearing having been set for February 24, at 2 o'clock before Justice Dunn in the Penobscot county court house in Bangor.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK!

Look young! Nobody can tell if you are Grandmother's simple recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowdays, by asking at any drug store for "Wych's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

DOCTOR MARTYR TO X-RAY.

"Yet another doctor has fallen a victim to his devotion to his work in the cause of science and humanity," says the London Chronicle.

"Dr. C. R. C. Lyster, it was announced, has had to retire from his work in the X-ray laboratory of the Middlesex Hospital, as he is now incapacitated by the paralyzing effects of frequent exposure to the rays.

"Dr. Lyster has devoted practically the whole of his life to the cause of humanity in an endeavor to find a cure for the terrible scourge of cancer.

"He is, indeed, one of the pioneers of research into the medical use of the X-rays. Nearly a quarter of a century ago he was working upon this complex and dangerous problem."

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made one. Really done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you can buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the chest, stops the dry, irritated, tickle phlegm, and heals the sore, irritated membranes and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex, with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MANY AND VARIOUS LIBRARY REQUESTS

New York Institution Centre of Information for Whole Country

Strange Queries Recorded— Gratitude of Many Who Have Received Practical Help Shown by Letters.

(New York Times.)
The New York Public Library bids fair to outdo the many-functioned country store, if Edward L. Pearson, chief of the publication department, in any of the many inquiries, and shedding light on the manifold uses to which the library is put, so many interesting incidents occur, both at the central building and at the branch libraries, that Mr. Pearson has started to make a collection under the general heading, "Why They Came to the Library."

"These incidents," said Mr. Pearson recently, illustrate the practical, everyday use made of the library for answering simple questions, as well as the way in which people consult it for obscure, recondite information. In other words, there is the practical, pay-envelope side of its usefulness, as well as its service in increasing and aiding general culture."

The miscellaneous inquiries are of the widest possible range. For instance: "A writer wished to make a comparison of food prices of today with those at the close of the American Revolution. He found his information in newspapers of 1785, in the reserve book room, central building."

The inquiries received from authors are legion. Here are some examples: "Authors who were studying to write articles on such subjects as 'A History of Famous Bells of the World,' the History of Trinity Church, New York; the art of the illuminated manuscript; the Jacksonian period in American history, came to the manuscript division (central building) for their material."

In connection with things theatrical, the library is a veritable treasure trove. This was noted: "A pianist wished some appropriate music for an introduction to 'The Pilgrims,' to be presented in dramatic form. He found it in the music division, central building."

The arts and prints division in the central building has furnished authentic data on period costume for plays and operatic productions without number, as well as the use of artists, illustrators and designers.

Information for Engineers.

An engineer is reported as sending to the library in a great hurry for information about the Diesel engine. The note says briefly: "He got what he asked for."

"A manufacturer of paper products came to the economic division, central building, to ask where he could find additional skilled workers. He was shown the Massachusetts report on statistics of manufacturers, and as a result of the information took the noon train for Springfield to find his workers in the Connecticut valley."

Another man, offered the position of manager of a theatre in California, sought information at the library which enabled him to reach a decision about the offer.

"A firm intending to build a skyscraper in California wanted a formula to compute the intensity of earthquake shocks to buildings and chimneys. They found it at the science division, central building."

An amusing is the recorded request from a biscuit manufacturing concern for appropriate names for some new styles of crackers about to be put on the market. "Suggestions for names were duly furnished," says the record.

"Aviators who wished contour maps for the cross-country aerial race found them in the map division, central building."

A sculptor, needing a picture of the first locomotive in order to design a medalion for a public building, found it at one of the libraries."

Listed are the cases of many women who, thrown on their own resources, seek guidance as to the fields they might enter or help on some definite programme. One woman railing roses for market found her prospects threatened by a blight which bade fair to destroy all the rose bushes, but books which she consulted at the library gave her the necessary information to enable her to save the bushes.

A poultryman says that he signed an application for a library card in 1912 "so his wife could get the novels." He was surprised to learn that the library had practical books for his own use. Last year he reported that he had enlarged his place and rebuilt all his hen houses according to specifications found in the library books. He said: "I have trebled my business."

Learner Interior Decorating.

One young woman cruised around among various departments at the library, decided upon interior decoration, position with a firm of decorators.

"A letter, in the embossed characters of the typewriters used by the library, came from a totally blind girl. She thanked the library for the use of embossed books, which, read solely by touch, had made it possible for her to enter school at an advanced grade. She secured the books from the Library for the Blind, central building."

Hotel stewards have to pass tests. Recorded is the case of one who borrowed cook books and other "literature" passed his test, and secured the position he desired.

There are many men and women who come to the library for help after they have obtained a job; for instance, the sailor, who after his discharge, obtained a position as a private secretary through the Y. M. C. A. He came to the library for some book on his new job. When the assistant gave him a book on exactly that kind of work, he declared it was a "life saver," as he knew very little about the subject. He put in a reserve for several other books on secretarial work.

A consulting engineer said: "We figured it up the other day and found that your library has saved us over $100 in the purchase of technical books."

One woman visits the library regularly because she is pleased to find on file two newspapers from her native city, Gothenburg, Sweden.

Another thanks the library for having been able to sell an article on fireless cooking to a housekeeping magazine, as a result of supplementing her ordinary

Help the liver to resume its proper function by removing the bile that is circulating in the blood and poisoning the system.

Mrs. E. Bainbridge, 30 Maple Ave., Amherst, N. S., writes: "I have been in writing of the good I received by using Milbur's Laxa-Liver Pills for headaches. I was so bad I had to go to bed, and could not sit up. A friend told me about your wonderful medicine, and two vials have made me as well as I can be."

information with more scientific facts in an hour or two spent in the library.

An official from the telephone company used the library for material on local history to be used in naming a new telephone central in the district. As the library had been working on the history of the district, there were available for his use several old maps and numerous notes, not easily available in other form.

Came from Surgeon-General.

From Washington came a representative of the library of the surgeon-general's office to find out what medical books have been printed in Hebrew and Yiddish. The Jewish division, Central Building, gave him 200 titles at the time and later sent him 100 more.

An investigator for the Eugenic Record office has been engaged in the study of natural traits and their inheritance in American families. He has come for his information to the genealogical division, Central Building.

In sharp contrast with this feature of research work is the statement of the retired business man who comes to the library to read novels. "I am twenty years behind the times," he says, "in my belief of the fiction of the day. Now I am making up for lost time."

There was an Italian woman who wanted to get a book out of which she and her husband could spell enough to help him to answer the questions on American government necessary for him to obtain his citizenship papers.

A reader says: "The book you lent me on modern soaps and glycerin is serving me as a guiding text in my report to be used in connection with setting up a soap factory in Russia."

The United States government wanted Librarian to conduct the library at Barbours Heights, Canal Zone. A New York lawyer needed some one qualified to assist him in preparing for the press report of an important case. A southern bank wanted a librarian to take care of its financial library. All three posts were filled by the Librarian of the New York Public Library (central building).

Recorded, too, is the case of the dignified elderly gentleman who was spoken of by the branch librarian as of "the easy-books-for-little-readers type." He reported to her that he supposed they thought they were for a child, but that they were not. They were for a woman who had lived here forty years and yet could not read or write English, and she was teaching her now. "That's why I come to the library."

A sad note is struck by the old gentleman who pays a visit almost daily to one of the libraries and spends two or three hours. It is one of his few pleasures in life. He sits behind, no furred tongue, no more dizzy spells or bilious fits after taking Hamilton's Pills.

COMPULSORY WORK.

London, Jan. 23.—The Central News from Helsingfors says the Russian Bolsheviks are ready to start the revolution in Russia to work every day in the week and have introduced a compulsory working day of twelve hours. All working classes are affected. It is said the new rule is being enforced with the utmost severity.

BOLSHEVISM AND RELIGION

Hon. A. K. MacLean, who has been offered the portfolio of Public Works in the dominion cabinet.

The forthcoming January number of the Hibbert Journal will contain an article by Prince Eugene Troubetzkoy, Professor of Law in the University of Moscow, which should attract general interest because of the light it sheds on the conditions existing in Russia at the present time.

The MS. was despatched in September; the packet was opened and immersed in some fluid which caused the ink to run over the pages, and obliterated some portions of the script. But the much-difficultly, and under the title "The Bolshevik Utopia and the Religious Movement in Russia," gives an intensely interesting analysis of the spiritual as well as the social struggle now going on in Russia.

According to the author, "Bolshevism is first and foremost the practical denial of the spiritual. . . . Economic and material interests constitute the only social nexus. . . . Considerations of justice have nothing to do with the claim of the proletariat to be sole possessor of all material goods. That claim rests solely and exclusively in the right of the strongest."

"The natural consequence of the denial of the spiritual is that intellectual forces are held in contempt. . . . Since there is no spiritual bond between the two sexes, there can be no constant relation. . . ."

"In . . . the feature most characteristic of Bolshevism it is to be found in the practical method it adopts for the realization of its Utopia. This method is the armed conflict of the classes: to the death against all who oppose. And this, from the standpoint of a consistent materialist, is beyond doubt, the one certain mean of causing the strongest to prevail. . . ."

"A pack of wolves gathered for hunting in common, and then tearing each other to pieces when no prey is to be found, furnishes an exact image of a society where the advantage or the appetite of each member has become the sole law of conduct. . . ."

TOGETHER WITH MANY MERCHANDISE PRIZES

Herewith will be found the picture of a Log Hut in the Woods. At first glance all you see is a man, a woman and a dog. If you look closely the faces of other persons will be found. Can you find them? It is no easy task but with patience and endurance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as well as shown the names and addresses which we will send you. If you find the faces mark each one with an X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness are considered factors in this contest.

This may take you a little of your time but as TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and many merchandise prizes are given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

Send your answer at once; we will reply by return mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Five Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.) Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring you the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This Competition will be judged by two well known business men of unimpeachable integrity, who have no connection with this Company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else in all previous winners of cash prizes are debared from entering this contest.

Must England Fight Reds To Retain Hold on India?

"To make a wide impression" on the elements of discontent in the Punjab, according to their commander, Brig.-Gen. R. E. H. Dyer, British and Indian troops fired without warning last April on a meeting of Indians at Amritsar, killing five hundred persons and wounding about fifteen hundred in ten minutes. This action is now being investigated by a committee headed by Lord Hunter. The violent outbreaks of disorder in Calcutta, Bombay, and the Punjab, eventuated from the "passive-resistance" movement against the Rowlett Act, which is replete at revolutionary and anarchical crime, and is made necessary by the attempts to overthrow British rule in India. Agitators seized upon this measure, the London Morning Post tells us, to organize an agitation which "threatened the very existence of British rule in India."

Events in Afghanistan, and even in Bolshevik Russia, "may or may not have had a connection with this movement."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for January 24th, there is an enlightening account of the unrest in India and how it menaces British rule in Asia. The article is accompanied with a map of the Indian trouble center.

VETERANS OPPOSE MILITARY SCHEME

Lt.-Col. Hunter Finds That Universal Service is an Insult.

Wants Militia Backed But Declares the Veterans Could Build Up a Real Force.

(Toronto Mail and Empire)

With the declaration that the universal military service scheme recently outlined by Brigadier-General Greisdach is an insult to returned soldiers, Lieut.-Col. A. T. Hunter, president of the Parkdale branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, made an attack upon the proposal at last night's meeting of the organization, and the association backed him up by passing a resolution which declared, among other things, that "the politicians will get out of the way or is enough of the spirit of the voters left in the veterans to organize a militia and train recruits at no greater cost than will be required for our obsolete pre-war system." The objection of the veterans was based on the fact that many citizens resent compulsion of any form, and that if the militia is left in the hands of the returned men it can be carried out much more successfully and with better results than could be accomplished by any form of universal military service.

"It is time we war veterans propped open our sleepy eyelids and looked into the future of Canadian defence," Col. Hunter stated. "In Canada during the war the routine duties of the militia were being carried on chiefly in the cities by officers and other ranks who, for good reasons, were not available for the field. The government demobilized for keeping track of them, nor of making them into reservists."

Blames Pacifists.
"It was not their present address, it was glad to see the last of them, and if we did not now and again wake things up with our soldiers' organizations you would only hear of the veterans at some public banquet where fat non-combatants of military age make flowery speeches. Unfortunately when the soldiers came back they said, 'I don't want to be bothered with military matters, give me a chance to look after my private affairs,' and they swaggered out of sight; and the fellows who had been carrying on the militia said, 'Now that the boys are back it is time for them to take hold, and they modestly faded away. Where's your militia? And now the government, having gotten rid of the militia, is standing and silvering and dipping its little pink toes in the water, afraid to take the plunge. Why? Because of the indifference and silence of the veterans and the insidious whisperings of the pacifist rotter. For it was the same greasy platoon of fellows who kept the British Empire from being prepared, and thereby gave us a million of dead and broken bodies for listening to their boss."

Col. Hunter went on to declare that the only guarantee we can get, or give, of peace, is the comfortable feeling that any aggressor who "starts something" will get in return "a shirt full of sore homes."

"In the meantime," he continued, "General Newburn, the only man in the cabinet with military knowledge, comprehension or sympathies, has resigned and has left behind him to reorganize the militia colleagues who cannot be suspected of possessing these things, and who may also be intending to live down the suspicion of patriotism. If they attempt to shrink the militia into its old shrunken-up mold, immediately three-quarters of the officers and all the non-coms, and other ranks of the expeditionary forces will see the gate to promotion and advancement slammed in their faces. The matter, however, is not merely a question between honorable recognition and insult to the veterans. It is in the existing threat an imminent danger to Canada."

But Little Defence.
At present the only Canadian defence Col. Hunter could see was the local police, the permanent militia, "which has always consisted of isolated, skeleton detachments having a nebulous if not an entirely imaginary regimental organization," and General Sir Arthur Currie, "backed by the archives department."

The branch passed a resolution thanking Premier Drury for the assistance the Ontario government has given to veterans, but asked for greater assistance in the future in the way of preference appointments.

It was a scrubby little room, in a scrubby little part of a scrubby little city's suburbs, and the London traveler didn't approve at all.
When he went to wash he found that there was no water for the basin, no soap to wash with, and no towel to dry himself with.
So he rang.
Five minutes' interim bringing no answer, he rang again and then again and again, until his arm ached. At the end of twenty minutes a waiter of forbidding aspect opened the door.
"Did you ring?" he inquired in a bass, rumbling voice.
"Of course I did!" snapped the London visitor.
"Well," said the waiter as he withdrew, "don't do it again! You'll wake the missis!"

Seven vicious swipes the green golfer made at the ball, but it still remained perched upon the tee. He was about to make another attempt when the caddy held up his hand. "There's a man going across in front of you, sir."
"What if he is?" snapped the novice.
"You must cry 'Fore!' if there's anybody in the way when you're going to hit the ball."
"How in thunder do I know when I'm going to hit the ball?" cried the golfer angrily.
