"ECHOES of the Past;

CHAPTER XIII.

"Yes; Mina, you are right; mustn't come again; mustn't meet again—hard lines! Why can't I get the child out of my head? What's the matter with my head, anyhow? Like a hive full of bees. It's the people rowing; they'll be on the platform presently! There's going to be a row, *All over in a minute, dessey. Why—there's—Mina! Mina in that mob. They'll hurt her! Oh, my child, my dear girl, why—why are you here in this scrimmage! Go away, Mina—for God's sake don't come up here—they'll strike her, hurt her, the coward! Oh, Mina, Mina, if you'd only go! If they hurt her—if they hurt her—if they hurt—! Mina, my child, my child! Keep back! Mina! Mina!"

Her face burned one moment and was as white as death the next, as her name rose in an anguished entreaty, command, from his fevered lips; and she bent over him so that her cheek nearly touched him.

"Hush, hush!" she murmured brokenly. "I am all right. I am not hurt. I am here at home, quite safe, quite, quite safe."

She even forced a laugh; and, as if reassured, he drew a long breath and closed his eyes. She put on a fresh bandage, so gently that he scarcely winced, and he lay breathing steadily, almost easily, his head on her soft, round, young arm, her head bent close to him, her heart beating wildly, for there had been something more in his tone than alarm on her account, something which, though she could not define it, thrilled her with a sense that was half an ecstasy of joy and half a strange pain. For his "Lady Edith" haunted her and qualified the subtle joy which had sprung up in her bosom at the accents in which he had spoken her own name; for the "Lady Edith" had reminded her that, though he lay so helpless in her arms, he did not belong to her or her world.

She sighed and her lips quivered with a wistful aching of the heart, and she dragged her eyes from him and gazed sadly through the window. He stirred, and when she turned her eyes to him again, she saw that he was awake and conscious.

"Mina—my poor child!" he said, with regret and self-reproach. "You are here still! How long? How pale and tired you look. A long time, I'm afraid! Have I been off my head? I've been wandering—I feel as if I should go off again at any moment, not sure of myself. But I'm better, I'm better."

A Remedy For All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug," says Dr. C. P. Robbins, "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and distress by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often complains to us for, or, something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-kamnia Tablets. Many and varied are their uses. I have put them to the test on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of malarial origin, where quinine was being taken. They appear to prevent the bad after-effects of the quinine. Anti-kamnia Tablets are also excellent for the headaches from improper digestion, and for headaches of a neuralgic origin, and especially for women subject to pains at certain times. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets give prompt relief, and in a short time the patient is able to go about as usual. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for headaches, neuritis and all pains."

shall be all right presently, you'll see. I'm very strong. Yes, how pale and tired!" He took her hand—she had drawn it from him when she saw that he was conscious, but she could not force herself to take it from him now. "Mina," he said very quietly, "you saved my life in the hall there. No; it's no use you shaking your head. I remember it quite plainly. I shall never forget it. You are a brave girl, Mina; but I'm not surprised, I knew it before. You faced all those men—stark-staring mad at that moment—and stood between me and them. No; I'm not going to thank you. You couldn't help it, could you? Some women are made that way, and you're one of them. But such a bit of a girl to stand up for a hulking man!"

He laughed softly and his unnaturally brilliant eyes shone up at her with a vivid admiration, and something that thrilled her as the tone in which he had called upon her had done.

"But if you had been hurt—are you sure, quite sure you were not?" He half raised himself so that he might look at her with a keen apprehension, suspicion.

"Quite sure," she said. "No one struck me—touched me. They were afraid of what they had done to you. She shuddered and set her teeth hard.

But he laughed. "They're like that when they lose their heads; they don't stop to think, they won't listen to reason; they are like a herd of wild animals, quietly browsing one moment, the next rushing at you like mad—or rushing away from you in as mad a stampede. How did you happen to be there, Mina?"

"Tibby and I were passing, and I heard your voice," she said. "Tibby did not want to go in, but after she was in and had listened to you, she would not have gone out if I had wanted to. But I did not," she added simply.

"No; you stayed and saved my life," he said in a low voice. "And you had warned me, Mina."

"Yes; but you would not listen, take heed," she said, with the sigh, half of regret, half of pride, of the woman for the recklessness of man.

"No; I didn't think they'd have the courage to attack me," he said. "But you were wiser. Where did you get your wisdom, the wisdom which makes the youngest of you women older than the oldest of us men?"

"You must not talk so much," she said chidingly. "Let me renew the bandages, and it is time for your medicine."

She held the glass to his lips, and her eyes dwelt on his face tenderly until he raised his, then hers fell. He lay in a kind of doze for a little while. It was the quietest part of the day in the Rents and the house was very still. Outside the impudent, self-assertive sparrows twittered incessantly; the strains of an organ, playing in a distant street, were almost harmonious; and a stillness like that of the house brooded like the dove of peace over Mina's spirit, as she listened to his breathing and watched his flushed face. Presently he looked up and touched her arm.

"I wonder whether you would sing for me, Mina?" he said. "My brain is in a whirl; I can't think, and I want to try not to—you understand? Sing to me, if you will. Sing the song you sang the night we met—do you remember what it was?"

"Yes; I remember," she said in a very low voice, and after a moment or two she began to sing softly, so softly that the notes were like a lullaby.

Clive lay with his eyes half closed; the lines on his forehead and at the corners of his lips relaxed, and he drew a long breath of relief, of peace.

"That voice of yours would drive seventy-seven devils out of a man, Mina," he said. "It's so sweet, so pure. How often have I heard it—when you have not been near. Sing me something else—'The Ave Maria.'"

She sang it with all her heart in it, so that he covered his eyes with his hands.

"Oh, beautiful!" he said, almost inaudibly. "To be able to hear that voice always!"

"You would get tired of it," she said, with a smile.

"I think not," he returned. "There are some voices, and faces, which one grows to love more dearly the oftener one sees or hears them." Her face burned and then went pale, and she rose quickly.

"I will get some more ice," she said tremulously. His eyes followed her slender, graceful figure wistfully and he sighed. Was it because he was so weak, so—upset, that he felt her absence, even for a few moments, a heavy loss? It was some little time before she returned, and he nodded and smiled at her.

"I thought you were never coming back," he said half-shamefacedly. "See how you are spoiling me. I am growing as exacting as a confirmed invalid. What shall I do when I have gone, when I lose you altogether, Mina?"

He still smiled as he put the question, but there was a grave note in his accents and, as she bent over him to straighten his pillow, he saw her wince and her eyes fill with tears. He raised himself on his elbow and looked up at the beautiful face with an intent, an eager gaze.

"Mina!" he whispered huskily. "You—you would be sorry! Oh, my child—don't!" for she had sunk on her knees and buried her face in her hands, and he could see that her bosom was heaving with her efforts to repress her sobs. "Do you mean that you care whether I stay or go? Do you mean—oh, Mina, my dear little one, do you think that I shall not be sorry? Don't you know that I am glad, glad to be here, though I'm lying here helpless, that I am happier than I have ever been in all my life? And don't you know why? Ah, I ought not to tell you, Mina, ought not to speak now—it's taking advantage of all your sweet goodness to me—but I can't get myself. Mina, I love you, dear!"

He saw the shiver that ran through her, and his heart leaped as he put out his hand and laid it gently on her downcast head.

"Are you angry—frightened, Mina?" he said, in so low a voice that the words were almost inaudible. "Ah, don't be, my child! I love you, Mina; do you care just a little for me? Speak, dear one; lift up your head and look at me—and I shall know by your eyes."

She raised her head slowly and looked at him with all a girl's first love glowing in her eyes, trembling on her lips, and Clive, awed by the sight, held his breath and could not speak. And so they gazed at each other, heart to heart, soul to soul.

"Is it true?" he whispered at last. "Do you love me, Mina?"

Her eyes did not waver and her lips parted, but for a moment no sound came from them; then, in a responsive whisper, she said, slowly dreamily:

"I—I don't know. Yes; I—think so."

"You think so?" he echoed, with the sense of awe still mastering him. "You are not sure, Mina?"

Her head drooped till her face rested and was hidden on his arm;

he could feel the tears as they welled from her eyes.

"I don't know," she whispered in a troubled voice. "I have not asked myself. But I am always thinking of you, always! And I am so happy when I see you; that other day at the picture-gallery—it was like— heaven. And now—when you said that—that you would soon be gone—and you will—I feel as if something had gone out of me, as if the light had grown dark—and it was all misery, misery. Oh, yes; I must, love you, don't you think so?" She raised her head and looked at him with an agony of doubt, of wistfulness, of entreaty.

He took her hand and laid it in his burning one and drew her toward him. She resisted at first, but gradually she yielded, and her head sank on his breast. He put the hair from her forehead and kissed her—not even yet did he dare kiss her quivering lips.

"Mina!" he said hoarsely. "Be sure, dearest! For it means so much to me, to both of us! You have seen so very little of me. It may be just pity, because you saved my life, have nursed me, and I am sick and helpless. Think, Mina. Do you love me well enough to live with me always, to be my wife?"

He felt her shake as if his question had stirred her to the heart's core, and felt, rather than heard, the whispered "Yes." Then he raised her head and kissed her on the face passionately.

"My beautiful angel—ah, better—my dear little woman! Kiss me, so that I may be sure that you are sure, Mina!"

Pale and blushing, she lifted her lips to his and kissed him. Then suddenly she started and in accents of affright and remorse she cried in a low voice:

"Oh, what have I done?"

He tried to smile away her distress, to soothe her with another kiss, but she put up her hand to ward it off.

"No, no! You must not—I did not think, did not remember. I forgot everything. Ah, you know I must not love you, that I can't be your wife." Her face burned for a moment at the word, then went white, as she firmly freed herself from his arm and stood at the side of the bed, her hand pressed to her bosom, her breath coming painfully.

American Universities—Iowa.

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash." The University of Iowa is a set of Siamese twins engaged in a violent endeavour to devour each other.

Part of the University is located at Iowa City and the rest of it at Ames, Iowa City, is a fine old school founded in 1847 with 3,000 students, great medical and law departments and a fine set of buildings, including the beautiful old State Capitol. Ames has 4,000 students, one of the greatest agricultural schools in the world and a vast campus equipped with a technical school, cafeteria, campanile and all the comforts of modern state university life.

Neither school, however, is contented. It is the constant desire of Ames to get all of Iowa City's appropriations away from it and Iowa City graduates will not let a legislator be nominated if they can help it until he is analyzed for traces of enmity to the other school.

So Iowa maintains duplicate colleges, libraries, campuses and atmospheres which keeps her so poor that she hadn't any money to spend on good roads. It costs her upwards of $2,000,000 to keep both schools going.

If Iowa's two colleges were united they would have 7,000 students and would look down with scorn on Michigan and Illinois. Iowa City has produced many famous politicians and one football team which stood the rest of the middle west teams on their heads and wore all the chalk off the goal lines of Michigan and Chicago. Ames has produced Professor Holden, who taught Iowa farmers how to test their seed corn and made that state the greatest corn state in the union. Neither college has turned out very many gilded scions of the uncontrollably rich.

Iowa educates its students liberally at these schools, but it does not stop there. It educates its pigs, cows, soil, newspaper editors, highway commissioners and cornfields. It costs Iowa a great deal of money to run her universities, but she gets it all back with 500 per-cent profit each fall and does not murmur or repine.

Piles for Fifteen Years

Cured by Zam-Buk.

To those who suffer from this painful malady the following letters will be of deep interest. Mr. J. McEwen, of Dundas, Ont., writes: "For fifteen years I suffered with piles and could get no permanent cure until I tried Zam-Buk. After having given Zam-Buk a fair trial I found it was getting better, and in the end it completely cured me."

Mr. James Ruddy, of Killoloe, Ont., says: "I suffered greatly from piles. The pain from these, as anyone who suffers from them will know, was at times almost unbearable. I tried first one remedy and then another, but all without effect. The piles still continued as bad as ever. I heard about Zam-Buk and commenced with the treatment. To my great joy, after perseverance, I obtained relief from the agonizing pain of the piles. Having been cured by Zam-Buk I heartily recommend the balm to all sufferers from piles."

"Why not end your suffering? Take the advice of the hundreds who have done so and give Zam-Buk a fair trial. This marvellous remedy quickly relieves the suffering, it soothes and heals the inflamed, irritated hemorrhoid veins, and perseverance with Zam-Buk effects permanent cures.

Every home needs Zam-Buk—accidents will happen, and Zam-Buk is the best "first aid." It quickly takes the sting out of a cut, the fire out of a burn or scald, the soreness from a bruise. Blood-poison or other complications cannot creep in where Zam-Buk has been applied. It is a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, children's scalp sores, varicose veins, cold cracks, chapped hands, etc. 50c. at all druggists and stores, or post-paid form Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes and harmful imitations.

Fishery Report.

The latest fishery reports compiled by the Board of Trade are:—Oct. 2nd. From J. P. Devereaux, (Cape Race to St. Stott's).—The catch to date is 10,070 qts., but for last week nil. Some herring is obtainable for bait, but no cod is being taken and the fishery is now over for the season. Most of the men are returning to their homes. Ten bankers arrived during the week.

Oct. 2nd. From B. Perry, (Catalina South Head to North Head).—The boats got to the grounds only once last week and then found cod very scarce. Some herrings are being taken in nets, but no other bait is obtainable. The total catch is 5560 qts. with 460 for last week. Forty dories and skiffs and 17 boats are fishing.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A healthy mother should not regard herself, nor permit her family to regard her, as in any case an invalid while nursing. She is much more likely to succeed if she goes about her ordinary duties as usual and fills her life with normal interests. An abundance of sleep is essential and she should have at least eight hours every night and an hour in the daytime.

A daily bath is desirable, and should be taken whenever possible. It is especially important to remove the odors of perspiration or old milk from the mother's body and clothing, as the baby may refuse to nurse when an unpleasant odor is forced upon him. A mother soon learns to rest herself whenever the baby nurses, and in these brief periods of relaxation help greatly to keep her in good condition.

Vigorol

Weak and run-down. Tired and sluggish. Eyes feel heavy. Headaches and feverish. Don't allow these symptoms to continue. Tone yourself up. Get a bottle of VIGOROL, it will do it, and do it quickly. Every spring one needs a good tonic. VIGOROL acts as a general house-cleanser; it goes after every organ and cleanses it. Get it to-day at all drug stores.

FREIGHT FROM MONTREAL.—The Furness Withy Co. have engaged the s.s. Paliki to come here with a general cargo. She is expected to leave Montreal on Tuesday next, the 12th inst., coming direct. Her cargo will consist principally of flour.

430th Day of the War TO-DAY'S Messages.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day. The long threatened Austro-German offensive in the Balkans, with the added menace of Bulgaria has begun in earnest. Almost simultaneously with the rupture of diplomatic relations between Sofia and the Entente powers, an Austro-German army estimated at 400,000 men, with an enormous weight of heavy artillery started to attack Serbia from the north-west, according to a Berlin official report, and crossed the Drina, the Danube and Save Rivers at many points and firmly established itself on the Serbian side. The Anglo-French troops which were landed at Salonika, with that tacit consent of the Greek Government, are being hurried northward to assist Serbia, and if possible keep Bulgarians from capturing the Salonika-Nish railway, the only source by which Serbians can be fed with ammunition of war. The hope for support from Greece has not been forthcoming. King Constantine by the dismissal of Premier Venizelos having shown that while his country sympathizes with the cause of the Allies, he is not prepared to go against the Central Powers or fulfill the obligations of the Greco-Serbian treaty alliance, which provides that any Ally must go to the assistance of the other in case of attack. The new Greek Cabinet, composed of men of pro-German and pre-Ally sympathies, has been appointed and the expectation now is that unless public opinion forces the hand of the Government and insists on action on the side of the Allies Greece will remain neutral. It is hardly conceivable by Entente diplomats that Greece will go over to the Central Powers for they point out, that Bulgaria is known to covet some of her territory, and the treatment of Greek nationals in Turkey makes it virtually impossible for her to become the Ally of that country. As in Greece so in Bulgaria public opinion is not entirely unanimous in support of King Ferdinand. Reports indicate that the Bulgarian mobilization is not being carried out without difficulty. The King and Premier Radolavoff, however, have finally thrown in their lot with Austria, Germany and Turkey, having after consultation with the Ministers of these countries rejected the demands of Russia for the dismissal of Austro-German officers, who are alleged to have been engaged to command the Bulgarian army. Bulgaria in fact denied the presence of such officers. The Russian, British, French and Italian Ministers either have left or are leaving Sofia. Italy has taken action also by giving the Bulgarian Minister at Rome passports. It is possible Bulgaria may avoid rousing the Greek people by refraining from attacking Serbia and simply keeping her troops on the border. This would have the effect of preventing Serbia from bringing her full strength to bear against the Austro-German attacks. Rumania like the other Balkan States are still neutral. Rumania has not been heard from, but like Greece for moment is bent on continuing friendly with all the belligerents. Doubtless to influence her and the other Balkan States, Russia is reported to have commenced an energetic offensive in Bukovina, and to have attacked the Austrian positions Northwest of Czernowitz. At the other end of the Eastern front, the German offensive against Dvinsk is at last making some headway. German officers of communication say Field Marshal Von Hindenburg penetrated the Russian lines over the front about three miles. Throughout the centre the Russians are still on the offensive. The Champagne country over which the French made big gains late in September is still the main district of contention in the West. Reports are so contradictory, however, it is difficult to ascertain what is actually happening. The Germans admit the French have made slight progress, but on the whole they claim to have repulsed the Allied general offensive. On the other hand the French declare it is a German offensive which has been repulsed. As a result of months of military actions on the Gallipoli Peninsula, General Hamilton reports the British have gained three hundred yards on a front of four miles in Suvia Bay.

NO WORD OF NORWEGIAN STEAMER.

MONTREAL, To-day. There is still no word from the Norwegian steamer Kromprinz Olaf, chartered by the Dominion Coal Company to carry coal from Sydney to Montreal. It is believed here she went down in the storm in the Gulf a week ago on Sunday, while on the way to this city. She left Sydney on September 24, Captain Jensen in command, with his son as chief officer and a crew of twenty-three men chiefly Norwegians.

GREEK GOVERNMENT WANT A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

PARIS, To-day. A despatch from Athens dated Thursday says: "A Mytilene despatch received here asserts that a French seaplane bombarded Aiball, Asia Minor, yesterday morning. The Australians have made important progress in Suria region on the Gallipoli Peninsula and on the southern front there. According to reliable information from Constantinople, the audacity that they feel that the German attack on Serbia is imminent. Greeks, Russians and British are being severely maltreated, the representations of the American Ambassador proving ineffectual. The disembarkation of the Allies at Salonika continues. It is understood that Premier Zaigras has informed the former Premier, Venizelos, that a vote of confidence in the Government by the Chamber of Deputies is absolutely essential as a mere vote of tolerance would not give the Government the requisite authority to deal with the grave problems of the present hour."

TURKS TRYING TO DESTROY ARMENIAN PEOPLE.

COPENHAGEN, To-day. The narratives regarding Armenian atrocities made this week in the British Parliament are the subject of outspoken editorial comments here. The Politiken says Turkey attempted no less a task than the destruction of the whole Armenian people. The hearties and gruesome horrors which these deeds reveal are without parallel in history of the world.

FRENCH GAINING UPPER HAND.

PARIS, To-day. Soldiers wounded at the capture of Taurere, are now arriving in Paris. All are of the opinion that the French are gaining the upper hand not only through artillery but because of the galantry and dash of the infantry. At the rate things are going, a wounded Sergeant-Major said, it will be a long time before the Germans are in a position to think of a counter offensive. Our heavy artillery sprays their rear formations, paralyzing the bringing up of reinforcements and supplies to such a degree that the last of the prisoners captured at Taurere had not eaten in 48 hours and had no cartridges in their pouches.

Amusements.

"THE WAR BABY" AT THE CRESCENT.

"The War Baby," a great Lubin war drama, will be presented at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day; this is a most interesting feature and is produced in two reels. "The Treasure Temple of Bhosch" is a Vitagraph production with Clara Kimball Young. The drama from "Olive's Opportunities" is "A Gypsy Madcap," featuring Mabel Trunelle; there are also two lively comedies: "Same and the Bully" and "The Fresh Air Cure," making one of the best picture shows you've ever seen. On Monday the Crescent presents Charles Reade's great story: "Peg Woffington," the quaint old English manners and costumes are beautifully portrayed in this fine feature.

It is in three reels and is acted by Edna Mayo, Francis X. Bushman, of "One Wonderful Night" fame, and Bryant Washburn. No one should miss this brilliant picture, the title is: "Stars Their Courses Change." That it will please Nickel audiences there is very little doubt. Well-to-do people are now using motor-buses a good deal more frequently than they did in pre-war days. I saw Lord Darby on top of a bus the other day in Piccadilly, and in the past month I have seen Miss Alice de Rothschild, the Duke of Portland, and Mr. Walter Long travelling in a "General."

Monsieur Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador, is the chess champion of the Diplomatic body in London. Working out chess problems is the pastime of a diplomatist's favourite recreation. Straight Talk to Ferdinand

The news to-day indicates that the Austrian military officer, who is Czar of Bulgaria, is carrying things with a high hand, and that he is arresting the leaders of the agrarian party and preparing to crush all opposition to his autocratic stand in favor of the country of his birth, her ally Germany, and the Turks whom he was attempting to drive out of Europe two or three years ago. Czar Ferdinand is taking advantage of the resentment about the quarrel which suddenly broke out after the first Balkan War, between Bulgaria and her former allies. But the opposition to Czar Ferdinand's policy has been definite and outspoken. On Monday five of the principal leaders of the party opposed to the Ministry of Radoglovič had an audience with the King. Malinow, the leader of the Democrats, accused the Government of a policy of adventure, tending to throw Bulgaria into the hands of Germany, either by an attack on Serbia or by forcing a neutrality desired by Germany. He asked that the Chamber be called together immediately and a Coalition Ministry formed to guarantee the country against any rash adventure. The next to address Czar Ferdinand was Stambulovski, the leader of the Agrarian party, and very popular with the masses of peasants, from whom he has sprung. He said to the King:

"In the name of the workers in the fields of Bulgaria I wish to add to the words of my colleague Malinow that the Bulgarian people holds you personally responsible, rather than your Government for the disastrous adventure of 1913. If a similar adventure were to be repeated a catastrophe would this time be beyond remedy. Again the responsibility would lie with your policy, which is contrary to the well being of the country, and the country would not fall to call you to account in person."

Stambulovski, the leader of the great Democrats, said to the King: "I have sworn I would never set foot in your Palace. If I come to-day it is because the interests of the country rather than my private principles obliged me to do so. What I have to say, Your Majesty can read in this paper, which I present in the name of my party."

The sentiments of the memorandum were similar to those expressed by the leader of the peasants. The other leaders expressed similar views equally pointed and strong. Before the audience closed the leader of the peasants Stambulovski did not mince his words and the King and opposition leaders left after mutual threats had been indulged in.

"I say again to Your Majesty, the country will not have the policy of adventure such as cost it so dear in 1913. This policy is moreover yours. Before 1913 we believed you a great diplomat, but we see what your dip-lomaticy brought us. You have taken advantage of all the holes in the constitution to get the directions of the country into your own hands. Your ministers count for nothing, you alone are the author of this policy, and you alone will have the responsibility of it."

"The policy I have decided to follow," the King frigidly replied, "is the one which I consider the best and most advantageous for the country."

"It is a policy which can only lead to disaster," replied the farmer, "which will bring about new catastrophes, and compromise not only the future of the country, but your dynasty, and which may cost you your head."

The King measured with his eyes this countryman who spoke such weighty words. "Do not trouble yourself about my head, it is an old one, rather think of your own," said the King, with the shadow of a scornful smile, as he moved away, but Stambulovski replied:

"Your head matters little, sir, I am only thinking of the country's."

History may repeat itself in Bulgaria. Ferdinand himself was elected to rule that country after his predecessor Prince Alexander of Battenberg had been forced to abdicate. It might be well for the allies to pay attention to this little incident in history and perhaps the landing of large forces in Salonika and the rushing of them towards Nish is not without meaning to the peasantry of Bulgaria. After all, Sofia is not far from Nish, and if these Opposition leaders who have been arrested have much of a following something may be doing shortly. This history should afford a lesson to King Constantine and his consort, the sister of the Kaiser. If Venizelos is firm and refuses to aid the King in any way, King Constantine and his German wife may find Greece too warm for them.

AN INTERESTING COMPETITION.

A great many intend to compete tonight for the handsome prizes given at Rossley's East End Theatre, as a compliment to Mr. Ian MacKenzie. The Rossleys, Jack and Marie, donned the Scottish uniform last night and gave the crowd one of their old-time acts. They received thunderous applause which shows they hold a warm place in the hearts of the public. Mr. MacKenzie leaves on Sunday, and those who wish to hear him will have only two days to avail themselves of the chance. The prizes were won last night by Miss Myron, Miss Keavie and Mrs. Hanley. One of those ladies intend handling over her dollar to the Patriotic Fund. The new artists will open their engagement on Monday. Mr. Rossley saw their act. They carry their own scenery and electric effects, with ton of paraphernalia wonderful, daring, sensational and beautiful.

"Mary" on Prohibition.

Assures Prohibitionists that Tom Will Vote Yes-X This Time.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Now that the time is approaching when our men will be called upon to cast their votes for or against Rum, perhaps you will allow me a little space in the Telegram to give the voters my idea as to how they should vote. This is very humiliating when we women with equal brain power as men (and have we not shown it times and ways without number) are compelled to be satisfied with men's judgment. I would not mind submitting to them on any other question but this vital one of the liquor traffic. For are not we and our little children the great sufferers by this curse of our land. Of course I am speaking collectively, as personally I am not a sufferer. Believe you me, Mr. Editor, if my man squandered his earnings in liquor, and helped to give the rum-seller's wife the finery in her home that they all possess, I tell you there would be something doing in my house. The marriage vows of "love, honor and obey" are broken by the hubby when he goes to the saloon after tea. Oh, yes, I forgot, they close up at 6 o'clock now, but after the 4th of November, I hope they will close up for good.

In my present writing I would like to divide the voters into three classes and have a chat with each class. 1st. Those who drink for the love of drink, and who will vote against Prohibition—poor fellows; 2nd. Those who will say: "well as I can take my glass and leave it alone when I like, I will vote against Prohibition"; 3rd. The non-drinker who will say he is not sufficiently interested to go to his booth and cast a vote at all.

1st. The man with the appetite for drink. This is a sad plight. He is to be pitied rather than blamed. Is there one of such who has not scores of times realized his error, when he has seen his own little children poorly clad and poorly fed, while he sat there his craving for drink? Yes, and how often has he, feeling ashamed, promised himself, if not his wife and children that he would defy the demon in future. I know of cases where the promise was kept, and believe me, sir, that home was truly a heaven on earth. Can any person say "I have not sufficient interest in Prohibition to cast a vote," after seeing the difference in a home as above described. Surely not.

2nd. The moderate drinker. If he is moderate in his drink, he will at least be moderate in his love for down-trodden wives, mothers and dear little, often shoeless children. If he is a moderate drinker, let one who can take his glass and leave it alone, he is possessed of a strong will power, for which he should be truly thankful. He therefore should give a thank-offering to his hearty support to the cause that will remove from weaker men the temptation that he of his own free will has not begun to estimate. He is possessed of a gift, the value of which he cannot pay to himself.

3rd. The teetotaler who is not sufficiently interested to vote. A selfish man, and a coward. See his happy home, although his earnings has not reached near that of the drinker. He has comforts. His little ones are well cared for and happy. Yes, a selfish man this. Will he admit that we have more comforts, and his family also, than if he had visited saloons. He must do so. Then he unknowingly admits that his drinking friend or neighbor would be in a like position, were the temptation to drink removed from him. Surely in the face of this he cannot say he has no interest in the subject. He is given an opportunity to help his less fortunate fellow-creature, an opportunity that will not cost him a cent, but which will bring countless comforts and endless happiness to others and still he has no interest. Poor wretch, and tell him so, if he dares to express himself in this way.

I hear people talking against Prohibition whose one and only plea is that the thousands of dollars added to the Revenue from drink will have to be added to other things if the prohibition cause. Man deprives you of a vote, but God has given you a tongue and clear brain, then use both in this good cause. Show me the man who would like to see his wife and daughters rolling home under the influence of strong drink, and I will get his picture taken at my own expense, and send it to all parts of the island as a curio. No, sir, I defy any person to produce one so depraved. Then why should men drink? Echo answers why? Wishing the cause every success and promising "Tom's vote will read thus: Yes-X
I am, yours as ever,
MARY.

Hr. Grace, Oct. 6, 1915.

Since writing the above I was down town buying some warm shorts and drawers for Tom, and while examining the goods I heard a conversation between two of the Executive of the Agricultural Society, relative to the trouble they have to get the Executive together. Perhaps you will allow me to return to this subject in a few days.—M.

Banker Donald G. Hollett in Port From Labrador.

Has 4,000 Qtls. for Season's Work.—Rumor of Schooner Lost with 15 Lives.

The banking schooner Donald G. Hollett, Captain Thomas Hollett, entered port this morning from the Labrador via the Straits and French Shore, having finished up the season's banking voyage. She hauls for 400 quintals of codfish, which she has now on board, or an aggregate of 4,800 qtls. for the entire season's work. This catch is considered exceptionally good this year, and Capt. Tom maintains his reputation as one of the high-liers.

According to the crew of the banker the weather was phenomenally severe on the Labrador. During September month the coast was constantly stormy and in consequence the fishery operation were at a standstill. At Bateau there were thirty sail of bankers which only got one "set" during three weeks on account of the stormy weather. The Hollett was more fortunate and got a "set" at Bateau, another at Venison Island and another at Spear Harbor, though the most of her 400 quintals was got at Bateau. On her way South the Donald G. crossed the Straits and went to the French Shore, operating in the vicinity of Quirpon, where fish were found scarce. A regrettable fact was that two days after she bore up for St. John's she struck in an abundance in the vicinity of Quirpon, where she lost about 500 qtls. of fish. However Hollett was fortunate in making two Labrador trips this fall, getting 500 qtls. on the first, seeing that other bankers fared badly in the far northern waters.

Schooner Rumored Lost.

In the recent storms one of Ryan's schooners with 700 quintals of fish aboard, was lost at Bateau. The crew of the Hollett also reported that they heard at Bateau and Venison Island that a Fortune Bay schooner, which was engaged bringing home fishing crews, was lost with all hands. The name of the schooner could not be ascertained. She had on board eighteen souls, 16 men and 2 women.

"Making" Fish.

Lately the weather has been ideal on the Labrador coast and the people there are busy "making" fish. Two cargoes are yet left the coast for foreign markets.

Fearful Carnage

Among Retreating Germans When 30,000 Infantry Fell on a 16 Mile Front—French Drove the Germans Into the River at Point of the Bayonet.

Paris, Sept. 28.—News from Champagne tells of fearful carnage among the retreating Germans. This is, in fact, one of the bloodiest battles and which for the number of victims surpasses any previous combat in French warfare. On a front of only 16 miles 30,000 German infantry fell, which, in addition to over 20,000 prisoners, makes the total German losses more than an army corps. The suddenness and vigor of the attack are clearly illustrated by the number of guns taken.

That the retreat was swift and bloody, especially north of Beaussart, is shown by the frightful slaughter on a hill above the Dormoise river. The impetuous rush of the oncoming Frenchmen charging with the bayonet drove the Germans from the crest of Hill 200 into the river below. The shouts of the victorious French, mingled with the screams of the fugitive Germans as they plunged into the swift-running river, and as the current swept the Germans off their feet, they clutched one another by the necks in a desperate death grip. It is not exaggeration to say that in a few minutes the rushing stream accounted for several German companies, and at certain points it could be forded across on their heaped-up bodies.

This hurried retreat, however, was saved from becoming a regular rout by the German batteries which opened fire from the other side of the river and stayed the onrushing French, who contented themselves with retaining the important position conquered.

How Samoa Was Taken.

Admiral's Short Way With Germans.

The story of the well-planned and admirably executed New Zealand expedition which seized German Samoa, in the Pacific is told in an official White Paper. The brief and pointed letters interchanged between Rear-Admiral Patey, commanding the Allied fleets off Samoa, and the Acting Governor, S. N. Rimburg, have not before been noticed and are worth quotation. Admiral Patey wrote:

"I have the honour to inform you that I am off the port of Apia with an overwhelming force, and in order to avoid unnecessary bloodshed I will not open fire if you surrender immediately.

"I therefore summon you to surrender to me forthwith the town of Apia and the Imperial possessions under your control.

"An answer must be delivered within half an hour to the bearer."

The acting Governor replied:

"According to the principles of the rights of nations, especially the agreements of the Second Hague Peace Conference, the bombardment of our harbours and protectorates is forbidden, also the threat to do so.

"I therefore respectfully protest against your Excellency's proposal. For the rest, to avoid the military measures which you propose I have given orders for the wireless telegraph station to be packed up and that no resistance is to be offered."

Thus easily was possession taken of a valuable Colony. The subjects of the Entente Powers resident in the Island petitioned the British authorities to show the German Governor and officials special consideration in return for the kind manner in which they had themselves been treated.

Confession of Faith.

The following is Lyman Abbott's confession of faith in his "Reminiscences" in The Outlook: "I have invisible friends who people my quiet home with their companionship. I believe that death and resurrection are synonymous, that death is the dropping of the body from the spirit, that resurrection is the upspringing of the spirit from the body; and I think of my friends and companions, not as lying in the grave waiting for a future resurrection, nor as living in some distant land singing hymns in loveless forgetfulness of those they loved on earth—I think of them as a great cloud of witnesses looking on to see how we run the race that is set before us, grieved in our failures, glad in our triumphs. I think of my mother rejoicing in the joys of the boy whom she was not permitted to care for on earth; of my father still counselling me by his unspoken wisdom in my times of perplexity; of my wife giving me rest and invigoration by her love. So I am never lonely when I am alone; rarely restless when I am sleepless."

He (angrily)—"See here, Betty, what do you mean by keeping me waiting here on the corner, looking like a fool?"

She—"Now, Tom, I know I kept you waiting, but the rest you did yourself."—Boston Transcript.

Two Hundred Questions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Every man hath two or three birthdays: two days at least, in every year which set him upon revolving the lapse of time as it affects his mortal duration. The one is that which in an especial manner he termeth his. In the gradual desuetude of an old observance, this custom of solemnizing our proper birthday hath nearly passed away or is left to children, who reflect nothing at all about the matter, nor understand anything in it beyond cake and orange."
—Charles Lamb.

"On the day before my birthday," I heard a New Thought speaker say recently, "I spend the whole evening answering a set of about two hundred questions. I sit down and make a business of it. I write the answers down and compare them with the answers of previous years."

Why Didn't Someone Interrupt Him?

It is hard to conceive of anyone with the leisure and the fixity of purpose to spend a whole evening in that admirable way. How was it that no one insisted on his making a fourth at bridge or taking a spin in the machine? How came it that he was not beguiled from his resolution by the lure of a fresh uncut magazine upon his library table?

Surely he cannot be married, else his wife would have reminded him that he had promised to go to the moving-pictures with her.

Knowing that the difficulty of living on twenty-four hours a day is almost as great a problem as the high cost of living, I wouldn't dare ask my readers to devote a whole evening to such a task, or to answer two hundred questions.

A Little Stock-Taking, Now And Then.

But if, instead of making our birthdays merely a matter of "cake and orange" (or their modern equivalent, birthday gifts), we did manage to find an hour sometime during the day in which to do a little stock-taking, would it do us any harm?

When we go to town with a ten-dollar bill and come back with ten cents; we usually sit down and reckon on what has become of the money. Shall we do less when we have spent a year?

Some Of The Questions We Might Ask.

Have I grown mentally in the past year?
Have I made any new friends?
Have I kept all my old friends?
Have I strengthened my character in any way?
Have I learned any lessons from my failures and mistakes?
Have I gained any on my besetting fault?
How have I treated my body?
Have I made it a more or a less efficient tool by my treatment of it in the past year?
How do I stand financially?
Have I gone a little further toward shaping a worthy creed of action and belief for myself?
These are some of the questions that my own life suggests to me. Yours will suggest others to you.

To-day must be the birthday of some of my reader friends and I know they will give these suggestions some consideration because of the coincidence. But let them not be the only ones. The business that went on indefinitely without a stock-taking would soon be in a muddle. Is the business of your life less important?

Death of Dr. Ebenezer Thompson

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—It is my purpose to use your columns, if you will please permit me, to mention an event of considerable importance to the people of Hermitage Bay. That event is the death of Dr. Ebenezer Thompson, at the ripe age of eight-four years. For about half a century Dr. Thompson practised medicine in this Bay and hundreds testify to his kindness and care on behalf of all who needed his assistance. Through rain and sunshine, calm and storm, he went by boat wherever and whenever he was wanted, and as his patients were scattered over a coast-line exceeding 100 miles, the calls were frequent and the journeys often long.

At last, however, the iron constitution of the old doctor broke up and he was forced to discontinue the work he had performed for so many years. Even on his sick bed, however, he gave what advice and assistance lay in his power.

But the old doctor's voice will be heard no more. He rests now in Hermitage churchyard by the old stone church, and under its shadow he will lie until the Last Great Day.

Now the old doctor has passed away it would be well if another took his place. From Burgeo to Hr. Breton, nearly 200 miles, there is no medical man. About three or four thousand people therefore have little chance to see one. The only way to do so is by sending to Burgeo, Hr. Breton or St. Jacques. To do this one must pay a fee of $20 to $25, for each visit, and sometimes the doctor cannot leave his own practice on any condition. When he does probably the fee is inadequate, although it may seem big to the fisherman. One must remember, however, that the doctor is a busy man, and absence from his practice causes confusion and inconvenience. Calling doctors away from their practice should be unnecessary. There is a fine field of labour for a young or a middle-aged physician in this Bay. The travelling is nearly all done by boat, but a great part of it is done where the water is generally smooth. Dr. Thompson managed it for half a century and conditions were far less favourable when he began. Very little, if any, travelling could be done by steamer then, and accommodation at its best was poor. Now the steamers are often available for reaching

What About Medicated Wines?

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Now that the time is drawing nigh for a vote of the electorate for or against Prohibition, I would draw the attention of the promoters of this agitation to the fact that in all districts outside of St. John's Prohibition or Local Option has been adopted, that is for the sale of intoxicating liquors, such as whiskey, wine, rum, gin, etc. But what about medicated wines. There is not one word as far as I can see about the latter although more people are ruined annually through the sale of those so-named medicines than from all other intoxicants. This medicated stuff is worse by far than the genuine article, for one is pure and, provided one has control over himself, there is no fear, but the other, if only a spoonful is taken, dulls the intellect, kills the nerves and destroys the individual mentally and physically who indulges only to a very small extent in its use. Now, then, gentlemen, be up and doing, for if all those medicated wines are not included in the Prohibition Act, then I say that it is only a farce.

Yours truly,
VOTER.

All Children Love "Syrup of Figs" for Liver and Bowels

Give it when feverish, cross, bilious, for bad breath or sour stomach.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other, kind with contempt.

Spanish Cocoa a Rare Treat.

To know the finest method for making chocolate or cocoa one must learn of the practice in Spain or in one of the Spanish-American countries. There one finds out two important things. The first concerns the utensil in which the chocolate is made. Our nearest approach to this is an enameled ware double boiler. Indeed, this is a perfectly satisfactory substitute for the heavy and fragile chocolate pots favored by some of the Spanish countries. The second point is that chocolate is better if not served freshly made. Chocolate and cocoa are much improved if they are prepared some hours before service. Cook the chocolate in the enameled ware boiler very thoroughly. Set in a cool-place and let stand until required. Then heat to boiling point and serve either with or without whipped cream.

Just the Same.

How often does your friend ask you "How are you feeling," and your answer is: "Just the same," my cough is not one bit better. Don't you think that you are very foolish in allowing this nasty cough and cold hang on to you for such a long time?

If you have contracted a cough or cold in some way or other, try the following:—Mix equal parts of Stafford's Liniment and Camphorated Oil together and apply to the neck and chest, rubbing it in well every time. Take from one to two teaspoonfuls of Stafford's Phorator Cough and Cold Cures every two hours.

The above treatment has been found beneficial hundreds of times.

One Pair of Hands is enough.

If you give your Cook a Gas Cooker she can always cook her best and need never keep you waiting because she has nothing else to do but cook.

She has no troublesome coal fire to look after, but can get the exact heat she wants for every dish by merely turning a tap—and she can cook several dishes (each requiring a different degree of heat) at the same time.

The Gas Cooker needs no preparation, makes no cleaning work, and is turned out as soon as it is finished with and therefore burns no unnecessary fuel.

By using a Gas Water-Heater in addition to the Gas Cooker hot water is supplied for all household purposes with the greatest promptitude, and the use of coal in the kitchen can be done away with altogether.

Where Gas Appliances are used in the kitchen the cook will always find that "one pair of hands is enough."

430th Day of the War Latest From the Front.

 Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 7. The Governor, Newfoundland: In Champagne the French carried by assault the village and height of Tahure, the latter forming a point d'appui to the enemy's second line. Progress was also made at Navarin farm and over 1,000 prisoners were taken. Four enemy counter-attacks were repulsed near Soissons. Stubborn enemy attacks on the Tahure position collapsed with very heavy losses. Russia has made progress at various points, and several villages have been recaptured.

BONAR LAW.

PARIS, Oct. 7. The Germans bombarded violently last night all the French front to the north of Laiscarpe and at the same time delivered four counter attacks against the positions recently conquered by the French near Soissons. They were repulsed at all points. Information was given out by the French War Office this afternoon that there was further more intense artillery exchanges at other points on the front. In the Champagne district last evening the Germans delivered a series of stubborn attacks against the positions lost by them to the French to the north of Tahure. These attacks everywhere failed and the Germans suffered heavy losses. At Eparges the French exploded two mines causing serious damage to the German works.

VERY SLOW PROGRESS.

LONDON, Oct. 7. During the past month's fighting in the Dardanelles, the British gained on an average something more than 300 yards all along the centre of the four mile Salva front, according to an official statement given out tonight.

RUSSIAN CRUISERS BOMBARD Varna.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 7. The Cologne Gazette reports two Russian cruisers actively bombarding the Bulgarian port of Varna.

BULGARIAN DISORDERS.

LONDON, Oct. 7. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Budapest states that the newspaper Aezet says it learns from Sofia that wholesale arrests of leaders of the Agrarian Party are taking place, and the government is prepared to take stern measures to crush all domestic attempts to impair Bulgarian unity.

THE 'GLOBE' SUGGESTION.

LONDON, Oct. 7. Commenting on the assiduity with which the damage wrought by Zeppelins is being repaired, the Globe suggests that these buildings be left alone. "Let shattered houses remain as mute witnesses to German frightfulness and as a call to Englishmen never to forget," says that journal.

NEWS WITHHELD.

LONDON, Oct. 7. The London office of the Associated Press advises to-day by cable, that thousands of words of despatches from its correspondents in Sofia and from German lines on the western battle front, are being withheld by the British censors.

GERMAN-AUSTRIAN FORCES INVADE SERBIA.

BERLIN, Oct. 7. Large German and Austrian forces have invaded Serbia. The Teutonic troops crossed the Drina and Danube Rivers at many places, the War Office announced to-day. It is stated that the invading troops have established firm footholds on the other banks of the rivers. This German announcement indicates that an invading movement is in progress along a large part of the boundary between Austria and Serbia.

HELD CONFERENCE.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 7. A despatch to the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger from Sofia, says that after receiving the Russian ultimatum, King Ferdinand and the Premier conferred with the Austrian, German and Turkish ministers in Bulgaria, before making a reply.

ALLIES' ATTEMPTS FRUSTRATED.

BERLIN, Oct. 7. During recent battles in France, the Overseas News Agency says: To-day efforts were made by the British, French and Belgians to land soldiers in civilian garb from aircraft behind the German front. These men were ordered to destroy bridges and roads, in order to impede the movements of the German troops. A number of persons were sent by way of Holland to Belgium with the same orders. These attempts were frustrated by the vigilance of the German authorities.

AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMIES.

LONDON, Oct. 7. An official despatch reached London to-day, stating that the Austro-German armies concentrated against Serbia comprise four hundred thousand men.

TOTAL BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Oct. 7. The total casualties among officers of the British army from the beginning of the war up to Sept. 27, number 17,074; of which 5,176 officers were killed or had died; while 10,469 are wounded; 1,429 are missing. In the fortnight ended Sept. 27, the lists showed 131 officers killed, 290 wounded, 111 missing; total 432. The casualties indicating a comparative lull of operations, in the Indian contingent are 20 killed, 39 wounded; Australians 8 killed; 12 wounded; Royal Field Artillery 3 killed, 15 wounded. Apart from these the losses in individual regiments do not exceed fifteen. During the fortnight two Brigadier Generals were wounded.

LEAVING SOFIA.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 7. In advance of direct word from the Russian Minister at Sofia, it is assumed by the foreign office that the minister and his associates departed yesterday from the Bulgarian capital. The unsatisfactory nature of Bulgaria's reply caused no surprise here. It is stated that the foreign office is without official information as to Italy's attitude, although it is unofficially announced here that the Italian, Belgian and Serbian ministers at Sofia have also demanded their passports. The British and French ministers conferred to-day with the Russian Foreign Minister.

HANDED HIS PASSPORT.

LONDON, Oct. 7. The Bulgarian Minister to Italy was to-day handed his passport.

GERMAN COMMENTS.

LONDON, Oct. 7. Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent sends the following: It is gleaned from German newspaper comment that developments in the Balkans and the drastic situation in Greece are widely, but for the most part cautiously commented on by the German press. Theodore Wolf, of the Tagblatt, declares it to be the heaviest blow that could have been given the policy of the Entente Powers, and that it confronts them with extraordinary danger. Herr Wolf considers that King Constantine's action is somewhat daring, but argues that any revolutionary movement in Greece is improbable, as the army is devoted to the King. The same doubt is raised by the Frankfurter Zeitung, which asks which is stronger, the King or Venizelos? It considers it conceivable that, as was the case in Italy, external compulsion through street demonstrations in Athens might cause a reversion to the policy of the parliamentary majority, but only if Venizelos places himself at the head of the movement against the King would it, in the opinion of this newspaper, have a chance of success. Germany will gladly greet neutrality, concludes the Frankfurter Zeitung, but if Greece does not remain neutral we and our friends are ready.

ZAIMIS ACCEPTS PREMIERSHIP.

ATHENS, Oct. 7. Alexander Zaimis has accepted the premiership in succession to Venizelos, on the invitation of King Constantine. He completed his cabinet to-day. Venizelos is not a member of the new ministry.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH LOAN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. Minor details in connection with the closing of the five hundred million credit loan to Britain and France occupied the attention to-day of the Anglo-French financial commission, who were also the luncheon guests of the Chamber of Commerce. Lord Reading and several members of the commission paid a visit during the afternoon to the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., agents for the syndicate of underwriters. When they departed it was said that the contract for the loan probably would be signed this week.

GREECE'S NEW MINISTRY.

PARIS, Oct. 7. Five members of the new Greek cabinet are former premiers, says a despatch from Athens. The fact that Premier Zaimis takes the portfolio of foreign affairs is significant, as he alone among former premiers is not opposed to the Entente Powers, and it is considered his ideas best represent absolute neutrality. The cabinet will appear in the chamber next Monday to make public declarations of its general policy, avoiding all reference to the Graeco-Serbian alliance. The attitude of the Venizelos government is regarded as probable, however, that the party will not refuse the cabinet a provisional vote of confidence. The ministry, as it is constituted, is considered as the best solution of the ministerial crisis.

GRAIN CARGOES.

PORTLAND, Oct. 7. Six large steamers will load more than one million five hundred thousand bushels of grain at this port during the next six weeks for Europe.

French Literally Cut Their Way Through Trapped German Army Corps.

Paris, Oct. 3.—By their methods of preparation and attack the French kept their losses in Champagne down to a remarkably low figure. The French tactics and strategy in attack completely deceived the Germans and thereby greatly increased the German losses. The French line swept forward with tremendous gusto to a point, where they seemingly were brought to a halt by the German resistance. The French centre slowly gave ground. Meanwhile the wings held. As the centre fell back, the Germans pressed forward their counter attack hoping to cut the French line and turn defeat into victory. But as soon as the Germans were drawn well into the trap, the French surged forward again all along the line and waded into the Germans from three sides with bayonet. The Germans were caught in the mass, and the slaughter went on until the men sickened of the work and closed with each other on sight. The French went forward again then and literally cut their way through the trapped German Army Corps.

 HENRY FIELDING died 1754, aged 47. "The Father of the English Novel" the events of his life are not easy to trace. It is certain that on the failure of his wife's fortune, he took a theatre, and, when this failed, tried his hand at law. He was contributing to literature all the time. "Joseph Andrews," published soon after the appearance of Richardson's "Pamela," made his name. Fielding died in Lisbon where he had gone for the benefit of his health.

REMBRANDT died 1669, aged 63. One of the greatest of the Dutch school of painters, who produced many remarkably successful portraits as well as numerous figure subjects, all of them distinguished by their masterly qualities.
 G. DUMAURIER died 1896, aged 62. One of the best known of the "Punch" artists during a long period and author of "Tribby."

GREAT WAR 1914. Bombardment of Antwerp continued; flight of the population and retirement of British and Belgian forces during the night; several thousands were cut off by a German attack and entered Dutch territory, where they were interned.

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
 Were half the wealth bestowed on Theodor Wolf, of the Tagblatt, Given to redeem the human mind from error,
 There were no need for arsenals nor forts,
 The warrior's name would be a name abhorred,
 And every nation that should lift again
 Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
 Should wear forever more the curse of Cain. Longfellow.

Obituary.

JOHN ROSCOE.

We chronicle to-day the demise of Mr. John Roscoe, after a brief illness. The event occurred early this morning at his late residence, Battery Rd. Though he had attained his four score and two years, the deceased was hale and hearty up to a few days ago. He was an exemplary citizen and much esteemed and respected in the community. He was of a gentle disposition and a great lover of outdoor exercise. For very many years he was accountant with Messrs. H. J. Stabb and Company which position he held up to the time of his death. He was one of the oldest Freemasons in the Island and an honorary member of St. John's Lodge, A. F. and A. M.

INSPECTOR COLLINS.

With profound regret we record the passing of William Collins, late District Inspector of the Newfoundland Constabulary, whose death occurred at his late residence Fort Townsend at 9 o'clock last night. While superintending repairs to his intended future home on Holloway Street yesterday afternoon he was seized with an attack of heart failure which proved fatal a few hours afterwards. Upon being taken ill he was taken to his residence and was attended by Dr. Roberts and Rev. Fr. Carthy, the latter administering the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church. The deceased had attained his 64th year, and only five weeks ago retired from the Constabulary after a period of 43 years service. On the occasion of his retirement he was presented with an address and handsome gift by his fellow officers as an appreciation of his valuable work. To his sorrowing widow and relatives, a brother and three sisters who reside in Placentia (the native town of the deceased) the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

Mine-Sweeper From Liverpool.

He Earns a Victoria Cross on Every Voyage—Engaged in a Work so Dangerous It is a Wonder He Returned Home Safely So Often. (Chris. Healy, in Toronto Globe.)

Liverpool, Sept. 6.—In comparison with its population, Liverpool has given more soldiers, sailors and war workers to the nation than any other part of the Empire.

The bravest of them all are the mine-sweepers. The mine-sweeper earns but does not get a Victoria Cross every voyage. He is always engaged in a forlorn hope, a work so dangerous that it is a wonder he returns safely to his home so often. It is not alone in the Irish Seas that he is risking his life, so that ships may pass to and fro in safety; in the North Sea, no longer the German Ocean; in the Dardanelles, in the English Channel and the Arabian Rivers and Persian Gulf you will find Liverpool sailors engaged in the perilous task of mine-sweeping, and so rendering easier, one cannot say easy, the work of our submarines, destroyers, cruisers and battleships.

At present the British Grand Fleet is resting in a spot unknown even to the censor, for, strange as it may appear, there are scores of telegrams which pass between the fleet and the Admiralty, and messages from our armies, which reach Whitehall without the censor passing a line of it, or, for the matter of that, even seeing a word of it.

Little Recognition Given. These messages record in so many curt words the day's doings of an arm of the fleet. Sometimes the Admiralty and the military authorities consider that it is worth while sending these messages to the press; more often than not they don't.

One of the messages seldom published is the work of the mine-sweeper. To announce that on such a day in such an area would be valuable information to the enemy.

Competent authorities estimate that Germany has scattered about ten thousand mines in various waters controlled by the British fleet. Although a large number of them have undoubtedly been laid by trawlers flying neutral flags, many of them have been just thrown into the water at Heligoland, Ostend and at different points of the Baltic, and allowed to drift out with the tide in the hope that they would sink one of the British ships of war or ships of commerce.

In the Baltic alone Denmark, Norway and Sweden have picked up hundreds of these mines, which have been washed on their shores unexploded. And yet for her vast expenditure of over five million dollars in sea mines Germany has little or nothing to show beyond the destruction of a few trawlers and a few neutral ships, as in the rare cases where British trading ships have been struck by drifting or stationary mines the damage done has been of a more or less harmless character. The mine-sweeper, as one of the most valuable sections of the navy, can claim full credit for this.

Trawlers go in Pairs. Most of the work in clearing the seas of mines is done by trawlers, which usually act in pairs. We have quite a large fleet of trawlers and drifters engaged in this work, which is one of the reasons why fish is so scarce and dear. They set out at night so as to be in their working area by daylight, then they fish for mines by a long rope stretched between the two trawlers. Proceeding at a very gentle pace, they lift the mine, which is usually about a foot and a half or two feet below the surface.

It is no uncommon thing to find half a dozen stationary mines brought to the surface by one rope. Once in sight a well aimed rifle shot explodes them, then the trawlers proceed with their work until another shot is needed.

Apart from the number of mine-sweepers who have lost their lives through a German submarine, many have been killed by the explosion of the mines they were gathering, and in other cases the authorities have lost track of trawlers, drifters and their crews. They have gone to sea, never returned, and left no trace of themselves. Still, this has not lessened the supply of volunteers, for this dangerous work.

Once the war is over, the mine-sweepers will go back to their ordinary vocation as fishermen, sailors or firemen.

"The Talk of the Whole Army."

Captain Thornhill, of the New Zealand Forces, writing to a friend in Dublin says:—"Your Irish fellows are the talk of the whole Army. To me the last few weeks have been one long nightmare. . . . But I must make you wise to the doings of the Irish. Most of them, I believe, are 'freshies.' The Empire can do with a heap more 'freshies' of the Irish brand."

"Their landing at Suva Bay was the greatest thing that you will ever read of in books by high-brows. Those who witnessed the advance will never forget it. Bullets and shrapnel rained on 'em, yet they never wavered. Officers got it here, there, everywhere, but the men never wavered. . . . God! the men were splendid."

"The way they took the hill (now called Dublin Hill) was the kind of thing that would make you pinch yourself to prove it wasn't a cheap wine aftermath. How they got there heaven only knows. As the land lay, climbing into hell on an aeroplane seemed an easier proposition than taking that hill."

This is a noble tribute of the gallantry and heroism of our Irish soldiers. These deeds are but a continuation of the immortal exploits performed by our boys since that ever memorable day when faced with one of the strongest Turkish positions near Sedd el Bahr, where, when landing in the boats, they were exposed to every type of converging fire and had to cut their way through three lines of wire entanglements and force a passage through a network of trenches, the Dublins and Munsters and Inniskillings, though suffering horrible losses, successfully effected a landing under conditions that both the Germans and Turks believed to be insurmountable. And now our "freshies" have taken part in a stupendous enterprise where they have gloriously upheld the traditions of our race, displaying a valour and a dash which it would be hard to parallel in the annals of the world.

They are "the talk of the whole Army," on the testimony of this gallant Colonel, and sufficient evidence corroborate this spontaneous eulogy of the heroism of the new Irish soldiers.

What a pity—nay, what a crime it is that official recognition of what the Irish have done has been not only tardy and meagre but in some cases absolutely withheld. Widespread indignation has also been aroused by the Daily Chronicle recently to the effect that the Tenth (Irish) Division was never allowed to go into action as a unit, but was broken into detachments and distributed among other commands. Is this another demonstration of the scandalous attitude which the War Office has adopted towards Ireland? Well might the Daily Chronicle ask, "Whether it is conceivable that, say, a Canadian, an Australian, or a New Zealand Division should have been handled in this way, and how long it will be before the military authorities are made to realize, as they should be, that the local and national feeling of Ireland is as much worth treating considerably as that of the Dominions." When will this blundering and injustice cease?—Ulster Guardian.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE. "When a new man comes to the office and is introduced to me, should I rise and shake hands or simply acknowledge the introduction while sitting?" queried Mabel the stenographer.

"It is a business affair. You should certainly rise when introduced but need not shake hands unless he extends his hand to you. A courteous bow with an expression of good will on your face is all that is necessary," said her older business friend.

Toronto Women's Home-Guard.

The women of Toronto have organized a women's home guard. The project was launched by Miss Jessie McNab. "If the Germans are drilling in Detroit and Buffalo, it is time we organized to meet them," she says.

Miss McNab had scarcely announced her plans when she was overwhelmed with offers not only to enlist, but to assist in the organization. The military authorities detailed officers to impart the rudiments of drill until the women could themselves take full charge. They felt that the action of the women would promote over-seas recruiting.

The Mayor and City Council co-operated and granted space in front of the City Hall for women's recruiting purposes, and here, side by side with the men's overseas recruiting depot, stands the barracks of the Women's Home Guard. Idle young men who loiter about are directed to the adjoining recruiting tent.

There is to be rifle practice as soon as a supply of rifles can be financed. But this has to be done privately, as the government is not assisting. Attendance at the butts, however, is to be voluntary. Drill is obligatory.

The uniform for drill and also street wear, is of khaki, and has a military belt, pockets and shoulder straps, the coat being cut Norfolk style, but brass buttons are barred. Bone buttons are used instead.

For "cross-country skirmishing" the skirts are cut to riding, and may be unbuttoned, as with riding skirts, for freer movement. The skirt reaches the ankle.

Already plans are being formulated for a Highland regiment. They will be known as the Dundurn Kilites. Miss McNab, with strong Highland blood herself, hopes to be colonel of the kilites.

Discipline is strict. Lack of punctuality is punished severely. Slang is not permitted and swearing is strictly forbidden. "Any one who says 'damn it!' is not fit to be a member of the guard," says Miss McNab. The regulation marching pace has been fixed at 30 inches, 120 to the minute. The regimental mascot is not a dog or a bear or a donkey, such as masculine regiments fancy, but it is a cat. Its name is Kitchener.

MOTHER AND MAID.

A maiden in a garden swing is surely an entrancing thing. She wears a gown of white, mayhap, a Chambers, novel in her lap, her hands are soft and lily-white, and earth affords no fairer sight.

Man views her with romantic tears, and in his heart bewails the years, which bar him from the lover's vow, forbidding him so sweet a frau. And then around the house he goes, and sees her mother washing clothes, or hanging rags upon the line, with aches all up and down her spine. Her hands look fierce, for they were boiled, as o'er the tub she sadly toiled; her face is rugged by steaming duds, her eyes and hair are full of suds. The stranger tears his whiskers then, and goes back round the house again, and sees the maiden in the swing, a charming and delightful thing. "I'm glad," he sighs, "that I am old, I'm glad my blood is running cold, or I might fall upon my knees, before that damsel 'neath the trees, and she might softly whisper yes—naught could be worse than that, I guess!"

"Me and Napoleon."

Sam Hughes Promotes Officer at a Review of Troops.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—Word was received here to-day of an interesting incident which occurred at Niagara camp yesterday, when General Sir Sam Hughes was reviewing the troops, together with a number of officers.

Turning to Lieut. Lehrohn, 14th Bat., who returned on the Corsican a few days ago on leave, Gen. Hughes said:

"Well, how are you, Capt. Lehrohn?"

The officer replied, "Pardon me, sir, I am a Lieutenant."

General Hughes—"Sir, I know what I am talking about. Go and get another stripe on your arm and put another star on your shoulder. You look almost like a private now."

The Search for the Dollar.

A good deal of comment has gone the rounds of the press based on the remarkable confession made in Plymouth Church a few days ago by the Rev. Dr. Newell Wright Hillis, noted Brooklyn, N.Y., preacher (successor to Henry Ward Beecher and Lyman Abbott) "that his life-long ambitions for wealth and power had utterly crushed out his life."

The Gloucester, Mass., Times editorially says:

"Some have been willing to condemn the preacher for his attempts to provide a secure future for those who were dependent upon him, and some have been inclined to admire the spirit into the possession of which the man has finally come. Few have thought that the making of money is a sin in itself, even for a preacher, unless it serves to divert his thought and effort from things of life which are more important. Dr. Hillis himself seemed to be among this latter number, judging that his sin had been in diverting such a great amount of time which should have been given to Christian thought and service, to business interests and ends.

But if criticism is to be made on men for errors of this sort why should they stop with the occasional minister who has means enough to start him in large business investments. Are there no other men, calling themselves Christian, who in this country are giving their very souls to the search for the dollar, and neglecting for themselves and others the things which really count? Are there not any others who are untrue to the Christian ideal, no others who are selling their birthright for a mess of pottage, or perhaps we should say striving to gain the whole world and losing their own souls? The man who has not at some time or other sinned after this fashion may cast the first stone.

The incident to which such great publicity has been given may after all prove to have been of service in a Christian way if it helps to call men's attention afresh to the truer ideals of manhood and womanhood, and to help people to distinguish between the things which are worth seeking because of permanent value, and those which are not worthy of a man's best thought. If all people who have turned aside from their best ideals were to confess it, we should be too busy with ourselves to pay much attention to what the other person is doing."

Stomach Acts Fine!
No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Acidity

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, its certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

BERNHARDT'S PREDICTION.

The bearing on the war itself, of the respective attitudes of the English and German Exchequers, is at least suggested by a prophecy from an expert source, made public a year before the war. Assuming a deadlock and an indecisive struggle, this prophecy declared that in such case, "success will ultimately fall to him who can boast the highest moral energy and self-sacrificing spirit; or, where on both sides the highest moral motives are of an unequally high standard, to him who can hold out longest financially." This was the judgment of General von Bernhardt.

Women Mechanics.

Ironworks Invasion—Fearless of Oil and Dirt.

The great movement among women towards filling up gaps in labour is shown in all classes of work; but nowhere more strikingly than in the big munitions iron works.

If any particular kind of working place was considered a year or more ago as sacred to men workers it was the ironworks, with its humming lathes, whirling and slapping pulley belts, banging hammers and grating files. The woman worker has not only invaded the ironworks, but also justified her invasion, and recently the Premier paid tribute to the excellence of the results.

At a works on the lower reaches of the Thames may be seen seven days a week huge sheds full of women "mechanics." Some are so-called amateurs, who may come to the works every morning in motor cars, and others are everyday work girls. "Amateurs" and professionals draw the same wages, but the "amateurs" wear khaki overalls and caps.

Amateur and professional are working at line after line of lathes and screw-cutters and other machines running down the long sheds. A girl with one stray wisp of bright fair hair poking from under her cap was busy boring a shell. The solid cylinder of steel lay in the lathe. As the steel shavings came out in a spiral worm, the lathe worker found a moment to rub her hands on a wad of cotton waste. Then she drew from the pocket of her overall a small lace-edged handkerchief to wipe spots of lubricant from her face.

The Work Done by Women.

The "setting up" or fixing of cutting tools to the exact width required for the various work is left to men mechanics, but the girl workers would tell you that it is a task any bright girl can learn in a week or two, exact as it is. The trimming and polishing of shells, outer cases, gauging, the fixing of copper bands, and other processes down to the filling with shrapnel (though not with explosive) are all done by women, just as they were done by men in time gone by.

The girls get just as dirty as the men. Hands, face, and overalls alike become smeared with oil. But they do not mind this. They wash after work is done and "tidy up," and you may see them walking homewards later trim and tidy as any class of girl, their overalls hanging loose over their arm like a raincoat.

That woman's work in this new sphere is good and satisfactory is willingly acknowledged by works managers and foremen. Asked, if say, motor cylinder would offer greater difficulty than a shell to bore, one of these men said, "Hardly any." "A woman, then, could go in for ordinary industrial steel working, lathe work, screw-cutting, and the like, just as well as a man?" "Certainly, for the general run of work." "Is there anything in the statement that women have not the strength for industrial work such as this?" "That," said the manager, "is the parrot cry raised almost every time one speaks of the entry of women into industrial work. 'Strength' test has no bearing on the question. Women don't come to be labourers, just as a man mechanic does not come to be a labourer."

Ranjitsinbji

Hunting Trip.

New York, Sept. 28.—That "Irony of Fate" we hear about looms up singularly in the case of Prince Ranjitsinbji otherwise the Jam Sahib of Nawagar, the East Indian Prince, who made quite a name for himself as a cricketer, tennis and polo player while a student of Cambridge University in England. Ranjitsinbji offered his services as a volunteer with the allied troops operating in Northern France and was appointed as aide-de-camp on the staff of General Sir John French and has been actively operating in that capacity for some months. Late in August he secured a leave of absence for a visit to England and the first week of September was spent in shooting in the Yorkshire moors. While after grouse one of the shooting party of which he was a member mistook the prince for a bit of game, and the Jam Sahib received part of a charge of shot in his right cheek, some of the pellets inflicting the right eye so that at last accounts he was in danger of losing his eyesight.

A recent arrival from the other side said that when he sailed the prince, who had escaped injury from the bullets and shrapnel of the Germans only to fall a victim to the bird-shot of a careless gunner, was in the hospital at Leeds, where the physicians were trying to save the sight of the injured eye.

Revers of dark cloth coats are often lined with ivory-white satin.
