The Creation. BY JAMES HOGG, ESQ.

Heaven's potent Lord beheld a void in space And bade it quicken into life. The word Scarce spozen, light, the eldest born and best Of power creative, shed its beams around Where earth and air and sea contending seem'd Toss'd in confusion. From the mystic fount Of night's dark caverns rolled the mighty sea, Resistless in its course. Stupendous waves Gathering their forces rushed along the vales, proach.

And trembling own'd their power. The loftiest hills

Awhile in danger stood, and the new earth On ruin's verge appear'd, till the dark floods, Restrained by His still voice who bid them flow, Their highest level found. Then all was peace, And Earth and Ocean join'd the general song Of praise to God. Then sang the morning stars

The advent of the young aspirant, Earth-And the glad planets, sisters of her way, Sent forth their birth-day ode from world to world.

I never before was amongst such a people, or in the midst of such filth or malaria. Yesterday, a person in high authorty at Cagliaria called upon me at this place, and said, "Your success has been great, very great; and your Book will perhaps cause an entire revolution in our island ideas." an entire revolution in our island iteas. In addition to the 290 copies sold in the capital in twenty-five days, 130 more were sent off to the large town of Alghero, con-cerning which I have cheering news. In Sassari there is no public press, and scarcely a printing machine of any worth. On this the 8.h day of my sale, I can report the
