As she approached the " dim boundary of time," Ler path seemed like that of the just, shining " brighter and brighter." She was desirous of knowing nothing but Christ and Him crucified. At times her memory would fail her on most subjects, tem and institutions, but from an indisposition, but when Jesus was named memory would show itself wonderfully tenacious ; the bare mention of the precious name was quite enough to arouse all her dormant faculties. A day or two previous to death, she was asked by a friend, apprehensive that death was near, how she felt in prospect of soon entering the spirit world, she exclaimed with a countenance radiant with joy " Happy ! happy ! happy !"

The Well-Thumbed Page How a reverend head, yet lowly, Weighted with the toil of years, Bises to me, ever holy With the past of bliss and tears ; How, with memory's fond precision, Flashing childhood back ou sge, Comes a tender, thankful vision Of a loved and trusted page !

At my father's knee with wonder, Oft with wonder and with awe, Did I list at Sinai's thunder Pealed its sanction to the Law. Oft I seemed to see, with trembling, Deadly plagues or vengeful sword, When the chosen race dissembling Brought lip-homage to the Lord.

Oft I heard of priest and leader, And of royal bard and sage ; And-although the painful reader Spelled his course along the page-Rapt I heard-whilst tears out-welling, Down the quivering furrows ran-Heaven had sought an earthly dwelling ; God had pitched his tent with man.

As my father read the story, Crowning all the wondrous whole, Gleamed his face with prophet glory From the light that lit his soul. This in joy increased his gladness ; This in grief rebuked despair ; This from anguish rescued sadness ; God, the Christ of God, was near !

Forth he looked on plain and river, They, he knew, were made for him ; Knew that he should live forever When the sun was old and dim. In this faith, on that dark morrow When to earth his wife he bore, Not as hopeless did he sorrow-She was only gone before.

Soon he followed ; smiled in dying. With his hand upon the page Where my charter-words were lying God the guard of orphanage ! Since that time, whate'er betide me, This is still my stay divine I've my father's Book beside me. And my father's God is mine ! -Churchman's Magazine.

The Secret.

" Here, boys, is a sovereign for each of you," said Mr. Mitchell, to his sons, Clarence and Gospel Banner. Edward, on a bright winter morning, as they were working in the garden. " I hear that you are at the head of your classes, and this is to express my satisfaction at your progress." Some days afterwards as the two boys were in the library, he said to them, " You have not told me how you spent your gold pieces." " I have not spent mine yet," said Edward. "And yours, Clarence ?" In the treatment of WORMS the principal indi-cation is the EXPULSION of the Worms from the Bowels. This may be fulfilled in some instances by active Purgatives, which expel by increasing the peristaltic action of the bowels, or by Anthel-mintics, which favor their expulsion through the ordinary contraction of the bowels by destroying them, or rendering them less able or less disposed to resist this contraction. Other preparations in use possess the latter property only, and to a fee-ble extent, for to produce it, it is necessary to give large and neuseous doses, and on the following day some purgative to carry off the effects of the pre-vious day's medicine, that all was right And now, although Clarence supposed his secret to be safe from all, but the eye of his Father in Heaven ; we, who watched him through all, will relate it in confidence to our readers.

The day on which he received the gift, was clear and frosty. It was December, and though the sun shone, it had no power upon the icicles which fell from the trees in showers. The air was healthful and exhilarating to the well-clad ; but to the poor, unprotected child of want it came too keenly. Clarence hurried on, with skates flung over his shoulder, to join a skating party. His hands were thrust into his coatpockets, when he pressed on, when he felt his arm seized from behind.

" Quick ! Quick ! Come quick," said a little bare-footed boy, half frantic with grief, " I believe mother is dying." Clarence obeyed impulsively, while the boy clinging to his coat dragged him on.

The home, if such it could be called, was not far distant ; and the scene which presented itsself on his entrance was awful indeed. A woman, surrounded by three or four children screaming in terror, was lying on her miserable bed, with her clenched hands fixed in an immovable clasp. " I will go for a doctor," said Clarence, and remembering that he had seen a physician's house on his way, he ran with all speed to summon him. The doctor followed directly; and at once administered to the poor sufferer. The poor mother had toiled until over exertion and starvation brought her to her present state. The children were thin and only half-clad ; and no fire upon the hearth.

" Are you hungry ?" Clarence asked. " Yes, very hungry."

"And cold too," he said ; and with a heart kill an animal with alcohol in twenty minutes by superscribe letters properly ; 13.
