In September her sister, who lives in Montreal, being ill, Mrs

Boyce went down to that city and waited upon her until her recovery. Since her return her health became such as to necessitate a surgical operation. This was successfully performed on Saturday, but on Sunday there were bad symptoms, and the patient sank rapidly. The funeral will be a private one, at the deceased's request, and the remains will be interred in the Boyce family plot in the Hamilton cometery. SIR,—Many inquiries have been lately made as to the best method of estabthat can be given to these is that, to insure rapidity of growth, we must plant enough young trees to shade the ground to a considerable extent, that is to say, plant young trees, say three or four feet high and about four feet apart each way. This is about four times as many trees as will ultimately be needed, and therefore, it is well to plant three fourths maples, which are cheap, common trees of easy growth, and make every fourth tree a tree of better and more durable variety, such as the sah, hickory or cherry. As the plantation gets too close the maples can be cut out, and will make a good fuel, leaving the more valuable trees, which will yet stand quite close enough to answer the purpose. Of course my readers understand that to grow clear timber fit for manufacturing purposes, the tree must grow, otherwise they will run into branches. This is the mode practised by the best United States planters. The maples will get above the others, which will do good, but do not let them get too

Mr M. G. Cameron's Speech,

I do not think it will be expected, or necessary, for me to make any apology for bringing before the attention of the Club a matter of such vital importance as forms the subject of the resolution which I propose, with your permission, to discuss for a short time this evening. It is with some degree of confidence that I take my present stand, because I have a strong and growing belief that the great mass of the young men, at all events of those who have devoted a single earnest thought to the develop-ment of a national sentiment in this Dominion. I am further encouraged from the fact that a person is now permitted to bring forward with the most perfect freedom, indeed, with boldness, any policy that he believes will result in increasing the prosperity of the land in which his lot may be cast. Time was the prosperity of the land in the prosperity of the country had some voice in the prosperity of the country had some voice in the prosperity of the country had some voice in the prosperity of the country had some voice in the prosperity of the land in the land treasonable to discuss any proposition that would tend to a change in the political status of this country, but, thanks to the development of more reasonable the effect of which we see at the present views, that time has gone by, and we day, was made. This bill repealed all the provisions of the proclamation of 1763 and directed that the government of the country should be under the direction of a Governor and a Legislative Council. The Council was to be appointed by the Crown and was to consist of not more than 23 nor less than 17 members. Its power was limited to levying local or municipal taxes and arranging local or municipal taxes and arranging for the administration of the internal affairs of the Province, the British Pariament reserving to itself the right of exernal taxation or levying duties on articles imported or exported. Every ordinance of this Council was to be transmitted within six months at the latest after enactment for the approbation of the King, and, if disallowed, to be null and void, on his pleasure becoming known in Quebec. Canada was governed under the provisions of this Act for a period of seventeen years.

It will be observed that the right of self-government is not greatly enhanced by this Act beyond that under the proclamgion of 1763, the only real differ ence being that the right to appoint the Council is in the Crown and not in the Governor. In 1791 a new constitution was given to Canada. Quebec was divided into Upper and Lower Canada. Each Province was to have its own Legislature, somposed of a Legislative Council. a strong and growing belief that the to be appointed by the King for life, and course I advocate has the support of the usual manner.

The Governor had the right of appointing a Speaker to the Legislative Council, and the British Parliament still reserved to itself the right of regulating trade and commerce, while the Local Legislatures were to have the solu control of internal taxation.

For the first time it will be seen the people of the country had some voice in vent dissensions between the French Canadians and the settlers of British origin. This is where a great mistake, with the opinions of those whose ing compelled to separate, an assimilation loyalty is marked by excessive servility based upon identity of interests would have resulted and have gradually wiped out the prejudices and animosities

One of the great drawbacks in the Constitution of 1791 was that while it professed to be an imitation of the British system it was unlike it in this most important respect that the Executive was sults upon the present occasion. Ours is a great country, and destined to occupy the House of Assembly elected by the in the future a leading position in the people, and the contest became one world; our achievements already have against the prerogative of the Governor

The resistance to the demand for representation by population caused a great deal of ill-feeling in Upper Canada, and the result was that at last it was found almost impossible to carry on the Government of the country owing to the close political divisions that were had on this great question.

this great question.

Finally, negotiations between the different political leaders took place, the outcome being an arrangement based upon a project of Confederation of all the British North American Provinces upon the federal principle, giving to each Province the complete control of local legisation of its own municipal and peculiar affairs.

It should be a matter of supreme grat ification to the followers of both politi-cal parties to be able to point to this rather extraordinary circumstance, that, notwithstanding the differences existing between the parties, when the critical moment in their country's history came they forgot their party jealousies, they laid aside their personal and political animosities, and bent their united energies to the consolidation of this vast nation. This was a clear abnegation of party to the interests of the State, and, while each party may now claim the credit of the sacrifice, may we not rest content in the knowledge of the fact that, no matter who was entitled to the credit, the desired result was attained, and Canada commenced her onward march to a position of influence among the na-

Early in 1867, the Imperial Parliament, without a division, passed the British North America Act, which united the Province of Canada, now Ontario and Quebec, with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and made provision for the coming in of the other Provinces, i.e., Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and British Columbia, and the admission of Rupert's Land and the great Northwest. Subsequently the Provinces just named, with the exception of Newfoundland, became

It is hardly necessary to point out the increased powers of self-government that were obtained by the British North

Suffice it to say that by that Act the principle of representation by popula-tion was recogisned and given effect to. The sole control of our internal affairs was handed over to us, provision was made for the uniting of the sundered Provinces, and we were told by inference, if not by clear and unambiguous declaration, that our destinies were now in our own hands, that we had the make ing of our own future, that our political rtunes were to be our own sole care.

I venture the statement that our progress, had we been entirely free, would have been much greater, and I further contend that because of that connection we are beset with difficulties that retard our prosperity, stunt our growth and lessen our opportunities of development, and that our success depends upon the removal of that impediment. It can hardly be questioned that there will be in the near future a radical change of some kind in the political government of the opinion that the present condition of things cannot long continue, and that sooner or later the problem of what the future of Canada is to be must be faced and solved. It had been notorious to everybody that one party desired isolation from the British Provinces, and another desired the operations of the treaty to be extended. It was therefore a question to be discussed in advance of the present entanglement, and as Canada had no treaty-making power the responsibility rested with the Government at Home.

This, for sooth, was the way our business was then and is now, I have no doubt, conducted. Is it not time we called halt?

Our position at present is briefly this:—We can by legislation make trade arrangements with foreign countries without the consent of England, but we cannot enter into a treaty without her consent, and she cannot make a treaty for us without our consent. Does not this reach the same of abundity? We must have unrestricted access to the markets of the United States, and we must open our markets to them. To be of any use to the Americans, they must be practically closed to the English, and, while we are a Colony, we cannot give to a foreign country what we refuse to the nation to which we belong.

Then, as we are excluded from the United States, does our Colonial position aid us to obtain other markets?

Let us rally around the standard of Canadian nationality. May we continue the fight until the victory is over and the battle won and our beloved land placed in its proper rank among the 'nations of the earth. The future will justify the actions of the past. Those who follow us will wonder only why we so long delayed. Handkerchief dresses have been revived and come in the coarse, rough cloths that have been in favor of late. A very smart one recently on exhibition was composed of handkerchiefs with a plain may blue centre and borders of cardinal dark red, sleuder lines and maize, and a tint of green. The borders came up the front, meeting at the waist over an under-piece, with a border across the bottom, and all the back was of the blue.

So popular have the tartans be that it is prophesied by some that shawla are on the eve of reappearing among us.

The prettiest way of making up these tartans for most figures, and especially for children's costumes, is on the cross, for that each square figure is a diamond. For elder people the diamond arrangement is confined to the sides of the skirt, while the back and front are made the while the back and front are made the ordinary way. KEEP OUR INDUSTRIES.

For some time past Goderich has been on the look-out for new industries, and only for the lumber camps. The hog in by the Board of Trade of this town, of share of lean streaked with fat, or, rathering inducements to manufacturers to er, fat streaked with lean, bacon and ham locate in our midst. Under these circumstances we have been not a little surprised to learn from the Seaferth Expositor bulletin euphoniously terms "a great that one of our leading industries has gob of fat." The hog of today has his now under consideration the question of removing to Seaforth on condition that they receive a bonus from that season, is moderately fatted for a few town. Following is what the Expositor weeks or months before being marketed, says on the subject :

A FOUNDRY FOR SEAFORTH, — We understand that Mayor Wilson has received a proposition from Messra Chrystal & Black, the well-known steam boiler manufacturers, of Goderich, offering to establish boiler, engine and general repair shops in this town, providing they are given a bonus of $6,000. The buildings they propose to erect are as follows: An engine and finishing shop, 75 by 40 feet and two storeys high; a moulding and blacksmithing shop, 100 by 32 feet, and a boiler shop, 65 by 32 feat. They will commence with a plant to the value of $6,000 and will increase their capacity as circumstances require. In order to insure the permanency of the works, they will give the town mortgage on the premises, and at the end of ten years' successful operation the mortgage is to be retired and the whole to become the unencumbered property of Chrystal & Black. The pro position has not yet been considered by the Council, but it will be at the next meeting. The offer seems to be a very fair one, and the firm is unexceptionable Better men could scarcely be desired. They have already built up a large business and an excellent reputation, they would bring with them here, and in nition from other sources. In the ad addition to being good business men they are thoroughly practical workmen would be a small consideration in comparison with the advantages that would make satisfactory arrangements with Messrs Chrystal & Black; that the ratepayers will consent to the granting The discussion of Independence arising of the required aid, and that before this time next year we will have in successful operation an establishment of which we may all feel proud.—We may also state that Messrs Chrystal & Black do not ask for exemption from taxes so that the taxes on an establishment such as they propose starting would, from the ount to fully half the annual boring town. We would therefore. the attention of our Town Council and Board of Trade to the matter, and call upon these bodies to appoint committees to confer with Mesers Chrystal & Black with a view of retaining their works in our midst. We want all the new factories we can possibly get, but we also want to keep what we have. Goderich is now on the road to progress, and care should be taken that nothing will be allowed that will tend to retrogression, if energy and money can prevent it.

THE ONTARIO HOG.

The bulletin on "The Swine Industry n Ontario," recently published by the Department of Agriculture of this Province, is a valuable contribution to the study of one of the most important branches of modern farming. The raising of pork has become a considerable factor in the economics of agriculture. In times past two ideas were prevalent regarding the hog; one, that he was a general scavenger, worthy only to devour the waste fodder, grain or slop-an offal example, if we may dare to pun, of the total depravity of unclean beasts-that anything and any place was good enough for him ; and the opposite extreme was gone to by other farmers, who penned, and fed, and fattened, and pampered the bristly creature until he waddled about his enclosure a mountain of lard. The bulletin just issued shows a new state of affairs. The scraggy, fleetfooted, four-legged land pirate and gene ral depredator of the roadside and the barnyard, nosing in the filth, or rooting on the Queen's highway for a precarious living, is a relic of days of ignorance now past in places where farmers' institutes do flourish; while the pile of fat, yclept prime mess pork, is now raised being more in favor even at much higher prices that what one contributor to the clover pasture, his allowance of corn, or peas, or shorts, or other regular feed in and is no longer the Ishmaelite of the farm, but one who is esteemed during his lifetime and well spoken of in his death, even if he has not as much lard as the pet hog of the last decade.

COMING TO THE FRONT. On our second page will be found a full report of the address on "Independence," recently delivered before the Young Liberal Club, of Toronto, by our former townsman, Mr M G Cameron. The speech is worthy of careful perusal, and gives evidence of deep thought. keen research and earnest consideration. It is the plain statement of a young man who has well studied the history of his country, and has the ability and courage to point out the weaknesses of policy that at present exist, and present the antidote for the disease. We have always looked upon Mr Cameron as a coming man, and now that he is placing himself on public record we find that his worth and ability are bringing recogdress in question he has shown himself to be a born leader of public opinion, who are both able and willing to per-sonally supervise all branches of their and has not only placed himself on record The annual cost to the town along the line he had marked out, but has succeeded in causing a trend in the expression of his fellows in the direction ensue from such an establishment. We expression of his fellows in the direction hope, therefore, that the council will of the idea which he promulgated. The

The discussion of Independence arising from Mr M G Cameron's thoughtful address to the Young Liberals has been remarkable for the declared adhesion of speaker after speaker to what we have occasionally described as 'The Canadian Idea." In most previous speeches and writings of Ontario advocates of Can-adian Independence they commonly assumed that the new Nation can be cost of the bonus, and in a few years, if successful, would be at least equal to assumed that the new Nation can be established without any special consideration for the peculiarities, sentiments ation for the peculiarities, sentiments Secretary; W. HOW TO SAVE FUEL.

To the Editor of the Signal.

Sir. — Would you allow me to place in your valuable paper, for the benefit of those who have to buy coal, that I have invented a new and efficient hot water heater, and consider it an important matter for all to adopt a heater that last year proved itself able to save half the fuel, and yet gave as much or more heat than any other heater in use at the present

Any parties having hot water he that are burning too much coal can have them replaced, at a very small cost,

TEMPERANCE TALK

The Bishop of Muron Discusses the Liquo

At a meeting of the Ascension branch of the Church of England Temperance Society held recently in Toronto, the Bishop of Huron delivered an add ress and the eloquence which marked it evoked frequent and hearty applause. Rev. A. G. Baldwin, president of the association, occupied the chair, and in introducing the bishop said he had to correct a slight error that had crept into rect a slight error that had crept into the morning papers. It was stated that their meeting that evening was in connection with the jubilee meetings. That was a mistake, because this was their ordinary monthly meeting, and would have been held on Monday evening under any circumstances apart from the jubilee services. The labors and efforts of the bishop in the noble cause of temperance were, he thought, well known to every Christian man and woman throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion of Canada—(applause)—and he required

(Applause.) There are a great many people who say that

and when I hear this stated I do not deny that they are. You cannot say that they are any railing charge against them; but I wish to say a few words to all moderate drinkers. Unconsciously, they are often the cause of bringing others to hopeless ruin. It is from the ranks of the moderate drinkers that the excessive drinker is drafted. The Bishop here draw a strong and real. of Canada—(applause)—and he required no formal introduction.

The Bishop of Huron, who was received with great cordiality, said: The subject before us is that of temperance. It is one of those subjects the vast importance of which we can never ignore. It is a greater question than that of re-presentation by population; it is a greater question than any political one which is agitating the country at the present time; it is a question that comes into the homes earnest action. I would just ask you to steathily, but it is just like

THAT LITTLE WEED that grows in the masonry of some great building. You will not notice it at first, but as it grows it expands, it loosens the masonry, and finally separates the stones altogether. And when we look at this altogether. And when we look at this growing, terrible power the question that presents itself is what is to be done, or can anything be done? One powerful lecturer described the effect as follows: Supposing, he said, that there went over the country a telegram that one of the Allan steamers had atruck upon a rock. Allan steamers had struck upon a rock in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and every person on board was lost, there would be Are the sons and daughters of our naperson on board was lost, there would be mourning all over the country. But supposing the next week a similar accident occurred, and a second ship struck, and a second cargo of human lives was lost, and then a third and a fourth, and he said the whole country would rise and say, "Let us remove the rock; let us get the rock that is ruining our steamers, which is killing our people; whatever dynamite can do let us do it. Let us bloom up the rock." There is another rock, and there are the sons and daughters of our national daughters of our national daughters of our nation to be saved, or is the liquor traffic to be preserved as the one great palladium traffic is built up, it is supported, it is sustained, buttressed by all kinds of leg islation. I wish to say that the way to deal with it is to deal with the community at large. Sometimes people said that they found fault with this Act or that Act. I wish to say that when the nation is aroused it will that rock is intemperance, and there are that when the nation is aroused it will many noble-hearted men and women chart have struck upon that rock, and I wish to state distinctly that the princihave foundered fathoms deep. When I say noble-hearted men there is not a profession which this sin of intemperance has not invaded. It has invaded the has not invaded. It has invaded the ranks of the cicrgy, the bench; invaded all classes and grades of people. There is hardly a rich or poor house but twha we can see some proofs of the power of strong drink, and the question presents itses:—can anything be done, is anything today possible? What can be done by the church, by the community, by earnest Christian men and women? Are time the temperance sentiment throughwe to sit down with folded arms and say out the land would be such that no legisthat we admit the evil is great, we admit that the sorrows produced are many, but the question is a grand impossibility to us? It is to be left to its unhindered course—it must be allowed to ravage and kill. I do not think that is the answer that should be given, nor do you. I think there is a great deal that may be done, and I propose spending this evening in considering this matter. In looking at this great question we are to consider always this great truth that however ed in the great work of temperance re er always this great truth, that however ed in the great work of temperance re much sin may abound grace can much more abound; that there is no power so tremendously strong but that the grace of God can overcome. A man may be beyond kope." No one was beyond placed in the world exposed to temptations fierce and impetuous, but we are here as ministers of the Gospel to say brute. He would be beyond hope if that there is grace sufficient, and that there is no physical abysmal depth of human iniquity from which Christ can-not rescue man. There is no passion in the human heart SO DARK, SO MALIGNANT, so terrible in its action, but what the Lord Jesus Christ can overcome it, and through the secretions of the bowels, kidneys and skin, B. B. B. cleanses, opens and regulates these natural outhend. If we were in a house which caught fire, I suppose that the instinct of self-preservation would be sufficiently strong to make the people move toward the door. It would be a matter of personal work; and the first great truth that I wish to bring before you is this, that in handling the question of intemper-ance, what are we willing to do personance, what are we willing to do personally? Now, I put this to Christian men and Christian women—"What are we willing to do personally?" You know there are people who may affect enthusiasm, and may say they are always deploring the evils of intemperance, and so far they were in the right course, but we wish to come a little closer. What are you willing to do yourself? Are you willing to become total abstainers for the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil you so freshed to the sake of impeding the evil so the sake of impeding the e use in sayin; that they object to the evils of intemperance unless they are willing to make some kind of sacrifice. A man may say, I have the liberty to drink and use wine as long as I do not abuse it, and therefore I choose to use the liberty and take the drink. Now, I wish to say that the tree is a kicker law that the use no drink if thereby we cause a brother to offend. There is the power of example, there is the power which God has given to us to deny ourselves for the sake of others, and I ask each one who says that he deplorer the evils of intem-perance, and at the same time allows himself the use of intoxicating stimulants, we feel that he is acting inconsistently. I would say that St. Paul was a moble example of self-denying zeal, and I would say the Christian stand is the that for the sake of Christ's glory, for the sake of the sake of setting good example, for the sake of spreading that true, and pure, and laud table spirit of self-denying labor, he would touch nothing, he would eat nothing, he would drink nothing, in order that he might not make a brother to offend.

(Applause.) There are a great many people who say that from the ranks of the moderate drinkers that the excessive drinker is drafted. The Bushop here drew a strong and realistic picture of the drunkard standing till the dram shop was opened, every trace of freshness gone, the eyes sunk, the face emaciated, the body bent, the clothes in tatters, and the poor creature shivering in the cold and biting blast. You, he continued, who are moderate drinkers, I would say to you 'solembly : Remember that you are responsible for Remember that you are responsible for the influence you exert, and that you are ti is a question that comes into the homes of families; it is a question that affects the happiness of the people at large; it affects all religions; it affects all parts of our fair Dominion; it is the one great terrible question that ought to be examined, and ought to be made a matter of any out against the great tide, and towards fighting the battle. (Applause.) I do not say that you will succeed in everything. I do not wish to say that you are to consider where your influence you exert, and that you are to consider where your influence you exert, and that you are to consider where your influence you exert, and that you are to consider where your influence you exert, and that you are to consider where your influence you exert, and that you are to consider where your influence tends. the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 76 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyon, (of Fernandina, Fls.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Antoine Giband was born at Vals, dio-cese of Puy, in the department of Haute Loire, France, on a Christmas Eve, near-ly 65 years ago. He was ordained priest on the second of June, 1849, and after teaching philosophy in the Grand Semin-ary of Bourges, came to Canada in 1855. He has lived here ever since. After teaching rhetoric in the Montreal College for two years and dogmatic theology in the Grand Seminary for one, he was called to the church of Notre Dame in 1862 and remained there till his death. His chief functions were those of cure which involved a great portion of practical work of parish priest. Harper's Young People. AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY.

The Eleventh Volume of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, which begins with the Number for November 5, 1889, presents an atractive program. It will offer to its readers at least four serials of the usual length, and others in two or three parts, namely, "The Red Mustang," by William O. Stoddard; "Phil and the Baby," by Lucy C. Lillie; "Prince Tomisy." by John Russell Coryell; and "Mother's Way," by Margaret E. Sangster; two short serials by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen. Two series of Fairy Tales will attract the attention of lovers of the wonder-world, namely, the quaint tales told by Howard Pyle, and so admirably illustrated by him, and another series in a different vein by Frank M. Bicknell. There will be short stories by W. D. Howells, Thomas Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, Nora Perry, Harriet Prescott Sporofford, David Ker, Hezekiah Butterworth, Sophie Swett, Richard Malcolm Johnston, etc.

A Subscription to Harper's Young People secures a juvenile library. There is useful knowledge, also plenty of amusement.—Bogon Advertiser.

DON'T STOP MY PAPER.

Don't stop my paper, Printer,
1 on't strike my name off yet;
You know the times are stringent
And dollars hard to get,
But tug a little harder
Is what I mean to do,
And scrape the dimes together,
Enough for me and you.

I can't afford to drop it,
I find it doesn't pay
To do without a paper,
However others may!:
I hate to ask my neighbors
To give me their's to loan,
They don't just say, but mean it,
"Why don't you have your own?"

You can't tell how we miss it
If it by any fate
Should happen not to reach us,
Or come a little late;
Then all is in a hubbub
And things go all awry,
And, Printer, if you're married
You'll know the reason why:

The children want their stories,
And wife is anxious, too,
At first to glance it over
And then to read it through;
And I to read the leaders,
And con the book reviews,
And soan the correspondence
And every bit of news,

I cannot do without it, It is no use to try. The other people take it And, Frinter, so must I,

And, Printer, so that I,
I, too, must keep me posted
And know what's going on,
Or feel and be accounted
A fogy simpleton.

Then take it kindly, Printer,
If pay is somewhat slow,
For cash is not so plenty
And wants not few, you know;
But I must have the paper
Cost what it may to me,
I'd rather dock my sugar
Ani do without my tea.

So, Printer, don't you stop it

Unless you want my frown,
For here's the year's subscription
And credit it right down.
And send the paper promptly
And regularly on,

In the past three weeks' issues of THE Signal, mention has been made of the second growth of flowers this year caused by the recent fine spell of weather during this fall. In looking over a copy of the Scotsman of Nov. 26th, sent to us from Bonnie Scotland by a relative, we notice this item showing the mildness of the season there this year during the month just closed. This will be interesting to some of the readers of The SIGNAL who may have come from that part of Scotland :

MILDNESS OF THE SEASON. - The Rev William Stephen, Garvock Manse, Laurencekirk, writes:—"I came across the enclosed specimen of heather on the Hill of Garvock, at a height of 700 to 800 feet above sea level. You will observe that some of the blooms are in the process of formation. It was growing in quite an exposed place. I should think tt a good evidence of the mildness of the season." Mr James Watt, gardener, Chapel Gardens, Kirkcaldy, has for-warded specimens of twenty-five-varieties -including roses, stocks, chrysanthemums, wallflower, godetia, carnations, polyanthus, calceolaries—of spring and summer flowers, which are still in full bloom in the flower borders of Chapel Gardens, belonging to Mr W. R. Mood. The gardens stand about 170 feet above
