A QUEEN UNCROWNED

—OR—

THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XIX.

He rang the bell as he spoke, and gave the necessary commands, and then arose to divest himself of his dressing gown, and don the coat and pants of outdoor life, while Lord George Austrey went of whistling "Hear Me, Norma," to make a few alterations in his outer robe also (if the expression be allowable). How the sad, plaintive air recalled Fontelle and Jaquette to Disbrow!

Next morning, at the earliest possible hour that fashion would permit, two young peers of the realm, in saffron morning costume, "got up," as Lord Austrey complacently remarked, "regardless of expense," placed their patent leather boots on the aristocratic doorstep of the Tremain mansion. A porter, quite as aristocratic as the doorstep, admitted them to a sumptuous drawing-room, and left them to themselves.

"I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls," hummed Lord Austrey; "silence and solitude this. I wonder how long Miss Norma will keep us waiting."

Scarcely had he spoken when the door opened, and a short, roll-about little woman, all smiles and dimples, came in.

"My dear Lord Earncliffe, welcome home! we were all very sorry indeed, to hear of your loss, but such things must be expected in his life. Good-morning, Lord George, it is quite an age since I have seen you. What have you been doing with yourself lately?"

"Rusticating at Disbrow Park, Mrs. Tremain, admiring the beauties of nature, and all the rest of it, you know," answered that young gentleman.

"And leaving all the young ladies to wear the willow, you naughty boy," said Mrs. Tremain, who was a distant relative of Lord George's, and privileged to talk to him as she pleased. "Positively at Mrs. Desmond's card party the other night, they were every one asking for you, and went feebly about, like so many drooping lilies, when they heard you had left."

town. It was heartrending, I assure you!"

"Really now; I wasn't aware I was such a lady-killer. I must endeavor to counteract my many fascinations for the future, I see, in mercy to the tender sex."

"You are hardly looking so well as when I saw you last, my lord," said Mrs. Tremain, turning to Disbrow. "You are quite pale and thin. Do you not think so, George?"

"All the more interesting, Mrs. Tremain. Young ladies admire that sort of thing, I have heard. Let him keep on a low diet for a fortnight or so, and read the 'Sorrowful War' for an hour every day, together with a small dose of 'Paradise Lost,' and I'll bet my diamond ring against a ducat, that by the end of that time he'll be able to play the 'Starved Apothecary,' and have every female woman in Bartley and Grosvenor Squares, not to speak of Piccadilly and the West End, over head and ears in love with him."

"Thank you," said Disbrow. "I had rather be excused. I hope Miss Macdonald is well, Mrs. Tremain?"

"Quite well—she will be here in a moment. How did you enjoy your visit to America, my lord?"

"Very much."

"How is Mr. De Vere? I knew him when we were both younger than we are now, and we were great friends. You visited him, of course?"

"Yes, madam; I spent some weeks with him. He is very well."

"And you really liked America? It is not much like England, I suppose. It must be a strange country, I think, where all classes are on an equality, negro slaves and all. Dreadfully barbarous, I think. I shouldn't like it at all."

Before Disbrow could reply, the door opened, and Norma Macdonald, the object of all their schemes and plottings, entered—the fair fiancée of Lord Earncliffe.

She was tall and slight, and peculiarly graceful in form, with a complexion of snowy whiteness, unremoved by the faintest trace of color, save in the full, rounded lips. Her hair was of a bright golden hue, and was worn in a pretty silk net, something like the present fashion; but instead of the blue eyes that should have accompanied that pearly face and pale-gold hair, her eyes were large, lustrous, and intensely dark. The fair hair and complexion she had inherited from her Scotch father; the dark eyes and romantic nature, from her tall and giddy French mother. A dress of dark blue silk, set off to the best advantage her peculiar style of beauty; and very lovely and very graceful indeed she looked—so much so, that Lord Austrey wondered inwardly at his friend's insensibility, and felt that a prize like this was well worth even his while to try for.

Death Calls Infrequently in Quiet English Village

PICKWORTH, England, Sept. 26 (A.P.)—This little village in the smallest county of England, with only 150 inhabitants, contains four people of over 70 years of age, five over 80 and two over 90. Their ages total about 900 years.

In one cottage where a couple have lived for 63 years and brought up 13 children, there has not been a death for over 50 years, and in five adjoining cottages only eight people have died in 56 years. The village lies in a sleepy hollow four miles from a railway station.

CHARITY.

I took a bowl of tea to Mrs. Jane O'Chee. The dame was poor and old, her hills were manifold; I said: "She oft complains of fierce rheumatic pains; no loving ones are near to hand her words of cheer; her sons are all in jail, her life is flat and stale; 'twill brighten up the life of this poor lone some wife, and ease the load she bears, to know that someone cares, and she will smile once more when I come to her door with my large can of tea, as kindly as can be." I hastened down the track that led me to her shack, and handed her the drink; she stipped, and said: "I think this is the punkiest tea I ever poured in me! It's made of moldy hay; oh, take your can away!" Discouraged, I returned to where the home fires burned. A smile is all one needs to pay for kindly deeds; but when I take a pie to some poor stricken girl, she says the crust is tough, the filling cheap grade stuff. And when I take a hat to one who's busted flat, he says he never did behold so fierce a lid. Discouragement arrives to chill our helpful lives, but we must still endure, and so and so the poor. And so I say, "Take a drink, when bearing home the dish; 'twould squall want in town, and one must go his round, though ingrates may abound; I'll take a crock of soup to poor old Gaffer Goop, a porringer of mush to hungry Hiram Hush, a pannikin of suds, a bundle of old drus, six soft boiled eggs or eight, to some poor luckless skate."

WALT MATSON

Disbrow aroused the old lady by some gay compliment, and Lord George began chatting with Norma—drawing her out, as he afterward informed Disbrow, "to see what she was made of."

"And so you have been rambling all summer, too, Miss Macdonald, like our friend here? While he was doing the savage tribes of North America, you were roving through the land of kilts and porridge, 'o'er the muir among the heather!'"

"Come, my lord, speak respectfully of the land of rivers and mountains. Remember, I am a staunch Scotch lassie."

"Oh, your nationality is not likely to be mistaken, while you are called Miss Macdonald. By the way, is Mr. Macdonald in town?"

"No—papa has gone over to Boulogne on business for a few weeks."

"All right," thought Lord George; "the coast is clear—but faith! I begin to fear the young lady is no such easy prize as I thought her."

"And you have been away, too—have you not?" asked the young lady.

"Oh, only out to Disbrow Park! Splendid place for doing the dolce far niente, as Earncliffe calls it. What does that mean, Miss Macdonald? It's a regular Castle of Indolence, where the sun shines from one's eyes and to the other, and the very dogs are too lazy to bark."

"Indeed? I hope you have not caught the infection, my lord!"

Before Lord Austrey could indignantly repudiate any such notion, Mrs. Tremain, who had been earnestly conversing with Disbrow, exclaimed:

"Oh, I am certain Norma knows! Norma is that portfolio of Emily's in your boudoir? As Lord Earncliffe has just come from America, I want to show him that American scene you and Emily were trying to finish yesterday."

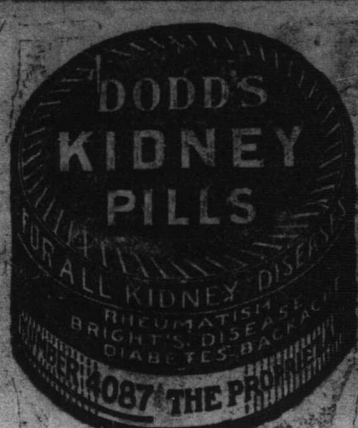

"My dear aunt!" exclaimed the lady, rising in evident alarm.

"Nonsense! nonsense! My dear lord, she is so bashful about such things, you would never know how well she can draw, if I did not show you. I will go and find it."

For one moment Miss Macdonald stood as if about to follow after her; but meeting the strange eye of Disbrow, she relinquished her design, and sank back in evident agitation on the sofa.

Conservatives Promise if Elected to Protect Home Industries

Election in Germany will not Interfere
With Reparations Plan.—Admiral Scott's
Ashes to be Buried at Sea.

BRITISH INDUSTRIES WILL BE PROTECTED.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

The Conservative party, if it is returned to power in the general election next week, will reimpose the McKenna duties. If Trades Union leaders ask for such action, Sir Will Townsend stated to-day "in order to give some fairness between our people and the Belgian and German nations." He added, however, that prospective duties would not be reimposed until Trade Union leaders asked for such a step to protect them against underpaid continental labour.

GERMAN ELECTIONS DEC. 7th.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.

The German general election will be held on December 7th, it was definitely announced to-day.

LEAGUE SPECIAL SESSION.

GENEVA, Oct. 21.

The special session of the Council of the League of Nations, convoked to take up the controversy between Great Britain and Turkey over the Iraq boundary, will open at Brussels on Monday, it is officially announced to-day. Former Premier Briand will attend for France, Premier Branting for Sweden, Foreign Minister Benes for Czechoslovakia, and Signor Orsini for Italy. The Council has not yet succeeded in naming the special frontier committee of three impartial persons, appointment of which was authorized with the consent of the Turkish and British Governments at last session. It is reported that the Turks are dissatisfied with the preliminary sessions of the Council and do not approve of them, although League officials declare that the dispute seems closer to settlement. Considerable interest has been aroused here by the announcement that the British fleet is mobilizing at Malta, and by reports that arrests by the Turkish authorities of Greeks in Constantinople have been made, the latter information causing some uneasiness.

COMMUNISTS DISORDERS.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

Many election meetings last night were marked by scenes of rowdiness, and some of the meetings were broken up by disorderly crowds. A meeting called by Conservatives in North Kensington, London, was practically taken possession of by young men wearing red ties and red rosettes. These began singing the "Red Flag" the instant the Conservative candidate for North Kensington began to speak and uproar ensued. The men in charge called in police. The presence of the police during the remainder of the meeting had a quieting effect but they were not called in early enough and the Conservatives had little opportunity to redeem the time lost. The meeting closed with Conservatives singing the National Anthem and other singing the "Red Flag" both sides at the highest range of their voices.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BUDGET.

TORONTO, Oct. 21.

The announcement made yesterday regarding Budget receipts for the Presbyterian Church in Canada up to September 30th, stated the sums received totalled $433,423 or a sum only $1,669 short of the amount received by the church up to the same date a year ago. Disbursements for the Presbyterian Church up to September 30th, totalled $1,017,593.

MANCHUS CLAIM SUCCESSES.

MUKDEN, Oct. 21.

Manchurian troops have occupied the southern half of Shanhaiwan on the Chihli-Manchurian border, the town being almost surrounded, according to information received here. Intense fighting is proceeding in Shanhai-Kwan. The Peking Government is defending the steep hill in the northwest section of the city against repeated assaults. Manchurians hold the railway station, but the railway cannot be used as the Government men have blocked the line by filling the cut through the great wall with huge blocks of stone. A communiqué issued to-day says Manchurian airplanes bombed the Government warship anchored off Shanghai-Kwan.

CANADIANS RETURNING.

OTTAWA, Oct. 21.

Canadians to the number of 27,486 returned to Canada from the United States during the first half of the present fiscal year, according to Immigration Department figures. Of this number 23,141 were Canadian born citizens, 2,633 were British subjects, who had acquired domicile in Canada and later moved to the United States, and 1,713 were naturalized Canadian citizens.

A FUND TO KEEP MURDERERS IN CONFINEMENT.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.

Plans for a trust fund that may be used after his death to oppose any efforts to free Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, have been announced by Jacob Franks, father of the boy they killed.

PRINCE'S DEPARTURE DELAYED.

MONTREAL, Oct. 21.

The Prince of Wales caught a slight chill yesterday while dining to hounds with the Montreal Hunt Club. On medical advice His Royal Highness has postponed his departure from Montreal until to-morrow night.

SWITZERLAND OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

GENEVA, Oct. 21.

£1,500,000, a portion of the $200,000,000 Dawes plan loan to Germany, which was offered to the public to-day was subscribed several times over according to Swiss bankers. The books were to have closed to-morrow.

ADMIRAL WISHES TO BE BURIED AT SEA.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

The remains of the late Admiral Sir Percy Scott, noted naval authority, who died last week, will be buried at sea in accordance with his wish. After the cremation of the body to-morrow, the ashes will be conveyed to Portsmouth on Thursday, taken 20 miles out to sea by a cruiser, from which they will be given into the keeping of the sea with full naval honors.

GERMANY'S ELECTIONS.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.

Dissolution of the Reichstag and the advent of a new parliament in no way endangers the fulfillment by Germany of the London agreement on the Dawes reparation plan. Chancellor Marks told the press. Although the political complexion of the new Reichstag is wholly conjectural at this hour the Chancellor is convinced that the election, which has been officially set for December 7th, will retain a sufficient number of supporters of the Dawes plan, and of the foreign and internal policies of the present Government, to ensure the construction of a workable coalition.

TONG WAR IN MEXICO.

GUAYMAS, Sonora, Mex., Oct. 21.

Five persons, including a policeman, were killed at Santa and Sonora, as the result of a Tong war there, according to reports received here to-day.

WILL ADVANCE CREDITS TO SOVIET.

MOSCOW, Oct. 21.

The Soviet Russian Commissar for Finance, M. Sokolnikov, announced to-day before the All Russian Parliament, now in session in the Kremlin, that despite the fall of the British Labour Government, British bankers, with the support of certain United States financial institutions, have agreed to advance Soviet Russia extensive commercial credits.

A GREATER THAN ZR-3.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 21.

Plans to construct a zeppelin airship of 5,000,000 cubic feet, twice as large as the ZR-3, were announced to-day by Paul Litchfield, Vice-President and Gen. Manager of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation. The ship will be designed especially for trans-Atlantic service. Mr. Litchfield stated.

Working plans are to be started immediately upon the arrival of Dr. Karl Arnstein, chief of designers. He is expected to leave Germany in two weeks with a staff of twelve.

Getting Rich by Getting Hurt

INGENUOUS FRAUDS ON INSURANCE COMPANIES.

"What do you think your left hand is worth?" said an insurance official to a "Tit-Bit" man, who replied promptly, "It is beyond price."

"Well," continued the official, "plenty of people are willing to lose their left hand for a comparatively small sum. A colleague of mine, while canvassing a commercial traveller, mentioned a case in which a man was toyed with a pistol, when it went off, with the result that he had to have his left hand amputated."

"Now, what actually happened was this. The man was ordered abroad, and he did not want to go. So, after taking out accident policies with a number of companies, he deliberately wounded himself and received heavy compensation, notwithstanding that some of the offices refused to pay. "Within a month the commercial traveller had lost his left hand through playing with a loaded pistol and we had to pay him several hundred pounds!"

Betrayed By A Confederate.

"In another case some offices discovered, after they had paid for the loss of a left hand, that the 'victim' had been living on insurance companies for years. I once met a man, too, who was selling himself piecemeal. While living in Canada he recovered heavy compensation for the loss of a leg, and then went to America, where he deprived himself of a hand for insurance purposes."

"Another favorite 'accident' is falling out of a train in motion. I remember a case where a man overdid the thing, and, as a result, injured his spine. We had a doctor watching his bed for six months, because the slightest shake of his bed would have killed him."

"Shortly after refusing to pay a claim in respect of a train accident, we got another claim from the same man, this time for a scalded foot. We were just about to meet it, when we received a letter from a former confederate of the policy-holder. He stated that not only had the knave deliberately scalded his foot, but that as soon as he was well he intended to drop out of a train again."

"Street accidents, too, are often bogus. A few years ago a taxi-cab accident was pre-arranged. We found that the man and his wife who were in the cab at the time had previously recovered 45 pounds for a similar 'accident,' besides 125 pounds and costs for injuries said to have been caused by the fall off a ladder, and about 60 pounds for the claim to a motor car which they claimed to be theirs, but which they had really hired. All these hauls had been made in a short period."

"Some men make a profession of this sort of thing. We received three claims in quick succession from one of them, and as they were apparently genuine, paid on them. Then we discovered that the same man had made claims in respect of the same 'accidents' on other companies. So somebody went to see him. The rogue had recently lost his wife, on whom he had relied to prevent him from doing anything likely to arouse suspicion."

"Another professional claimant was more systematic. As we were suspicious about a certain claim, we sent a man to see a doctor, who said he had previously sent us a certificate for the patient. We could not find it and consequently we were almost sure that something was wrong. Still, we paid up."

"Years afterwards we caught the man. He was then making claims simultaneously on several offices for different kinds of accidents. In his possession was a book containing full particulars of his frauds on insurance companies. Obviously, this was to prevent him from playing the same trick twice on one office."

Plants as Criminals

BAD CHARACTERS OF FOREST AND FIELD.

Thieves and murderers are not peculiar to mankind. You find them among animals, birds, fish, insects, and even in the vegetable world.

Of murderers the homely ivy is a familiar example. Everyone knows how it will gradually smother and strangle a tree.

But the ivy is a mild and gentle plant compared with the matapolo or tree killer of tropical America. It is a climber to begin with, and crawls up the trunk of a tree, but after a time it begins to send down aerial roots. These reach the ground, take hold, and draw up fresh nourishment. Then the matapolo grows enormously, smothering the forest giant which has acted as its host, and soon the tree rots and falls away, leaving the killer erect in its place.

Victims of the Dodder.

The worst plant criminals in this country are the dodder and the seed in a series of whitish threads broom-rape. The dodder grows from which creep about until they find a suitable victim, such as the clover plant. Then the dodder stems form suckers resembling on a small scale those of the octopus, and these extract from the clover all its juices. The dodder stems next become reddish and wiry, and in a few weeks the wretched clover plant is murdered and the robber occupies its place. Broom-rape behaves in similar fashion and attacks gorse, broom, hemp, thyme, and other plants. It lives on the juices which it extracts from their roots and grows with remarkable speed. There may be from seventy to ninety seed capsules on each plant, and each capsule will hold fifteen hundred seeds. So tiny are the seeds that they are invisible to the naked eye. Another English sponger is the "squibbier," a nasty, colourless, sooty plant, which sucks the life from the roots of other plants.

A great many lace jalo effects are noted on dresser afternoon gowns. The fur coat for general wear is apt to be three-quarter or knee length.

The Secret of Silk

Silk is essentially identified with women, and it was actually discovered by a girl while playing jack-boxes with some cocoons under a mulberry tree—so goes the legend. Developed by one of China's famous Emperors 4,000 years ago, the secret, after being jealously guarded in China, was at last given to the world by a Princess who married an Indian Prince of Khotan in A.D. 419, and in her head-dress smuggled the eggs of the silkworm and the seeds of the mulberry.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR HEAD-ACHES.

Phantoms of the Sea

SAILORS AND THE STORY OF THE "FLYING DUTCHMAN."

Despite the rapid development of maritime transport and the very considerable improvement in sea-going conditions, there has not yet been eliminated that superstitious awe and dread of the sea which finds expression in many curious beliefs, and which has influenced the minds of mariners from time immemorial.

Most people are familiar with the commoner superstitions concerning the hundred and one happenings and incidents in which the seafarer sees portents of ill-luck and presages of disaster, but of quite a different character are those apparitions which sailors have reported from time to time, and which they look upon as sure and certain omens of impending calamity. These phantom warnings fall under the headings of ghostly ships, uncanny voices and sounds, and spirit forms of birds and animals.

Into the first-named category come such appearances as that of the notorious Flying Dutchman, the legend which has outlasted three centuries, and still receives considerable credence among the older generations of sailors.

The Legend.

The story is, briefly: "Mynheer Vanderdecken, the commander of a big Dutch Indiaman, attempted to round the Cape of Storms, as the Cape of Good Hope was then called. In the teeth of a terrific head wind. Again and again he failed to accomplish his purpose, but with all the obstinate daring of his calling he swore to make the passage if it took him till the Day of Judgment to do so. Such impiety could not go unpunished, and to this day, according to the legend, the doomed ship with its phantom commander and crew are to be seen sailing in the latitude of the Cape trying in vain to round it."

Some sailors still believe in this legend, and there are those who affirm that often in stormy weather the ghostly ship may be seen after sunset with the gaunt figure of the old commander on the poop, issuing orders to his ghostly crew.

This fine old legend doubtless had its origin in one of those effects of light not uncommon at sea, by which objects appear to be elevated above their position, so that a ship actually below the horizon may be brought into view. This phenomenon is known as "looming," and is analogous to the mirage on land.

Spectral Ships.

There are many such stories current even round our own shores. In the village of Looe, in Cornwall, there is a legend that at certain times a spectre ship is to be seen sailing seawards, and it is said to be a sign of bad luck for the person who witnesses the sight.

At Withersham, in Yorkshire, also, the story used to be told of a phantom ship that would sometimes appear in the offing and then gradually disappear. Tradition said that the wife of a certain skipper was drowned there, partly through his fault, and that his soul could not rest until he found her.

A somewhat similar happening is said to have taken place on the Wiclow Coast. The coastguard sighted a strange craft creeping towards the land, and, suspecting her of being a smuggler, they gave chase, only to lose her in the darkness. Next night she appeared again, and was pursued again with the same result. On her reappearance on the third night she was hauled up, but when one of the coastguards reached out to take hold of her gunwale, his hand touched the empty air, and immediately afterwards the stranger vanished.

The belief is common among sailors that when danger is at hand mysterious sounds are certain to come to them out of the sea to prepare them for the emergency. In the height of the hurricane the ghostly Death Bell will be heard booming across the waves its phantom warning.

The Bells of Boscawen.

Round our own coast there are many of these bell superstitions, and perhaps the best known is the legend current among the fisher folk of Boscawen, on the north coast of Cornwall, where bells rung by unseen hands beneath the waves are said to be heard during stormy weather.

Many years ago the townspeople were anxious to have a peal of bells similar to those of the neighbouring church of Tintagel. The bells were ordered and placed on board ship for conveyance to Boscawen, and when in sight of the town the pilot, hearing the vesper bells of Tintagel, gave

THE STORY

John Briggs, a young Englishman of humble parentage, has been employed for many years as a chauffeur to a Russian nobleman; he has thoroughly mastered the Russian language and customs as a result of his long association with the people. When the communists revolt, John is made a prisoner because of his association with the nobility. He escapes and makes his way toward Poland through the forests. He comes across the lifeless body of an officer, whom he identifies as Alexis Triona by means of a small diary—the story of the man's thrilling exploits among the Bolsheviks—which he finds on the officer's person.

When John returns to England he again becomes a chauffeur. He devotes his spare time to writing, but all his manuscripts are rejected. In desperation he uses the adventures enumerated by Triona in his diary and signs his manuscript—Alexis Triona. He becomes famous overnight. He poses as Triona from then on.

One day he sees a beautiful girl, Olivia Gale, an heiress, being insulted by her male companion. He defends her and escorts her home. A brief courtship follows which culminates in their marriage.

John keenly feels the deception towards his wife and he confides in Major Oliphant, a friend of his, who has leased Olivia's former home. He leaves the Major resolved to tell his wife everything. John no sooner arrives home than he receives a telegram from Newcastle telling him that his mother is dying. He tells his wife that he has been called to Russia on a secret mission.

Meanwhile Olivia has learnt of John's real identity, and she leaves their home in a fit of rage and resentment and seeks solace at her home in the company of Major Oliphant and his sister. John returns from Newcastle and becomes aware of his wife's absence. Before he has a chance to search for her, he is attacked by highwaymen and is taken to a hospital in an unconscious condition. When he recovers, he becomes a mechanic and a chauffeur for a small garage in an English hamlet.

One day while driving around a dangerous bend overlooking a precipice, he stops his car to help a man who is having some trouble with his machine. He comes face to face with Olivia, who is in the car. The sight of her revives in him his fierce longing for her. He believes that his double-faced existence can never be forgiven. Without her, life has meant nothing.

He jumps into his car and drives it over the cliff; but he is saved from death by a tree which breaks his fall. Olivia, who in spite of everything, has always loved John, hurries to him. Confessions are made and accepted and they start life anew as Mr. and Mrs. John Briggs.

ADMISSION - - 20c.

thanks to God for his safe arrival in port that night.

The skipper laughed at what he called the pilot's superstition, and he suggested that he should thank the good ship that carried him. The pilot's pious reply brought forth a torrent of blasphemy. Immediately afterwards a terrible storm arose, and the ship was lost with all hands excepting the devoted pilot.

As the vessel was going down the peal of bells she was carrying were heard ringing, and to this day, during tempestuous weather, according to the story:—

These bells that sullen surges hide,
Peal their deep tones beneath the tide.

Forerunner Of Death.

Another curious apparition of the sea is the spectral hearse and mourning coach, the appearance of which is considered by mariners to be the unfailing forerunner of death. There are instances in the annals of the sea of this dread phantom's appearance being followed by news of tragedy in connection with somebody belonging to the person who witnessed the uncanny sight.

There are sailors still alive who have declared that they have set eyes upon the Red Schooner, and if you get them in a communicative mood they may tell you of the two phantom ships one red and the other black, which are for ever sailing the Seven Seas.

Slowly the grim legend will unfold itself, for sailors are reticent where superstition is concerned, and you will hear of the ghostly vessels that collect the souls of men who have lost their lives at sea. The Red Schooner takes the good souls, and the Black Schooner takes the bad. Together they sail the trackless seas, the one following the other, sometimes closely, sometimes at a distance, but never out of sight of the Red Skipper who commands them both.

First Mistake of Season

Was Killed by Companion While Hunting for a Deer.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—Mistaken for a deer while hunting with three friends Magloire Brunet, 39 years, was shot by one of the party and instantly killed at the edge of the woods north of Lanoraie.

Information given at the inquest was that Brunet, with three friends, had gone on a hunting trip. One of the men remained in the tent while another young man, who is a veteran of the Great War, during which he suffered the loss of a leg, drove Brunet and A. Darlington to the edge of the woods. He remained in the automobile because his artificial leg prevented him from walking with ease in the woods.

Brunet and Darlington set out to see if any deer were about and some twenty minutes later returned. The occupant of the automobile was not expecting the two men back so soon and when he saw a heavy shadow moving about in the dark, he decided that a deer was passing, pulled out his revolver and fired. It was then that the men shouted, but it was too late, the bullet having struck Brunet just above the right lung and coming out just above the fifth vertebra.

HER PART IN A GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT.

A young Australian girl who has done remarkable work in connection with the great new $4,000,000 Sydney Harbour bridge is now in London. Her name is Miss Kathleen Butler, and she has been installed in a room in the office of Messrs. Kathleen Butler is a typical out-of-doors Australian girl, and she will tell you gaily that when her work is over she indulges in her favourite "twice"—sunt bathing, dancing, and lawn tennis.

Her career, even in a young country where names are made more easily than in an older and more settled community, has been an amazing and romantic one. Ten years ago she was a clerk in the N.S.W. Public Works Department, without any technical qualifications and with no training beyond that which a practical Irish mother had been able to get for her in the Convent Schools of Sydney, where her girl was educated. Her father was a station-master.

When the scheme for Sydney Harbour bridge and the big underground railway system was finally agreed on by Parliament, Miss Butler was the first officer appointed to the department created to deal with these two great engineering projects. She was appointed on her merits and because she had mastered all sorts of intricate technical matters of engineering during the years she was in the Government service.

The Engineer's Praise.

She was ultimately appointed confidential secretary to Mr. J. J. C. Bradfield, the designer and engineer of the bridge, and in a thesis which he recently wrote for his degree of Doctor of Science and Engineering at Sydney University, where he is a lecturer, Mr. Bradfield paid her a remarkable tribute.

The technique of the specification, Mr. Bradfield said, was here, and it would be impossible to find a better arranged or better thought-out specification.

Mr. Bradfield said that, himself excepted, his confidential secretary "alone knows of the many issues involved in tendering for the bridge. Her conscientious and efficient help has materially lightened the responsibility which the design and construction of these two great engineering works have entailed, and in this thesis I wish to place on record my sincere thanks to the lady for her invaluable assistance."

Exciting Days.

In addition to the important part she played in drafting the specification, Miss Butler also helped in the preparation of the report on the tenders, an historical document which she signed as secretary.

"We were working on that report six weeks night and day," she said to an interviewer, "because the tenderers were all waiting to hear their fate, and we wanted to let them get back to America, England, and Canada as soon as possible. I think I know that report and the specification off by heart. Those were exciting days. I was the only woman present in the Minister's room when the tenders were opened."

Leave It to the Voters

Daily as the date of the bye-election draws nearer, the fear of the result becomes more apparent in the camp of the Opposition. They shout and clamour, but the noise is that of a disorganized rabble aware of defeat, and is made by a few deluded supporters in order to enable the frightened leaders to steal silently away.

The people of Bonavista Bay will not mistake these noisy demonstrations for anything but what they are, the howls of rage of a baffled enemy. The discernment of the voter will enable him to distinguish between sincerity and plausible, truth and falsehood, and cant and hypocrisy and earnest effort. They have before them the proof in practical shape of the benefits which have resulted to the country since the MONROE PARTY came into power, and they are not likely to throw away the substance in the faint hope of grasping a shadow.

MONROE and WINSOR have shown their confidence in their constituents by the manner in which they have gone to them for re-election. There has been no flourish of trumpets to stampee the electorate, but on the other hand they have given them every opportunity to use their own judgment in a matter which, when all is said and done, is to decide whether their bread will be buttered or not.

The fishermen are returning from St. John's to-day, with money in their pockets, with food and clothing for their families, instead of as in the past, with faces the picture of dismay, because their catch had netted them a loss. This winter they will not be driven to despair by the cries of their children for food or because the cold of winter pinches their poor ill-clad bodies. Comfort and happiness for the first time for many years will be found in the homes because the wolf has been driven from the door. This change has taken place since MONROE and his party took office, and because they took office, and the voters of Bonavista will show that they are fully aware of this by returning the LEADER of the Party and his able colleague WILLIAM WINSOR, when they cast their votes on Monday.

What About An Open Rink For Children?

It has been suggested that now that the children's playgrounds have been dismantled and winter is approaching, arrangements might be considered with a view to securing Burton's Pond for the youngsters as a skating rink. It is within reasonable distance of the city; is centrally situated and sheltered, and in the vicinity are three large orphanages. In the winter time it has always been a popular resort for the children who are fatherless, or whose parents cannot provide them with rink tickets.

The difficulty of keeping a surface open for skating on Burton's Pond is not so serious as it is on most of the ponds in the suburbs, owing to the nature of the surroundings, and doubtless the Municipal Councillors, who took such a fatherly interest in the Playground Movement during the summer, would gladly lend a horse and man to scrape the ice after a heavy downfall of snow.

We submit the suggestion to the Rotarians and the Citizens' Playground Committee because it seems practicable and inexpensive, and because it would supply a long felt want. The excellent effect produced upon the children by the playground facilities during the summer have been many. They have responded, unconsciously, perhaps, to the kind attention which they have received; they have been protected from the dangers of the street, and the vigorous exercise in the pure air and sunshine has strengthened their physique and provided them with the best protection against disease.

Preparations Being Made for Industrial Fair

Great preparations for the Industrial Fair, which commences on Nov. 3rd, are now being made by intending exhibitors at both the Prince's and Curling Rinks. All the leading business concerns have workers engaged erecting walls, etc., and when completed the whole surroundings promise to present a very striking appearance. Great rivalry exists among the various exhibitors as to who will have the most striking display. Many of the stalls, now under course of erection, will be of an unusual design.

The one way first class fare granted by the Railway Management is a big inducement for export people to visit the city, while the fair itself will no doubt prove a great encouragement to home industries.

Sale of Work and Concert
 The Gower Street Church Mission Circle Sale of Work takes place this evening. To accommodate patrons working in the stores, teas are being served from 8 o'clock to six until 8 o'clock. At 8.15 a concert will be given, in which the following artists will take part:—Misses Bishop, Glendinning, Joffe, Mews, Murray, Soper, Tait, Taylor, Woods; Rev. N. Povey; Messrs. Fraser, Holmes, Jerratt, Ruggles and Steele.

Promenade Band Concert

The Mount Cashel Band held their second Promenade Band Concert in the Gaiety Hall last night and it was attended by an even greater gathering than on the first night. A programme of twelve dances was gone through, each of which was responded to by an encore. The evening was one of great enjoyment to all. The music was all that could be desired. These band concerts have become very popular, and the next one takes place on Friday night.

Oporto Market

A market report, dated Sept. 27th, has been received by the Secretary of the Board of Trade, from Messrs. Faria & Pimenta, fish merchants, Oporto. It reads as follows:—

The general output for this season of the year has been small in comparison with that of other years, the principal reason for this being the rapid falling of the rate of exchange. Under these circumstances our consumers have withheld their orders, being aware that if the exchange bettered there would be no reason for prices remaining elevated, and because of this, sales for the past three weeks have been made at considerable reduction in prices.

If it had not been for the rapid falling off in exchange, the prices would have then required to remain firm, because at present the actual quantities in stock in our market are not excessive.

Supreme Court

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST TELEGRAM AND NEWS.

In the matter of the King vs. Sir Richard Squires and the order nisi against the Telegram and Morning News.

Mr. C. E. Hunt asked that the rule be dismissed with costs, first because the case of the King vs. Sir Richard Squires is closed when the Grand Jury returned a no bill; and second the case as a case is ended. He cited a number of authorities in support of his contentions and stated that in the memorandum filed for the release of Sir Richard, it was stated that he was automatically discharged, so that the matter could only come before the court if the Crown preferred a new bill before a new Grand Jury and hence the position was that committed by the newspapers would be forever impossible. Mr. Hunt argued that contempt of court is an attempt to distort the ends of justice, and quoted the judgment on the matter of Mr. Justice Keating (30 Law Times, Page 216). With reference to Grand Jurors, he had searched all the law books in the library and had failed to find where comment on a Grand Jury was held to be contempt of court. He quoted Lord Russell as bearing out his contention that when a Grand Jury throws out a bill it is a case closed. Referring to the articles Mr. Hunt claimed that they were restrained and proper and that they only questioned if the Grand Jury had given the bill due consideration. He argued that the mere discussion of the matter was not with contempt and from a layman's standpoint the newspapers had always done everything possible to uphold the dignity of the court.

Mr. Howley for Sir Richard submitted that "cause pending" meant something yet to be disposed of. He did not question the fact that the Grand Jury might be subject to fair criticism. He cited Short and Millers Crown practice (Second Edition) page 349 and 345 in explanation of what is meant by contempt. The basis of his application he claimed was that the publication of the articles tended to interfere with the due administration of justice, and quoted the case of Roche vs. Garland in the year 1742, where a case was not finally disposed of and the printer was held for contempt. He held because of the absence of the practice of sending a bill a second time to a grand jury in England there would be no authorities covering a portion similar to the present case. Mr. Howley stated that he was endeavouring to protect his client and did not ask for punitive measures but that the court would condemn the articles. He questioned the conditions which would prevail if the newspapers were allowed to comment on the Walker Report in conjunction with references to the grand jury's finding. At the moment when the articles were published, he said, the attention of the community was focused on Sir Richard Squires and the possibility of the bill coming again before another Grand Jury. The Telegram article he said was in some ways less objectionable than that of its contemporary in that it did not invoke the assistance of the Walker Report. He asked that the punishment be sufficient to protect his client and his reputation.

Mr. Hunt replying, said the application was based on the affidavit of Fred Rabbitts, who alleged that it was a case pending. He submitted that the case was a closed case when the Grand Jury brought in a no bill. The Chief Justice intimated that, as the Crown Counsel had stated in court that it was possible that the case against Sir Richard Squires would be brought to the Grand Jury at a later date, it would be improper for him to be tried in the newspapers, and that, if in future any article appeared that might prejudice the trial, Mr. Howley, K.C., should bring the matter to the notice of the Court and the court would deal with the matter.

Judgment was reserved.

A preliminary enquiry into the escape of Albert Malmont from His Majesty's Penitentiary was begun before Judge Morris this morning when a statement of the prisoner himself was taken. The hearing will be continued this afternoon at 3.30.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

RATIFICATIONS ON HALIBUT TREATY EXCHANGED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21. Exchange of ratifications between the United States and Canada of the convention to protect the halibut fisheries of the Northern Pacific Ocean took place to-day. The convention signed at Washington on March 2nd, 1923, establishes a closed season of the halibut fishery from Nov. 15 to February 15th of each year, and provides for the appointment of a Joint Commission of four members to investigate and make recommendations for the preservation and development of the halibut fisheries in the north Pacific.

Mr. Dunfield began his argument on the law points involved after recess.

A preliminary enquiry into the escape of Albert Malmont from His Majesty's Penitentiary was begun before Judge Morris this morning when a statement of the prisoner himself was taken. The hearing will be continued this afternoon at 3.30.

Miss D. Lamb's Dancing Class will be held to-morrow night, in the Supper Room, C.C.C. Hall, at 8.30 o'clock.—Oct. 11.

Mr. C. E. Hunt asked that the rule be dismissed with costs, first because the case of the King vs. Sir Richard Squires is closed when the Grand Jury returned a no bill; and second the case as a case is ended. He cited a number of authorities in support of his contentions and stated that in the memorandum filed for the release of Sir Richard, it was stated that he was automatically discharged, so that the matter could only come before the court if the Crown preferred a new bill before a new Grand Jury and hence the position was that committed by the newspapers would be forever impossible. Mr. Hunt argued that contempt of court is an attempt to distort the ends of justice, and quoted the judgment on the matter of Mr. Justice Keating (30 Law Times, Page 216). With reference to Grand Jurors, he had searched all the law books in the library and had failed to find where comment on a Grand Jury was held to be contempt of court. He quoted Lord Russell as bearing out his contention that when a Grand Jury throws out a bill it is a case closed. Referring to the articles Mr. Hunt claimed that they were restrained and proper and that they only questioned if the Grand Jury had given the bill due consideration. He argued that the mere discussion of the matter was not with contempt and from a layman's standpoint the newspapers had always done everything possible to uphold the dignity of the court.

Mr. Howley for Sir Richard submitted that "cause pending" meant something yet to be disposed of. He did not question the fact that the Grand Jury might be subject to fair criticism. He cited Short and Millers Crown practice (Second Edition) page 349 and 345 in explanation of what is meant by contempt. The basis of his application he claimed was that the publication of the articles tended to interfere with the due administration of justice, and quoted the case of Roche vs. Garland in the year 1742, where a case was not finally disposed of and the printer was held for contempt. He held because of the absence of the practice of sending a bill a second time to a grand jury in England there would be no authorities covering a portion similar to the present case. Mr. Howley stated that he was endeavouring to protect his client and did not ask for punitive measures but that the court would condemn the articles. He questioned the conditions which would prevail if the newspapers were allowed to comment on the Walker Report in conjunction with references to the grand jury's finding. At the moment when the articles were published, he said, the attention of the community was focused on Sir Richard Squires and the possibility of the bill coming again before another Grand Jury. The Telegram article he said was in some ways less objectionable than that of its contemporary in that it did not invoke the assistance of the Walker Report. He asked that the punishment be sufficient to protect his client and his reputation.

Mr. Hunt replying, said the application was based on the affidavit of Fred Rabbitts, who alleged that it was a case pending. He submitted that the case was a closed case when the Grand Jury brought in a no bill. The Chief Justice intimated that, as the Crown Counsel had stated in court that it was possible that the case against Sir Richard Squires would be brought to the Grand Jury at a later date, it would be improper for him to be tried in the newspapers, and that, if in future any article appeared that might prejudice the trial, Mr. Howley, K.C., should bring the matter to the notice of the Court and the court would deal with the matter.

Judgment was reserved.

Van Houten's Cocoa best and goes farthest.—Oct. 13.

Kingys. J. W. McNeily

In the above matter Mr. Dunfield for Mr. McNeily read an affidavit in reference to the Status of the present Grand Jury. He submitted that he has some new facts much stronger than was brought out by Mr. Emerson, but that some of them might interlock. Mr. Dunfield began his argument on the law points involved after recess.

A preliminary enquiry into the escape of Albert Malmont from His Majesty's Penitentiary was begun before Judge Morris this morning when a statement of the prisoner himself was taken. The hearing will be continued this afternoon at 3.30.

Miss D. Lamb's Dancing Class will be held to-morrow night, in the Supper Room, C.C.C. Hall, at 8.30 o'clock.—Oct. 11.

Nfld. Outport Nursing & Industrial Association

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The quarterly meeting of the above Association took place at Government House yesterday and was largely attended. The President, Lady Allard, occupied the chair. Reports were read by Miss Loder, the Nursing Secretary of the Association, and by Mrs. H. Mitchell, Industrial Secretary, showing the work that has been accomplished during the past three months at the various Nursing and Industrial centres. The following is a list of the knitting centres together with the number of knitters employed:—

- 1.—Place, Pool's Cove; Date Opened, 11th August, 1923; No. of Knitters, 56.
- 2.—Place, Hant's Harbour; 18th October, 1923; No. of Knitters, 57.

- 15.—Place, Crabbes Station; Date Opened, 17th July; No. of Knitters, 1.
- 16.—Place, Placentia; Date Opened, 22nd August; No. of Knitters, 1.
- 17.—Place, New Perlican; Date Opened, 3rd October; No. of Knitters, 6.

From the Treasurer's Report it was learned that the Government has very kindly made the usual grant of $4000.00 to the Association, which will help materially towards meeting the salaries and expenses of the various nursing centres.

It was ascertained that the very substantial sum of $1146.05 has been paid to the knitters during the past three months, which brings the total paid to knitters from the opening of the centres up to $3231.62.

The receipts from sales at the Depot for the quarter totalled $1811.11, and is a striking testimonial to the quality and suitability of the garments that are being sold, but with many centres asking for more work, it is to be hoped that these sales may be substantially increased in the months to come.

The following is a list of donations which have been received by the Association since January, 1924:—

Hon. R. Watson	$ 5.00
Mrs. Hollis Walker	50.00

Mrs. Tasker Cook	25.00

Major Moncrief (£10)	44.50
Collected at Corner Brook, per Mrs. Warren	167.10

Lady Allard then referred to her recent visit to the outports, and reported the grateful appreciation of the people for the help the Association was giving them. The Corner Brook sum of $107.10 was raised to go towards the salary and expenses of a nurse for Port Saunders, and the people in this section of the country have promised to give the Association their full support.

The President asked all who were present to make a special effort to secure more members, $100 per year is a very small fee for the privilege of co-operating in a real work of service, and 1000 members at this figure would meet the salary and expenses of an additional nurse.

Plans were discussed relating to the "NONIA" display at the coming Industrial Fair, and a committee was appointed to take charge of the booth where goods knitted and woven by the fisherfolk will be offered for sale.

Eight new members were added to the membership roll, and after a general discussion the meeting adjourned.

Teacher: "Spell little."
Tommy: "Little."
Teacher: "Tommy, you should say L i double t i e."
Next morning Tommy was asked to recite poetry which began: "Up, up, my love, the sun is shining." Remembering his lesson the previous day, he began: "Double up, my love, the sun is shining."

REDUCED N.S. FISHING FLEET.

HALIFAX, N.S. Oct. 22. The sixty-two vessels comprising Lunenburg fishing fleet have this year secured 170,425 quintals of fish, which have been sold for $1,539,209 according to a resume of years work appearing in this morning's Halifax Chronicle. Although it is reported the average catch this year is larger than last year and conditions are generally better, all the catch being already sold and the fishermen now having the cash, the size of the fleet has been reduced by eighteen vessels. The fleet which numbered 124 boats in 1906 was reduced to 80 in 1923, and to 62 in 1924.

Supreme Court

SPECIAL JURY FINDS DR. ALEX. CAMPBELL "NOT GUILTY."

The trial of Dr. Alex. Campbell, on a charge of "fraudulently applying to his own use the sum of $72.00, the property of His Majesty's Government," was concluded at 4:15 yesterday evening, when a special jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

The trial began at 11 a.m. and all the evidence was submitted by recess hour. Returning at 2:30 p.m. Mr. Howley addressed the jury on behalf of the accused. The charge was that the sum of $72.00 was fraudulently used by Dr. Campbell, with a deliberate and criminal intent. That it was used was not enough to convict him, and it must be proved that he fraudulently used it. Dr. Campbell had sworn that if any such money was so directed it was in the rush of business worries and there was no intention to defraud. During the two years Dr. Campbell had unlimited control over 1.1-2 million dollars and had opportunities galore to direct some of it to his own pocket if he so desired and, if he desired to get his "pound of flesh," he would have made a claim for extra services for relief work, which was outside his own department. The department had been subjected to a searching audit, and the result of this had been only to prove that never had there been a cleaner man in public office than was the accused. He had spent $2,500.00 for a motor car, which was used almost exclusively on Government work, and had also spent approximately $500.00 for repairs to this car, and the Government was not asked to pay for it. Concluding, he said the jury must be satisfied that the money was fraudulently spent, he felt certain that their verdict would be one of acquittal for the accused.

Mr. Winter for the Crown, followed. He said the facts of the case were indisputable, and not denied. Mr. Bugden had deposed that the money was paid for electioneering purposes, and not only this, it was paid by Dr. Campbell himself. It is a positive offence for public officials to even allow money to be used for any but Government purposes. The argument that Dr. Campbell had many opportunities to steal, and did not do so, was an extraordinary one, as this could not justify in any way the present charge. As to not asking for extra remuneration, it would have been far better if he had done so. Dr. Campbell was not put in charge of 1.1-2 million dollars but while he was there, this amount had been spent, which is a very different position. It was his duty to keep his hands off public money and to see that other people did the same, except for legitimate purposes. All the work apparently was undertaken by Dr. Campbell, and he was responsible for creating such a condition, in his department. There was not shown such a tremendous amount of work. 4,000 cheques in four years did not average more than eight per day. The charge was very clearly proven and distasteful as it might be it was the duty of the jury to bring out a verdict according to the evidence.

Mr. Justice Kent then briefly summed up the case. He said that the jury must be guided only by the evidence, no other influence must be brought to bear, on the evidence alone must the case stand or fall. The prosecution must prove, three things: First, that the money was entrusted to the accused by virtue of his office; secondly, that the money had been misappropriated and thirdly that it had been done so fraudulently. Mere carelessness on the part of a public official is not a criminal offence, in order to find this there must have been criminal intent. On this point the case depended and it was for them to decide whether the money had been spent fraudulently or not. At 2:25 the jury retired and returned again at 4:40, reporting through their foreman, Mr. Nathan Andrews, that they had found the accused "not guilty." Mr. Howley then moved for the discharge of the accused and this was ordered.

Spanish influence is noted in the flat-crowned, narrow-brimmed hat.

"We are all wanters and incapable of being entirely satisfied with life." So says Director John M. Stahl, who has made this contention the backbone of his latest photodramatic accomplishment, "The Wanters," a First National picture to be presented with an all-star cast by Louis B. Mayer at the Star Theatre to-night.

"We crave wealth or fame, ease or luxury, solitude or crowds, rest or excitement, romance or adventure, always the thing we haven't got, and when we get it we promptly want something else," declares Stahl. "We are never fully satisfied. And so human contentment is one of the rarest things on earth."

The lament which Mr. Stahl particularly deals with in "The Wanters" is made up of the wealthy social climbers, and he exposes their hobbies and superficialities in a new light on the screen. The central figure of the story is a girl who, to satisfy her craving to be close to the luxuries she has always been denied, takes a position as maid in a home of great wealth and social standing. The romance which accompanies her elevation to high social position demonstrates in a gripping climax the emptiness of all her wanting and that of the snobs who had done their best to make her life a misery.

While no attempt is made to form a definite solution for the problem interwoven with the thrills, comedy and dramatic suspense that adds interest to the theme and a lasting quality to the picture.

The scenario was written by J. G. Hawks and Paul Bern from the Lella Burton Wells story. The cast includes Marie Prevost, Robert Ellis, Norma Shearer, Huntley Gordon, Lincoln Stedman, Richard Hedrick, Gertrude Astor and Lillian Langdon.

A Motion Picture for Entire Family

WILL BE SHOWN AT THE NICKEL TO-MORROW.

In these days when careful censorship of motion pictures seems so necessary it is indeed refreshing when one is given an opportunity to view a picture that seems intended for the whole family—one which, if the others were of the same order, would make the censorship of pictures entirely unnecessary.

Such a picture is "Love, Life and Laughter," in which the inimitable English actress, Betty Balfour, has the leading role. This great picture will be shown at the Nickel Theatre to-morrow. "Love, Life and Laughter" is purely a picture for the entire family, clean, interesting and amusing. The story is a simple exposition of the oldest yet ever youngest desire of a human heart, the achievement of an earnest ambition. The boy and the girl—who represent any boy or girl—laugh and weep, succeed and fail and move forward and backward to an inevitable destiny, and to a climax that should live long in the memory.

And added to this wonderful story, in which every boy and girl, old or young, married or single, will revel in a beauty in treatment and a delicacy of touch of the emotions, the like of which has never been surpassed in any photoplay.

NEW HAVEN RAILROAD.

Expected to Show Surplus After Charges of About $300,000 for September—Gross for Month Estimated Only About $% Under September, 1923.

Boston—The New Haven Railroad is expected to show a surplus after charges for September of approximately $300,000. This would compare with the August surplus of $230,000 and with a surplus of a little over $60,000 in September, 1923.

Gross earnings were only about $238,000 less than in September, 1923, according to preliminary estimate, a decrease of but 3%. This indicates that the freight movement is catching up with the 1923 level. In August gross was off 8.4% from last year. Decreases in the last two months have been more largely in passenger than in freight revenues.

Estimating a $300,000 surplus earned in September, actual total surplus after charges for nine months to Sept. 30, would be approximately $1,101,000, contrasting with a deficit of $4,059,000 in the nine months ended Sept. 30th, 1923. This is an improvement of $5,160,000 in spite of a substantial shrinkage in gross. The last three months of 1923 were a fairly good period for New Haven. It earned an actual surplus after charges of $1,141,000 in those months. Thus taking a 12-months period to Sept. 30th, the road earned a surplus of $2,242,600. There is, therefore, good reason to believe that New Haven will wind up the current calendar year with a surplus after charges of $2,000,000 or better.

New Haven's motive power and equipment generally are in excellent condition. Motive power will be further augmented by delivery before winter of 10 heavy switch engines of the three cylinder, eight-drive type. These will take the place of heavy road engines which have been utilized in terminal service, releasing them for road service.

The New Haven management has been given intensive study to the spare branch problem. It has abandoned some small sections in the last two or three years and undoubtedly will cut out more mileage where it has been proven absolutely unprofitable. But it is going into gasoline car operation on a fairly extensive scale in an effort to make some lines where traffic is light pay. It has five of these cars in operation and a total of 20 more on order, so that when these are all delivered it will have a fleet of 25. Some of the last ones ordered are high-powered, large capacity, double-end-cars, seating sixty people. Special attention is being given to development of the larger and heavier double-ended type.

New Haven has been making great strides in the matter of fuel economy. In the actual work performed by firemen in the firing of locomotives it is probably ahead of any other road in the country. On the New York division, with electric traction, the firemen are engineers' assistants. In the heavy freight service the engines are all equipped with mechanical stokers, so the firemen are relieved of that drudgery and become virtually assistant engineers. All this has resulted in increased efficiency and fuel saving.

The Shore line of the New Haven is fully equipped with facilities which perhaps do not exist on any other double track railroad, namely passing tracks 1/2 to 5 miles on both the east-bound and west-bound tracks with a tower controlling the switches. When a freight is sidetracked to allow the passage of a fast passenger train, it is not necessary for the freight train crew to throw the switches. Many minutes are thus saved and the whole movement of freight is expedited.

NEW RECORD MADE FOR WORLD

SERIES RECEIPTS SO FAR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A new record for world series receipts was established by the Giants and Senators.

Figures for the seven games, $1,093,104, exceed by $34,239 those of only other million dollar series between the Giants and Yankees in New York last year.

Attendance figures were not shattered, however, the mark of 233,995 set in this series fell 117,735 short of the 351,730 which saw the classic last season.

Washington players will divide $148,991.63 of the total fund and New York will split up $99,327.75. The remaining 25 per cent. of the total players' share will be divided among the second and third place clubs in each league.

The Washington team will be split into 26 shares of $5,730 each. Manager Harris announced after a meeting of the players which followed the game, Miller and Taylor, substitute infielders, and Al Schacht, coach, each will receive two-thirds of a share and the 24 remaining portions will be equally divided among the other players.

Coach Nick Altrock and Trainer Mike Martin.

Lump sums will be donated by the players to Wade Lefler, who was ineligible for the series to the club house boy, Frankie Baxter, and to the Senator's "bat boy."

The Giants left hurriedly after the contest to catch a train and did not announce a division of their out. The approximate figure for each of the 26 men on the Giant eligible list, including Coach Jennings, would be $3,820.

BRITTON BEATS KRUG.

NEWARK, N.J., Oct. 14.—Jack Britton, former world's welterweight champion, outpointed Phil Krug, of Harrison, in a ten-round bout here last night, according to the unanimous opinion of the newspapermen at the bedside. Britton put up a masterful fight, and outpointed Krug in practically every round.

The Passing Hour

The Last Straw.

A long wisp of artificial grain that served as trimming to a girl's hat was placed horizontally, so that it tickled the face of the man who sat next to her in a tramcar, until it came to a resting-place with the end in his right ear. After a little while the man was seen to take from his pocket a large jack-knife, which he proceeded to sharpen on the palm of a horny hand. "Why are you doing that?" the girl inquired excitedly. "If I don't cut it off, it's going to be a nuisance."

The man answered, "There's going to be a harvest!"

The Footman Wasn't Flattered.

A Welshman was spending a holiday in London for the first time. Walking through a fashionable street, he noticed on a door the words, "Please ring the bell."

He rang the bell. In a minute a footman appeared and asked him what he wanted.

"Nothing," said the Welshman. "Then why did you ring the bell?" asked the footman.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the ventriloquist, "I will now sing that popular song 'Absent' in a lady's voice, which will appear to proceed from the space above your heads."

One, two, three minutes elapsed and not a sound was heard. The ventriloquist became very agitated. As last he called out—"Are you ready?"

Different Effects.

A boy to whom Sir Harry Lauder was explaining how he was made a knight gave the Scottish comedian a very neat reply.

According to a writer in the "Daily Graphic," Sir Harry had taken a great deal of trouble to explain the procedure, and wound up by saying, "His Majesty the King touched me on the shoulder with a sword, and that made me a knight."

"How funny!" said the lad. "My grandpa was struck on the head by an Indian with an axe, and that made him an angel."

City Guy—"Tell me, how's the milk maid?"

Country Lass—"It isn't made, you poor mutt, the cows give it."

A campaign was constantly interrupted by a man in the crowd, who kept shouting out "Liart!"

After about the twentieth repetition, the speaker paused and fixed his eyes on his tormentor. "If the gentleman who persists in interrupting," he said, "will be good enough to tell up his name instead of merely shouting out his calling, I am sure we shall all be pleased to make his acquaintance."

John: "What are you doin' now?"

Jack: "I'm an exporter."

"An exporter?"

"Yes, the railway company just fired me."

An Irishman, who had just arrived in New York, put his head in through the window of a ticket office and asked the clerk, who was busy manicuring his finger nails, "What he had for sale?"

The clerk replied "Blockheads."

"Then," retorted the Irishman, "You must do a great business, for I see you have only one left."

A Valuable Fertilizer Wasted

WINNIPEG—(Canadian Press)—

In huge mounds of straw, dotting the stubble on either side of the railroad tracks for hundreds of miles, are tons of potential fertilizer. The big stacks, which in the ordinary course of events will be shortly burned as the easiest means of disposal, served as an object lesson for many members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, who recently passed through the prairie belt.

Great Britain has been operating for three years a successful process for making available the nutriment in wheat straw, and more farmers each year are capturing the humus stolen from the soil by the worthless straw, and are utilizing it for the production of more kernels of wheat. Why should the process not be introduced in Western Canada? Those who are familiar with it can see no possible objection.

The English technique was an offshoot of research of 15 years duration on soil micro-organisms at the Rothamsted Experimental Station at Harpenden, England and was carried out under the guidance of Sir John Russell, the director, who has completed a tour of the Western Provinces with the British Association.

In discussing the straw problem, Sir John made the following observation: "The problem in the utilization of the straw is to decompose it so that the humus of the soil is freed again. The method which we were able to develop was a consequence of an investigation of the changes which take place in the decomposition of straw in the farmyard manure heap. As nearly as we can tell by chemical analysis, the artificial process duplicates the natural decay of the manure pile, and the product cannot be distinguished from the original humus of the soil."

Farmers have known for some time that raw straw is worse than useless as a fertilizer, Sir John pointed out. The Rothamsted workers placed this observation on a quantitative basis, however, and they found that crops were actually diminished when untreated straw was ploughed into the ground. "This is because the soil organisms decompose the straw, but in order to accomplish the breakdown, they absorb plant food, thereby robbing the grain of some of its nourishment," the scientist explained.

The bacteria absorb nitrogen, in particular. Appreciation of this fact suggested a solution of the difficulty. The microbes are fed their nitrogen separately, they break up the straw, freeing the original humus, and this can then be put back into the ground.

The procedure adopted consists in building stacks by mixing with each ton of straw a few pounds of sulphate of ammonia, relatively inexpensive, and calcium carbonate, cheaply secured as powdered limestone, marble or chalk. The ammonia supplies the nitrogen factor, and the carbonate prevents the mixture from becoming so acid that the bacteria will not work.

"In from two to three weeks, with the English climate, we find that the straw has returned to humus," Sir John Russell stated. "No inoculation is necessary. There are enough germs in the dirt mixed with the straw to start the process off. When the resultant mixture was tested by using it to fertilize a field of potatoes, a crop was obtained practically the equivalent of the yield with barnyard manure as the added food. Similar results are obtained in using the product to replenish the humus of the soil in between successive crops of wheat."

Nurserymen have been using the decomposed straw for some time with satisfactory results," Sir John said. Each year an increasing proportion of English farmers were taking advantage of the discovery. Thousands of tons of straw are being utilized every year.

"Burning is a wasteful way of disposing of straw," Sir John continued. "Other dominions are inquiring into the process and I see no reason why it should not be tested here. Sufficient time elapses between the dispatch of the harvest and the coming of cold weather unfavorable to the growth of the organisms, to permit the fermentation of the straw."

Burning of straw stacks is distinctly harmful to the soil in view of the fact that it destroys the humus in the surrounding soil, it was pointed out by Dr. H. E. Howe, Washington, D.C., chemist, who performed some of the first experiments on the use of straw for paper manufacture. A 3-4 extra for wheat straw in the paper industry, in Dr. Howe's opinion. The material has been studied sufficiently to make the mixture with newspaper practicable, he said. "Perhaps straw could be triquetted and used for fuel," he further suggested.

Making Cleaner Cities

Glasgow is famous as a pioneer

city, and if its new scheme for the production of smokeless fuel should prove a success it will have gone far ahead of any other municipality in its attempt to scotch the smoke fiend," says the Westminster Gazette. "In this country each year 3,000,000 tons of unconsumed fuel escape into the air as soot, grit, and corroding vapours. Of this huge total 'industrial smoke' is responsible for one-sixth, domestic fires for five-sixths."

"If a smokeless fuel, suitable for the ordinary type of grates, could be produced on a commercial scale, at commercial prices, the domestic fire difficulty would be overcome. This solution, our Glasgow correspondent suggests, has now been achieved. As a result the Glasgow city authorities have decided to install a battery of MacLaurin producers, capable of carbonising 100 tons a day. Their enterprise will be watched with the utmost interest throughout the country."

What is an OHM?

WORDS AS MONUMENTS TO FAMOUS MEN.

When you tell your friends that your wireless headphones are of 4,000 ohms, you are, though you may not realize it, honouring the memory of one of the greatest pioneers of electrical research. The unit of electrical resistance (or opposition to the flow of the current) is named after George Simon Ohm, a German physicist.

A professor at Nuremberg and Munich, he discovered the most important law in electricity, now known as "Ohm's Law." All electrical calculations are based on this law.

Had there been no Volta we should not speak of "volts" when referring to the pressure of an electric current. This Italian Count, who died nearly one hundred years ago, was responsible for many electrical inventions. Blacksmith's Son Who Won Fame.

"Farads"—or "Microfarads"—are often referred to by wireless enthusiasts. Faraday, the great scientist from whom they derive their name, was the son of a blacksmith, and was born at Newington Butts in 1791. He is famous as the discoverer of magnetoelectric induction. Sir Humphrey Davy helped him in his early days by employing him as assistant in the laboratory of the Royal Institution.

"Faradisation," a term used in medicine, refers to the application of a faradic or interrupted current. It is employed in paralytic cases, and as a preventive of wasting.

On the other hand, the galvanic or continuous current, also favoured by medical men in electro-massage, perpetuates the memory of Luigi Galvani, an Italian professor of medicine who made many important electrical discoveries.

"The amperes" has its origin in the name of Andre Marie Ampere, a French physicist who conducted researches into the relation between magnetism and electricity.

"The Fool's Awakening"

LAST CHANCE TO-NIGHT TO SEE THIS SPLENDID METRO FEATURE.

"The Fool's Awakening," a Metro picture taken from the novel by William J. Locke, "The Tale of Triona," opened at the Majestic Theatre on Monday. Harold Shaw directed this story of the man who took another man's name to win success and a girl, and then was discovered.

In the large cast are Harrison Ford, Emil Bennett, Mary Alden, Alev Francis, John Sainpolis, Lionel Belmont and many others. Tom J. Hopkins was the adaptor.

Not that the film attempts to point out any moral, but it simply lays the story before you of one man who did try to live another man's life and his success. This excellent plot basis provides a wonderful opportunity for human and convincing characterizations, and the members of the cast have taken full advantage of their chance. Beauty, romance, drama and thrills are all here, ready for the spectator to enjoy.

Harold Shaw's excellent direction is apparent throughout the production, which was adapted by Tom J. Hopkins from "The Tale of Triona" written by William J. Locke. Mr. Hopkins also did the continuity. J. J. Hughes was the art director and Allan Siegler the photographer.

It will be repeated to-night and it will be the last chance you will have to see it. See the advertisement for complete synopsis.

Woman's Franchise League Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Woman's Franchise League held Monday evening in the Old Colony Club Rooms was decided proof that the woman suffrage movement is gaining momentum. The meeting, presided over by Mrs. Goring, amongst other things, was a very little progress was made last year owing to the political upheaval last autumn, and the amazing sequence of political events that absorbed the public attention. It was a singularly unpropitious time for anything in the way of suffrage propaganda, and the public was in no mood to consider the question, and the members of the League recognized this and accordingly kept their own counsel, their League and its ambitions in the background. But now the situation is different, and the outlook entirely changed. Some weeks ago a delegation from the Suffrage League interviewed the Prime Minister to find out his position with regard to woman suffrage, and to ask for consideration for our Bill at the coming session of the Legislature. Mr. Moore promised us every facility for the Bill at the January session and offered himself to support it. We have had some experience of the promises of politicians in past years, and we know of what fragile material these promises are sometimes made. But Mr. Moore is not a politician, he is a business man and an honest man, and when he promises us to support our Bill, I believe that he will do it. In the meantime, I suggest that the coming weeks shall be a campaign of suffrage propaganda, with as many meetings as you can conveniently hold, and all the publicity which the Press, the Pulpit, and other means can give. Every member of the Legislature should be personally interviewed and his vote solicited, and the question should be kept constantly before the public, so that when the House meets it may be a live issue. I believe we have a better chance now of getting the vote than we have ever had—but we must work for it.

Mrs. L. R. Cooper representing Grand Falls drew attention to the need of propaganda in the outports, and especially of the great benefit that would accrue to the cause if members of the League would tour the island. Mrs. Cooper, amongst other striking points in her address, reminded the League that every woman but two in Grand Falls signed the petition.

Rev. E. Fairbairn also spoke in favour of women taking their full share of public responsibility, and though Mr. Fairbairn's remarks were all too short they were most encouraging and greatly appreciated.

The Report for the past year was as follows:—

REPORT 1923-1924.
The Annual Report to-night is of a most meagre description—the record of a very lean year as far as the progress of our cause is concerned. This was inevitable, considering the unsettled conditions of political affairs generally since our last Annual Meeting.

It is not that women are taking less interest in public life than we have been at a standstill. Indeed, many of our women wear themselves out in the public service, and the crowds of women who attended regularly—in all parts of the island—the Hollis Walker Enquiry last winter, was undoubtedly proof of the keen interest they take in questions of public welfare.

For the past twelve months, with but few exceptions, we waited and waited for an opportunity to make some effective advance, but at every turn of events we were disappointed. The best we could do was to work quietly and unobtrusively along. We wrote letters to some of those who we thought might be friends of woman suffrage in other parts of the island, and had some very encouraging replies.

We find, however, that small drawing room meetings are more successful than almost any other method of influence.

By previous appointment last spring April the fifteenth, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Burke, Mrs. John Campbell and myself had an interview with Hon. W. E. Warren and members of the Government Executive in the Prime Minister's Office.

We were favourably received, but nothing of a definite character was accomplished, owing to uncertain political conditions.

In May on the framing of the Government and Opposition parties, Mr. Monroe and Mr. Hickman came out respectively as the leaders of those parties. Written requests were sent to both Mr. Monroe and Mr. Hickman asking that Woman Suffrage should be included in their manifestos.

Courteous replies were received declaring their favourable attitude towards suffrage.

The whirlwind rapidity of events in preparation for the elections brought the manifesto into being, in fact, into print, before our cause could be considered. When the elections were over and Mr. Monroe became Prime Minister, a deputation from our League was again received, July 7th, in the Prime Minister's Office.

Mrs. Goring, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Fraser and myself formed this deputation.

Mr. Monroe again declared himself in favour of Woman Suffrage, but owing to the House opening merely for the passing of supplies, advised us to postpone presenting our Bill until next January. Recognising, under the circumstances, that to force our measure upon the notice of the House would antagonise even our friends there at such a time, we agreed to hold our Bill over until the next session of the House. To this we agreed all the more readily as Mr. Monroe promised to give, then, what support he could to our Bill.

We are now waiting for the January Session, and in the meantime we shall have to work on steadily. This is not easy for us, as we are not women who can leave our homes to tour the island.

We are keeping in touch with Suffrage Alliance Headquarters—constantly pressing our need of a good lecturer, and three times we almost had our hopes fulfilled.

Miss Christie disappointed us through being obliged to return direct from America on account of the illness of her mother.

Miss Helen Fraser was suddenly recalled to contest her district, and Miss Macadam had not the time at her disposal while in Canada.

Our balance in the Bank amounts to $506, and we are reserving most of this sum for campaigning and other expenses which might be incurred by the visit of a lecturer on Woman Suffrage. Some of us have done what we could in the way of giving addresses by visiting organisations of women workers last winter.

In the meantime we find encouraging food for thought in the news items of those countries where women are using their vote in the best interests of public welfare.

When Lady Astor won her seat in the House of Commons, it was predicted by the anti-suffragists and the pessimists that the first woman to be elected, she would also be the last. Other women now keep her company, and weight of public opinion be- comes increasingly in favour of women in politics.

We find, by cable news from London, October 18th, that forty women candidates have been nominated already—six more than were in the last election contest.

What of Newfoundland? We are the last self-contained, self-governing Dominion in the British Empire whose women are denied the vote.

The black women of South Africa have the vote—what's wrong with the white women of Newfoundland?

Could women have made a worse mess of things than we've had here within the last few years?

Child Welfare workers waited on the City Council a few weeks ago with some suggestions for improvements, etc.

Why, sleepy, decadent Spain, with no woman suffrage is stepping ahead of us! News of October 17th from Alicante states that Spain's first woman Mayor has been elected in a small town in the district of Concentina.

She is Madam Perez, 49 years of age, and a widow. She has been well received by citizens, and her appointment has been considered as significant, as Spain has no law giving women the suffrage. With a few active women on our own City Council the welfare workers of St. John's could accomplish wonders!

Wherever women have won the vote, they got it by sheer dogged persistence in the face of determined opposition.

The vote will never be handed to us like sugar cakes—with a "help yourself, Madam."

One of our own politicians said "Yes, of course you should have the vote, but you'll have to fight for it!"

If we really wish to have better conditions, we must help to make them so.

To hold back because we cannot bear the limelight of publicity is selfishness—not modesty.

Let us be courageous and stand out in the eyes of the world for that which we know to be right!

Overflowing House Greets Young-Adams Co.

The Young-Adams Company have every season, to feel gratified at the reception which they received last night from the audience which filled the Casino Theatre, in its capacity, and they admirably upheld the reputation which they made during their previous visit to the city.

The play chosen for the opening night of the season was a thrilling melodrama, entitled "The Veiled Lady," which throughout the four acts held the interest of the audience and kept them in a state of suspense right up to the last scene.

Behind the story hinges on the sacrifice made by a sister for her brother who has embroiled himself in a law suit to shield him from the clutches of the law, she stakes her honour and loses in a gamble with a cardsharp who insists that she shall pay the price in full. Stung by his taunts when she hesitates, she decides to take the plunge in spite of what it means to her in the loss of the love of a good man and her own self-respect.

Arriving at his apartment to keep the appointment, he discovers that she has been tricked and is the scene which follows shows her seducer. The discovery of the murder and the investigation which follows are well portrayed in the last act, when the woman who has been the gambler's partner in crime discloses what happened.

The arrival on the scene of the Veiled Lady who occupies a prominent social position, and who confessed to have been involved in an intrigue with the dead man, decides the authorities to suppress the facts of the case and the heroine is saved from having to face a trial. The play ends happily in her union with the man who was devoted to her.

The various roles were admirably sustained by the members of the company, particularly those played by the heroine, Miss Marie Adams and her lover Mr. H. Wilton Young. Mr. Jackson as the rascal played a difficult part splendidly as also did Miss Marguerite Young, and the other members of the troupe were also in excellent form.

In the intervals a variety of specialties was put on, of which perhaps the Dancing Durands were the most enthusiastically received and the Jazz Orchestra kept things lively.

The cast was as follows:—

Donald Houston..... H. Wilton Young

This evening the Company will play "Thumbs Down," and after their success last night it is certain that they will again have a packed house.

"Thumbs Down" is the very latest New York hit, and it will be its premier presentation in St. John's. The play offers unusual value to amusement-seekers, not only because it sets an absolutely new style as a "thrill-drama," but because it is generously supplied with comedy and the theme rests upon a romance that is exceedingly appealing.

Growing Rich by Bankruptcy
SWINDLERS WHO FIND LOOP-HOLES IN OUR LAW.
Twenty-four million pounds! That according to Sir Henry Whitehead, President of the Association for the Prevention of Fraudulent Trading, has been lost in the textile trades alone during the last two and a half years by "suspicious bankruptcies."

Large as the sum is, it is probably well within the mark, for recently gangs of foreigners have been exploiting our bankruptcy laws with an audacity and on a scale that have never been paralleled.

These rogues start with little capital and buy large quantities of goods, selling confederates as references. They sell the goods to friends at knock-out prices, the confederates usually masquerading as "job lots."

A quantity of soap worth £104 wholesale, was disposed of for £76. Shoes valued by the makers at £400 were "slaughtered" for £76. A consignment of cloth valued at £800 was sold for £430. Manchester goods bought for £107 were promptly turned over to an alien for £64.

Controlled by Master "Mads" With the money obtained in this way, the rogues live on their credit for a year or two—one admitted the other day that during the eighteen months he kept going his personal expenditure was £200 a week—and then fail, when it is usually found that their assets are not worth two pence. The furniture, in nine cases out of ten, is claimed by the bankrupt's wife, and if there is anything in the way of stock, claims for large amounts are put in by members of the gang, with the result that real creditors, like Mother Hubbard's dog, get nothing.

Generally, too, the public examinations are farcical. In two recent "smashes"—one was for £24,000 and the other for £50,000—it was stated that books were not kept, and only a few days ago a Russian who had failed for £28,000, with a total deficiency of more than £70,000, said that his books had been inadvertently lost. Still worse was the case of an alien who declared that, as he could not write English, he did not keep books. The police found from his cheque-book that more than £100,000 had passed through his account in a year.

During the past two years there have been nearly five hundred cases of this kind, and in the majority the bankrupts have been either so young as to warrant the suspicion that they were controlled by a master mind, or fully-armed specimens of what the Americans call "gangsters."

One of the youthful swindlers started in business when he was only sixteen, signing the lease of some premises he acquired in the name of his brother, who was two years older than himself.

Another "gangster" who is now in prison, after being convicted of larceny, specialised for a time in long firm trades, and then, turning to the bankruptcy game, failed for £35,000. As he neglected to supply any statement of accounts, a warrant was issued against him for contempt of court; but it could not be executed because he had disappeared. In the end he was sent to prison for motor-car thefts on thoroughly up-to-date and systematic lines.

It is time that the law was strengthened and a stop put to the activities of the herds of alien swindlers who are now plundering honest traders all over the country. Many of such traders already have been ruined by them, and under existing conditions there will be additions to their number nearly every week.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

A WOMAN WOULD KNOW.

A friend of mine has just bought a new gas stove and she is much disappointed in the burner. "It is supposed to be the very latest thing," the gas man told me, "but it doesn't spread the heat evenly at all on large surfaces like griddles and omelette pans. I told the salesman that they ought to have a woman in the factory where such things are made to demonstrate the working out of it. And you should have heard him laugh. 'A woman making stoves? That's a good one,' he said."

And yet my friend's idea is entirely practical.

The Man-Planned Refrigerator. There is a long list of apparatus made by men for women's use that could be greatly improved by additions or changes which are obvious to the women who use them but which evidently never occurred to the men who invented them.

For instance, there is the case of the refrigerator. There are a few on the market now, I believe, that have the drain pipe in the front where it is easy to get at. But the one that I own, which was the best that could be bought ten years ago, has the drain pipe in the very back, starting from a little shelf so located that, to clean it you have to twist yourself at an impossible angle and reach up blindfold. You can't see what you are doing at all, you just have to guess.

And sink! The so-called "standard height" is so low that it makes working at them a back-breaking performance. Women have demanded that they be built differently and to-day your builder or plumber will say: "The 'standard height' is so and so, but we will change it if you wish." They speak as if this were a special concession. It shouldn't be. In other words as one woman put it: "Measure me, not the sink."

Treasure-Trove From the Sea

THE STRANGE STORY OF AMBERGRIS.

To the expert the delicate odour of choice perfumes brings visions of the sea—of whaling ships, old wharves, and barrels reeking of blubber and tar.

That the best perfumes are expensive is due not to the fact that the choicest flowers are used, but to the presence in their composition of a substance, obtainable only from the sea, that is worth its weight in gold. Called ambergris, the story of this remarkable substance is as bizarre as it is romantic. Indeed, it is so grotesque that at first no one would believe it, although, as a result of recent research, the facts have now been definitely established.

Why Perfumes Lose Their Fragrance. In appearance ambergris is like pale grey burnt coal. It is found in lumps weighing anything from a few ounces to a hundred or more pounds, and in solution it forms the most satisfactory means of combining the various essences used in scent manufacture. It is because no ambergris is used in making them that the cheaper perfumes lose their fragrance so quickly.

According to most works of reference, ambergris is usually found on beaches or floating on the sea. Actually this occurs so rarely that in the last fifty years fewer than half a dozen instances have been recorded. Over ninety-five per cent. of the world's ambergris is obtained by those engaged in the whaling industry.

The mainstay of the sperm whale's diet is the cuttlefish, which it chews with the aid of the only teeth it possesses, a set of six-inch ivory tusks in the lower jaw. But there is one part of the cuttlefish that not even a whale can digest, and that is the beak. This is about half an inch long, and is sharp and horny. Ambergris contains numbers of these undigested beaks.

$100 a Pound.

Exactly what happens to cause the development of ambergris is still a matter of controversy, but there seems no doubt that it is the outcome of indigestion brought about by obstruction in the whale's interior. There is every indication, in fact, that the undigested beaks form a lump which increases in size, ultimately causing the whale considerable discomfort.

For many years the value of ambergris was not realized by the whalers, who, had they but known, could not ordinarily have acquired in a lifetime. Now when a whale is captured the skipper's first care is to delve into the carcass with a long-handled knife to ascertain if ambergris is present.

At the present time ambergris fetches about £100 a pound. But do not imagine that a stroll by the sea is likely to reward you with the discover of a piece of this strange stuff. Every year the expert consulted by the writer receives scores of specimens of so-called ambergris picked up by shore walkers, who are usually disappointed, and sometimes indignant, when their "finds" are pronounced worthless.

Kept in a Bank's Vault. One woman forwarded a bulky parcel containing what proved to be petrified wood pulp. Another finder, a boy, was disappointed to learn that his discovery proved on examination to be a lump of coagulated fat, probably thrown overboard by a ship's cook.

Probably the most valuable find of ambergris was also the most mysterious. Known as the "Bank" not because it was kept for some months in a bank's vaults, this piece weighed 163lb. and realized £10,000. It was never divulged where this valuable mass was found.

The piece of ambergris, weighing 53lb., landed recently in the Hebrides and sold in London for £9,500, was probably of the rare golden variety, the market price of which, for many years past, has averaged £10 an ounce.

I would not pray for gifts or common things.
For fortune's smile or even victory sweet;
I would not ask that I be spared the stings
And cares of life which every man must meet.
I would not pray to be relieved 'rom wrong
However keen its pain, but I would ask
When comes the test, that God shall make me strong
And grant me courage to complete my task.
Grant me the faith to trust and still keep on
Despite the darkness and the fearful doubt;
To bear life's bitterness, but when 'tis gone
To keep no bitter memories about.
This I would ask: Not that I shall be spared
Trials of disappointment, loss of pain,
But that my soul with courage be prepared
To meet the conflict and to stand the strain.

Seaweed Snacks

A Devonshire delicacy which is at its best just now is "laver"—a dish made from a seaweed which grows in broad ribbons on the rocks around the coast of the county.

The weed is gathered at low tide, then washed and boiled twice, when it is fit to be eaten. Laver is served with vinegar, and comes into season about the end of August, in September it turns black, and is then still more highly esteemed.

Another delicacy, very much in demand on the southwest coast, is the common samphire—a seaweed found on the rocks all round England. The common samphire is preserved in vinegar, peppercorns, and salt, being added. At one time it could be bought in Covent Garden.

Long silk fringe finishes scarves of mode, metal faces being particularly favored.

For Development of the Fishing Industry

Portion of the King's Wharf will be transferred to the Biological Board and Large Building will be Altered and Used as School of Fisheries.

The School of Fisheries, for which the Federal Government voted $70,000, will be established in Halifax within the next two or three weeks. A portion of King's Wharf will be transferred to the Biological Board of Canada, and the middle building will be converted into premises for the purpose of the school and biological station. Dr. Huntman, of the Board, which is a subsidiary branch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be in Halifax some time next week to make arrangements for the commencement of operations preparatory to the establishment of the school.

The School of Fisheries will be to the fishing industry of this country exactly what an experimental farm is to the agricultural interests of Nova Scotia. It will carry on work of development of fishing industry, experimenting in every practical phase of it, and be a source from which those interested in the development of the fishing industry of Nova Scotia may secure the information desired. There will be a staff of scientists appointed by the Biological Board of Canada, and the school will function in co-operation with Dalhousie University and with the Nova Scotia Technical College.

There is a scientific station in St. Andrews, New Brunswick; the one to be erected in Halifax will be the educational station of the Board. The one in St. Andrews attracts a large number of people every year, and the same is expected of the station in Halifax.

One of the men in Halifax interested in a foremost manner in this project is A. Handfield Whitman, of Robt. Jones and Whitman, who some time ago was appointed to the Board as representing the Atlantic Coast commercial interests in the fishing industry.—Morning Chronicle.

Common Ailments of Middle Age

Are indicated in women by nervous conditions, irritability, melancholia, pains and aches in the back, dizzy spells, headaches and heat flashes. These trying conditions may be easily overcome and such symptoms controlled by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will interest women to know that in a recent canvass among over one hundred and twenty-one thousand women, ninety-eight out of every hundred reported benefit from its use.

Premature Burial

Fears of premature burial have resulted in the formation of a society to effect reforms in the law of death certification. There is, however, nothing new in these fears. The Egyptians kept the bodies of the dead under careful supervision by the priests previous to embalming, and until satisfied that life was extinct. The Greeks were aware of the dangers of premature burial and often cut off the fingers of a person believed to be dead before cremation.

In modern times, the fear of being buried alive has haunted many. Willie Collins had this fear, and always left overnight on his dressing-table a note solemnly enjoining that, should he be found dead, his supposed death was to be very carefully tested by a doctor.

Hans Andersen always carried a note in his pocket to the same effect. Harriet Martineau left her doctor ten pounds to see that her head was amputated before burial. Edmund Yates left twenty guineas with the provision that his jugular vein was to be severed.

Lady Burton (the widow of the famous traveller, Sir Richard Burton) who was subject to fits of trance, desired that her heart be pierced with a needle.

Premature burial is of the rarest occurrence, and it is doubtful if many authenticated cases could be brought forward.

Quebec Alienist Here From Geneva

Dr. A. H. Desloges, Director of Insane Asylums, Talks of Hygiene—Condemnation of Birth Control.

The new attitude shown towards mental hygiene was one of the most important outcomes of the recent international Medical Congress at Geneva. In the opinion of Dr. A. H. Desloges, Director of Provincial Insane Asylums and Venereal Diseases, who has just returned from a forty-day sojourn in Switzerland, where he was Canada's medical representative. While he was in Europe Dr. Desloges also attended the Congress of Mental Hygiene in Belgium, and was much impressed by the amount of discussion and discussion given to subjects such as feeble-mindedness, its causes, treatment, and the adequate institutional accommodation. Intelligence tests were more and more coming into favor, he said, in determining whether or not a patient has criminal tendencies, and if he is of normal or abnormal mentality. During the coming year, the Congress members will present themselves in all new forms of tests, and reports that will probably show great strides in this branch of medicine will be presented at the meeting of world representatives next year.

The Conference which began at Geneva moved about to Geneva, Zurich, Lyons, Basle, Leyden, Dares and Bern, where the delegates heard lectures from medical officers of Switzerland and members of the League of Nations, and visited institutions, laboratories and dispensaries throughout the country. They were thus enabled to become thoroughly acquainted with the most perfect social hygiene system of the world, where all branches of medicine, including food inspection, prophylaxis, social and mental hygiene have reached a high degree of operation.

But while Doctor Desloges was much impressed with many phases of the social medical system in Switzerland, he was shocked at the new attitude that is developing there in regard to birth control.

A Bad Remedy.

"Propagandists have taken the view that the population is increasing to such a greater extent than wealth, that the habitable space in the country is limited, that a very strict form of birth control is necessary. It has become imperative for everyone to become acquainted with all methods of birth control, and for women who have borne five children to be sterilized. In some parts of the country a vote in favor of legalizing abortion was taken and defeated by almost a negligible majority. If it is taken again, it will go through," Dr. Desloges declared.

The outcome of this present attitude in the opinion of Dr. Desloges is disastrous. "If all these things are practised the population will decrease fifty per cent. in less than three generations, and the effect on morality can hardly be estimated," he said.

"The optimum family was given a great deal of consideration," he continued. "I pointed out that the attention of authorities in such countries as Germany and Switzerland should be called to the fact that the drug traffic between those countries and Canada was going on to such an extent. Following this suggestion, it was decided to inform the Government that both the production and shipping of opium to occidental countries should be stopped."

The treatment of gonorrhea in Switzerland, received Dr. Desloges' most profound admiration, as the disease is so prevalent in that country, nearly sixty per cent. of the inhabitants being affected. Iodine was used largely in treatment, he said, and was even added to candles and salt preparations. Further report of this work will be given at the congress next year, and "it is felt that gonorrhea is important in investigating immobility and criminality."

"There were no further developments along the lines of cancer and tuberculosis cures," he stated. "Rest and regime are still the only things that doctors can prescribe to patients suffering from tuberculosis, and radiation and surgery in cancer cures. Insulin was looked upon with favor, he said by doctors from all over the world in the treatment of diabetes.

Cannot Prevent.

"Representatives from the United States were very anxious to start a movement for the prevention of what they called the 'White Slave Traffic.' Investigation into this term resulted in the discovery that the traffic as such, was almost negligible, and that the term was misused for prostitution. European doctors expressed the opinion that it was impossible to prevent prostitution and that it was better to tolerate it than have it scatter."

Dr. Desloges expressed his surprise that in spite of the high development of health conditions in Switzerland, there was little attention given to school inspection, industrial inspection, and tuberculosis inspection, and the organization of mental hospitals were anything but modern.

In a report which he will prepare for the Provincial and Federal Governments, Dr. Desloges will point out the need of adjusting the impression which exists very largely in Europe, that the United States Immigration quota applies to Canada. This wrong idea would prevent Canada from receiving the best class of immigrants, he said. Montreal Star, Oct. 15.

Improved Prison System

WINNIPEG (Can. Press)—Satisfaction with the reformative measures adopted in Canadian penitentiaries was expressed by Hon. E. J. McMurray, Solicitor-General, and member for North Winnipeg, following a Dominion tour of inspection of penal institutions.

"I have impressed very forcibly," said Mr. McMurray, "with the scientific attitude and kindly interest of the penitentiary officials in the welfare of the inmates. In this department of human endeavor, undoubtedly advancement is being made as in every other line of human thought and effort. The average prisoner is not a man different in every way from his fellow men, but exceedingly like him, and the treatment for human advancement used outside of prisons is being applied with marked effect inside the Canadian institutions to-day."

Having spoken in praise of the Prince Albert penitentiary as an institution of the most modern kind, Mr. McMurray said it was undoubtedly the case that the prisoner has the opportunity of working in the open air under the system adopted at this and other penitentiaries has a better chance of reforming than was the case in former days. "Prisoners have now a greater variety of work," the Solicitor-General stated, "and many of the products show fine skill and good teaching. They now manufacture for many of the departments of the government and in this manner one of the greatest problems is being solved, that of employing prisoners at work that in terests them, educates and fits them for easy adaptation of society when paroled. "The parole system," Mr. McMurray explained, "is designed to assist the prisoner to pass gradually from prison life into the ordinary life of the community, passing through the stages of absolute control to partial control and finally to independence of life and action. This parole system has been very successful in redeeming men who have fallen into ways of living that brought them into conflict with the laws of the land and has saved the country large sums of money, and it has been particularly successful in the fact that a very small percentage of paroled prisoners are afterwards convicted of crime."

Mr. McMurray emphasized the need for the public, particularly business men and community associations, to lend their aid in this work by assisting the authorities in finding employment for men as they come from prison.

Speaking of the progress made with tourist traffic in British Columbia, the Solicitor-General urged the importance of good roads throughout the west, and offered the suggestion that there should be another national park as an additional attraction for tourists from the United States.

"The great national park at Banff is being developed," he said, "but I think a large park should be established between Winnipeg and Banff, possibly in the Qu'Appelle Valley somewhere. If properly advertised I think that would be a popular and very interesting break for the tourist passing from Winnipeg to the West."

3,500 Miles in the Arctic

ON FOOT OVER FROZEN SEAS

Three thousand five hundred miles on foot across frozen land and frozen sea, the discovery of two new lands, meals of boiled seal skin and ox-hide, wading for miles through icy lakes of water above a solid sea-top, and finally to be "marooned" on an Arctic island and dramatically rescued—with the thermometer sometimes down to 80 below zero, and blizzards blowing—such are some of the features of Harold Noyce's "With Stefansson in the Arctic."

Noyce, who was commander of the relief expedition to Wrangel Island last year, was nineteen when he went in the whaler that discovered the lost Stefansson on Banks Island in 1913—Stefansson, the head of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, who, when his ship was crushed in the ice, calmly set off northward with two companions across the frozen Beaufort Sea, intending to live on what he could find!

Sleeping in Snow Huts.

The world gave him up for dead, while he was, in fact, discovering Borden Island.

Noyce joined Stefansson, and this book is the record of two years' exploration with Stefansson hundreds of miles north of the Arctic Circle, living mainly on seal and caribou, and sleeping in snow huts.

By the time he was twenty-one Noyce had done more than 2,300 miles by sledge and dog-team. He had been the first man to set foot on Melghen Island—away north of where Franklin and his crew perished.

Stefansson took possession of this land in the name of the King on behalf of the Dominion of Canada. This was on June 16th, 1914. There were three men on the trip.

The return from Melghen Island took them across an area previously reported as land, but this supposed land "they found buried under some hundred fathoms of salt water." They found themselves "out at sea on nearly impassable ice."

Next year—1917—Noyce went with Stefansson still farther north across the frozen sea—about level with the top of Greenland—and the little party barely escaped disaster.

Ensnared in Ice For Seventy Years.

Later a wonderful thing happened. They came to Deley Island, off Melville Island, and saw a pole sticking up from a pyramid of rocks. Near it was the depot left in 1853 by Captain Kellett, of the Franklin Search Expedition.

"Great oaken barrels, three tiers deep, stood cased in ice and snow. We opened some of the barrels. Some contained heavy woolen sweaters; others fine brass-buttoned, scarlet-colored, and satin-laced broadcloth pea-jackets; others had highly-colored, fantastically-designed mittens. There were barrels of long leather sea-boots, felt shoes, knitted underwear."
