DUKE'S RELATIVES INTERFERE

These apparently high-handed transactions in the rapidly interfering between man and wife are due to the action of Duke's relatives. The shrinking bride, who to quote the district attorney again, "is putting up a dickens of a holter," has a battalion of acquaintances, if not friends. She is a lady of some fifty odd years, well known for a great many years as a popular teacher in the city.

TARIFF REVISION LIKELY

A special despatch to the Post from Washington says: "That congress will not meet until autumn in any session, revise the tariff, is by no means definite." While the question of tariff revision has been abandoned in the original idea of a session in the early spring, in deference to the strong protests that have come from the supporters of the present tariff, it is expected that the strong demand for modification in the existing schedule is made as soon as possible.

THE MURROES' BUBBLE

The Munroe and Munroe outfit, which did buckleshop business in many Canadian towns, is still the cause of much talk in Montreal. The Munroes, George and Alexander, were headbarbers in a small way before they came here three years ago. They had a cash capital of about $3,000. In less than three years they had become the associates of millionaires, able to live at the Waldorf, and two or three other places, able to charter special cars and send junketing parties across the continent anxious to entertain the capitalists they sought to interest with banknotes; able to borrow nearly $500,000 from the National City Bank without security; to take part in the home show and generally to live the gay life at the rate of about $100,000 a year.

AMAZED WALL STREET

Wall street knew something about washing stock before the Munroes broke into it, but it had been done darkly and furtively with all manner of precautions against discovery, for the brokers or promoters who buy with one hand the stock they sell with the other in order to "create a market" are outlawed in the street, and every man's hand is raised against them—ostensibly at least.

EIGHT MEN AND A WOMAN TAKEN FROM SINKING CRAFT

(From Our Own Correspondent.) Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 6.—(Special.)—With the eastward and freshening wind of the brigantine Ohio, Capt. Rupert Wry, from Kingsport (N. S.) for New York, on board, the fishing schooner Theodore Roosevelt reached here tonight. The Ohio was abandoned 100 miles off Thatcher's Island after her crew and Mrs. Wry, the captain's wife, had suffered terrible agonies for forty-eight hours.

To a Telegraph correspondent Captain Wry, who is about twenty-six years old, told a story of storm and disaster.

"We left Kingsport Dec. 29 and had fair weather and made St. John for harbor. We left that port Jan. 3. The weather was clear and there was a good breeze blowing. After reaching the North channel it shut down thick on snow but did not commence to breeze up until about dark. We took in all the sails except those absolutely necessary for the wind increased from the north-northwest.

"A heavy squall struck us when we were about ten miles from Libby Island horn, but the wind blew so terrific that it was impossible to near the ship on MacInnis and there was nothing to do but let her run.

Vessel Sprung a Leak.
"Meantime the vessel sprung a leak and the men were constantly at the pump to keep her clear of water, but it was a terrible task. At 6 a. m. on Jan. 4, the judging by the log, we were about fifteen miles off Matineau Rock in a hurricane struck us on the quarter carrying away the binnacle box and compass. Another came directly over the stern, tearing the wheel box and steering gear, lifting the sky-light and filling the cabin. 'Joe' the Italian, who was steering, was found bruised, bleeding and helpless mass just forward of the wheelbox. He was taken below unit for service.

"Fortunately there was no further danger. We rigged a tackle to the rudder and by this we were able to steer and headed the vessel southeast. We started all the sails already on the vessel and took a reef in the mainsail which we attempted to set but the moment the vessel struck it the sail was torn from its fastenings like tissue paper.

"The vessel rolled and pitched in the heavy sea and our position was perilous. At 10 a. m. to keep the vessel afloat we started to throw the deck over and while doing so two of the men, Italians, were severely frost-bitten, disabling them from further effort.

Four of Crew Disabled.
"To add to our misfortune the vessel shipped a sea, moving the deck and breaking the starboard pump. We were working the port pump an avalanche of lumber descended to that side of the vessel striking the two men at the pump, breaking the starboard pump. The crew were disabled. Joe, in the meantime, had recovered and resumed his duties. This left only four men, myself and my wife, to battle with the gale during the terrible night of the 4th.

"I assure you it was a welcome sight when the Theodore Roosevelt was within sight at daybreak on the 5th. We hoisted our flag union down and the fishing vessel was seen ranging alongside. We were all exhausted and glad to change from the deck of our battered and leaking craft, to the warm cabin of the fishing vessel."

Capt. McHenry, of the Theodore Roosevelt, said the weather was rough at the time but his crew eagerly manned the deck and, rowing to the Ohio, quickly transferred her people. They were all pretty well used up.

Capt. McHenry put on board the Ohio a prize crew of eight men. Later the Ohio staggered into port and anchored in a good position on the pantheque ground.

Capt. Wry did not know the names of his crew, who were Frenchmen, Italians and Portuguese. The mate is Enos Barkhouse and the second mate, Harry Burns. Burns was the most severely frost-bitten of the party. All the men will be taken to the hospital tomorrow. Capt. Wry and his wife came ashore with Capt. McHenry this evening.

The Ohio is 325 tons, owned by Scamell Bros. of New York, hails from that port and her cargo was consigned to order.

Capt. Wry has been on the water since he was fourteen years old and sailed over the world, but he says this was his worst experience.

SYDNEY PROMISED A CIVIC SCANDAL

It is Alleged a Shipbuilding Company is Trying to Work Council into Granting Big Bonus Without Consideration.

Sydney, N. S., Jan. 9.—(Special.)—A big sensation was created here today by the publication of a letter in the local press charging the city council with resorting to star chamber methods in promoting a scheme for the establishment of a shipbuilding plant, together with steel floating dock and wrecking steamer on Sydney harbor.

Two years ago legislation was secured, enabling the town to borrow $250,000, any company in the construction of a shipbuilding plant at Sydney, but only after they had spent $1,000,000 in work and gave a guarantee that no fewer than 500 men would be regularly employed.

The promoters of the scheme, and by which they would be relieved from guaranteeing the number of men employed and spending the $1,000,000 on construction before securing the $250,000 guarantee bonds from the city.

Two or three members of the council opposed making the amendments, and received against spending so much of the people's money without anything tangible being guaranteed in return. The meeting was a stormy one, and ended by the amendments being taken off.

Where the promoters would float the stock of the company and after receiving the $250,000 in a booming it, would let it pass into the hands of a receiver, when the city would find itself faced for more than $250,000, with nothing to show for it.

The promoters refused to give the city a first mortgage on the property; in fact, they refused to guarantee anything. The reason they gave for maintaining secrecy about the affair was in case Halifax might want to establish a plant of its own in that city.

Some feeling of indignation has arisen against the promoters and civic rulers alleged to be involved in the deal.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF YOUNG MAN AT ST. GEORGE

Raymond Judson Probably Burst Blood Vessel by Striking Head Against Beam.

St. George, Jan. 6.—Raymond Judson, aged between 18 and 19 years, who was employed by the pulp mill people here, received fatal injuries in a manner yesterday, between 4 and 5 o'clock he was engaged in swinging a door in the basement of the manager's office when he received a slight blow on the forehead.

There was no cut or mark on his head and he was able to walk to his boarding house and into his room, but there he collapsed.

Dr. Taylor and Alexander were summoned and did all that was possible for him, but he sank and died about 8 o'clock this morning.

Deceased, who was a very fine young man, was a native of Prince Edward Island. He had been in St. George about two years, half of which time he was employed at the pulp mill. One brother, George, is in St. George, while his father, mother and another brother live in Prince Edward Island.

There will be no inquest. It is supposed that death was caused by the bursting of a blood vessel in the head. The body was taken by sleigh to St. Andrews to be received at the morgue.

St. John at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning interment will be at his parents home, P. E. Island.

KILLED HORSES WITH POWDERED GLASS

Correspondent Tells of Outrage at Upper Clifton.

A correspondent sends in the story of a cowardly outrage at Upper Clifton. He writes that Adino T. Pitt lost two horses under most suspicious circumstances. The first died Christmas night and the second one a week later. An examination of the animals showed that "death" had been caused by powdered glass which had been fed to them apparently in their oats.

The glass was found all through their intestines and in some places the sharp edged particles had cut through the intestinal wall. The correspondent suggests that the proper authorities should take the matter up and endeavor to find the guilty parties.

Bathurst, N. B., Jan. 6.—Fire broke out about 8 o'clock this morning in the dwelling house of John Holywood on Murray street, opposite the Methodist church. The house with contents was totally destroyed; loss $600; no insurances.

Bliss Carman As an Essayist

Perhaps the simplest way to describe Mr. Bliss Carman's book of essays, "The Friendship of Art," published by the Copp, Clark Company in an attractive form, suitable for the time of year, is to take one of his short homilies, which are not too serious to be agreeable, and to stand for all the rest. "Stick to your own rhythm," is the advice Mr. Carman connects with his essay on "Personal

BLISS CARMAN

Rhythm," in which by a happy fancy the writer describes personality under different forms of poetical motive.

"Done and done" and policemen are always inebriated in their rhythm. Recall the rhythm of blank verse, the most common metric measure in English, in the line:

"So all day long the noise of battle rolled Among the mountains by the winter sea, and you will perceive at once how settled and prosperous and conservative it is, quite aristocratic and assured. On the other hand, to quote again from Tennyson, there is the line of excellent trochees:

"In the spring a young man's fancy slightly turns to thoughts of love."

How different from the iambic! How brightly tripping, gay and emotional! The rhythm of a sonnetaire rather than a savant."

If you hurry all the time you lose your rhythm; on the other hand, it is just as fatal to dawdle. "We shall be wise to cultivate our own proper and peculiar measure of speech and movement." This is about what Mr. Carman has to say, very gracefully, in six or seven pages on the subject of being natural.

The other essays deal with kindred subjects, and in the same attractive style. Several of the contributions, however, discuss the ends and means of writing. This is the reason, probably, that Mr. Carman called his book "The Friendship of Art." Among these may be mentioned "Realism in Letters," "The Man Behind the Book," and "A Canon of Criticism." These all contain much that may be read with interest and pleasure, for, for instance, as the concluding paragraph of the essay last named.

"It is the business of art to charm and inspire and ennoble us; and, lastly, it is the business of art to enlighten us. To see that art does this is the business of criticism."

The new volume of essays—"The Friendship of Art"—by Mr. Carman, tending to show the real relations of literature to life, both from the hosts of old friends of the gifted poet and from the ranks of his new converts, is a book of the highest value. It is a book of the highest value. It is a book of the highest value.

Professor Carman is a man of letters, and because of the wide range of subjects treated, it is one of those books which are read anywhere, and are pretty sure of finding something worth reading; some expression of an old truth from a new view-point, or a discussion of some matter which bears an intimate relation to the life of the average dweller in the world. And it will be a sound and sane discussion, for Professor Carman is never morbid, nor does he measure human character so rigidly that no one can come up to the standard. There is a cheerful optimism, a hearty realization of the limitations of humanity, and a willingness to take things as they are, if so be that there is apparent honest effort to make them better.

Such essays appear to belong genuinely to literature, for they are to a degree "an expression in words of the meaning of life."

It is worth while, such a volume as this; for even though it may not sound with the very deep plummet, it is clarity of wisdom and serenity of view which makes the strongest appeal. There is encouragement, for the reader who may feel a little world weary. Indeed, one of the chiefest services which a cluster of essays such as these can perform, is the help they give in taking oneself out of the immediate environment, in clearing the mental atmosphere, and aiding to a clearer outlook. It comes not so much from any direct stimulation or encouragement as from the atmosphere, the optimism of the author's own mind. One observes this almost unconsciously and it is the better thereof.

LUMBERING OBSTRUCTIONS ON ST. JOHN RIVER

The Situation With Which Lumbermen Are Now Dealing.

The Times yesterday published the following: For the past few days the question of the lumber business and obstructions to the traffic along the St. John river has been receiving the attention of millmen and lumbermen not only in this city but along the river generally.

A few days ago a meeting of parties interested was held at John E. Moore's office and a committee was appointed to take some steps to prevent the placing of obstructions in the St. John river to the detriment of the lumbermen's interests.

A short time ago St. John lumbermen in conversation with the Times, said: "The St. John Lumber Company, who have erected so many piers in the St. John river at Van Buren, about which there has been a good deal of trouble here, is said, preparing to erect several more piers in the river. The New Brunswick government has already taken some steps in regard to this matter last winter as the Ashburton treaty forbids any obstruction in the St. John river where it is the boundary line. This company have piers connected with booms all along the middle of the St. John river from Van Buren to a point almost five miles above. This is claimed to be a violation of the treaty and the announcement that the company intends putting in more piers is creating considerable interest."

"The parties forming this company are the same people who, it is alleged, a few years ago attempted to dam the river at Winding Ledges, but their application for a charter for that purpose, not having been successful, they, it is said, have attempted to attain the same object, that is the holding of their timber by monopolizing about one-half of the width of the river with piers and booms for a distance of five miles."

The committee appointed to deal with such matters met in John E. Moore's office and discussed the situation thoroughly, but no definite action was taken and a further adjournment was made until next week.

One of those directly interested was interviewed by a Times reporter this morning. He said the worst obstructions are between Van Buren and Grand Isle. At the latter place there is a boom which runs logs out of the river behind the island. On one occasion the whole drive is alleged to have been "stuck out" behind the island, and as a consequence lay on the bed of the river all winter. After the logs were assorted the water fell so low that the drive could not be taken to Grand Falls.

The navigation of boats, logs, rafts and everything that floats down the river is greatly interfered with and navigation generally is handicapped.

The excuse given for the building of these piers and obstructions is based on the following act passed by the Maine legislature which is as follows and is entitled:

"An act to authorize the St. John Lumber Company to build piers and booms in the Saint John river in the town of Van Buren. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in Legislature assembled as follows:

"The Saint John Lumber Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maine, its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to build and maintain piers and booms in connection therewith in the Saint John river at a point near to the mills of the said company in the town of Van Buren and thence from the mainland to near to the foot of island number three in said town and also from the mainland opposite and nearly opposite the upper end of island number four to said island number four and also at any other points or points between the lower end of island number three and the upper end of island number four as far as may appear necessary or convenient in the carrying on of the business of said company in holding and manufacturing lumber."

COULD NOT REACH ST. ANDREWS

St. George Men With Body of Raymond Judson Had to Turn Back.

The body of Raymond Judson, who died of injuries received at St. George last Thursday, reached the city Sunday afternoon on the Shore line express, in charge of deceased's brother George, and his brother-in-law, James Mattinson, who are conveying the body to Charlottetown for interment.

An attempt was made to reach St. Andrews by train on Friday night, so that the body could reach St. John via the P. R. or the boat from Eastport, as it was feared that it would be some time before the Shore line would be opened, but the young men with the body got only about three miles from St. George and had to return, owing to the bad state of the road. The rain and soft weather opened the Shore line Sunday.

LIBERALS CAPTURE ANOTHER SEAT

Former Conservative Stronghold Goes Against Balfour Government.

London, Jan. 7.—In the parliamentary by-election at Stalybridge, Cheshire, today, J. F. Chestman (Liberal) defeated Francis Clegg (Cons.), by a majority of 51. Hitherto for twenty years Stalybridge had returned a Conservative.

The election, which was warmly contested, turned almost completely on free trade as against Mr. Chamberlain's policy. Mr. Clegg announces that he was opposed to taxation of food, but that otherwise he had followed Mr. Balfour's programme.

This capture of a Conservative stronghold has aroused great Liberal enthusiasm in Stalybridge tonight, and generally it is accepted as significant.

NEURALGIC PAINS ARE THE CRY OF THE NERVES FOR BETTER BLOOD.

Enrich the Blood and Neuralgia Will Disappear—It Is Only Those Whose Blood Is Poor and Watery That Suffer.

No part of the human system is more sensitive than the nerves. Many of the most excruciating pains that afflict mankind come from weak, shaky, shattered nerves, and among the nerve-pains there is perhaps none causes more intense suffering than neuralgia, which generally attacks the nerves of the face and head, sometimes causing a sharp darting agonizing pain at other times a dull, heavy aching feeling which may last for weeks.

There is one way to get rid of neuralgia and other nerve troubles, and that is through the blood. Poor, watery blood forces the nerves to give up their work and causes all nerve troubles. No medicine in the world can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a blood builder and purifier. They enrich the blood and give the nerves a rest and a new strength.

Rich and strong blood is the key to health and vitality. It is the life-giving force that keeps the body in perfect health. It is the life-giving force that keeps the body in perfect health. It is the life-giving force that keeps the body in perfect health.

When a bugle sounds on the chilling air, and he stands in his boots upright.

There are whispers and jestings and laughter—then the scream of a rushing shell, and the crash of the guns from the trenches that fling back the gateway at hell.

In his uniform soaking and grimy, he stands with his gun in his right hand. He looks so tired and so weary, but he looks so brave and so brave, there is rest in the worn brigade.

SEND YOUR MAGAZINES, BOOKS AND PICTURES TO THE SORELY AFFLICTED

An Appeal from Dr. J. V. Anglin Which Everyone Should Read and Read--New and Hopeful Conditions, and Needs, of the Provincial Hospital.

To the Editor of The Telegraph:— Sir,—Will you kindly spare some space for a charitable purpose, namely to make known to your readers both in and out of the city that at the Provincial Hospital contributions of periodicals, books, pictures, indeed of whatever can tend to amuse, interest or occupy its patients, are always thankfully received.

nothing to do they are miserable, or get into mischief, with only manual work they grow dull. Were the institution to subscribe for all the magazines, etc., that economical management would allow, we could only provide for a few. There are now 540 inmates. Said to relate, a large number of them are beyond being interested in anything, but the proportion which derives pleasure and consequent benefit from the production of the printer's art is far greater than the outside world dreams, and includes many whose restoration is expected.

All Able Should Assist.

This is the Provincial Hospital. It belongs to the people of New Brunswick, and is controlled by the representatives they select. To it they may send their unfortunate ones,—and none can say who may not next need its services, for many enter the palace as well as the hotel. While every taxpayer in the province supports this institution, there are not a few who have been blessed with a greater share of this world's gifts than others, and to them I appeal on behalf of my unfortunate charges for their magazines, illustrated papers, etc., when they have done with them; indeed, there is no donation that cannot be profitably used in this household, so various are our needs. The pictures on our walls need renewing. If there were sent me such cheery ones as are issued with the holiday periodicals, our carpenter would frame them with little expense to brighten wards and increase their homeliness. A messenger will be promptly sent for any donations the friends of the hospital are disposed to give.

Hope and Help.

As is the modern custom, this institution is no longer called an asylum, but a hospital. The new name implies that it is to be regarded as a place with possibilities of cure rather than for permanency of abode. Those in charge can do much to make of it such a hospital as the people want it to be, hastening recovery where possible, and making comfortable the rest due, but they can do infinitely more if they have such sympathetic assistance as lies in the power of the public to bestow. While the Christmas spirit yet lingers, hundreds here will wait in affliction, which oftentimes others have brought on them, are cut off from the good things which the majority enjoy, and that those who can will aid me in making life more pleasant for them.

Sincerely yours,
J. V. ANGLIN,
M.D.,

UNDESIRABLE IMMIGRANTS.

(Toronto Globe). From occasional disclosures it is made evident that we are by no means too strict in our scrutiny of immigrants. It is the right of every country to protect its standard of citizenship and to prevent the lowering influence of undesirable elements from abroad. A cable despatch tells of a danger to which we are exposed:—"Alfred Smith, aged five, was charged with theft in the Birmingham Police Court, and the magistrate said the only course which suggested itself was to send Smith to Canada through the Dominion House. This course was agreed to."

It may be that this youth would develop into a useful member of the community in Canada. It is quite possible that equally lenient treatment at home would turn him from the path of crime on which he has entered and make him a worthy citizen. His chances of reform are far better in Canada than in Britain because there are better opportunities here for securing a footing on the right road. But there are important considerations for us others. We are blindly following along the line of development chosen by older countries, and have gone sufficiently far to produce our own product of apparently surplus humanity. We have men and boys who find the path of rectitude so crowded that they are forced into ways of crime. Clearly we owe it to ourselves as well as to other nations to let them deal with their own surplus humanity. When conditions are such that some must be crowded into the ranks of the criminal and the pauper the victims will be, as a rule, those with the poorest moral, mental and physical endowments. The migration of such an element must lower the standard of the country to which they are admitted. War has a deteriorating influence in killing off the strongest and most courageous. The same influence is exerted by the admittance of an inferior element from another country. The Dominion has suffered in this regard. Many undesirable immigrants have been brought here by public encouragement and also by the wise methods of transportation companies. We have also suffered through the eagerness of European countries to unload on us their own pauper and criminal elements. The Ontario and Dominion governments have already taken active measures to prevent the immigration of undesirable classes. The Ontario law prohibits the importation of any child who has been convicted of crime or has displayed criminal tendencies. Every society or agent bringing children into the province is required to maintain supervision over them till they reach the age of eighteen years, and also to provide a home for them if they return from the foster homes in which they have been placed. A penalty is provided for any society or agent bringing into the province any child physically or mentally defective, or of any crime (incl. inmate, idiot, pauper or diseased person). These laws have been instrumental on many occasions in saving the province from undesirable acquisitions. The policy of the government has warranted effort to what might have developed into a serious evil, and it should be continued with greater stringency.

Afflicted with Erysipelas For Ten Years.

Cured by Four Bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. N. Peister of Brighton, Ont., was Cured Two Years Ago and Has Had No Return Of It Since.

Read what she says:—"It is now about two years since I was cured of a terrible attack of Erysipelas, with which I had been afflicted for about ten years. I had tried almost everything, including medicine from several doctors, but could get no relief. I had given my case up as hopeless, but I procured five bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it completely cured me. In fact, the cure has been permanent. It is now two years since I took Burdock Blood Bitters, and I have not had the slightest sign of the disease returning. I fully believe that your wonderful remedy has taken it so completely out of my system that I shall never be bothered again with it. I have the greatest of faith in Burdock Blood Bitters."

22 YEARS PASTOR OF ST. JOHN CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Fotheringham Preached Anniversary Sermon Sunday Evening

Gives Statistics Relative to Work During His Time, and Speaks in Favor of Long Pastorates.

Rev. Dr. T. F. Fotheringham today will complete 22 years as pastor of St. John Presbyterian church. Sunday night in his sermon he made reference to the church work and spoke in favor of lengthy pastorates. His text was 2 Thess. 3:1. "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified, even as also it is with you."

FIRST STORY BY EYEWITNESS

day. Ordered to cross the plain and take the north side of the Great Cobequid range of redoubts, it started in. Before it reached the last ravine on the further side, thirty per cent. of the men had fallen from exhaustion and shell fire. Looking ahead and having reports from reconnoitering parties and pioneers, the colonel, named Takagaki, sent back word to the general, he hoped out of the ravine at the head of his men, calling to them as he went to follow him.

How Takagaki Died.

An order to proceed was instantly forwarded to him. The commanding general curtly replied that one regiment was enough to take one battery. Up to this time Takagaki had been leader of the men, usually march, at the rear of his men, the front being in charge of his line officers; but receiving the command from the general, he stepped out of the ravine at the head of his men, calling to them as he went to follow him.

He fell with four bullets through his breast, ten passed beyond. One after another his officers were shot down; the men likewise. Of the three thousand that Takagaki commanded, two hundred and seventy were killed. They were ordered to join the reserves.

In the third assault, on October 29, half way up the hill the advance stumbled over a mine, and the reserve stumbled over the mountain was blown into the air jacking with it some twenty-five men, heads a-way, legs and arms twisted, trunks shattered.

Volunteers advanced through the crater thus formed, up the glacial of the redoubt, until they reached a trap which they had been unable to distinguish from the forest below, owing to its cunning concealment under the parapet, level with an innocent height that looked precisely similar to the other ferns covered height in the vicinity.

It was a most. The Japanese did not hesitate to leap in. This leap was to death.

At each corner of the fort, at each turn that it made as it worked its way under the parapet of the redoubt, was a masonry projection, called by the cunning device such traps a cannonier.

These cannoniers rose out of the bed of the most severe feet, and each was large enough to shelter three or four men with perfect protection and with their feet tucked like woodchucks in a hole, unable to escape, the Russian dealt out whistling steel at their leisure.

Surprising and overpowering as this was the Japanese did not falter. On that third grand assault they made their stand, and held their own until the morning of the 31st, the two northern cannoniers.

Under the parapet of this fort, dominated by all the artillery of the late Dr. Ammiral, all of this city, A. Gillen, of the Star office, is a son.

Mrs. John E. McDonald.

Mr. N. S. Jan. 6.—(Special)—A telegram this afternoon from Kamloops (B. C.) announces the death there of Mrs. J. E. McDonald. Deceased was a sister of J. H. Richardson, Turo, and the late Mrs. W. D. Irish, of Malgrave, who died suddenly while visiting her brother here two weeks ago.

Mrs. Frederick Wiggins.

Dr. Bayard received news from England Saturday of the death of Mrs. Frederick Wiggins Christmas morning. The announcement was quite unexpected, as she was in good health at the time. Mrs. Wiggins was a daughter of the late Dr. William Bayard, and a sister of Dr. William Bayard. She had a large circle of friends here and was greatly esteemed for her kindness and hospitality, and the community will sympathize with Dr. Bayard in his bereavement. Mrs. Wiggins is survived by four daughters. There are two other sisters, Mrs. George Thompson, resident in England, and Miss Bayard, who lives with Dr. Bayard in this city.

Mrs. Angus Macdonald.

Mrs. Rebecca Macdonald, wife of Angus Macdonald, died at her residence, 252 Waterloo street, after a brief illness. Her husband, who is employed in Halifax by T. C. Allen & Co., came to the city Christmas eve to spend the holidays. Mrs. Macdonald was apparently in her usual health at that time. On Monday she complained of being unwell and that night a doctor was summoned. She grew worse, however, and on Tuesday Dr. Lewin and Melan, who had been called in, pronounced an operation was necessary. It was successful but late Friday she began to sink and died on Saturday evening. Deceased leaves, besides her husband, five daughters: Mrs. C. H. Hicks, Boston; Lizzie, Agnes, Phoebe and Nell, all at home; and the youngest, Mrs. J. H. Bell, lives in Moncton and a grandson, John Macdonald, is in the I. C. R. office there.

Rev. John Lathern, D. D.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 8.—(Special)—Rev. John Lathern, D. D., one of the most beloved clergymen in Halifax, and probably the most outstanding figure in maritime Methodism, died tonight after a short illness. He had been in failing health for six months, but recently rallied and was around the city until a week ago, when his last illness came.

He was in his seventy-third year, and bility which lies upon a minister in this regard. "The ties of sentiment which are formed between pastor and people during many years are too strong, tender and numerous for any one to understand fully who has not experienced them. There are memories of the dead. As he passes along the street how many dwellings recall scenes of sorrow and gladness, and the friends of the departed. In every home circle he has shared both joy and grief as no other human being has been permitted to do. The babies whom he received in Christ's name have grown up around him, his spiritual sons and daughters, and he watches their maturing piety with a joy that not even the angels can share for the happy being of the "earthly vessel" which conveyed the blessing to them. He has blessed the marriage feast, he has placed upon the infant's brow the seal of God's irrevocable covenant of love, he has commended the departing soul to the hands of a reconciled God. There are no ties in life for a moment to be compared in strength, tenderness and permanence with those which are knit during a pastorate in which there is never a thought on either side that it will end with death, or some unforeseen and unthought providence."
