STREET CARS

COLLIDED

Serious Accident on Dundas Street Saturday Night.

Due to the Carelessness of a Street Railway Employee—A Green Hand—Ignored the Rules—Was Severely Injured.

The worst rear-end collision in the history of the London Street Railway Company occurred about 11 o'clock Saturday night near Waterloo street, on Dundas. The vestibule of one car and the rear platform of the other were completely wrecked and a motorman severely injured. Car 98, in charge of Motorman W. Sullivan and Conductor J. J. Watson, ran into car 56, manned by Conductor J. Cannon and Motorman E. Sowers. Both cars were en route to the barns, and car 56 had stopped to let off a passenger. The Motorman on the second car seemed oblivious to obstruction ahead, and the cars collided with great force. The vestibule of car 98 was flattened against the body of the car, and Motorman Sullivan escaped alive as a miracle. He was painfully bruised about the left thigh, and his hands and face were cut. Conductor Cannon was thrown against the car door, breaking the glass and cutting his hands. Conductor Cannon, on car 56, jumped just before the collision, and Motorman Sowers was not badly hurt. Detective Nickle and Mr. H. B. Elliot, who were on car 56, were thrown to the floor by the impact, but not injured. There were no passengers on car 98. Sullivan was taken to Superintendent Pottinger's residence, nearby, then to Dr. Moore's office, and after his injuries were attended to driven to his home, 316 Grey street. He has been employed by the company two months.

The controller of car 98 was completely destroyed.

THE JEWISH SYNAGOGUE

New Place of Worship Impressively Dedicated.

Rabbi Wittenberg, of Toronto, Conducted the Ceremony—Col. Leys and Other Speakers Present.

Yesterday was a red letter day for the Jewish population of London. It was marked by the formal opening and dedication of the handsome new synagogue on Richmond street, near Simcoe. The synagogue is a brick structure of the distinctive Jewish type of architecture. It has a seating capacity of about 200, and was completely filled during the interesting ceremony yesterday afternoon. Rev. Rabbi Wittenberg, of the Holy Blossom Temple, Toronto, conducted the services, assisted by Rabbi Phillips, of London.

At 2:30 p.m. the members of the congregation assembled at Heard's Hall, on Wellington street, where they have hitherto worshipped, and headed by Rabbi Wittenberg and Phillips, bearing the scrolls containing the law of Moses, marched in procession to the new synagogue. The congregation was seated, both men and women wearing their hats. The scrolls were then carried three times around the congregation by two members of the synagogue. Rabbi Wittenberg leading the way and repeating psalms and prayers in English and Hebrew. The scrolls were then placed in an ark, built in the wall, at the rear of the raised platform, over the door of which hung a heavy white curtain, ornamented with the double fringe, the Jewish symbol. Two lighted lamps were suspended from the ceiling, and three candles burned on the altar.

Seated on the platform were Col. Leys, M.P.P., E. J. Parke, G. W. Armstrong, Rabbi Wittenberg, President M. Leff and Vice-President I. Levy.

Col. Leys spoke briefly, congratulating the Jews of London on their handsome new synagogue. He hoped the building would soon be too small for them, and would be replaced by a larger one. The Jews of London were good citizens, and deserved prosperity.

Mr. G. W. Armstrong was the next speaker. The Jews and Christians were brothers, he said. They worshipped the same God and had a common heritage in the grand old psalms of David, the sweet songs of Israel.

Rabbi Wittenberg preached an eloquent sermon in English, in which he reviewed the history of the synagogue, which really embraced the history of the Jewish people. He cited many instances to show that the Jews had always been willing to sacrifice their lives, if need be, for their faith. The synagogue had been the force that had held Israel together through centuries of the most terrible persecution. In the middle ages, when the Jews of Europe had been shut up in the ghettos of the large cities, under the most degrading conditions, they alone of all the people of Europe retained principles of morality. The fact was due to the synagogue. Replying to the charge of cowardice frequently made against the Jews, he said that while the Jewish mission on earth was peace and not war, the Jews were always willing to fight for the country that granted them citizenship. He gave figures proving their readiness to enlist and their courage in battle, as shown by the recent great wars.

The synagogue was a refutation to those who said the Jews did not intend to become permanent citizens. They were a loyal and industrious people, faithful to the country that gave them the privileges of citizenship.

At the close of the service a meeting was held in the interest of the Zionist movement.

Those comprising the synagogue committee are Messrs. Goldstick, Levy, Harris, Sarver and Schwartz. Services will be held in the new synagogue every Saturday. The congregation at present comprises about 35 families.

ONE WOMAN'S DEVOTION

Mrs. Rijnhart's Thrilling Story of Her Journey Through Tibet.

First Methodist Church Thronged With eager Listeners—A Heroic Figure.

The First Methodist Church was crowded last evening by people from all parts of the city, who went to hear from Mrs. Dr. Susie Rijnhart's own lips the story of her terrible sufferings during her marvelous journey alone through the savage wilds of Tibet, and of her encounters with the still more savage inhabitants. Many persons, unable to obtain seats, stood patiently and listened with breathless interest to the thrilling recital of experiences little short of the miraculous.

Mrs. Rijnhart, who is a frail-looking little woman, bore the marks of the terrible hardships through which she had passed. She wore the picturesque native Tibetan costume, consisting of a cap and a long gown, extending to her feet and fastened with a girdle. She explained, when she began to speak, that by reason of her long sojourn there, Chinese was more familiar to her than English, and that she found some difficulty in using the latter language fluently. She said she was more at home in London than anywhere else save Tibet.

Then, simply, as one person might talk to another, she gave a brief description of Tibet and the people there, passing on to the story of the sojourn of her husband and herself on the borders of Tibet, of how they won the love and confidence of the people; of the horrors of the Mohammedan rebellion, which raged around them, and in which 100,000 people were killed; of their long journey, accompanied, this time, by their baby boy, into the heart of the great closed land, where no foreigner had ever been allowed to penetrate. Then, with simple but touching words, she told of the baby's death and the lonely grave among the snow-capped hills. But the supreme moment was reached when she told of the last time she saw her husband, when, after their horses had been stolen and their guides had deserted them, he started towards some flocks that could be seen grazing in the distance. He turned and waved his hand to her, called back something she could not hear, was lost sight of behind a rock, and was never heard of again. Of the weary, weary journey alone back to civilization, during which she lived much of the time on uncooked barley meal, mixed with snow, and slept at night in the open, Mrs. Rijnhart said little. At no time did she dwell on her personal hardships and sufferings, and she attributed everything to the leading of a Divine Providence, and thanked God for even the child's lonely grave in Tibet. There was something pathetic and yet grandly heroic in the apostolic zeal of this one little woman, who feels that God has placed in her feeble hands the evangelization of a country of 6,000,000 people, are hedged around with government and a religion bitterly hostile to Christian aggression.

A FARMER INDORSES

Dr. Chase's Ointment

The Only Guaranteed Cure For ITCHING PILES.

Mr. James McBurney, farmer and veterinary surgeon, of Embro, Oxford county, states:

"I was troubled with itching piles, and after riding they would get very sore, and bleed, so much so that I was in terrible pain. For nine years I endured this torture, and can safely say that I have tried every remedy one could mention."

Hearing of Dr. Chase's Ointment and knowing of the exceptional merit of the doctor's recipe book, I decided to try the ointment. To my surprise I was cured by one box, and have never been troubled since, though that was two years ago. I am strong and well, and always recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everyone troubled with piles. It is worth its weight in gold and well known all through the country."

Such evidence from a prominent farmer of West Zorra is incontrovertible. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

FOR THE FANS.

In the last 54 games played, Jimmy Ryan has made but one misplay.

The Brooklyn club won every series from the western clubs, winning all 14 games from Cleveland, 11 from Louisville, 8 each from Pittsburgh, Chicago, and St. Louis, and 7 from Cincinnati.

Pulliam is very sore over the rowdy tactics pursued in St. Louis, and says that Tebeau is killing the game there, as he is reputed to have done in Cleveland. The Criger-Latham scrap Harry blames altogether to the ball player.

President Hart, of the Chicago team, says he thinks it would be better for the league and for baseball if the double umpire system were dropped. Several times this year disgraceful scenes have occurred on the field, caused by an umpire refusing to give a decision because he thought it was the other official's duty. "Have one good man, and he can see about everything on the field," says Hart, "and he is the undisputed boss. You have to have one-man power to run anything successfully. Then it is easier to get six good men than twelve."

AMERICANS IN HARD LUCK.
London, Oct. 2.—The Newmarket meeting proved disastrous to the American riders and backers. Riley Grannan, Young Dwyer, Grey and others no longer deny the disastrous finish of their efforts to defeat the English bookmakers. Lord William Beresford had at least £200,000 (£1,000,000) invested in American mounts, besides paying Sloan £5,000, but he has been unable to secure the prices for his entries. The "bookies" put a prohibitive price on all of Sloan's mounts. This disadvantage was twice evaded by Lord Beresford by buying a ticket for the race, and announcing his intended departure. Sloan, of course, returned at the last moment to ride the race. Lord Beresford is said to be contemplating sending his American horses to India.

COMING TO CANADA

The Immigration Shows a Large Increase This Year.

Fully Double That of 1898—Two Thirds Speak English.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—There has been a large increase in the number of declared settlers entering the country. Official returns, prepared by the immigration branch of the interior department, show that from the beginning of the year to the end of August the arrival of intending settlers at Canadian ocean ports were 26,767; the number registering at Winnipeg from the United States, 2,986, and the number of immigrants from the same country at other Northwest points about 100. This gives a grand total for the eight months of 30,063, as compared with 17,535 for the whole of 1898, 21,527 for 1897, and 17,535 for 1896. Of this year's immigrants nearly two-thirds speak English as their mother tongue. The department has received word from Messrs. Lloyd, George, Williams and Rees, the Welsh delegates, that they are largely impressed with the Northwest. They desire to know whether in the event of the Welsh emigration movement being started in Canada it would be possible for the colony to secure a tract of land well removed from other settlements. Of course the department will make no demur to this, but the delegates and those whom they represent will take if they attempt to resist the already existing movement towards the homogeneity of the people of the Northwest. The chief reason for the Welsh desiring to live apart is said to be that they desire to preserve their language, but the experience of the Northwesterners is that Islanders, Menonites and Galician children are thrown to learn English, and insist upon being taught it. There is also considerable intermarriage between those peoples and those speaking English, and it will not be many decades, say Northwesterners, that should know before the whole people of the Northwest speak English habitually.

TRAGEDY NEAR WARDSVILLE

Philip McPhail Shoots the Daughter of P. Doyle.

And Then Dies by His Own Hand—The Girl May Recover.

Rodney, Ont., Oct. 2.—On Friday night about 6 o'clock Philip McPhail, who worked for P. Doyle, farmer, near Wardsville, shot the latter's oldest daughter, about 19 years of age, and afterwards went to his home, about a mile from Doyle's place, and shot himself in the left breast, dying about 12 o'clock at night.

Miss Doyle was shot in the left ear. The doctor in attendance thinks she will recover.

No reason is known why McPhail committed the act.

ANOTHER STORY.
Another account says: A terrible tragedy occurred on Friday evening in the township of Aldboro, Philip McPhail, who lives on the second concession, near the village of Chatham, attempted to kill Miss Doyle, and, failing, put a bullet in his own brain, dying five hours later. Particulars of the affair are hard to obtain.

As far as can be learned, a man named Philip McPhail attempted to kill Miss Doyle, daughter of Patrick Doyle, at the latter's residence, on the third concession of Aldboro. McPhail shot at the young woman, the bullet glancing on the skull and lodging in her shoulder. After discharging the contents of the revolver, and an attempt made to arrest him, upon McPhail noticing the approach of the men, he pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot himself on his own doorstep. He died five hours later. It is expected Miss Doyle will recover.

McPhail was a brother-in-law of Doyle, and the young lady shot is a daughter of Mr. Doyle by his first marriage.

SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN INSANE.

Rodney, Ont., Oct. 2.—Word reached here Saturday afternoon of a fatal shooting affray, which was enacted on Friday evening about 7 o'clock, on the farm of John Doyle, a farmer living about five miles from this place. For some time past considerable ill-feeling has existed between Philip McPhail, a young farmer, residing with his mother about a mile and a half from the Doyle farm. It culminated on the evening mentioned when McPhail called at the Doyle home, and encountered his own sister, Miss Doyle, and a small child, Miss Doyle carrying the latter in her arms. McPhail, by threats, succeeded in changing his sister out of the house, and then commanded Miss Doyle to put the child down. The young lady refused to do this, whereupon McPhail pulled a revolver and threatened to shoot her. In the confusion, the ball entering at the ear

Another correspondent reviews with minuteness the Transvaal situation. He says: A bridge still remains open for Kruger's retreat, since the dispatch which the cabinet considered in detail will not be sent for some time, until Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain have fully discussed the subject. In the meantime the Transvaal will be filled with dilatory tactics, unless the Boers strike the first blow and place the British garrison in Natal on the defensive. If they do not, must we not make a new budget of demands will be sent out, and an army corps of thirty thousand men with it. The reduction of outposts commanding Pretoria and forecast a similar confederation of the British colonies as the ultimate effect of the conquest of the Dutch republic, but they provide a British government with a more detailed plan. Military champions assert that the Boers believe that one Dopper is worth 10 Englishmen in battle, and that that can be no peace in South Africa until the Boers are broken by the British. Boers in Salisbury, when parliament meets, likely to bring up the grievances the uitlanders as a full and ample argument, which will press home the argument, which will press home the argument, which will press home the argument to answer. The country will give the government united support.

It is also implied that the final disposition of the Portuguese colonies in East Africa is to ante-date Great Britain's fight with the Transvaal, and is in order to bring this about, if possible, with no further delay, that Count Von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg, the German ambassador at London, has been conferring repeatedly this week with Lord Salisbury, their negotiations yet being ended.

Your neighbor as yourself when your neighbor is a pretty girl. It is just as easy to cure yourself of Catarrh, Bronchitis or Asthma, if you use Catarrhine, the new medicated air treatment for all diseases of the nasal and respiratory passages caused by germ life. Catarrhine cures by inhalation without danger or risk to the sufferer. It goes wherever air can go and never fails to reach the affected parts. This is why it excels treatments requiring the use of sprays, douches, powders, ointments, etc., which cannot reach the seat of the disease and are therefore useless. INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK

London Street Railway Company decides to issue $50,000 Additional Stock.

The London Street Railway Company decided to increase its capital stock by $50,000, which will bring it up to $400,000. A resolution to that effect was passed at a recent meeting of the shareholders. Though the shareholders do not give any reason for the increase, it is understood that the issue is intended to cover the losses arising out of the strike. It is thought by the directors that the new issue will be taken up by the present shareholders, and that none of the stock will be put on the market.

AMUSEMENTS

THE NEWEST COMBINE.

Mirth, mystery and diablerie is the delightful admixture of stage entertainment which is promised by the appearance of "The Great Triple Alliance" in this city at the Grand tomorrow night. The organization divides its title from the combination of the three modern necromancers, Servais Le Roy, Immo Fox and Frederick Powell. They represent in necromancy the genius of America, France and Germany. The performance given by them will be supplemented by a number of popular entertainers, such as Maud Beall Price, mime and comedienne, Zazelle and Vernon, comedy bar performers, the great musical trio, Leilott Busch and Leilott, and the operatic stars, Bertha Wagner and Bruno Armin.

A RUNAWAY GIRL.

That brilliantly written and quaintly musical composition, "A Runaway Girl," will be presented in London on Tuesday evening, Oct. 10, at the Grand Opera House, and a large and fashionable audience is an assured fact. This pretty comedy, in its entirety and perfection of detail will be interpreted by Augustin Daly's Musical Company, which is composed of real comedians and singers, and includes one of the finest and most complete choruses ever seen on a local stage. "A Runaway Girl," which was written and composed by no less than six young English writers, proved one of the greatest musical successes of the last season.

JONES' SOUTHERN QUADROONS.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening performances of negro melody and mirth will be given at the Grand. The specialties are numerous, and consist of cakewalks, dances, singing, etc.

DAN GODFREY AT DETROIT.

The Detroit Journal commenting upon the concert recently given in Detroit, says: "No band aggregation this season, and we have had Sousa, and the Banda Rosa, received as warm a welcome as did Lieut. Dan Godfrey's famous English band at the Detroit Opera House last night. The musical selections were of wide range, from Rossini's 'William Tell' overture to a farcical bassoon solo; from the 'Holy City' cornet solo and Chopin's 'Valse Brillante' to humorous musical sketches. There was a musical tragedy, comic opera, farce, inspiring military marches, sacred music, and patriotic airs and hymns. At the final close, with the 'Star Spangled Banner' and 'God Save the Queen,' the audience rose simultaneously when the airs opened, and applauded and cheered during the performance, so that half the time the tremendous swelling volume of music was itself drowned in the storm of applause. One young brunette, with flashing black eyes, split her gloves in the triumphant outburst of swelling music, the audience stood thundering applause. A reception followed at the Russell House. Our music loving citizens will soon have an opportunity of hearing this famous band at the Princess Rink. The band will appear in London, afternoon and evening, Oct. 3. Plan at Heintzman's.

There has been a large increase in the number of declared settlers. The grand total for the eight months is 30,682, as compared with 17,535 for the whole of 1898, 21,252 for 1897 and 17,535 for 1896.

Landed as an Educational Center.

With its splendid public and private schools, its colleges, and its Normal School to be opened within a few months, London is yearly becoming an increasingly important educational center. We hope the time is not too distant when London will be the seat of a fully-provided University. One of the foundations of the full University yet to be, is the London Medical School. It has already bestowed no small prestige on the city. The sons of the college have gone out to various fields of labor, carrying with them love for their alma mater, and an advertisement of goodwill for London. In a commercial sense, too, the Medical School has been of no slight advantage. It is estimated that the sum of at least $25,000 per year is spent by the medical students who take their training in London; and the time is not remote when twice that sum will be spent in this city from the same source. It is by institutions of learning, as much as by railways and factories, that the prestige and profits of cities are built up.

Another source of prestige and profit for London will be the splendid new London City Hospital, now nearing completion. Already many cases from all parts of Western Ontario come to London for special treatment. When the new hospital is ready to receive its full quota of private patients, the tendency London-ward will receive a marked impetus, to the promotion of the professional and material advantage of Western Ontario's capital.

To this end, the London Medical School and the new London Hospital can co-operate, with mutual advantage. The opportunities of a good hospital are necessary to a successful Medical School; and a return is made to the Hospital—which in reality means the public—in increased professional efficiency and opportunities for specialization.

The new London Hospital, therefore, means not alone, we hope, a heightened skill, in the long run, for the amelioration of the physical ills of the people of London and Western Ontario, but it means much also for the prestige and importance of London as an educational center. The Advertiser would like to see the entire medical profession of London put its shoulder to the wheel in order to promote the success alike of the London Medical School and of the splendid new Hospital which will begin its work at the outset of the new century.

What a Very Prominent Jeweler of London Says:

London, Sept. 18th, 1899.
Advertiser Printing Company, London, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—I wish to thank you for the most gratifying returns given me through the advertising placed in The Daily and Weekly Advertiser this month. I offered special inducements to visitors for the recent Western Fair, and the results exceeded any idea of what I would reap from the advertising.

To The Advertiser alone is credit due, for the trade brought me, as I used no other newspapers, nor any other means of publicity, outside of your mediums.

Not alone was my trade direct to customers, many of whom brought the advertisement clipped from your paper, but I received a large number of mail orders, proving conclusively that the circulation of The Daily and Weekly Advertiser covers the territory completely. It was the best Fair trade ever done by me, and I heartily extend my thanks for controlling such a vast field with such admirable mediums as The Daily and Weekly Advertiser.

The Strange Metamorphosis.

Presently the door of the school-room opened and another boy entered the room. Dr. Grimstone, it appeared, had not been the occupant of the fly. After all, the newcomer was a tall, narrow-shouldered, stooping fellow, with a sallow, unwholesome complexion, thin lips, and small, sunken brown eyes. His cheeks were creased with a dimpling sub-smile, half uneasy, half malicious, and his tread was mincing and cat-like.

"Well, you fellows?" he said. All rose at once and shook hands effusively. "Why, Chawner?" they cried, "how are you, old fellow? We thought you weren't coming back!"

There was a heartiness in his manner, somewhat at variance with their recent expressions of opinion; but they had doubtless excellent reasons for any inconsistency.

"Well, old Chawner, in a low, soft voice, which had a suggestion of feminine softness, he was going to leave, but I thought you'd be getting into mischief here without me to watch over you. Appleton and Lench and Coker want looking after badly, I know. So, you see, I've come back after all."

He laughed with a little malevolent chuckle as he spoke, and the three boys stared at him, for they had never seen him so hearty, so cheerful, and so unassuming as on this occasion.

After this sally the conversation languished until Tom Grimstone's appearance. He strode in with a semi-professional air, and shook hands with affability.

Tom was a short, plump, sandy-haired youth, not much taller than his comrades, and his first remark was: "I say, you chaps, have you done your holiday task? Pa says he shall keep in everyone who hasn't done mine," which, as a contribution to the general liveliness, was a distinct failure.

Needless to say, the work imposed as a holiday occupation had been first deferred, then forgotten, then remembered too late, and recklessly done with the confidence begotten in a home atmosphere.

Amid a general silence Chawner happened to see Mr. Bultrude in his corner, and crossed over to him. "Why, there's Dicky Bultrude there all the time, and he never came to shake hands! Aren't you going to speak to me?"

Paul growled something indistinctly, feeling strangely uncomfortable and confused.

"What's the matter with him?" asked Chawner. "Does anyone know? Has he lost his tongue?"

"He hadn't lost it coming down in the train," said Coker; "I wish he had. I tell you what, you fellows, let's have a game at last! I'll tell you all about it up in the bedroom."

And Dr. Grimstone really did arrive at this point, much to Paul's relief, and looked in to give a grip of the hand and a few words to those of the boys he had not seen.

Chawner, tipping and the rest came in with him, and the school-room soon filled with others arriving by later trains, among the later comers being the two house masters, Mr. Blunkhorn and Mr. Tinkler; and there followed a season of bustle and conversation, which lasted until the doctor touched a small hand-bell, and ordered them to sit down round the tables while supper was brought in.

Mr. Bultrude was not brought in. The word "supper." He was faint and despondent, and although he had dined not very long since, thought that perhaps a little cold beef and beer, or some warmed-up tripe, might give him courage to tell his misfortunes before bedtime.

Of one thing he felt certain—nothing should induce him to tell his person in a bedroom with any of those violent and vindictive boys; whether he succeeded in declaring himself that night or not, he would at least insist on a separate bedroom. Meanwhile he looked forward to supper as likely to restore sanity and confidence.

But the supper announced so impressively proved to consist of nothing more than two plates piled with small bits of thinly-battered bread, which a page handed round together with tumblers of water; and Paul, in his disappointment, refused the refreshment with more firmness than politeness, as Dr. Grimstone observed.

"You got into trouble last term, Bultrude," he said, sternly, "on account of this same. I'm afraid of you. Your excellent father has informed me of your waste and gluttony at his own bountiful spread table. Don't let me have to reprove you for this again." Bultrude, feeling the necessity of propitiating him, hastened to take the two largest squares of bread and butter on the plate. They were moist and thick, and he had considerable difficulty in disposing of them; besides, the gratification of hearing himself described as a "pig" by his neighbors, who reproved him with a refreshing candor.

"I must get away from here," he thought, ruefully. "Dick seems very unpopular. I wish I didn't feel so low-spirited and unwell. Why can't I carry it off easily, as—a kind of joke? How hard these forms are, and how those infernal boys did jog my back!"

Bedtime came at length. The boys fled, one by one, out of the room, and the doctor stood by the door to shake hands with them as they passed.

Mr. Bultrude lingered until the others had gone, for he had made up his mind to seize this opportunity to open the doctor's eyes to the mischievous he was making. But he felt unaccountably nervous; the diplomatic and well-chosen introduction he had carefully prepared had left him at the critical moment all power of thought was lost, with it, and he went tremblingly up to the schoolmaster, feeling hopelessly at the mercy of anything that chose to come out of his mouth.

"Dr. Grimstone," he began, "before retiring I must insist I mean I must request—What I wish to say is—"

"I see," said the doctor, catching him up sharply, "you wish to apologize for your extraordinary behavior in the railway carriage? Well, though you made some amends afterward, an apology is very much needed. Say no more about it."

"It's not that," said Paul, hopelessly. "I wanted to explain—"

"Your conduct with regard to the bread and butter, if it was simply want of appetite, of course there is no more to be said. But I have an abhorrence of—"

"Quite right," said Paul, recovering himself. "I hate waste myself, but there is something else I must tell you before—"

"If it concerns that disgraceful conduct of Coker's," said the doctor, "you may speak on it, I shall have to consider his case tomorrow. Has any similar case of disobedience come to your knowledge? If so, I expect you to disclose it to me. You have found some other boy with sweets in his possession?"

"Good heavens, sir!" said Mr. Bultrude, looking at his watch. "I haven't been searching the whole school for sweets! I have other things to occupy my mind, sir. And, once for all, I demand to be heard! Dr. Grimstone, there are, about domestic secrets that can only be alluded to in this crisis, but I see that one of your assistants is writing at his table there. Can we not go where there will be less risk of interruption? You have a study, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir," said the doctor, with terrible grimness, "I have a study—and I have a cane. I can convince you of both facts if you wish it. If you sulk me again by this brazen bluffing, I will be off to your dormitory, sir, before you provoke me to punish you. Not another word! Go!"

And, incredible as it may appear to all who have never been in his position, Mr. Bultrude went. It was almost an abdication, it was treachery to his true self, he knew that; but the sense of firmness at this crisis, but nevertheless, his courage gave way all at once, and he crawled up the bare, carpeted stairs without any further protest.

"Good night, Master Bultrude," said a housemaid, meeting him on the staircase, "you know your bedroom. No. 6, Master Coker, Master Biddlecomb and the others."

Paul dragged himself up to the highest landing stage, and with a sick foreboding, opened the door on which the figure 6 was painted.

It was a large, bare, plainly-papered room, with several curtainless windows, the blinds of which were drawn, a long stand of wash-hand basins and eight little white beds against the walls.

A fire was lighted in consideration of its being the first night, and several boys were talking excitedly round it. "Here he is!" they cried, "he's here! Tell more tales!" they cried, as Paul entered nervously. "Now then, Bultrude, what have you got to say for yourself?"

HER MISTAKE.

She made red underclothing for the little heathen over the sea. She went into the slums and set men from the devil's bondage free.

Meanwhile her husband had to wear socks that were holey, and the child who should have had the watchful care was left to run at large and wild.

She sought to lift the heathen up. And teach the sinner to be good. She had a way of her own, and she was the worst boy in the neighborhood.

Every farmer knows that to kill weeds he must go to the roots. To cut the weed off on the surface, means that the weed is still left to grow. It's just that way with boils, ulcers, eruptions, pimples and similar diseases of the flesh.

To cure them you must go to the roots, down into the blood. Here surface treatment never gets rid of the disease. It will come back at the first opportunity.

It is its wonderful power in the purification of the blood that Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery owes many of its triumphs of healing. It cleanses the blood thoroughly, eliminating all the refuse matter and clears out the waste and poisonous particles which clog the body and so foul the flesh. It eradicates from the blood the conditions which make disease possible. The result is that diseases die out like fires that are unaided.

THE SAILOR HERO OF MANILA BAY

Honored by a Magnificent Pageant on Land.

Bolishing Even the Record-Breaking
Marine Parade of Friday.

Enthusiastic Tribute to the Man Whose Fleet Smashed Montejó's Ships—
"Uncle Sam's Address to Admiral Dewey."

New York, Oct. 1.—The land parade yesterday capped the climax, the city, state and nation united in one vast demonstration worthy of the hero of Manila. The earth trembled beneath the tread of 50,000 men, and the air was torn with the shouts of millions.

The naval parade of Friday was a magnificent and superb spectacle, but the wonder of modern times was the great land parade. Thousands of proud men of the land and sea forces, militia of fifteen states and the veterans of the civil and Spanish-American wars, swelled the procession and gave it the dignity in size that it boasted in sentiment.

Walls of people miles long stretched down the line of the city, either side, a dense impregnable mass. Fifth avenue, from Fifty-ninth street to the Washington arch, where the splendid parade disbanded, was solidly packed with spectators, who overflowed into the buildings, windows, and onto the roof lines, sat in embrasures and crowded scaffolding. Along Broadway, where it crossed the avenue, the sky-scrapers were as crowded at the top as at the bottom, and for blocks down the intersecting streets tenants hung from the windows and fire-escapes, and multitudes of them were on the roofs lying flat on their stomachs, peering down at the parade.

Par down this living lane the column marched while the air was gorgeous with the mist of banners and vibrating with shouts of welcome and admiration, the clatter of horses' hoofs when the cavalry moved, the rumble of the drums, the snarl of drums, the clear drawn bugle call and the blare of military bands.

Seventeen aerial bombs from the top of the Waldorf-Astoria, headed the approach to the reviewing stand in Madison Square. Several companies of police mounted on glossy, well-trained horses brought up the procession.

SAILORS OF THE OLYMPIA.

When the head of the column appeared, the jacks of the Olympia marching rank on rank with an easy, rolling step and Susa's blue-coated band playing as only it can play, it was a poor American whose heart did not beat higher. Those in the stand leaped upon the shoulders of those in front, and the advancing column with cheers.

The tars of the Olympia were in plain blue, with brown leggings and black cartridge boxes, loose flannel caps and a sword with an easy, rolling step and Susa's blue-coated band playing as only it can play, it was a poor American whose heart did not beat higher. MARINES AND SAILORS.

The marines and sailors of the North Atlantic squadron, eight battalions of them, attracted much attention. The marines, with their brass helmets, marched with a peculiar step, neither seamen's roll nor landman's tread, but a combination. The men of the Brooklyn got, perhaps, the most applause. The provisional brigade of the army, lacking the confidence, easy step for which army veterans are noted. This perhaps is accounted for by the fact that most of the United States army veterans are serving their country on the other side of the world, and those now here are only "rookies." They were preceded by a battalion of the West Point Cadets in their showy uniforms of gray with white duck trousers, marching like one man, 800 legs moving like clockwork, every cap and bayonet in perfect line.

Governor Roosevelt, riding a spirited black horse at the head of the National Guard of the State of New York, and surrounded by brilliantly uniformed officers, received a hearty and continuous ovation from one end of the line to the other. He was in civilian attire and wore a silk hat—that is, when he had it on, as he was waving it right and left for more than half the time. He was escorted by Troop A, whose plumes, rising and falling with the moving of the horses, beautified a block. The artillery seemed more real than the infantry or cavalry, and the commander of the Seventh Light Artillery gave the people an exhibition, setting his battery at a gallop and charging down the line, the plumes of his cannon wheels rumbling like rolling thunder. The crowd gave a whirlwind of applause. The national guard of all the states made a brilliant showing, and the people were greatly interested in the appearance and of the reception they received.

AT THE REVIEWING STAND.

Before Madison Square was reached, Admiral Dewey and the receiving party in carriages passed the front of the procession and alighted at the reviewing stand opposite Twenty-sixth street and took their places in the boxes hung with laurel wreaths that had been reserved for them.

For the first time the admiral saw the great arch of Victory, erected in his honor. It is modeled after Titus' arch in the Roman forum. From the top is a quadriga drawn through rolling clouds, with a sunburst in the center, and a laurel wreath in her hand, typical of the reward to the victor, reared her beautiful outline against the blue sky. The arch is the figure of John Paul Jones, Perry, Hull, Decatur, Fox, and other naval heroes, while on the faces of the piers are magnificent groups symbolic of combat, the return of the victors, the call to arms and peace, and on the grandeur are groups representing the North and East Rivers and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The arch faces the sea. The approaches are guarded by tall columns transforming the street at the reviewing booths into a court of honor.

DECORATIONS IN MADISON SQUARE.

All about Madison Square the decorations charmed the eye. Flags on wires ran from the tall tower of the Madison Square Garden and all the facades as the eye could see up and down Fifth avenue were brilliantly arrayed with bunting and flags. The national streamers flew from the cornices, and a thousand red kites floated high in the sky. Here the admiral reviewed the entire parade. Only one distressing incident occurred within his view. A wire had been stretched across the space between two of the stands on foot. The police officers on foot could not stem the tide which promised to impede the entire parade. Suddenly a half-hundred mounted policemen galloped up, and having formed a line, charged at the people, and back. Many women and children were caught in the crush. Some shrieked, others fainted, and several after the panic was over were carried away in ambulances.

IN THE EVENING.

Admiral Dewey dined with relatives in the evening. Owing to fatigue he did not attend the smoker given to the marines of the Olympia at the Waldorf-Astoria, which closed the two days' festivities. The feature of the smoker was the recitation of a welcome verse to Admiral Dewey. Cal Stewart, clad in the garb of Uncle Sam, gave the recitation, which was composed by Joe Kerr (Manville D. Kerr). The verses ran like this:

Hello, Dewey! Have a seat!
How're the boys? An' how's th' fleet?
Little weary? Never mind;
You're not when you're inclined;
Rest on laurels, if you please,
On a hero's couch of ease;
Not, however, till we've had
Chance to show you that we're glad;
You're not when you're inclined;
Rest on laurels, if you please,
On a hero's couch of ease;

Cure of Heart

The case of Mrs. Wm. Kemp, an account of which, given by her husband, the well-known shoemaker, we publish below, is only one of the marvelous cures that are taking place in the city of Belleville, Ont., from time to time through the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Never before in Hastings county has such proof been produced of the efficacy of any remedy.

There is no doubt but
