CHAPTER XLIII.

"But that wasn't what I was going to say—don't cry, May!"—for May has hidden her face on Paula's bosom and is sobbing softly. "I wanted your advice and assistance, sir. You see, this find has made the land valuable; they are building quite a town; there was a bank, a church, and a newspaper office when I started, and, as the land's mine of, course I want to dispose of it to the best advantage. I thought a company—"

Mr. Palmer jumps to his feet. "Of course, sell to a company. Ask a hundred thousand pounds for it. I will get it. I'll show you the way. Bless my soul!" he breaks off feverishly. "There's a fortune in it. I've seen it done before. Er—have you had any dinner? What will you have? You must have something. My dear sir, I insist upon it," and he rings the bell furiously. "Confound it, are they all deaf? Here, bring—bring—bring me the best you've got in the house; bring some champagne. Sir Herrick, ain't that wonderful? Didn't I say there was stuff in him, didn't I say that he'd make his way? Give me your hand, my dear Bob. I'm glad to see you. I'm delighted."

But Bob has gone over to May, and they have disappeared mysteriously. Mr. Palmer runs up and down the room.

"Most wonderful thing I ever heard!" he exclaims. "Oh! but I always said he'd do."

Then the servants bring in the tray. He makes a grab at the canvas bag. As he does so a letter, which had lain hidden at the bottom, catches his eyes, and he takes it out.

"Hallo, this is for me!" he exclaims. "From—from Stancy!"

"He gave it me yesterday," says Bob, from the other end of the room. "Oh! What's it mean? Hallo!" And he sinks into chair with a groan.

"Papa!" exclaims May, and she runs to him. "What is it?"

"What is it?" echoes Mr. Palmer. "Why—why—the young fool! I beg your pardon, my dear," looking at Paula. "But he's gone and married your sister Alice."

"What!" ejaculates Sir Herrick. "It's all right," says Bob, coolly, "they were married the day before yesterday."

"Why—why," stammers Mr. Palmer. Then his eyes fall on Bob, and he gasps as he remembers that it is the goldmine-owner's sister.

"It's all right, sir," says Bob, coolly. "The young couple are very happy, and begged me to say that they were very sorry—no, not sorry—yes, sorry that they hadn't asked your consent."

"I'll cut him off with a shilling," says Mr. Palmer, hoarsely.

"They will have to live on Alice's dowry," says Bob, cheerfully. "Come, come, sir, don't let us be hard upon them. Alice will keep him—ahem!—straight."

Mr. Palmer thinks a moment, then he holds out his hand.

"If you agree, my dear Mr. Robert," says May, then, to the footman, "Why the devil don't you bring Mr. Estcourt something to eat!"

Let us drop the curtain. Oh, gold! gold! How potent art thou! Even Love needs thy help, and owns thy magic sway!

When the curtain reascends for the last time in this eventful drama, three months are supposed to have elapsed.

In the easiest of easy-chairs that the smoking-room of the Court can boast, sits Sir Herrick. It is late; the servants have gone to bed, the moon can be seen through the window; sinking in the west.

Sir Herrick pokes the end of his cigar in his fingers, and flings it into the grate, with a sigh of contentment and a look at the watch.

As he does so there comes a knock at the door, followed by the apparition of a dainty figure in an evening-dress of Worth's, with diamonds on her arms, and on her wrists, and in her hair; an apparition of youthful loveliness that might well make the heart of a man who owned it beat with pride and satisfaction.

"Well," she says, "have they all gone to bed, and are you going to sit up all night?"

Sir Herrick squeezes into a corner of the capacious chair, and beckons her.

"Come and sit down, you restless one," he says.

Paula makes a pout of indifference, but comes and nestles into the chair, nevertheless.

"You'll spoil my nice dress," she says.

"Never mind," he retorts, putting his arm round her in the old, lover-like fashion. "What an awful swell you are!" And his eyes wander over her with quiet pride. "Why all these diamonds to-night, my wife? Why this war-paint?"

She laughs half-shamefacedly.

"I put it on to please the poor old major," she says. "Has he gone to bed?"

"Yes, an hour ago. Poor old fellow! He insisted upon making a speech, congratulating me upon being a Powis of Powis Court; as if I had earned it or brought it about myself, instead of allowing him to buy it of old Palmer."

"Dear old major!" says Paula. "It is the one thing he had set his heart upon, to see you back in the old place. And he is so happy! What do you think he called me to-night?"

"I don't know. He seems to call you by a good many flattering epithets, you little witch!"

"He called me 'My Lady Chate-laine!' And when I asked what it meant, he said, 'You are the mistress of the castle, my dear. This roof has sheltered generations of Powises, and I hope—'"

"Go on," says Sir Herrick, with a smile.

Paula crimsoned.

"I shan't. Has Bob gone to bed?"

"An hour ago. Bob is bored with great company, and likes to rise early; he is also filled with his approaching nuptials. Bob is a happy man, and deserves to be so."

"And May?" says Paula, smiling.

"I never saw such a change in a girl; she is all smiles and laughter. We have just been looking over the trousseau."

Sir Herrick nods with the sublime complacency of a married man.

"Bob's a lucky man; but I'm the luckiest of the lot. Oh why didn't Alice come when you asked her?"

Paula is silent for a moment, then she sighs.

"Poor Alice! Rick, dear—"

"Well!" he says, as he unfastens a coil of the golden-hair and holds it up to the light.

"I'm afraid Alice isn't quite happy. There is something in her letter that makes me suspicious. Why didn't she come when you asked her? Rick, I'm afraid Stancy is not—not steady."

"My dear," he says with a smile, "you magnify mole-hills into mountains. If Alice can't keep Stancy steady, no one on the earth can. You can't expect every man to be the model of domestic virtues like Lady Fowles' husband. No, my lady, it is not reasonable. Do you use gold powder for your hair?"

"Nonsense!" says Paula. "You are colour blind. My hair is red; I always told you so, and are you going to sit up all night?"

THE END.

CHAPTER I.

It did not remain with the judge very long. He briefly summed up markedly in favor of the accused, and made some quiet but biting criticisms of the evidence of some of the witnesses for the prosecution.

When he had finished, there was a brief putting together of heads in the jury box, and then the foreman stood up and intimated that they did not wish to retire for deliberation. Whereupon, in answer to the usual questions, he said, with a touch of emotion in his voice:

"We find the accused not guilty, my lord; and we wish to add that, in our estimation, this action ought never to have been brought against the accused."

There was a burst of applause, which instantly sank into silence as the judge raised the feather of his gull pen, as a gesture of reproof, and looked around with a frown on his brow, and just the flicker of a smile crossing his lips.

"The accused is discharged," said the judge, "and I may say that I entirely agree not only with the verdict, but also with the comment which the jury have thought fit to add to it. I mean no reflection on the officers of the crown when I say that, in my opinion, this prosecution ought never to have gone further than the police-court proceedings."

The applause broke out again, and the voice of the usher calling out the next case, and then somewhat superfluously announcing that it would be taken first on the list for the next day, was drowned by a general rustling of draperies, and that indescribable sound which attends the moving of any considerable mass of human beings.

The drama was over. The curtain had fallen at the right moment, and just as it ought to have done on the triumphant vindication of innocence.

Then came congratulations and hand-shaking. The man whose good name had been saved, untarnished, by Kenneth Markham's masterly management of his case, took the young lawyer by both hands and whispered his thanks for saving not only his honor, but his life.

Nevil Jarvis had a few moments before shaken hands with him, and said, with perhaps more warmth than sincerity:

"Congratulations you, Markham. A good case, splendidly won. We had no chance against you. Hope I shall be prosecuting some of our respectable witnesses soon. Then we shan't have you against us, I suppose—eh?"

To which Kenneth replied, with a laugh:

"I don't think so."

Afterward, when the friends of the vindicated man had claimed him, there came the sweetest congratulations of all.

As he went into the passageway, past the jury box, which is on the right-hand side of the seat of judgment as you face it, Mercia Reynolds, the girl of the nut-brown hair and hazel eyes, came to meet him with both hands out, and whispered:

"Oh, how splendid, Kenneth! I knew that his lordship was innocent all the time, but I never knew what villains those other people must be until you had pilloried them in the limelight of full exposure."

He laughed as he took her hand.

"My dear Mercia, it is just as well that the words spoken in a court of law are privileged, or what you have said would certainly give grounds for an action for slander."

plot exists, it is pointed out, the murder of one of the Sinn Fein leaders would not tend to throw water on the fire of the conspiracy. At the moment the whole affair remains sensational and a dark mystery, whose clearing up is rendered doubly difficult owing to the disordered conditions in Ireland. When the police of Cork visited the McCurtan house on Saturday to make enquiries for inquest purposes they were refused admission. The Lord Mayor's body, draped in Sinn Fein volunteer uniform lies in his residence, which is guarded by volunteers. Two hours after the murder a large force of military visited McCurtan's home and searched the room where the body was lying. Thus far the identity of the murderers has not been discovered, nor has any motive for the murder been assigned.

Fatal Collision off Venice

On the evening of March 19, 1914, a small steamer belonging to the Municipal Shipping Company, Venice, coming from Santa Elizabeth di Sido, was struck with terrific force by a torpedo boat steaming at a high speed across the direction taken by the steamer. The weather was cold, and the passengers were below in the saloon; they numbered about eighty men, women and children, who were coming from Sido, where they had been celebrating the feast of St. Joseph. A few escaped by leaping into the sea, but the majority were drowned in the cabin. Naval-Lieut. Bossi, who was amongst the passengers, jumped overboard and gained the torpedo-boat, but when he saw the steamer sinking and many women struggling in the water he jumped in again and attempted to save some of them, but was surrounded by a number of struggling persons, who dragged him down with them and he was drowned. After many hours' work the sunken vessel was raised and in the victims embraced together in a terrific death grip, while others lay where they had fallen. The collision was due to the torpedo-boat, which was towing a heavily-laden lighter; the towing-rope broke, and this increased the speed of the torpedo-boat and rendered a collision inevitable. The German yacht "Hohenzollern," rescued a young Hungarian who was on his honeymoon, but whose wife, to whom he had been married only four days, was drowned. An American lady lost her husband and two children. A young French lady picked up by the steamer "Ferrugio," when somewhat recovered found that her two children had been drowned. The dead numbered over fifty, among them being two English ladies, three Italian officers, and M. Merichinski, the Russian Consul.

Trains are running, but the tramway service has not been resumed. It adds that the fundamental causes of reactionary coup d'etat lie in the unnatural peace of Versailles, a radical amendment of which the manifesto declares to be necessary.

ASSASSINATION CAUSES SENSATION.
LONDON, March 21. Not since the attempted assassination of Viscount French, Lord Lieut. of Ireland, has any Irish outrage of the scores perpetrated caused such a sensation throughout the United Kingdom as the murder of Lord Mayor McCurtan of Cork, early Saturday morning. Reports from Cork indicated that the people decline to attribute the affair to Sinn Fein, and already there is talk of reprisals, which as some put it, may effect the whole country. The McCurtan tragedy comes on the heels of sinister rumors of Sinn Fein plot for another revolution in Ireland at Easter time. If such a Telegraf to-day. During the battle Essen was shelled by artillery in possession of workmen. Government of the city is now in the hands of a "Committee of Action," the despatch adds. A Berlin despatch, Friday night, estimated that 300 persons were killed in the fighting for the possession of Essen.

ABANDONED AT SEA.
NEW YORK, March 20.
The American schooner Jeremiah Smith, of Boston, which left Newport News, March 15th, for Manzanillo, Cuba, with a cargo of coal, was abandoned at sea and sank on March 14th, seven members of the crew reported upon their arrival here to-day on board the American steamship Hatteras from Gibraltar. The men were picked up on March 19th, 250 miles southeast of Sandy Hook. After spending four days in an open boat. The schooner was 34 years old and registered 386 tons.

TURKEY TO GET JUSTICE.
LONDON, March 21.
Premier Lloyd George on Friday discussed the Turkish question with the Indian Caliphate Delegation, headed by Mohammed Ali, who declared that Turkey should have all her pre-war territory restored. The Premier replied, "I do not understand Mr. Mohammed Ali to claim indulgence for Turkey. He claims justice and justice she will get. Austria has had justice, and Germany has had justice, pretty terrible justice. Why should Turkey escape. Turkey thought she had a feud with us. Why did she come in and try to stab us and destroy liberty throughout the world, while we were engaged in this life and death struggle. Is there any reason why we should apply a different measure to Turkey than we have meted out to the Christian communities of Germany and Austria. I want the Mohammedans in India to get it well into their minds that we are not treating Turkey severely because she is Mohammedan. We are applying equally the same principle to her as to Austria which is the greatest Christian community."

RESCUE TRAIN GOT THROUGH.
COBLENZ, March 21.
A special train which left Coblenz Saturday morning to bring out 200 British and American business men reported endangered at Leipzig, where serious disorders have occurred, reached that city at one o'clock this morning without incident.

ADDING TO THE NUMBER.
COBLENZ, March 21.
Three thousand persons were killed in the fighting at Leipzig, before Government troops captured the town on Friday, according to statements made by three American business men, who arrived here to-night from Leipzig, which place they left on Saturday night.

WIPED OFF THE STATE.
OTTAWA, March 21.
The Journal to-morrow will announce that complete demobilization of the Canadian naval organization has been ordered by Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, Minister of Naval Affairs. Demobilization is now in progress, and is being carried out in the naval dockyards of Esquimaux and Halifax, which are being dismantled. The Niobe and Rainbow are to be sold and naval re-organization in above ports disbanded. In addition headquarters at Ottawa, which includes permanent officers and a large staff, is also to be demobilized. Everything in fact is to go with the exception of the naval colleges and about 5 hundred men. The reason for this rather extraordinary order could not be learned to-night. Ballantyne is out of the city and officers of his department refused to discuss the matter.

REVIEW OF THE GERMAN SITUATION.
(By courtesy of Newfoundland Postal Telegraphs.)
Mar. 22, 1920.
Fighting continues at several important centres, between Spartacists and Government troops. At Leipzig, aeroplanes were over the town, one being shot down.
Noske's resignation is not confirmed. Count Bernstorff is said to have been chosen as Foreign Minister. Vorwaerts demands that General Ludendorff and Von Jagow be tried for murder and rebellion, and it is reported that the arrest of Ludendorff has been ordered by the Bauer Government.
The Daily Chronicle correspondent telegraphs that suspicion is merging into the certainty that Ludendorff once again has been the evil genius of Germany and that it was he who was at the back of the revolution. Edward Bernstein told the correspondent that certain facts bearing out this suspicion were already known, and others would probably come to light when Kapp and Laetwits are brought to trial.
The Exchange Telegraph correspondent in Berlin telegraphs that Lord Kilmarnock, British Charge D'Affairs yesterday visited Herr Schiffer and congratulated him on the turn of events. He emphasized the fact that none of the Allies had in anyway co-operated with, or connived at Kapp's coup d'etat. He expressed the opinion that Germany would obtain credit and an outlet for food and raw material once the new Government is established, and will guarantee quiet and order in the land. The old Government has issued a manifesto, signed by Schiffer, promising that extensive precautionary measures will be taken against any repetition of the revolution. The number killed during the fighting is estimated at one thousand. Further press messages state that Communists will not allow railway traffic to be resumed. They have occupied five stations, east of Berlin, and the number of trains is decreasing. Negotiations between Schiffer and the strikers have not yet yielded any result. Strike leaders now insist on the continuance of a general strike until an agreement can be reached. Reports from Kiel state that workers there gained a victory over the soldiers, whom they disarmed. Battleships in harbour hoisted white flags and surrendered to workers. Opening of Ministerial appointments are formally announced.

tary to the Admiralty, is to be Minister of Labour, in succession to Sir Robert Horn who is to be President of the Board of Trade in succession to Sir Auckland Geddes and McCurdy to be Controller of the Ministry of Food, in succession to Roberts. ## Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SENTIMENT OR SENTIMENTALITY?

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine has been accused of being very unsympathetic. The grounds for this accusation are that she fails to sympathize sufficiently with a friend who has recently lost her brother. The accuser, as you may have suspected, is the friend in question.

"She's the hardest thing I ever saw," says the latter. "She never shows the slightest sympathy, just tries to turn the conversation to other things when I talk about Richard, and one night when she came in and found me crying because it was just six months from the last time Richard was home, she never even said a word to comfort me, and her face looked so hard. I don't believe she has a particle of feeling in her."

Now the law of the land demands that the accused shall always have the right to speak for himself or herself, so here goes.

She reminds me of another woman I know who, whenever hymns are being sung, will always ask for a certain one and then begin to weep when it is sung and explain that it was the one her mother asked for on her deathbed.

Sentimentality Walks in Grief. It is the essence of sentimentality that it wallows in grief or emotion of any kind.

Another way to tell sentiment from sentimentality is that sentiment is spontaneous and entirely unself-conscious whereas sentimentality is conscious of itself and always has more or less of an eye on the impression it must be creating on others.

The greatest writers have sentiment in their works, the lesser ones sentimentality. To permit oneself to get the habit of sentimentality is to weaken and cheapen one's power of genuine emotional response.

Beware of sentimentality if you want to be capable of the genuine sentiment that strengthens and sweetens character.

Fads and Fashions.

A hat of dark green straw is faced with pheasant's feathers. Lace hats and frocks to match are seen in the Southern resorts.

Ribbon sometimes constitutes the entire lower part of a tunic. Sleeves are longer, and if they are tight fitting it is even better.

A favorite trimming is white eyelot embroidery applied on taffetas.

Heavy gold tissue lines some of the most charming evening wraps of fur.

Many of the Spring hats are woven of grass cloth in interesting colors.

Trails of bright flowers and fruit make charming hair ornaments for evening.

"Pape's Diapepsin" brings relief almost as soon as they reach the stomach.

"Pape's Diapepsin" by neutralizing the acidity of the stomach, instantly relieves the food souring and fermentation which causes the misery-making gases, heartburn, flatulence, fullness, or pain in stomach and intestines.

"Pape's Diapepsin" helps regulate disordered stomachs so favorite foods can be eaten without causing distress. Costs so little at drug stores.

HUMBLE SERVICE.

I'd rather write in family ink than in the lasting stone of fame; I'd rather for a little time inscribe on human hearts my name. And pass as one who'd smoothed the way for others, and had tried to live Not solely for what he could get, but sometimes for what he could give.

I'd rather fill with little deeds the hours and days and weeks and years. Than say, "In one great shining task the record of my life appears." I'd rather own the poor man's smile of gratitude than to possess A place of honor with the great, and all the glory of success.

"Aim high! Aim high!" the sages shout. "Strike for the goals that lie afar!" And yet that means that you must spur the chance for service where you are. And you must turn your back on them who need your courage and your smile. Spending your strength on distant things which seem to be more worth your while.

He who forgets his own desires, and lets his chance for glory go That he may serve some humbler need, of which the world may never know.

Is greater than the man of fame, and braver than some hero bold— For day by day and year by year his splendid sacrifice is told.

Shott and Nott.

The story of these gentlemen and their duel—a famous one formerly—is revived, and the tale is thus repeated:—

A duel was lately fought in Texas by Alexander Shott and John S. Nott. Nott was shot, and Shott was not. In this case it was better to be Shott than Nott. There was a rumour that Nott was not shot, but Shott avows that he was not, which proves either that the shot Shott shot at Nott was not shot, but that Nott was shot notwithstanding.

It may be made to appear on trial that the shot Shott shot shot Nott, or, as accidents with firearms are frequent, it may be possible that the shot Shott shot shot himself, when the whole affair would resolve itself into its original element, and Shott would be shot and Nott would not.

We think, however, that the shot Shott shot shot, not Shott, but Nott. Anyhow, it is hard to tell who was shot.

Occasionally a black net gown is made over a silver tissue and brightened by a sash of apple green tulle.

Coal and Yet NO Coal!

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I saw by a late Telegram that another seam of coal has been discovered on the property of the Coal Co. Coming at the present juncture, this is great and glorious news,—that is if the discovery be utilized SOON. We have been hearing for years of the presence of immense quantities of coal on the West Coast. With the present coal famine, we need the coal here.

Surely we have brains, energy and initiative enough amongst us to utilize this great boon NOW. If the company cannot develop it themselves, let them sell it to some one who will develop it. A coal mine is not a gamble,—it is a SURE thing,—if the quantity is there as alleged. If there are so many million tons in sight, it is just a question of figuring out. Coal is better than gold now, because you can't buy it for gold in the town to-day. Let someone get to work NOW, and get this coal from where it has been lying for centuries, useless, to this market, where it is so badly needed at present.

We are tired of hearing of the existence of vast quantities of coal, what we want now is someone to deliver the goods. I hope the papers and the Government will take this matter in hand immediately. If we have coal, it will never again be HALF AS VALUABLE as it is NOW.

Yours,
SUFFERER.

March 22, 1920.

As the North Sees It.

(Twillingate Sun.)
A STANDING JOKE.

We used to rave a bit about the Food Control Board of the late Government, and considered it as a joke. In fact, we once had the nerve to write the Chairman of that Board and voice our tale of woe. We got a polite answer in reply—full of platitudes.

Perhaps Food Control Boards can't do anything. If so their appointment is useless, and their expense might be as well saved.

The Squires Govt. Food Control Board does not seem to be producing any greater results than its predecessors. It has just been enquiring into the Milk supply of St. John's, and gravely announces that it "cannot recommend any reduction in the price of milk."

The old F.C.B. did about the same. After enquiries into the price of sugar, butter and other things it always was "unable to recommend any reduction."

What puzzles the outports is that so much attention is paid to the food supplies of St. John's. Apparently whether the outport food supplies go up or down is a matter of no concern to the Food Board.

We had an idea that this was a Newfoundland food board, not a St. John's one. Apparently we were wrong, and the outports must just muddle along as best they can. It seems a trifle hard though, that the outports must pay the expense of governing St. John's. We had an idea that that was a city, with a civic government of its very own.

Not Strong Sections, Either.

Signs seem to point to a political upheaval in government circles before long. We are ready to admit that we are only judging by slight outward manifestations, and the political "ring around the moon" may not bring bad weather for the ship of state—only it looks mighty like it at present.

The Squires government, although with a strong majority, was built in sections. There was the Squires section, the Coaker section and the Warren section.

Material built in sections is sometimes stronger than that built all in one piece. Governments often seem differently constituted, but the glue that holds the sections of the Liberal Reform Party together shows some indications of yielding.

Time alone can tell whether the structure of the L. R. Party will hold; but just as present there is a decided shakiness.

The Claim of Youth.

That modern manners are free and easy does not seem to us a cause to find fault with them. It is part of the desire for self-expression—for getting rid of useless shackles. Their great defect is that they are so often ugly—that they have done away with the dignity and reserve which gave beauty to much of the social life of the past. Those who desire self-expression have to see to it that the self they express is beautiful, and expresses itself beautifully. It may have been prim and stupid of our ancestors to sit straight up on the edge of their chairs, but to sprawl in ugly attitudes in large arm-chairs with a needless display of legs, and a want of thought as to where others are to sit, is not an improvement on past primness. Not to speak in the presence of your elders may have made the social life dull, but to talk and laugh at the top of your voice and to drown all reasonable talk by your noise is equally destructive of real social intercourse.

The fact that young people in these days do feel free to talk to their elders is an immense gain to both sides, and probably nothing has really added ed so much to the pleasantness of ordinary life as the fact that children have ceased to be shy, and that young people are ready to talk, and are agreeable to those older than themselves. If this is to be free and easy we can only be thankful for it. The respect shown to elders should rest upon the sense of their greater experience, or when they are really old upon the recognition of their greater feebleness. It should not be demanded as a right merely because of the addition of a few years in age. We are certainly approaching a real freedom of intercourse between old and young. This must be all to the good, because in such freedom each will be able to give of their best for the good of all. But all freedom must be enjoyed with a remembrance of the rights of others, and of the claims they make upon us either by their weakness or their greater experience. When the desire for freedom leads to self-assertion, when the claim for self-expression makes us aggressive, then manners grow ugly, and social life loses its charm. Dignity, modesty, reserve all have their places by the side of freedom, and those who love and value freedom must see that they pursue it in such a way as to make it seem desirable to all, with its own beauty and its own special charm.—Mrs. Creighton in Glasgow Weekly Times.

The Gang at Tucker's IN A SERIOUS MOOD.

Speeches by The Cute Man and Delaney.

Our meetings at Tucker's are usually bright and cheerful because we are contented with our lot, but on Tuesday night a change came o'er the scene, and the discussion showed that more serious thoughts occupied the attention of the party.
The "Cute Man" spoke of workingmen, of the so-called unity that is supposed to exist between them, and gave it as his opinion that workingmen are united only when they are poor. Let a workman say he, get ahead a bit in the world and we immediately become jealous of him. This fact, says the Cute Man, is as clear as daylight. We have had genuine workers aspire to seats in the House of Assembly on several occasions, and we know the result. We have had professional men who gave their time and abilities to better our condition, who received from us in return very shabby treatment indeed. Real unionism, says the Cute Man, does not in my opinion exist at all. If a man stands up to fight a genuine battle for the workman we come to the conclusion that he has an axe to grind. We are suspicious of him, and we listen to every prate-box word he utters in our ears stories about him to weaken him in our estimation. Little by little, step by step this prate-box gets in his work, and at the very moment when we should show our loyalty to our Champion, thereby strengthening his hand, and making our own position stronger, we abandon him, and cast honours upon those who never did a hand's turn to better our condition.

Tucker, Delaney and Mrs. Tucker listened to the "Cute Man's" oration attentively, and after a few moments complete silence Delaney took the floor. He congratulated the "Cute Man" and said he struck the proper note. We are ever ready, says Delaney to sneer at one of ourselves if he aspires to a seat in the Assembly. We allow the glib tongued politician to fool us every time. This country has produced in my time not more than four public men that can be truthfully styled men of the people. They all fall for the money. First rate fellows while they are preaching to us, but as soon as they get in a position where they can be of use, they seem to abandon those who made them what they are. No country, says Delaney, presents a greater chance for a man of the people than this Country of Ours. But as the "Cute Man" has said we must be loyal to that man or men when we find them. New conditions are bound to come in this country, grave problems have to be tackled, and it remains to be seen if we have the right men now in power to carry out their obligations to the people. An opportunity is now offered and if grasped by those in power will win support of the electorate. Let our new Government, says Delaney, learn a lesson in true patriotism. What is the acquiring of grandeur, and riches, compared with the esteem of one's countrymen. We have young men in the Government to whom we look for great things. Honesty and square dealing above all. Reckless expenditure of public monies is a crime, at all times, but a far greater crime at the present juncture. Economy is the watch word for some time to come. And speaking of economy let the people take the hint also, says Delaney. Money flowed like water for the past five years, and we have created a taste for squandering money that must be checked. This is no idle assertion, says Delaney, no howl of a pessimist, we will need to take stock, as it were, and see just where we stand.
Mrs. Tucker supported the views of the "Cute Man" and Delaney, and said we all need the lesson of Thrift, Economy and Honesty. Legislators and people have all a duty to perform, and now is the time to trim our sails, and put in more ballast, lest we find ourselves unprepared when the brule springs up. It may not spring up at all, we hope it won't, but no one will regret that he put in more ballast.

St. John's Woman Gained 30 Pounds in Few Weeks

Had Given Up Hope Of Ever Being Well—Tanlac Quickly Proved Merit.

The many friends of Mrs. M. Dunphy, who lives at 39 Flower Hill, St. John's, have been much surprised as well as delighted at her greatly improved health, and in a statement which she made to the Tanlac representative recently, she told just how this wonderful change in her condition had come about.
"My illness was caused first of all by the loss of my husband who was steward on the 'Florizel' when she was wrecked. Then in the following July my only son was killed in France in the big drive, and this double loss shattered my health completely. I was a total nervous wreck. For fifteen months I scarcely ever slept for more than an hour at a time, and every night had horrible nervous night-sweats. I had a continuous headache for four months, and severe pains which I was told was sciatica. My stomach refused all solid food and I could get and took a lot of fluids. Before my husband and boy were taken, I used to weigh over two hundred pounds, but I fell away until I began taking Tanlac I only weighed a hundred and twenty pounds or less. I was so weak that my friends were afraid to let me go down town alone. I had the best advice I could get and took a lot of medicine, but it did me no good. I never thought I should be well and strong again.
"I had heard of Tanlac helping a lot of people, and so when the other treatment and medicines failed I thought I would give it a trial. It was a pleasant surprise when after taking two bottles I found myself improving wonderfully. My appetite came back and for the first time in months I began to relish solid food. My nervous condition was greatly relieved and I could sleep better at night. I soon found I was putting on flesh, and now after taking seven bottles I have gained thirty pounds in weight. I am so much stronger that I can now do all my own housework without getting the least bit tired, and in fact I am a different woman in every way. I give you this statement because I am confident that there are many people who would find Tanlac of great benefit."
Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv

You hear much these days about the car of the future.
But who describes it other than that it must be light in weight, fine in quality, enduring, reliable and of superior performance.
The ESSEX has more than one economy appeal. In gasoline, oil, tires and repair cost it is distinctly attractive. And, of course, its performance is now recognized by all motorists. Not many question ESSEX ability to out-perform other cars that it meets.

I AM KEARNEY—THE MAN, the projector of My Store's New Policy. The creator of the iron-bound GUARANTEE that protects every purchaser of my Quality Goods.

FIVE YEARS OF INCREASING SUCCESS IN SELLING QUALITY GOODS!

This is my record. Under my management the old firm of Smyth's earned the reputation of the "QUALITY STORE", a favorite resort for young men. It pleased me to know that I was giving Better Service, Better Value—it pleased me to hear the young men say among themselves, "If it doesn't wear well; if it doesn't bring you back in Quality as much as you paid, bring it back—KEARNEY WILL MAKE IT RIGHT." Yes, I would rather lose than have my customers dissatisfied. And the Young Men who frequent my Store are quick to recognize square dealing. My trade is not the trade of the passing customer. My customers "stick."

BEGINNING MY GREATEST YEAR

I want to make this my First Year of ownership a year filled with great endeavor. I want my young men customers to say of me: "He will make Right; HIS WORD IS HIS BOND." I want the support of every young man who looks for Quality and Style in his Furnishings; and for this I will give Greater Value than any other man in my line—for this I have THE GOODS.

Customers of mine who come often to my Store know how complete my stock is; how critically it is kept.

PONDER OVER THIS! I bought One Year ahead! I bought so heavily, so keenly alive to the probabilities of the future that I have no need to fear that the Spring and Summer Seasons will catch me unprepared; that my customers will have to bear the brunt of any shortsightedness. It is the KEARNEY FIRST spirit again!

AND I HAVE THE WORLD'S BEST GOODS!

Famous Lines of Proven Quality; Latest Styles exploited by manufacturers that Paris Modistes are glad to copy. I have agencies for three Famous Continental Hats. Skeptics who doubt my word—what do you say to this:

BORSALINO'S from Italy, the land of Art and Song.

STETSON'S from America. Stetson Style is Broadway Style.

CHRISTY'S from England. Bond Street welcomes every New Style created by Christy artistes.

Each season the same styles that are new in Sicily, on Broadway, on Bond Street, will be shown in my Store; an item of service that enables my customers to wear the world's newest creations.

THE GUARANTEE.

Let me ask you this: Did you ever bring back to any store an article that was defective, when you believed you had reason for being dissatisfied, and had the article taken back without argument and the matter made "right"? This is the KEARNEY FIRST way. When I guarantee anything I sell; when I give you my word, it is a guarantee that will protect you till the article has given full value for the price paid. Know then that MY WORD IS MY BOND.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—May I ask the courtesy of space in your columns to reply to the address of Dr. Blackall at the Casino Theatre on Friday last. Dr. Blackall is a B. A. of London University, has been for many years a teacher, and is now Supt. of Anglican Education for Newfoundland. Remembering, then, that he is a man of such great scholarly ability and experience, and that he holds such a responsible position in connection with the young life of the Colony, it is very surprising that he should give utterance to such foolish twaddle as he palmed off on the very gullible audience last Friday. Dr. Blackall well knows what fearful hindrances to educational work are the drinking habits of the parents, and I am all the more astonished to find him actually pleading for drink in the home, he, the one man whose duty it is to see to the removal of difficulties from the path of education, actually proposing to reintroduce that which has always been its greatest obstacle. And, forsooth, he pleads for it in the name of freedom, and he says, "The nation that tampers with the freedom of its citizens, sinks morally, physically and nationally." Let us see.

Was it not interference with the freedom of the citizens when years ago in England laws were passed (1) prohibiting the sending of little boys up house chimneys in order to clean them, (2) prohibiting the employment of women down mines, (3) shortening the hours, increasing the wages, and bettering the hygienic conditions in factories and workshops for those who were employed there? Did it not interfere with the freedom of the citizen slave-owner when slavery was abolished, or with that of the shipowner when the Pillsoll line became law? And what about the Children's Charter, passed in England a few years ago, under which tobacco might not be sold to children under 16; children under the same age might not be taken inside the doors of a public house while the parents had a drink; and limits were set as regards ages and hours in which children might be sent on the streets to sell papers or do errands for tradesmen? Again, what about the sacred liberty of the subject when bye-laws were made preventing spitting in trams, buses, stations and even the public streets? And what of the interference with the freedom of the subject in laws relating to the sale of poisons and drugs and to the inspection of the food of the people?

Now, does Dr. Blackall know anything of all this? Why of course he does. He has read history and the story of social reform and economics, and he knows full well that the freedom about which he raved on Friday last is interfered with every day of our lives, whether we like it or not, in the interests of the whole community. No, it is not freedom that Dr. Blackall wants,—he has that already, just as far as the State thinks it wise to allow him,—it is license he is after, license to indulge in a habit which always degrades and never uplifts, which gives temporary merriment at the expense of real happiness, and a fleeting sensation of joy at the cost of the sacrifice of home comforts. "Oh, no!" and I see Dr. Blackall raise his hands in pious horror, "we only wish to enable reputable citizens to obtain periodically, by a rationing system, limited quantities of alcoholic beverages for their personal consumption." Why! has human nature altered? Does the same beverage have a different effect when taken in the home than in the saloon, and is it a fact that humans have so far conquered their desires that they can now take just so much and then stop? Or, rather, is this but the thin end of the wedge, the opening of the little door in the sluice gates, through which shall eventually rush that terrible stream of intemperance which shall overcome the temperance of the young life of this Colony?

But again, Dr. Blackall says that drink means increased rather than decreased production, as so many employers of labor claim. Ah, let us see. Some eight years ago I spent a fortnight in West Hurtlepool, and a considerable part of my time was passed in the shipyards of Lord Furness there. The evidence of the manager of the blacksmithing department of those big yards was to the effect that their production was always kept down by the drinking habits of some of the employees. Again, why was it necessary to establish the Liquor Control Board to deal especially with the Carlisle District of munitions during the war? Only because the week-end drinking meant a loss of time and a shortage of munitions for our boys at the front. Go to any of the great leaders of industry, Lord Leverhulme, for instance, and their unanimous verdict always is that drink and decreased production always go together.

I regret very sincerely that one who belongs to my own profession, is a London B. A., and a Supt. of Education, should consider himself so little worthy as to appeal to the baser passions of those who are never prepared to forego appetite for the sake of humanity; but I regret still more that he should set the teachers and children whom he superintends such a deplorable example of great abilities misapplied, great opportunities neglected, and great ideals despised.

Apologising for intruding so much upon your valuable space, and with many thanks for your courtesy, I am, Mr. Editor,

Yours faithfully,
T. F. BERESFORD,

Talks by Tiberius.

THAT DISMAL DWELLING - WHO WANTS IT!

"The Workhouse of the Smallburgh Union, Norfolk, has been offered for sale by auction. Nobody wants it." Soon after I had enclosed my last article in an envelope to forward it, I took up an English paper, "The Churchman" to read, and almost at once my eyes fell upon the advertisement which I have quoted at the head of this "talk." As I followed my mind to roam freely, the question came unbidden: Suppose we put up for sale by auction, the dismal dwelling known as the Poor Asylum, situated in St. John's West, would anybody want to buy it? By the way, I have stated that it is in St. John's West, but if the City continues to grow, as it has grown for the past ten years, the Poor Asylum, years ago called by a leading statesman, "Newfoundland's Disgrace," will be in the centre of the city rather than in the West End.

I feel certain that once the people of St. John's really see the Poor Asylum, as it can be seen by anyone who has eyes to see; and it is seen by anyone who knows what is being done for the poor, destitute, in other cities, of who knows anything at all of citizenship, such a big roar of disapproval will go up to high heaven that those in authority will immediately take steps to build a new and a modern home for the unfortunate people who must in their latter days, throw themselves upon the mercy of the "Parish." I believe in the soundness and reliability of the public conscience. Once it is awakened nothing is so mighty, for among human agencies. My endeavour is to awaken the public conscience on the subject and disgrace of our Poor Asylum. Last week I described it as I saw it from the outside; next week

I may describe it as I have seen it from the inside. This week I desire to expatiate on the principle involved in the question: "Who wants it," i.e., "Newfoundland's Disgrace?" I have reason to believe that nobody wants either the life or the building, any more than the people of Smallburgh wanted their "Workhouse." A certain man kept hens in a small house which was built like a Pyramid. The hens lodged there for several years. So small was the house and of such a queer shape that it could not be well cleaned. Consequently the odour and stink, which gathered about the house got into the wood of which it was made. There came a day when the man took pity on those hens and built them a large, roomy, and cleanable, house, (that is my own word.) He began to demolish the old house, but though he wore a kind of gas mask, white doing it, and although by force of sheer doggedness he laid it flat and in reasonably small sections on the earth, yet he had to call in the Sanitary Board to remove the noxious pile. Wood was very expensive; even fire wood had a great value; yet he was glad to give that wood away; he did not want it and he did not know of anyone who did. He dare not even take it into his home to burn it; so great would have been the smell. So on and so on, ad infinitum, ad nauseam. "Nobody wanted it!"

FIRST PREMISE.
I have said: I do not think that any body would really want our Poor Asylum, even if it were up for sale by auction. I have reasons for that statement. At least that is my first premise.

SECOND PREMISE.
Since, "I am my brother's keeper,"

since the "Golden Rule" is a Divine law and a necessary law; then we are not justified in placing "Our Relatives," where we don't want to go, or to house "Our Relatives" in any shack that we wouldn't buy at an auction. We like nice homes, we need them, light, heat, cleanliness, comfort, these things not only contribute to life, they are life. Let us do unto others as we would that they should do to us. Or to give a free rendering of Kant; Let us so act, that we would wish that our conduct become universal law. Result, a brighter and better world and so far as the Poor Asylum people go, a new home, a home at once economical; hygienic; roomy.

The old old story of Cain and Abel teaches us that in answer to the question: "Am I my brother's keeper?" there can be only one right answer: "AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?" Abel lay on the green grass, and earth's innocent flowers shuddered under the dew of blood. "And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said,--(For the first murderer is also the first liar.)--"I know not; "And he insolently added: "For the first murderer is also the first egotist." "Am I my brother's keeper?" But the Lord sweeps aside the daring falsehood, the callous question, "And He said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground, and now thou art cursed." And Cain fled to the land of exile with the brand of Heaven's wrath on his soul and on his brow.

A careful study of that old story, a story which has been found, in some form or other in all histories, a story as old as man, a careful study of it cannot but make us think. We need to ask the question: "Am I my brother's keeper?" The true and high within us will immediately answer in the affirmative; the false and low will answer "no." A vast multitude with correct ideas but incorrect moral conduct, will give a lip answer "yes," but go on as if they had said "no." That vast multitude is the sickly comforting element of which a large part of the human race is made up.

"Until men almost learn to scold So few are any better off."

In the story of the good Samaritan we have another type of mind in the quizzical sneering Lawyer who raised the question: "And who is my neighbour? I.e., Who is my brother?"

EVERYBODY IS OUR BROTHER.

All men are our brothers; all who sin, all who suffer, all who lie, murdered, like Abel, sick and wounded, like the poor traveller by the way, where they have been left by the world's thieves and murderers, where they have been left by the frosty hearted (Christian,) (so called,) or by the scupulously religious Levite, on the hot and dusty wayside of the world. Yes all men are our brothers; and when we injure them by lies, which cut like a sharp razor, by sneers, by insinuations, by intrigues, by slander and calumny, by hatred, by malice, and by thoughtless uncharitableness, by want of heart, by lust of gain, by neglect, by absorbing selfishness, we are inheritors of the spirit of the first murderer, if not of his guilt. If we confine our thoughts to those who need our service most, if we allow kindly charity to awaken in us a vision of duty not done or ill done, we will take into our hearts those poor people in the Poor Asylum of St. John's West, and call them brothers and sisters, and treat them as such. Among them lies a duty, a great sphere for the noblest and best exercises. We neglect to do our duty there at our peril.

THE GUESTS OF THE STATE.

We are constantly told by callous persons what a crime it is to give to the poor. Granted we always need to be discreet in our alms giving, but here are no beggars, they are the guests of the State and the State is trying to give them a home and food and clothing. Not trying very hard perhaps, yet it is the burden and privilege of the State to try and to succeed. It is high time that we had finished with our verbal postures, our sickly futility and hysteric gush; there is an insistent call for action, big action, immediate action. We have not quite done our duty to the world of the wretched when we have proved to our satisfaction that men whose passionate love for their fellow men has reclaimed thousands of the Arabs on our streets, and preached the gospel to the lowest of the poor, are contemptible fanatics.

Is it, indeed, the case that as we lol in our luxurious armchairs we not only need give nothing to help these efforts, but can even afford to look down from the whole height of our paity puny conventionalism on workers who have more of the love of God and man in their little fingers than any ordinary thousand of us have in our whole carcasses. These men of the "love of God and their fellows," are far higher in the just measure of man than the men of thin respectability and smug religiosity who sneer at them, even though they may be fanatical. The fanatics who love and recognize men as brothers, they do the deeds that mark true brotherhood. They rescue the perishing, care for the dying; they heal the broken hearted; they have wrought and fought, and toiled and sweated and bled and prayed and suffered, and are the salt of the earth.

LOWELL'S PARABLE.

James Russell Lowell, was a poet, a statesman, a man of the world. He told a Parable:

"Said Christ the Lord, "I will go and see,"
How men, my brethren believe in Me."

The chief priests and rulers and kings welcomed Him with State and pompous services:

"Great organs surged through arches dim
Their jubilant floods in praise of Him;
An in church and palace and judgment hall
He saw His image high over all.
But still, wherever his steps they led
The Lord in sorrow bent down His head;
And from under the heavy foundation stones
The Son of Mary heard bitter groans.
Have ye founded your thrones and altars then.
On the bodies and souls of living men?
And think ye that building shall endure
Which shelters the noble and crushes the poor?"

In vain they pleaded their customs and their religious rites.

"Then Christ sought out an Artisan,
A low-browed, stunted, haggard man,
And a motherless girl whose fingers thin
Pushed from her faintly, want and sin.
These, led He, in the midst of them
And as they drew back their garments
hem
For fear of defilement, "So here" said He,
"The images ye have made of Me."

The moral of the Parable is evident, very evident. To give it a local application. There are those that live and die in misery and shame on the borderland of "destitution." Little children wall and starve and perish, and soak and blacken soul and sense, and the most that we do for them is to throw an odd dime or two at them at certain seasons of the year. There are those in the Poor Asylum living in a building dark and unclean. Old and young, clean and unclean, (until they all become unclean,) sane and insane, (till death do them part.) Living in halls between walls which are soaked and steamed in the fumes and gases and grases, the accumulations of many years. What are we going to do about it? Say a little prayer and then set in our comfortable home, in snug religious security and peace, (false) of mind. If we do we shall forget all about it, only until painfully reminded by the force of retributive law, and then pay for our shameful neglect. If we neglect them they will be left uncared for, but our responsibility is all the greater. It is vain for us to ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?" we; know or we ought to know our responsibility; let us face it.

CONCLUSION.

Our first premise was:—Nobody wants the Workhouse. Nobody wants to live there. But people are living there; have to live there.

Our second premise was:—"I am my brother's keeper" and have no right to place a brotherman where I would not wish to be placed, even if circumstances were against me. Our conclusion is:—Therefore, get busy, remove that unsightly block, that menace to our city life, that reflection upon our civil righteousness; Remove it; burn it up; build a real home for the poor people; we may have to go there to live ourselves some day. What you do, do quickly.

Opened by Mistake.

It isn't at all likely that Clyde D. Davis is going to forget the love-tap he received from a Missouri mule about six months ago. Davis applied for enlistment at a Marine Corps recruiting station at Houston, Tex., recently, and, on being stripped, disclosed a scar about six inches long on the left side of his abdomen. He explained that after the kick from the beast he had been operated on for a supposed ruptured spleen. The operating surgeon had made the wrong diagnosis, however, and found Davis' spleen was in good working order. Davis went to a tattooist, and now he wears above the scar in large letters the words, "Opened by Mistake."

The Origin of Hodson's Horse.

W. S. R. Hodson was born at Malmore Court, near Gloucester, on March 19, 1821, and after being educated at Rugby and Cambridge he entered the East India Company's service as a soldier. Joining the 2nd Grenadiers, he was engaged in the Sikh war and was present at the battles of Mudki, Ferozshah, and Sohraon. In 1847 he was adjutant of the Corps of Guides, with whom he led an arduous life on the frontiers of India. On May 10, 1857, the Indian Mutiny having broken out at Meerut, and soon after at Delhi, Hodson was ordered to raise and command a new regiment of irregular horse. This body was known as Hodson's Horse and no regiment did so much towards saving our Indian Empire. It was present at the siege of Delhi and had an important share in the capture of that city on Sept. 20, 1857. On the following day Hodson obtained permission to pursue the King of Delhi. Accompanied by only fifty troopers, he found the king in Humayoon's tomb, outside the city and took him from the midst of thousands of natives and led him back to Delhi a captive. The next day Hodson, with a hundred troopers returned to Humayoon's tomb, where the princes of the royal house of Delhi still were, and obtained their surrender. He was taking them to Delhi when a crowd of many thousand natives threatened to rescue them, whereupon Hodson took a carbine from one of his men and shot the prince one after the other. Thus he put an end to those who might have become a great rallying centre for the mutineers. After this exploit Hodson and his Horse saw much hard fighting in various places. On Mar. 11, 1858, when his regiment was before Lucknow, Hodson looked into a dark room and was shot by an enemy concealed within. He died the next day and was buried at Lucknow. He was one of the bravest and most active and able soldiers who helped to save India in those critical times.

Bermudians Angry at U. S. A.

Evidently the natives of Bermuda are quite satisfied to remain citizens of the British Empire. They are hot under the collar over the proposal of Senator Kenyon to buy their islands from Great Britain. The Colonist and Daily News editorially denounced it as grossly impertinent, and as a proof of appalling ignorance of the British attitude regarding indivisibility of the Empire.

What Do You Think of This?

A grocer whom we asked to buy Del Monte Baked Beans said: "I have a lot of beans in stock which I can't sell and I won't buy any more until I get rid of what I have." Don't you think this grocer is unwise? He proposed to send his customer to his competitor for Del Monte Beans. He admits that his customers won't buy the beans he has, he admits that they would buy Del Monte Beans if he had them in stock, and consequently when his customers want Del Monte Beans they will go elsewhere to get them. What will happen to this grocer if his customers buy ALL their groceries elsewhere?

Every Hat we are showing carries a message of the nearness of Spring. The new styles are not so much the change-of-the-season which always comes with the passing of the Winter as they are a complete change in every feature of model and material. With the war only a far-off echo, and the surety of peace and prosperity growing greater every day, the fashions of the coming season show a re-awakening of the desire for the beautiful, the youthful, and the gaily expressed creations of joyful design to which the makers of this Spring's millinery have responded with lavish use of dainty decorative handwork, and the delightful beauty in colourings and rich materials.

Coerced by Governess With Gun.

What has the appearance of becoming a sensational case had its inception last week in the Montreal police court, when Mrs. Emelle Kent, 64 years of age, former governess to Miss Susanne Heyessens, daughter of a wealthy Belgian lace manufacturer and brewer of malts and wines, with a well-established business at LaPanne, Belgium, appeared on a charge laid by the daughter of the manufacturer. The allegation lodged against the aged ex-governess is that on February 7, 1920, she attempted and succeeded in her purpose of compelling the Belgian millionaire, to sign documents whereby the governess obtained laces, dresses and other articles valued at 65,000 francs. The forcing of the signature was alleged to have been carried out under threats to kill, and the complainant avers that a loaded revolver was held at her head to make her sign the documents.

The Power of Public Opinion.

There is a warning for Trade Unionists in the failures of the two general railway strikes which have occurred in England and in France within the past few months. One would think,
 looking at the matter on the surface,
 that of all forms of industry a general strike on a railway would be most likely to succeed. The whole country depends for its functioning upon transportation, and this can be conducted only by men of experience, some of them highly trained. So when they go out on strike it would seem to be impossible to do anything other than concede their demands and get them back to work.

But that is not what happened in England a few months ago. The whole community turned in to assist in running the trains, operating the stations, and carrying on the work of the railways. In a very few days trains were running with some regularity, although every employee on the English railway had quit work simultaneously. It was an amazing demonstration of the competence of the general public to take care of themselves and their own interests. Men and women joined in reorganising the transportation service of the country, and while there was little hope of them doing it efficiently, they were able to give a service acceptable under the circumstances.

Last week the same thing happened in France. All classes of people gave their services to keep the railways running, while the disheartened strikers stood watching, laides and professional men doing the work necessary to keep things going. All this only goes to prove that there is a limit beyond which the most closely organized body of men cannot go. Furthermore, that to win a strike the men must have public sympathy behind them. Public sentiment is the most powerful force in the democracy, and it is always on the side of the working man, if he can show that he is inadequately paid or unfairly treated.

In the past the International Trades Union movement has been aware of the absolute necessity of pursuing policies that would secure the favor of the general public. Thus arbitration is made preliminary to a strike by some of the International unions. In other ways the leaders of these bodies have shown regard for the public interest which has won for them the confidence of practically all classes of the community. We are confident that it is in this direction continued success and improvement in wages and conditions is to be achieved. The public is too big to be taken by the throat and forced to do things that it believes to be unjust. But those who take public opinion by the hand and secure its co-operation will invariably succeed.—The Sentinel.

Aunt Sally Ann
Has Something to Say.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—I thought I would write you a few lines, just to let you know how things are getting along in Fortune Bay, since the people used Libby's Mustard and swallowed Mr.
 Warren. It was the mustard that made him palatable, but oh! so indigestible now.
 The first thing we wanted we could not get, and that was regular mails, because of the uselessness of the modern liner now doing the Fortune Bay service. Other local services are in a similarly bad shape and we don't know where we are. Libby's Mustard and Warren did not make a good combination after all. The hot stuff during the election didn't last.
 The other night as I was going to bed, a thought struck me and I said to my old man, "Did you vote for Warren last fall?" "NO, I did not,"
 says he. "That's all right, then," says I, "for if you did you'll have to go somewhere else to sleep this blessed night." Anyway I afterwards discovered that he did not vote at all,
 which to say the least is cowardly.
 Just as I was falling off to sleep that same night, I fancied I heard a great shouting outside the house.
 "Here comes Warren's train," and I was just going to say "God bless little Willie," when the old man grabbed me by the arm and hollered, "Sally Ann, who are you kicking?" When I came to myself, it was but one of my usual bad dreams.

Now, Mr. Editor, all I hope is, that none of us will get the "flu," as it is going strong this way, and with best regards, I remain,
 Yours truly,

Cushion Sole Boots.

If comfort in a Shoe is worth anything, it can be obtained here.
It is a curious fact that nine-tenths of the Men and Women suffer with sore feet. It's also true that nine-tenths of the trouble is caused by the hard insoles not conforming to the foot. We have Comfort Shoes that never fail to bring Comfort to Troubled Feet.
The insoles are covered with fine felted lamb's wool, covered with fine calfskin. The foot settles into it naturally, stops irritation and friction, no breaking-in, easy the first minute.
Try a pair of our Comfort Shoes and you'll be convinced. We've a size and width for every foot that comes.

FOR WOMEN at . . . . $4.25, $6.50, $9.50 to $13.50
FOR MEN at . . . . . $10.50 to $20.00
