HOW DEACON TUBMAN AND THE

BY W. H. H. MURRAY.

'Tell the folks that you won't be back till night,' called the deacon from the and peculiar that the snarl village chaps rising along in their jaunty turn-outs, used to chaff the good deacon on the character of his steel, and satirically challenge him to a brush. The deacon always took their badinage in good part, although he inwardly said more than once, 'If I ever get a good chance, when there's not too many around, I'll go to the turn of the road beyond the church and let Jack out on them.' For Dick had given him a hint of the horse's history, and told him 'he could knock the spots out of 30,' and wickedly urged the deacon to take the starch out of them air chaps some of these days. Such was the horse, then, that the deacon had ahead of him and the old-fashioned leigh when, with the parson alongside he struck into the principal street of the village.

New Year's day is a lively day in many country villages, and on this day especially, as the sleighing was perfect, everybody was out. Indeed, it had got noised abroad that certain troopers of local fame were to be on the street that afternoon, and as the boys worded it, 'there would be heaps of fun going on.' And so it happened that everybody in town, and many who lived out of it, were on this particular street, and just at the hour, too, when the deacon came to the foot of it, so that the walk on either side was lined darkly with lookers on, and the smooth snow path between the two lines looked like a veritable home-stretch on a race day.

Now, when the deacon had reached the corner of the main street and turned into it, it was at that point where the course terminated and the 'brushes' were used, and at the precise moment when the dozen or twenty horses that had just come flying down were being pulled up preparatory to returning at the gallop to the customary starting point at the head of the street, a half mile away. So that the old-fashioned sleigh was surrounded by the light fairy cutters of the rival races, and old Jack was shambling awkwardly along in the midst of the high-spirited and smoking nags that had just come down the street.

'Hilloo, deacon,' shouted one of the boys, who was driving a trim looking bay, and who had crossed the line at the ending of the course second only to a pacer that could 'speed like a streak of lightning,' as the boys said. 'Hilloo, deacon,' said the boy to shake out old shamble heels and show us fellows what 'he can do to-day.' And the merry-hearted chap—son of the principal lawyer of the place—laughed heartily at his challenge,

Liberal Conservative Club.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. John Hall of New York says Santa Claus must go. He says that there is in this deluge no immoral element upon children and that it is not right to deceive the little ones with a superstition. Where the immorality comes in it is difficult to discern. A man must have his eyes very wide open for evil if he can detect any injury to a child for believing in Santa Claus. But why object to it because it is a superstition. Superstitions have been the swaddling clothes and the pap and ornament of the race. I say it is by them and then only that the human mind is trained up to truth. We have to do one old boot and one new boot. We have to get rid of the old because we have grown out of it. The new are in the church to-day big and bold. Some see through them to the light that is beyond, and to which they lend, others follow them blindly believing they are in reality the truth. Those who want to see the truth must get rid of the old and then struggle for their maintenance, an

and he was following the editor through his own mind, and was glad to merely contradict a statement of his, and not to make a statement of his own made by him. One is "that Mr. Adams and Mr. Morrissey quarrelled over matters of party administration," the other that "a few prominent members of the party continued to act with Mr. Adams and succeeded in crowding out Mr. Morrissey." These two statements are not only mutually exclusive, but with many others published in the Advertiser on several occasions have not the elements of truth in them, being base falsehoods told for a purpose. Mr. Morrissey was dissatisfied over matters of a personal nature, because he thought his private interests were not looked after as he considered they should be, and hence from purely selfish motives he tendered his resignation from the Executive Committee of the Club, which affair was duly accepted and his name stricken off the roll. There is no doubt that Mr. Morrissey well understood that in sever-

New Year's.

There were no watch night services in any of the churches on New Year's eve, the only religious greeting to the New Year was that given at the Barracks by the Salvation Army, where enthusiastic services were held. Monday was kept as New Year's day, and was celebrated by sleigh driving and calling, though very little of the latter was done, the custom having almost died out. The day was kept very quietly, with no unseemly noises or "rackets" to disturb the public peace.

Tobogganing. The toboggan slide is about finished and will be opened shortly. The structure is larger than the one that was unceremoniously chopped down by the railroad authorities last spring, and is built on an improved plan. It will be open on different nights than those of the park, so that the young people of the town can participate in both amusements.

Two direct results must follow enforcement of this law. It will be harder to procure and the business more degraded than it is now. I have no doubt, the ons. The department has not enforced the increased license enactment, and has thereby shown a desire to first hear what the fishermen have to say and in disposition to treat them fairly. The smelt have all left the river. Some fishermen at the mouth of the river are said to be catching a few. The local buyers are expecting a rise in the market value soon and are anxiously looking for the return of the smelts. Those who have money on hand would do well to hold for the higher prices which the knowledge
