spondence between the principals occurred yesterday at Coblentz. A merchant named Weidman charged that his wife had been dishonored by Lieut. Zalizsch, an officer of the garrison. Weidman and a companion met the lieutenant walking with Capt. Lemke. Weidman with his cane struck Zalizsch in the face. The lieutenant drew his sword and made a lunge at Weidman, inflicting a severe wound on the head. At this point the companions of the combatants interfered. Weidman's friend took him to a neighboring hotel. Capt. Lemke tried to get Zalizsch away, but the lieutenant followed Weidman to the botel, where the encounter was renewed. question was asked the Government in the House of Commous regarding the punishment of soldiers at Aidershot, for wearing the shamrock on St. Patrick's day, when they were in undress uniform. The Right Hon. Edward Stanhope, Secretary of State for War, telegraphed for information of the affair and to-day he read an officer's report on the matter in question. By this report it appears that a private named O'Grady, wore a shamrock on St. Patrick's day. The Leader of the Opposition Loses His Language.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.]
TORONTO, Ont., March 24.—The Attorney-General's bill to prevent the use of tobacco by minors was considered in Committee of the Whole to-day. The first clause to punish any one who sells or gives to a minor, actually or apparently under 18 years of age, cigarettes, cigars or tobacco, was adopted without much discussion. Mr. Mowat proposed that the words on the second clause, "has in his possession," should be omitted, leaving it "any person, actually or apparently under 18 years of age, who smokes, or in any way uses in a public street or other public place, cigarettes, cigars or tobacco, shall be the also proposed that for a first offense the minor should be reprimanded in open court, and that punishment should follow court, and that punishment should follow only after a second conviction. Even with these modifications the proposal to punish a minor with imprisonment for using to-bacco was strongly opposed by Messrs. Meredith, Baxter, O'Connor, Davis, Waters and Awrey. In view of the opposition Mr. Mowat agreed to drop the clause.

At the suggestion of Mr. Meredith it was provided that the bill should not come into force before July 1, 1892, in order to give dealers fair warning.

A lively tilt occurred between Mr. Meredith and Mr. Tait during the discussion on Mr. Harcourt's bill respecting succession

Mr. Harcourt's bill respecting succession duties. The bill provides that the Surrogate Court judge shall administer the law. Mr. Meredith, in the ourse of some observations, said this looked like a reflection on the County Court judges.

Mr. Tait interjected, "He is thinking of London."

This remark roused the anger of Mr. Meredith, who made a bitter personal attack upon Mr. Tait.

Mr. Tait, in reply, said that he was not surprised that Mr. Meredith found it necessary to make a defense of his friend Judge Elliot. What gave Mr. Meredith the right to flaunt himself before the House as a superior person? The honorable gentleman had been treated with more conhe deserved, and was not criticised as he would have been if his party had been stronger. He remembered the Wecker stronger. He remembered the weekes affair, and also the bribery plot with which Mr. Meredith said he had nothing to do.

Mr. Mcredith said he had nothing to do, although one supporter swore that his leader spoke to him about it. It was true that his (Tait's) opponent had polled a few more votes than he had, but that was no reason why he should not speak in the House. If the honorable gentleman persisted in assuming this superior virtue the criticism which will be accorded to him will be closer and severet than that which he has been in making cowardly insinuations which he dare not make outside of the House. He ind open in public life many years, and defied anyone to criticise his conduct. He was the gentleman who voted last year to give him $2,000 for his services as leader of the Opposition. Who is the contemptible coward, then, who is making this charge? (Cries of "Order," "Order," and great uprosr.)

Mr. Meredith—Who but a contemptible coward—— (Cries of "Order," "Order.")

Mr. Meredith said he was perfectly in order. He was asking who but a coward would make such a charge and retail slanders which have been fully answered.

Mr. Mowat restored order by reminding the House that if this thing continued no progress could be made, and declaring that his friend, Mr. Tait, had the respect of everyone on his side of the House and of all who knew him.

Mr. Gibson replied that other legislatures had reached such legislation and that it was approved by the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance in the interest of the public as well as of the companies. The Canadian Royal Templars Curlose from the Supreme Council.

BUFFALO, March 24.—The Supreme Council of the Royal Templars of Temperance adopted the revised ritual after a lengthy debate. The council went into committee of the whole to consider a memorial which came from Canada and the United States be granted by the Supreme Council. The reason for this request is on account of certain legislation pending in the Dominion, which would seriously interfere with the effectual work there of the beneficiary department with their supreme head in the United States. A long discussion took place on this request Judge John H. Tatem, of Michigan, supreme councilory Bro. R. D. Munger, of Pennsylvania, and Supreme Secretary Nelson, of Buffalo, spoke on the Subject from a United States point of view. They were followed suffice and United States representatives agreed, and the request of the Dominion Council, and are under different ritualistic work from the councils in the United States. The Dominion Council will now take the place of the Supreme Council of the United States, to which they formerly sent their representatives.

The reports of the officers gave a summary of the history of the order for the two years ended on Dec. 31. They show that, like other beneficiary societies, the two years ago. Supreme Councilor R. D. Munger reports, however, that the order has a smaller membership now that claims immediately, and therefore stands on a firm and smooth footing. It is on a subset when the supreme council or for high and the corder has a smaller membership now that the order has a smaller membership now that the order has a smaller membership now that claims immediately, and therefore stands on a firm and smooth footing. It is on a subset when the control for the control

Munger reports, however, that the order has adhered to its principle of paying death claims immediately, and therefore stands on a firm and smooth footing. It is on a sound financial basis with no debts. Supreme Secretary Samuel Nelson reports a mortality of 187 in 1890, with a membership of 15,019 at the clase of the year and a mortality of 201 in 1891, with a membership of 13,626 at the close. The beneficiary membership consists of 7,130 men and 6,496 women. The strength of the order lies in New York State, where $11,308,500 insurance is in force. Pennsylvania is next with $3,206,500, and Illinois and Michigan each have over $1,000,000. These four each have over $1,000,000. States have nearly seven-eights of the insurance of $19,763,000 outstanding. seven-eights of the total

FIGHTING A BIG BOA. It Didn't Happen in a Jungle, But in a New York Museum.

NEW YORK, March 24 .- When half New York, March 24.—When half a dozen newspaper men were sitting in the manager's office at Huber's dime museum on Monday night, Princess Fedora, the snake charmer, was preparing for her at on a platform in the center of the house. The largest boa constrictor in her collection, twenty feet long and weighing 98 pounds, became restless and hungry. He had breakfasted on half a dozen rabbits last fall and had had no lunch.

Burned-Loss, $15,000 or $20,000.

Sannia, Ont., March 24.—A disastrons fire occurred at Point Edward early this morning, several business houses and a hotel being burned to the ground. The fire, which was evidently incendiary, started in a shed at the back of a building owned by M. A. Hitchcock, and occupied by James Fraser, grocer, and George Scott, druggist, entirely destroying it, together with Lawrence Kaup's meat market. J. F. O'Neil's grocery, in which was also kept the postoffice, a vacant store owed by J. Kennedy, and Spetz's hotel. All the parties were more or less insured. Total loss will probably run up to between $15,000 and $20,000.

GROW MORE CLOVER.

We clip the following excellent article rom the Live Stock Journal:

We clip the following excellent article from the Live Stock Journal:

Some have argued that, wing to the many good properties of clover, it should beswen on every acre of the creal crop grown. That will depend upon the nature of the cultivation to some extent, at least, for, it the land is to be gang-plowed just after the crop is removed, it is apparent that it would not pay to sow clover with the preceding crop. But whether the practice of sowing all grain crops with clover be adopted or not, we do well to give much attention to the growing of clover.

We should give much attention to growing it for the following reasons, along with others that may be named:

1. It grows throughout the whole season. This is true at least of the common red clover, and to a less extent of some other varieties. There is no forage crop that we have that will compare with it in this respect. In some favored localities lucerne may give a larger return per acre, but these sections are limited in extent. The amount of food thus provided by common red clover in one season is greater probably than from any of the other grasses or clovers that we grow. than from any of the other grasses or clovers amount of food thus provided by common red clover in one season is greater probably than from any of the other grasses or clovers that we grow.

2. Its value for food stands high. Any class of live stock flourish upon it in the summer, although some other grasses may furnish more congenial pastures for horses. In the winter it makes excellent food for horses, cattle and sheep when it has been cut at the right stage and properly cured. The objection to its use as a food for horses is gounded largely on the fact, that it is often allowed to pass the proper stage for cutting before it is made into hay. There is then a dustiness about it, which is more or less hurtful to the horse.

3. It is an excellent fertilizer of the land. Clover is almost the only crop which leaves the surface soil as rich probably as it found it. This is owing to its wonderful power of abstracting nitrogen from the air and subsoil and storing it up in its roots, and also in the portions above ground. While it is true that a part of the root goes down into the subsoil, it is also true that the chief development of root is within the cultivable area. The nitrogen, then, which is gathered in the subsoil is largely distributed within the said area, whither it has been carried for the greater development of root found there. In this we find the explanation of the many years during which clover and wheat may be grown on some soils without the addition of any other fertilizer. It is not generally known, however, that the larger portion of the clover, and therefore on medium soils it will pay better to pasture the clover, or cut it before plowing the land. On heavy clay it may be well to plow under an occasional crop, because of the effects it has upon the mechanical texture of the soil, and on very light soils the same course may be advisable to increase the absorptive and retentive powers of such soils, but on medium soils the best profits are obtained ordinarily by utilizing the crop above ground for food purposes.

of such soils, but on medium soils the cest profits are obtained ordinarily by utilizing the crop above ground for food purposes. 4. Clover improves the texture of all soils, When grown on clay its roots bore down into the subsoil, and in their decay furnish channels for the escape of water that would otherwise linger too near the surface. In this way clover becomes a very effectual subsoiler. The large amount of vegetable matter in the roots separate the particles of the soil and so render it more friable, and consequently more accessible to the of the soil and so render it more friable, and consequently more accessible to the roots of plants. On very light soils the vegetable matter has the opposite effect. It tends to bind them together, hence the fertilizing matters are less liable to wash out of them, since rain water does not filter so quickly through them. It also renders them more capable of retaining both atmospheric and ground moisture, that is, moisture extracted from the air which penetrates these soils, and which is arrested in its ascent from the lower to the surface soils.

from the lower to the surface soils.

It is very wise, therefore, to grow an abandant supply of clover. The seed is not costly relatively. To sow twelve pounds of when it is so desired. The seeding, therefore, should not cost more than 50 cents per acre per year. When clover is sown along with timothy, one-half the amount mentioned above will suffice. As in some soils, especially stiff clays, the catch is very uncertain, it is usually wise to sow some fields, at least, which may not be required for pasture or for cutting the next year. When not wanted for these purposes they can easily be devoted to other uses. In other words, it is safe practice, where the catch of clover and grass seeds is uncertain, to keep a larger area in grass than would be considered requisite on some other classes of soil. when it is so desired. Some reference will be made next weel to important business transacted by the Executive Board in Strathrey last week.

Patrons in all the counties are anxiously ooking for the new official weekly paper, for which arrangements were made Grand Association meeting. The Executive Board was instructed to carry out the wishes of the Grand Association in the matter.

Some of the lists of subscribers for the proposed official weekly have been for warded to the editor of this department. This is an error. Instructions were given in the circular to have all lists sent to the Grand Secretary at Strathroy, from whom the publisher should receive them. Any lists, however, that are sent to us will be properly dealt with.

The Supreme Association of Patrons of North America, the highest tribunal of the order, convened at the Burnett House, Toledo, Ohio, on Wednesday. About 50 delegates were present, each representing about 14,000 members, and more were expected. The delegates present are from all parts of the United States and are a fine-

What is the situation? Tall talk on both sides of the Atlantic.

As "tall" on one side as the othercertainly so far as the newspapers of Grea Britain and of the United States are con cerned. The trouble is that tall talk makes ar exacerbation of feeling among the populace of the respective sides.

So long as the tall talk confines itself to Blaine and Salisbury, to the London Standard and the New York Sun, it may do less harm, though it can never be harm

But with the British and American squadrons face to face on the Bering Sea, the St. James' Gazette is justified in the view that "it is impossible not to feel anxiety as to what might happen if a couple of naval officers on a remote sea should lose their heads or their tempers."

Then Sir Charles Tupper, according to a published dispatch, is getting in some tall talk on his own account by urging Lord Salisbury to speak up to the United States a little livelier. "Should the sealing issue result in war," Sir Charles is reported as saying, "the Canadians would be prepared to do their part and prove their loyalty on land, but they must look to England for defense at sea." It may be all very well for Sir Charles Tupper, from the midst of his more than Oriental luxury in England at the expense of the Canadian taxpayer, to "sic on" a combat between the pot on one side and the pitkin on the other; but in case of trouble does anybody suppose for a moment that Sir Charles would leave his Sybaritic surroundings to come back and take his own share of the hard knocks?

The question of war is one which the fathers and mothers of Canada may not re gard with so much composure as an orna ental and luxurious High Commissioner 3.000 safe miles from the brunt of attack.

To-day's telegrams again indicate the possible withdrawal of the railway bonding privileges. Do those who profess to consider this matter immaterial to our railways really believe what they say?

War with shot and shell is barbarous and unchristian; yet commercial war, war by tariff, is only one degree less barbarous, less anchristian.

Canada to-day is not only ruled, as was shown by the revelations of last session at made record, but by demagogue Ministers possessed, to use Mr. Blake's phrase, by "a boastful jingo spirit far enough removed from true manliness, loudly proclaiming nnreal conditions and exaggerated sentiments, while actual facts and genuine opinions are suppressed."

The gentleman who fiddled while Rome burned is not without modern prototypes.

STILL A MYSTERY.

A well-arranged, strongly-stuck-to alibi seems to be the one thing needful in a murder trial these days. No more remarkable display of contradictory evidence has ever been brought out in court than that relating to the whereabouts of Bartram and Lottridge on the cold winter night of January, 1891, when the Ancaster township treasurer was brutally murdered by burglars in search of his wealth. There was perjury or misrepresentation on the part of one or other week gave testimony at the Hamilton Assizes. On which side the false swearing predominated each student of the evidence will have his own opinion. In all probability the murderers of John Hyslop, whoever they are, will now go unwhipt of human justice. But they have consciences, human justice. But they have consciences, and they must be seared beyond measure if the recollection of the fearful crime does their lives miserable. The gallows is not the only agent for expiating murder. .

TORONTO MINISTERIAL ASSOCIA-

What's the matter with the Toronto Ministerial Association?

Are they afraid to face the music of the estions of the day? Do they consider the liquor traffic a

Are they afraid to disturb the consciences of any distillers or brewers who may happen to be in their congregations?

Do they think they have performed the whole duty of ministers when they de-nounce Amalek, and Pharaoh, and Ahab, and Baalam, and Pilate, and Herod, and Judas, while running away from living sinners and the moral questions of the living

If those who compose such bodies as the Toronto Ministerial Association have no duty in regard to great moral and social questions, what are they for ?

JUDGE ELLIOT, MR. MEREDITH AND MR. TAIT.

Usually the Ontario Legislature is a quiet body, conducting its important business with decorum and dispatch, Yesterday the surface was ruffled by a lively encounter between Mr. W. R. Meredith and Mr. Joseph Tait.

Mr. Meredith is known to a number of our readers as a former resident of this city, and for some time past as a Toronto lawyer. The people of London had seen very little of him for a long time till, in the recent Dominion campaign, he arrived in the city simultaneously with the Ingram gang from St. Thomas, and took to wardwalking for Mr. Carling, to the neglect of is duties in the Legislature.

Mr. Tait is one of the members for Toronto. He is a baker, and a more than asually able public speaker, as those who listened to him when he spoke in the Opera House during the campaign of 1891 will remember.

A bill was under discussion in the House. and Mr. Meredith objected to some of its provisions because, as he looked at it, the measure reflected on the county judges. Mr. Tait jocularly suggusted that Mr. Meredith must be "thinking of Judge Elliot." Then Mr. Meredith flew into a passion such as he probably has not been in since, at Mount Brydges, assailing the late Mr. Pardee, he simulated a rage that passed boiling-over point. Recriminations followed, and Mr. Tait gave the wrathy man a well-deserved castigation, reminding him of the humiliating Weekes case in which he figured, and also of the sworn testimony of one of his own supporters, to the effect that he knew all about the oribery plot concocted in 1882 to upset the Ontario Administration and put his friends

Premier Mowat threw oil on the troubled vaters, and the tempest caused by Mr. Tait's innocent reminder passed over.

Mr. Meredith seems to regard it as an insult to him personally to even suggest that he is prepared to uphold and condone Judge Elliot's gross partisanship. Why, if Judge Elliot is the injured man the fenders of the seat steal try hard, but ineffectually, to make believe he is, should our former townsman fly into a rage when even a reminiscence of the rascally doings of the last month or two is suggested by a member of the Legislature?

Mr. Tait came out of the rencontre with flying colors, but the matter should not end there. If we understand the law rightly it is not an improper thing for the Provin cial authorities to bring a county judge to book for improper conduct, or to investi gate charges made against such a public officer. Let it be conceded that the power to appoint is in the hands of the Dominion Government, it cannot be denied that the Confederation Act imposes on the Provincial authorities the duty to see that justice is properly administered. That surely brings the wholly indefensible conduct of Judge Elliot within the purview of the Attorney-General of the Province, and suggests the propriety of a speedy inquiry into the fitness of Judge Elliot to occupy position which, as we have reason for lieving the facts when laid bare will show.

he has disgraced. One thing is reasonably certain: over one half the people of London and of Middlesex have good ground for their loss of confidence in Judge Elliot's impartiality. That is a serious state of affairs and one that cannot exist fo any length of time without injury to the people whose money pays administration of justice. If Mr. Meredith is afraid to ask for the investigation which the existing state of affairs demands, and shows the condition of his mind by "flying off the handle" the moment that the name of Judge Elliotis mentioned in the Legis of the sets of witnesses that for over a lature, we would suggest that Mr. Tait the encounter between Mr. Meredith and Mr. Tait in the Legislature no harm and much good would follow an inquiry nearer home. The Attorney-General ly has the right to see certainly has the right to see that the county judiciary alministers justice fairly, and if any judge fails in his duty, and that failure is established by undoubted proof, he should take action.

If Mr. Meredith had any faith in the justice of the Elliotizing scheme, and was prepared to say that a judge should actively and offensively participate in an election campaign, even to the extent of prejudging a case before it reached his court, he would be the first to call for an investigation that would prove its justice. But he is silent, and as has been shown in a few weeks. Now, there is no longer a doubt of Dr. J. Eugene Jordan's Histogenetic Medicines curing consumption. This was a genuine case of tuberculosis. The lung microbes could not be destroyed without danger to life, even greater than from the disease. But the safer method positively did succeed. It was the only hope, and it must be tried. Did it really succeed? The picture and following letter from him answers the question. It has a hopeful ring in it. Lisren: "Three years ago I had intermittent fever. It shook my constitubes. A year later I took is grippe, followed by cough, expectoration, night sweats, pain in my lungs, loss of flesh, et. I knew consumption would soon carry me off. All treatment falled, I became discouraged. I got worse and worse. I heard at last that Histogenetic Medicines cured consumption and bronchitis. Iconsulted Dr. Rear, who prescribed those medicines.

I commenced to gain at once, but unfortunately took another severe cold, but persevered, and was soon better than usual. I

In these days there are no miracles. People are not cured by them or deceived by statements to that effect.

Indigestion, sour stomach, dyspepsia, in fact all stomach troubles are produced by the fermenting of the food, the result of which must be acid that decomposes the food, involving gasses which act on various nerves by pressure. Neutralize the acid and the disease ceases.

That is what Brunton's Curative Fluid will do. Being composed of a combination of potasses, it neutralizes the acid, assists digestion and purifies the blood.

Mr. White (Cardwell) moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Insurance Act. He explained that it was to prohibit life insurance companies allowing a rebate on premiums to insurers for large amounts. This practice was, he said, an unjust discrimination against the holders of smaller policies. Another provision was to license all insurance agents, and was necessary as a hold upon agents to see to the observance of the other. His bill, he said, had the support of all the old-time companies doing business in Canada.

How the Proposed Fraternal Societies Bill Affects Some of the Orders.

Interesting News Notes Gathered from Various Benefit Organizations.

In some orders there are too many lodges within certain limits of territory. They should be reduced in number, and several of the weaker organizations joined in one body. A few strong lodges is preferable to a number of weak ones. Consolidation reduces expenses, creates larger funds, insures greater liberality in dispensing cherity, causes better attendance at meetings and in consequence more interest on the part of members generally. The influence of a lodge composed of over 300 members is far greater than that of one numbering but 100. There are many more of the latter than of the former, and when, as in some cases, a lodge reaches a membership of 1,000 and over its power is felt in the community. There is no limit, comparatively, to the possibilities of the good and effective work such a lodge can accomplish in any of the many lines of its field of action. There are in some lodges certain leaders who disapprove of consolidation because they fear they would lose their power and influence. But for this one selfish objection many weak lodges would follow the wise course of uniting.

weak lodges would follow the wise course of uniting.

Localities which can sustain a lodge should have one though its membership be limited, but where a large number of lodges exist, even if each be comparatively successful, the success attained can be materially increased and all interested benefitted far better by the lessening of the number and augmenting the membership of the one with which it has been deemed wise to consolidate. MASONIC.

Without doubt the record in the annals of charity festivals was broken a few days ago, of all unlikely places, in the Covent Garden Theater, which was selected as the scene of the jubilee gathering of the Royal Masonic Benefit Institution. The Earl of Mount Edgecombe, the D. G. M. and D. P. S. and P. S. M., of Cornwall, presided, and was supported by all the well-known heads of the craft. A remarkable feature of the festival was that so numerous were the stewards (upwards of 1,400) none but they could be provided with tickets. Some 400 ladies were accommodated in the crush-room and private boxes. Lieut. Dan Godfrey conducted the musical programme during dinner, and after the usual speches and some excellent vocalization, the secretary, James Terry, had the great satisfaction of announcing a subscription and donation list amounting to the unprecedented total of £59,600, or $298,000.

This is believed to be the highest charity dinner subscription, being considerably more than the list announced at the cententy festival of the Royal Masonic Girls' School some four years ago, which before this was the highest. During the evening H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, H. M. W. S. M., telegraphed, wishing success to the festival and regretting his absence on behalf of the poor and distressed.

beautiful influence. As the marble statues of Greece, leaving their niches in the temple of fame, have moved through ages, scattering from their hands ideals of beauty and grandeur, suggestions from the highest art, so the genius of Masonry, moving from its shrine, has passed through the generations, the thoughts, the activities of man, casting from her generous hand moral beauty, ministries of charity, inspiration for truest brotherhood. Masonry rises up among the most magnificent and precious of human institutions. The spirit which informs it is kindness. Love, finding it a fulfillment, sends forth a charity like that which fell from the lips and hand of the Holieat of All. Its work is witnessed as the expression of the acts grandly human, yet divinely beautiful. In the bread given to the hungry; in the cup of cold water to the parched and fevered lip; in the sick tended through days of weariness and nights of unrest; in the wants of the needy supplied; in the dead reverentially sepulchred. And for its work there shall be a higher witness still, which all of the members of the order shall stand to receive the consecration.

A breeder of Snetland and Weish ponies near Jamaica, Long Island, has a pony mare which has beaten all records. Although but I year 11 months and 4 days old at the time, she foaled a filly and they are both doing well. The mother is but 37 inches in height, and her foal, which weighs eightteen pounds, is fourteen inches in height.

George Macpherson, of Compton, Canada, who drove the pacer Hermit to his present record of 2:16½, and who is the only trainer that ever put a Canadian 3-year-old in the 2:30 list, has made an engagement with the Hon. M. H. Cochrane, of Hillhurst. Mr. Macpherson also drove Gimerack by Mambrino King, to a record of 2:27, and he believes he could have taken a record of 2:18. Gimerack was omitted from the Stock Farm's list of 2:30 horses sired by Mambrino King. brino King.

The new trotting course now being constructed at Montebello, about 10 minutes from Trieste, Italy, will not be completed before the end of March. The track is magnificently situated at the toot of a hill, upon which the grand stand has been creeted and whence a magnificent view may be obtained. Far off to the left the blue Mediterranean may be discovered, Barcola and the Castle of Miramarc, as well as the walls of Duino, belonging to Prince Hohenlohe, that seem to rise out of the dancing waves. To the right may be seen the Barcian Hills, surrounding the magnificent Royal Stock Farm of Lipizza.

Royal Stock Farm of Lipizza.

Another "phenom" has made its appearance in California, says the Breeder and Sportsman. It is a 9-month-old bay filly by Commodore (better known as Jack Dempsy), dam by Dawn, 2:183. The second time this miss (who by the way is not much larger than a good-sized St. Bernard dog) was hitched to a sulky she went an eighth of a mile, driven by Lee Shaner, in 28 seconds, and is improving wonderfully all the time. She is an inch higher over the hips than at the withers. Every trainer and rubber at Bay district track swears that this is the fastest youngster on earth, and go in cestasies over her. Her sire Commodore is by Sidney, 2:194, out of a Grand Moor mare, while through the dam (by Dawn) comes a Nutwood cross.

This accounts for the early speed shown in this baby trotter. The filly is entered in a number of rich 3-year-old trotting events.

An eye-witness of the docking of a horse's tail writes as follows: I assisted only to hurry through the sickening operation. There were five men in the ztable. The C. W. Williams says Allerton will never be shipped away from home again, but will meet any stallion in a race over the Iudependence track.

According to Jockey Fred Taral his income this year will be ever $20,000, of which $12,000 will come from Walcott & Campbell, $5,000 from Mike Dwyer and $3,000 from outside sources.

A dark horse has made an appearance in the betting of the English Derby. This is The Cellarer, a bay colt by St. Simon, out of Staffa by Scottish Chief. He is the property of the Duke of Portland and has never yet sported silk.

A breeder of Shetland and Welsh ponies near Jamaica, Long Island, has a pony mare which has beaten all records. Although but I year 11 months and 4 days old at the time, she foaled a filly and they are both doing well. The mother is but 37 inches in height, and her feal, which weighs eight, teen pounds, is fourteen inches in height.

The fastening of the girths is seldow.

The fastening of the girths is seldom properly performed. Many people throw the saddle rudely down upon the horse, as if the latter were a log of wood, which irritates many horses, especially mares, to such a degree as to make them jump into the corner of the stall. Then they take the corner of the stall. Then they take the first girth and pull it up to suffocation. Then they do the same with the second girth. That done, they let the poor horse stand until wanted. Others again, instead of pulling the girths upward, pull them against the horse, throwing the animal entirely off his feet. Many a horse has been spoiled for lifetime by such practices, teaching them to buck, to bite, or to swell themselves up, so as to protect themselves themselves up, so as to protect themselves against overgirthing. Many horses show against overgirthing. Many horses show their dislike of such bungling work in the expression of the eye, the wrinkling of the mostrils and the laying back of their ears. The proper way is to place the saddle easily upon the back, take up one girth after the other, fastening them loosely and then tighten them gradually hole by hele, until they are just sung enough to hold the saddle in its proper place. After that put on the bridle, turn him round, back him into his stall and the him on both sides until he is wanted. In this way the horse suffers no pain and his temper is not disturbed. The finish of girthing is done bedfore the rider mounts. Horses should not be saddled before an hour and a half after feeding, as they used that time for digestion; but in case they have to turn out sooner, the girths should not be drawn very tight, as the result would be, especially in high-tempered horses, a rush of blood to the brain, under circumstances endangering the life of the rider.—[Rider and Driver. against overgirthing. The adjourned case of Daniel Dewar, proprietor of the Albion Restautant, charged with breach of the Liquor Licena, Act, was resumed at the Police Court this morning. The evidence for the prosecution, taken a few days ago, was to the effect that Police Constables Alton and Boyd found two men in a small room adjoining the batroom at 1:05 in the morning. They stated that one of them was removing a glass of beer from his lips and the other had a partially-filled glass before him. The proprietor let a man out at the front door just as they went in. L. O. Lawrason stated to the magistrate this morning that he left the place at 1 o'clock, and that no liquor was bought or consumed after 12 o'clock. The bartender said he left the bar at 12 o'clock in charge of Mr. Dewar, and that just before he left he served three men with beer. The two men who were found by the policemen were not at court, and the magistrate considered the charge not proved and dismissed the case.

Meanwhile, Gavin, unaware that talk about him and a woman unknown had broken out in Thrums, was gazing, sometimes lovingly and again with scorn, at a little bunch of holly berries which Jean had gathered from her mother's garden. Once she saw him fling them out at his window, and then she rejoiced. But an hour afterwards she saw him pick them up, and then she mourned. Nevertheless, to her great delight, he preached his third sermon against women on the following Sabbath. It was universally acknowledged to be the best of the series. It was also tha last.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Gavin told himself not to go near the mudhouse on the following Monday; but he went. The distance is half a mile, and the time he took was two hours. This was he went. The distance is half a mile, and the time he took was two hours. This was wing to his setting out due west to reach a point due north; yet with the intention of deceiving none save himself. His reason had warned him to avoid the Egyptian, and his desires had consented to be dragged vestward because they knew he had started too soon. When the proper time came they knocked reason on the head, and carried him straight to Caddam. Here reason came to, and again began to state its case. Desires permitted him to halt, as if to argue the matter out, but were thus tolerant because from where he stood he could see Nanny's doorway. When Eabbie emerged from it reason seems to have made one final effort, for Gavin quickly took that side of a tree which is loved of squirrels at the approach of an enemy. He looked round the tree trunk at her, and then reason discarded him. The gypsy had two empty pans in her hands. For a second she grazed in the The gypsy had two empty pans in her ands. For a second she gazed in the minister's direction, then demurely leaped the ditch of leaves that separated Nanny's yard from Caddam, and strolled into the wood. Discovering with indignation that he had been skulking behind the tree, Ga-vin came into the open. How good of the vin came into the open. How good of the Egyptian, he reflected, to go to the well for water, and thus save the old woman's arms! Reason shouted from near the manse (he only heard the echo) that he could still make up to it. Come along, said his desires, and marched him prisoner to the well.

cound still make up to it. Come along, said his desires, and marched him prisoner to the well.

The path which Babbie took that day is lost in blaeberry-leaves, now, and my little maid and I lately scarched for an hour before we found the well. It was dry, choked with broom and stones and brittle, tusty pans, but we sat down where Babbie and Gavin had talked, and I stirred up many memories. Probably two of those pans, that could be broken in the hands today like shortbread, were Nanny's, and almost certainly the stones are fragments from the great slab that used to cover the well. Children like to peer into wells to see what the world is like at the other side, and so this covering was necessary. Rob Augus was the strong man who bore the stone to Caddam, flinging it a yard before him at a time. The well had also a wooden lid with leather hinges, and over this the stone was dragged.

him at a time. The well had also a wooden lid with leather hinges, and over this the stone was dragged.

Gavin arrived at the well in time to offer babbie the loan of his arms. In her struggle she had taken her lips into her atone, which refused to do more than tunn round on the wood. But for her presence, theminister's efforts would have been equally futile. Though not strong, however, he had the national horror of being beaten before a speciator, and once at school he had won a fight by telling his big antagonist to come on until the boy was tired of pummelling him. As he tought with the stone now, pains shot through his head, and his arms threatened to come away at the shoulders: but remove it he did.

"How strong you are!" Babbie said with open admiration.

I am sure no words of mine could tell the stone individual strong and any sure no words of mine could tell the strong was a strong's Baking Powder; 25 cents per sund, guaranteed strictly pure, made fresh daily and sold only at Strong's Drug Store 184 Dundas street.

how pleased the minister was; yet he knew he was not strong, and might have known that she had seen him do many things far more worthy of admiration without ad-miring them. This, indeed, is a sad truth, that we seldom give our love to what is worthiest in its object.

"How curious that we should have met here," Babby said in her dangerously friendly way, as they filled the pans. "Do you know I quite started when your shadow

Gavin looked at her sharply, but she was not laughing at him.

"It was I," he admitted: "but I was not exactly hiding behind the tree."

"You had only stepped behind it for a moment," suggested the Egyptian.

Her gravity gave way to laughter under Gavin's suspicious looks, but the laughing ended abruptly. She had heard a noise in the wood. Gavin heard it too, and they both turned round in time to see two ragged boys running from them. When boys are very happy they think they must be doing wrong, and in a wood, of which they are among the natural inhabitants, they always take flight from the enemy, adults, if given time. For my own part, when I see a boy drop from a tree I am as little surprised as if he were an apple or an acorn. But Gavin was startled, picturing these spies handing in the new sensation about him at every door, as a district visitor distributes tracts. The gypsy noted his uneasiness and resented it.

"What does it feel like to be afraid?" she asked eyeing him.

"I am afraid of nothing," Gavin answered offended in turn.

"Yes, you are. When you saw me come

"I am afraid of nothing," Gavin answered offended in turn.

"Yes, you are. When you saw me come out of Nanny's you crept behind a tree; when these boys showed themselves you shook. You are afraid of being seen with me. Go away, then; I don't want you.
"Fear," said Gavin, "is one thing, and prudence is another."

"Another name for it," Babbie interposed.

"To know what?"
"Let us avoid the subject."
"No," the Egyptian said, petulantly.
"I hate not to be told things. Why must you be 'prudent'?"

"You should see," Gavin replied, awk-wardly, "that there is a—a difference between a minister and a gypsy."

"But if I am willing to overlook it?" asked Babbie, impertinently.
Gavin beat the brushwood mournfully with his staff.
"I cannot allow you," he said, "to talk disrespectfully of my calling. It is the highest a man can follow. I wish—"
He checked himself, but he was wishing she could see him in his pulpit.
"I suppose," said the gypsy, reflectively, "one must be very clever to be a minister."

"My daughter is losing her sight," said an anxious mother, "and just on the eve of marriage, too! What shall I do?" "Let her get married, by all means," responded the doctor; "marriage is a regular eye-opener."

Guardian.—A died some years ago leaving his property to be equally divided between his two daughters. One married, and the other, who was of somewhat unsound mind, did not, had a child and died some years after without leaving a will. Who inherits her property, her sister or her illegitimate child? ANS.—Her sister.

SUB-TENANT.—A rents a house and sub. lets it to B, now A wants possessions and has given B one month's notice, but B refuses to leave. Can A compel him, and if so what steps will A have to take? ANS.

—If A let to B by the month the month's notice, and a sub-department of the control of the —If A let to B by the month the month's notice was legally sufficient and he can ob-tain an order for immediate possession from a county judge. Retain a solicitor to take the necessary proceedings. SCHOOL TRUSTEE.—Is it lawful for a board of school trustees to pay one of them-selves for acting as secretary? Ans.—The trustees of a rural school section may lawtrustees of a rural school section may law-fully do so, but the frustees of a village, town or city have no power to do so, and a trustee receiving moneys for any such services thereby forfoits his seat under section 191 of the Public School Act of 1801

WILL.—A dies leaving two executors to sell his farm by tender. B buys the farm. Have the executors a right to keep the will or any of the papers in their possession after receiving the purchase money in full, or should the purchaser receive the will and other papers? Ans.—The will should be proved in the Surrogate Court and probate registered in the registry office, after which the executors can properly retain the probate, but should deliver up all the other title deeds to the purchaser.

FARM HOLIDAYS.—A farmer hires a man ther title deeds to the purchasor.

FARM HOLIDAYS.—A farmer hires a man for one year. How many legal holidays has the man and what are they? ANS.—A farm servant, like a domestic servant, has no holidays absolutely unless by special agreement. The legal holidays are Sundays, New Year's Day, Good Friday, Queen's Birthday, Dominion Day, Thankspiving Day and Christmas Day. The observance of these, other than Sundays, is optional with the farmer, and on Sunday and such other holidays as he does observe observance or these, other than Sundays, and such other holidays as he does observe the man must do all necessary work, such as feeding cattle, etc. The matter is usually one of mutual agreement.

MACK.—B gave a note to A, indorsed by C. When the note was due B went to A and told him he could not pay then, so A gave B another year, and at the end of that year it was extended for another year, and so on for four years. C was not notified that the note was still unpaid; he thought it was paid by B when it was first due. A has now disposed of the note to D, who notified C that it was still unpaid. Is C still liable, or should he have been notified when due that it was not paid? B is paying so much per month on the note; he paid about $30 this year. Ans.—Upon the facts stated C is not liable as indorser, not having received notice of its non-payment what due. not having received notice of its non-pay ment when due.

ROMNEY SCHOOL SECTIONS.—The additional facts presented by your query do not affect the answer given to Romney. We have not space for your statement, and it is quite possible there may be other facts material to be considered. The importance of the question would seem to justify both the township council and the trustees in obtaining a well-considered legal opinion upon all the facts. It is quite possible that the by-law forming the two new sections might have been quashed, on application to the high court or to the county council, but this was not done and the trustees for the new sections having been duly elected, as we understand from your reference to them, are therefore your reference to them, are therefore legally authorized to hold their sections. and exercise all their legal powers as such trustees.

London West.—1. What are the qualifications of a village school trustee? Ans.—He must be a resident ratepayer of the full age of 21 years. 2. If a ratepayer and he owes one or more year's taxes to the municipality which he represents, can he legally sit on the board? Ans.—Yes.

3. In case of a board consisting of three or more members as above, authorize amounts to be paid, can the municipality hold the municipal treasurer responsible for amounts so passed, if paid by him? Ans.—No. 4. Have the board power to vote appropriations to any of their members? Ans.—No; but a rural school section may pay its secretary-treasurer such compensation as shall be agreed upon at the annual meeting of the ratepayers, and the annual meeting of the ratepayers, and the annual meeting of the ratepayers, and duly entered upon the minutes. This vision of the Public School Act does apply to village, town or city school boards.

WOODSTOCK'S NEW PRINCIPAL The Selection of Joseph I. Bates by the Senate Heartily Indorsed.

The citizens of Woodstock have manifested their warm appreciation of the appointment of Joseph I. Bates, B.A., Ph.M., pointment of Joseph I. Bates, B.A., Ph.M., to the principalship of the Woodstock Baptist College. The new principal has been acting principal of the college since the death of the late Principal Huston, M.A., and has been for fifteen years teacher in the college. He has for more than twenty years been an honored citizen, and no other name could have been received with more favor in connection with the principalship than that of Mr. Bates.

The new principal has qualifications that eminently fit him for the position. It was his privilege to be a student of the institution for years when it was under that master mind, Dr. Fyfe. From the college he ter mind, Dr. Fyfe. From the college he matriculated into Toronto University, and after a full and very thorough course in that matriculated into Toronto University, and after a full and very thorough course in that institution of learning he received his degree of B. A. He then atudied for a year at Ann Arbor University, Mich., where he received the degree of Ph. M. Soon after this, and while Dr. Fyfe was still principal of the college, Mr. Bates became a member of the teaching staff of his Alma Mater. With the exception of one year spent in pursuing special studies in Greek and Latin classics in some of the great English schools and observing methods of teaching, Mr. Bates has been continually engaged in teaching in the college for the past fifteen years. He has had exceptional facilities for perfecting himself in the profession. reaching in the college for the past fifteen years. He has had exceptional facilities for perfecting himself in the profession. The years spent in some of the first schools on this continent — Toronto University, Ann Arbor, Amherst School of Languages, and in England have not been spent in vain. For years he was resident master in charge in the college, and the duties of that position necessarily brought him into such relations as gave him the best opportunities for studying the character of boys and young men. He has at one time or another been associated with Fyte, Wells, Torrance, Goodspeed, Rand, Wolverton, Farmer, Professor Clarke, Huston and others. He is intimately in touch with the history and genius of the institution. Scarcely another name is now or has been for many years more of a household name in Canadian Baptist homes than the honored name of Bates.

MASONIC JUBILEE.

Last Night's Celebration of the 50th Anniversary of a Well-Know London Lodge.

Grand Reception to Visitors from De troit and Toronto

The Detroit Masonic brethren arrived by G. T. R. shortiy before 5 o'clock and were received by the officers of 209a, grand lodge officers, and others. A procession was formed nearly 300 strong. In the Masonic Blue Room, which was crowded Masonic Blue Room, which was crowded, Wor. Bro. Rowat, on behalf of his lodge, extended a cordial and fraternal welcome to the visiting brethren. R. Wor. Bro. Geo. C. Davis, Past Grand Junior Warden, and Very Wor. Bro. J. D. Clarke, Grand Superintendent of Works, were called on to add words of welcome. Both spoke strongly of the fact that Masonry knew no national boundaries, and that a Mason would find a fraternal welcome in any part of the civilized world. R. Wor. Bro. Davis further expressed the hope that the Davis further expressed the hope that the visit of the Detroit brethren on this the jubilee of St. John's Lodge, 209a, would be a red letter day in the history of the lodge. He was arraid the Detroit brethren would find the attractions of this fair Forest City so many that they would not be able to tear themselves away from it.

The words of welcome were warmly applauded by the Detroit brethren.

Wor. Bro. Hannah, the respected Worshipful Master of Detroit Lodge, No. 2, G. R. of Michigan, replied in a neat address. Davis further expressed the hope that the

The Toronto brethren kept arriving by C. P. R. trains during the previous 24 hours, but the main contingent came in at 7 n.m. They were received by a delegation of 209a men, and escorted to the Masonic temple, where, like the brethren of Detroit who had preceded them, they were warmly welcomed by Wor. Bro. Rowat and the London brethren. The expressive third degree was conferred in the crowded hall by Wor. Bro. Hannah and his officers. It was faultlessly worked, and at its close they received the warmer congratulations. The officers of Detroit Lodge, No. 2, were as follows: J. H. Hannah, W. M.; J. W. Lawson, S. W. pro tem.; Geo. Straw, J. W.; J. A. Preston, S. D.; J. H. Munroe, J. D.; C. Price, Sec.; J. Shimky and Charles Culver, stewards; J. H. Boillotat, tyler; Geo. Hargreaves, organist; R. Murray, S. Smith, F. A. Goyer and G. T. Drywood, quartet.

Right Wor. Bro. Robson sang a song instead of making a speech. Wor. Bro. Past Master Garrett, of Detroit, a veteran Mason who first saw Masonic light in 209a in 1850, gave many reminiscences of the early days of the craft in London. Only A. S. Abbott is now alive from the membership of 209a. There were many changes since those days, but he still had a warm affection for his mother lodge, and he expressed the hope that when, in the near future, he came to the end of his piligrim. future, he came to the end of his pilgrim-age, the brethren of 209a would put him in Songs were then given by Bros. A. Parker, Detroit; H. C. Simpson and M. Blight, followed by a harmonica solo from Mr. T. Lester, of Toronto, gave a recitation, and R. Donald, of Detroit, gave a taking song.

"St. John's Lodge, 209a," was then heartily given and responded to by W. Bro. Rowat and others.

Other toasts followed, and the company separated shortly after 2 a.m. The Detroit brethren left for home by special train at 2:30 a.m. They were accompanied to the station by the brethren of St. John's Lodge, 209a, and the brethren of St. John's Lodge, and given a rousing send-off. The majority of the Toronto brethren went home by the 4 a.m. C. P. R. express.

A NOVEL ENTERPRISE.

Ladies' Costume Department Established by Burns, the Giothiers.

London and London's merchants are never behind the times. Something new is always being introduced. One of the latest additions is a departure comparatively unto having adopted the plan. Burns, the clothiers, have recently added to their noted establishment a novel costume department for ladies. The work is done entirely by men with the exception of the fitting. The garments are made to fit perfectly and to last longer than if made on the cities and towns have liberally patronized Messrs. Burns in this line of late. Why should not London ladies do likewise? The dress goods and trimmings are kept in stock, and the display is a credit to the city. There is but one dress piece of each kind, and the number to choose from is large—so large that every variety of taste can be satisfied. The trimmings and goods are of first-class quality, having been imported direct from the best british markets. The workmen are all experienced and thoroughly trained, and satisfaction is assured. Ladies' blazers of every description for summer wear are also made. Ladies of Ladies' blazers of every description for summer wear are also made.
