CHAPTER XXXI.
"It is dreadful to think, to suggest, that Decima is mixed up in this!" he said. "She can not possibly know anything about it. Oh, let me see her!"

"You may see her," said Lady Pauline, "but you can not learn anything from her. She is quite unconscious. Here is the doctor."

"She heard his step coming down the stairs, and called him in."
"Miss Deane is ill, very ill," he said, quietly. "She may remain unconscious for some time, possibly for days. You may see her, yes; you can do no harm."

Bobby went up, and stood, and gazed at the white face with the staring eyes, then he came down again and looked helplessly round him.

"We may as well go, sir," said the detective. "Lady Pauline will let us know when Miss Deane is well enough to be asked any questions."

They returned to Prince's Mansions, and the detective made his report to the inspector. He nodded, gravely, and drew Bobby aside.

"Miss Deane will be an important witness," he said. "I may as well tell you, Mr. Deane—mind, I don't speak officially—that we do not suspect Miss Deane."

"Suspect!" exclaimed Bobby, indignantly.

The inspector raised his eyebrows. "Well, she was here, you see, and any one present in these rooms last night might fall under suspicion; but it seems to me that the case against Lord Gaunt is clear as noonday."

"Lord Gaunt!" said Bobby, chokingly. "He is incapable of it!"

The inspector shrugged his shoulders. "That's what one so often thinks," he said. "However, we shall soon see. Our man will have overtaken him by this time, I should think."

They had removed the body, but Morgan Thorpe had still lingered. The shock—and the brandy he had consumed—had rendered him a pitiable spectacle.

"Come—come home with me! Don't leave me alone, Deane, for God's sake!" he said, clutching at Bobby's arm, and quite forgetting his recent plot to rob him.

"Come—come home with me! Don't leave me alone, Deane, for God's sake!" he said, clutching at Bobby's arm, and quite forgetting his recent plot to rob him.

"I will see you home," said Bobby, passing his hand across his brow. "I don't know what to do, where to turn. I ought to go home and tell my father of all this—not that it would be of any use—but I can't leave my sister."

"Yes, I will go home with you." They went to Cardigan Terrace, and Bobby looked round the familiar room with a shudder; he could almost see the small, exquisitely dressed figure sitting at the piano.

There was a letter on the mantel shelf, and Morgan Thorpe took it up and opened the envelope with shaking fingers. But he was incapable of reading it, and he held it out to Bobby.

"Read it, Deane," he said; and he made for the liquor-stand on the side-board.

"It is from Trevor," said Bobby; and he read the note aloud:

"Dear Thorpe—I feel very seedy, and shall run over to the Continent for a change; may stay some time. I was sorry to hear that Mrs. Dalton had a bad headache when I called to say good-bye. I am starting in half an hour. I packed this morning. Always do things suddenly, don't? Remember me to Deane and all the rest."

Yours, RALPH TREVOR.
Thorpe moaned in a maulin way. "Poor old Trevor! He will be awfully cut up when he hears of it. He was very fond of her, Deane. My poor Laura!" He drew the hand which held the tumbler of brandy and soda across his eyes. "I can't realize it yet. What a loss for me! She was so—so clever. I shall never get on without her. So Trevor's gone! It seems as if everybody had gone. You'll stand by me, Deane? You—you may hear all sorts of things about me, but you—won't believe them, Deane? I always had a liking for you, my dear boy, always—"

"Better not drink any more," said Bobby; but Thorpe shook his head.

"It's the only thing that will keep me up. To think that Laura's dead, butchered, and by that beast Gaunt. I always hated him. A stuck-up, sneering beast! Yes, I always hated him, and so did she."

"And they were married?" said Bobby, with a sharp pang of remorse for his own folly.

Thorpe nodded. "Yes; don't bear any malice because I kept it from you, dear boy. It was her secret, not mine, and she was sensitive. My poor Laura! But she shall hang for it! He shall hang for it!"

Bobby shuddered. "I don't believe he did it!" he said. "I know Gaunt. As I've said a score of times, he isn't capable of it. It's just that such things are impossible to some men, and—murder is impossible to Lord Gaunt!"

"Then who did it?" demanded Thorpe, with a hiccup. "Tell me that. Isn't the evidence against him as strong as it can be?"

Bobby shook his head. The evidence might be as strong as it could be, and yet it did not convince him. After he had seen Thorpe led away to bed—speechlessly drunk—he left the house. The subtle, familiar perfume in the room seemed to follow him, and the dead woman's face and voice haunted him.

"On his way to Lady Pauline's, he bought the second edition of an evening paper—no evening paper ever owns to a first edition—and, while he waited in the drawing-room, read the account. "The Tragedy at Prince's Mansions!" It was headed, and there were "scare-lines" at intervals of the report.

"His heart sunk as he read the smooth and yet graphic statement. The murdered woman was, as it set forth, the wife of Lord Gaunt. Here followed all his names and titles. He had married her with a suppression of his rank, and had very soon after the ceremony, which had taken place in Switzerland, separated from her, going on the travels which had made him, with a certain section of the people, famous. The deceased lady had gone to his rooms—whether by appointment or not, the report could not say—and it was proved by the statement of the servants that she had met Lord Gaunt in these rooms. Lord Gaunt had been seen to leave them without his overcoat; and the murdered woman had been found lying dead on the couch covered by this same overcoat. The antique dagger with which the deed had been committed had been found lying near the body. Lord Gaunt had disappeared. This, in brief—the account took a whole page, for it was the dull season, and the murder—and such a murder!—was an editorial godsend—was the substance of the account.

"Well, might Bobby's heart sink as he read it. His own name, and—alas! and alas!—Decima's occurred several times.

He stifled a groan and crammed the paper into his pocket as Lady Pauline entered.

"Decima is still unconscious," she said. She was calm and self-possessed, with the calmness and self-possession of Christian fortitude. "The doctor says she may—may live; but that it will be some time before she will be able to tell us anything. Is there any later news?"

Bobby produced the paper. "Yes; I have read it. I know—or, rather, I know of—Lord Gaunt. I am not surprised to hear that he is married; nothing I could hear of him, would surprise me; but I do not think that he is guilty."

"He is not—he is not!" said Bobby.

Vapo-Resolene

Recommended for Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Croup, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all respiratory ailments. It is a safe, reliable, and effective remedy. Sold by druggists. VAPOR-RESOLENE Co., London, W. 14, England.

Lady Pauline regarded him coldly. "And you knew this unfortunate woman?" she said.

Bobby hung his head. "I will not reproach you; but if I may say a word in season—"

"There is no use," said Bobby. "I'm punished bad enough as it is. All my thoughts are of Decima. To think that she is mixed up in this!"

"Lady Pauline inclined her head gravely. "Who is Mr. Mershon?" she asked.

Bobby started. "Mr. Mershon? He is the man Decima is engaged to," he said.

"Please write and tell him that I wish to see him," said Lady Pauline. "You would like to see her? She will not know you; she is quite unconscious."

Bobby went up to Decima's room and gazed at her piteously as he had done before.

As he left the house, the special editions of the evening papers were being howled through the street, and the raucous voices of the newspaper boys were shouting: "Orrible murder! Tragedy in 'igh life!'"

All England was ringing with the news of the murder, and the consternation and excitement in Leamshire, and round about Leammore especially, were intense. Crowds gathered round the gates of Leammore and stared up the avenue—Heaven alone knows why—as if they expected to draw something of the grim tragedy from a glimpse of the house.

Bobby had wired to Bright, and he had dashed off with the news to Mershon, to beg him to help break it to Mr. Deane.

Mershon was startled, but more indignant at Decima's connection with the affair than horrified at the tragedy itself.

"Always thought there was something queer about Lord Gaunt," he said. "Yes; he's just the man to stab his wife if he didn't like her. I beg your pardon—for Bright had reddened, and exclaimed, indignantly. "Of course you think he is innocent?"

"How could I think otherwise?" said Bright, warmly. "Lord Gaunt is not guilty!"

"All right," said Mershon, grimly, and with a shrug of his shoulders. "To tell the truth, I don't very much care whether he is or whether he isn't. Of course I hope he isn't. What I'm thinking about is Decima—Miss Deane. What I want to know is, why did she go round to his rooms?"

"Miss Deane went to see her brother, I imagine," said Bright. "She could not know that Lord Gaunt would be there, that he was in London. None of us—not even I—have known anything of his movements. It is terrible that Miss Deane's name should appear in the affair."

"I should think so!" said Mershon, moodily. "It's jolly hard on me. I know."

"I am going round to Mr. Deane to tell him," said Bright. "Will you come with me? I shall go straight from there to London, of course. Lord Gaunt will want me; and if he did not—"

Orgy of Incendiarism Prevails in Cork.

Sinn Fein Clubs and Dwelling Houses Destroyed--Authorities Fear Royal Family May be Attacked--Thousands of Citizens Volunteer For Special Police Work--Despite Protests Crawford Will Speak at St John N. B.--Ponzi Sentenced to Five Years.

INCENDIARISM IN CORK.

CORK, Nov. 30. The odor of charred or smouldering wood pervades Cork and Patrick Street the principal thoroughfare of the city is unhealthily with burning debris of fire-wrecked houses. Since Friday the sky has been lighted by the glare of incendiary fires which have destroyed a dozen large buildings causing losses estimated at about a million and one half. Early to-day a second unsuccessful attempt was made to burn the City Hall which recently was badly damaged by bomb explosion and fire. No less than five Sinn Fein Clubs have been destroyed.

WILL INTERN REBELS.

LONDON, Nov. 30. Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, when asked in the House of Commons to-night if it is the plan of the government to intern members of the "Irish Republican Army," said it was intended to intern those in whose cases there was reason to believe that they were connected with Republican forces.

PROTECTING ROYAL FAMILY.

LONDON, Nov. 30. The Evening Standard said to-day protective measures here included precautions at Buckingham Palace while the Royal Family was there.

ANOTHER MURDER.

LONDON, Nov. 30. Three youths, supposedly connected with Sinn Fein were taken from their beds last night and shot down allegedly by uniformed men, says a Central News despatch.

SPECIAL CONSTABLES READY.

LONDON, Nov. 30. Members of the special constabulary are in readiness for service should a continuance of trouble in England, charged to the account of the Sinn Fein, necessitate their being called out. The special constabulary is composed of thousands of civilians who voluntarily assist the regular police when necessary.

TINO MOVING.

ATHENS, Nov. 30. Former King Constantine's valets have arrived here with boxes and trunks. The French legation is packing this afternoon in anticipation of orders to leave here.

MORE REDS ARRESTED.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30. Thirty-eight alleged radicals were arrested by the police to-day in a raid. Several thousand pamphlets said to be of a revolutionary nature were seized.

PATIENTS RESCUED.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Nov. 30. Two hundred patients in the Muskoka free hospitals for consumptives were carried to safety this morning when fire destroyed the main buildings of the institution. One of the outstanding incidents was the heroism of Miss Lillian Powell, nurse, of Toronto, who carried another woman to safety. The buildings which fell prey to flames were all of frame construction and it was stated they had accommodation for three hundred and fifty patients, though there were not more than two hundred in the buildings at the time of the fire.

TWO OF CREW ALIVE.

SEATTLE, Nov. 30. Two surviving members of the crew of missing barge, W. J. Pierrie and the body of a third were found by an Indian searching party near Cape Johnson, Washington, last night, according to a telegram from Chiallam.

JOHN H. BERN, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who says his wonderful restoration to health since taking Tanlac has astonished all his friends, has gained twenty pounds.

"My friends are all astonished over my wonderful restoration to health since taking 'Tanlac,'" said John H. Bern, of 308 East Front St., Cincinnati, Ohio, recently.

"I don't know what it is, but there is something about Tanlac that certainly does the work," he said, "and I firmly believe if it hadn't been for this medicine I wouldn't be here now. I completely restored my health and I have gained twenty pounds besides. I have a splendid appetite now, and can eat anything I want without being troubled in the least afterwards."

"Before taking Tanlac my health was dreadfully rundown. My main trouble was indigestion, and I suffered miserably night and day. I never seemed hungry, and the little I ate upset my stomach. I was nervous and couldn't get a good night's sleep. I lost thirty-four pounds and was going down hill rapidly. It seemed like the more medicine I took the worse I got."

"But since taking Tanlac I am like a brand-new man. I sleep like a farm hand all night and feel just fine all day. In fact, I'm a perfectly well man once more. Tanlac certainly beats anything I ever saw in my life."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freaque.—adv.

The Mon Who Won the War!

Amidst the most solemn ceremonies, and with the most loving care, he who henceforth is to symbolize the heroic qualities of the British race has received his place in the hierarchy of the departed great. The Unknown Warrior, taken from the bosom of the battlefields, where his blood literally germinated victory, has been laid to rest in Westminster Abbey. There he will sleep, surrounded by the Royal and the noble, who for centuries made the history of England. Close by, too, lie the wondrous galaxy of those who, in politics, in the professions of art, and in literature, won in their day the supreme favour of their country. Famous generals are gathered there, whose names will always leap to mind as memory ranges over the achievements of British arms. But, amidst all the pomp and grandeur of marble, gilt, and bronze, recording wondrous deeds and immortal names, one tomb will henceforth overshadow all in the volume of affection it will attract. That tomb will be the abiding-place of the first British warrior to enter the portals of the Abbey from the lowest ranks, there to make his last earthly home, just as if he had commanded armies, and fame had blazoned his name to the ends of the earth. By that spot the clamour of self-seeking arrogance competing for laurels will be silenced. By that holy shrine contention will sound afar off, like echoes, indeed, from another age, for here will proud and humble recognize the true Man of Destiny, the man who, beyond all dispute, won the war, and rescued the land from the greatest peril in its history. It was in this reverent spirit of appreciation and of gratitude that the King and Parliament, the Navy, the Army, and the people combined to do honour to the gallant Unknown, Unknown only in a sense; for in another sense, larger and more profound, we all know him as the typical son of the British race, simple, brave, and steadfast, whose qualities have created the matchless fabric of the British Empire. Other wars may have been won by the generals; this war, in a special manner, was won by the people. It was won not only by the incomparable men who endured the unimaginable horrors of the battlefield, but by their friends at home, their fathers, mothers, wives, and children, who, with breaking hearts but wills of steel, suffered without flinching to the end. To these home-land sacrifices, no less than to the lustrious deeds of the fighting services, the wreaths piled round the Cenotaph, and the Abbey ceremonial, must be interpreted as expressions of national homage. The coming of the Unknown straight from the battlefield to the heart of the Empire, should kindle a spiritual flame for the clearer illumination of the past and the present. In the two years that have elapsed since the Armistice, the nation has passed through a veritable sea of difficulties, always finding safety ultimately through the god sense and spirit of fairness of the community. It is not surprising that after the prolonged burden of war, and the strain of social, economic, and industrial troubles that formed the inevitable sequel to the European struggle, the exalted faith that a little while ago moved mountains, should now begin to languish. By recalling the terrible past, the advent of the Unknown should serve to bring home to us the splendour of our opportunities in the present. There is much to be done, grievances to be redressed, reforms to be carried, innovations to be introduced, but the British ain from which the Unknown Warrior sprang is capable of prodigies. To him she is indebted for the opportunities which to-day are hers, opportunities which make her the envy of the nations.—News of the World.

Returned From Clarenville.

Sergt. Savago and Constable Pitcher returned to the city last night from Clarenville, where they had been sent fearing trouble in connection with the unloading of the S.S. Turret Court. It will be remembered that the men working on the S.S. Lingan struck for more pay, but the Government Railway Commission refused their demand and sent the ship to Heart's Content. No trouble is being experienced with the Turret Court's cargo, which is now discharging.

Fire This Morning.

At 2 o'clock this morning, the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to King's Road where a slight fire was in progress in a shed owned by Mr. H. Bartlett, and used for storing coopers' lumber. Very little damage was done, and ten minutes after the alarm was sent in the "all out" signal sounded. The origin of the fire was somewhat of a mystery, but is believed to be the work of youths, as shortly before the alarm was rung in, several boys were seen coming out of a lane at the rear of the shed by parties going home from the St. Andrew's dance, and it is believed that these intentionally or otherwise set the fire going. Mr. Bartlett, who has neither insurance on the shed or stock stored there says the place has been frequently entered by boys.

Injured on Schooner.

A member of the crew of a Bonavista Bay schooner was injured last night, through being hit by a small boat which was being hoisted over the rail. The skipper did not wish to sail until the nature of the man's injuries was known, and so sent two of the crew with him to Dr. Tait, who pronounced him fit enough to continue the voyage.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SOME THOUGHTS ON CLOTHES.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine is much pleased because she managed to choose the three main features of her summer wardrobe so that they are also available for winter.

One was a dark blue silk voile dress, perfectly suitable for summer and yet also suitable for afternoon house-wear in the winter. Another was a dark blue silk skirt which she wore with white blouses the summer and which, with the aid of a velvet overblouse, is to become a suitable costume for the late afternoon tea in winter. The third was a dark blue suit which is just heavy enough so that it could be worn spring and fall, on the coldest summer days (which are really only times in summer when one wears a suit), and with her heavy shoes on the warmer days of winter. She wishes to wear it on cooler days she will wear her coat over it.

We Seldom Wear Out Clothes. It is one of my friend's pet theories, on the subject of clothes, that you have to plan your wardrobe actually—to make it cover all occasions (as 99 out of 100 of us do) this selection of clothes that do not have to be put away at the end of a season, is one of the best shifts. We seldom wear out our clothes, she says, we give them up because they are gone out of style, and in this we double the use that we can get out of them in their brief lifetime.

Don't you think it is an excellent theory? I do. Another of her theories is illustrated by the fact that all three of the elements mentioned were dark blue. She thinks that by selecting one, or the most two or three colors—one most becoming to you—and sticking to them, you save a great deal since an abrupt change in colors always involves the necessity for new garments and new accessories to go with the new color scheme.

Of Course You Won't Look So New. This one-color scheme I think is excellent, although it has several drawbacks. One does not have quite the delightful sense of newness in a garment which is just the color of all one's other garments. In the second place, one does not impress others with a sense of newness—and surely clothes are bought quite as much to impress others as for our own enjoyment! However, I think that even when one weighs these drawbacks they hardly outweigh the advantages.

Visualizing one's own daily life and determining thereby what kind of clothes one needs most, is of course a preliminary to any really efficient planning of a wardrobe. In doing this one should try to decide what occasions will be most frequent and what count the most in one's mind. For instance, suppose you cannot have both a suit and a new afternoon gown—which will you sacrifice? Are the times when you would wear a suit, or the times you would wear the gown, the most frequent and the most important?

When to Plan. To buy inexpensive materials for gowns that are sure to go out of fashion before they are worn out, and to plunge into the things that one can make last, is another of the wise dressers' A-B-C's. A coat in a simple unobtrusive style, a tailored suit, a serge dress that is not too extreme, to be worn several seasons and not too much cut-up to make over well, a piece of good lace—these are the sort of things on which the wise dresser spends sums that seem extravagant to her less far-seeing neighbor.

The selection of clothes is supposed to be a feminine frivolity, but if it is a wise selection, it is a fine feminine art, and I have a deep admiration for the woman who contrives an attractive wardrobe on small outlay—providing, of course, she does not devote so much thought to it that she neglects worth-while things.

A Mystery Metal.

Costing £40 an ounce, zirconium is one of the most precious and useful metals employed by scientists and manufacturers to-day.

It derives its name from the mineral zircon, varieties of which, known as jargon and hyacinth, have long been used by jewellers for women's ornaments.

The existence of the metal zirconium in zircon was discovered 130 years ago, but it has been discovered of recent years in large quantities in a certain ore known as brantite, the deposits of which in Brazil are practically inexhaustible.

The value of zirconium lies in the fact that it is a wonderful substitute for other metals. Since platinum became so scarce, it has been used in its stead. The Germans experimented with it with a view to getting armour-plate superior in hardness to steel. It can withstand such high temperatures that it has been found superior to all other metals for lining electrical furnaces.

It is used in the manufacture of wire filaments for electric lights; for X-ray work and enamelling. The zirconium industry is a comparatively new one, interesting developments being foreshadowed by the discoveries already made.

THE PEAKS OF VALOR.

These are the peaks of valor; keeping clean your father's name, Too brave for petty profit to risk the brand of shame, Adventuring for the future, yet mindful of the past, For God, for home and country being valorous to the last.

These are the peaks of valor; a speech that knows no lie, A standard of what's right and wrong which no man's wealth can buy, All unafraid of failure to venture forth to fight, Yet never for the victory's sake to turn away from right.

Ten thousands times the victor is he who falls to win, Who could have won the conqueror's crown by stooping low to sin; Ten thousands times the braver is he who turns away And scorns to crush a weaker man that he may rule the day.

These are the peaks of valor; standing firm and standing true To the best your father taught you and the best you've learned anew, Helpful to all who need you, winning what joys you can, Writing in triumph to the end your record as a man.

BRACING UP.

Knocked out by Fate, the bruiser, and by the votes of L. E. N. Hebold, the swatted loser begins to smile again. Right after the election this gent was sad to see; the symbol of dejection and of the dumps was he. "This frost will always haunt me, it caught me unawares; the people did not want me, they kicked me down the stairs. I'll leave the office seeking for thicker hidden chaps; no more you'll see me streaking, pursuing public snaps. I thought the people loved me, and I loved them, by heck! But oh, the way they shoved me, and climbed upon my neck! No more, with front undaunted, shall I for office sprint; I see that I'm not wanted, and I can take a hint." Thus spake the mournful loser, and thus he sighed and wailed, when in a leaking cruiser up Salt Creek's tide he sailed. But time heals all diseases, all bruises and all sores, according to the wheezes of bards and other bodes. Time soothes the badly beaten and makes him soon forget the dish of crow he's eaten—oh, time's our one best bet! And now the loser's grinning, and he forgets to groan; next year he's sure of winning, the gods will guard their own. And so we'll see him gliding on errands punk and vain, when he should be providing against the day of rain.

Clearing The Way.

It is patently easy for the leader of an organization, when in convention of that organization, represented by hired servants, political office holders and sycophants, all of whom are at the beck and call of their chief, to have certain resolutions passed, having for their object and purpose the muzzling of public opinion, by suspending certain functions of an independent press, whose honest criticism of the conduct of public matters is particularly distasteful to the man who would be King, Kaiser and Despot rolled into one. It is easy, we say, to have this done at a gathering such as assembled at Port Union last week, a gathering at which by the crooking of a finger all the machine-made and specially prepared resolutions enumerated in the Advocate of Monday, were passed unanimously, no person expected anything else, nor was it anticipated that there would be one solitary dissenting voice, no matter what was desired to be accomplished, when the President dictated. The Convention, obviously, had received its orders, and the delegates, obviously, voted according to instructions. There was nothing spontaneous about the voting. It was decreed from the beginning that certain measures had to receive full support, and far from following the promptings of free will, men accepted the doctrine of their ruler and obeyed his behests. That of itself causes but little comment, and is only a continuance of the formula of previous assemblies, a formula made by the Chief Executive and immutable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Threats of the nature of those contained in the resolutions passed last week by the F.P.U. Supreme Council, may have an effect on the men who attended and voted; but in so far as they concern the persons threatened, they are as light as a feather and as fragile as gossamer. The supreme audacity most admired is that which announces that the Legislature will be petitioned to pass laws enforcing the desires of the President of the F.P.U. agreed to by his followers. But of this more anon.

The unkindest cut of all and the most contemptible piece of thimble rigging is the request to be made the Legislature, asking for an enactment to prevent the wholesale practice of appointing as departmental heads those who are not in the Assembly. This has no other meaning than that the present head of the Department of Agriculture and Mines is to receive his conge—his walking ticket. As a breach of faith on the part of those who were instrumental in having and insisting upon the appointment of Dr. Campbell to that office under the Crown, following his defeat in St. John's West, last fall, this action is unpardonable. The word "Wholesale" is merely introduced into the resolution as a blind. The person aimed at is indubitably the present head of the department named, and something must have occurred quite recently to have warranted this decision by the F.P.U. Convention. Dr. Campbell is an Executive colleague of Mr. Coaker, and there can be nothing more dishonorable than such a thrust in the dark by one political friend against another. There must be something very powerful—if not sinister—underlying the motive which prompted the passage of such a resolution, but we doubt if Dr. Campbell is the man to accept the "bowl of hemlock" from Mr. Coaker, quiescently. There will be something doing ere he is shelved to make room for a loyal follower of Mr. Coaker, as the chief of the Agriculture and Mines Department. It may be that the present incumbent is not thought to be sufficiently loyal to the Acting Premier, hence his official head is demanded, for the resolution referred to means nothing more nor less than this. The capture of the Government may be the end in view and the usurpation of all the privileges of the Prime Minister by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, with the avowed determination to make the powers of administration subservient to those of the organization over which the latter presides. Whatever may be the outcome, one thing at least can be accepted as fact, and that is that Dr. Campbell is going to be sacrificed to make room for an active F.P.U. associate, more amenable to the dictates of Mr. Coaker than is Dr. Campbell.

Heard on the Street.

That during the last few days Mr. Coaker has been unable to bear the sight of sugar on his table.
That the reason the Prime Minister is coming home at last is because the Government has wasted so much money of late that it simply cannot afford to keep him away any longer.
The best evidence of prosperity is that only $100,000 have been so far withdrawn from the Government Savings Bank.
That the reason for Mr. Coaker's resolution objecting to members of the Upper House holding portfolios, is to prevent the Premier, in the event of a split, forming a cabinet.
That someone may yet be knifed over the purchase of Labrador fish.
That the tarpaulin placed about the monument erected to the memory of "Mutt" at Port Union, was not to prevent delegates from seeing it, but rather to keep out the cold.

Much Freight Offering.

Quite a lot of freight is being handled at the Railway Station to-day most of the goods being flour and other provisions. The employees state that this has been the 2nd day for the season that there has been anything like business in freight handling. At the railway yard there is a large shipment of fish casks and drums piled, they having come to the city from some Conception Bay outfit. City coopers who are walking around for want of work will not be too well pleased at this intelligence.

St. Andrew's Dance a Great Success.

The annual dance of the St. Andrew's Society in honor of the patron saint of Scotland was held last night in the C. C. C. Hall and proved more successful even than those of former years. Over 175 couples were present, all of whom enjoyed themselves immensely. The ballroom, besides the permanent decorations, was draped with blue and white, St. Andrew's colors, and presented a splendid appearance. The supper room was also magnificently ornamented, the tables being covered with electric lamps and flowers artistically displayed. Before the concert, which preceded the dance, was held, the Chairman, Mr. J. J. McKay, addressed the gathering. He expressed the great pleasure he felt at seeing so many present, and spoke of what St. Andrew's Day meant to Scots all over the world. After Mr. McKay's address the concert was proceeded with. The programme was as follows: Miss M. Mitchell, Scotch Song; Mr. A. Williams, "Mary"; Mrs. Garland, "Whistle and I'll come back to ye, me lad"; Miss Elsie Herder, "Cam ye by Athole"; Mr. Lloyd Woods, "My Wedding Morn"; Mr. A. Bulley brought the concert to a successful conclusion by playing some entrancing Scotch airs on the French horn.

At the close of the concert Mr. A. K. Lumsden proposed a vote of thanks to the artists who had so kindly given their services, which was carried by acclamation.
At 9:15 dancing commenced and was kept up till 2 a.m. The music consisted of all the very latest dance selections, and contributed in no small way to the success of the affair. The floor managers were Messrs. J. M. Irvine, W. D. Gunn, D. Ferguson, S. K. Lumsden and J. McKinlay.
Supper, which outdid even those wonderful ones for which the St. Andrew's social affairs of the past have been noted, was served from 10:15 to 12. There were three sittings altogether, and the Ladies' Association, ably assisted by Messrs. Wallace and Mers, were kept very busy for some time. The ladies who held or assisted at tables were as follows: Mesdames H. D. Reid, H. Crawford, W. A. Reid, D. Johnston, J. M. Brown, Geo. Cross, N. McLellan, C. Henderson, D. McIntosh, R. G. Ross, J. Forbes, J. Strang, W. D. Gunn, G. Wilson, Joss, Sawyers, W. R. Neal, W. B. Badie, H. J. Taylor, H. Foster, A. Brown, and Misses H. Reid, C. Crawford and S. Taylor.

The ladies have never been backward when there was any work to be done for the Society, and it is due to them and the social committee, consisting of Messrs. R. G. Ross, D. McIntosh, J. Irvine, J. Wallace, W. Badie, W. D. Gunn and R. Innes, that the affair was the splendid success it undoubtedly was.

Ragnoli Sits Tight.

NO BUYING UNDER PRESENT CONDITIONS.
There was quite a little flurry amongst the fish merchants to-day, when it became known that a message had been received from Mr. Hawes. A meeting of the licensed fish exporters was held in the Board of Trade rooms this forenoon, when the subject of the message was discussed. However, as far as can be learned, no action has been taken, probably awaiting the decision of the Advisory Board. The contents of the message, as far as can be gleaned, is that Mr. Hawes has been unsuccessful in making any arrangements with the Consorzio, Mr. Ragnoli insisting that the original agreement, whereby the Italians would pay 75% against documents, retaining 25% for adjustments is the only solution, and if the Advisory Board do not agree to these conditions there will be no business doing.

McMurdo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 1.
The Ekko Alcohol Store is certainly a very handy and convenient contrivance, and quite safe in use. It can be lit instantly, and put out just as quickly. To warm water for shaving, or bathing, or to boil it to make a cup of tea, coffee, or cocoa, there are few things as simple, and rapid, or as economical. The Ekko is complete in itself, and consists of the stove, a tripod stand, and a tin of canned heat, all ready for use at a moment's notice. If you want a quick heat for any purpose, get an Ekko. Only 35 cents each.

Oporto Stocks.

The following stocks held in Oporto, were bulletined at the Board of Trade Rooms to-day:

Consumption 4,915
November 23rd:
British 13943

Consumption 4,800
Yesterday's Advocate gave Oporto stocks for Nov. 27th as: British, 9,000, Consumption, 7,500; Norwegian, 12,000, Consumption, 9,000.
There is a big discrepancy in the two reports.

The bowl is decorated with carved figures of Queen Victoria, Napoleon III, the Duke of Argyll, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Bright and French and Prussian soldiers.

When Meteors Hit the Earth.

The earth gains weight at the rate of about seventy pounds per minute. In a year the accumulation is 11,435 tons. This increase comes drifting down, mainly in the shape of fine dust from the meteors, which are constantly striking our atmosphere and getting burnt up into small particles. Sometimes a meteor comes along that is too big to burn up. Some years ago one exploded over Iowa and later there were picked up over 5,000 pieces, some running to 437 pounds in weight. The biggest meteor that is known to have hit the earth fell at Coon Mountain, Arizona. It made a hole which even now is 560 feet deep and three-quarters of a mile across. The meteor itself is buried so no one knows how far below.

Hill 60 to Be Hotel.
"Hill 60," the scene of many of the terrible minor engagements fought in the Ypres salient, has been sold to an English company, which proposes to erect a hotel on the site for the convenience of visitors to the Ypres salient. Little now remains of the hill, which was destroyed by mines and continuous bombardments which went on from the beginning of the first battle of "Hill 60" in April, 1915, to the end of the war.

Of course you all want "him" to prance down Xmas morning, his face a big sun of happiness, beaming to say, "How on earth did you know that this was just what I wanted?"

Many Xmas gifts for "him" don't just plan out that way.

Because—

People will wait until fifty-nine minutes to ten Xmas Eve to burst in on an overwhelmed, busy clerk to purchase that important gift that should have a week's careful consideration 'way back in November.

And when gifts are bought that way I'll stake a whole sledful of joy they do disappoint. If that "him" is a person of any consequence at all, he deserves to have more than one minute of your time devoted to the purchase of something he has to wear for at least a day. And if real thought and time is given to the purchase, he WILL wear it until next Xmas comes 'round.

Advice: BUY NOW, and Buy Men's Wear, for this is an Economy Xmas, and little articles to wear never disappoint.

CHEERY JOE.

Paper Clothing Reaches U. S. A.

Cleaners and dyers will retire from business if Americans take kindly to the paper suits, overcoats, suspenders and other garments, a shipment of which has just arrived in Chicago from Germany and Austria. All one needs to freshen up his clothes is a wad of art gum or an eraser. One of these suits, made entirely of paper, from the buttons to the price tag, sells for 575 crowns, or about $2.50 in American money. A large shipment of the paper goods is on its way to Milwaukee. In addition to the garments for men and women, there are aprons of all kinds, table covers elaborately embroidered. Curtains, hoods, twine, collars and cuffs. The clothing is treated with some sort of shellac that is supposed to make it waterproof. Otherwise a man wearing a paper suit who was caught out in a heavy rain would return without any clothing. It is not thought the paper clothing will make much of a hit with American buyers, especially at this season of the year, but the shipment was sent over to show that the Germans and Austrians are still on the job and that the people over there have something to wear.

Natural Laws.

Labor prices, like other prices, were inflated by war requirements, and under the immutable law of supply and demand they, like other prices, were scheduled for deflation when the war pressure was relaxed. It was evident to the best minds of the nation that the only way by which wages could be maintained and made permanent was through increased production, but reports show the increase in production to be very small. Workmen have not appeared to appreciate the situation generally, and their prosperity has too often been accompanied by a relaxation of effort. Thus, if organized labor enters into a practical alliance with efficiency system with a view to augmenting production, it will be doing a real service to its membership and to the country.—Washington Post.

A Plethora of Minor Profits.

There is an excess of minor prophets in literature, journalism and politics. When our hopes are buoyed up by the suave promises of politicians, our emotions stirred by the forecasts of popular Cassandras, and our ardor kindled by the spells of social soothsayers—only to meet the inevitable disappointment—surely we are entitled to compensation. There is an excess of propheteering, and the community, as usual, pays. Propheteering and profit-making are the unwelcome by-products of the great war. If one is taxable, why not the other? Assessments should be graded and impartial, and should fall alike on the harbingers of Marxian millenniums and those who positively announce the decisive victory of the Korbaks, Yudentiches and Wrangels of the moment.—New York Evening Post.

REBELLION IN STOMACH

"Pape's Diapepsin" at once ends Indigestion and Sour, Acid Stomach

Lumps of undigested food cause pain. If your stomach is in a revolt, if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin to help neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the pain, acidity, indigestion and distress.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quick-est, surest, most harmless stomach antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs so little at drug stores.

BOWRING BROTHERS, Ltd.

New York Press Comments.

New York, Nov. 27.—The New York morning papers without exception (other than the Hearst publications) explore the scenes of riot within the city on Thursday, when a Sinn Fein mob attacked the Union Club because a British flag was displayed from one of the windows of the building. The "World" is particularly bitter on the subject. It says in part: "We are indebted to Sinn Fein marching with its provocative emblems and banners as it pleases, always under the protection of law, for the idea that a difference of opinion or taste in regard to decorations is an offence to be punished by them with riotous assaults. They find no impropriety in flaunting their banners in the faces of better Americans who dislike them, but a Fifth Avenue club house displaying the colors of the allied nations which Sinn Fein fought to betray, finds its windows smashed and is made the scene of shameful disorders."

"Until lately," remarks the "Times," "thanks, partly to an intelligent and humane sense of the historic wrongs of the Irish people, thanks partly to the supposed exigencies of our own political life, it was made to appear to European eyes that this country had already taken sides. That illusion is now dispelled, and dispelled by the Irish themselves. The United States is a nation drawn by many natural race sympathies, but in the ultimate test is unbiased by the passions of contemporary European politics. As such it maintains its right to show fitting courtesy and respect for all friendly nations. That a portion of our citizens have virtually challenged that right can only cause a profound reaction damaging to the intolerant."

The "Herald" says in part: "That the provocative flag was a British flag makes no difference. If it had been Italian, or French, or Japanese, or Greek, the criminal responsibility of the disturbers of the peace would have been the same. Sympathy for these rioters, these law-breakers, is not sympathy for the cause suggesting their historical performance. It is sympathy for anarchy, that and nothing more."

"Hyphenism back again," is the title of the editorial in the "Tribune" on the Thanksgiving day riot. "It is the misfortune of Irish agitators," says the paper, "to fall under the leadership of hysterical extremists. No sooner is some credence gained for claims that the English are monsters and the Irish are patient saints than is heard the sound of shillalags. The scene on Fifth Avenue was not calculated to persuade the wavering that the Irish majority should be trusted to be just and tolerant toward the Irish minority. Britain is surely well served in this country by those who are filled with Kenney when they look on the British emblem. To tear down a British flag in New York is scarcely a good way to induce our people to assist in elevating the Irish flag in Dublin. Hyphenism was supposed to be dead, but here it is grinning at us again. We have been annexed by the mythical government of De Valera and it is the privilege of this gentleman who Explanation and Apology.

A letter signed "Inquisitive" was published in the Telegram, on the 25th inst., under the headline "For the Benefit of Insiders." It mentioned a report that the fish on board the S.S. "Snefeld" on the way to Greece, was "not of the best, showing signs of turning pink." It asked "what is more natural than that those interested—who, by the way, are members of the Advisory Board, should advocate reducing the price to 80¢ to try and induce the Greeks to buy." Messrs. Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., have complained to us that as they are the owners of the fish referred to, and Mr. R. B. Job, one of the directors, is a member of the Advisory Board, the statements are defamatory of the company and Mr. Job. We have, consequently, made enquiries into this matter, and find that there is no ground whatever for the statement that the fish on board the "Snefeld" has shown any sign of deterioration of any sort; and that the reduction in the prescribed price of fish for sale in Greece to 80¢ was made by the Advisory Board on the unanimous advice of the Exporters' Association, of which Mr. Job, among twenty others, is a member. Our correspondent says he really did not mean Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., or Mr. Job, and that he thought it quite proper to refer to the fact that a certain rumour was in circulation, without responsibility if it were not true. In this he was, of course, quite wrong, in both law and morals; for he who repeats an incorrect statement is as much liable as he who made it. The Telegram also is liable in this case, and frankly acknowledges and apologizes for the error. We can only plead that the close connection of our correspondent with Water Street caused us to reply upon the accuracy of his letter. We tender to Messrs. Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., and to Mr. R. B. Job personally, our sincere expression of regret that the statements complained of were made.

"The Unknown."

Son of my heart, did you ride alone? Were you the honoured, the Great Unknown? Did the angels point to your lonely rest, And choose you as emblem of all the best?

As they passed along in a hush sublime, I took to my heart this thought divine, That somehow God, in His plan of Fate, Had brought you back in this wondrous state.

Oh, heart of my heart! I knew you were near, For you kissed my forehead and wiped my tear; Then passed with the army of shining white.

A spirit of peace, and joy, and light! —G. P. in News of the World.

Alone Three Days With His Dead.

Mrs. Alfred H. Griffith, wife of the keeper of the lighthouse at the Giant's Tomb, near Midland, died on Friday night, November 12. Owing to heavy weather, it was not until Monday night that her husband succeeded in reaching any person on the mainland. In the meantime, he was about 12 miles from any human being, though he saw an occasional freight boat pass in the distance. The island, or rock known as the Giant's Tomb, upon which Mr. Griffith was left for three days and three nights with the body of his wife, is one of the most conspicuous in the waters of the Georgian Bay. Around it a great deal of Indian lore exists. In the early days Indians avoided camping on that island over night for fear of disturbing a famous chieftain's rest.

Hunter's Moon.

Now the full splendor of Diana's breast Gleams, a great pearl, through the unshelving trees; And swift her arrows will the goddess seize To hasten forth upon her nightly quest.

Of fresh adventure, for no languorous rest On cloud-soft couch she seeks—the chase will please Better her eager limbs; in rushing breeze Or frost-still air delighting, down the west Her silver sandals outspeed many a star And many mortals on the earth below.

Catching from her far horn an echoing bar Or pierced by o'er-shot arrow from her brow, Seized with the hunter's madness, in their dreams Follow enchanted trails blazed by her beams.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Nov. 30, 1920.
FOUR NEW BATTLESHIPS SUGGESTED.

Lord Beatty has completed a year in office as First Sea Lord, and within the next few days, his Board will begin to frame the Navy Estimates for presentation to the House early next year. The expectation is that even if no new ships are authorized in the spring, the Admiralty will announce its intention to build four great ships before long, and the sanction of the House of Commons will be obtained forthwith, so that armour and ordnance manufacturers may prepare in advance. If this is not done, the vessels cannot be turned out promptly, seeing that the plant at Sheffield and elsewhere has been out of use for two years.

KIDWELLY MURDER TRIAL.

No murder trial in recent years has aroused more interest in London than the case in the ancient Guildhall of Carmarthen, in Wales. Harold Greenwood, a Kidwelly solicitor, is arraigned on the capital charge in connection with the death of his first wife, a sister of Sir Thomas Vansittart Bowater, Lord Mayor of London for the year 1913-14. The public interest in the trial is reflected in the large number of applications for admission, many of them from well-known people in London. The fact that Mr. Justice Shearman presides will ensure that the proceedings will be brief and businesslike, for he is a judge of a very marked objection to theatricalism in court. Before him there is an imposing array of counsel. Sir Edward Marlay Samson, a Welsh K.C., who did some notable work in connection with the pensions administration, leads for the Crown. The defence is in charge of Sir Edward Marshall Hall, K.C., whose reputation as a pleader in criminal cases has no equal to-day.

Solicitors are beginning to complain that present-day barristers show a too prevalent tendency towards compromise. Many of the better known counsel, men who have made their names, are so inundated with briefs that they simply have not time to see every case through, and prefer to "settle" rather than entrust the conduct of the brief to a junior. Certainly when counsel sincerely believes that his client will "go down", compromise, if skillfully manoeuvred, is in the client's interest, but there are too many eleventh hour settlements, often in Court itself, which are made because there is only a "chance" of success. The ordinary client feels that a fighting barrister, really keen on a battle for its own sake, is infinitely better than any famous counsel who up to the last moment makes every effort to reach a settlement. But such men are not plentiful. What are wanted are more barristers like Sir Charles Matthews, K.C., whose flood of words, it has been said, not even the Lord Chief Justice himself can stay.

A CHRISTMAS SHADOW.

The continuance of that delectable luxury, the Christmas pudding, in the realm of British traditions will depend this year wholly on sentiment, for, according to expert prognostications, it certainly won't be worth the money. London fruit merchants are particularly pessimistic, and foretell a rise in the price of dried fruits generally and raisins and sultanas in particular. Blame is indirectly attributed to America, which, being dry, is now offering to Spanish and other growers the largest and most remunerative markets. Though at the moment there is a keen demand for sultanas in this country, there is no indication of falling prices, and they are now selling in London at anything up to 154s. ($30.80) per hundredweight, while raisins can be run to 145s. ($29.00). Neither are there any stocks of these high-priced dainties, merchants being unwilling to import large quantities until certain that the consumer will buy. Currants, however, will be plentiful, the Food Ministry having some 13,000 tons on hand, so currant pudding will be substituted at the festive board, unless of course it is dulled Christmas pudding just for the occasion and for auld acquaintance sake.

PREPARATIONS FOR PANTOMIME.

Though the number of pantomimes presented in the Metropolitan area at Christmas time is nothing like as great as it was some years ago, preparations are already afoot for such productions at several houses in both the West End and the suburbs. Drury Lane, because of a striking spell of success with "The Garden of Allah," is to pass on its usual show to Covent Garden, and thus the series of Drury Lane "Christmas annua's," as for a while they were pompously called, which has been so continuous so long, will be broken. Time was when Covent Garden and Drury Lane ran rival pantomimes, but that has long passed, the only serious West End competition with Drury Lane in recent years having been the Lyceum. The suburban theatres will give their patrons "Cinderella" and "Robinson Crusoe," "Aladdin" and "Sinbad the Sailor," "All Baba" and "Jack and the Beanstalk," as for so long they have done; and if one suggests that the public might like some fresh theme, the effective reply is that this is just what the public have proved by experience they do not desire. The "Yellow Dwarf" is taken as a theme; children and grown-ups alike yawn in advance, and decline to have their old favourites replaced. There is nothing in which theatre-goers are so conservative, and highbrow critics who rebuke managers for not modernizing the pantomime by the introduction of fresh themes have not to bear their pecuniary loss which would follow the acceptance of their counsel.

THE PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS' SCHEME.

As compared with the boxer who can win a fortune in a night and athletes in many other professions, the supreme golfers are poorly rewarded for their skill. Vardon and Ray, it is said, have each made $12,000 as a result of their three months' boom tour in America, but this is exceptional. In this country Vardon, Braid and Taylor have perhaps earned as much as $8,000 a year each, but then the scales slide very abruptly until you have good men receiving $12 and $16 a week. When Duncan won the championship his prize was $280 and a gold medal. This is an insignificant reward for the man who proves himself to be the best golfer of the year. The competitors in the championship merely play for the money they have subscribed in the way of entrance fees, and unless they go cap in hand they cannot hope, under present conditions for richer rewards. The professionals are now putting forward their own scheme for better financial reward, but whether they will succeed is doubtful. Their idea is to have their own works to produce the implements of the game, with the players acting as agents. More feasible is their plan to possess a national course on which all the big events of the season could be played. J. H. Taylor is the father of this proposal, links beside the sea or inland, the test could be made sufficiently exact-

Are rents, rates, and taxes likely to be higher or lower? Are wages coming down or going up? Are working and maintenance charges increasing or decreasing? Are machinery and power—coal, gas, electricity—becoming dearer or cheaper? Is the cost of transport, repairs and renewals higher or lower? Can we expect any reduction in bank charges, insurance premiums, and postage rates? Raw Material. "There is, in addition, the question of raw material. If a reduction in the cost of raw material is subsequently overtaken by an advance, the effect of the reduction is cancelled. If there is not a subsequent advance, then it must be remembered that there are many processes to be gone through before the raw material reaches the user or consumer as a manufactured article. Moreover, the raw material is only one factor in the final cost, and in the case of fine qualities of cotton fabrics, for example, it is a relatively small factor." In the drapery trade it is thought there may be a drop in prices next spring, "due chiefly to warehousemen and manufacturers having to realize on stocks bought in excess of their requirements, or on cancelled orders." There are some goods, however, which are scarcer and dearer to-day than at any time during the past four years, among these being carpets, velveteens, velvets, and silks.—Yorkshire Evening Post.

A "Wooden" Wedding. When Miss Ada Oakes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Oakes, of Washington, N.C., became the bride of Walter Pine, of Salisbury, N.C., recently, it proved to be an unusual marriage. The pair decided to have a "wooden marriage." Everything that took a leading part in the ceremony had a name like a tree. For instance:—The groom, Walter Pine; the bride, Miss Ada Oakes; the best man, Robert L. Birch; the bridesmaid, Anna Lee Laurel; the preacher, the Rev. Oscar T. Wood. The ceremony was performed at Washington, N.C., and to make the "wooden favor" complete the couple went to Hickory, N.C., to spend a week with the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. E. W. Shingle.

Diamonds in Teeth Badge of Matrimony. Twin solitaire diamonds flash from the teeth of Mrs. Mabel King Hickman, of San Francisco. One is a memorial to a husband dead 14 years, the other is in honor of her present husband. Diamond studded teeth are, in Mrs. Hickman's code, as acceptable a badge of matrimony as the customary plain gold ring. The solitaire in one of her teeth was taken from Mrs. Hickman's engagement ring. Her first husband, William King, requested that the betrothal jewel set where it never could be lost. Her present husband, Augustine Hickman, supplied the second diamond.

"Diamond Dyes" No Risk Then! Don't Spoil or Streak Material in Dyes that Fade or Run. Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye a new, rich, fadeless color into worn, shabby garments, draperies, coverings, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect results are guaranteed even if you have never dyed before. Druggist has color card.

Will There Be a Real Fall in Prices? CONSIDERATIONS WHICH WEIGH ON THE OTHER SIDE. "Talk of a slump in prices tends to cause a slump in trade, which produces unemployment and harder times for everybody," said a prominent Leeds business man, in a talk with a Yorkshire Evening Post reporter about trade conditions. "One hears quite a lot of such talk," he added, "and the quantity that has found its way into print seems to have created a popular expectation that prices are somehow bound to come down. They are not 'bound' to do anything of the sort unless the causes which produce a downward movement operate. 'I like to ask people who say that prices will have to come tumbling down what they are doing towards that end. Are they prepared to accept a reduction of 10 per cent., say, for their labour, or for things they are making or handling? Is anybody, except under pressure? 'Prices of boots and clothing are said to have fallen. In my view the main factor in this descent has been financial pressure. People with large stocks of goods for which the demand has decreased have been obliged to unload their goods at reduced prices; but the proof that this is a forced affair lies in the reduction of employment. 'Financial pressure may make a manufacturer unload his stocks at unremunerative prices, but it does not make them go on producing fresh goods to sell at a loss. 'As to whether there is much prospect of a natural fall in the prices of manufactured goods in general, answers to these questions would provide a useful guide:

For Beauty's Sake Remove that film-coat from your teeth

Teeth cannot glisten with a film-coat on them. You who want white teeth must learn how to remove it. This week your druggist offers—free—a new way of teeth cleaning. Millions now employ it. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. Go make that test. One week's results will be a revelation. Film—the great enemy. But this is more than a beauty question. Film ruins millions of teeth. Most tooth troubles are now traced to it. Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste cannot end it, so the tooth brush has left much of it intact. It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. All these troubles have been constantly increasing, because brushing failed to end that film. Now a new dental era. Dental science, after years of research, has found ways to combat film day by day. The methods have been proved efficient by many careful tests. High authorities endorse them. And millions of people now employ them, largely by dental advice.

See and feel it act. Present this coupon for the 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. The results are quick and apparent. A little book tells the reasons for them. For your own sake learn how much they mean.

Wedding Bells.

MURPHY-WHITE.

St. Joseph's Church, Bonavista, was the scene of a quiet but very pretty wedding when on Saturday morning, Nov. 27th, Mr. Edward P. Murphy, son of Mr. John Murphy, J.P., of the firm of McCormack & Walsh, Catalina, was united in hymen's silken bonds to Miss Maud White, daughter of Mrs. Margaret and the late Thomas White of Bonavista. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Dwyer, P.P., of Bonavista and the Altar of the little church that morning was tastefully decorated for the occasion by some of the lady friends of the bride.

At 7 o'clock the bridal party entered the church. The bride was led to the Altar by her uncle, Mr. Nicholas B. Ryan, J.P., who acted as father-giver, and looked very pretty in a travelling costume of navy blue, with hat to match and carried a beautiful bouquet of Chrysanthemums. Miss Maggie Sheehan, niece of the groom, was bridesmaid and was prettily attired in a suit of navy blue, while Mr. Walter N. White, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

After the marriage ceremony nuptial mass was celebrated and the newly married couple, kneeling within the sanctuary, received the blessing that the church imparts on such occasions. Leaving the church at half past seven the bridal party drove to the railway station and took passage by the 7.45 train for Trinity where the honeymoon will be spent.

The groom's present to the bride took the form of a cheque, while from relatives and friends many useful and valuable presents—including several cheques—were received, testifying to the esteem in which both bride and groom were held. To Mr. and Mrs. Murphy we extend best wishes for a long and happy voyage on the matrimonial sea.—COM.

Can Direct Crimes Through Hypnotism.

Dr. Wagner Jouregg, the famous Austrian alienist in Berlin, now firmly believes that a person hypnotized can be influenced to commit crime. Recently a fifteen-year-old girl entered his office, pointed a revolver at his head, and pulled the trigger. The cartridge, which was discovered to be made of paper, failed to explode, but the girl was taken and declared insane. Walter Senn, whose stories regarding the subject were previously ridiculed by Dr. Wagner Jouregg, testified that the girl acted on his suggestion after having been hypnotized. He pointed out that officials could not tell the difference between an insane and a hypnotized person, and told Dr. Wagner Jouregg the proof had been sufficiently convincing.

Rural Route No. 1, Mascouche, Quebec, Oct. 15, 1919. The Minard's Liniment People. Sirs,—I feel that I should be doing a wrong if I neglected to write you. I have had four tumors growing on my head for years. I had them cut off by a surgeon about fifteen years ago, but they grew again till about three months ago I had one as large and shaped like a lady's thimble on the very place where my hair should be parted, and it was getting so embarrassing in public that it was a constant worry to me. About three months ago I got a bottle of your liniment for another purpose and saw on the label good for tumors. Well I tried it and kept at it for exactly two months, with the result that it has entirely removed all trace of the tumor, and were it not that they had been cut fifteen years ago, no mark would be seen. I have not been asked for this testimonial and you can use it as you see fit. (Signed) FRED C. ROBINSON. P.S.—I am a farmer and intend using Minard's Liniment on my mare for a strained tendon, and am hoping for same results. FRED C. R.

Whippet Tank Removed

The whippet tank which arrived here some time ago from England was removed from opposite the Furness Withy premises yesterday afternoon and placed near the west side of the Court House steps. The machine was driven up Water Street under its own power by Mr. R. Silverlock and his assistants, and attracted considerable attention from the citizens, many of whom saw this modern fighting machine for the first time.

Robbed Payroll in Order to Wed.

It takes capital to get married in 1920, and William Meyers, of St. Louis, Mo., according to his own confession, obtained the funds for his marriage through the medium of a payroll robbery. Meyers is 20 years old. Two hours after he, with three companions had held up William Stewart, paymaster of the Bemis Drug Company, on September 25, he and Miss Walk were married at St. Stephen's Church. One of the partners in the hold-up acted as best man.
